HOOPS FOR TROOPS

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff gave a motivational talk to players on the USA Basketball men's and women's national teams here Saturday. Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey met the basketball players, who are preparing for upcoming Olympics competition in London, at the District of Columbia National Guard Armory He was joined by service members and their families for the "Hoops for Troops" program. The "Hoops for Troops" program, launched in 2006, provides support for the U.S. military and their families through programs, events, and partnerships, according to the USA Basketball website. "If you're a huge sports fan, this is one of these events that have got to be memorable to you," Dempsey said. "It is a huge morale boost for us, that is to say, those that serve and their families." Dempsey said the event was a great morale boost for troops, but it was equally important for the men's and women's basketball teams, which he had the opportunity to talk to before the event began. The chairman said he explained to the players how the U.S. military's young men and women operate with trust in themselves, their leaders and the institution they support.

Local teen named youth of the year

Serving the communities in U.S. Army Garrison Baden-Württemberg

HeraldPOS

By Mindy Campbell USAG KAISERSLAUTERN PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Military children often have a unique story to tell.

Michael Lawson, 16, hopes to share that story as the 2012 Boys & Girls Club Youth of the Year for U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern.

Michael, who will be a senior in the fall at Kaiserslautern High School, is a true example of an extraordinary young man recognized by Boys & Girls Clubs of America for his sound character, leadership skills and willingness to give back to the community, said Vicki Brown, program supervisory specialist at the garrison's Child, Youth and School Service's Landstuhl's Youth Center.

"From a leadership position, he has been involved in so many different things and been successful with them all," Brown said. "It is nice to see him get Youth of the Year and to be recognized for all he has done."

Since 1947, the award program has recognized teens for outstanding service to the club, their local communities and their families.

The judging criteria also includes strong academics, morals, goals and public speaking abilities, according to club officials.

In addition to winning the Youth of the Year title, Michael was named his high school's Athlete of the Year, where he participates in cross country, wrestling and track. He was also named as one of two U.S. Army Europe representatives for the Army Teen Panel and participated in the Installation Command Europe's Youth Leadership forum.

Michael serves as the vice president of the Landstuhl Keystone Club and will also serve as his school's senior class president and student body vice president.

"I consider the fact that this is my community and anything that I can do to benefit my own community is to benefit me," said Michael, who has lived in Germany at different times for 13 years.

Currently, Michael plans to attend college, but is unsure of what he wants to study. He said he is leaning toward following in his father's footsteps, who is the deputy commander at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center, and becoming a doctor. He is also interested in applying to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Youth Center and its staff.

"I can definitely vouch for it as being one of the best in Europe, if not overseas," Michael said. "It's a wonderful program. A lot of the credit should go to the youth advisors here at the youth center. They really gave me the opportunities... they really got me moving."

AFN Europe celebrates historic assumption of command

By Margaret Clevenger

USAG RADEN-WÜRTTEMBERG SUMMER HIRE

Friends, family and community members all gathered Thursday in Mannheim as members of Armed Forces Network Europe welcomed their new commander. Lt. Col Sherri Reed.

Reed assumed command from Col. Bill Bigelow in a ceremony held on Coleman Barracks. Bigelow deployed to Afghanistan earlier this year and currently serves as Deputy Chief of Staff for Communications of International Security Assistance Force.

Reed is the 35th Commander of AFN Europe and the first female to ever hold the position.

"A lot of our service members are also female so we want to make sure that they have the opportunity and the understanding that we value your performance based on just that ... how well you're doing and I think it's a very positive thing for the American forces network," said Navy Capt. David Werner, Defense Media Activity, Director of Broadcasting.

Before assuming command of AFN Europe, Reed served as the Director of Public Affairs at the United States Army Military Academy. She has also previously served as the Operations Officer for AFN Europe.

"Probably the most exciting aspect of having her as our commander, she's a returning AFNer, she was here a few years ago as an operations officer and it's nice to have somebody command us that knows what we do, how we do it, and has a vision for the future," said Ron Przysucha, AFN Europe Operations Officer.

