Brig. Gen. Thomas Bussiere, 509th Bomb Wing commander, assumes command from Maj. Gen. Stephen Wilson, Eighth Air Force commander, during the Change of Command ceremony held June 18. General Bussiere returns to Whiteman for the fourth time in his career. He previously commanded the 325th Bomb Squadron, 13th Bomb Squadron and 509th Operations Group.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Bussiere assumed command of the 509th Bomb Wing from Brig. Gen. Scott Vander Hamm in a ceremony here Monday, transferring the leadership of America's only B-2 wing.

Maj. Gen. Stephen Wilson, 8th Air Force commander, who presided over the ceremony commended the accomplishments of General Vander Hamm and challenged General Bussiere and the men and women of the 509th to continue the wing's legacy of excellence.

"General Bussiere, welcome back again for the fourth time," General Wilson said. "As [Vander Hamm] departs, sustaining and improving the 509th Bomb Wing's vital mission and preparing the next generation, now falls directly to you."

General Bussiere returns to Whiteman from Barksdale AFB, La., where he was the Air Force Global Strike Command Inspector General.

"I can't tell you how honored I am to be before you today for the most sacred responsibility an officer can have in our Air Force," said General Bussiere, moments after accepting the guidon from General Wilson. "It's good to be back. Missouri is a very special place for me and Barbara and we look forward to getting reacquainted with each and every one of you.

"Our mission is simple, it is to fly, fight and win," General Bussiere added. "The mission of the B-2 is to hold at risk any target on the planet, anywhere, anytime, and this wing has proven time and time again you do it very well. So together, we will foster our warrior Airmen ethos; together we will develop the culture, conviction, character, ethic and spirit of our warrior Airmen. Together we will care for our warrior Airmen and their families; together we will fly, fight and win."

A command pilot with more than 3,310 flying hours in the T-38A, AT-38B, F-15 A/B/C/D and B-2A, General Bussiere is no stranger to Whiteman and the 509th. During his previous assignments as 325th Bomb Squadron Commander from 2004-2005 and 13th Bomb Squadron Commander from 2005-2006, he led B-2 combat missions during operations Allied Force and Iraqi Freedom.

General Vander Hamm leaves Whiteman for Air Education and Training Command, Randolph AFB, Texas, where he will become the Director of Plans Programs and Requirements.

"I want to personally thank the local communities for the support they gave Team Whiteman during my command here," General Vander Hamm said. "The relationships we foster with the surrounding communities, our neighbors, are invaluable. It has been an honor for Joanna and I to work so closely with so many, building relationships here that will last a lifetime."

Whiteman to participate in Global Strike Challenge 2012

By Candy Knight
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

A total force team from the 509th Bomb Wing is set to compete in the third annual Global Strike Challenge beginning Monday.

The challenge is the world's premier bomber, Intercontinental Ballistic Missile and security forces competition showcasing teams from bomber and missile wings competing to be named "best-of-the best."

Last year, more than 450 competitors took part in the challenge which pits crews from Air Force Global Strike Command, Air Combat Command, the Reserve and Guard, in head-to-head competition.

"This is a highly visible competition," said Capt. Jon Roe, GSC team member from the 393rd Bomb Squadron. "It is a big honor to represent [Whiteman]. We are excited about the competition."

The challenge is a combination of historic bomb and missile competitions and incorporates three major events into one: the former Proud Shield bomber competition, the former Olympic Arena missile

An inspirational leader once said...

By Lt. Col. Brian P. Zembraski
509th Operations Group Deputy Commander

"In the face of crisis, men rise above themselves to accomplish great things. Here, on this hallowed ground, is where the battle was joined. What better examples of courage and bravery were ever displayed than by the men of the assault elements of the 16th Infantry Regiment of the 1st Division, who were our comrades here on Omaha Beach, June the sixth, 1944," said Capt. Joe Dawson during the 50th anniversary of the D-Day invasion.

Capt. Joe Dawson commanded G Company, 16th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, one of the first companies to hit the beach that fateful morning of June 6, 1944. As the ramp of his landing craft, came down against a hail of enemy fire, he was the first to step off along with his first sergeant and radio operator.

As he jumped into the water, a German artillery shell struck the boat killing the remaining 33 Soldiers aboard. With courageous determination, he and the two survivors pressed on to his assigned "Easy Red" sector, leading the remnants of his company across that murderous beach and became the first unit to open up a corridor off Omaha to the bluffs overhead.

