Bullying kills.

One mother found that out the hard way: when her 13-year-old daughter killed herself after a Missouri woman—posing as a young boy on the MySpace Web site—was accused of bullying the young girl.

In the United States' first cyberbullying trial, a federal judge was scheduled to sentence the 50year-old Lori Drew on Monday for her part in the hoax on three misdemeanor counts of accessing computers without authorization. According to U.S. media reports, the sentencing has been postponed until July 2.

While many consider the case an extreme example, any form of bullying can have dire consequences. And there are many forms, said, Lauri Kenney, Caserma Ederle's high school

Kenney said the Department of Defense have

Riding rails for trains

Members of the Vicenza military community were apprehended by Italian police this month because they were walking on the train tracks. Not only is this dangerous; it is against the law. European trains run at high speeds and often their arrival cannot be heard until it is too late.

In addition, taking a shortcut through the Stanga neighborhood - over the fence and across the railroad tracks separating either side of Strada dei Pizzolati - to get to the Villaggio housing area is not an option.

The correct way is: exit Gate 2, turn right on Viale della Pace and go to the first roundabout; take the sidewalk along the underpass that connects Viale della Pace to Via Martiri delle Foibe; this runs to the other side of Strada dei Pizzolati.

March and continues through July 15, takes a more personal approach.

"The training is conducted in small, squad-sized elements and is set up in a way to simulate a conversation about suicide and its risk factors among employees. It is aimed at decreasing the stigma associated with seeking help," said Betsy Walters, USAG Vicenza's health promotion coordinator.

Called "Shoulder to Shoulder: No Soldier Stands Alone," the training picks up where the "Beyond the Front" training conducted during a USAREUR-wide suicide prevention stand-down in March left off. Small-unit leaders and first-line supervisors will conduct the training.

"Phase I provided ways to intervene in order to prevent suicidal behavior," explained B. Joy Summerlin, Well-Being and Quality of Life program manager for the USAREUR personnel division.

I with a more deliberate and personal approach to training."

"Phase II is set up in a way that the supervisor can really make it relevant to the Soldier. The facilitator's guide lists several scenarios for the trainer to chose from that revolve around different points in the training schedule- prior to deployment, during deployment/ employment, and following deployment," said Walters.

"The intent is to stress the ACE response (Ask Care Escort) and to engage the group in a dialogue about risk factors," she said. "The video uses real situations to once again work on decreasing the stigma associated with seeking help."

Soldiers and Department of the Army civilian employees must attend the course. Contractors and family members are invited to participate as well, according

"Phase II is intended to augment Phase to the Army policy. Directors will notify their employees when training will take

> "This is not a scenario-based (presentation)," explained Chaplain (Capt.) David Montgomery, V Corps Special Troops Battalion chaplain. "This is a follow-up to the training that the Soldiers received in the first phase. It is a straight 13 minutes of guys and gals sharing their stories; real-life experiences with suicide, firsthand."

> The chaplain said among the leaders who tell their stories is Maj. Gen. Mark Graham, commander of 1st U.S. Army's Training Division (West) and Fort Carson, Colo., who talks about how he and his wife coped with the suicide of their son, Mark.

> "They are coming at it from a parent's perspective. They talk about what it did to them," he said. "It talks about what they had to wrestle with."

Montgomery said chaplains, health care professionals and subject-matter experts from USAREUR, the Installation Management Command-Europe and the Europe Regional Medical Command are sharing resources and will back up training instructors to increase the program's effectiveness.

One of the primary goals of the training is to convince those who may be contemplating suicide to get help, Montgomery said, noting that sometimes Soldiers are afraid their reputations and careers will be damaged if they ask for help. The captain said the small group sessions will allow participants to talk about suicide in a safe environment, but stressed that they are not designed to be group counseling or therapy sessions. "With the smaller groups will have a more intimate setting and will give individuals the opportunity to talk in an environment where you do not have 200 other people."

