Gen. Gould to fans: thank you!

By Lt. Gen. Mike Gould
Air Force Academy Superintendent

Thank you Air Force Fans!

A near sell-out crowd of 47,000 fans packed Falcon Stadium last Saturday helping the 2010 Football Falcons execute an exciting and convincing win over BYU!

This wasn't just another beautiful Colorado Saturday. This was a very special remembrance of 9/11. During the game, guests saw a six-foot, 300-pound twisted I-beam from the World Trade Center, a poignant reminder of the violence that occurred on that fateful day nine years ago. Honorary game captains included two heroes, NYPD detective Steve Hayden and FDNY firefighter Ken Haskill, both of whom were 9/11 first-responders, with Ken losing two brothers in the attack. We also honored Army Capt. Mark Wise, a 2007 Air Force Academy grad, who was seriously injured in an attack in Afghanistan last year, and throughout the game, we honored many other faithful military members and public servants too numerous to mention.

Spirited and animated fan support certainly helps us win football games and other competitions, and for that, we're grateful. But on top of that, I want you to know that your support means so much more to the overall development of America's future Air Force leaders. We at the Air Force Academy are as excited as we've ever been to be one of the best academic and leadership institutions in the country and you, the members of the communities around us, play a large role in that success. Whether you're an ardent Falcon fan who attends all our athletic events, a sponsor family who provides a home-away-from-home for cadets, or you simply pat a cadet or Airman on the back and say, "Thank you for your service, keep up the hard work," your encouragement goes miles in rallying cadets, faculty and staff members to achieve more.

Cadets at the Academy go through a rigorous four-year challenge that tests their mental, physical and personal resolve. Your consistent support and dedication is critical in helping us develop the next generation of leaders for the Air Force and our nation.

On behalf of everyone at the Academy, I sincerely thank you for making 9/11 a special day to remember and for your continued support of your U.S. Air Force Academy!

Motorcyclists without helmets injured

Emergency responders stabilize two motorcycle riders who were injured Sept. 10, when their vehicle was struck by a minivan near the Shops at Briargate. The motorcyclists were taken to local hospitals in serious condition. Neither was wearing a helmet at the time of the accident. Servicemembers are required to wear helmets and other personal protective equipment at all times. Civilians are not required to wear helmets or other PPE off base, but it's still a good idea. A memorial service will be held Monday at 9 a.m. in the Cadet Chapel for a cadet who was pronounced dead Thursday.

Cadet 1st Class Marc Henning, 22, was transported to Penrose Hospital Wednesday after he was found unconscious in his dormitory room.

"The Academy family is deeply saddened by the death of one of our own," said Academy Superintendent Lt. Gen. Mike Cadet Henning was a native of Crossville, Ill., and assigned to Cadet Squadron 20. For more information, including counseling services that are available for cadets and staff, go to <http://bit.ly/9cKXR8>.

Newest Aces recognized at Heritage House

By Staff Sgt. Don Branum
Air Force Academy Public Affairs

Thirteen cadets were recognized at the Dean's Heritage House here Sept. 9 for achieving perfect 4.0 academic GPAs during the Spring 2010 semester.

The Fall 2010 Aces List includes nine second-class cadets as well as two third-class cadets and one cadet each from the classes of 2010 and 2011.

Four of the cadets in attendance were double Aces: Cadet 1st Class Jennifer Bandi and Cadets 2nd Class Cody Deacon, Rachel Reeder and Travis Myers. Cadet Bandi earned her second Aces list mention in the Fall 2009 semester but could not attend the previous ceremony.

Among those recognizing the newest aces were Academy Superintendent Lt. Gen. Mike Gould, Dean of the Faculty Brig. Gen. Dana Born, Commandant of Cadets Brig. Gen. Richard Clark and their spouses.

Almost all of the aces are majoring in highly technical careers, such as aeronautical engineering, materials chemistry and physics, General Born said.

"We'll be smarter just by being in a photo with these guys," General Born joked as the officers and cadets assembled for a group photo.

Seven of the cadets who made the Aces List also received the Superintendent's Pin for the Spring 2010 semester. The Superintendent's Pin is awarded to cadets who have earned high military performance averages and upheld a physical education average of at least 3.0 in addition to making the Aces List. Cadets 3rd Class Austin Howard and Kenneth Montel both earned Superintendent's Pin honors during the spring semester of their fourth-class year.

"It was a struggle, definitely," said Cadet Montel, a native of Divide, Colo. "I got a lot of help from my old Basic Cadet Training squadron, a lot of good friends, and I just tried my hardest. I'm definitely proud to be here."

