

Service station to close temporarily

The gas pumps at the base service station will be closed Thursday as work continues on upgrades to the facility, including the installation of three new underground tanks.

The station will be shut down that day for installation of some of the equipment associated with the project, said Becky

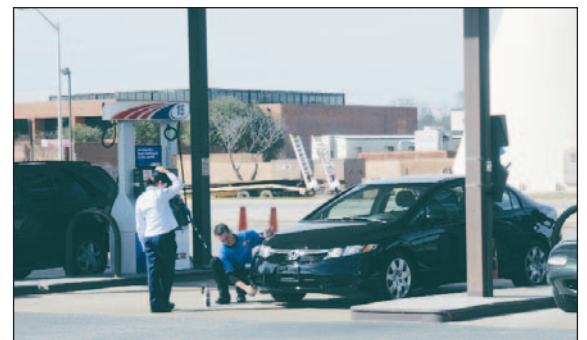

McCoy, 778th Civil Engineer Squadron director.

A two-week shutdown is also planned in late April or early May as the changeover to the tanks and other new equipment is completed, she said.

The entire project is expected to be finished by mid-July.

Drivers needing gas when the base service station is closed can find a number of commercial stations to the north and south of Robins on Ga. Hwy. 247, and west on Russell Parkway, Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, Watson Blvd. and Green Street.

GAME FACES ON Robins readies for upcoming UCI team visit

BY WAYNE CRENSHAW
wayne.crenshaw.ctr@robins.af.mil

The much-anticipated Unit Compliance Inspection is at hand. Although not all units will be covered by the UCI, everyone at Robins could potentially play a role in its outcome.

The inspection by an Air Force Materiel Command inspector general team is aimed at Warner Robins Air Logistics Center staff, the 78th Air Base Wing and the 402nd Maintenance Wing.

Although those organizations are targeted, all Team Robins members should maintain the same vigilance that they do every day, said Robins Inspector General Col. John Cote. Inspectors can write up any violations they see, even if they are not in the targeted areas.

Cote added the AFMC IG, Col. Tim Sakulich, thinks of his inspectors as human sensors who are always vigilant and alert to any non-compliance issues.

That could be particularly important because as a companion to the UCI, the AFMC Safety Office will conduct a separate Safety Program Management Evaluation. That addition will be transparent except for the fact it will include the 330th Aircraft Sustainment Wing and the 542nd Combat Sustainment Wing safety programs.

Lt. Col. Mark Austell, installation chief of safety, said the base is required to have the safety inspection every three years and it will use ratings of satisfactory, marginal and unsatisfactory.

The UCI will also be graded on three tiers: compliant, compliant with comments and non-compliant.

The advance team from the AFMC IG's Office arrived Thursday and the main team arrives Saturday. The inspection begins Monday and will last throughout the week. An out brief to senior leaders is scheduled March 15.

Cote offered some rules of engagement for the inspection. One of the most important, he said, is to let inspectors know up front of any

Maj. David Tifford, U-2S pilot, steps out of the aircraft after flying a mission over Haiti.

U-2S remains active in Haiti missions

BY WAYNE CRENSHAW
wayne.crenshaw.ctr@robins.af.mil

Maj. Rich Mehl sat in a sports car at the south end of the Robins runway and pointed at a black speck just over the horizon. The speck was a U-2S reconnaissance plane returning from an 8-hour flight over Haiti.

After making sure his emergency brake was off and the car was in drive, Mehl was prepared to engage in a unique landing operation to safely bring home the iconic aircraft known as "Dragon Lady."

As the plane piloted by Maj. David Tifford approached the runway, Mehl gunned the car to begin the well-orchestrated maneuver. As he zoomed down the runway at about 100 miles an hour, the aircraft flew by and positioned itself in front of the vehicle. Mehl then closed to about 50 feet behind the plane and began calling out numbers.

"Eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two, one," he said as the black aircraft touched down.

Mehl was telling Tifford the distance between the plane and the runway. That's because the aircraft's unique design makes it difficult for the pilot to gauge that distance.

The maneuver involves an incredible amount of trust between the two U-2S pilots.

The U-2S team – which includes a third pilot, a doctor, intelligence personnel and about 50 maintainers – are from Beale Air Force Base in Sacramento, Calif.

They have relocated to a new site to perform another mission.

The images they collected were used by those in charge of the relief effort to determine where to direct aid.

The team performed this mission about once every other day.

Most of the trips lasted about nine hours.

They were at Robins temporarily to fly missions over the Caribbean nation.

