Familiar face takes over as 94th Operations Group commander

By Master Sgt. P.N. Brown
Public Affairs

Bringing a wealth of knowledge and experience to the command, Col. Steve Clayton took the reigns of the 94th Operations Group in an assumption of command ceremony Nov. 5.

Col. Heath Nuckolls, 94th Airlift Wing commander, welcomed Colonel Clayton back to Dobbins.

"He's bringing some real expertise to the Ops Group," said Colonel Nuckolls. "I'm happy to have him back and I know he will do a tremendous job for the wing."

The ceremony, held at the fuel cell hangar, ushered in a new era for the unit, but one with some familiar ground. This isn't Colonel Clayton's first time with Dobbins ARB or the 94th OG. He was the deputy commander for a short time in 1999 and then he served with the 700th Airlift Squadron as their operations officer until August 2004.

He will take the helm of his new command from Col. Brett Clark who accepted a new position at Pope Air Force Base, N.C. after a short term as the commander of the group.

Colonel Clayton, who's last assignment was the 911th Operations Group commander, Pittsburgh International Airport Air Reserve Station, Pa., has big plans for the group and is excited about the new command.

Colonel Clayton wished a warm welcome to his old comrades and friends and made a promise to the group as he assumed command. "I promise to get the best training that we can get and to continue to support each and every one of you."

Prior to joining the 94th OG, Colonel Clayton served in a number of positions to include Maxwell AFB, Ala., Little Rock AFB, Okla., and Keesler AFB, Miss., to name a few, and held a number of positions to include scheduling, current operations and operations officer.

He entered active duty through the Officers' Training School at Lackland AFB, Texas, and was commissioned in December 1983. Following his commissioning, Colonel Clayton attended undergraduate pilot training at Williams AFB, Ariz.

Colonel Clayton served as a C-130 instructor pilot and chief of current operations until he left active duty. The colonel then transitioned into the reserve flying the C-130H aircraft at Maxwell AFB.

Dobbins mourns loss of valued team member to sudden illness

By Senior Airman Micah Garbarino
Public Affairs

Team Dobbins lost a valued member on Nov. 9 when Fay Staton, the mail clerk for the Individual Mobilization Augmentee Travel office here, passed away of a sudden illness at her home in Acworth, Ga.

"Fay loved her job, she worked real hard. She wasn't afraid of meeting new people and knew everyone by name," said Patricia Bivens, customer service supervisor at IMA Travel who worked with Ms. Staton for 13 years.

Ms. Staton was active outside of work as well, heavily involved in volunteer work with the March of Dimes and her church.

"She was a March of Dimes baby herself, and she was very proud of that," said Ms. Bivens.

Ms. Staton was interviewed for an article in the April 2000 Minuteman. After being born premature, her parents were told she would only survive about 15 minutes, but she beat the odds and survived. She had a strong desire to help others and be a good mother to her daughter, Lisa.

"I've cared about people all my life," said Ms. Staton in her interview. "The appreciation that I receive from helping others ... and encouraging others makes me feel good."

Team Dobbins will miss the presence of a member who always put others ahead of herself despite her own challenges.

"She was always looking out for others. She was a very kind person who would do anything for anyone," said Ms. Bivens.

OSI looks for reserve recruits

The Air Force Office of Special Investigations is recruiting staff sergeants and technical sergeants to serve as special agents in the Air Force Reserve's Individual Mobilization Augmentee Program.

Current reservists or Airmen leaving active duty may apply for the duty.

Accepted applicants will attend the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center and the Air Force Special Investigations Academy, both in Glynco, Ga.

"This is an excellent opportunity for junior NCOs to enter the exciting special agent career field," said Lt. Col. Matthew Killoran, OSI Reserve Affairs Program manager. "Not only will they receive world-class training, but the wealth of experience they will obtain with OSI is invaluable."

