RC TALKING POINTS

NAVY RESERVE: READY NOW. ANYTIME, ANYWHERE

Monthly Communication Priority: Cost Effective Force

Our ability to deliver a ready and accessible force and to provide valued capabilities is one of the foundational reasons for our existence. We deliver full-time excellence on a periodic, part-time basis, when and where needed. Working with the active component, we optimize the Navy Total Force.

- We leverage the active components strengths, such as training and schools, bases and facilities, IT infrastructure, headquarters staffs, and much more. The additional overhead of executing our program is minimal and most importantly, we ensure our Sailors are doing real and meaningful work for the Navy and Marine Corps, or joint forces.
- The vast majority of Sailors have transitioned from the active component after an initial period that usually includes extensive and therefore expensive training, including Recruit Training, A and C Schools, nuclear power training, officer accession programs, aviation pipeline training and much more. The Navy Reserve provides the ability to preserve and access the investment made by the Navy in acquiring these critical skill sets.
- The Navy Reserve provides great value to our nation's defense because Navy Reservists deliver valuable operational support at a minimal cost.
- When a Navy Reserve Sailor provides operational support, it is usually for a specified period of time to accomplish a specific task or mission. When the requirement/mission is completed, we return to our civilian employers and off the Navy payroll.
- As the Navy balances requirements, risk, and cost, it is important to remember there are no Navy Reserve requirements – only Navy Total Force requirements that can be carried out by the active component, the reserve component, or a combination of both.
- America will continue to invest in active and reserve components of our Navy only if the Nation perceives we are ready, accessible, and cost-effective. We must be good stewards of the lives and resources our Nation entrusts to us and worthy of our Force Motto:

Ready Now. Anytime, Anywhere.
