The Honorable Sonny Purdue
Governor
Office of the Governor
203 State Capitol
Atlanta, GA 30334

Dear Governor Purdue:

Now that the results of the 2004 general election have been realized, it is time to reflect on ways in which we can bring further uniformity and simplification to the absentee voting process for our men and women in uniform, their family members and overseas citizens. After reviewing Georgia's existing election code and procedures to include possible changes due to recent federal legislation, I have identified four initiatives that the Georgia legislature might consider during the upcoming legislative session. These initiatives are discussed in detail in the attached legislative initiatives document. If these initiatives are enacted and signed into law for the 2006 general election, they would significantly help to facilitate the absentee voting process for Georgia's citizens covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA).

Section 1605 of the Public Law 107-107 requires the chief executive authority of each State to submit a report on the status of implementation of these legislative recommendations. The report is required 90 days after receipt of this package. The Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP), in turn, is required to transmit these reports to the members of the Congressional delegation from Georgia. This is the final year of three for the Governor's reporting requirement mandated by Federal law.

I am providing a suggested format to assist you in providing your report to Georgia's Congressional delegation. Please insert a brief response in the space provided after each of the initiatives and return with a cover letter signed by you summarizing any UOCAVA related legislation that the state has passed in the past 5 years and include overall comments or observations. I will then forward your report as received to Georgia's Congressional delegation. This report should be submitted electronically to initiatives@fvap.ncr.gov and then by mail to:

Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program
Arlington, VA 22209-2162

As you review the enclosed initiatives for possible inclusion in Georgia's 2005 legislative agenda, please do not hesitate to contact us for assistance. We can provide legislation that other states have enacted to implement similar measures and provide written or in-person testimony, if desired. We have come a long way in simplifying the absentee voting process since the enactment of the

Dear Governor Granholm:

Now that the results of the 2004 general election have been realized, it is time to reflect on ways in which we can bring further uniformity and simplification to the absentee voting process for our men and women in uniform, their family members and overseas citizens. After reviewing Michigan's existing election code and procedures to include possible changes due to recent federal legislation, I have identified eight initiatives that the Michigan legislature might consider during the upcoming legislative session. These initiatives are discussed in detail in the attached legislative initiatives document. If these initiatives are enacted and signed into law for the 2006 general election, they would significantly help to facilitate the absentee voting process for Michigan's citizens covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA).

Section 1605 of the Public Law 107-107 requires the chief executive authority of each State to submit a report on the status of implementation of these legislative recommendations. The report is required 90 days after receipt of this package. The Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP), in turn, is required to transmit these reports to the members of the Congressional delegation from Michigan. This is the final year of three for the Governor's reporting requirement mandated by Federal law.

I am providing a suggested format to assist you in providing your report to Michigan's Congressional delegation. Please insert a brief response in the space provided after each of the initiatives and return with a cover letter signed by you summarizing any UOCAVA related legislation that the state has passed in the past 5 years and include overall comments or observations. I will then forward your report as received to Michigan's Congressional delegation. This report should be submitted electronically to initiatives@fvap.ncr.gov and then by mail to:

Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program
Arlington, VA 22209-2162

As you review the enclosed initiatives for possible inclusion in Michigan's 2005 legislative agenda, please do not hesitate to contact us for assistance. We can provide legislation that other states have enacted to implement similar measures and provide written or in-person testimony, if desired. We have come a long way in simplifying the absentee voting process since the enactment of the UOCAVA—let’s continue our joint efforts to achieve the simplest possible absentee voting process while maintaining its integrity.

Sincerely,

P.K. Brunelli

If these initiatives are enacted and signed into law for the 2006 general election, they would significantly help to facilitate the absentee voting process for Oklahoma's citizens covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA).

Section 1605 of the Public Law 107-107 requires the chief executive authority of each State to submit a report on the status of implementation of these legislative recommendations. The report is required 90 days after receipt of this package. The Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP), in turn, is required to transmit these reports to the members of the Congressional delegation from Oklahoma. This is the final year of three for the Governor's reporting requirement mandated by Federal law.

I am providing a suggested format to assist you in providing your report to Oklahoma's Congressional delegation. Please insert a brief response in the space provided after each of the initiatives and return with a cover letter signed by you summarizing any UOCAVA related legislation that the state has passed in the past 5 years and include overall comments or observations. I will then forward your report as received to Oklahoma's Congressional delegation. This report should be submitted electronically to initiatives@fvap.ncr.gov and then by mail to:

As you review the enclosed initiatives for possible inclusion in Oklahoma's 2005 legislative agenda, please do not hesitate to contact us for assistance. We can provide legislation that other states have enacted to implement similar measures and provide written or in-person testimony, if desired. We have come a long way in simplifying the absentee voting process since the enactment of the UOCAVA—let's continue our joint efforts to achieve the simplest possible absentee voting process while maintaining its integrity.

This is the final year of three for the Governor's reporting requirement mandated by Federal law.

I am providing a suggested format to assist you in providing your report to West Virginia's Congressional delegation. Please insert a brief response in the space provided after each of the initiatives and return with a cover letter signed by you summarizing any UOCAVA related legislation that the state has passed in the past 5 years and include overall comments or observations. I will then forward your report as received to West Virginia's Congressional delegation. This report should be submitted electronically to initiatives@fvap.ncr.gov and then by mail to:

Director, Federal Voting Assistance Program
Arlington, VA 22209-2162

As you review the enclosed initiatives for possible inclusion in West Virginia's 2005 legislative agenda, please do not hesitate to contact us for assistance. We can provide legislation that other states have enacted to implement similar measures and provide written or in-person testimony, if desired. We have come a long way in simplifying the absentee voting process since the enactment of the UOCAVA—let’s continue our joint efforts to achieve the simplest possible absentee voting process while maintaining its integrity.

The Honorable Jim Doyle
Governor
115 East State Capitol
Madison, WI 53702

Dear Governor Doyle:

Now that the results of the 2004 general election have been realized, it is time to reflect on ways in which we can bring further uniformity and simplification to the absentee voting process for our men and women in uniform, their family members and overseas citizens. After reviewing Wisconsin's existing election code and procedures to include possible changes due to recent federal legislation, I have identified six initiatives that the Wisconsin legislature might consider during the upcoming legislative session. These initiatives are discussed in detail in the attached legislative initiatives document. If these initiatives are enacted and signed into law for the 2006 general election, they would significantly help to facilitate the absentee voting process for Wisconsin's citizens covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA).

Section 1605 of the Public Law 107-107 requires the chief executive authority of each State to submit a report on the status of implementation of these legislative recommendations. The report is required 90 days after receipt of this package. The Federal Voting Assistance Program (FVAP), in turn, is required to transmit these reports to the members of the Congressional delegation from Wisconsin. This is the final year of three for the Governor's reporting requirement mandated by Federal law.

I am providing a suggested format to assist you in providing your report to Wisconsin's Congressional delegation. Please insert a brief response in the space provided after each of the initiatives and return with a cover letter signed by you summarizing any UOCAVA related legislation that the state has passed in the past 5 years and include overall comments or observations. Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Alabama allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to Alabama's use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. Forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of at least part of the absentee voting process. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Alabama provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state’s registration requirements;

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Alabama money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Alabama's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Alaska allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Alaska money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Alaska's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including, but not limited to, electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Notary Requirement

Current American Samoa election law requires that the FPCA must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S. or the Territories

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state or territory, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a citizen outside the Territory who has never lived in the Territory has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that American Samoa's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that American Samoa allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend American Samoa provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from American Samoa in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. Presently, there are eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow the chief election officer more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that American Samoa allows the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. The chief election officer may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the territory's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by American Samoa.

The adoption of this initiative would save the territory money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face American Samoa military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Arkansas enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot requests and that registration is waived. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 7-5-406 of the Arkansas Election Laws refers to the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the 1955 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Arkansas’s Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face California military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states provide a 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that California's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. Fifteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Colorado military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Colorado allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission of election materials has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Colorado has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Connecticut military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize that Connecticut provides 45-day transit time for General elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Connecticut enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request. However, voters using the FPCA to register are required to simultaneously mail the original, which must arrive by 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election for the ballot to be counted. The electronic transmission methodology is there to ensure the FPCA is received by the state's deadline. If the electronically transmitted FPCA for registration is not recognized until the mail version is received then the availability of electronic transmission is of no benefit to the voter. We realize the original FPCA should be mailed in all cases regardless, however we urge an extension to the acceptance deadline for the original FPCA when the voter has utilized the electronically transmitted option.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Connecticut law allows recently discharged members of the military returning to the state too late to register during the regular registration period to register to vote up until 5:00 p.m. on the last weekday before an election. We recommend that Connecticut allow persons recently separated from overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet the normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Connecticut extend the availability of the state write-in absentee ballot to non-Uniformed Services overseas electors. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB)

The state of Connecticut is exempt from use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) by Section 103 (f) in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). These statements exempt states that make ballots available to military voters at least 90 days before the general election and as soon as the candidate list is available for other UOCAVA citizens.

The intent of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) is to aid the enfranchisement of U.S. citizens overseas wishing to vote for Federal Offices in general elections who make timely application for, but do not receive an absentee ballot.

The intent of the current Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot is to assist members of the military and their family members who are not able to follow the regular absentee ballot application procedure.

The Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot does not accommodate citizens who request a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and do not receive it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline. The FWABs, which are prepositioned at military installations and U.S. Embassies and Consulates worldwide fulfill this purpose for all overseas U.S. citizens except those whose legal residence is Connecticut.

We recommend that Connecticut allow overseas UOCAVA citizens who have requested a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and not received it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline be allowed to use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot.

Sample Language

The Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) will be accepted from uniformed services and overseas voters who make timely application for, and do not receive a regular absentee ballot. The following rules shall apply with respect to the FWAB:

(1) In completing the ballot, the overseas voter may designate a candidate by writing in the name of the candidate or by writing in the name of the political party (in which case the ballots shall be counted for the candidate of that political party).

(2) In the case of the offices of President and Vice President, a vote for a named candidate or a vote by writing in the name of the political party shall be counted as a vote for the electors supporting the candidate involved.

(3) Any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the spelling of the name of a candidate or a political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Twelve states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

District of Columbia 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that the District of Columbia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in the District of Columbia just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and registration requirements combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that the District of Columbia provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal timeframe. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices. There are presently six states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize the District of Columbia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request and permits faxing of the absentee ballot when military service prevents the voter from receiving and returning the voted ballot. However, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots for all military and overseas citizens, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter, on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate these alternatives.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies

and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the District's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter resides outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the jurisdiction;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in the U.S., they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Delaware requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 12:00 noon on the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Delaware accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expanded use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Delaware has enacted legislation which provides for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Delaware allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Delaware's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that Florida provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. We commend you for passing legislation that allowed for a state write-in ballot for general elections. However, we request that you expand this to all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame for all elections. Thus, a voter would know that they could exercise their right to vote for all Florida elections, not just one. We encourage you to include this in your next legislative package.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Although Florida passed legislation allowing the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and receipt of the voted ballot by overseas U.S. citizens, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative. We request that Florida allow election officials to electronically send the blank ballot and accept the voted ballot electronically from military voters in the U.S., on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate this alternative.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors via electronic transmission.

Guam 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Guam election law requires that the ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Guam Election Code

The Guam Election Code refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the Guam election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Guam Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Guam provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from Guam in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state or territory does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by Guam.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by Guam.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Hawaii military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Hawaii allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Although Hawaii Revised Statute Section 15-3 states "...any former registered voter of Hawaii may vote an absentee ballot in any presidential election occurring within twenty-four months after leaving Hawaii...", This statute does not cover members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or citizens employed overseas, and family members that have been away for over 24 months. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. A special late registration procedure for these circumstances would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. While Hawaii offers electronic transmission of election materials, the fact remains that by expanding the use of the FWAB to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

The adoption of this initiative would save Hawaii money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Hawaii provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under the UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Idaho's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country whom may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Idaho allows for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA request for registration as well as electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and acceptance of the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Idaho allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Idaho provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Late Registration Procedures

Illinois currently allows members of the Armed Forces or merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Illinois expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's 30-day residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

An individual or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Application for Ballot by Proxy to Overseas Citizens

Currently, Illinois allows spouses, and other family members, to use a special application provided by the local election official to request that an absentee ballot be mailed to members of the Uniformed Services. We recommend this option be expanded to allow spouses and other family members of overseas civilian citizens to request an absentee ballot be mailed to them.

