Hilo resident recognized as employee of the year

Terry Hanohano of Hilo, Hawaii, was recognized as U.S. Army Garrison-Hawaii and Installation Management Command-Pacific's Employee of the Year (Clerical and Assistant). She was honored for her exceptional service during the Honolulu-Pacific Federal Executive Board Awards Luncheon at the Sheraton Waikiki, recently.

Hanohano, a management technician at U.S. Army Garrison-Pohakuloa, clapped as other awardees crossed the stage. Hanohano, who has been working at PTA since 1988, was no surprise to her boss, Lt. Col. Warline Richardson, commander, U.S. Army Garrison, Pohakuloa Training Area.

"She's my right hand, my left hand, my counselor, and sometimes my mom," Richardson said. "Her concern is genuine and she puts her heart into what she does. She takes care of all of PTA."

"I'd like to think that I make some sort of difference in sending our warfighters off fully trained," Hanohano said.

After having worked at USAG-PTA for the past 20 years, Hanohano didn't hesitate in revealing the best part of her job.

"People," she said. "It's definitely the people."