In the subsequent months, he led his company in battles across France, Belgium and into Germany. There is a ridgeline outside Aachen, Germany, named "Dawson's Ridge" in honor of Joe, whose company held off an overwhelming enemy force for 39 days.

It was my distinct honor to personally know Joe Dawson and I relished the occasions that I had to speak with him before he passed away in 1998. He was my wife's godfather. Dawson was a gentleman whose dignity, grace and love of God and country left one feeling humbled and privileged to be in his presence. I always chuckled at his normal greeting, "Hello Brian, how's the Air Corps." When I departed, he left me with the old World War II war bonds adage, "Keep 'em Flyin'."

From the first time I met him as a young lieutenant, I knew he was the type of leader that I hoped to become. Joe never talked about himself, but always about the soldiers in his command. The stories of incredible bravery that he told were of his junior officers, NCOs and privates. In his many letters home during the war, written in an elegant prose you will not find today, he spoke of his concern for his men's safety, his pride in their abilities, his overwhelming grief at their losses and his genuine concern for his family's well-being back home. Indirectly you knew it was his leadership that inspired his men to accomplish extraordinary feats at such a grave hour.

Sadly, the ranks of the WWII veterans are dwindling fast. The wars in Iraq and Afghanistan remind us that America continues to need leadership and courage from our young men and women. From the time you sew on that first stripe or bar, you will be leading other men and women. Are you prepared?

In your development as a leader in our Air Force, I invite you to consider the following:

First, latch on to a hero or mentor who inspires you. Our history is wrought with great warrior leaders. Pick up an Air Force Times and read about Airmen who are doing extraordinary things at home and abroad.

Second, let your Airmen run. Trust in their skills, training and ingenuity. Be a humble boss, supervisor or team member who relishes in your co-worker's and subordinate's capabilities, not one who feels threatened by them.

Lastly, take care of your Airmen. Dawson lost many men in his command, that's war. Throughout his WWII experience, his compassion for his troops and his lead-from-the-front attitude undoubtedly influenced his decisions that inspired them to amazing accomplishments and was responsible for bringing many of them home. A simple "thank you" from one of your troops for the time you spent on their awards package, performance report or helping them with a career issue will give you far more personal satisfaction than you will ever get from a medal.

Equal Opportunity myth busters: Debunking tales complicating the EO program

By Jerald A.S. Alexander
509th Bomb Wing Equal Opportunity Director

Our office recognizes the importance of the mission, personnel and their contributions in being proactive toward supporting our global Air Force mission. We communicate to both active-duty and civilian employees.

When active-duty members, Air Force civilian employees, family members or Air Force retirees visit our facility, we explain to them the scope of the Equal Opportunity program. Unfortunately, some individuals are disappointed when EO advisors explain our roles and responsibilities. We are often told, "I thought you all did this or that." So, what are the facts behind these EO myths?

Myth #1: "EO is only for unhappy females and those nagging lazy people." A comment of this nature tarnishes EO, the Air Force and the principles of our democracy. It is a Department of Defense and Air Force policy not to condone or tolerate unlawful discrimination or sexual harassment within the Armed Forces or in the civilian workforce. Our scope is based on the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and other federal laws.

The protected categories are race, color, national origin, religion and gender. Appropriated and non-appropriated civilian members are covered under the same categories along with age (more than 40-years old), physical and mental disabilities, pregnancy and genetic information. Bottom line is that this program is for all members. The EO office is not a revolving door for particular racess, origins, age or gender. One out of every three individuals who visit the EO office will have a complaint that involves unlawful discrimination or sexual harassment.

We also work with members experiencing issues not related to protected categories. Equal Opportunity staff members will refer a customer to particular agencies (i.e. Inspector General, Chapel, Family Advocacy or other base elements) depending on their concern. Our emphasis is to solve the problem at the lowest level involving your chain of command.

Myth #2: "EO ruined my friend's career. She/he received a disciplinary action because of the EO personnel." When our office is clarifying or investigating a complaint, we cannot provide any recommendations to commanders regarding disciplinary actions. Our job is to conduct interviews and gather the facts for a commander. In a military formal complaint, we either substantiate or unsubstantiate findings based on alleged unlawful discrimination or sexual harassment. The commander and base legal office work together on how to handle disciplinary action.

