Where We Live

OKLAHOMA

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS
112th Congress (January 2011–January 2013)

The Constitution mandates Congress be equal in representation. Based on decennial census population data, each state has at least one Representative, no matter how small its population. There (1941) statistics of the population has been based on total U.S. population, as that the average population per Representative has not been possible to obtain between one state and any other. Congress from the number of voting Representatives at each apportionment. States determine the district boundaries. The first House of Representatives in 1795 had 435. There are now only 435 Representatives. American Samoa, The District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.
