Requirements Symposium announced

Robins will host its 2012 Requirements Symposium on Nov. 7 and 8 at the Georgia National Fairgrounds & Agricenter in Perry.

Cosponsored by the Robins Regional Chamber of Commerce's Aerospace Industry Committee, the symposium will revolve around the theme: "Celebrating a Decade of Air Force and Industry Dedicated to the Warfighter." Guest speakers will include Lt. Gen. C.D. Moore II, Air Force Life Cycle Management Center commander, and Lt. Gen. Bruce Litchfield, Air Force Sustainment Center commander.

While there will be a number of breakout sessions – where attendees get detailed information about the requirements of current and future programs – there will also be informational briefings offered by a number of agencies, including the Georgia Tech Procurement Assistance Center and the Small Business Innovative Research Office.

The symposium is an annual event where base senior leaders and managers share with industry the current and future requirements of their organizations. This insight allows industry to better respond to those needs.

More than 475 industry representatives from across North America attended last year's symposium.

Flight Lt. Si Holden displays a replica of the 2012 Royal Air Force Museum American Foundation RAF Sword of Honor he was recently awarded.

Robins exchange officer awarded Sword of Honor

BY LANORRIS ASKEW

When Flight Lieutenant Si Holden began his tour of duty with the 461st Air Control Wing in April 2009, he had high hopes, but no idea he would name the top Royal Air Force exchange officer and possess the hardware to prove it.

Holden, a 16th Airborne Command and Control Squadron airborne intelligence officer and instructor on the Joint Surveillance Target Attack Radar System, was recently awarded the 2012 Royal Air Force Museum American Foundation RAF Sword of Honor.

The award, which was instituted in 2009 is presented annually to the RAF officer on exchange with the U.S. Air Force who has contributed the most in the previous year to relations between the two nations and their respective air forces.

Holden said he is dedicated to completing and taking the mission to the next level.

"I'm proud to serve as part of this exchange, and it was an honor to be recognized," he said. "I'm happy to have been able to use my expertise in shaping future capability and integrating the (JSTARS) platform into some of the broader mission."

According to the award citation, Holden's achievements during the past year are numerous. Highlights include his involvement in the JSTARS/SENTINEL Interoperability Program, understanding how the U.S. and the U.K. can share data and Standardized Data Agreement compatibility, and integrate both platforms.

He also deployed with the unit and was directly responsible for integrating specific in-theater U.K. forces, wider U.S. Fleet assets and specialized national collection requests into the weapon system to increase support and awareness for operational execution, the citation added.

Holden has been in the military for 24 years, including 14 as an enlisted member, so he has seen the service from both sides.

He said he has enjoyed his time in the exchange program.

Tip line offers new ways to report suspicious activity

BY BRIAN BRACKENS

WRIGHT-PATERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio

In an effort to better engage the community and prevent threats to the U.S. Air Force, the Air Force Office of Special Investigations recently announced a new initiative to move its Eagle Eyes "tip line" into the virtual world.

The new program will allow individuals to send anonymous information about suspicious or illegal activity through a Smartphone application, via the Web or by text message. Tipsters may also submit relevant photos and documents, and follow up on the results of their tips.

Col. Curtis Riedel, AFOSI Region 1 commander, said that OSI and law enforcement rely on every member of the Air Force to identify and report threats, and the tip line makes it easier and convenient for them to make reports.

"There are many real threats to the Air Force, from cyber attack, to espionage, fraud and sexual assaults," he said. "We rely on the entire community to be sensors and identify threats, and this new initiative allows individuals to report information in a manner many are more comfortable with."

Individuals may send information about suspicious activity by texting 'AFOSI' and their tip to 274637 (CRIMES), or through the online tip line at www.tipsubmit.com/WebTips.aspx?AgencyID=1111 or the AFOSI web page at www.osi.af.mil.

Smartphone users may download the tip application from their mobile provider's marketplace by selecting AFOSI under the USA Federal Agency heading.

Although the normal tour is three years, Holden was approved for an 18-month extension. He is now due to leave here in September 2013.

Col. Dean Worley, 461st Air Control Wing commander, said

he's not surprised by Holden's selection.

"Flt. Lt. Holden's service to both nations is truly exemplary. He's an integral part of every aspect of Team JSTARS both in combat and here at home," he said. "Receiving the Sword of Honor validates what we already know – he's the best of the best!"

Holden received the award Oct. 4 in Washington D.C.

Brig. Gen. Witham named Air National Guard Deputy Director

Brigadier Gen. James "JC" Witham has been named deputy director of the Air National Guard. Witham has served as the chief of staff and commander of the California National Guard.

"I'm thrilled and humbled for the opportunity to lead the best Air National Guard in our nation's history – a force that is proven in combat and domestic crises," he said. "I look forward to ensuring the investment the American people have made in the Air Guard continues to pay dividends."

As deputy director, Witham will be part of the leadership team responsible for forming, developing and coordinating the policies, plans and programs affecting more than 106,000 Air Guard members in more than 88 flying wings and 200 geographically-separated units throughout the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands.

Lt. Gen. Harry "Bud" Wyatt III, Air National Guard director, said Witham is the right person at the right time for the job.