Sample Language

If a spouse, dependent, mother, father, sister or brother of a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) is registered to vote in the same county as that citizen, he or she may request that an absentee ballot be mailed to that voter by completing a special application provided by the local election official.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Illinois provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

We realize Illinois enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for ballot requests by members of the Armed Forces. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 10 of the Illinois Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress passed the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) which the Federal Voting Assistance Program administers. Reference to the UOCAVA in the state election code would help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

The adoption of this initiative would save Illinois money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Illinois' State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting

Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including, but not limited to, electronic transmission or fax. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Indiana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Indiana provides 45-day transit time for General and Primary elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline for absentee ballot requests, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.*

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Iowa enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application request for registration and an absentee ballot. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The following sample language would allow for these procedures.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We understand Iowa currently allows discharged military personnel to register late. We encourage expanding this option to their family members and overseas citizens who may go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen returning home after active duty or employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Kansas' Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Kansas provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem, which continues to face Louisiana military and overseas voters, is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Presidential elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states currently have a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Louisiana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Maine has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) request for registration and ballot. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the

Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Maine military and overseas voters is the short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Federal elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. However, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Maine's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting

Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fourteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Maryland 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedures

Although the Maryland General Assembly deleted the late registration provision from Maryland law, we never-the-less encourage you to recommend that Maryland reinstate procedures to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members to be able to register late (or be exempt from registration). Previously, honorably discharged military personnel and their spouses and dependents could still vote absentee if a Federal Post Card Application arrived not later than 8 p.m. on election day. Additionally, we recommend that Maryland expand this procedure to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration.

Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states now allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

Although Maryland provides ample time for transit of ballots under normal circumstances, especially with late counting, we continue to recommend that Maryland provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections as a means to vote in case there are delays in mailing and returning absentee ballots. Again, the main purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted.

Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official. Also a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Maryland has done an exceptional job passing legislation on behalf of UOCAVA voters regarding electronic transmission of election materials. However, we request your consideration again to make further changes in Maryland law/administrative procedures that would include the faxing of the voted ballot for all UOCAVA absentee voters and of the FPCA for registration purposes. We realize that Maryland allows faxing of the FPCA for an absentee ballot request and now the unvoted ballot and that Maryland law prohibits electronic facsimile if the document requires a signed affidavit. However, we encourage expansion of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration (since we instruct voters to submit the original, signed FPCA after faxing and the FPCA form is a simultaneous request for registration and request for absentee ballot) and acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter (signature already on file) where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below accommodates these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local board of elections may receive FPCAs for registration, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We appreciate the action taken by the Maryland State Board of Elections to allow overseas voters to cast votes for state and local offices in primary and special Federal elections using the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB). Since this ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership, many overseas citizens have access to it and would not be disenfranchised because their regular ballots were not received in a timely manner.

In addition, however, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, we request the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB. This would further simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for elections for Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA. To address your concerns about lack of control over the process, the citizen must provide a valid Maryland residence address and sign the FPCA attesting that he/she is a U.S. citizen and is not voting in any other jurisdiction.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Massachusetts military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. The fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Massachusetts provides 45-day transit time for Primary elections (35 days before election and 10 days extended counting after election). However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Thirty-nine states now allow 45-day ballot transit time for general elections.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Massachusetts provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. We realize Massachusetts provides a special write-in absentee ballot if the local election official does not have the regular state ballot available for mailing. However, expanding this provision by making this ballot available upon request by UOCAVA citizens and expanding its use for all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Massachusetts' Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Massachusetts has enacted legislation allowing citizens to send the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) via electronic transmission. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot via electronic transmission from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

The adoption of this initiative would save Massachusetts money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Michigan 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Use of One Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for ALL Elections in a Calendar Year

Congress modified the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in December 2001 to require the States, effective immediately, to accept a single FPCA, that is received 30 days or more before an election, as a simultaneous voter registration and absentee ballot application for all elections for Federal offices held in the State during that calendar year. FVAP reminds you of this requirement and recommends extension of this provision to include all State and local elections for which the citizen is eligible to vote. We recommend that the following procedure be adopted:

Sample Language

An application for an absentee ballot by mail must be received by the county (or municipality) clerk in the applicant's county (or municipality) of voting residence within the time frame specified by law. The single absentee ballot application must permit the person to register to vote and to request an absentee ballot for each election held within that calendar year for which the voter is eligible to vote.

Notary Requirement

Current Michigan election law requires that the FPCA used to register and request absentee ballots or to request absentee ballots only, must be sworn to before an official authorized to administer oaths if the requesters are Michigan residents temporarily residing outside the U.S. and unaffiliated with the U.S. Federal Government, or overseas citizens. This notary requirement continues to be a problem for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. We heard this many times over in the 2004 Presidential election year. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We strongly recommend action this legislative year to remove the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials or not require notarization after initial registration notary is provided. To this end, we support HB 6061, which is currently under consideration in your legislature. Please contact us to provide testimony for, or to write letters in support of, this legislation. Michigan is one of only six states and territories that have a notary requirement for the Federal Post Card Application for citizens outside the U.S.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

"Not Earlier Than" Restrictions

We also note that Michigan has a specified time during which requests for registration and/or absentee ballots may be received by local election officials, i.e., not earlier than 75 days before the election and not later than the Saturday before the election. The "not earlier than" limitation has also caused a problem for military personnel or other citizens overseas. Frequently, programs encouraging voter registration and participation are held at various times during an election year. During these sessions, citizens are encouraged to submit an application for registration and/or request for absentee ballot. On other occasions, a candidate may address a large gathering of citizens to encourage them to register and vote. Persons who are motivated to act as a result of these sessions could have their applications rejected because they were received too early or too late by local election officials. This can be very frustrating, particularly to first time voters.

We appreciate the fact that you have provided an administrative instruction to hold applications that arrive earlier than 75 days before the election. However, we urge that the "not earlier than" dates for ballot requests be eliminated completely by legislation. Further, we recommend a part in the statutes be established for Federal absentee voters separate from regular absentee voters. Your laws now address each class of voter the same way even though there are quite different circumstances between a regular absentee voter who will not be present at the polls on election day due to vacation, hospitalization, etc. and a Federal absentee voter who requires more time to request an absentee ballot. Forty-nine states have already removed such requirements.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Michigan allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Michigan provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

We request that you seriously consider in this year's legislative session, the expansion of the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Michigan enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. However, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that Michigan's Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Minnesota military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as State Department personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Minnesota allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Notary Requirement

We realize notarization of the FPCA and the ballot return envelope is not necessary if a voter provides his/her military ID number or passport number. However, if a voter overlooks this requirement or if he or she is unable to obtain notarial services, he or she may be disenfranchised. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Minnesota provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive regular absentee ballots sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states beyond Federal law that have expanded the use of the FWAB and the 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Minnesota has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Minnesota's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Mississippi 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Mississippi election law requires that the affidavit on the absentee ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Mississippi requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, the voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Mississippi accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Title 23, Section 23-15-677 of the Mississippi Election Laws refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Montana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

We also recommend that Montana provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and U.S. corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot on time, he may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official in its place.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. The FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Bring Montana Election Code into Conformance with the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

In our recent update to the Voting Assistance Guide it came to our attention that there is a discrepancy in the definition of eligible citizens between the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) and the Montana Election Code. Section 13-2-211 of the Montana code defines an “elector in the United States service” as members of the armed forces, merchant marine, religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces, or citizens temporarily residing outside the U.S. territorial limits, and their spouses and dependents. UOCAVA does not cover members of religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces unless they are serving overseas. In addition to the other categories of citizens listed in the Montana code, UOCAVA also includes “uniformed services” – the Coast Guard and the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. (See 42 U.S.C. 1973ff-1 and ff-6.)

We recommend that Montana review the language in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986 (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973ff et seq.) and make appropriate amendments to the state election law provisions to include the Uniformed Services groups referenced above.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Montana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Montana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

State Special Write-in Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Montana provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and U.S. corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot on time, he may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official in its place.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. The FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Nebraska enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and ballot requests. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the unvoted ballot to the voters covered by UOCAVA, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters via electronic transmission. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

Late Registration Procedures

Nevada currently allows members of the Armed Forces, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Nevada expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the termination date of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen returning home from employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Nevada provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state’s registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that New Jersey allows persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members as well as civilians attached to or serving with the Uniformed Services to register late and obtain an emergency voting form. We recommend this option be expanded to civilian citizens returning to New Jersey after overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

We encourage expanded use of this alternative to accept electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration purposes and to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the Uniformed Services voter who is out of the state, but not necessarily overseas, on election day where these circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that New Jersey's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that New Mexico allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend New Mexico provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face New York military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. This is why it is necessary to allow a minimum of 45 days transit time for absentee ballots.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that New York allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the New York election

code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

This language is usually found under the chapter in the New York Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints. Currently, forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of election materials.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. We enlist your support once again this year in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all parts of the process. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider using modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, the blank ballot to the voter, and the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A county board of elections official may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

state;

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that New York's Chief Election Official (CEO) have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. One Federal Post Card Application for All Elections.

The National Defense Authorization Act of Fiscal Year 2002 states that, “If a State accepts and processes an official post card form (prescribed under section 101) submitted by an absent uniformed service voter or overseas voter for simultaneous voter registration and absentee ballot application (in accordance with section 102(a)(4)) and the voter requests that the application be considered an application for an absentee ballot for each subsequent election For Federal office held in the State during that year, the State shall provide an absentee ballot to the voter for each subsequent election for Federal office held in the State during that year.” This section was amended by the Help America Vote Act of 2002 to extend the period covered by the single absentee ballot application through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. We strongly recommend legislation be enacted to include North Carolina residents who registered locally prior to January 1, 2004 (when this provision of HAVA was enacted) and then go overseas to be able to use one FPCA for all elections through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. These citizens currently must send in a FPCA or written request before each election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that North Carolina provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology to overseas citizens. We realize that North Carolina allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request by overseas citizens. However, this should be extended to allow the faxing of the blank and voted ballot to these citizens from your state as you have done for Uniformed Services members. Thus, we strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that North Carolina currently allows persons recently separated from the Armed Forces to register and vote in person up to and including election day. We recommend expanding this option to Uniformed Services family members and to citizens returning from overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen. Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Title 16 of the North Dakota Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that North Dakota's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Ohio's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

We realize that Ohio enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request and electronic transmission of the blank ballot to voters in the Uniformed Services. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to all UOCAVA citizens to include electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expansion of Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Ohio allows late registration for discharged military personnel and their spouses. However, we recommend expanding this alternative to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may not know in which state they will live. Others may move to a new state and not meet the state's residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services by separation from the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable such persons to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Waiver of Registration for Citizens Covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

While we realize that registration is waived in Ohio for members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their family members, we encourage expansion of this provision to include all groups covered in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) definitions. The following is an extract from the UOCAVA, 42 USC 1973ff-6. Section 107. Definitions:

“(1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --

- (A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;
- (B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and
- (C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote

and

“(7) “uniformed services” means the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service, and the commissioned corps of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration”.

The sample language below will accommodate this provision.

Sample Language

If you are a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, your registration is waived and you may request an absentee ballot by submitting an FPCA so it is received by the county board of elections not later than 3 days before the election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Ohio provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in Federal elections only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Oklahoma military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to the timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. For Oklahoma, our 2004-2005 Voting Assistance Guide states that local election officials mail out ballots approximately 30 days before an election. While we commend you for expanding the time between the state run-off election and the General Election, Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one other states have increased their ballot transit times to greater greater than 30 days.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Although we realize that Oklahoma enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA ballot request, and for the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot under certain limited circumstances, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the use of electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot on a regular basis, as an alternative method, not merely during certain limited circumstances.

Sample Language

An elections official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

Pennsylvania continues to require voters covered under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. on the Friday before the election. This deadline is earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. For this reason we recommend that Pennsylvania accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day. Only four other states require the return of the voted ballot before election day.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Pennsylvania allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility regarding election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Pennsylvania allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request. However, Pennsylvania now only allows the electronic transmission of the blank ballot if a person is in a designated hostile fire, imminent danger pay, combat zone or qualified hazardous duty area. Further, there is no faxing of the voted ballot in your state. We strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot (to include a waiver of privacy) from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Sample Language

An applicant, who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, we recommend that Pennsylvania's Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state. The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current Puerto Rico election law requires that the FPCA and the ballot return envelope must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. Depending on the category of UOCAVA voter, the oath must be administered by a commissioned officer, the highest officer on board ship, an official in the school registrar's office, a notary public, or a consular officer. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We strongly recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states and territories have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Puerto Rico allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in Puerto Rico just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet Puerto Rico's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a commonwealth's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states and territories currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular commonwealth deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Puerto Rico provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from Puerto Rico in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular absentee ballot from Puerto Rico does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, commonwealth, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. Puerto Rico will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the commonwealth for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the commonwealth's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate commonwealth election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the commonwealth money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, commonwealth and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the commonwealth of Puerto Rico;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate Puerto Rico election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Commonwealth Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the commonwealth's election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. Thirty-seven states and territories now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Although Puerto Rico currently allows electronic transmission of the FPCA, including fax and email, we encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. The Commonwealth Elections Commission may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Puerto Rico's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states and territories have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The chief election official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The chief election official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this commonwealth, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the Commonwealth.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

Despite the alternative of mailing the official state blank ballot 45 days before an election if the official ballot is not yet available, Rhode Island military and overseas voters continue to have an extremely short period of time to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted (21 days) in the regular absentee ballot delivery process. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to speed ballot transit time, inadequate ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) Coverage and Notary Requirement

Under Section 17-20-6.1, Rhode Island provides that the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) may be used as a request for an absentee ballot by the following groups under UOCAVA (42 U.S.C. § 1973ff):

- (1) A member of the armed forces who is absent from the state by reason of being in active service;
- (2) Any person absent from the state in performance of "services intimately connected with military operations" as defined in § 17-20-3(d); and
- (3) Any person who is employed outside of the United States as defined in § 17-20-3(c)

In contrast, UOCAVA includes Uniformed Services and overseas citizens defined in Section 107 as follows:

- (1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --:

- (A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;
 - (B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and:
 - (C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote;
- (5) "overseas voter" means --:
- (A) an absent uniformed services voter who, by reason of active duty or service is absent from the United States on the date of the election involved;
 - (B) a person who resides outside the United States and is qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States; or:
 - (C) a person who resides outside the United States and (but for such residence) would be qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States.

