78th ABW commander bids farewell to Robins

BY KENDAHL JOHNSON
kendahl.johnson@robins.af.mil

Robins will soon say goodbye to Col. Theresa Carter, who has been the commander of the 78th Air Base Wing since January 2006. Colonel Carter relinquishes command today in a change of command ceremony at 4 p.m. in the Century of Flight Hangar.

After two and a half years at Robins, first as vice commander then as commander, the colonel now heads to Headquarters Air Mobility Command at Scott AFB, Ill., to be the director for installations and mission support. The colonel is excited about the new opportunity, but will miss Robins and the relationships she's developed here.

"Robins has been a great assignment. In the job as installation commander, I've had the chance to meet some wonderful people, both on base and in the local community, and have made some great friendships, and I'm certainly not looking forward to leaving those behind," Colonel Carter said. "Of all the places I've been, the local community here is by far the most supportive of any I've had the pleasure of working with."

At Scott, Colonel Carter will be responsible for security forces, civil engineering and contracting within the command. She said although it will be a big job, she's excited about the chance to learn about a new command and work at the staff level.

"Any time you go to a new job with new responsibilities, you're always a little apprehensive about what is waiting behind the corner for you," Colonel Carter said. "At the staff level, you have an opportunity to influence policy and influence the direction of the Air Force."

She said working at the staff level is different in that you are a little removed from seeing that policy implemented. Being the installation commander and being directly involved with decision making and policy implementation provided her both unique challenges as well as very rewarding experiences.

"There are a lot of unique opportunities that go with the job of installation commander. You have a lot of positive opportunities to influence the lives of people. You are there with the young Airmen and you really see the chance to make a difference every day - to maybe clear a hurdle or remove an obstacle from someone who is trying to improve a workplace or get

Bioenvironmental Engineering craftsman's work ethic helps AFMC CBRN team make command history

BY HOLLY L. BIRCHFIELD
holly.birchfield@robins.af.mil

Staff Sgt. Rashad Barnes of the 78th Aerospace Medicine Squadron may be seen as a quiet man to most people he meets. But, his dedication on the job and at home speaks volumes about his "give it all you've got" attitude.

It's that winning approach to life that helped land the bioengineering craftsman on Air Force Materiel Command's five-person Chemical Biological Radiological Nuclear Challenge Team which ultimately won the 2007 Air Force-level CBRN Challenge at Brooks City-Base in San Antonio in mid-December 2007.

The win was a first in this area for AFMC.

Sergeant Barnes's team, comprised of Airmen from Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass; Tinker AFB, Okla.; Eglin AFB, Fla.; and Edwards AFB, Calif., competed against CBRN Challenge teams from other major commands, facing scenarios similar to those in the real world.

"For the wartime, our main objective is to detect chemical warfare agents when we're at deployed locations or in garrison," he said. "We have various equipment we use to detect chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear warfare agents. We (use that equipment) to identify (those agents) and we can quantify and be able to give a health risk assessment."

The challenge offered a bit of a twist for team members.

"The scenarios were based on real-world experiences," Sergeant Barnes said. "It was a challenging to figure out what was really there because we got very little information. Sometimes, we didn't have all of the equipment we normally would have to assess what the hazard is. So we sort of had to make do with what we had and what information we got."

The everyday tasks of his job aren't as cumbersome as those that challenged him at the competition. "Actually, our role is very broad," Sergeant Barnes said. "Bioenvironmental Engineering is the military form of Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency," he said. "We do occupational health assessments for pretty much every shop on base to determine hazards with that shop."

Additionally, Sergeant Barnes and his co-workers test all drinking water on base and conduct gas mask and respirator testing for deploying Airmen and individual shops.

Sergeant Barnes said the challenge was just that for the team - a challenge.

"We were the only team out there where every person came from a different base," he said. "There were other teams where they had two people who were at one base and two people who maybe were from a different base, but we were the only team that had five different people from five different bases."

New Year, new rank Enlisted aide surprised by STEP promotion as new year begins

BY HOLLY L. BIRCHFIELD
holly.birchfield@robins.af.mil

The beginning of 2008 brought more than new beginnings for one technical sergeant. It brought him a new rank.