Although Bigelow could not be present, Maj. Michelle L. Baldanza, stepped in to help pass the unit guidon to Reed. Once the guidon was passed, Werner and Baldanza both expressed their excitement about AFN's future. Reed spoke afterwards and shared her desire to communicate with all of AFN Europe's audiences; Soldiers, family members and civilians. After the ceremony, guests were given a tour of the AFN Europe facilities and invited to remain for refreshments. For more on the ceremony visit www.afneurope.net.

Military kids combat culture shock, adapt to college life Stateside

Margaret Clevenger

USAG BADEN-WÜRTTEMBERG SUMMER HIRE

I'll never forget the moment I watched my Mom get in her silver rental car, shut the door, start the engine and drive away to the airport, leaving me at Syracuse University, in Syracuse, N.Y.

I was in America again - a country I hadn't lived in for 7 years - completely by myself. I moved to Syracuse in August 2010 to start school as an undeclared major. I am now a public relations and public policy double major moving into my junior year this fall.

I'm not really sure how I felt that first day. Fear, confusion and excitement seemed the most overpowering as I walked out of the dorm parking lot and headed up the stairs to my room to begin my new life.

Moving to the States from Germany for college was one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. Everything seemed new to me and it definitely took some time to get used to.

It's hard to imagine that you can have culture shock in your own country, but I did. Although I had visited the States, I wasn't really prepared for the difference between my peers and I.

First, I had to figure out a way to explain that I'm from Germany but I'm not German and why I don't speak German fluently. Some kids in the States don't know that there are U.S. Army bases in Europe that house Americans and even have schools located on them.

'Where are you from' seemed to be a staple conversation starter at freshman orientation and I stumbled over that question quite a bit the first few days. Now, I usually say something like "I'm from Germany, but I'm American. My dad was in the Army and I lived with Americans over there for 7 years." People still don't fully understand, but it kind of gets the point across and they don't have to ask too many questions, which can be embarrassing.

I also had to get used to American culture again. There is no doubt that American culture in Germany is different than in the States, even though that sounds silly.

I was that weird kid who would actually enjoy watching commercials, just because they weren't Armed Forces Network commercials.

I was the only one who would actually wait for the green light to cross the crosswalk even though the passing cars on the highways seemed to go so much slower than what I was used to. It was also hard to get used to paying taxes in stores. I would get up to the cash register with the exact amount in hand, then remember the tax and have to dig through my purse for spare change.

Believe it or not, when I moved to school in August of 2010, I didn't know what the infamous MTV reality show, "Jersey Shore" was. It was really popular at that point and I felt a little out of the loop when I didn't know anything about Snookie, one of the show's most popular cast members. I think that the 2012 graduates from Department of Defense Dependent Schools Europe will be a little more caught up with the shows, movies and celebrities than I was back in 2010.

However, new graduates still need to be prepared to ask questions and adjust.

But don't worry, being a military brat is all about adjusting. We've done it before, we can do it again. Going to college is different than PCSing with family, but the experience a military child has will prepare them for the transition. Adapting is our specialty.

Asking questions and going new places helped me catch up to my peers. Going into my third year of college, I still have to ask for clarification sometimes.

But that doesn't mean I completely changed myself to fit in. I still wait for the crosswalk man to turn green and I still crave schnitzel all the time.

I think it's really important that military brats don't change themselves to fit in. You're unique, embrace it.

Some general advice - be careful what you ship back to the States.

Make sure that you do not ship something that you will need immediately at school. I only shipped my winter clothes and a few decorative items; I bought everything else I needed in the States.

I also found it helpful to put all of my important documents for school and things in one place, that way, if I ever needed them, my parents could find them easily for me.

Make sure to discuss your finances with your parents and ensure everyone is on the same page.

You should also make sure that you have a credit, debit card or alternative payment method to pay for expected and unexpected expenses.

If you haven't visited your school, look at pictures of your campus, and check out their website. There you can often find maps and helpful tips for incoming students.

You should also talk to your family about getting your driver's license if you don't have one already. Driving is not completely necessary on all campuses; I opted for the bus instead. My closest family lives five hours away and this prevented them from teaching me.

However, I will finally take my driver's test when I go back to school in August because it's a little awkward to be 20 years old and not be able to drive.

The most important piece of advice I can give you is not to give up. It can be lonely being away from your family and making friends can be hard but it does get easier with time.

Sometimes you may want to give up and go home, but once you adjust, you'll be so glad that you gave yourself the chance.

