C-17 conversion preparation continues at wing

By Tech. Sgt. Julie Weckerlein
445th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

A team of experts is now set up in the wing's program integration office as part of vast C-17 Globemaster III preparations at the 445th Airlift Wing and things are moving along.

"The conversion process is very dynamic and moving fast," said Lt. Col. David Marlin, C-17 Program Integration Office chief here. "There are many folks in the wing who are working very hard to ensure that we have everything we need to support the C-17 mission way into the future."

The C-17 is replacing the wing's current C-5 mission. The experts working for the conversion are from a variety of career fields: operations; maintenance and logistics; facilities and representatives from Boeing.

"The original program was four C-17s to start arriving in [the spring of next year] and to start losing the first five of our 10 C-5s," said Colonel Marlin. "We are still on track to do that. Our hopes are that we can deliver the first C-17s in April so that we can start flying in support of our initial pilot and loadmaster qualification training."

New chaplain: Living with the end in mind

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Brian Honett
445th Airlift Wing Chaplain

I'm new to the 445th Airlift Wing, and I just want to take a minute and say thank you. I have a wonderful family--a beautiful wife and three young boys, but I've added to that family here.

Everywhere I go, I have been welcomed with open arms into this family. I am so grateful to be a part of it. I look forward to hopefully being more like the beloved brother rather than the crazy uncle, but I guess only time will tell.

Proverbs 11:4 says "Riches do not profit in the day of wrath, but righteousness delivers from death."

This goes against everything that television, radio, banner ads and billboards tell us. There is always some kind of ad that tells us we need a fancier car, the newest phone, a bigger house and better vacation. If we settle then we are losers. If we can't outdo our neighbors then we should quit.

"Riches do not profit in the day of wrath, but righteousness delivers from death."
- Proverbs 11:4

Again and again, the Bible tells us not to store up our treasure here where it will be destroyed, but to focus on building our heart and mind and character so that we are more Godly.

That's tough when we are told hundreds of times a day to work harder, spend more time at the office so that we can provide a bigger house, better car and the exotic vacation.

If you want help focusing on the eternal rather than the temporary in a world filled with powerful messages, stop by the chaplain's office.

We would love to talk with you. Even if you just want to stop by for a cup of coffee and conversation, I'd love to meet you.

My two cents: Words to live by

By Lt. Col. Chris Cunningham
445th Civil Engineer Squadron commander

The Air Force Reserves is profoundly important to our nation.

The strength and power of the Air Force Reserve evolves from its people, a common thread reaching far around the globe.

We are a unique force and one of our unique facets is our age and experience.

As a commander, I lead troops ranging in age from 19 to 57, a nearly 40-year time span. But regardless of the age, I've picked up some "truths" along my 20 year journey.

Performance matters. But what is written about your performance may matter more. Your performance reports and awards often represent you, when you don't have the opportunity to speak. Pay keen attention. These written appraisals are your voice.

"We are a unique force and one of our unique facets is our age and experience."
- Colonel Cunningham

Fitness. If you are unfit, get fit. There is really no way around the fact. It is in your hands throughout the month and year, and it is something completely in your control.

Be professional. Talk to people like your parents are in the room with you along with the parents of the person you are talking to. You will never find your being unprofessional.

Lead. Leadership is more caught than taught. People watch how you talk and act far more than what you might try to teach and instill.

Career. You are in charge of your career. No one will advocate for you, more than you. When you were young, your parents used to champion your cause. We rarely hear from your parents.

Do your job. Your job is important to the Nation, that's why the job exists in the first place. Learn everything you can about your job. Become the master.

Be humble. While we like having you around, you are not irreplaceable.

Attitude. Attitude is everything.

Be invisible when you need to. Walk with a purpose, no one will stop you.

Combat, hardship pay remain for deployed Airmen

The change from Operation Iraqi Freedom to Operation New Dawn does not affect combat and other hazardous-duty entitlements troops serving in Iraq receive, a Pentagon spokeswoman said today.

Servicemembers deployed to Iraq will still receive hostile fire/imminent danger pay, hardship-duty pay, and incidental expenses.

