Boy Scouts from Troop 126 in Belleville were on base June 8 to participate in a flag disposal ceremony in honor of Flag Day and to enjoy a cookout provided by the 179th Aerospace Ground Equipment shop.

As a tradition each year, Master Sgt. Roger Williams of the 179th AGE shop, organizes a flag disposal ceremony and takes in donations from the local community to properly dispose of them. This year, Senior Master Sgt. Craig Dotson, an adult leader for Troop 126 and member of the 179th AGE shop helped organize the ceremony.

The organizers received a record number of more than 500 flags from the surrounding communities and Veterans Service Organizations to include Prisoner of War/Missing in Action, state of Ohio, and American flags.

"We should listen to veteran's music so that we burn them with honor and respect," said one of the Boy Scout troops during the safety briefing that morning.

The group then moved to a designated area of the base where an American flag was raised at the site while patriotic music played in the background. Williams then explained that there would be two burn pits, one for the blue field of the flag and the other for the red and white stripes. The Boy Scouts then helped to cut up the flags and separate them into their respective burn pits. After all the flags had been properly disposed of, the Boy Scouts moved into the AGE shop for a cookout lunch and received goodie bags with patriotic memorabilia.

When asked if the Boy Scouts would receive a tab for this, Randy Echelberger, Scout Master for Troop 126, replied that they would not receive a tab but that it was a great community service activity for them.

179th Gives Back for Earth Day Story by: Airman 1st Class Stephanie Carroll Photos by: Staff Sqt. Joe Harwood

On Wednesday, May 11, members from the 179th Airlift Wing spent the day around Richland county working on different projects for Earth Day. It was a beautiful, warm sunny day and enlisted members, officers, and even commanders spent time planting flowers, spreading mulch, and cleaning barns.

For this year's Earth Day, volunteers partnered with the North End Community Improvement Collaborative, or the NECIC, to help with their community gardening program. Such new projects involved things such as building handicap accessible flower beds at Richland New Hope.

Earth Day volunteers worked to create three new gardens and prepare the five existing gardens for this year's planting.
All together, there were fourteen different projects at thirteen sites in Mansfield, Ontario, Lexington, Bellville, and Shelby. Seventy-seven total volunteers came out to help elementary schools, the Raemelton equestrian center and the different community gardens programs.

The guard members worked with children and other members of the community. The children were very excited to be helping the environment and didn't hesitate to get their hands dirty. Many of the guard members got to spend the day digging in the dirt side by side with their own children.

Earth Day is an annual event for the 179th Airlift Wing and this was their 12th year participating. With the new missions the base has taken on, participation was down this year. Base commanders are hoping to see more members reach out in the upcoming years.

There are always many different Earth Day projects to take part in and volunteering is a fun, and rewarding way to give back to the community.

What is Alcoholism:

In Italy, he/she is called an "alcoolisto." In France, he/she has the title of an "alcoolique." In Germany, he/she is labeled as an "alkoholiker." But for the rest of the world, he/she is more popularly known as an alcoholic, or to be more precise, a person suffering from alcoholism. Alcoholism is defined as the excessive and repeated use of alcoholic beverages, usually considered to be compulsive and thus an addiction and a disease. Alcoholism has plagued society since ancient times. But it was only in 1849 when Swedish physician Magnus Huss was able to integrate chronic alcoholism in modern day medical studies. Huss was also the first to name the disease in his essay entitled "Alcoholismus Chronicus."

Today, there are around 5,400,000 people in the United States alone who are suffering from alcoholism. 4,500,000 of them are males while 900,000 are females.

Roots of Alcoholism:

Theories vary as to whether alcoholism is a physiological or a psychosomatic disease. Some experts claim that the electrical brain waves in people suffering from alcoholism are different from those who are non-alcoholics, thus proving that alcoholism is more of a disease that is physical in origin. According to them, alcoholism has a negative effect on our neurotransmitters, which are the cells that carry emotions to our different senses.

There are other experts however who claim that alcoholism is a psychological illness, as overdependence is more of a mental defect.

A few, on the other hand, are of the belief that alcoholism is hereditary in nature. Their studies show that people whose parent or parents are alcoholics, have a greater danger of falling victim to the ills of alcoholism. They are conducting constant research to pinpoint the genes that increase risks of acquiring alcoholism.

Despite the seeming uncertainty about the exact origin of alcoholism, one fact remains clear. Alcoholism is a real disease the poses real dangers to real people in the real world.

Problems Caused by Alcoholism:

Inveterate (habitual) drunkenness consists of recurrent intake of alcoholic beverages to the point that the drinker becomes dependent.
This dependence makes him ignore the mental and physical dangers caused by alcoholism.
Among these dangers of alcoholism are:

- damages on the brain, heart, liver and intestines
- delirium tremens, which is an extreme delusional state characterized by repeated hallucinations
- susceptibility to accidents, as alcoholism impairs alertness

and judgment

- problems at work caused by diminished productivity and efficiency
- problems at home caused by the aforementioned impairment of judgment that often leads to low tolerance levels and irrational conduct

How to Treat Alcoholism

Throughout the years, experts have developed effective forms of medication and behavioral treatment methods to combat alcoholism and empower alcoholics to stop drinking and remain sober. Medication may come in the form of multivitamin supplements or hormones that would strengthen the endocrine system, which has been long believed to be directly related to the development of alcoholism.

Behavioral treatments include one-on-one counseling and group therapies that would allow the patient to accept that he is indeed suffering from alcoholism. From his acceptance, goals are formulated and a program is devised to achieve them, either with the patient as an individual, or with the patient as a member of a support group.