The most difficult part of earning the honors was staying positive throughout the semester, Cadet Montel said. Repeating the achievement may be more difficult, however, as he enters his third-class year.

"I have seven classes this semester, whereas last semester I only had six," he said. "And the core classes are getting a lot tougher. But at the same time, I don't have to run the strips, so that's definitely nice."

Halftime ceremony honors victims, heroes of Sept. 11

By Staff Sgt. Don Branum
Air Force Academy Public Affairs

The Air Force-BYU football game Saturday featured 60 minutes of furious competition on the gridiron, but it also included 20 special minutes dedicated to the 3,000 people who died on the same date nine years ago.

Volunteers unfurled a large American flag onto the field during halftime as the Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps performed to honor the memory of victims of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Former Falcons team captain Chris Gizzi led the Falcons onto the field before the game, carrying an American flag while cadet athletes behind him carried Fire Department of New York and New York Police Department flags.

A steel beam from the World Trade Center, donated by the Post 9/11 Foundation, sat outside Falcon Stadium's eastern façade.

NYPD detective Steve Hayden and FDNY firefighter Kenny Haskell served as honorary game captains for Air Force. Mr. Haskell called the observance "unbelievable."

"It's humbling to be here with the Armed Forces to remember the people who gave their lives on the first day of the War on Terror," Mr. Haskell said. "I'm grateful for their generosity and their kindness. It was classy from start to finish."

ALO shares memory of United 93 co-pilot

By David Edwards
Academy Spirit Staff Writer

On the day of remembrance that is Sept. 11, certain memories are etched into the American psyche. But others are uniquely personal.

One of the latter recurs profoundly in the mind of Air Force Academy grad Paul Adams, now a pilot for Southwest Airlines and Academy Liaison Officer. The morning of Sept. 11, 2001, an Academy classmate of Adams', LeRoy Homer Jr., was in the skies over the eastern United States as part of the flight crew on a plane bound for San Francisco.

The first officer on United Airlines Flight 93, Mr. Homer met the same fate as everyone else on board. That aircraft became the fourth and final jetliner seized as part of a wide-ranging terrorist plot. After a heroic struggle by passengers to retake the hijacked plane, Flight 93 crashed into a field near Shanksville, Pa., leaving no survivors.

Today, a memorial marks the crash site, and mourners pay tribute to the people who thwarted attackers widely believed to have been targeting the White House. The flight has also been re-enacted by multiple filmmakers.

Actor Gary Commock played Mr. Homer in the movie "United 93," and he is listed second in the film credits posted on the Internet Movie Database. Although passengers Todd Beamer, Tom Burnett and Mark Bingham were hailed as the heroes of Flight 93, Mr. Adams believes that his Academy classmate is no less deserving of recognition.

"I think of him often and how he was one of the first Americans to understand the unfolding horror of 9/11," Mr. Adams wrote in an e-mail. "I know he did everything he could to foil the plot, and I like to think he gave his life while alerting his passengers and rallying them to prevent the hijackers from attacking their target with his plane."

While at the Air Force Academy, Mr. Homer belonged to Cadet Squadron 31. He graduated from the Academy in 1987 and went to work for United in May 1995. He was posthumously granted honorary membership in the famed Tuskegee Airman, and a foundation was established in his name.

Mr. Adams said he did not know Mr. Homer well and had taken only a few classes with him at the Academy. Nevertheless, he values their shared bond as fellow Falcons and remembers his former colleague with nostalgic reverence.

The experience of the flight crews on United 93 and the three other planes hijacked that day also affected Mr. Adams' personal and professional life, giving him even more cause for reflection. At the time of the 9/11 attacks, he was a reservist in the 97th Squadron at McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma, Wash.

His wife, Anna, part of the Academy's Class of 1991, was employed by United Airlines, and he was hoping for a job offer from Southwest. Despite the rough times for the airline industry in the wake of Class of 1987 graduate Leroy Homer Jr.

9/11, the job offer did eventually come – just days before Mr. Adams' unit was summoned for duty in Iraq.

When he returned home, there was an addition to the family. In an unexpected development, Anna had delivered the couple's third child. Mr. Adams finally started his job at Southwest, three years and 11 months after he'd received the offer from the company.

"It's not the future we had imagined, but ... we're better off for it," he said. "We've managed to get through the worst of it. You also look at things differently. You realize how special this country is and how much we have that's worth protecting."