"The support here at Robins has been absolutely fantastic," Mehl said. "The 116th (Air Control Wing) absolutely catered to our every need. They made us feel at home."

Tifford pauses for a breath of fresh air following the eight-hour flight.

Changes coming to on-base dialing

Callers to on-base telephone numbers from other on-base numbers will notice a change March 31 when the Robins phone system switches to DSN direct.

Calls to on-base phones from other on-base phones will require callers to dial a seven-digit phone number.

For example, commercial numbers starting with 926 are now reached by dialing 6 and the last four numbers.

After the switchover, these numbers will be reached by dialing 468 and then the last four.

The following commercial numbers will have a paired DSN direct dial number:

926, now dialed 6, will

be dialed 468;

327, now dialed 7, will be dialed 497; 222, now dialed 2, will be dialed

472; 201 will be dialed 241.

Callers dialing from off base will not be affected.

They will continue to dial the commercial prefix (926, 327, 222 or 201) and the last four digits of the number.

For more information, contact the telephone services section of the 78th Air Base Wing Communications Directorate. If calling from an on-base phone before March 31, the number is 222-0064. If calling from an on-base phone after March 31, the number will be 472-0064.

Women's History Month celebration in full swing

BY 1ST LT. PAM STAUFFER
78th Air Base Wing Public Affairs

This month the National Women's History Project will celebrate its 30th anniversary.

The project started the movement which resulted in March being named Women's History Month.

The theme of this year's WHM observance is 'Writing women back into history.' It focuses on women's achievements which were never documented in textbooks.

The installation kicked off its celebration of WHM on Tuesday with a luncheon at Horizons. More than 75 people attended the event, which include a panel discussion with five civilian and military members of Team Robins.

"Whether the panel members valued family, religion, their heritage, or other aspects of who they are as individuals, they used those things as tools to model who they are as leaders, beyond their gender and other differences," said Javita Walker, a measurement specialist in the 579th SMXS.

Other events planned during the month to increase

Mary Larralde, Personnel director, speaks during the Women's History Month kickoff luncheon. Other speakers included: Bonnie Jones, 542nd Combat Sustainment Wing director of operations; John Adams, 580th Aircraft Sustainment Group director; Chief Master Sgt. Patti Miller, Air Force Reserve Command communications functional area manager; and Col. Victoria Reed, 402nd Electronics Maintenance Group commander.

awareness, appreciation and understanding of women's history include: a health fair and 5K walk on March 17 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Heath and Wellness Center; a self-defense class on March 18 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the gymnasium in Bldg. 301; CHPS Classes (Healthy Heart, Headaches, Women's Health, Stress Management) on March 18 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Robins Arts and Crafts Center; and a luncheon and art show on 24 March at 11 a.m. in the Heritage Club.

Additionally, the Team

Robins Women's History Committee is sponsoring a number of events in area schools to include: reading teacher-selected books to primary and elementary school students weekdays through March 26; an art contest for middle school students through March 18; and an essay contest in various high schools through today.

For more information about the events, including how to provide support or volunteer, contact Kim Harrison, WHM project officer, at 926-8894.

It's the profession of arms, not the regression of arms

As Airmen, nothing is average about our responsibilities. On the global stage, we are responsible for our nation's security, the safety of its citizens and the preservation of its way of life.

To that end, and as stated in the Airman's Creed, we serve as "guardians of freedom and justice."

On a much smaller stage but just as important, we are responsible for embodying Air Force culture and being good stewards of the profession of arms.

All Airman are on center stage and responsible for upholding our culture. However, I've seen examples where many Airmen have 'exited stage right' and their commitment to or understanding of our culture has deteriorated.

Embodying Air Force culture begins with a feeling deep in one's heart we are Airmen first and specialists second. Air Force culture is all the little things molded together which make us Airmen. Our core values, the Airman's Creed, Air Force history, and standards of dress and appearance are just a few things that come to mind.

Embodying Air Force culture also entails keeping accurately informed of larger Air Force issues or 'hot topics.' Airmen must not only stay in tune with the Air Force's priorities, but they must exhibit effective followership by explaining and supporting decisions of our senior leaders.

Sadly, not all Airmen do.

During an annual awards banquet meeting, committee members were brainstorming fundraising ideas. I was just listening until an NCO mentioned his unit booster club made good money by having a 'buy out of blues Monday' fundraiser.