Some troops will qualify for family separation allowances. Also, all pay for warrant officers and enlisted members is tax exempt, while officers are exempt from taxes for up to $7,611.30 each month they serve in an eligible area.

"These pays compensate a member for the arduous conditions and additional burdens and dangers associated with being deployed to a combat zone," Eileen Lainez said.

For some troops, the additional pay could mean as much as $680 a month, not including tax exemptions, while deployed to a combat zone.

Troop levels in Iraq peaked at nearly 170,000 in 2007 during the height of the troop surge. Today, combat operations there officially end. Fewer than 50,000 troops will remain in Iraq until Dec. 31, 2011, to serve in an advise and assist role for Iraqi security forces.

Troop levels do not affect special pay entitlements, Lainez explained.

"Additional entitlements in Iraq, Afghanistan, Kuwait or other countries in the Arabian Peninsula designated as combat zones, or direct support areas, are not tied to troop levels," she said. "Rather, the additional entitlements members receive are based upon a location's designation as a combat zone or direct support area."

The President determines what is, and what is not, a combat zone through executive order, she added.

Iraq and the Arabian Peninsula were deemed combat zones in January 1991. Afghanistan received the same designation Sept. 19, 2001. (Courtesy of American Forces Press Service)

Reserve MTIs seek 'best of the best'

By Capt. Caroline Wellman
445th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Two U.S. Air Force Reserve military training instructors visited the 445th Airlift Wing here Sept. 11 and 12 to recruit reservists to the basic military training instructor career field.

Senior Master Sgt. Julie Begley, superintendent of the 433rd Training Squadron at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, and air reserve technician, and Tech. Sgt. Derek Sensenig, a traditional reserve military training instructor, held two information sessions during the wing's September Scarlett unit training assembly.

"It's not a job for everybody," Sergeant Sensenig said. "People either they love it or they hate it."

Because of the unique demands, dedication and skills needed to be a successful MTI, current members of the 433rd TS visit reserve units to increase awareness and provide realistic answers to Airmen who express interest in the demanding career field.

The unit is recruiting traditional reservists to fill four-year tours at the 433rd TS, said Sergeant Begley, an MTI since 1988. Reservists can return to their primary career field, from the unit where they were last assigned, or can pursue different career options, including follow-on tours as MTIs.

First, applicants must complete a five-to-seven-day permissive TDY for exposure to the life of an MTI. After the permissive TDY, applicants may be accepted to attend the seven-week MTI school, followed by a 90-day certification process. Only after certification does the four-year tour begin.

The seven-week MTI course consists of four blocks of instruction covering leadership fundamentals; drill instruction and command voice; flight administration and physical fitness instruction; dormitory instruction, obstacle course and BEAST. The 90-day certification helps new MTIs put into practice what they learn during the course.

Reserve MTIs can expect to train

new Airmen for a few weeks at a time, three or four times a year. The unit often reschedules drill and annual training requirements to allow the MTIs to spend extended periods with trainees, instead of just one or two days each month, Sergeant Begley said.

"Being an MTI is not a responsibility to be taken lightly," Sergeant Sensenig stressed during the informational session. "You get to change [people], mold them and make them into somebody."

Sergeant Begley echoed his sentiment, recounting stories of the lasting impressions and the sizable impact MTIs have on trainees' lives.

"2008 was a big year for me," Sergeant Begley said.

That's when she started getting the emails from retiring Airmen whom she trained.

Despite the enormous responsibility, she says she wouldn't do anything different.

"It's been the best experience of my life to see these young men and women come into our Air Force every Tuesday and Wednesday – to that start – and then to see them eight weeks later," she said.

Tricare Retired Reserve covers 'gray area' retirees, eligible family members

People in the Retired Reserve who are not yet age 60 can now purchase Tricare health coverage for themselves and their eligible family members.

Tricare Retired Reserve started Sept. 1 for retired reservists who are also known as "gray area" retirees.