In his chosen profession, practically every procedure has been changed in response to the events of Sept. 11, 2001, he said, adding that "any disturbance from behind is going to cause the cockpit to assume that an attack is in progress."

The cause of those changes, of course, was something that shook Americans to their core while claiming the life of one of Mr. Adams' compatriots in the Long Blue Line.

"I think it's pretty clear from the record that the pilots were not alive when the passengers decided to take the plane back," he said. "Any Academy classmate will always get my respect and my friendship, and vice versa. He died doing his best to protect his crew and his passengers."

Constitution Day discussion to focus on states' rights

By David Edwards
Academy Spirit Staff Writer

After the relaxation of Labor Day and the solemnity of Patriot Day (Sept. 11), it's easy for another September holiday to get lost in the shuffle.

For another year, however, the Air Force Academy will do its best to make sure Constitution Day receives its due. The history-changing event of Sept. 17, 1787, launched the American experiment, and since then, We the People have been given more than 220 Septembers to remember.

The remembrance at the Academy will last an hour and take the form of a three-person presentation and discussion of the 10th Amendment. It's the last item in the Bill of Rights, and it delegates to the states those powers not reserved by the federal government.

The three presenters leading the Academy's observance are history professor Lt. Col. John Clune, political science associate professor Dr. Paul Carrese and law associate professor Dr. David Fitzkee. A Q-and-A session moderated by history professor Dr. Jeanne Heidler will follow the presentations.

The Defense Department highly encourages personnel to observe Constitution Day in some form. The department wants all of its personnel, both military and civilian, to appreciate their role in providing for the common defense.

"As we celebrate the anniversary of this landmark document, I hope we all take a moment to remember those currently serving our nation, as well as those who have made the ultimate sacrifice and their families who are left behind," said Chief Master Sgt. Of the Air Force Rodney J. McKinley.

In its efforts to promote observance of Constitution Day, the Defense Department is directing its members to an informational website, <http://constitutionday.cpm.osd.mil>.

A special video presentation by former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor was added Wednesday.

Another website, this one geared toward the general public, can provide additional background information as well as news, visitor activities and multimedia features. Hosted by the National Constitution Center in Philadelphia, it can be accessed at <http://bit.ly/RyhK>.

The presentation at the Academy is intended to benefit primarily cadets, faculty and staff, but anyone with Cadet Area access is welcome. Organizers promoted the event with fliers in Fairchild Hall. They hope the subject matter will be intriguing enough to induce people to attend and also spend some time considering such a seminal event.

"We do this every year, and every year attendance and audience participation has grown," Dr. Heidler said. "I suppose we will measure the success of this year's event by attendance and participation. We are required by law to commemorate the day, and we have found it to be very beneficial to the Academy community to commemorate it with this scholarly and interactive approach."

Falcons rout Cougars, 35-14

By Staff Sgt. Don Branum
Air Force Academy Public Affairs

Air Force's defense held BYU to just 126 yards of total offense in the final three quarters during the Falcons' 35-17 win in the teams' Mountain West Conference opener in front of a sold-out crowd of nearly 47,000 here Sept. 11.

The rout breaks a six-game losing streak to BYU, who last lost to Air Force, 24-10, in 2003.

"Our defense was absolutely special today," Falcons head coach Troy Calhoun said. "After the initial drive, we probably played as well defensively against Brigham Young as we have maybe ever."

BYU took an early 14-7 lead in the first quarter on touchdown runs by running back JJ Di Luigi and quarterback Riley Nelson. Air Force's touchdown came on a 37-yard strike from quarterback Tim Jefferson to a wide-open Mikel Hunter.

Air Force tied the score in the second quarter on a 17-play drive that chewed nearly eight minutes off the clock. The defense forced BYU to go three and out on its next possession and then changed the tempo of the game by taking the ball away from the inexperienced Cougars offense.

Falcons linebacker Andre Morris Jr. hit Riley to force a fumble on third and 6 from the Air Force 40. Defensive lineman Ryan Gardner recovered for Air Force at the Brigham Young 48. Mikel Hunter scored his second touchdown of the game two plays later on a 33-yard run to give Air Force a 21-14 lead. Reggie Rembert, who started for the Falcons, intercepted Jake Heaps on BYU's next possession, but Erik Soderberg's field goal attempt on fourth down fell low and wide left. Riley fumbled on fourth and seven during BYU's final first-half series, killing BYU's last chance to tie the game.