Recruits begin their training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center with an 11-week course called the

Dobbins spouse walks over breast cancer in a three day fundraiser

By Debbie Brinley
Wife of Maj. Robert Brinley
622nd Regional Support Group

We did it! Maja Knighton, wife of Col. Doug Knighton, MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., and I walked the annual Atlanta Three-Day Breast Cancer 60-mile walk. It was three days of viewing the world as it should be.

We formed new friendships, shared stories, received numerous acts of kindness from strangers along our route and endured sore feet and muscles.

There were 2,250 people walking, a volunteer crew of 350 people and 57 survivors walking with us.

The oldest participant was 78 and the youngest was 16. Over $5,800,000 was raised before the walk and more money is coming in.

It all started with the emotional opening ceremony at North Point Mall in Alpharetta and walking our way to the ending of day one in Duluth where we made camp at Rogers Bridge Park. We woke up to a frosty day on day two, but it didn't deter us from walking through communities from Duluth to Norcross and back to our camp.

Day three we woke up to cold and rain, but by mid-morning the rain had subsided and beautiful weather set in. We set out from Dunwoody, passed through Chamblee, into Buckhead and ended up in Piedmont Park. Support from the community was overwhelming. We were cheered on along the route by family members, friends and members of the community.

They passed out candy, stickers, flags, hugs and most important of all tissues for our emotional responses. Every word of encouragement and smile made the miles pass more quickly. Even firefighters from nearby fire stations came out to cheer us on.

Closing ceremonies celebrated our commitment to making a difference in the fight against breast cancer. The money raised will help the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation and the National Philanthropic Trust Breast Cancer Fund save lives and will go for vital breast cancer research, education, screening and treatment.

Criminal Investigator Training Program. Other federal investigative agencies also send recruits to the training.

The program provides basic investigative training in law, interviewing, informants, defensive tactics, emergency driving, evidence processing, firearms, search and seizure, arrest techniques, report writing, testifying, and surveillance. Students participate in physical training several times a week.

After this program, students receive eight weeks of training in OSI-specific coursework, such as organization and mission, forensics, interrogations, military law, ethics, computer and environmental crimes, and fraud investigations. Other topics include:

- Investigative responsibility and jurisdiction
- Crimes against property and persons (physical and sexual)
- Role of investigative experts
- Counterintelligence collections
- Force-protection programs

Domestic violence, restraining orders, criminal convictions compromise member's ability to possess firearms

By Maj. Manubir S. Arora
22nd Air Force, legal officer

When you think of serving in the military, you think about soldiers and Airmen carrying weapons as a basic part of their official duties. However, the ability to carry weapons was restricted for some members by what is known as the Lautenberg Amendment to the Gun Control Act of 1968. While the Lautenberg Amendment became effective 10 years ago, it seems that many of our military members don't understand the full extent of this law.

First and foremost, anyone with a felony conviction or a misdemeanor conviction for domestic violence cannot possess or receive a firearm or ammunition. The amendment applies to both military and privately owned firearms and ammunition. More interesting is the fact that this law makes it an offense for anyone – including supervisors and commanders — to issue a firearm or ammunition to a member who has a domestic violence conviction.

Under Department of Defense policy, the definition of firearm or ammunition does not include major weapon systems or crew-served weapons such as tanks, missiles and aircraft.

If you have a felony conviction, regardless of the sentence imposed you can't carry a weapon. However, the misdemeanor domestic violence conviction encompasses a lot of territory. Domestic violence is defined as violence against a current spouse, former spouse, someone you share a child with, the child itself — if you are parent or guardian — or someone who is cohabitating and as such serves as a de facto parent or guardian — a live-in "friend."

It doesn't stop there. Outside the criminal arena, if you are under a civil court restraining order based on your threatening a child, spouse or partner, you can't possess or be given a firearm or ammunition. Restraining orders are issued by civil courts quite commonly — especially in contested divorce cases, child custody battles and maybe even for a messy break-up.

On the military side, a conviction does not include, Article 15s and summary court-martial convictions.