I couldn't believe what I heard. Who would approve of such a thing? Even if everyone else was saying yes, somewhere along the way there should have been a senior NCO saying, "No, that is completely against what the Air Force expects and sends the wrong message." Would anyone in their right mind ask Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Norton A. Schwartz or Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force James A. Roy if they'd like to partake in such a fundraiser?

After I expressed my discontent, another Airman mentioned his unit had a 'buy out of physical training' fundraiser.

What message are we sending? I feel very fortunate to wear my uniform and wouldn't pay a penny to not wear it. I vividly remember how proud I felt when I finally got my blues issued in basic training. I also remember proudly wearing my 'Class As' on my first trip home. It's not a hassle for me to wear the uniform; in fact, when I retire I absolutely know I'll miss the opportunity to do so.

These reflections are just a few ways I answer the question, "Hey Chief, how do you feel about blues Monday?"

Being an Airman demands much more than you being good at your job. It is accepting a lifestyle and committing yourself to the profession of arms, regardless of your specialty. We can't 'cherry pick' what expectations we live up to, and we surely can't create an environment where our traditions, heritage and culture take a back seat.

The sooner a person makes the transition from being good at his or her job to being a good Airman, the sooner he or she benefits from the true meaning of military service.

Robins Airman wins DOD award

A senior executive assistant at Headquarters Air Force Reserve Command is one of two Airmen to receive a 2010 Department of Defense African-American History Month Recognition Award.

Senior Master Sgt. Gina Rogers accepted the award Feb. 18 at Morehouse College in Atlanta, along with award recipients from other branches of the U.S. military.

"It was really nice meeting members of our sister services," she said. "It was a total force experience.

"I was extremely excited to receive my award at Morehouse College," added the personnel division administrative assistant. "It is a Historically Black College, the perfect venue to receive such an honor."

To receive the award, servicemembers had to be deployed between February 2008 and February 2009 and demonstrate 'role model' qualities.

While in Southwest Asia, Rogers was responsible for 14 programs and managed the largest automated data processing equipment account in her wing.

self-identified deficiencies and associated action plans to correct them.

“Basically you want to self-identify before they find it,” Cote said. “It shows you are on top of your game.”

Other rules of engagement include:

► Corrective action plans are crucial. Inspectors will evaluate the effectiveness of those plans in correcting problems. They will look at root-cause analysis, leadership involvement, urgency and whether the plan specifically describes who does what and by what date.

► Any unit member can call “knock it off” at any time if he or she perceives a threat to safety.

► Inspectors will not use deception such as fake IDs to test security of restricted areas.

► During exercises, which may be required for the inspection, inspectors wear reflective vests and are not considered “players.”

► Inspectors will use exercise injects to evaluate individual and unit responses during exercises. If unclear, ask the inspector. Follow procedures you would normally use to deal with the inject.

► Communication and safety are paramount.

Small size, high-tech Dental lab gives service with a smile

The dental lab at Robins is small in comparison to most in the Air Force – the staff consists of two Airmen and one civilian – but it is not lagging in technology.

The lab in the 78th Dental Squadron makes crowns, dentures and just about everything else needed to help keep Robins Airmen ready to deploy.