Memorials of Faith tour focuses on complete healing experience for Soldiers, families

ERMC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers, family members, cadre and staff from the Warrior Transition Battalion-Europe received a standing ovation from more than 2,000 international visitors during an audience with Pope Benedict XVI at the Vatican in Rome June 19.

The audience with the Pope was one of their many stops during a weeklong journey of spiritual resiliency led by WTB-E Chaplain (Capt.) Eric Dean.

The Memorials of Faith tour visited historic sites that reminded the attendees of the countless hardships and persecutions both Jews and Christians endured over the centuries. It was an immeasurable and healing experience for our wounded, ill and injured, Dean explained. The group toured the Vatican, the Roman Colosseum and the Catacombs of Saint Domittelli, where many of the Soldiers received Holy Communion during a service led by Dean.

"I hope that family members and Warriors have a spiritual encounter in one way or another while on this trip," Dean said on the long bus ride back to Schweinfurt.

This is the third year Dean has been able to guide Warriors through Rome and each time it is a different experience. The Memorials of Faith tour is funded by a grant that is specifically designated to support the needs of wounded, ill and injured Soldiers provided by the U.S. Army Chief of Chaplains' office.

The USO office in Rome helped to organize and reserve tickets for all the tours. After the tour of the Vatican, Warriors received a lunch reception from the USO as well.

"It was an amazing trip and I wasn't ready for the support we received during the papal audience," said Spc. Jared Goldberg and his wife, Rebecca, from Baumholder.

The tour wasn't all about spirituality. At night child care was provided to ensure couples received time to go out into the city and explore Rome on their own or participate in marriage training.

One couple who took advantage of the evening out in the city was Spc. Michael Robinson and his wife, Julia. The Robinsons, who have been to Rome before, spent their time searching for "the best pizza place in Italy."

During the tour, Dean provided spiritual thoughts and scriptural quotes at each site to provide guidance, food for thought and spiritual healing.

Dean asked everyone to ponder "whose victory will the mural of your life celebrate?"

Warrior Transition Battalion-Europe consists of a headquarters in Heidelberg, along with companies in Landstuhl, Schweinfurt and Vilseck.

Its mission is to provide mission command and administrative support to Soldier's requiring complex care, co-ordinate and synchronize care, treatment and services through the Triad of Care multidisciplinary team (primary care manager, nurse case manager and squad leader). It also promotes readiness for Soldiers and their families to transition back to the force or to civilian life.

transformation UPDATE

BWNow Social Media Site Transitions

USAG Baden-Württemberg will take yet another step in its transformation. We will transition from BWnow being our primary social media site to exclusively using our BWnow Facebook page. The BWnow social media site will be discontinued, due to personnel and budget constraints. BWnow was developed in 2009 prior to the rise in popularity of Facebook. The site has more than 2000 members that have come to trust BWnow as an up-to-date, quick and reliable means of information regarding anything important going on in the Baden-Württemberg garrison. In order to make the most efficient use of tight garrison resources, we will discontinue this service by Aug. 26 of this year. The garrison Public Affairs Office ensures that all the current, useful quality information found on BWnow, will also be available on the garrison's Facebook page at http://www.facebook.com/bwnow.

"What will happen to the students at Heidelberg High School? My son graduates in 2014. Do we know when HHS will close?" Heidelberg High School as we know it today on Mark Twain Village will close after the 2012-13 school year, but Department of Defense Dependents Schools may establish a combined high school and middle school on Patrick Henry Village for the 2013-14 school year if there are sufficient high school students remaining. Current projections of personnel remaining in the Heidelberg and Mannheim communities justify maintaining an elementary school, middle school and high school in Heidelberg through 2012-13. The determination of how the schools will be configured in Heidelberg on PHV for the 2013-14 school year will be based on the projected number of assigned personnel and school age children remaining. As we gain more fidelity on these proiections, we will work closely with DODDS to determine how assigned personnel will receive DODDS school services. If there are DODDS schools on PHV for the 2013-14 school year, community members can anticipate that some schools will be combined (either elementary combined with middle school or middle school combined with high school) and curriculum, faculty and activities will be reduced given the much smaller population remaining in Heidelberg and Mannheim.