On the civilian front, a conviction does not include deferred prosecutions or judgments that have been expunged or set-aside.

If these terms don't sound familiar to you then good, if they do sound familiar, call your attorney as soon as possible to figure out if you have any issues under the Lautenberg Amendment. Remember, you are under an obligation to report this to your supervisor.

Bottom line, the Lautenberg Amendment makes it

Airmen at McGuire AFB, N.J. load M16s onto an aircraft in preparation for a deployment exercise. Some servicemembers may not be eligible to handle firearms. The Lautenberg Amendment affects servicemembers who have been convicted of a felony, have instances of domestic violence or a restraining order against them.

a felony for anyone convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence to ship, transport, possess or receive firearms or ammunition. There is no exception for military personnel engaged in official duties. The amendment also makes it a felony for anyone to sell or issue a firearm or ammunition to a person with such a conviction. This includes commanders and non-commissioned officers who furnish weapons or ammunition to Airmen knowing, or having reason to believe, they have a qualifying conviction

Celebrate diversity by getting involved in ethnic observances throughout the year

By Capt. Anjanette Blunt
94th Airlift Wing,
Military Equal Opportunity chief

The primary role of MEO personnel is to provide staff support to the wing commander by processing formal and informal complaints of sexual harassment and unlawful discrimination with respect to the protected categories of color, national origin, race, religion and gender. Our office provides informational training about our services, personnel briefings and sexual harassment training. Another big part of our mission includes diversity training, which promotes ethnic observances on our installation.

Observances are conducted to publicly celebrate and acknowledge the continuous achievements of all Americans, as well as to enhance awareness, mutual respect and understanding of various cultures. Maintaining a respectful attitude towards others, sensitivity towards their ethnicity and tolerance for their cultural beliefs are important behaviors not only in the military, but around the world.

November was Native American Heritage Month.

Observances enhance cross-cultural and cross-gender awareness as well as promote harmony within our culture. This is extremely important for Department of Defense personnel because we are so diverse – men and women, civilians and military with a great mixture of different religious practices, political views, races and ethnicities. One preventative way of riding our organizational climates of discrimination and intolerance is organizing or participating in ethnic observances. There is no better way to build cultural tolerance and/or to avoid ethnically offensive behavior than learning about other cultures. Get to know more about your fellow Airmen. The message is simple — get excited and get involved.

If you are interested in learning more about ethnic observances, visit the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute website at: www.patrick.af.mil/deomi/deomi.htm.

Bridging the gap

*By Master Sgt. P.N. Brown
Public Affairs*

Like a bridge over troubled water this bridge was built over the troubled traffic area of South Cobb Drive. The new motorway linking Dobbins Air Reserve Base to the Navy/Marine Reserve Center, fitness center and neighboring joint use areas opened here Nov. 9th with an official ribbon cutting ceremony and symbolic drive over.

"The overpass is a great benefit not only for the base, but also for the community," said Col. Heath Nuckolls, 94th Airlift Wing commander, citing traffic, safety, and security issues that the bridge will solve.

The 6,000 foot bridge was two plus years in the planning and making. The first proposals were drafted early in 2003 asking for funding and permission for the project.

Its construction and now opening will allow for safer and more efficient movement of traffic to and from the base and over South Cobb Drive, which is a public highway and has much congestion.

The overpass will also cut considerable travel time along the already congested road and eliminate some of the traffic issues faced at the main gate. It will also provide security to areas that had unsecured gates with separate access. By constructing this bridge it has eliminated the need for the existing gate and has reduced security risks at the base.

It was constructed by a local company, C.W. Matthews Contracting Company, Inc. and has 33 street lights installed which are 400 watt high pressure sodium units. It has 4,860 feet of total sidewalk and is 220 feet long and 40 feet wide including the sidewalk.