Tech. Sgt. Jeff Gombos, an enlisted aide to Maj. Gen. Tom Owen, Warner Robins Air Logistics Center commander, knew that a package for a Stripes for Exceptional Performance promotion had been put in on his behalf. But after the package for the STEP promotion, an unexpected, on-the-spot promotion, went forward, the Airman put it out of his mind.

That is until Jan. 3 when he was surprised by the news in an unusual way.

When Sergeant Gombos isn't working around General Owen's home, ensuring his uniforms are in top shape, arranging dinners for special guests and other matters, he fills in for the general's executive officer, Lt. Col. Ryan Britton. So, when Colonel Britton asked the sergeant to brief the general for a video teleconference just three days into the New Year, he stepped up to the task.

"I got a call from Lt. Col. Britton. He had a personal appointment that he needed to take care of. I had gone up to fill in for him in the past so this wasn't something out of the ordinary," he said.

Sergeant Gombos came to prepare the general for a supposed video teleconference.

"They had a bunch of different things they said he had to go do, so everything seemed to be real to me," Sergeant Gombos said. "I had gone in there and I would usually sit behind him to take notes or, if he needed something, I could run and get it. I didn't think anything was going on because there was nobody there."

Little to Sergeant Gombos' knowledge, quite a few people were nearby, including his wife, Jennifer, and 9-year-old son, Kevin, both of whom kept his on-the-spot promotion a secret.

As Sergeant Gombos reviewed a folder of documents needing to be signed by the general, he noticed his name listed as someone getting a STEP promotion.

"I looked at it and read it and I was surprised," he said. "I looked up at General Owen, but he was (still talking) and I didn't want to interrupt so I thought, 'is this for real?'" As soon as I did that, they all came out and said, 'surprise,' and flashed 'Congratulations Master Sgt. Gombos' on the screen and all that."

Sergeant Gombos said he was impressed by the great length his colleague

Gen. Bruce Carlson, Air Force Materiel Command commander, is briefed by Col. Patrick Higby, 78th Mission Support Group, during exercises at Warrior Air Base Jan. 10. The exercise was part of continued preparation for the upcoming operational readiness inspection scheduled for April.

A team from AFMC will conduct the ORI, an intense, four-day review of the base's response to a broad range of simulated emergency and mission taskings.

something done," she said.

Colonel Carter said she is proud of the improvements she has seen at Robins in her time as installation commander, such as improved quality of life, new or improved facilities, old facilities being renovated and new programs being started to help young Airmen. But she is particularly proud of the job Robins Airmen have done in supporting the global war on terror.

"I am very proud of the difference our Airmen have made in the deployed location," Colonel Carter said. "In the time I've been here, Airmen from (Robins) have earned at least 25 Bronze Star awards for their service. Knowing we've had a hand in training them and supporting them, and also supporting their families while they're gone, not only has made them better and made Robins better, but it's helped our Air Force and our nation. That is something to be proud of."

WHAT TO KNOW

Col. Theresa Carter will relinquish command of the 78th Air Base Wing during a change of command ceremony today at 4 p.m. at the Museum of Aviation. Col. Warren Berry, 78th ABW vice commander, will then assume command of the wing.

Those who have worked with the commander have been impressed with her dedication and service.

Colonel Warren Berry, vice commander of the 78th ABW, said ever since serving closely with Colonel Carter for six months in 1998 at Maxwell AFB, he knew she'd be a great senior leader in the Air Force.

"Her performance here was just remarkable," Colonel Berry said. "She did phenomenal things for the 25,000 people at Robins, and now she gets to use her talents to help the 125,000 Airmen assigned to Air Mobility Command. Lucky them."

Colonel Berry said anyone would be proud to claim her accomplishments while at Robins.

"Think of the massive improvements in operations and facilities, to include the largest military construction project in the command. Think of the increased readiness of our Airmen, to include our posture as the number two deployer in Air Force Materiel Command. And think of the inspection successes, from UCI to the Air Force's best health inspection score of the year for our Medical Group. No wonder Robins won the command's competition for the 2007 CINC's Award for Installation Excellence," he said.

Other coworkers agreed that she did a tremendous job.

"I am amazed by her leadership ability and how she displays commonsense in her decision making processes," said Capt. Kay Beigh, executive officer for Colonel Carter. "Although she may seem a little reserved initially, once you get to know her, you know she has a very warm heart and is very caring. It has been a pleasure to work for her."