While Air Force's defense frustrated BYU's passing game, the Falcons' running game wore down both the Cougars' defensive line and the clock. The Falcons won the time of possession battle, 36:59 to 23:01. Air Force went 10-for-19 on third down and two-for-two on fourth down. Leading the rushing attack were Asher Clark (18 carries for 121 yards), Jared Tew (17 carries for 77 yards) and Jon Warzeka (six carries for 62 yards and a touchdown). Jefferson, Hunter and Nathan Walker also each had rushing touchdowns.

One downside of the game for Air Force was penalties. Officials flagged the Falcons 10 times for 125 yards, including a pass-interference call in the first quarter that led to a BYU touchdown and an illegal block penalty that killed an Air Force drive in the third quarter.

The win lifts Air Force to 10-1 in MWC opening games and drops the Cougars to 1-1 on the season. It's the last time the Falcons and Cougars will meet in conference play. BYU coach Bronco Mendenhall said the loss is a good opportunity for his players to learn how to move the program forward at a school whose first priority is not football but faith. He also praised Air Force's defense and discipline.

"They played well, they had a good plan, and they executed soundly," Mendenhall said. "They deserved to win the game. They just played assignment football and played hard. Their execution overall ... was superior to ours."

The Falcons, who are now 2-0, will travel to Norman, Okla., to play the Sooners Sept. 18. The next home game will be against Navy, another team Air Force hasn't defeated since 2003. That game is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Mountain Time and will be televised on the Versus Network.

Falcons head coach Troy Calhoun disputes an illegal block penalty against Air Force in the third quarter of the Air Force-BYU game at Falcon Stadium Sept. 11, 2010. The penalty stalled an Air Force drive that had advanced to the Cougars' 47.

Superintendent speaks with Denver alumni, boosters

By David Edwards
Academy Spirit Staff Writer

A few dozen die-hard Falcons fans in Denver were treated to the Gould standard of guest speakers Sept. 9.

Lt. Gen. Mike Gould, the Air Force Academy superintendent, spoke to members of the Denver Quarterback Club, which comprises Academy alumni and boosters who live in the Denver metro area, at a group luncheon in Parker, Colo.

Flanked by tables decked out in Air Force helmets, the general regaled his audience with a story from his days serving in the administration of President George H.W. Bush. He said he "carried the football" — in other words, the president's satchel — when the U.S. was fighting the Gulf War against Iraq.

After the ice-breaker anecdote, the former Falcon defensive back turned his attention to cadets who carry a real football, as well as sporting equipment of other kinds. He also spoke with admiration of the institution he runs.

"It's a remarkable place, and I don't need to sell that to you," General Gould said. "But it never ceases to amaze me what our cadets are able to do. When you look at Falcon athletics, it's a snapshot of those values: integrity, service and excellence."

And then the general showed some actual snapshots. His remarks were followed by a slide show of several Academy athletes in lesser-publicized sports who nevertheless epitomized the values he highlighted.

General Gould told the story of fencer Peter French, who exhibited integrity during an epee competition overseas. Cadet French accidentally dropped his sword, which caromed off the ground and connected with his opponent. The judge awarded a point, but Cadet French told the judge what had happened and acknowledged that the point had been awarded in error.

General Gould also showed a slide of a "toy trick," the Academy's variation on the hockey hat trick, in which toys for needy children are thrown on the ice instead of hats.

He wrapped up the presentation with slides showing a cadet boxer who donated bone marrow just a couple of weeks before a championship bout, as well as an image of a female cadet who last year was awarded a prestigious Rhodes Scholarship to study at England's Oxford University.

Further touting Falcon academic achievement, General Gould told the crowd that the Academy ranks second in the nation in Academic Progress Rate behind Rutgers. APR refers to numbers the NCAA uses to track schools' success at graduating student-athletes.

In his remarks about the football team and the game against BYU, the general had high praise for Falcon head coach Troy Calhoun, who was the Quarterback Club's previous guest speaker.

"Coach Calhoun in my opinion is the best in the country," the general said. "We'll never be able to pay him what he would be worth."

General Gould also elaborated on the Academy's impact for him personally.

He graduated from the Air Force Academy, as did his two sons. At the luncheon, with his wife and father seated next to him, he said that becoming the boss of his alma mater has expanded his family enormously.

Said the general: "We honestly feel like we've inherited 4,400 new kids."

DAVID EDWARDS

Lt. Gen. Mike Gould and his wife, Paula, talk to a member of the Denver Quarterback Club in Parker, Colo., Sept. 9. General Gould, the Air Force Academy superintendent, informed audience members of the Academy's athletics programs as well as how cadet-athletes interact with the local community.