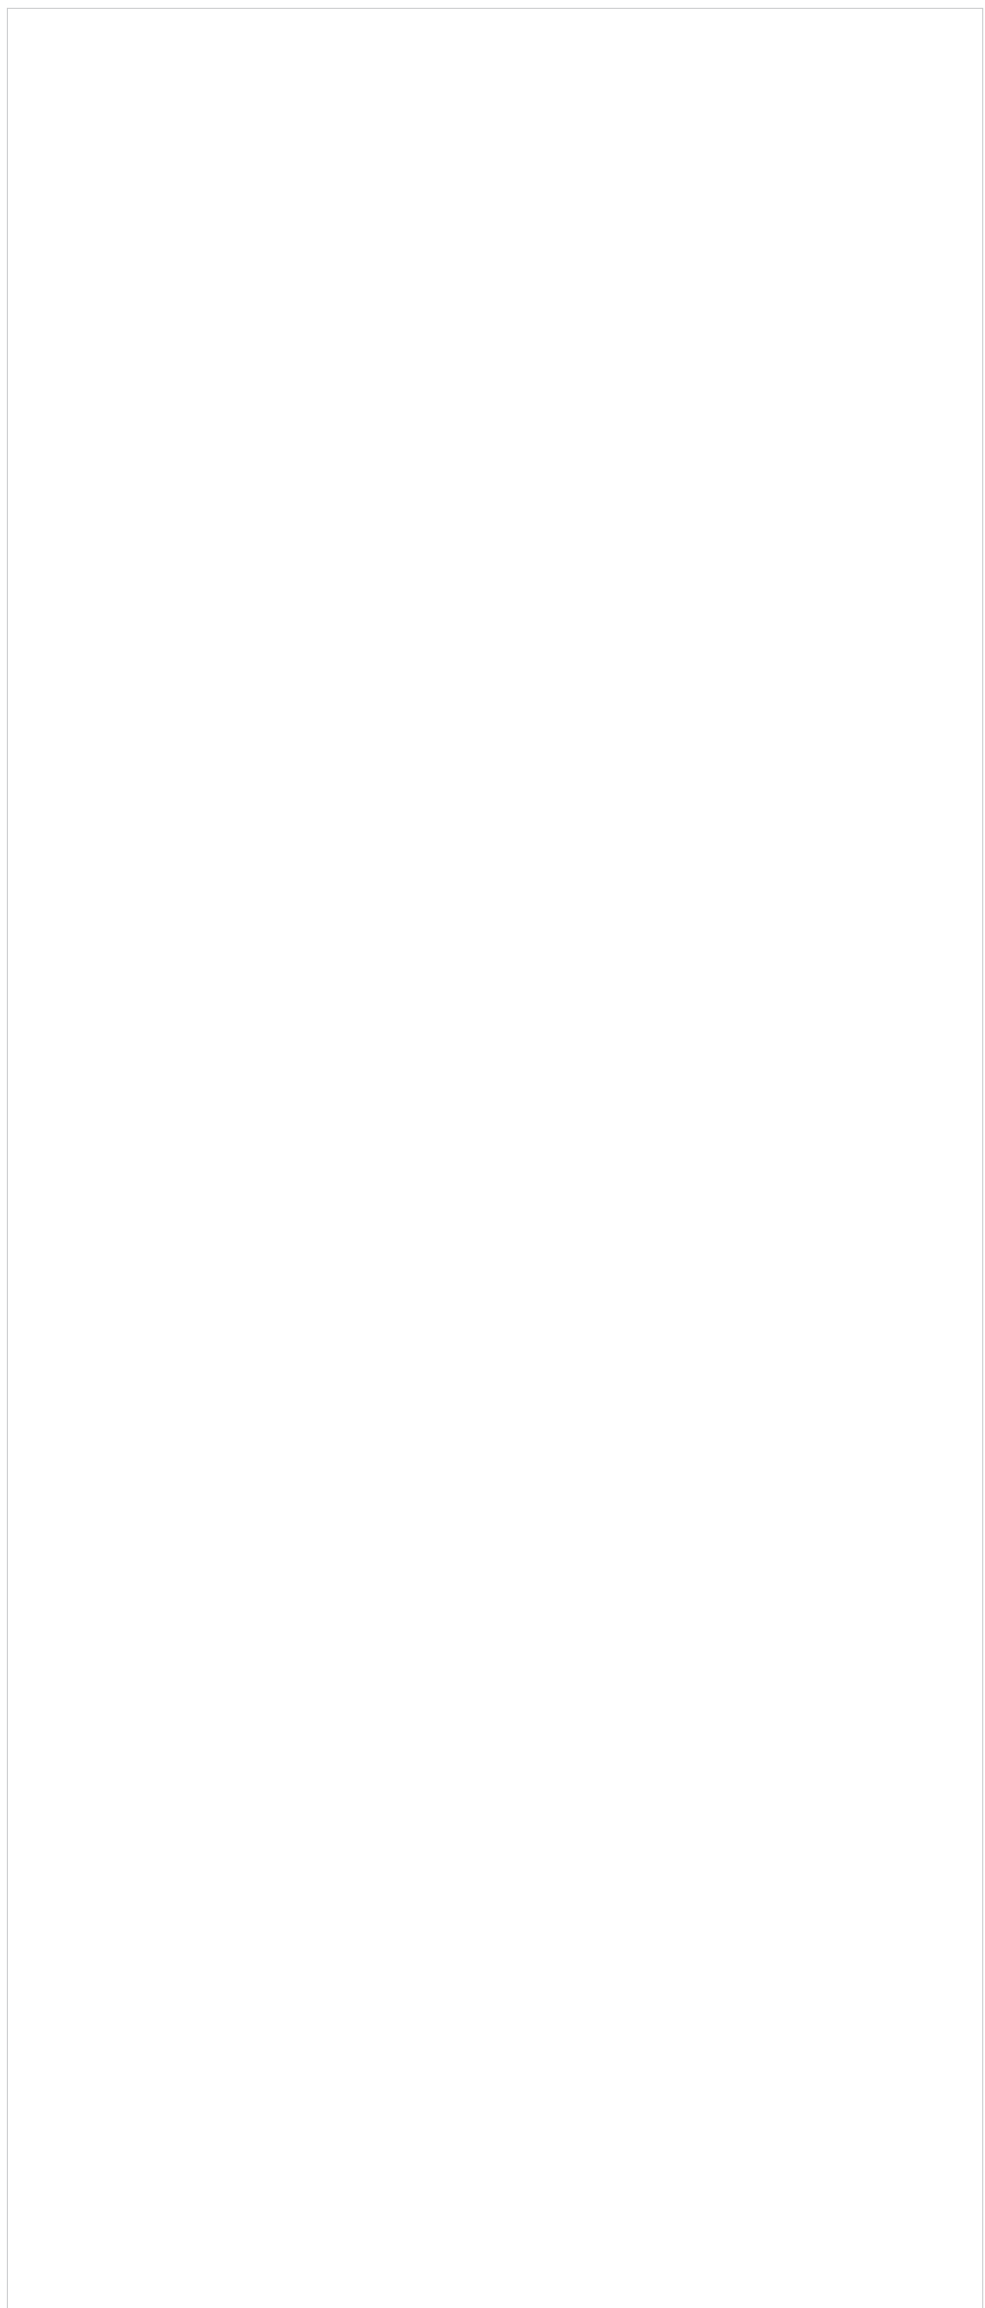

In fact, the lab has a machine which allows it to make crowns almost immediately.

Airmen previously had to have their teeth prepped during one visit and then return up to a week later to have the crowns inserted. That work can now be done during the same visit.

DID YOU KNOW ...

On this day in 1717, a skirmish between British troops and a crowd in Boston, Ma. became widely publicized and contributed to the unpopularity of the British regime in America before the American Revolution. The skirmish is often referred to as the Boston Massacre.

This day is also known as Crispus Attucks Day. He was a run-away slave and the first person to die in the events that lead to the Boston Massacre.

The first full week in March is recognized as National Procrastination Week. The goal is to promote the benefits of relaxing and putting off until tomorrow everything that needn't be done today.

TEST YOUR KNOWLEDGE:

Last week we tested your knowledge of spies and geography. This week we'll quiz you on monsters and a little mythology. Let's see just how much you know.

QUESTIONS:

- 1) What mythological monster was said to be produced when a chicken egg was hatched under a toad or a serpent?
A: Hydra, B: Chimera, C: Basilisk, D: Thorax
- 2) In 1832, what monster did U.K. representative B.H. Hodson claim to have seen in Nepal?
A: Abominable Snowman, B: Werewolf, C: Vampire, D: Hydra
- 3) According to local legends, what large, nocturnal, red-haired monster roams the Amazon jungle of Brazil?
A: Mokele Mbeme, B: Mapinguari, C: Thylacine, D: Chacoan Peccary