Colonel Carter wishes to give a sincere thank you to all of Team Robins for the outstanding support she received, from the first time she stepped on base and the warm welcome she received up to now and the warm wishes she has been receiving as she prepares to depart.

"I am certainly going to take away some great memories, not only of the challenges that we've faced but of the great people I've had the pleasure of working with," she said.

New chef brings new tastes to Officers, Enlisted Club cuisine

BY HOLLY L. BIRCHFIELD

holly.birchfield@robins.af.mil

Douglas Goodridge is generally a laid back kind of guy. He carries that same easy spirit into the kitchen.

The father of four is originally from Barbados. He came to Robins to work as the executive chef of the Officer and Enlisted Club's seven-person cooking staff in early December 2007.

Mr. Goodridge said he takes his position very seriously.

"I'm a hands-on chef," he said. "I don't like sitting in the office. I like to get in the kitchen and work with the staff and teach them different things and so on."

In the short time he has been on staff, Mr. Goodridge has won the admiration of his new work family.

Lisa Paige, a Services cook for 22 years, said the executive chef, fondly known as "Chef Doug" by his colleagues, brings a freshness to the club.

"I think he's a wonderful person and he's going to help the club build up more," she said.

Bringing former customers back in 2008 is only one of Mr. Goodridge's goals for the club.

"I hope that (the New Year) will bring back most of the customers who have left in the past," he said. "That will be good to see our dining room full again at dinner and also at lunch. So I hope with this new menu we're doing and with the changes, the word gets around and customers will come and relax and have dinner."

Mr. Goodridge, who began his culinary career in Barbados and has worked as a cooking professional at multiple Marriott and other hotels in New York and Middle Georgia, said as the club temporarily closes from Jan. 13-31 for repairs, he will be giving customers reason to come back and relax.

"The club is going to close for a couple of weeks and I'm going to work on new menus: a dinner menu, a lunch menu, and banquets, and also do an in-house job training skills for the employees," he said. "(I'll) also have the kitchen staff meet to have the staff be up to date with different things in cooking."

Chef Doug will give his staff a lesson in gourmet cooking.

"(I'm going to teach them) things in French cooking, presentation, and consistency," he said. "Instead of using frozen items, I use fresh items for appetizers, entrees and salads and I use fresh vegetables and starches. Customers eat with their eyes, so it's always best to have something appealing to the customer and also to make some things different so the customer doesn't get bored ordering the same things."

The seasoned chef said his menus will have foods that appeal to a variety of ages and ethnic groups.

Aaron Feinberg, manager of the Officer and Enlisted Clubs for a year and a half, said he's looking forward to seeing all that the chef will bring to the table.

"He started in December and hit the ground running," he said. "He helped us through our busy holiday season and now we're ready to move forward and introduce some new things at the club."

The club manager said he and his staff plan to learn all they can from their new team member.

"He's actually mixing quite well with the staff," he said. "He's trying to teach everyone here new ideas and things that he has brought from all of his restaurant and catering experience. He's really strong on his presentation and quality of food."

leagues took to surprise him.

"I really appreciate this," he said. "I think everybody did a great job surprising me and pulling this off. I know it took a lot for them to do that and I appreciate them taking the time."

Colonel Britton, one of a few who helped orchestrate the phony VTC to cover up the surprise, said the promotion was well deserved.

"Through the numerous deployments that (Sergeant) Gombos had as a crew chief on the KC-135 and then following that up with his support to multiple general officers in helping them to do their day-to-day activities, I can think of no more deserving Airman for this STEP promotion. He's definitely earned it through his hard work and dedication."

Chief Master Sgt. Carol Dockery, command chief in the 78th Air Base Wing, said the STEP program recognizes hard working Airmen like Sergeant Gombos in a special way.

"The philosophy of the STEP program is straight forward," she said. "Each fiscal year since 1982, the Chief of Staff of the Air Force allows commanders and senior Air Force officers an opportunity to reward outstanding, hard-working Airmen who have the potential to shoulder increased responsibility immediate, unexpected promotions. Everyone knows the most visible part of this process; the celebration that occurs when commanders, supervisors and family members enthusiastically paste a fresh set of stripes on the promotee's sleeve. However, the journey that occurs behind the scenes is a good news story as well."