"This new program offers a health coverage opportunity for 'gray area' guardsmen and reservists who served America honorably, setting a proud example for today's forces," said Rear Adm. Christine Hunter, deputy director of the Tricare Management Activity.

"Tricare Retired Reserve will provide an outstanding health benefit," she said.

Retired reservists qualify for TRR coverage if under the age of 60 and eligible to receive non-regular retirement pay when they turn 60.

They don't qualify for TRR coverage if they are eligible for or enrolled in the Federal Employees Health Benefits program.

Instructions on qualifying for and purchasing TRR are available by going to www.tricare.mil/trr.

The monthly premium this year is $388.31 for the TRR member-only and $976.41 for the member and family. Tricare will adjust the premiums annually.

TRR health care coverage is similar to Tricare Standard.

After purchasing TRR, retirees will receive the Tricare Retired Reserve Handbook. The handbook gives details about covered services, how to get care and who to contact for assistance. (Air Force Reserve Command press release)

Seminar to aid Airmen professionalism, careers

By Capt. Caroline Wellman
445th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Register now for wing's professional development seminar. The 445th Airlift Wing is hosting a professional development seminar Nov. 8-9.

There is a $55, non-refundable landing fee, which pays for two breakfasts, two lunches, snacks throughout the two days of the conference and the icebreaker the first night of the conference, plus a processing fee of $4.02. Multiple guest speakers are scheduled for the seminar, including:

- Senior Master Sgt. Jose Barraza: an award-winning instructor at the Air Force Senior NCO Academy at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., motivational speaker and former Los Angeles gang member
- Tina Durkin: International Federation of Body Building and Fitness fitness professional and former 445th Airlift Wing Airman
- Lt. Col. Ralph Lund, certified financial planner
- Retired Maj. Carl S. Savino, Maj, co-author of From Air Force Blue to Corporate Gray: A Career Transition Guide for Air Force Personnel
- Master Sgt. Patrick Stevens: 349th Civil Engineer Squadron Explosive Ordnance Disposal Flight, 349th Air Mobility Wing, Travis Air Force Base, Calif., EOD technician and Wounded Warrior

The NFL-themed ice-breaker scheduled for Nov. 8 begins at 5:30 p.m. at Packy's located at the Hope Hotel. Attendees should wear their favorite NFL jersey. The Cincinnati Bengals vs. Pittsburgh Steelers game will be televised for everyone's enjoyment.

All ranks are invited to attend; and wing members are encouraged to use annual tour with coordination and approval of their supervisors. Uniform is BDU, ABU or flight suit. Lodging reservations can be made at (937) 257-3451, (937) 257-3810, or at <http://wpsv.wpafb.af.mil/reservation.htm>. Distinguished visitors should coordinate lodging with the office of the 445th Airlift Wing Command Chief at (937) 271-7955. To register for the seminar, visit www.eventbrite.com/event/789344952.

What do you like about working at the 445th?
The great sense of teamwork and camaraderie the wing shows. It really does feel like we are all a big family!

Why did you join the Air Force?
I joined the Air Force because I wanted to do something to help our country after 9/11. My dream to deploy came true this year when I deployed to Balad, Iraq. I feel truly honored to have cared for those who fight for our freedom. They are the best patients.

Colonel Marlin said it's fortunate the wing's current facilities only need minor modifications to support the new mission.

"The new C-17 mission requirements include assault landings, night vision device approach and landing training, and low levels. We'll continue to do the air refueling mission, also," he said.

The wing's senior leadership is excited about the future.

"We are looking forward and moving on schedule," said Col. Stephen Goeman, 445th AW commander. "My request continues to be for all wing Airmen to remain focused on the current mission, get excited about the transition to the future mission and get ready for the effort needed for the new and exciting mission."

Colonel Marlin shares the sentiments.

"The new flying mission is going to be exciting as we add on new capabilities with the highly reliable C-17 aircraft," he said. "Our flying hour program is really going to ramp up. We'll be flying more hours and missions with fewer aircraft than we had in the C-5. I'm not sure what our AMC mission taskings will look like but the 445th AW has always had a great reputation and I expect AMC to keep us busy."