BYU coach leads Mormon service

BYU student Walter Kahaialii performs a hymn at a Mormon worship service. Mr. Kahaialii, a native of Maui, Hawaii, is an offensive linemen for the Cougars football team.

By Staff Sgt. Don Branum
Air Force Academy Public Affairs

On the eve of Air Force's decisive victory over BYU on the field, cadets sat alongside Brigham Young students for a Mormon worship service in the Cadet Chapel led by Cougars head coach Bronco Mendenhall.

The service, held here Sept. 10, also included a presentation by Coach Mendenhall's wife, Holly Johnston, and musical performances by the Cadet Choir and BYU student Walter Kahaialii.

Coach Mendenhall opened by telling cadets how impressed he was with their determination.

"I'm amazed by what you do," said the coach, who is in his sixth year as the Cougars' head coach. "I marvel at the mission you have taken upon yourselves, and I marvel at the workload that you carry."

He said most people who make a difference in others' lives are motivated by one or more of three factors: autonomy, or the love of doing something on one's own; mastery, or a passion to become the best at what one does; and a purpose beyond oneself. Air Force Academy cadets and Brigham Young students share some of these motivations.

"For some of you, the question is, 'How can I serve my Father in Heaven?'" the coach said. "For some, it's, 'How can I serve my country?' All great acts in this world come from something beyond self-interest."

Coach Mendenhall faced a daunting task when he first arrived at BYU to coach the Cougars.

The football program had suffered three straight losing seasons, and players had accounted for 18 egregious violations of the school's strict honor code, which mandates honesty, clean language and adherence to and prohibits sex or ingestion of illicit drugs, tobacco, alcohol, tea or coffee, all of which are proscribed by the Church of Latter Day Saints' Word of Wisdom.

"I was interviewed about my testimony and my belief," the coach explained. "'Is this young man authentic? Is he capable?'" Not a single question was asked about football. At that point, I didn't want the job, because I didn't think I could live up to the standard." He was later told that he was selected for the job because he didn't want it.

Mrs. Johnston, in an earlier presentation during the service, said leadership brings with it adversity and tests of character.

"When we face those challenges, we have to remember why we're here on this Earth," Mrs. Johnston said.

In some ways, Coach Mendenhall said, football is the least important part of his job.

"I believed I was there (at BYU) to clean up the program so a real coach could come in after me and win football games," he said. Instead, the Cougars have gone to 50-16, including their win against Washington Sept. 4 and their loss to the Falcons Saturday. But the coach said faith, not football, comes first at Brigham Young.

"When I meet my savior, do you think I'll be asked, 'What was your football record in 2010?'" the coach asked rhetorically. "I think I'll be asked about the stewardship of my family and whether I kept the faith.

"Football is fifth on our priority list," he continued. "Number one is faith and developing our relationship with our Father in Heaven. ... Number two is family. There are coaches who sleep in their offices, apart from their families. Does it help them? Not against BYU. Third is education: I believe that when you leave this Earth, you take with you your collective knowledge and experiences into the next life. Number four is friends, because they influence your decisions at such a high level."

The coach said he believes that how BYU represents itself on the field reflects whether people will inquire further about the students' beliefs.

"Hopefully, we can say we played well, that we had academic excellence and demonstrated good sportsmanship on the field," Coach Mendenhall said, reflecting a balance at BYU similar to the athletic, academic and military standards required of cadets at the Academy.

"If what you do and what we do inspires people to ask, 'What do they believe?' then I think we've done our work", he added.

BYU football head coach Bronco Mendenhall speaks during a Mormon worship service at the Academy's Cadet Chapel during services Sept. 10. Mendenhall, an Oregon State graduate, was hired for the BYU head coach position in 2005 after three straight losing seasons and several honor code violations. Since 2005, the Cougars have gone 49-15, and honor code violations in the school's football program have dropped significantly.

Water polo: Air Force sweeps Chapman

By Melissa McKeown
Athletic Communications

The 19th-ranked Air Force water polo team held on for an 11-7 victory over Chapman Sunday at the Cadet Water Polo Pool to sweep the Panthers in the final home game of the season.

With the win, the Falcons improve to 3-3 on the season and 3-2 in the Western Water Polo Association.