► IN BRIEF

BUNDLES FOR BABIES/PASSPORT TO PARENTHOOD

The Airman and Family Readiness Center's Family Advocacy will conduct a Bundles For Babies/Passport To Parenthood class Tuesday, 9 a.m. to noon in Bldg. 794.

The course is for all active-duty Air Force families preparing for a new baby. Discussions cover early childhood development, attachment, infant care, practical preparation and financial preparation. At the end of the session, a bundle is presented, compliments of the Air Force Aid Society. In the bundle: a thermal weave plaid cotton

Chief Dockery said a board of four highly respected and experienced chief master sergeants from various functional backgrounds wrestled through a sea of very competitive packages before deciding on the most deserving Airman.

"This wasn't an easy board," she said. "I credit the supervisors who diligently primed these future leaders for success. They definitely deserve a hearty pat on the back. At the end of the day, there's no substitute for leadership."

General Owen said while the recommendation to STEP promote Sergeant Gombos belonged to a local panel of chief master sergeants, he certainly agreed with the choice.

"I am very pleased to be able to recognize the stellar accomplishments throughout the career of Sergeant Jeff Gombos," he said. "I asked Chief Master Sgt. Dockery to put together a representative panel of chiefs from throughout the WR-ALC organizations to ensure we picked the most deserving Airman to receive this honor. Sergeant Gombos' recommendation by this panel to be STEP promoted was a significant feat based on the level of competition. I was pleased to endorse the panel's recommendation. I know he will continue the trend of superior senior NCO performance as a member of the Top 3."

Sergeant Gombos said his new rank is something he's adjusting to.

"I guess it almost overwhelmed me, almost like it's not believable," he said. "I had to look at that paper again and when I was reading that, it almost went to a blur because I had to let it sink in. I've just got to let it sink in a bit. I'm just so excited and overwhelmed."

crib blanket, a hooded towel and wash mitten, a white knit crib sheet, a 2-pack printed cotton receiving blanket, a 4-pack cotton diapers, a 2-pack sleep-n-play, a 3-pack onesies and a pair of booties.

The Robins Elementary School Board will meet Wednesday at 10:45 a.m. at the school which is located in Bldg. 988. The public is invited to attend.

LOOK OUT

Pedestrian safety is always a two-way street on Robins

BY HOLLY L. BIRCHFIELD
hollybirchfield@robins.af.mil

In the hectic pace of life, many people are often in a rush to get here and there. But, Robins Air Force Base officials remind people that ensuring pedestrians' safety should be a number one priority for both drivers and pedestrians alike.

Jerry Clineman, Ground Safety manager in the 78th Air Base Wing Safety office, said people operating vehicles should be alert.

"The Georgia law doesn't give the right (of way to) either the pedestrian or the operator of the vehicle," he said. "So, it's kind of a shared responsibility for the drivers to honor that there is a pedestrian either in the crosswalk or when they step into the crosswalk to cross the street and that driver (out of) courtesy yields to that pedestrian until they're clear of the crosswalk and then proceed."

Mr. Clineman said pedestrians need to look and listen as they are out and about.

"We've got people that use crosswalks, but we're finding a new trend in that their head is down or they might be reading, looking at their cell phone, or in some cases, they're actually talking on their cell phone. It's kind of a dangerous precedence. We may have a driver out there who is doing the same thing unfortunately and those two people not paying attention could actually meet in the wrong place at the wrong time."

Capt. Eric Horst, 78th

Security Forces Squadron commander, said pedestrians need to set distractions aside.

"We've run into a problem recently where a lot of folks seem to be using their cellular devices, cell phones, black berries, and different things like that and not paying 100 percent attention to what they're doing," he said. "I think they have this feeling of invincibility that whenever you step into that crosswalk, it's like you have a magic bubble around you. They need to be aware of that fact when they're crossing the street. They're on an active road and sometimes, you have inattentive drivers so they need to look in both directions and make sure they're not distracted when they're trying to cross."

Captain Horst said the base's layout can hold a lot of danger if people aren't paying attention.