Rhode Island law excludes UOCAVA citizens who mark 8.d. on the FPCA from the procedures of 17-20-6.1, which waives registration, and subjects them to additional procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 by requiring them to submit the Mail Ballot Application and affidavit prior to mailing the absentee ballot. This introduces additional steps and mailing time into the process and the requirement to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, voters have paid up to $90 for these services and other countries do not have notaries in their system of jurisprudence.

Thus, we request that Rhode Island include those overseas citizens currently covered by these separate procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 under Section 17-20-6.1 to allow these citizens to use the FPCA to request an absentee ballot in the same way as the rest of the UOCAVA citizens. As an alternative, Rhode Island could include the Mail Ballot Application along with the ballot to register the applicant and have the citizen attest to a self-administered oath on the form, eliminating the requirement for a notary.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that Rhode Island's Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

We note that in 2003 Governor Carcieri signed into law legislation naming the Secretary of State (SoS) the Chief State Election Official in Rhode Island and that your Legislative Implementation Report for 2004 indicates that the SoS intends to introduce legislation to provide the necessary emergency authority for the SoS as the chief election official. If we can help in this effort, please let us know.

Consideration should be given to use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize South Carolina has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request and for the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot in emergency situations only. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the use of electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot on a regular basis, as an alternative method, not merely during emergencies.

South Dakota 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirements

South Dakota requires the ballot return envelope for military in the United States (U.S.) and overseas citizens to be notarized by a notary public or other person authorized to administer an oath. This requirement creates a burden for military members who may be assigned to a small military installation that may not have an officer available at all time, as well as, individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible to obtain. We realize in lieu of a notarized signature individuals may provide a photo copy of a valid ID such as a South Dakota Drivers License or nondriver ID card; a passport or other picture ID issued by the U.S. government; a tribal photo ID or a photo ID issued by a South Dakota postsecondary education institution. However, we recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials for military in the U.S. and overseas citizens. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that South Dakota allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below is suggested language allowing for electronic transmission to be used in these three steps of the absentee voting process.

An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend South Dakota provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Tennessee allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Tennessee enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration, electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below is sample language allowing for these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Use of FWAB as state special write-in by all UOCAVA citizens:

A citizen voting under the UOCAVA who, due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery who will be unable to vote by regular absentee ballot, may use a Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot to vote in Federal elections for Federal office for the candidate of his or her choice.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Tennessee's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

Section 2-6-112 of the Tennessee Election Law refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the 1955 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Late Registration Procedures

Even though Texas has enacted a 30-day registration deadline as a safeguard to prevent fraud, we still encourage Texas to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late, e.g., up to the day of the election, or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election (within 30 days of the election). This time frame does not meet your state's current registration requirements. Further, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and the Texas registration requirement may combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently have such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We realize that Texas provides a state special write-in absentee ballot to Uniformed Services members if they are unable to cast a ballot on election day or during the early voting period because of a military contingency. We recommend expansion of this state write-in absentee ballot to provide a method for voting by other persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Thus, we request your support to develop acceptance in Texas for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots to all UOCAVA voters. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility regarding election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of this modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Texas provides for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and early voting ballots. Additionally, in 1997, Texas enacted legislation to allow the electronic transmission of the voted ballot by members of the U.S. Armed Forces on active duty overseas, or their family members, if the Armed Forces members are casting the ballot from an area where the members are eligible to receive hostile fire pay or imminent danger pay, or that has been designated by the President of the United States as a combat zone. However, we continue to encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to all Texas UOCAVA voters who request it and accepting the voted ballot where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recognize that Texas recently passed a law that expanded the use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) to any special, primary or runoff election for Federal offices. In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve ballot transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, we recommend that instead of the Texas Governor, Texas' Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Federal Voting Assistance Program is in closer contact with the Chief Election Official and could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Currently Utah requires the ballot return envelope to be certified by a noncommissioned or commissioned officer if it is not possible to obtain a military postmark on or before election day. This requirement creates a burden for military members who may be assigned to a small military installation that may not have an officer available at all time. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Currently, acceptance of electronic transmission of election materials varies from county to county in Utah. Consideration should be given to more uniform use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage statewide adoption of procedures to allow for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and ballot request, electronically sending the ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We realize Utah provides a Special Military Write-In Absentee Ballot if the citizen will be unable to vote by regular ballot. We recommend expanding use of this ballot to provide a method for voting to other persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive regular absentee ballots sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots for this purpose.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the State. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in the general election. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner.

Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Vermont military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states have provisions for the 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Vermont's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Removal of Notary Requirement

Current Vermont election law requires that the FPCA used to register must be notarized. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, many small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned.

Alternatively, we recommend unregistered applicants be instructed to read the Freeman's Oath prior to signing the FPCA. Item 8e of the 1995 FPCA contains language where the applicant swears/affirms under penalty of perjury that he or she is "a U.S. citizen, eligible to vote in the above jurisdiction and subscribe to any required state/local oath or statement." This would eliminate the need to attach the oath to the FPCA. For the reasons stated above, we recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Vermont currently allows for electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request and electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter. We encourage enacting legislation for acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below is sample legislation that will provide for this alternative.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Vermont allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Vermont provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from the State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now have state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. Thirty-seven states have modified state election code to reference UOCAVA.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Late Registration Procedure

The Virgin Islands currently allows members of the Armed Forces and merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election and who return to the Virgin Islands too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that the Virgin Islands expand the scope of this procedure and allow Uniformed Services personnel (Coast Guard, and the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration), civilians recently separated from overseas employment, and the spouses and dependents of all these groups to be eligible for the same procedure. These citizens also go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. Expanding the scope of your existing procedure would solve this problem. Fifteen states currently have a late registration procedure that includes all UOCAVA citizens.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-in Absentee Ballot

We also recommend the Virgin Islands provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. The FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available "90 to 180" days before the election.

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Virgin Islands money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

We realize Virginia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for absentee ballot request. We also note that Virginia has conducted several successful pilot projects with the transmission of blank ballots by electronic mail. We continue to support your innovative electronic voting projects; however, we also continue to encourage expanded use of electronic transmission to include sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter by facimile where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, Virginia law allows the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) to be used in all elections and from inside or outside the United States. However, we continue to recommend that the FWAB transmission envelope be accepted as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the completed FWAB. We realize that legislation has been passed providing that the FWAB can be used to serve as an application for an absentee ballot and the absentee ballot itself for Federal offices provided the Registrar received it not less than five days prior to the election. Consideration should be given to simplify the registration and request for absentee ballot request process and improve ballot transit time through the combined use of the FWAB for registration and absentee ballot simultaneously. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope, is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). This does not change the data required from your state for these citizens. The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of local election officials.

The Need for 45-day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Washington military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Washington allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting Washington's 15-day late registration deadline. We recommend that UOCAVA citizens be permitted to register up to the day of the next ensuing election when these circumstances arise. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Washington's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that West Virginia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that West Virginia's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request, electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for all aspects of the process.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend West Virginia provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

For those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information that is requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the territory's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the territory money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the territory;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Wisconsin military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Although Wisconsin local election officials mail absentee ballots 30 days before the general and 21 days before the primary elections, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Notary Requirement

Current Wisconsin election law requires that, for military voters, the certificate-affidavit on the ballot return envelope must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths or witnessed by two adult U.S. citizens. Additionally, for overseas citizens who are required to register, the FPCA must be witnessed by any person authorized to administer oaths or one adult U.S. citizen. We recommend removal of the notary and witness requirements for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-eight states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Wisconsin allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Wisconsin enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request and the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Wisconsin's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Wyoming 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that Wyoming provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. The FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. The FWAB allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure near real-time delivery of election materials between the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time substantially.

We note that Wyoming permits absentee ballot requests to be made by telephone and email. We encourage the further use of electronic transmission to include electronically sending the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request, sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the merchant marine, or their family members, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Alabama provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Arkansas military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Arkansas allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Arkansas provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the State money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Arkansas enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot requests and that registration is waived. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 7-5-406 of the Arkansas Election Laws refers to the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the 1955 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Arkansas's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Notary Requirement

Current American Samoa election law requires that the FPCA must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S. or the Territories

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state or territory, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a citizen outside the Territory who has never lived in the Territory has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that American Samoa's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend American Samoa provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from American Samoa in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that California's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. Fifteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Colorado military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Colorado allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission of election materials has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Colorado has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Ten other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration

simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline for absentee ballot requests, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election officials.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Connecticut military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Connecticut enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request. However, voters using the FPCA to register are required to simultaneously mail the original, which must arrive by 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election for the ballot to be counted. The electronic transmission methodology is there to ensure the FPCA is received by the state's deadline. If the electronically transmitted FPCA for registration is not recognized until the mail version is received then the availability of electronic transmission is of no benefit to the voter. We realize the original FPCA should be mailed in all cases regardless, however we urge an extension to the acceptance deadline for the original FPCA when the voter has utilized the electronically transmitted option.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Connecticut law allows recently discharged members of the military returning to the state too late to register during the regular registration period to register to vote up until 5:00 p.m. on the last weekday before an election. We recommend that Connecticut allow persons recently separated from overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet the normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Connecticut extend the availability of the state write-in absentee ballot to non-Uniformed Services overseas electors. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB)

The state of Connecticut is exempt from use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) by Section 103 (f) in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). These statements exempt states that make ballots available to military voters at least 90 days before the general election and as soon as the candidate list is available for other UOCAVA citizens.

The intent of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) is to aid the enfranchisement of U.S. citizens overseas wishing to vote for Federal Offices in general elections who make timely application for, but do not receive an absentee ballot.

The intent of the current Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot is to assist members of the military and their family members who are not able to follow the regular absentee ballot application procedure.

The Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot does not accommodate citizens who request a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and do not receive it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline. The FWABs, which are prepositioned at military installations and U.S. Embassies and Consulates worldwide fulfill this purpose for all overseas U.S. citizens except those whose legal residence is Connecticut.

We recommend that Connecticut allow overseas UOCAVA citizens who have requested a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and not received it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline be allowed to use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot.

Sample Language

The Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) will be accepted from uniformed services and overseas voters who make timely application for, and do not receive a regular absentee ballot. The following rules shall apply with respect to the FWAB:

(1) In completing the ballot, the overseas voter may designate a candidate by writing in the name of the candidate or by writing in the name of the political party (in which case the ballots shall be counted for the candidate of that political party).

(2) In the case of the offices of President and Vice President, a vote for a named candidate or a vote by writing in the name of the political party shall be counted as a vote for the electors supporting the candidate involved.

(3) Any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the spelling of the name of a candidate or a political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Connecticut's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Twelve states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

District of Columbia 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that the District of Columbia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in the District of Columbia just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and registration requirements combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that the District of Columbia provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal timeframe. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices. There are presently six states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize the District of Columbia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request and permits faxing of the absentee ballot when military service prevents the voter from receiving and returning the voted ballot. However, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots for all military and overseas citizens, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter, on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate these alternatives.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies

and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the District's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter resides outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the jurisdiction;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in the U.S., they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Delaware requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 12:00 noon on the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Delaware accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Delaware's Chief Election

Officials have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that Florida provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. We commend you for passing legislation that allowed for a state write-in ballot for general elections. However, we request that you expand this to all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame for all elections. Thus, a voter would know that they could exercise their right to vote for all Florida elections, not just one. We encourage you to include this in your next legislative package.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently in Florida, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. - (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Although Florida passed legislation allowing the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and receipt of the voted ballot by overseas U.S. citizens, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative. We request that Florida allow election officials to electronically send the blank ballot and accept the voted ballot electronically from military voters in the U.S., on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate this alternative.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors via electronic transmission.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Georgia's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Georgia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Georgia enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot requests and the registration is waived. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or is a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Guam 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Guam election law requires that the ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Guam Election Code

The Guam Election Code refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the Guam election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Guam Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Guam provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from Guam in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state or territory does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by Guam.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Hawaii 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Hawaii military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Hawaii allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Although Hawaii Revised Statute Section 15-3 states "...any former registered voter of Hawaii may vote an absentee ballot in any presidential election occurring within twenty-four months after leaving Hawaii...", This statute does not cover members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or citizens employed overseas, and family members that have been away for over 24 months. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. A special late registration procedure for these circumstances would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. While Hawaii offers electronic transmission of election materials, the fact remains that by expanding the use of the FWAB to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. - (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Hawaii money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.*

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Hawaii provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Iowa enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application request for registration and an absentee ballot. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The following sample language would allow for these procedures.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We understand Iowa currently allows discharged military personnel to register late. We encourage expanding this option to their family members and overseas citizens who may go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen returning home after active duty or employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under the UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Idaho's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country whom may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Idaho allows for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA request for registration as well as electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and acceptance of the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Idaho allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Idaho provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than

30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Late Registration Procedures

Illinois currently allows members of the Armed Forces or merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Illinois expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's 30-day residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Application for Ballot by Proxy to Overseas Citizens

Currently, Illinois allows spouses, and other family members, to use a special application provided by the local election official to request that an absentee ballot be mailed to members of the Uniformed Services. We recommend this option be expanded to allow spouses and other family members of overseas civilian citizens to request an absentee ballot be mailed to them.