- 4) What famous monster did Mary Shelley create in the summer of 1816, while visiting the poet Lord Byron at his villa in Switzerland?
A: Abominable Snowman, B: Frankenstein, C: Dracula, D: Mr. Hyde
- 5) According to legend, what three-headed monster was said to guard the entrance to Hades?
A: Cerberus, B: Typhon, C: Echidna, D: Minotaur

ANSWERS:

- 1) C. According to legend, a basilisk was produced when a chicken egg was hatched under a toad or a serpent. There were, according to legend, several species of this animal.
- 2) A. In 1832, U.K. representative B.H. Hodson, while living in Nepal, claimed to have seen the Abominable Snowman attack his servants. Hodson described the creature as a "wild man ... covered in long, dark hair, and had no tail".
- 3) B. The Mapinguari, a large, nocturnal, red-haired monster with a disorienting stench, roams the Amazon jungle of Brazil. Locals describe the Mapinguari as standing about two meters tall when on its hind legs. Although most scientists dismiss the Mapinguari as myth, a few believe the Mapinguari may actually exist.
- 4) B. In the summer of 1816, while visiting the poet Lord Byron at his villa near Lake Geneva in Switzerland, Mary Shelley created the character of the Frankenstein monster.
- 5) A. According to Greek mythology, the three-headed watchdog Cerberus was said to guard the entrance to Hades. The center head was that of a lion, and the other two resembled a dog and a wolf. Cerberus was the offspring of the giant Typhon and Echidna, a monstrous snake-like creature.