"Everybody needs to understand that Robins is kind of unique in that we have so many different crosswalks and so many different buildings all over the base," he said. "While we all understand that there are so many people that are trying to get to and from their cars, especially when it has been cold, they still need to be aware of the fact that the painted crosswalks are where people need to properly cross. Some-times, it's not the most convenient, but it has been put there for a reason, and the reason is safety."

The captain said people should not hold a false sense of security about crosswalks.

"The other thing I've noticed

here is that folks have the belief that as long as they're in a crosswalk, they're now protected or safe," he said. "You still need to be cautious that you're not stepping out within say 20 or 30 feet of a moving vehicle and you're giving that person ample time to stop their car safely so that there aren't any incidents."

Captain Horst said drivers should be courteous to those waiting to cross at crosswalks.

"If the driver has enough distance and the driver is paying attention and they see a person standing at the opening to a crosswalk apparently ready to cross, it behooves that person in the vehicle to stop their car and let them cross safely," he said.

The captain said saving a little time isn't worth getting hurt over.

"Robins is very unique," he said. "We have 25,000 plus people that work on the base and when shifts change at the busiest times of the day, it can become very dangerous on base. There are so many cars moving, so many people in a hurry to get home. That extra second that you might take to jump out into the street could really put a damper on your day. It's probably safer to probably wait a couple more minutes to make sure the traffic is clear before you step out."

CBRN

The father of two said the team's differences actually work in its favor.

"We never worked with each other before and we never knew each other before from other bases," he said. "We got there a day early to just meet and greet and just get spun up real quickly on our different experiences at different bases. The next day, we started the actual challenge and we actually worked very well together."

Sergeant Barnes' co-workers weren't surprised by his team's accomplishment. After all, the team had a winning hand with the Robins' Airmen on board.

"He's always a team player and very hard working," said 1st Lt. Paula Delapasse, a bioenvironmental engineer in the 78th AMDS who has worked with the staff sergeant for two and a half years. "He always finds ways to reach a solution and solve the problem whatever the task is at hand. So, he's a great person to work with."

Tech. Sgt. Tim Houey, Readiness and Training NCOIC in the 78th AMDS who has worked with Sergeant Barnes for six months, said Sergeant Barnes is someone he can count on.

"His knowledge of the equipment and the limitations of the equipment and just his overall attitude made him a likely choice for the AFMC CBRN Challenge team," he said. "For me, he's my go-to guy. He's someone I can go to anytime."

While several members of his work family have congratulated him on his accomplishment with the team, he said it's an accomplishment that's not all his own.

"Ever since we won the CBRN Challenge, everybody has been joking around calling me, 'Super Troop' or 'CBRN King,' but I just want to make sure everybody knows that it's not an actual individual award. It's more of a team award. It's not just for the five people who competed, but for the base level too because I'm just part of a whole and the whole being the 78th Bioenvironmental Engineering Flight here. So, this award is a team accomplishment at Robins, not just an individual accomplishment for AFMC."

Now that the challenge is over, Sergeant Barnes can get back to the most important team in his life, his family.

AFSO21 to take WR-ALC into the future

Alan Mathis
Director, Plans and Programs Directorate

A key focus of the Plans and Programs Directorate is mapping the future of Warner Robins Air Logistics Center. A major factor in how this center will achieve its goals in the future is by using Air Force Smart Operations for the 21st Century initiatives. AFSO21 involves looking for ways to continuously improve processes and reduce wastes.

One area we have targeted is improving partnerships with other entities – either public or private. Let's look 20 years into the future.

It's 2028: Do you know where your children and grandchildren are?

Are they working for one of the partners working in the Georgia-Robins Aerospace Partnership facility which includes WR-ALC and most of the industrial, educational and technical activities in the Middle Georgia region? Or have they moved to Atlanta, Washington, D.C., another Air Force installation or Long Beach, Calif., due to lack of development and growth of Robins Air Force Base and its work force during the last 20 years? Either of these are possible future outcomes. Keep reading as we look ahead at the possibilities.

2028 Headline

The Georgia-Robins Aerospace Partnership reached a major milestone today with the connection of the complex with the Macon Regional Airport/South Bibb County Industrial Center which was recently renamed the Houston-Bibb Airport of Middle Georgia.