YEAR OF THE NCO Quality leadership makes Army best in world

f you asked 10 Soldiers to define leadership in their own words, you would probably get 10 different

Most NCOs know the Army definition from Field Manual 6-

22: "the process of influencing people by providing purpose, direction, and motivation while operating to accomplish the mission and improving the organization."

What exactly does that mean? What does it entail?

In short, it means accomplishing the mission while making sure you take care of your Soldiers.

That concept, however, implies a lot and evolves continuously.

The Army's leadership nucleus is BE-KNOW-DO. "BE" are the values and attributes which define and shape a leader. "KNOW" is the knowledge, whether it is tactical, technical or organizational, a leader imparts on his subordinates. "DO" are the actions of leaders that have a significant impact on what their subordinates do, and how they do it.

decisions on the battlefield.

Leadership is what makes our Army the best in NCOs must be the world. NCOs play a crucial part in establishing making strategic quality leadership, now more than ever, as we are engaged in a war with an agile enemy.

> NCOs must be flexible leaders, as team leaders and squad leaders are making strategic decisions on the battlefield. As NCOs, we must ensure we are the leaders our Soldiers deserve – starting with the basics.

Most Soldiers would agree that discipline is the foundation of any great unit, and NCOs are the enforcers. This includes the simplest of tasks – ensuring Soldiers are in the right uniform at the right place and right time, and retraining your squad until tasks are done to standard. It is impossible to say that you are a good leader without enforcing standards and instilling discipline.

As a battalion command sergeant major, it is my responsibility to oversee these critical tasks within the battalion. However, I cannot do it alone. It takes a combined effort of all NCOs in the unit to maintain standards and enforce discipline.

As first-line supervisors, junior leaders must take the lead, because they are where the rubber meets the road.

So, in the "Year of the NCO," I ask you to focus on the basics and give your Soldiers the leadership they deserve.

During her interview with the Mediterranean District board, Sperl was asked about her focus as a teacher.

Sperl is part of a program helping Livorno students participate in "Book of Hope"a project geared at supporting less fortunate children in Uganda.

> Sperl comes from a family of teachers and in her youth she wasn't sure she wanted to follow her relatives' path.

"It took me a long time to take the decision to become a teacher, but now I can say that this is the best decision I ever made," said Sperl. "I learn so much from each of the children that come into my class, it is unbelievable."

Sperl said being part of DoDDS and having the opportunity to travel the world

"There is nothing more rewarding for an art teacher than having the possibility to travel and see art masterpieces" she said. "Italy is the center of art; I could not ask for a better destination."

According to Department of Defense Education Activity's (DoDEA) press release, the DoDEA Teacher of the Year Program recognizes and promotes excellence in education. Sperl and other district winners will compete for the regional title.

Once the children realize that I am a person, just like them and I can make mistakes, they let their guard down and this is the beginning of a productive relationship.

School officials urge students to step up, help solve bullying

Dependent Schools-Europe has a zero tolerance policy on bullying and she and school officials are working together to stomp out the behavior in Vicenza.

"Some examples are calling people names; leaving others out of a group; creating rumors, gossip, physical fights. At Vilseck Middle High School we have worked very hard on educating our seventh and eighth grade students on how and what bullying can do to someone," said Kenney.

"Our school counselors, school psychologist, ASACs and MFLC assisted with the education process," she said. "A teacher volunteered to organize a parent task force to educate parents on all topics including bullying."

The task force consist of teachers, parents, students, PTSA and SAC and students are using the mediators to representatives.

"The biggest and the most impact in battling the bullying problem is teaching students to step up and solve the problem themselves," she said. "VM/HS and Vicenza Elementary School trained students to be peer mediators to assist other students in problem solving.

"We have found this to be successful solve all problems," said Kenney.

She suggested parents and students report all activities of bullying.