Our role is to remain neutral and collect the information during informal and formal processes. Our office stresses professionalism, respect and impartiality to both the complainant and alleged offender.

Myth #3: "I went to see EO and they did not do anything for me!" It is difficult to work on an intuition. If you are filing a complaint, you must have an allegation based on a protected category or categories. The allegation is from the complainant. Here is a validity gauge to assist you with framing an allegation. It is the five "W's - Who, What, When, Where, and Why." Who is identifying the alleged offender(s) or witness(es)? What are the protected categories and what lead to or caused the unlawful discrimination or sexual harassment? When did the incident(s) occur (date and time)? Where did the act happen (location) and why did this situation occur? You may also consider How as a factor on methods to resolve the complaint.

We encourage members to keep a journal listing specific incidents citing discrimination or sexual harassment. Proper documentation describing a conflict is beneficial in assisting EO members to clarify the allegation(s). We brief all individuals on their rights, responsibilities and the complaint process. However, we also share that EO is not a personal advocate. The complaint belongs to the complainant or aggrieved member.

The EO office is an untapped resource for improving sections, flights or squadron's esprit de corps and productivity. We encourage leaders to coordinate with our office for training to enhance teambuilding, interpersonal and organizational communication. Share with your members that each one of them plays a forceful role in your organization.

Fact - It is Team Whiteman's responsibility to maintain a healthy work place, support the 509th Bomb Wing mission and maintain high level of standards regardless of our race, color, national origin, religion, gender, age or disability.

competition, and the former Giant Sword combat weapons loading competition.

Like its predecessors, the Global Strike Challenge is designed to enhance readiness, teamwork, esprit de corps, mission pride and a competitive spirit.

The competition gives us the opportunity to excel, said Capt. Paul Rowney, GSC team member from the 13th Bomb Squadron. We have an amazing group of professionals doing amazing things, and competition breeds greatness.

In 2010, the 509th Bomb Wing won the Fairchild Trophy for best bomb wing and the Charlie Fire Trophy for best security forces. In 2011, the wing came in second place, a loss that Roe wants to avenge. "We are going to do the best we can," Roe said. "If we make the right decisions, we should walk away with the trophy."

The bomber operations competition begins Monday. Whiteman will compete against 5th Bomb Wing at Minot AFB, N.D., the 2nd and 7th Bomb Wings at Dyess AFB, Texas, and the 28th Bomb Wing at Ellsworth AFB, S.D.

According to both Roe and Rowney, one key aspect to winning is remaining focused on the mission and the scenarios each team will face.

"If we remain focused on our mission and the scenarios, we'll do fine," Roe said.

The competition concludes later this year with the traditional score posting and trophy presentations at AFGSC headquarters, Barksdale AFB, La.

From the Frontlines: Staff Sgt. Matthew Dickman

Staff Sgt. Matthew Dickman, 509th Logistics Readiness Squadron fuels service center controller, was deployed to Southwest Asia for six months. While deployed Dickman refueled 892 aircraft and issued 4.9 million gallons of jet fuel.

By Senior Airman Nick Wilson
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

Whether stateside or overseas, aircraft can't get off the ground to perform their daily missions without fuel. Regardless of the severity of the weather, the mission must go on and Airmen working in the fuels flight must ensure aircraft are refueled to keep the mission going.

While serving from the frontlines in Southwest Asia with the 379th Expeditionary Logistics Readiness Squadron as a mobile distribution center supervisor, Staff Sgt. Matthew Dickman, 509th Logistics Readiness Squadron fuels service center controller, had the responsibility of ensuring all aircraft on base were refueled safely and in a timely manner.

"While expediting refueling operations, my duties included driving around the flightline to confirm Airmen safely refueled aircraft, and that they had the tools needed to get the job done," Dickman said. "Sometimes there would be 10 to 20 refuels going on at a time. So I had to prioritize the order in which aircraft received their fuel."

Dickman left for his deployment in June 2011 and returned in January. In addition to expediting refuel operations, Dickman directly impacted mission success by refueling 892 aircraft, and issuing 4.9 million gallons of jet fuel during his deployment.

"The fuel we provided allowed 58,000 tons of cargo to be airlifted and delivered," Dickman said. "Fighter and bomber aircraft wouldn't be able to provide air support or fly combat sorties because they wouldn't have been able to lift off of the ground."