This is the completion of an idea that started 25 years ago by some base and community leaders. In 2007, several partnerships were formed between Robins Air Force Base, the city of Warner Robins, Houston County and the state of Georgia. Who could guess then that signing these partnership agreements would lead to the largest aerospace development complex in the southeastern part of the United States? This area has seen significant construction of aircraft hangars by private-public – not federal – funding, the relocation of aerospace manufacturing companies, overhaul industries, and the consolidation of aerospace educational and technical research facilities.

The combined partners include eight out of ten of the top Department of Defense and international aerospace contractors with access not only to an Air Force runway, but also a public runway.

The work that is performed here in the G-RAMP complex includes most branches of the U.S. military, Federal Emergency Management Agency, foreign countries and Federal Aviation Administration-certified commercial aircraft overhaul and repair. Not only can most aircraft be repaired and overhauled here, but developing technicians and engineers get hands-on training on real aerospace systems located in hangars next door to their campus. This Middle Georgia area has the highest high school graduation rate along with the highest technician placement rate in the Southeastern United States. There is also a fast-growing aerospace research center that grew from an earlier partnership with the Georgia Institute of Technology. This area's growth of capability and innovation for the aerospace and defense industry has exceeded the vision of everyone who was involved in the initial partnerships in 2003.

In 2006, then Governor Sonny Perdue designated the Middle Georgia area as the aviation corridor. Who could have imagined the result would be such an operational public-private-federal complex? The partnership complex includes educational development opportunities for high school students as well as the current work force. The complex houses an aviation technology academy with the focus on aviation technology developing aviation robotics, doctorate programs in aerospace and information warfare.

The connection of HBMG with Robins is the best thing since the high-speed railway connected the Middle Georgia area to the Atlanta airport a decade ago. This new partnership will provide significantly improved capability to Middle Georgia. Not only can this area boast the longest runway in Georgia, it also has access to the largest aerospace industrial complex in the southeast.

As the Defense Transportation Logistics Command, Eastern Hub for Logistics located at Robins some 10 year ago, the movement of military and disaster relief supplies and hardware from ports to interstate commerce to rails to air has been unbelievable. Proven capability to move, repair, and ship aerospace systems and subsystems has once again given the go ahead for Robins to continue in the tradition of managing the support required by U.S. and coalition forces.

Is this really a possibility? Why not? Would anyone 20 years ago have believed that Northside High School would have two consecutive state football championships? What about a local little league team winning a World Championship? Who thought the base would win the Shingo Gold, the Nobel Prize of Manufacturing? How could this happen to a community that used to be known as Wellston Air Depot?

Through hard-working people that love what they do, and those who believe that life is a journey and this journey is not just limited by what we can see today. This happens through determination, persistence and belief that the unknown is possible. Did anyone really believe that we could put men on the moon when President John F. Kennedy issued his vision in the 1960s? Our country has a long legacy of achieving the "impossible." This is through the people teaching their successors, their children and their neighbor's children the value of believing in themselves and the dedication to this country's values, and the kindness and friendships of the communities.

Think about it. What do you want your children, or grandchildren, to be doing 20 years from now? Do you want them working at a great place which values their contributions to our country, and being happy at what they are doing and where they are living? Do you want to be worried about the national defense of this nation's resources – whether or not it's safe for your grandchildren to be flying the same aircraft that you and I work on today? Everything you do now impacts tomorrow.

I believe we all can make a difference in the future. So what do we want it to be? What do you want it to look like? The more you embrace and live the Air Force values of integrity first, service before self and excellence in all that we do, and the center's motto of People First, Mission always, the stronger we are as a center. This applies regardless of where you are in the 26,000 person eco-system on the base as well as the entire surrounding community. When emphasizing strategic issues like G-RAMP, a former chief executive officer of Southwest Airlines would say to "just go out and do it." Believe and focus on the journey, not the day-to-day bumps in the road. Together we can impact our future and continue to have a great place to work. Together we can work for the growth of our center to be the best aerospace complex in the world. Let's just do it.

– Editor's Note: This is part of a monthly series of commentaries by Warner Robins Air Logistics Center senior staff focusing on Air Force Smart Operations for the 21st Century. Also each month, an AFSO21 Question and Answer series will be published.