"With all of the closures going on in the Mannheim and Heidelberg areas, what are Soldiers supposed to do in regards to their equipment (helmets, sleep systems, etc.) and how long can Soldiers expect the local Central Issue Facilities to be here for them?"

The current plan is to keep the CIF on Spinelli Barracks in Mannheim open as long as possible to ensure continued support to the community and it is scheduled to remain open at least through June of 2013. The limiting factor will be employee availability. No CIFs will be closed without coordination and approval from U.S. Army Europe and the 21st Theater Sustainment Command.

There are individuals who are not receiving Living Quarters Allowance currently. If they move to Wiesbaden, will they be eligible for LQA, based on the management-directed reassignment?

Management directed reassignments have certain components associated with them. Regarding Living Quarters Allowance, no determination has been made, but it is being considered as plans to inactivate move forward. Once more is known about LQA for managementdirected moves, we will get the information out in the Herald Post and on our Facebook (http://www.facebook.com/bwnow)

Easily reached on direct flights from Germany, Scottish capital Edinburgh fascinating city to explore.

By Katja Pinkston

USAG BW PUBLIC AFFAIRS VOLUNTEER

Known as the Athens of the North, Edinburgh is nestled among rolling hills and the Firth of Forth, the estuary or firth of Scotland's River Forth, where it flows into the North Sea.

Built during the 11th century, Edinburgh Castle sits majestically on a hilltop overlooking the city. Touring the castle's chapel, Scottish National War Memorial, museum, Royal Palace and seeing the Scottish Crown Jewels will take the better part of a day even if you get there early in the morning to avoid the crowds. The view from the castle, however, is breathtaking and the subsequent refreshments with a few selections of Scottish and English dishes at the castle's Queen Anne Café are delightful.

Strolling down from the castle on The Royal Mile, visitors make their way through the Old Town jumbled with narrow alleys, called "close." Several tour companies offer historical walks and even ghost tours through this part of town, where costumed guides provide entertaining and authentic stories.

You can get a glimpse of living conditions in a 17th century house at Gladstone's Land, which has been restored by the National Trust for Scotland and displays typical living areas of its time. If you have time, visit the 18th century Georgian House in the New Town to compare.

Another imposing building along The Royal Mile is the St. Giles Cathedral with its famous ornate steeple dating back to 1495, and a statue of John Knox, who preached here in the 16th century.

Dotted around the Old Town are various charming pubs and shops catering to tourists who do not want to leave Scotland without tasting some of its cuisine, trying on a kilt or tartan or taking home a souvenir sporting the old Celtic language of Scottish Gaelic.

At the end of The Royal Mile, Holyrood Palace offers tours of its elegant interior and the Queen's Gallery. The palace was founded as a monastery in 1128, and it has been the residence of kings and queens who chose to live there instead of in the mighty castle at the other end. One of the most famous residents was Mary, Queen of Scots, who lived here during the 16th century. Today, the palace is the official Scottish residence of Queen Elizabeth II.

One of the most popular shopping areas is Princes Street, in Edinburgh's New Town. The New Town was erected in the 18th century to give the wealthier class an alternative to living in the cramped Old Town. Residents could find a retreat in the Princes Street Gardens, which is a relaxing park to stroll through even today.

At Edinburgh's port, visitors can tour the ship Britannia that has transported the Royal Family for more than 40 years. Displays include a museum, the crew's quarters, captain's bridge and rooms with lavish decorations.

If it's rainy – after all this is Scotland – Edinburgh has several museums that are worth visiting and free to the public. The National Museum of Scotland displays collections of natural science, technology and art as well as Scottish history and archeology. The Museum of Edinburgh houses a vast array of historic rooms with iconic items. European masterpieces are displayed at the National Gallery of Scotland, while kids may enjoy a visit to the Museum of Childhood that shows historical toys and games.

If you are in Scotland for several days, a driving trip to the Highlands is highly recommended. With its famous lochs and picturesque villages tucked into the valleys, the Highlands are stunning. The lush green, rugged mountains and the numerous waterfalls make this area a nature lover's paradise.

For those too timid to rent a car and drive on the left side, there are various tour companies offering trips to the Highlands. You can book one day tours or tours that last a week or more and include accommodations for overnight stays.