The Falcons dominated the opening period of action, rolling to a 4-0 advantage in the first eight minutes of play. Air Force added two more goals in the opening minute of the second quarter, taking a 6-0 lead before Chapman got on the board for the first time with a 5-meter goal at the 5:11 mark in the period.

Air Force scored the next two goals, getting its largest lead of the game just over two and a half minutes before the end of the second period, as a tally from junior Anson Harvey (Thousand Oaks, Calif.) put the Falcons up 8-1. However, the Panthers registered the final two goals of the half, including a score with just seven seconds on the clock.

Chapman continued to rally in the third period, getting back to within three goals by shutting out the Falcons, 2-0, in the quarter. Air Force had the opportunity to extend its advantage, but came up short on a pair of 5-meter attempts in the third quarter.

Freshman Josh Stedman (Brea, Calif.) registered his third goal of the day early in the final period to put the Falcons up by four points. The score remained at 9-5 in favor of Air Force until the last three minutes of the contest, when the two teams traded goals. However, Chapman never got closer than three the rest of the way, as a penalty shot by senior captain Bobby Geiger (Buellton, Calif.) in the final minute sealed the 11-7 Air Force victory.

Geiger led the Falcons with four goals, followed by Stedman with three and Taque Patino (Jr., Rockford, Mich.) with two scores, while Harvey and Matt Shields (Sr., Gilroy, Calif.) registered a goal each. In addition, sophomore goalkeeper Mike Fish (Manhattan Beach, Calif.) posted seven saves in one half of action. Meanwhile, Pierre Masson led the Panthers' offense with three scores.

The Falcons are back in action Saturday and Sunday when they travel to Berkeley, Calif., for the annual NorCal Invitational. Air Force will also head to Davis, Calif., for a contest versus WWPAA rival UC Davis Monday.

Falcons to face No. 7 Sooners

By Staff Sgt. Don Branum
Air Force Academy Public Affairs

Air Force will travel to Norman, Okla., Saturday to play the Oklahoma Sooners, who are ranked seventh in the nation by the Associated Press Coaches' Poll.

The Falcons are on the verge of breaking the AP Top 25, having received more coaches' votes than either Georgia or Georgia Tech for Week 3.

The Falcons and Sooners last met at Falcon Stadium Sept. 1, 2001. Oklahoma, ranked third in the country after winning the 2000 national championship, led 20-7 before scoring 24 points in the fourth quarter to pull away from Air Force.

Both teams are 2-0, with impressive victories against ranked teams Sept. 11. Oklahoma demolished Florida State, 47-17, while Air Force upset a BYU team that had been ranked No. 24 in the USA Today poll.

Sooners head coach Bob Stoops said in a news conference Tuesday that he recognizes Air Force's disciplined offense and hungry defense.

"(Falcons head coach) Troy Calhoun has done an absolutely great job," Stoops said. "They're coming off of a big bowl win, and they're really rolling in their first two games of the year. It'll be a big challenge, not only physically but mentally, to be able to execute against them in all parts of the game."

Oklahoma will face Air Force's triple-option running attack, which is the best in the nation with an average of 423 rushing yards per game after the wins against BYU and Northwestern State.

"If you slip up one time, they'll run for 30 yards," said Oklahoma defensive back Jonathan Nelson. "One assignment that's not properly executed by one guy out of the 11, then that can kill you."

They'll have to worry about an efficient aerial attack, too: quarterback Tim Jefferson's passing efficiency is ranked No. 17 in the nation, and he has connected with receiver Mikel Hunter for touchdowns in each of Air Force's first two games.

"Air Force is really good, and if anybody doesn't realize that, they must not have watched the film," Nelson said. "Air Force, they're a legit team."

The Falcons will focus on basics: blocking and tackling, Calhoun said.

"We've got to take care of today," he added. "When we take care of today, then we can get way, way ahead of ourselves and get to tomorrow. That's the way we've got to play throughout the season."

The team has also focused on preparing for the noise at Owen Field, which seats more than 80,000 people. The Sooners have won 32 straight games on their home turf.

"I have some cadets who think they can sing ... they can't, and I sure wouldn't give them the mic, but we'll do some things as far as music and some noise," he said.

The Sooners are heavily favored to win, but if Air Force can stay even or get ahead of the Sooners before halftime, their odds of pulling off an upset can improve. The Falcons are 24-8 under Calhoun when leading or tied at halftime, but only 3-6 when they trail at the half.

Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Mountain Time. Fox Sports Net will televise the game, with radio coverage on KVOR AM 740 in Colorado Springs and KCKK 1510 AM in Denver and Northern Colorado.
