

Veterans Day Message

Although we do not always recognize it, rarely a day goes by that we do not walk in the presence of heroes. They walk down our streets. They stand next to us at the grocery store.

Of course, we hardly ever call them heroes. To you and me, they are called father, mother, brother, sister, son, daughter, friend and neighbor. They are our veterans.

From Germany to Iraq, Korea to Kosovo, time and time again the brave men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces have been called to duty. On Nov. 11, Veterans Day, please take time to thank the veterans who have defended, and who are still defending, all we hold dear.

There are more than 21 million veterans alive today who have served our country to protect our freedoms. Many of these heroes are working side by side with us in our organization. Out of DLA Distribution's nearly 9,000 employees, thousands hold veteran status.

I'd like you to remember those that not only gave their time to the military in uniform, but now serve as civilians. These men and women have rededicated themselves to serving their country and ensuring our warfighters have the resources they need to continue the fight.

I hope everyone enjoys the upcoming Veterans Day holiday and I thank you for all you do in supporting our Nation's heroes.