Having a tour guide explain Scottish history, tell fascinating Scottish stories and drive you to the most interesting places, is a great way to experience the Scottish countryside.

With its breathtaking natural beauty, a visit to the Isle of Skye is an unforgettable experience. Sites include the unique Black Houses, Dunvegan Castle, Talisker Distillery and a few historical battlefields and enchanting places such as Fairy Land.

Not far from the bridge that connects the Isle of Skye with the mainland stands the Eilean Donan Castle, which served as a backdrop for the movie Highlander. The castle's interior not only tells its history, but you can also roam through grand rooms on the upper floors down to the servant's quarters on the ground.

What would a visit to Scotland be without searching for the elusive monster? At Loch Ness you can take a boat ride out onto the loch, search for any unusual creature, or watch the screens that monitor beneath the water with sonar technology. Fort Augustus, on the shores of Loch Ness, is a picturesque village with shops, restaurants and accommodations, making it an ideal place for a longer stay.

Forn many travelers, though, there may never be enough time to see all of beautiful Scotland.

Karstadt Cuts Jobs

Officials from the Department store chain Karstadt announced they are cutting 2,000 positions and energy giant RWE said it was targeting thousands more. Karstadt is in the midst of restructuring and store refurbishment in an attempt to compete with other German retailers. Company officials say there would be no wave of shop closures though. The cuts are planned to be made over the next two years.

The Great Ape Escape

Five chimpanzees broke out from their enclosure at a German animal park Thursday, injuring a five-year-old girl and sparking a temporary evacuation of 2,500 visitors in the northern city of Hannover, a zoo spokeswoman said. It is thought the five primates used wood that had fallen into their pen from recent gardening work to climb out and run for freedom at Hannover's Experience Zoo. The five-year-old girl sustained light head wounds after she was apparently knocked down by one of the marauding chimps. She was taken to hospital as a precautionary measure.

Police Nail Screw Thief

Bavarian police have finally nabbed a man who spent months stealing screws from road signs. Officials, who were running out of the special screws needed, are said to be very relieved. A vigilant driver called the police after noticing the man working on a roadside warning lamp late on Saturday evening. He was reportedly wearing a headlamp, and kept hiding whenever a car approached. The 54-year-old man, who had no other convictions, was apparently psychologically disturbed and is receiving care. It is still unclear whether he can be made liable for his actions, which caused an estimated damage of €800.

Dear Ms Vicki,

I met my son's father 20 years ago when we were both stationed in Germany. I got pregnant and left the Army. I went on with my life, got married and started my family. I never bothered my son's father for support. My husband and I told our son at the age of 12 that he had another father. Well, my husband passed away and my oldest son started to have some problems. I told him that if he didn't straighten up I would find his biological father and send him to his father. All I was told was, he is still in the army. I had some help locating him through a friend and the post locator. To my surprise, within 30 minutes I had him on the phone and he was telling how he had been praying that God would send me back in his life. Within a month he was here visiting his son. We were married soon after. My husband is on his 3rd deployment. I am so scared that he may find a little something while he is over there. He assures me that he is too tired and does not have time. However, I hear that soldiers have affairs all the time. I don't, of course, hear from him often yet he assures me how much he loves me and never wants to hurt me. I want to believe him but I do remember our beginnings 20 years ago. Should I trust him and trust that what he is saying is true? From: Confused

Dear Confused,

Thanks for writing and for sharing your story. The circle of life really has a way of turning doesn't it? After all of these years you and your son's father are back together and married. Well, I'm sorry to hear about your husband passing away. I'm not sure if you gave yourself the opportunity to grieve his loss because you married again soon after. I don't mean to imply that your current marriage is a rebound relationship, because you have in fact moved on with your life. At any rate you are married to him now. You can't waste time stressing and worrying about the unknown. I'm not sure why you don't trust him. Yes, many people have affairs, but many remain faithful.

This is my advice. I think you should consider speaking to a professional counselor, one who specializes in grief and loss. I think it will be hard for you to have a successful marriage if you haven't come to closure from your first husband. I'm not sure if vou ever will. However, I think there are some things to explore with a counselor that could help you build a successful relationship with your husband and as an individual. When your husband returns consider marital counseling and family counseling. Suggesting this does not imply that you have problems or that your children have problems, it simply helps us as individuals, couples and families.