"It is difficult to give names, because students fear they will be bullied even more," she said. "If we all stand together and say "STOP", then it will work. The effects of bullying last a lifetime and move into other parts of a person's life."

"She was holding my hand. She had a way of curling her toes around my fingers," said Lorenzana. "I told her I loved her, and he started the injection, and she just drifted off."

Lorenzana said that she talked with Sasha for a long time before the vet came in and administered three shots.

She said that she told Sasha

Then she told Sasha when it's her turn that they would come and get her.

"It took me up to yesterday to get the Sasha, a Samoyed breed originally from Siberia, spent the last several years with Lorenzana at Caserma Ederle, boosting the morale of local troops. She was born July 5, 1996, in Salt Lake City, Utah, and from the very beginning Lorenzana was there, calling Sasha by her name. Sasha is survived by another Samoyed,

Special to The Outlook

USAG Vicenza exceeded its Army Emergency Relief campaign goal of $45,000 in contributions by more than $15,000 for a grand total of $60,351.

The campaign kicked off at Davis Hall March 16 with various community members present to hear comments from the garrison commander and enjoy light refreshments and cake.

"After that, it was all work. Campaign workers got busy and began informing everyone they saw about the role of Army Emergency Relief and how the organization has helped tens of thousands of Soldiers and their family members with emergency loans and grants," said Kent Thompson, USAG Vicenza Financial Readiness program manager.

In 2008, AER provided $83 million to 72,000 Soldiers and families. Twenty-four percent of that amount was in the form of tax-free grants and 76 percent was in interest-free loans.

"From our community alone

we were able to assist 82 people with $104,832.09 in loans and grants," said Thompson, also the AER officer.

To meet the financial needs of service members Armywide, AER spent every dollar in donations received from 2003-2007 plus $51.5 million of investment capital, he noted.

"In other words, we take in far less than we give out, yet are still able to assist Soldiers and their families, retirees, widows and widowers with valid emergency requests for assistance," said Thompson.

In addition to meeting emergency needs, AER also provides free college money to dependent children of Soldiers and retirees, as well as scholarships to spouses of active duty Soldiers.

Scholarships increased in 2008 to $13 million for these two categories.

Community briefs

COLA survey may save you money

The web-based annual utilities survey is aimed at determining monthly utilities rates for service members stationed in Italy.

Service members residing in privately leased quarters should expect to compute monthly averages for expenses pertaining to utilities or costs associated with moving in to a new home.

Utilities expenses to consider include: electricity, gas, fuel oil, coal, firewood, water for residence, drinking water, trash, maintenance and repairs, police protection and residence tax.

Moving-in housing expenses include: major appliances, utility hook-up charges, security/safety items, initial services and fees, and miscellaneous expenses.

A decision to increase the utilities rate by the PDTATAC may raise your standard of living and reduce the possibility of incurring a balance for unpaid utilities at the end of your lease. Call 634-6299 for details.

Swim assessments begin Saturday

All youth, excluding Parent & Me participants, interested in taking swim lessons this summer with SKIES Unlimited must complete an assessment/registration packet and be assessed for swimming lessons on one of the following dates:

he friendly 'mom's match' is a result of the Youth Services girls' basketball team that played an Italian girls' team in March. "I was approached by a mother of one of the Italian players who thought it would be a lot of fun to get a group of women players from Caserma Ederle to compete against a group of women parents from the Italian team," said Julia Sibilla, who's daughter Kiki played on the YS team. "I talked to several women and we ran a notice in The Outlook. Right now, we have about a dozen dedicated players on the Blue Belles team, most of whom have played basketball at one time or another. I think people will be surprised to see who the stars are, but they'll have to come out and watch; I'm not giving any names away." The game starts at 4 p.m. in the fitness center gym and is followed by a barbecue on the patio of the Central Processing Facility. Volunteers are sought to help at the barbecue and to bring a dish to share. For details, call Julia Sibilla at 634-7500 or e-mail Julia.Sibilla@eur.army.mil.