Bldg. 946 Grounds Maintenance

We have two children who attend the CDC West (4 years and 18 months). I am well aware of the budget cuts taken last fiscal year in regard to grounds maintenance, and understand the need for cutbacks. However, Building 946, beyond grass cutting, has seen no grounds maintenance for nearly six months. The shrubbery are overgrown and dying, and the bed to the right of the front door is also overgrown.

A parent's group was organized to help out during these lean times by taking over the grounds maintenance and clean up; however, when this group gathered (Sept. 27), the only thing they were allowed to do was rake a few leaves. It's my understanding they were told there was a contract for grounds maintenance, and they could not trim shrubbery or pull weeds. I work in contracting and understand this concept; however, in the building I am assigned to, the military are assigned to do grounds maintenance in lieu of waiting for a contractor. Why can't the parent's group (both military and civilian volunteers) at the CDC be allowed to do the same thing? We pay quite a bit of our monthly income to the CDC, and want our children to have a nice facility to attend. Can you please address, and consider allowing the parent's group to take over the grounds maintenance (except grass cutting) until the fiscal concerns are resolved?

Colonel Carter's Response:

Thank you for your concern for the appearance of base facilities. Due to budget cuts in the service contracts area last year, the base civil engineer had to eliminate some services from the Grounds Maintenance contract. Part of this elimination was all shrub/flower bed maintenance in improved areas. On February 7, 2007 a policy memo was sent to all facility managers explaining the loss of services on the grounds contract due to fund shortages. Shrub removal was one of the services lost and was reverted back to the facility managers to take care of. The facility manager can contact the 78th Civil Engineer Group for an estimate and put the services on their card or they can do their shrub bed maintenance themselves. Should anyone want to add any plants to the flower beds, the facility manager would have to contact the folks in Environmental Management to ensure the new foliage is compliant with base standards. We appreciate the parent group's willingness to volunteer to help maintain our CDC and welcome your support. We suspect the restrictions placed on your group earlier this year was due to a misunderstanding on the part of facility managers as to what services were cut and what remain in the contract. In fact, the group did a fantastic job of getting the grounds into shape recently and the facility manager(s) will continue to request Parent's Group assistance as needed. Thank you for taking such an active interest in the quality of our base facilities.

ENCHANTED

Amy Adams, James Marsden The tale follows the beautiful princess Giselle as she is banished by an evil queen from her magical, musical animated land and finds herself in the gritty reality of the streets of modern-day Manhattan. Shocked by this strange new environment that doesn't operate on a "happily ever after" basis, Giselle is now adrift in a chaotic world badly in need of enchantment. Rated PG.

SATURDAY

THE MIST

Thomas Jane, Marcia Gay Harden Following a violent thunderstorm, artist David Drayton and a small town community come under vicious attack from creatures prowling in a thick and unnatural mist. Local rumors point to an experiment called the 'The Arrowhead Project' conducted at a nearby top-secret military base, but questions as to the origins of the deadly vapor are secondary to the group's overall chances for survival. Retreating to a local supermarket, Drayton and the survivors must face-off against each other before taking a united stand against an enemy they cannot even see. Rated R.

UPCOMING

I AM LEGEND

Will Smith, Alice Braga Robert Neville is a brilliant scientist, but even he could not contain the terrible virus that was unstoppable, incurable...and manmade. Somehow immune, Neville is now the last human survivor in what is left of New York City...and maybe the world. But he is not alone. Rated PG-13.

► IN BRIEF

78TH ABW COMMANDER'S CALL

There will be a Commander's Call for all personnel assigned to the 78th Air Base Wing Jan. 22 at the Base Theater. There will be three sessions: 8 a.m. is the enlisted call (mandatory for all enlisted member's assigned to the 78th ABW), 1 p.m. is the civilian's call and 3 p.m. is the officer's call.

LIVE FIRE TRAINING CONDUCTED

The 78th Security Forces Squadron conducts live fire training at the base firing range, located on the northeast side of the base, adjacent to the horse stables.

The firing range is off limits to all personnel, unless scheduled for training or official business. Nearby housing residents should warn children of the hazards of playing near the area. The ranges are clearly marked with signs, and a red flag is flown when firing is being conducted. Night-fire is conducted throughout the year. For questions or concerns, call the 78th SFS Combat Arms section at 926-5031

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. COMMEMORATIVE SERVICE

Robins will hold its Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative service January 20 at 11 a.m. at the Base Chapel. Guest speaker will be Col. Kenneth Sharpless, Robins inspector general. A reception will follow in the Chapel Annex.