Sample Language

If a spouse, dependent, mother, father, sister or brother of a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) is registered to vote in the same county as that citizen, he or she may request that an absentee ballot be mailed to that voter by completing a special application provided by the local election official.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Illinois provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 10 of the Illinois Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress passed the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) which the Federal Voting Assistance Program administers. Reference to the UOCAVA in the state election code would help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Illinois money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Illinois' State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including, but not limited to, electronic transmission or fax. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Indiana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Indiana provides 45-day transit time for General and Primary elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Kansas provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with

American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or

she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 117 of the Kentucky Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Kentucky's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Kentucky enacted legislation, which provides for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for ballot request and the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Kentucky allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Kentucky provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem, which continues to face Louisiana military and overseas voters, is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Presidential elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states currently have a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Louisiana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Massachusetts military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. The fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Massachusetts provides 45-day transit time for Primary elections (35 days before election and 10 days extended counting after election). However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Thirty-nine states now allow 45-day ballot transit time for general elections.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Massachusetts provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. We realize Massachusetts provides a special write-in absentee ballot if the local election official does not have the regular state ballot available for mailing. However, expanding this provision by making this ballot available upon request by UOCAVA citizens and expanding its use for all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Massachusetts' Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting

Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Massachusetts money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Late Registration Procedures

Although the Maryland General Assembly deleted the late registration provision from Maryland law, we never-the-less encourage you to recommend that Maryland reinstate procedures to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members to be able to register late (or be exempt from registration). Previously, honorably discharged military personnel and their spouses and dependents could still vote absentee if a Federal Post Card Application arrived not later than 8 p.m. on election day. Additionally, we recommend that Maryland expand this procedure to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration.

Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states now allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

Although Maryland provides ample time for transit of ballots under normal circumstances, especially with late counting, we continue to recommend that Maryland provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections as a means to vote in case there are delays in mailing and returning absentee ballots. Again, the main purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official. Also a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Maryland has done an exceptional job passing legislation on behalf of UOCAVA voters regarding electronic transmission of election materials. However, we request your consideration again to make further changes in Maryland law/administrative procedures that would include the faxing of the voted ballot for all UOCAVA absentee voters and of the FPCA for registration purposes. We realize that Maryland allows faxing of the FPCA for an absentee ballot request and now the unvoted ballot and that Maryland law prohibits electronic facsimile if the document requires a signed affidavit. However, we encourage expansion of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration (since we instruct voters to submit the original, signed FPCA after faxing and the FPCA form is a simultaneous request for registration and request for absentee ballot) and acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter (signature already on file) where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below accommodates these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local board of elections may receive FPCAs for registration, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We appreciate the action taken by the Maryland State Board of Elections to allow overseas voters to cast votes for state and local offices in primary and special Federal elections using the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB). Since this ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership, many overseas citizens have access to it and would not be disenfranchised because their regular ballots were not received in a timely manner.

In addition, however, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, we request the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB. This would further simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for elections for Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA. To address your concerns about lack of control over the process, the citizen must provide a valid Maryland residence address and sign the FPCA attesting that he/she is a U.S. citizen and is not voting in any other jurisdiction.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Maine has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) request for registration and ballot. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Maine military and overseas voters is the short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Federal elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. However, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Maine's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fourteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current Michigan election law requires that the FPCA used to register and request absentee ballots or to request absentee ballots only, must be sworn to before an official authorized to administer oaths if the requesters are Michigan residents temporarily residing outside the U.S. and unaffiliated with the U.S. Federal Government, or overseas citizens. This notary requirement continues to be a problem for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. We heard this many times over in the 2004 Presidential election year. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We strongly recommend action this legislative year to remove the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials or not require notarization after initial registration notary is provided. To this end, we support HB 6061, which is currently under consideration in your legislature. Please contact us to provide testimony for, or to write letters in support of, this legislation. Michigan is one of only six states and territories that have a notary requirement for the Federal Post Card Application for citizens outside the U.S.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Michigan allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Michigan provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

We request that you seriously consider in this year's legislative session, the expansion of the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Michigan enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. However, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Minnesota military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as State Department personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Minnesota allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Notary Requirement

We realize notarization of the FPCA and the ballot return envelope is not necessary if a voter provides his/her military ID number or passport number. However, if a voter overlooks this requirement or if he or she is unable to obtain notarial services, he or she may be disenfranchised. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Minnesota provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive regular absentee ballots sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states beyond Federal law that have expanded the use of the FWAB and the 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Minnesota has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Minnesota's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Ten other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline for absentee ballot requests, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Mississippi requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, the voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Mississippi accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Alaska allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. Forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of at least part of the absentee voting process. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Alabama provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Arkansas military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Arkansas allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Arkansas provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the State money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Arkansas enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot requests and that registration is waived. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 7-5-406 of the Arkansas Election Laws refers to the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the 1955 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Arkansas's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current American Samoa election law requires that the FPCA must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S. or the Territories

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state or territory, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a citizen outside the Territory who has never lived in the Territory has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend American Samoa provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from American Samoa in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face American Samoa military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that California's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. Fifteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Colorado military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Colorado allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission of election materials has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Colorado has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Ten other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration

simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline for absentee ballot requests, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election officials.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Connecticut military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. We realize that Connecticut provides 45-day transit time for General elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Connecticut enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request. However, voters using the FPCA to register are required to simultaneously mail the original, which must arrive by 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election for the ballot to be counted. The electronic transmission methodology is there to ensure the FPCA is received by the state's deadline. If the electronically transmitted FPCA for registration is not recognized until the mail version is received then the availability of electronic transmission is of no benefit to the voter. We realize the original FPCA should be mailed in all cases regardless, however we urge an extension to the acceptance deadline for the original FPCA when the voter has utilized the electronically transmitted option.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Connecticut law allows recently discharged members of the military returning to the state too late to register during the regular registration period to register to vote up until 5:00 p.m. on the last weekday before an election. We recommend that Connecticut allow persons recently separated from overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet the normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Connecticut extend the availability of the state write-in absentee ballot to non-Uniformed Services overseas electors. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB)

The state of Connecticut is exempt from use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) by Section 103 (f) in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). These statements exempt states that make ballots available to military voters at least 90 days before the general election and as soon as the candidate list is available for other UOCAVA citizens.

The intent of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) is to aid the enfranchisement of U.S. citizens overseas wishing to vote for Federal Offices in general elections who make timely application for, but do not receive an absentee ballot.

The intent of the current Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot is to assist members of the military and their family members who are not able to follow the regular absentee ballot application procedure.

The Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot does not accommodate citizens who request a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and do not receive it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline. The FWABs, which are prepositioned at military installations and U.S. Embassies and Consulates worldwide fulfill this purpose for all overseas U.S. citizens except those whose legal residence is Connecticut.

We recommend that Connecticut allow overseas UOCAVA citizens who have requested a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and not received it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline be allowed to use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot.

Sample Language

The Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) will be accepted from uniformed services and overseas voters who make timely application for, and do not receive a regular absentee ballot. The following rules shall apply with respect to the FWAB:

(1) In completing the ballot, the overseas voter may designate a candidate by writing in the name of the candidate or by writing in the name of the political party (in which case the ballots shall be counted for the candidate of that political party).

(2) In the case of the offices of President and Vice President, a vote for a named candidate or a vote by writing in the name of the political party shall be counted as a vote for the electors supporting the candidate involved.

(3) Any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the spelling of the name of a candidate or a political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

District of Columbia 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that the District of Columbia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in the District of Columbia just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and registration requirements combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that the District of Columbia provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal timeframe. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices. There are presently six states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize the District of Columbia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request and permits faxing of the absentee ballot when military service prevents the voter from receiving and returning the voted ballot. However, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots for all military and overseas citizens, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter, on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate these alternatives.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies

and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the District's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter resides outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the jurisdiction;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

Except for the fact that they have never resided in the U.S., they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Delaware requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 12:00 noon on the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Delaware accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that Florida provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. We commend you for passing legislation that allowed for a state write-in ballot for general elections. However, we request that you expand this to all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame for all elections. Thus, a voter would know that they could exercise their right to vote for all Florida elections, not just one. We encourage you to include this in your next legislative package.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently in Florida, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of local election officials.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Although Florida passed legislation allowing the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and receipt of the voted ballot by overseas U.S. citizens, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative. We request that Florida allow election officials to electronically send the blank ballot and accept the voted ballot electronically from military voters in the U.S., on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate this alternative.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors via electronic transmission.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Georgia's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Georgia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Georgia enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot requests and the registration is waived. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or is a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Guam 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Guam election law requires that the ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Guam Election Code

The Guam Election Code refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the Guam election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Guam Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Guam provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from Guam in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state or territory does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

Hawaii 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Hawaii military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Hawaii allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Although Hawaii Revised Statute Section 15-3 states "...any former registered voter of Hawaii may vote an absentee ballot in any presidential election occurring within twenty-four months after leaving Hawaii...", This statute does not cover members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or citizens employed overseas, and family members that have been away for over 24 months. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. A special late registration procedure for these circumstances would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

The adoption of this initiative would save Hawaii money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Hawaii provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Iowa enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application request for registration and an absentee ballot. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The following sample language would allow for these procedures.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We understand Iowa currently allows discharged military personnel to register late. We encourage expanding this option to their family members and overseas citizens who may go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen returning home after active duty or employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under the UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Idaho's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country whom may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Idaho allows for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA request for registration as well as electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and acceptance of the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Idaho allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Idaho provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than

30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Late Registration Procedures

Illinois currently allows members of the Armed Forces or merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Illinois expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's 30-day residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Application for Ballot by Proxy to Overseas Citizens

Currently, Illinois allows spouses, and other family members, to use a special application provided by the local election official to request that an absentee ballot be mailed to members of the Uniformed Services. We recommend this option be expanded to allow spouses and other family members of overseas civilian citizens to request an absentee ballot be mailed to them.

Sample Language

If a spouse, dependent, mother, father, sister or brother of a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) is registered to vote in the same county as that citizen, he or she may request that an absentee ballot be mailed to that voter by completing a special application provided by the local election official.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Illinois provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 10 of the Illinois Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress passed the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) which the Federal Voting Assistance Program administers. Reference to the UOCAVA in the state election code would help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Illinois money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Illinois' State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including, but not limited to, electronic transmission or fax. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Indiana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Indiana provides 45-day transit time for General and Primary elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with

American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or

she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 117 of the Kentucky Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Kentucky's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Kentucky enacted legislation, which provides for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for ballot request and the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Kentucky allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Kentucky provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised

The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem, which continues to face Louisiana military and overseas voters, is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Presidential elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states currently have a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Louisiana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Massachusetts military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. The fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. We realize Massachusetts provides 45-day transit time for Primary elections (35 days before election and 10 days extended counting after election). However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Thirty-nine states now allow 45-day ballot transit time for general elections.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Massachusetts provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. We realize Massachusetts provides a special write-in absentee ballot if the local election official does not have the regular state ballot available for mailing. However, expanding this provision by making this ballot available upon request by UOCAVA citizens and expanding its use for all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Massachusetts' Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting

Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

We realize Massachusetts has enacted legislation allowing citizens to send the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) via electronic transmission. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot via electronic transmission from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

The adoption of this initiative would save Massachusetts money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Late Registration Procedures

Although the Maryland General Assembly deleted the late registration provision from Maryland law, we never-the-less encourage you to recommend that Maryland reinstate procedures to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members to be able to register late (or be exempt from registration). Previously, honorably discharged military personnel and their spouses and dependents could still vote absentee if a Federal Post Card Application arrived not later than 8 p.m. on election day. Additionally, we recommend that Maryland expand this procedure to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration.

Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states now allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

Although Maryland provides ample time for transit of ballots under normal circumstances, especially with late counting, we continue to recommend that Maryland provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections as a means to vote in case there are delays in mailing and returning absentee ballots. Again, the main purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official. Also a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Maryland has done an exceptional job passing legislation on behalf of UOCAVA voters regarding electronic transmission of election materials. However, we request your consideration again to make further changes in Maryland law/administrative procedures that would include the faxing of the voted ballot for all UOCAVA absentee voters and of the FPCA for registration purposes. We realize that Maryland allows faxing of the FPCA for an absentee ballot request and now the unvoted ballot and that Maryland law prohibits electronic facsimile if the document requires a signed affidavit. However, we encourage expansion of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration (since we instruct voters to submit the original, signed FPCA after faxing and the FPCA form is a simultaneous request for registration and request for absentee ballot) and acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter (signature already on file) where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below accommodates these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local board of elections may receive FPCAs for registration, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We appreciate the action taken by the Maryland State Board of Elections to allow overseas voters to cast votes for state and local offices in primary and special Federal elections using the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB). Since this ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership, many overseas citizens have access to it and would not be disenfranchised because their regular ballots were not received in a timely manner.

In addition, however, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, we request the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB. This would further simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for elections for Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA. To address your concerns about lack of control over the process, the citizen must provide a valid Maryland residence address and sign the FPCA attesting that he/she is a U.S. citizen and is not voting in any other jurisdiction.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Maine has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) request for registration and ballot. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the

Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Maine military and overseas voters is the short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Federal elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. However, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Maine's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fourteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current Michigan election law requires that the FPCA used to register and request absentee ballots or to request absentee ballots only, must be sworn to before an official authorized to administer oaths if the requesters are Michigan residents temporarily residing outside the U.S. and unaffiliated with the U.S. Federal Government, or overseas citizens. This notary requirement continues to be a problem for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. We heard this many times over in the 2004 Presidential election year. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We strongly recommend action this legislative year to remove the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials or not require notarization after initial registration notary is provided. To this end, we support HB 6061, which is currently under consideration in your legislature. Please contact us to provide testimony for, or to write letters in support of, this legislation. Michigan is one of only six states and territories that have a notary requirement for the Federal Post Card Application for citizens outside the U.S.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Michigan allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Michigan provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

We request that you seriously consider in this year's legislative session, the expansion of the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Michigan enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. However, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Minnesota military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as State Department personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Minnesota allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Notary Requirement

We realize notarization of the FPCA and the ballot return envelope is not necessary if a voter provides his/her military ID number or passport number. However, if a voter overlooks this requirement or if he or she is unable to obtain notarial services, he or she may be disenfranchised. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Minnesota provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive regular absentee ballots sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states beyond Federal law that have expanded the use of the FWAB and the 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Minnesota has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Minnesota's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current Missouri election law requires that the state ballot envelope must be witnessed by a notary public or other officer authorized by law to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Missouri Election Laws do not refer to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Ten other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission

envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline for absentee ballot requests, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.*

Notary Requirement

Current Mississippi election law requires that the affidavit on the absentee ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Mississippi requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, the voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Mississippi accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Title 23, Section 23-15-677 of the Mississippi Election Laws refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Mississippi allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Mississippi provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Montana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

State Special Write-in Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Montana provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and U.S. corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot on time, he may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official in its place.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. The FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Bring Montana Election Code into Conformance with the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

In our recent update to the Voting Assistance Guide it came to our attention that there is a discrepancy in the definition of eligible citizens between the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) and the Montana Election Code. Section 13-2-211 of the Montana code defines an “elector in the United States service” as members of the armed forces, merchant marine, religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces, or citizens temporarily residing outside the U.S. territorial limits, and their spouses and dependents. UOCAVA does not cover members of religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces unless they are serving overseas. In addition to the other categories of citizens listed in the Montana code, UOCAVA also includes “uniformed services” – the Coast Guard and the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. (See 42 U.S.C. 1973ff-1 and ff-6.)

We recommend that Montana review the language in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986 (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973ff et seq.) and make appropriate amendments to the state election law provisions to include the Uniformed Services groups referenced above.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent.

We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Montana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

North Carolina 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

One Federal Post Card Application for All Elections.

The National Defense Authorization Act of Fiscal Year 2002 states that, “If a State accepts and processes an official post card form (prescribed under section 101) submitted by an absent uniformed service voter or overseas voter for simultaneous voter registration and absentee ballot application (in accordance with section 102(a)(4)) and the voter requests that the application be considered an application for an absentee ballot for each subsequent election For Federal office held in the State during that year, the State shall provide an absentee ballot to the voter for each subsequent election for Federal office held in the State during that year.” This section was amended by the Help America Vote Act of 2002 to extend the period covered by the single absentee ballot application through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. We strongly recommend legislation be enacted to include North Carolina residents who registered locally prior to January 1, 2004 (when this provision of HAVA was enacted) and then go overseas to be able to use one FPCA for all elections through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. These citizens currently must send in a FPCA or written request before each election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that North Carolina provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of Uniformed Services members and overseas citizens who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology to overseas citizens. We realize that North Carolina allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request by overseas citizens. However, this should be extended to allow the faxing of the blank and voted ballot to these citizens from your state as you have done for Uniformed Services members. Thus, we strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Sample Language

An applicant, who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Election officials may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration

simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that North Carolina currently allows persons recently separated from the Armed Forces to register and vote in person up to and including election day. We recommend expanding this option to Uniformed Services family members and to citizens returning from overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Title 16 of the North Dakota Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that North Dakota's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Nebraska enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and ballot requests. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the unvoted ballot to the voters covered by UOCAVA, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters via electronic transmission. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face New Hampshire military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that New Jersey allows persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members as well as civilians attached to or serving with the Uniformed Services to register late and obtain an emergency voting form. We recommend this option be expanded to civilian citizens returning to New Jersey after overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that New Jersey enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request, the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter, and accepting an overseas ballot by electronic means. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to accept electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration purposes and to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the Uniformed Services voter who is out of the state, but not necessarily overseas, on election day where these circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend New Jersey provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Late Registration Procedures

Nevada currently allows members of the Armed Forces, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Nevada expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the termination date of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen returning home from employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised due to time and location constraints, by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expanded use of modern technology in the absentee voting process to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration by all citizens voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, electronically sending the ballot to these citizens and accepting the voted ballot from these citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Nevada provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Nevada's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face New York military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. This is why it is necessary to allow a minimum of 45 days transit time for absentee ballots.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that New York allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the New York election

code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the New York Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints. Currently, forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of election materials.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. We enlist your support once again this year in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all parts of the process. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider using modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, the blank ballot to the voter, and the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A county board of elections official may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that New York's Chief Election Official (CEO) have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The CEO and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Ohio's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

We realize that Ohio enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request and electronic transmission of the blank ballot to voters in the Uniformed Services. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to all UOCAVA citizens to include electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expansion of Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Ohio allows late registration for discharged military personnel and their spouses. However, we recommend expanding this alternative to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may not know in which state they will live. Others may move to a new state and not meet the state's residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services by separation from the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable such persons to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Waiver of Registration for Citizens Covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

While we realize that registration is waived in Ohio for members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their family members, we encourage expansion of this provision to include all groups covered in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) definitions. The following is an extract from the UOCAVA, 42 USC 1973ff-6. Section 107. Definitions:

“(1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --

- (A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;
- (B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and
- (C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote “

“(7) “uniformed services” means the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service, and the commissioned corps of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration”.

The sample language below will accommodate this provision.

Sample Language

If you are a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, your registration is waived and you may request an absentee ballot by submitting an FPCA so it is received by the county board of elections not later than 3 days before the election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Ohio provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in Federal elections only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and

FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Oklahoma military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to the timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. For Oklahoma, our 2004-2005 Voting Assistance Guide states that local election officials mail out ballots approximately 30 days before an election. While we commend you for expanding the time between the state run-off election and the General Election, Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one other states have increased their ballot transit times to greater than 30 days.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Although we realize that Oklahoma enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA ballot request, and for the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot under certain limited circumstances, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the use of electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot on a regular basis, as an alternative method, not merely during certain limited circumstances.

Sample Language

An elections official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Oregon military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Oregon provides 45-day transit time for General elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Expansion of Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Oregon allows late registration for discharged military personnel and their spouses. However, we recommend expanding this alternative to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable such persons to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Oregon has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request and electronic transmission of the blank ballot. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include acceptance of the voted ballot from the voter by electronic transmission where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send a blank ballot to a voter and accept voted ballots via electronic transmission from eligible electors.

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Oregon's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

Pennsylvania continues to require voters covered under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. on the Friday before the election. This deadline is earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. For this reason we recommend that Pennsylvania accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day. Only four other states require the return of the voted ballot before election day.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Pennsylvania allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. We request your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission of absentee ballots in Pennsylvania. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility regarding election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Pennsylvania allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request. However, Pennsylvania now only allows the electronic transmission of the blank ballot if a person is in a designated hostile fire, imminent danger pay, combat zone or qualified hazardous duty area. Further, there is no faxing of the voted ballot in your state. We strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot (to include a waiver of privacy) from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Sample Language

An applicant, who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

Puerto Rico 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Puerto Rico election law requires that the FPCA and the ballot return envelope must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. Depending on the category of UOCAVA voter, the oath must be administered by a commissioned officer, the highest officer on board ship, an official in the school registrar's office, a notary public, or a consular officer. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notary services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We strongly recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states and territories have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Puerto Rico allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in Puerto Rico just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet Puerto Rico's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a commonwealth's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states and territories currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular commonwealth deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Puerto Rico provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from Puerto Rico in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular absentee ballot from Puerto Rico does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, commonwealth, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. Puerto Rico will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership.

By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the commonwealth for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the commonwealth's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate commonwealth election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the commonwealth money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, commonwealth and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the commonwealth of Puerto Rico;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate Puerto Rico election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Commonwealth Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the commonwealth's election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. Thirty-seven states and territories now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Although Puerto Rico currently allows electronic transmission of the FPCA, including fax and email, we encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. The Commonwealth Elections Commission may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states and territories have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The chief election official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

Despite the alternative of mailing the official state blank ballot 45 days before an election if the official ballot is not yet available, Rhode Island military and overseas voters continue to have an extremely short period of time to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted (21 days) in the regular absentee ballot delivery process. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to speed ballot transit time, inadequate ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) Coverage and Notary Requirement

Under Section 17-20-6.1, Rhode Island provides that the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) may be used as a request for an absentee ballot by the following groups under UOCAVA (42 U.S.C. § 1973ff):

- (1) A member of the armed forces who is absent from the state by reason of being in active service;
- (2) Any person absent from the state in performance of "services intimately connected with military operations" as defined in § 17-20-3(d); and
- (3) Any person who is employed outside of the United States as defined in § 17-20-3(c)

In contrast, UOCAVA includes Uniformed Services and overseas citizens defined in Section 107 as follows:

- (1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --:

- (A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;
 - (B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and:
 - (C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote;
- (5) "overseas voter" means --:
- (A) an absent uniformed services voter who, by reason of active duty or service is absent from the United States on the date of the election involved;
 - (B) a person who resides outside the United States and is qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States; or:
 - (C) a person who resides outside the United States and (but for such residence) would be qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States.

Rhode Island law excludes UOCAVA citizens who mark 8.d. on the FPCA from the procedures of 17-20-6.1, which waives registration, and subjects them to additional procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 by requiring them to submit the Mail Ballot Application and affidavit prior to mailing the absentee ballot. This introduces additional steps and mailing time into the process and the requirement to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, voters have paid up to $90 for these services and other countries do not have notaries in their system of jurisprudence.

Thus, we request that Rhode Island include those overseas citizens currently covered by these separate procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 under Section 17-20-6.1 to allow these citizens to use the FPCA to request an absentee ballot in the same way as the rest of the UOCAVA citizens. As an alternative, Rhode Island could include the Mail Ballot Application along with the ballot to register the applicant and have the citizen attest to a self-administered oath on the form, eliminating the requirement for a notary.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that Rhode Island's Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

We note that in 2003 Governor Carcieri signed into law legislation naming the Secretary of State (SoS) the Chief State Election Official in Rhode Island and that your Legislative Implementation Report for 2004 indicates that the SoS intends to introduce legislation to provide the necessary emergency authority for the SoS as the chief election official. If we can help in this effort, please let us know.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize South Carolina has enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request and for the electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot in emergency situations only. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the use of electronic transmission of the blank ballot and acceptance of the voted ballot on a regular basis, as an alternative method, not merely during emergencies.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or is a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

South Dakota 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirements

South Dakota requires the ballot return envelope for military in the United States (U.S.) and overseas citizens to be notarized by a notary public or other person authorized to administer an oath. This requirement creates a burden for military members who may be assigned to a small military installation that may not have an officer available at all time, as well as, individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible to obtain. We realize in lieu of a notarized signature individuals may provide a photo copy of a valid ID such as a South Dakota Drivers License or nondriver ID card; a passport or other picture ID issued by the U.S. government; a tribal photo ID or a photo ID issued by a South Dakota postsecondary education institution. However, we recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials for military in the U.S. and overseas citizens. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that South Dakota allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below is suggested language allowing for electronic transmission to be used in these three steps of the absentee voting process.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend South Dakota provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

Section 2-6-112 of the Tennessee Election Law refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the 1955 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Late Registration Procedures

Even though Texas has enacted a 30-day registration deadline as a safeguard to prevent fraud, we still encourage Texas to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late, e.g., up to the day of the election, or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election (within 30 days of the election). This time frame does not meet your state's current registration requirements. Further, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and the Texas registration requirement may combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We realize that Texas provides a state special write-in absentee ballot to Uniformed Services members if they are unable to cast a ballot on election day or during the early voting period because of a military contingency. We recommend expansion of this state write-in absentee ballot to provide a method for voting by other persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Thus, we request your support to develop acceptance in Texas for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots to all UOCAVA voters. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility regarding election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of this modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Texas provides for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and early voting ballots. Additionally, in 1997, Texas enacted legislation to allow the electronic transmission of the voted ballot by members of the U.S. Armed Forces on active duty overseas, or their family members, if the Armed Forces members are casting the ballot from an area where the members are eligible to receive hostile fire pay or imminent danger pay, or that has been designated by the President of the United States as a combat zone. However, we continue to encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to all Texas UOCAVA voters who request it and accepting the voted ballot where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recognize that Texas recently passed a law that expanded the use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) to any special, primary or runoff election for Federal offices. In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve ballot transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, we recommend that instead of the Texas Governor, Texas' Chief Election Official have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Federal Voting Assistance Program is in closer contact with the Chief Election Official and could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Currently Utah requires the ballot return envelope to be certified by a noncommissioned or commissioned officer if it is not possible to obtain a military postmark on or before election day. This requirement creates a burden for military members who may be assigned to a small military installation that may not have an officer available at all time. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Currently, acceptance of electronic transmission of election materials varies from county to county in Utah. Consideration should be given to more uniform use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage statewide adoption of procedures to allow for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and ballot request, electronically sending the ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We realize Utah provides a Special Military Write-In Absentee Ballot if the citizen will be unable to vote by regular ballot. We recommend expanding use of this ballot to provide a method for voting to other persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive regular absentee ballots sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots for this purpose.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the State. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB and the 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in the general election. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner.

Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. On an ad hoc basis, during past primaries, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

We realize Virginia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for absentee ballot request. We also note that Virginia has conducted several successful pilot projects with the transmission of blank ballots by electronic mail. We continue to support your innovative electronic voting projects; however, we also continue to encourage expanded use of electronic transmission to include sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter by facimile where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, Virginia law allows the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) to be used in all elections and from inside or outside the United States. However, we continue to recommend that the FWAB transmission envelope be accepted as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the completed FWAB. We realize that legislation has been passed providing that the FWAB can be used to serve as an application for an absentee ballot and the absentee ballot itself for Federal offices provided the Registrar received it not less than five days prior to the election. Consideration should be given to simplify the registration and request for absentee ballot request process and improve ballot transit time through the combined use of the FWAB for registration and absentee ballot simultaneously. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope, is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). This does not change the data required from your state for these citizens. The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of local election officials.

Virgin Islands 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedure

The Virgin Islands currently allows members of the Armed Forces and merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election and who return to the Virgin Islands too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that the Virgin Islands expand the scope of this procedure and allow Uniformed Services personnel (Coast Guard, and the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration), civilians recently separated from overseas employment, and the spouses and dependents of all these groups to be eligible for the same procedure. These citizens also go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. Expanding the scope of your existing procedure would solve this problem. Fifteen states currently have a late registration procedure that includes all UOCAVA citizens.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-in Absentee Ballot

We also recommend the Virgin Islands provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. Vermont 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Vermont military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states have provisions for the 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Vermont's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Removal of Notary Requirement

Current Vermont election law requires that the FPCA used to register must be notarized. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, many small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned.

Alternatively, we recommend unregistered applicants be instructed to read the Freeman's Oath prior to signing the FPCA. Item 8e of the 1995 FPCA contains language where the applicant swears/affirms under penalty of perjury that he or she is "a U.S. citizen, eligible to vote in the above jurisdiction and subscribe to any required state/local oath or statement." This would eliminate the need to attach the oath to the FPCA. For the reasons stated above, we recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Vermont currently allows for electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request and electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter. We encourage enacting legislation for acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below is sample legislation that will provide for this alternative.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Vermont allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the

Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;*
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and*
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.*

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Vermont provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from the State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now have state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a “full” slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. Thirty-seven states have modified state election code to reference UOCAVA.

The Need for 45-day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Washington military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Washington allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting Washington's 15-day late registration deadline. We recommend that UOCAVA citizens be permitted to register up to the day of the next ensuing election when these circumstances arise. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Washington money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Washington's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

*The chief election official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The chief election official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving *United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Wisconsin 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Wisconsin military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Although Wisconsin local election officials mail absentee ballots 30 days before the general and 21 days before the primary elections, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Notary Requirement

Current Wisconsin election law requires that, for military voters, the certificate-affidavit on the ballot return envelope must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths or witnessed by two adult U.S. citizens. Additionally, for overseas citizens who are required to register, the FPCA must be witnessed by any person authorized to administer oaths or one adult U.S. citizen. We recommend removal of the notary and witness requirements for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-eight states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Wisconsin allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Wisconsin enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request and the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

Below please find suggested sample language allowing for all aspects of the process.

We note that Wyoming permits absentee ballot requests to be made by telephone and email. An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the merchant marine, or their family members, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Wyoming's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedure

We recommend that Alaska allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine or overseas employment, and their family members, to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to Alabama's use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. Forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of at least part of the absentee voting process. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Alabama provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full"

slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Arkansas military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Arkansas allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Arkansas provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Notary Requirement

Current American Samoa election law requires that the FPCA must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S. or the Territories

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state or territory, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a citizen outside the Territory who has never lived in the Territory has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that American Samoa's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that American Samoa allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend American Samoa provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from American Samoa in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. Presently, there are eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow the chief election officer more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that American Samoa allows the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. The chief election officer may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information that is requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the territory's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by American Samoa.

The adoption of this initiative would save the territory money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by American Samoa.

The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face American Samoa military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Connecticut enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request. However, voters using the FPCA to register are required to simultaneously mail the original, which must arrive by 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election for the ballot to be counted. The electronic transmission methodology is there to ensure the FPCA is received by the state's deadline. If the electronically transmitted FPCA for registration is not recognized until the mail version is received then the availability of electronic transmission is of no benefit to the voter. We realize the original FPCA should be mailed in all cases regardless, however we urge an extension to the acceptance deadline for the original FPCA when the voter has utilized the electronically transmitted option.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Connecticut law allows recently discharged members of the military returning to the state too late to register during the regular registration period to register to vote up until 5:00 p.m. on the last weekday before an election. We recommend that Connecticut allow persons recently separated from overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet the normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Connecticut extend the availability of the state write-in absentee ballot to non-Uniformed Services overseas electors. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by persons overseas who, due to special circumstances such as those faced by Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the State in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB)

The state of Connecticut is exempt from use of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) by Section 103 (f) in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). These statements exempt states that make ballots available to military voters at least 90 days before the general election and as soon as the candidate list is available for other UOCAVA citizens.

The intent of the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) is to aid the enfranchisement of U.S. citizens overseas wishing to vote for Federal Offices in general elections who make timely application for, but do not receive an absentee ballot.

The intent of the current Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot is to assist members of the military and their family members who are not able to follow the regular absentee ballot application procedure.

The Connecticut Special Write-In Absentee Ballot does not accommodate citizens who request a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and do not receive it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline. The FWABs, which are prepositioned at military installations and U.S. Embassies and Consulates worldwide fulfill this purpose for all overseas U.S. citizens except those whose legal residence is Connecticut.

We recommend that Connecticut allow overseas UOCAVA citizens who have requested a state absentee ballot in a timely manner and not received it in time to vote and return it to meet the state's ballot deadline be allowed to use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot.

Sample Language

The Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) will be accepted from uniformed services and overseas voters who make timely application for, and do not receive a regular absentee ballot. The following rules shall apply with respect to the FWAB:

(1) In completing the ballot, the overseas voter may designate a candidate by writing in the name of the candidate or by writing in the name of the political party (in which case the ballots shall be counted for the candidate of that political party).

(2) In the case of the offices of President and Vice President, a vote for a named candidate or a vote by writing in the name of the political party shall be counted as a vote for the electors supporting the candidate involved.

(3) Any abbreviation, misspelling, or other minor variation in the spelling of the name of a candidate or a political party shall be disregarded in determining the validity of the ballot, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Connecticut's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Twelve states have provided this authority to their Chief Election

Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

District of Columbia 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that the District of Columbia allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and their family members to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in the District of Columbia just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and registration requirements combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that the District of Columbia provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal timeframe. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices. There are presently six states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize the District of Columbia allows electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request and permits faxing of the absentee ballot when military service prevents the voter from receiving and returning the voted ballot. However, we encourage you to expand the use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballots for all military and overseas citizens, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot electronically from the voter, on a regular basis, where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below would accommodate these alternatives.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently, the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the District's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter resides outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the jurisdiction;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Delaware 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Delaware requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 12:00 noon on the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Delaware accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that Florida provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. We commend you for passing legislation that allowed for a state write-in ballot for general elections. However, we request that you expand this to all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame for all elections. Thus, a voter would know that they could exercise their right to vote for all Florida elections, not just one. We encourage you to include this in your next legislative package.

Sample Language

The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Below please find suggested sample language allowing for the electronic transmission of the blank and voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or is a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal offices only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Notary Requirement

Current Guam election law requires that the ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or other person authorized to administer oaths. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state or territory and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state or territory, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Guam's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Guam allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Guam Election Code

The Guam Election Code refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the Guam election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Guam Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Guam provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from Guam in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state or territory does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by Guam.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

(3) the request is received by the appropriate election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by Guam.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Hawaii military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Hawaii allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register after the standard registration deadline or be exempt from registration. Although Hawaii Revised Statute Section 15-3 states "...any former registered voter of Hawaii may vote an absentee ballot in any presidential election occurring within twenty-four months after leaving Hawaii...". This statute does not cover members of the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or citizens employed overseas, and family members that have been away for over 24 months. Many members of the Uniformed Services, merchant marine and overseas citizens go through a relocation transition period when they separate from service or overseas employment. The timing of their discharge or employment termination may prevent them from meeting the normal registration deadline. A special late registration procedure for these circumstances would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently have a late registration procedure.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. We realize Idaho allows for the electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for absentee ballot request. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA request for registration as well as electronic transmission of the blank ballot to the voter and acceptance of the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply

Twenty-seven states have implemented state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. However, if the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or family member of a Uniformed Service member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Late Registration Procedures

Illinois currently allows members of the Armed Forces or merchant marine, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. We recommend that Illinois expand this procedure and allow family members of these service personnel and civilians recently separated from overseas employment to be able to register late or be exempt from registration and be allowed to vote in the upcoming election. Like members of the Armed Forces, many overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's 30-day residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Expanded procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline, shall be entitled to register up to the day of the next election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Expand Application for Ballot by Proxy to Overseas Citizens

Currently, Illinois allows spouses, and other family members, to use a special application provided by the local election official to request that an absentee ballot be mailed to members of the Uniformed Services. We recommend this option be expanded to allow spouses and other family members of overseas civilian citizens to request an absentee ballot be mailed to them.

Sample Language

If a spouse, dependent, mother, father, sister or brother of a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) is registered to vote in the same county as that citizen, he or she may request that an absentee ballot be mailed to that voter by completing a special application provided by the local election official.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Illinois provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular absentee ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular absentee ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Illinois enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for ballot requests by members of the Armed Forces. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration from all citizens covered by UOCAVA, electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 10 of the Illinois Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress passed the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) which the Federal Voting Assistance Program administers. Reference to the UOCAVA in the state election code would help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded use of the FWAB beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Illinois money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Illinois' State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including, but not limited to, electronic transmission or fax. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election

Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may exercise emergency powers over any election being held in a district in which either a natural disaster or extremely inclement weather has occurred. The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may also exercise emergency powers during an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The State Board of Elections/Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Indiana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Indiana provides 45-day transit time for General and Primary elections. However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Forty-one states now provide a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Chapter 117 of the Kentucky Election Laws makes no reference to Federal law. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

We encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Kentucky allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Kentucky provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law. In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States

Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem, which continues to face Louisiana military and overseas voters, is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Presidential elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states currently have a 45-day transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Louisiana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election

Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Uniformed Services, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Louisiana allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Louisiana provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections, not only the Presidential election. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Massachusetts military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. The fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. We realize Massachusetts provides 45-day transit time for Primary elections (35 days before election and 10 days extended counting after election). However, expanding this provision to all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Thirty-nine states now allow 45-day ballot transit time for general elections.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Massachusetts provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular absentee ballot sent in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. We realize Massachusetts provides a special write-in absentee ballot if the local election official does not have the regular state ballot available for mailing. However, expanding this provision by making this ballot available upon request by UOCAVA citizens and expanding its use for all elections would help ensure enfranchisement. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. If the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or their family members, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Massachusetts' Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of all voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. We recommend that UOCAVA be referenced in appropriate sections of the state election code. Thirty-seven states now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Massachusetts has enacted legislation allowing citizens to send the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) via electronic transmission. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to these voters, and accepting the voted ballot via electronic transmission from these voters where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. The sample language below includes these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local election official may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. - (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save Massachusetts money, and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the chief election officer.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

Late Registration Procedures

Although the Maryland General Assembly deleted the late registration provision from Maryland law, we never-the-less encourage you to recommend that Maryland reinstate procedures to allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members to be able to register late (or be exempt from registration). Previously, honorably discharged military personnel and their spouses and dependents could still vote absentee if a Federal Post Card Application arrived not later than 8 p.m. on election day. Additionally, we recommend that Maryland expand this procedure to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration.

Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states now allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

Although Maryland provides ample time for transit of ballots under normal circumstances, especially with late counting, we continue to recommend that Maryland provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections as a means to vote in case there are delays in mailing and returning absentee ballots. Again, the main purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. Also a state write-in ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices.

write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Maryland has done an exceptional job passing legislation on behalf of UOCAVA voters regarding electronic transmission of election materials. However, we request your consideration again to make further changes in Maryland law/administrative procedures that would include the faxing of the voted ballot for all UOCAVA absentee voters and of the FPCA for registration purposes. We realize that Maryland allows faxing of the FPCA for an absentee ballot request and now the unvoted ballot and that Maryland law prohibits electronic facsimile if the document requires a signed affidavit. However, we encourage expansion of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration (since we instruct voters to submit the original, signed FPCA after faxing and the FPCA form is a simultaneous request for registration and request for absentee ballot) and acceptance of the voted ballot electronically from the voter (signature already on file) where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. The sample language below accommodates these alternatives.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A local board of elections may receive FPCAs for registration, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

We appreciate the action taken by the Maryland State Board of Elections to allow overseas voters to cast votes for state and local offices in primary and special Federal elections using the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB). Since this ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership, many overseas citizens have access to it and would not be disenfranchised because their regular ballots were not received in a timely manner.

In addition, however, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, we request the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB. This would further simplify the process, improve transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for elections for Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the local election official.

Sample Language

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA. To address your concerns about lack of control over the process, the citizen must provide a valid Maryland residence address and sign the FPCA attesting that he/she is a U.S. citizen and is not voting in any other jurisdiction.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Need for 45 Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Maine military and overseas voters is the short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots for non-Federal elections. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. However, our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Maine's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fourteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Notary Requirement

Current Michigan election law requires that the FPCA used to register and request absentee ballots or to request absentee ballots only, must be sworn to before an official authorized to administer oaths if the requesters are Michigan residents temporarily residing outside the U.S. and unaffiliated with the U.S. Federal Government, or overseas citizens. This notary requirement continues to be a problem for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. We heard this many times over in the 2004 Presidential election year. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. We strongly recommend action this legislative year to remove the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials or not require notarization after initial registration notary is provided. To this end, we support HB 6061, which is currently under consideration in your legislature. Please contact us to provide testimony for, or to write letters in support of, this legislation. Michigan is one of only six states and territories that have a notary requirement for the Federal Post Card Application for citizens outside the U.S.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Michigan allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Michigan provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

We request that you seriously consider in this year's legislative session, the expansion of the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Michigan enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and absentee ballot request. However, we encourage expanded use of this alternative to include electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An election official may send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors who are members of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family members, or qualified electors living outside the United States via electronic transmission.

- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Minnesota military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. Notary Requirement

We realize notarization of the FPCA and the ballot return envelope is not necessary if a voter provides his/her military ID number or passport number. However, if a voter overlooks this requirement or if he or she is unable to obtain notarial services, he or she may be disenfranchised. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notarial services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials to date.

There are presently seven states beyond Federal law that have expanded the use of the FWAB and the 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

We notice Mississippi requires UOCAVA voters to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. the day before the election. This deadline is a day earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, the voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. It is for this reason we recommend Mississippi accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

Title 23, Section 23-15-677 of the Mississippi Election Laws refers to the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955. In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the '55 Act and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Mississippi allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Mississippi provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of local election officials.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and runoff elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face Montana military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact remains that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail continues to be the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots to voters. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Forty-one states now allow 45-day ballot transit time.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

State Special Write-in Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Montana provide special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance when they know that they will be unable to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at embassies and consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and U.S. corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular ballot does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot on time, he may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official in its place.

It is also important to note that a write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal and local offices. The FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices only. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member or family member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Bring Montana Election Code into Conformance with the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

In our recent update to the Voting Assistance Guide it came to our attention that there is a discrepancy in the definition of eligible citizens between the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) and the Montana Election Code. Section 13-2-211 of the Montana code defines an "elector in the United States service" as members of the armed forces, merchant marine, religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces, or citizens temporarily residing outside the U.S. territorial limits, and their spouses and dependents. UOCAVA does not cover members of religious groups or welfare agencies attached to the armed forces unless they are serving overseas. In addition to the other categories of citizens listed in the Montana code, UOCAVA also includes "uniformed services" - the Coast Guard and the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. (See 42 U.S.C. 1973ff-1 and ff-6.)

We recommend that Montana review the language in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act of 1986 (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973ff et seq.) and make appropriate amendments to the state election law provisions to include the Uniformed Services groups referenced above.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in the U.S. and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that citizen is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Montana's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

North Carolina 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

One Federal Post Card Application for All Elections.

The National Defense Authorization Act of Fiscal Year 2002 states that, "If a State accepts and processes an official post card form (prescribed under section 101) submitted by an absent uniformed service voter or overseas voter for simultaneous voter registration and absentee ballot application (in accordance with section 102(a)(4)) and the voter requests that the application be considered an application for an absentee ballot for each subsequent election For Federal office held in the State during that year, the State shall provide an absentee ballot to the voter for each subsequent election for Federal office held in the State during that year." This section was amended by the Help America Vote Act of 2002 to extend the period covered by the single absentee ballot application through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. We strongly recommend legislation be enacted to include North Carolina residents who registered locally prior to January 1, 2004 (when this provision of HAVA was enacted) and then go overseas to be able to use one FPCA for all elections through the next two regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office. These citizens currently must send in a FPCA or written request before each election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We recommend that North Carolina provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of Uniformed Services members and overseas citizens who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology to overseas citizens. We realize that North Carolina allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request by overseas citizens. However, this should be extended to allow the faxing of the blank and voted ballot to these citizens from your state as you have done for Uniformed Services members. Thus, we strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Sample Language

An applicant, who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Election officials may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that North Carolina currently allows persons recently separated from the Armed Forces to register and vote in person up to and including election day. We recommend expanding this option to Uniformed Services family members and to citizens returning from overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a citizen. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would otherwise not have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize Nebraska enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and ballot requests. We recommend expanded use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the unvoted ballot to the voters covered by UOCAVA, and accepting the voted ballot from these voters via electronic transmission. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Armed Forces or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise

Fifteen states have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face New Hampshire military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the state election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

Sample Language

This language is usually found under the chapter in the State Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage use of this alternative to include electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) for registration and absentee ballot request, electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen. Below please find suggested sample language allowing for all aspects of the process.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of local election officials.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Twelve states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that New Hampshire's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Late Registration Procedures

We realize that New Jersey allows persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services and their family members as well as civilians attached to or serving with the Uniformed Services to register late and obtain an emergency voting form. We recommend this option be expanded to civilian citizens returning to New Jersey after overseas employment. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise an overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Consideration should be given to expand the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that New Jersey enacted legislation to provide for the electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request, the electronic receipt of the blank ballot by the voter, and accepting an overseas ballot by electronic means. We encourage expanded use of this alternative to accept electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration purposes and to include electronically accepting the voted ballot from the Uniformed Services voter who is out of the state, but not necessarily overseas, on election day where these circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend New Jersey provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences.

The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eight states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The state will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates,

We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Nevada currently allows members of the Armed Forces, discharged within 60 days of an election who return to the state too late to register, to vote in the upcoming election. - Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, state and Federal offices.

Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a Uniformed Service member, and is a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Nevada's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state. The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

The most persistent problem which continues to face New York military and overseas voters is the extremely short period of time these voters have to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to inadequate ballot transit time in emergency situations, the fact is that insufficient ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to ensuring timely delivery of absentee ballots to all who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. This is why it is necessary to allow a minimum of 45 days transit time for absentee ballots.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that New York allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member, who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that New York provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your state in the normal time frame. A voter could request a state write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot from the state in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide state write-in absentee ballots.

This state write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military stationed overseas and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular ballot from the state. They do not know in advance that they need the FWAB. However, if the regular ballot from the state does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the state deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a state write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, state, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting only for Federal offices. There are presently nine states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. The ballot will be available 90 to 180 days before the election.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the State Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the New York election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application.

This language is usually found under the chapter in the New York Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints. Currently, forty-nine states allow electronic transmission of election materials.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. We enlist your support once again this year in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all parts of the process. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Please consider using modern technology in the absentee voting process. We encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for registration and ballot request, the blank ballot to the voter, and the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. A county board of elections official may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or the state deadline, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where there is a short time frame for ballot transmission, it is recommended that New York's Chief Election Official (CEO) have the authority in law to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Ohio's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Fifteen states have granted emergency authority to the Chief Election Official.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

We realize that Ohio enacted legislation to provide for electronic transmission of the FPCA for ballot request and electronic transmission of the blank ballot to voters in the Uniformed Services.

We encourage expanded use of this alternative to all UOCAVA citizens to include electronic transmission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration, electronically sending the ballot to the voter and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise a citizen.

Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. An auditor or clerk may send and receive absentee ballot applications and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expansion of Late Registration Procedures

We realize that Ohio allows late registration for discharged military personnel and their spouses. However, we recommend expanding this alternative to allow persons recently separated from overseas employment and their family members to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may not know in which state they will live. Others may move to a new state and not meet the state's residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment aboard. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

A person who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services by separation from the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable such persons to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second generation citizens who are subject to U.S. income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in Federal elections. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector.

Waiver of Registration for Citizens Covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

While we realize that registration is waived in Ohio for members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their family members, we encourage expansion of this provision to include all groups covered in the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) definitions. The following is an extract from the UOCAVA, 42 USC 1973ff-6. Section 107. Definitions:

"(1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --

(A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;

(B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and

(C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote "

and

"(7) "uniformed services" means the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service, and the commissioned corps of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration".

The sample language below will accommodate this provision.

Sample Language

If you are a citizen voting under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, your registration is waived and you may request an absentee ballot by submitting an FPCA so it is received by the county board of elections not later than 3 days before the election.

State Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend Ohio provide a state write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the state write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from your State in the normal time frame. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently seven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or family member and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a state write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period.

For Oklahoma, our 2004-2005 Voting Assistance Guide states that local election officials mail out ballots approximately 30 days before an election. While we commend you for expanding the time between the state run-off election and the General Election, Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas. Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

During a period of a declared emergency or other situation where a short time-frame for ballot transmission is created, it is recommended that Oregon's Chief Election Official have the authority to designate alternate methods for handling absentee ballots to ensure voters have the opportunity to exercise their right to vote. The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. Thirteen states have provided this authority to their Chief Election Official.

Sample Language

If a national or local emergency or other situation arises which makes substantial compliance with the provisions of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act impossible or unreasonable, such as a natural disaster or an armed conflict involving United States Armed Forces, or mobilization of those forces, including State National Guard and Reserve components of this state, the Chief Election Official may prescribe, by emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the state.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

Return of Voted Ballot by Close of Polls on Election Day

Pennsylvania continues to require voters covered under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) to return their voted ballot by 5:00 p.m. on the Friday before the election. This deadline is earlier than the deadline for voting if these citizens were voting in person. This could present a problem, particularly for citizens stationed overseas, where mail is frequently delayed and unpredictable. In these cases, these voters need every day available to them prior to the close of polls to ensure timely return of ballots. For this reason we recommend that Pennsylvania accept voted ballots from all UOCAVA citizens until the close of polls on election day. Only four other states require the return of the voted ballot before election day.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Pennsylvania allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many of these citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in your state just prior to an election. This time frame does not meet your state's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a state's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular state deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, faxing has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped to ensure that these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

Throughout an election year cycle, various circumstances exist that require the need for this alternative procedure in order for citizens to vote. The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. We request your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission of absentee ballots in Pennsylvania. With proper controls, this would cut the ballot transit time at least in half, reduce a major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility regarding election materials.

Please consider expanding the use of modern technology in the absentee voting process. We realize that Pennsylvania allows the submission of the Federal Post Card Application for registration and absentee ballot request. However, Pennsylvania now only allows the electronic transmission of the blank ballot if a person in a designated hostile fire, imminent danger pay, combat zone or qualified hazardous duty area. Further, there is no faxing of the voted ballot in your state. We strongly encourage expanded use of this alternative to include the transmission of the blank ballot by fax to all UOCAVA voters and the acceptance of the voted ballot (to include a waiver of privacy) from all UOCAVA citizens where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them.

Sample Language

An applicant, who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, a family member, or a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Election officials may receive absentee ballot applications, send blank ballots and accept voted ballots from eligible electors via electronic transmission.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special and primary elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During the 1996 primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven other states have legislatively expanded its use beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the state for general elections and Federal offices if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the state's registration requirements;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted;

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

The adoption of this initiative would save the state money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, and primary elections for local, state and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the state;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate state election official not less than 30 days before the election or by the registration deadline established by the state.