Army UH-1H finds new home with Air Force

The Inter-American Air Forces Academy at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland recently landed a new training tool which upgrades the helicopter maintenance courses offered to students from Latin American partner nations.

The arrival of an Army UH-1H helicopter at IAAFA's 318th Training Squadron is expected to meet the growing needs of students there to learn how U.S. Airmen perform their mission.

"We have a culture of continuous improvement at the 318th TRS, and modernization is a big part of that culture," said Maj. Manuel Sotelo, the squadron's maintenance operations officer.

"We try to modernize to keep up with 21st Century technologies, and the demand and requirements of our Latin American partners and students," he said. "This helicopter helps us do that."

As more Latin American countries integrate Huey II helicopters into their fleets, the acquisition of the 1983 UH-1H is just one half of an equation needed to meet new helicopter maintenance requirements. The other half would involve adding a UH-1N helicopter to the IAAFA inventory.

Integrating parts from both the H and N models would allow the academy to assemble a Huey II trainer," said Sotelo.

F-15 test force celebrates 10 years of Eagle improvements at its inception, recalled the major accomplishments and changes they've seen.

The OTP CTF is a unit composed of active and reserve military members, civilians and contractors assigned to the 53rd and 96th Test wings.

They test F-15 software upgrades to enhance air-to-air and air-to-ground combat performance, improve weapons-avionics integration and simplify aircrew displays and controls. They also develop test concepts, prepare test plans, analyze data, and produce test briefings, reports and recommendations on F-15 developmental and operational tests.

Prior to the CTF, small test teams operated on various test aspects of the F-15. But, once those teams were combined in 2002, everyone had a new mission to work toward, according to Ronald Bear, an original employee of the OFP CTF.

That mission became software "Suite" upgrades and updates for C, D and E model F-15s. The unit got its start fielding Suite 4.

As of now, OFP CTF has completed testing on Suites 5 through 7, resulting in major advances in the electronics and computer systems in the more than 30-year-old aircraft.

A significant step that made advancements possible was the opening of the Richter Lab in 2003. The facility integrated four test facilities into a single laboratory.

'Fastest man alive' celebrates 65th anniversary with re-enactment

Retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Chuck Yeager, the first person to fly faster than the speed of sound, celebrated the 65th anniversary of his ground-breaking event with a re-enactment Oct. 14 at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

Yeager was serving as a test pilot and flying the experimental Bell X-1, named the "Glamorous Glennis," when he successfully broke the sound barrier.

"Up until that time we weren't able to do it," Yeager said. "Finally, on Oct. 14, 1947, we succeeded, and that opened the doors of space to us."

Yeager's re-enactment flight began when he and the aircraft's pilot, Capt. David Vincent, 65th Aggressor Squadron, flew an F-15D Eagle to 45,000 feet over Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. At 10:24 a.m., he broke the sound barrier again.

AFMC commander sets CFC goals

Team AFMC,

This year's Combined Federal Campaign kicked off Oct. 3 and runs through Nov. 14.

The CFC, along with the Air Force Assistance Fund, is one of two charitable fund-raising drives officially sanctioned by the Air Force.

Many national and local relief agencies depend on the CFC to help finance their operations. Recent natural disasters, combined with our nation's tough economic struggles, remind us that our fellow citizens need our help now more than ever.

In addition to relief agencies, many research activities depend on CFC donations to fund their groundbreaking searches for cures to devastating diseases like cancer, alzheimer's, and autism, just to name a few. Ultimately, your voluntary contributions will not only benefit others, but may also bene-

Energy Office has bright ideas for reducing consumption

BY KENDAHL JOHNSON
kendahl.johnson@robins.af.mil

As part of Energy Action Month, the Air Force's top three leaders reminded Airmen in a letter that individual efforts do have an effect on energy savings.

"To emphasize each of our roles in energy savings, the Air Force has adopted 'I am Air Force Energy' as the theme. As energy consumers, we can impact the Air Force's fuel and electricity use every day – by flying our aircraft at energy efficient altitudes, not letting vehicles or equipment idle, or simply turning off the lights," they wrote. "While individual efforts may seem small, they can have a big impact when multiplied across the Air Force."

With the Air Force mandating a 30-percent energy-reduction goal by the end of fiscal 2015, the Robins Energy Office encourages each office to use best-management practices to reduce energy consumption, and for each person to be mindful during his or her daily routine of how to conserve.

There are several things individuals can do to help secure a clean energy future at work and at home, including using Energy Star-rated office equipment and Energy Star appliances, and making the switch to compact fluorescent bulbs.

Setting back thermostats alone can save up to 25 percent of heating and cooling costs.

Also, turn off lights, computer monitors, printers, fax machines and other office equipment when not in use. Turn off power strips and unplug idle wall chargers.

To help promote awareness, the energy office is hosting several contests during October. It's looking for organizations which had the largest decline in energy use (Most Improved Energy Hog) and organizations which show the most efficient use of energy (Energy Champion). Another contest seeks to identify innovative and creative actions taken to reduce energy consumption (Most Innovative and Creative Shop or Person).

For more information about the three contests, visit <http://www.robins.af.mil>.
