

United States Mission to the OSCE

Statement on Georgia

As delivered by Chargé d'Affaires Kyle Scott to the Permanent Council, Vienna
February 5, 2009

Madam Chairwoman.

The United States has noted with concern press reports that Russia plans to open three military bases in the Abkhaz region of Georgia. These steps, if confirmed, would be provocative and destabilizing, and would undercut international efforts through the Geneva talks to reduce tensions in the region. They also would compound Russia's breaches of Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity, and deepen Russia's ongoing violations of the August 12 cease-fire agreement, under which Russian forces are to withdraw to their pre-conflict positions. We would appreciate any information the Russian delegation could give us on these reports, and would strongly urge Russia to reconsider its plans and avoid taking such unwise steps if in fact the press reports are accurate.

Also of serious concern are reports of frequent Russian helicopter flights outside the South Ossetian region of Georgia. An OSCE spot report issued January 26 called attention to Russian helicopter flights into Georgian-controlled airspace clearly outside South Ossetia, and OSCE and EU monitors have noted several instances of Russian helicopters being observed above Georgian villages well outside the breakaway region. Such actions constitute further breaches of Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity, and of the August 12 cease-fire agreement.

These incidents clearly underscore the need for an OSCE monitoring presence with uninhibited access to the whole of Georgia, including South Ossetia. Continued kidnappings and killings of Georgian policemen and civilians demonstrate the same need. We remain convinced that now is the time for more (not less) international presence, to help deter violence, to ensure the safety and protection of civilians, to promote human rights, to encourage dialogue and reconciliation, and to monitor the implementation of the August 12 cease-fire and subsequent agreements. We continue to urge Russia to implement fully its commitments under these agreements, and say again that Russian forces should withdraw to their pre-conflict positions.

Madam Chairwoman, the United States remains ready to work with the Chairmanship on a way to ensure a continued OSCE presence in Georgia. The United States will continue to support Georgia's sovereignty, independence, and territorial integrity within its internationally recognized boundaries, and will help in all ways to find a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

Thank you.