LOST AND FOUND

The following is a list of lost items being held by the 78th Security Forces Squadron: a car hood, possibly from a Chevrolet Nova, a 21-speed "Rino" bicycle, a 15-foot deer stand ladder, a red "Radio Flyer" wagon, a Honda 80CC motorcycle, a green and blue dome tent with green/blue sleeping bag and green hand broom and a blue children's rally bike. To claim one of these lost items, contact Mark Henderson at 926-5271.

TROOPS TO TEACHERS

Bill Kirkland, representative for the Troops to Teachers program, will be at the Robins Education Center Jan. 18, from 10 to 11 a.m. to take questions about the cooperative program between the U.S. Department of Education and the Department of Defense that provides referral and placement assistance to men and women who have served the nation as members of the Armed Forces and who are seeking a second career as teachers in public schools. He will also discuss the Spouses to Teachers program.

For more information on the programs, visit www.spouses-toteachers.com.

The briefing will be held in Bldg. 905, room 137, no reservations are necessary. For more information, contact Andrea Harris at 327-7312, or Mr. Kirkland at bill.kirkland@gapsc.com.

Robins Tax Center to open Jan. 22

The Robins Tax Center

The Robins Tax Center will soon open for the 2008 filing season, preparing and e-filing client's tax returns for the 2007 calendar year.

The tax center will open Jan. 22 and close April 15. The center will be open Monday through Thursday each week from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. The tax center will open the third Saturday in February and March to assist military members living in the dorms. Services will be provided to active duty, reservists, national guardsmen, retirees, and their dependants. Clients will be seen by appointment only. Scheduling of appointments begins today. Those interested in booking an appointment, please call 327-3811 and follow the instructions on the voicemail. Someone will return your call by the following business day. If you have trouble getting through to the appointment voicemail, you can call the tax center during operational hours at 926-2635. When booking your appointment, please ensure you will have the required documentation available the day of your appointment. If you have not received all required documents before your scheduled appointment, you will need to reschedule.

The tax center is located in Building 905 on the second floor of the library. To get to the tax center, you must go through the library and take the stairs or the elevator (located in the back of the library) to the second floor.

Tax preparation and electronic filing is a free service provided to Active Duty, Retirees, Reservist, National Guard and their dependants. The base tax center is not affiliated with Military One Source, Turbo Tax, or any other potentially free tax service that is provided to military members via various internet websites. In addition, please be aware that some free tax services do not file state taxes for free. The federal and state taxes are prepared and e-filed simultaneously at the base tax center; thus we will not do state only returns.

There have been recent changes in policy for the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program in regard to the type of tax returns the tax center can prepare for clients. The center is unable to prepare returns that include Schedule C (Profit or Loss from Business), Schedule E (Rents and Losses), or Complicated and Advanced Schedule D (Capital Gains and Losses).

It is imperative that you bring the following information as it pertains to your return:

- ▶ Military IDs
- ▶ W-2, (Wage and tax statement from all employers)
- ▶ Form 1099 for interest, dividends, miscellaneous income, retirement income, etc.
- ▶ Social security cards of taxpayer, spouse and dependent children
- ▶ Legal documents (separation agreements, divorce decrees that state you are entitled to claim said dependant, and powers of attorney are needed if someone will be signing the return in place of a spouse, a general power of attorney is acceptable if you don't have a specific one for tax filing)

▶ Bank account number and bank routing number for electronic filing. A copy of a voided check is sufficient. An ATM card or check card isn't sufficient to verify the routing number

▶ Childcare provider's name, address, and tax identification number (or social security number) and payment receipts for those planning to claim the child and dependent care credit

▶ Form 1098 for college expenses and mortgage interest paid

▶ Last year's tax return or any other documentation you think will be helpful

Due to the freeze Congress put on growth of the alternative minimum tax, many tax forms need to be reprinted. Because of that, there will be a delay in receipt of the tax forms and instruction booklets. We expect to have them available late January to early February 08. To check availability of forms and instructions or for more information, call the tax center at 926-2635 during operational hours.