The bridge was opened for use on the same day as the ceremony. The existing gate #3 or Gym Road gate was officially closed to all traffic both pedestrian and vehicle. This gate will remain closed, locked and barricaded. In the unlikely event the overpass bridge is ever temporarily closed for any reason the Gym Road gate will serve as the alternative entry point to the north side of the installation.

The planning and building of the 6,000 foot bridge took two years from start to finish. Construction started with a simple clearing of the land to its completed stage of 4,860 feet of sidewalk and its 220 feet long 40 feet wide massive overpass at completion. The bridge which crosses over South Cobb Drive will cut down on some of the traffic problems at the main gate of Dobbins ARB.

94th Airlift Wing honors quarterly award winners

Airman 1st Class Robert W. Dennard
94AW Public Affairs

Four servicemembers who have exhibited superior leadership ability and diligence in their work have won servicemember of the quarter awards.

Master Sgt. Andrea M. Symes-Creary, first sergeant, 94th Logistics Readiness Squadron, was awarded First Sergeant of the Quarter.

Master Sgt. Michael P. Morris, aircrew life support supervisor, 700th Airlift Squadron, was awarded Senior NCO of the Quarter.

Tech. Sgt. Conchita L. Floyd, information manager, 94th Command Section, was awarded NCO of the Quarter.

Airman 1st Class Anthony E. Toste, loadmaster, 700th AS, was awarded Airman of the Quarter.

Servicemembers were nominated for the awards by their unit commanders.

First Sgt. Symes-Creary was described as an outstanding senior NCO by Lt. Col. Michael Miralles, 94th LRS commander.

"She inspires the squadron to follow, the backbone that keeps the unit going," he said.

Sergeant Morris was nominated for the Senior NCO award for demonstrating his leadership ability when he stepped up into a supervisory position. Morris filled the role in the absence of a lead shop supervisor, said Col. Kevin J. McNeight, 700th AS commander.

The NCO of the Quarter, Sergeant Floyd, was deployed for 123 days as the NCOIC of the Expeditionary Mission Support Group.

"Sergeant Floyd identified and corrected trouble early for the mission support group. She trained information managers from six squadrons and the Personnel Support for Contingency Operations staff," said Col. Heath Nuckolls, 94th Airlift Wing commander.

Airman of the Quarter, Airman Toste was hailed as an exemplary performer and a noble airman by Colonel McNeight. Recently out of technical school, Airman Toste was the honor graduate for the Basic Loadmaster Course and Mission Qualification Course.

The servicemember of the quarter awards are given once every three months during the fiscal year. These quarterly award winners are now eligible for the servicemember of the year awards, given annually.

Air Force 'actively recruiting,' for more ARTs

By 1st Lt. Torri White
Air Force Reserve Command Public Affairs

In the next three years, the Air Force plans to eliminate thousands of military and civilians positions.

As a result, some displaced people might consider a dual-status job as an air reserve technician in an Air Force Reserve Command unit. ARTs are full-time civilian employees and part-time reservists in the same job.

"ARTs are essential for the operational readiness of their Air Force Reserve units," said Pat Nichols, manager of the AFRC Special Examining Unit at Robins Air Force Base, Ga. "They perform the mission and maintain the day-to-day operations of their units while traditional reservists go to work in their civilian job, pursue an education or stay at home.

"In the Special Examining Unit, we are actively recruiting for the ART program," Ms. Nichols said. "ART positions open daily, and we are working to fill them immediately."

On the military side, they serve as reservists in the Selected Reserve and train with their units at least one weekend a month and during two weeks of annual tour duty. Applicants must be willing and eligible to become an active member of the Selected Reserve or already be a member of the Selected Reserve. Before applying, they should review the Qualification Information Sheets at <http://vrs.afrc.af.mil/ARTJOBS>.

Active-duty Airmen may apply for ART positions within 120 days of their separation date. Mobilized reservists may submit a copy of their mobilization orders or a statement in their application stating they are available within 120 days.

People can find what positions are available by going online at <http://www.usajobs.gov>.