Military One Source would be a great place to start for counseling sessions. Whatever happens, keep in touch with me and stay encouraged.

Deployments are stressful. I'm sure you are experiencing a range of emotions because of your husband's absence and given what he is going through at this time. Your husband needs to know that you are okay and that his children are okay. Whatever you do make every conversation with your husband a memorable one, not being accusatory about infidelity.

Strep throat symptoms often mistaken

Infection spread through direct contact, coughing, sneezing

Lt. Col. Patricia McKinney

U.S. ARMY PUBLIC HEALTH COMMAND

Many people often confuse painful sore throats with strep throat and believe that antibiotics are needed to make it better. This belief is not true. Strep throat is an infection of the throat and tonsils caused by streptococcal bacteria. The throat gets irritated and inflamed causing a sudden, severe sore throat. Most other sore throats are caused by a virus. Sore throats caused by a virus are also painful. If you have cold-like symptoms such as a runny or stuffy nose and coughing, you probably do not have strep throat.

The most common symptoms of strep throat are sudden, severe sore throat, pain when you swallow, fever over 101 degrees Fahrenheit (38.3 degrees Celsius), swollen tonsils and lymph nodes, white or yellow spots on the back of a bright red throat.

The bacteria is spread by sneezing, coughing, shaking hands or coming into close contact with people who are infected. You can also pick up strep by touching objects that were touched by an infected person, (i.e., phones, doorknobs and tables) and then touching your eyes, nose or mouth. To prevent infection avoid close contact with an infected individual, sharing toothbrushes or eating and drinking utensils. Washing your hands frequently and wiping down your phone is also advised.

You can strengthen your body's ability to fight off infections with a healthy diet, regular exercise, a good night's sleep and by managing your stress.

Strep throat cannot be accurately diagnosed by symptoms or by a physical exam alone. Diagnosis is made by swabbing the back of the throat for a culture to identify the presence of strep bacteria. Sore throats should only be treated with antibiotics if the strep test is positive. Penicillin or amoxicillin are usually the antibiotics prescribed to treat strep throat infection. Antibiotics should be taken for the entire 10 days, even though symptoms are usually gone after a few days. If antibiotics are not taken for the full course of treatment, the infection may reoccur and stronger antibiotics may be needed to treat the infection.

Remember strep throat is not your average sore throat. If you suspect that you may have strep throat, see your health care provider.

Golf tournament raises funds for cancer research

By Rex Gribble HEIDELBERG GOLF COURSE

Pink was the order of the day at the Heidelberg golf course Saturday as 144 German and American men and women teed off in a "shotgun" start at 9 a.m., for the sixth annual Rally For The Cure golf tournament.

The annual tournament, organized and conducted by the Heidelberg Women's Golf Association, raises funds dedicated to spreading awareness and supporting research in the fight to eradicate breast cancer. Last year's HWGA rally raised $13,000 which was donated to the Combined Federal Campaign.

The field of 144 golfers was divided into 36 four-person teams and several HWGA volunteers were also present to assist golfers navigating the course.

Play was preceded by a briefing from Dan Hingtgen on the practice green followed by supporting remarks by Lt. Gen. John Morgan, Commander, Headquarters Allied Force Command Heidelberg - NATO and a prayer by Chaplain Grant Johnson.

Afterwards, Hingtgen and Rally Chair President Lori Schlichter and Dan Hintgen conducted the awards ceremony on the crowded patio, handing out prizes to the tourney winners and raffle items.

The team of Mike Causey,

Terry Davis, George Kelley and Darren Friesz beat Lia Fee Kempf, Jens Boegel, Karin Geuder and Jella Kempf in a winning oneputt playoff by Friesz to win Low Gross. Both teams shot 51 and about a dozen teams broke 60.

The team of Karl-Heinz Knierim, Ruth Manner-Waltz. Dietmar and Helga Schulze won Low Net with a score of 20. Joe Walker, Roberta and Nick Carbone and Andreas Schultze won second place with 28.

Andrew Horton and 15-yearold Jella Kempf scored long drives, while David Johnson and Annemarie Schulz won closest to the pin and Jason Gauden and Ines Lauff earned closest to the bottle honors. Mike Causey and