Enfranchise Citizens Who Have Never Resided in the U.S.

There are many U.S. citizens who have never resided in a state and under current law are not entitled to vote. These are usually first or second-generation citizens who are subject to U.S.

income tax and all other requirements of citizens. Except for the fact that they have never resided in a state, they would be eligible to vote in elections for Federal office. Some local election officials make exceptions and allow these citizens to vote. Thirteen states have passed legislation allowing these citizens to claim the legal residence of a parent. We recommend these citizens be allowed to vote in elections for Federal offices where either parent is eligible to vote under UOCAVA.

Sample Language

If a U.S. citizen outside the United States who has never lived in the United States has a parent who is a qualified elector, then that person is eligible to register and vote where his or her parent is a qualified elector

Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

Puerto Rico 2005 Legislative Initiatives and Sample Language

Notary Requirement

Current Puerto Rico election law requires that the FPCA and the ballot return envelope must be sworn to by a person authorized to administer oaths. Depending on the category of UOCAVA voter, the oath must be administered by a commissioned officer, the highest officer on board ship, an official in the school registrar's office, a notary public, or a consular officer. The notary requirement creates problems for individuals living overseas where such services are difficult and expensive, if not impossible, to obtain. Some voters have paid $90 to obtain notary services. In many countries, there are no notaries in their system of jurisprudence. Also, some small military installations may have no commissioned officer assigned. We strongly recommend removal of the notary requirement for all absentee balloting materials. Forty-nine states and territories have eliminated the notary requirement on all election materials.

Sample Language

If a voter is residing outside the United States or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and he or she is a qualified elector and is required to execute an affidavit or form for voter registration or an absentee ballot, he or she may subscribe to a self-administered oath, under penalty of perjury.

Late Registration Procedures

We recommend that Puerto Rico allow persons recently separated from the Uniformed Services or overseas employment, and their family members, to be able to register late or be exempt from registration. Many members of the Uniformed Services and overseas citizens go through a transition period when they first leave the Uniformed Services or overseas employment and may reside in Puerto Rico just prior to an election and this time frame does not meet Puerto Rico's normal residency requirements. Often, the date of discharge or termination of overseas employment and a commonwealth's registration requirement combine to disenfranchise a discharged military member or overseas citizen returning home after employment abroad. Special procedures to allow these persons to register and vote would solve this problem. Twenty-six states and territories currently allow such procedures.

Sample Language

An individual, or accompanying family member who has been discharged or separated from the Uniformed Services, the merchant marine, or from employment outside the territorial limits of the United States, too late to enable him or her to register by the regular commonwealth deadline for registration, shall be entitled to register for the purpose of voting at the next ensuing election after such discharge, separation, or termination of employment.

State Special Write-In Absentee Ballot

We also recommend that Puerto Rico provide a special write-in absentee ballot for all elections. The purpose of the special write-in absentee ballot is to provide a method for voting by military and other persons overseas who, due to military contingencies or special circumstances such as those faced by submariners, Peace Corps volunteers, missionaries or others in remote areas, will be out of communication for extended periods of time and unable to receive the regular ballot from Puerto Rico in the normal time frame. A voter could request a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days in advance and write in the names of the candidates or party preferences. The voter knows in advance that he or she will not be able to receive, vote, and return the regular ballot in time to be counted. Twenty-seven states now provide special write-in absentee ballots.

This special write-in absentee ballot should not be confused with the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) that is prepositioned at Embassies and Consulates, military installations, overseas organizations and corporations. In comparison, the FWAB is generally only available to military members on active duty absent from their voting residence and overseas citizens who have already applied for a regular absentee ballot from the state. If the regular absentee ballot from Puerto Rico does not arrive in sufficient time for the voter to return the voted ballot and meet the deadline, these voters may obtain, vote, and return the FWAB to the local election official.

It is also important to note that a special write-in absentee ballot usually provides a "full" slate of offices to be voted upon including Federal, commonwealth, and local offices. On the other hand, the FWAB generally allows voting for Federal offices. There are presently eleven states that have expanded the use of the FWAB beyond Federal law. The 1995 revised FWAB was designed to accommodate its use beyond the general election and Federal offices only.

Sample Language

If the voter is a U.S. citizen residing outside the United States, or a member of the United States Uniformed Services, merchant marine, or a family member, and a qualified elector, he or she may request, not earlier than 180 days before an election, a special write-in absentee ballot. The voter must submit with the request a statement that provides that due to military or other contingencies that preclude normal mail delivery, the elector cannot vote an absentee ballot during the normal absentee voting period. Puerto Rico will make the ballot available "90 to 180" days before the election.

Expand Use of Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot

Currently the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) may be used only in general elections for Federal offices only. This ballot is prepositioned worldwide at Embassies and Consulates, military installations and overseas organizations and corporations with American membership. By expanding its use to include special, primary and runoff elections for Federal offices, citizens would not be disenfranchised because regular ballots are not received in a timely manner. Frequently, there is insufficient time between the call for a special election and the actual election and between primary and runoff elections. Allowing use of the FWAB in these elections would reduce the possible need for legal action when insufficient time exists for the ballot to be received, voted and returned to be counted. During past primaries, on an ad hoc basis, several states and jurisdictions allowed the FWAB to be used for offices other than Federal offices. Eleven states have legislatively expanded the use of the FWAB for other than Federal offices beyond the Federal law.

In addition, for those citizens that desire to vote in elections for Federal office only, the acceptance of the FWAB transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB would further simplify the process, improve on transit time and help ensure enfranchisement. It should be noted that the information requested on the FWAB transmission envelope is basically the same as the information requested from the voter on the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). We recommend the FWAB transmission envelope and FWAB be accepted simultaneously as a registration form and ballot by the commonwealth for general election and Federal offices if:

- (1) the information submitted complied with the commonwealth's registration requirements;
- (2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and
- (3) the request is received by the appropriate commonwealth election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

The adoption of this initiative would save the commonwealth money and alleviate administrative responsibilities on the part of the local election official.

Sample Language

- Expanded use of the FWAB:

If the voter is residing outside the United States or a member of the United States Uniformed Services or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot in general, special, primary, and run-off elections for local, commonwealth and Federal offices.

- Use of FWAB as a Combined Request for Registration and Ballot Submission:

If the voter is residing outside the United States, or is a member of the United States Uniformed Services, or a family member of a member of the Uniformed Services, and a qualified elector, he or she may use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot (FWAB) transmission envelope as a request for registration simultaneously with the submission of the FWAB if:

(1) the information submitted complies with the registration requirements of the commonwealth of Puerto Rico;

(2) the voter is otherwise eligible to vote absentee in the jurisdiction where the request is submitted; and

(3) the request is received by the appropriate Puerto Rico election official not less than 30 days before the election, or by the registration deadline established by the state, whichever is later.

Reference to the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) in the Commonwealth Election Code

In 1986, Congress updated and consolidated the provisions of the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 and the Overseas Citizens Voting Rights Act of 1975 into the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA). Reference to UOCAVA in the commonwealth's election code will help election officials and interested citizens find guidance to applicable Federal law and increase their familiarity with the statute and its application. Thirty-seven states and territories now reference the UOCAVA in their election code.

This language is usually found under the chapter in the Election Code that makes reference to Federal elections:

It is the intent and purpose of this Legislature that the provisions set forth in this chapter are designed to facilitate the Federal mandate of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA, 42 U.S.C. 1973 ff et. seq.).

Electronic Transmission of Election Materials

Since the 1990 general election, electronic transmission has proven to be a valuable alternative method for facilitating the enfranchisement of military persons and overseas citizens serving their country who may have otherwise been unable to vote. This initiative has helped ensure these citizens were not disenfranchised by allowing them to cast a ballot when they would not otherwise have been able to vote due to time and location constraints.

The basic concept of electronic transmission of election materials is to secure high-speed delivery of election materials to and from the voter and local election officials. Your support in developing the acceptance of electronic transmission for all aspects of the process, with proper controls, would cut the ballot transit time at least in half. This would reduce the major obstacle to voting absentee and allow local election officials more administrative flexibility in preparing election materials.

Although Puerto Rico currently allows electronic transmission of the FPCA, including fax and email, we encourage the use of this alternative to include the electronic transmission of the FPCA for electronically sending the blank ballot to the voter, and accepting the voted ballot from the voter where circumstances would otherwise disenfranchise them. Thirteen states now allow electronic transmission of the FPCA for registering and requesting the absentee ballot, sending the blank ballot, and accepting the voted ballot.

Sample Language

An applicant who is a member of the United States Uniformed Services or the United States merchant marine, a family member, or is a qualified elector living outside the United States, may apply for registration and an absentee ballot by electronic transmission if otherwise qualified to apply for and vote by absentee ballot. Emergency Authority for Chief Election Official

The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission. As an example, in light of the surge of Guard and Reserve forces being deployed, the Chief Election Official can temporarily allow electronics transmission of voting materials for Active Duty Military. Fifteen states and territories have passed legislation giving the Chief Election Official authority to designate alternate methods of handling absentee ballots in emergency situation.

emergency orders or rules, such special procedures or requirements as may be necessary to facilitate absentee voting by those citizens directly affected who otherwise are eligible to vote in the Commonwealth.

The Chief Election Official shall adopt rules describing the emergency powers and the situations in which the powers will be exercised.

The Need for 45-Day Ballot Transit Time

Despite the alternative of mailing the official state blank ballot 45 days before an election if the official ballot is not yet available, Rhode Island military and overseas voters continue to have an extremely short period of time to receive, vote, and return their absentee ballots in order to be counted (21 days) in the regular absentee ballot delivery process. While electronic transmission of election materials offers an alternative to speed ballot transit time, inadequate ballot transit time through the mail remains the primary obstacle to timely delivery of absentee ballots for those who request them. Our post-election surveys and Postal Service statistics indicate that a 45-day transit time is needed for absentee ballots sent through international mail or the military APO/ FPO (overseas) post offices. This round trip transit time is especially necessary because of the remote location of many military personnel and overseas citizens such as sailors and marines aboard ship, airmen and sailors at isolated tracking sites around the world, as well as Department of State personnel and citizen employees of American multinational corporations in remote areas.

Sample Language

For all elections, the official charged with the printing and distribution of ballots and election materials shall print as many absentee ballots as may be necessary as soon as possible after receiving the information concerning candidates and measures to be voted on at an election, and balloting materials shall be mailed not later than the 45th day before the election.

Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA) Coverage and Notary Requirement

Under Section 17-20-6.1, Rhode Island provides that the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA) may be used as a request for an absentee ballot by the following groups under UOCAVA (42 U.S.C. § 1973ff):

(1) A member of the armed forces who is absent from the state by reason of being in active service;

(2) Any person absent from the state in performance of "services intimately connected with military operations" as defined in § 17-20-3(d); and

(3) Any person who is employed outside of the United States as defined in § 17-20-3(c)

In contrast, UOCAVA includes Uniformed Services and overseas citizens defined in Section 107 as follows:

(1) "absent uniformed services voter" means --:

(A) a member of a uniformed service on active duty who, by reason of such active duty, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote;

(B) a member of the merchant marine who, by reason of service in the merchant marine, is absent from the place of residence where the member is otherwise qualified to vote; and:

(C) a spouse or dependent of a member referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B) who, by reason of the active duty or service of the member, is absent from the place of residence where the spouse or dependent is otherwise qualified to vote;

(5) "overseas voter" means --:

(A) an absent uniformed services voter who, by reason of active duty or service is absent from the United States on the date of the election involved;

(B) a person who resides outside the United States and is qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States; or:

(C) a person who resides outside the United States and (but for such residence) would be qualified to vote in the last place in which the person was domiciled before leaving the United States.

Rhode Island law excludes UOCAVA citizens who mark 8.d. on the FPCA from the procedures of 17-20-6.1, which waives registration, and subjects them to additional procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 by requiring them to submit the Mail Ballot Application and affidavit prior to mailing the absentee ballot. This introduces additional steps and mailing time into the process and the requirement to obtain notarial services to exercise their right to vote. In many countries, voters have paid up to $90 for these services and other countries do not have notaries in their system of jurisprudence.

Thus, we request that Rhode Island include those overseas citizens currently covered by these separate procedures in Section 17-21.1-3 under Section 17-20-6.1 to allow these citizens to use the FPCA to request an absentee ballot in the same way as the rest of the UOCAVA citizens. As an alternative, Rhode Island could include the Mail Ballot Application along with the ballot to register the applicant and have the citizen attest to a self-administered oath on the form, eliminating the requirement for a notary.

The Chief Election Official and the Federal Voting Assistance Program could mutually establish expeditious methods for handling absentee ballots including electronic transmission.

We note that in 2003 Governor Carcieri signed into law legislation naming the Secretary of State (SoS) the Chief State Election Official in Rhode Island and that your Legislative Implementation Report for 2004 indicates that the SoS intends to introduce legislation to provide the necessary emergency authority for the SoS as the chief election official. If we can help in this effort, please let us know.