Unlike Whiteman where his duties kept him in the office, in Southwest Asia, Dickman stayed on the flightline.

"The big difference between the refueling mission at Whiteman Air Force Base and the mission in Southwest Asia was that there were a lot more aircraft to be responsible for while I was deployed," Dickman said. "Instead of only telling refuelers where to go and what aircraft to pump fuel into I also helped issue fuel."

Dickman said the most difficult difference between his job at Whiteman and his job in Southwest Asia was not being able to drive home to be with his family at the end of the day.

"My son was seven-months old when I left for Southwest Asia. I missed his first birthday, his first steps, his first words and all the major milestones in his first year," Dickman said. "I also missed all of the winter holidays, my wife's birthday, and our anniversary."

Overall Dickman says the most rewarding part about his deployment was working with the large variety of aircraft that needed refueling and being able to pump millions of gallons of gas over the course of his deployment.

"Something every deployed Airman in my career field works toward while deployed is to try to pump a million gallons," Dickman said. "I did it my first month there."

Not only did Dickman complete a career milestone with the amount of gas he pumped in Southwest Asia, he also sewed on his fourth stripe during his deployment. His supervisor, Tech. Sgt. Beau Piper, 509th LRS fixed facilities NCO in charge, said Dickman immediately took on the supervisory role and gave Airmen guidance in performing their refueling duties on the flightline after becoming a noncommissioned officer.

"What Dickman did over there directly impacts everything happening in support of Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom," Piper said. "His performance over there was not only vital to getting the mission done, but also in accounting for the fuel and ensuring every Airman was operating safely so everyone could come home."

Staying s.a.f.e at Whiteman

The wing will host a Street Smart presentation at the Whiteman AFB Theater today. The Street Smart program is conducted by Stay Alive from Education. The program takes the audience into the real-life drama experienced by firefighters and paramedics. The presentation includes stories about how they work to save the lives of individuals who have made poor choices when it comes to drinking, drug use and consequences of failing to wear a seat belt. The briefing features photos and descriptions of real-life trauma incidents, and is a no-holds-barred presentation that gets Airmen involved. To ensure maximum attendance, the 509th Bomb Wing Safety Office encourages commanders to allow their folks to attend. In order to ensure this, the safety office requests the following groups attend at the following times:

JAG announces law school programs

By Lt. Col. Todd Pennington
509th BW Staff Judge Advocate

Applications for the Funded Legal Education Program and Excess Leave Program will be accepted from Jan. 1 through Feb. 28, 2013. Interested officers are encouraged to compete. The number of FLEP and ELP applicants selected in any academic year is determined based on the needs of the Air Force.

“Our Air Force missions are constantly changing, and commanders deserve to have access to legal advisors with a broad background of military experiences,” said Maj. Tamona L. Bright, Chief of the Accessions Branch, Professional Development Directorate, Office of the Judge Advocate General.

“The FLEP and ELP will ensure that we can continue to maintain a Corps of officers whose military experience complements their legal training providing commanders with the highest caliber of legal support,” Bright said.

According to Bright, Air Force JAGs do more than just provide legal assistance. SP serve as prosecuting attorneys and defense counsel in courts-martial. Further, JAG officers provide direct support to almost every facet of the Air Force mission. They assist commanders in developing and acquiring weapons systems, ensuring availability of airspace and ranges where those systems are tested and operated, and advise commanders on weapon system employment in armed conflict. They also assist commanders in the day-to-day operation of military installations around the world.

The FLEP is a paid legal studies program for active-duty Air Force commissioned officers in which they receive full pay, allowances, and law school tuition. Applicants must have between two and six years active-duty service (enlisted or commissioned) and must be in the pay grade O-3 or below as of the day they begin law school. The FLEP is subject to tuition limitations. The AirForce Institute of Technology establishes the tuition limit, and positions may be limited due to overall funding availability. In academic year 2012, FLEP tuition was set at approximately $16,000 per year, but this amount may change from year to year. In 2012, due to budgetary constraints, the Air Force was unable to offer any FLEP opportunities. In 2013 however, a handful of opportunities are available. All eligible officers interested in becoming a member of the Air Force JAG Corps should consider applying.

The ELP is an unpaid legal studies program for Air Force officers. Excess Leave Program participants do not receive pay and allowances but remain on active duty for retirement eligibility and benefits purposes. ELP applicants must have between two and 10 years active-duty service and must be in the pay grade O-3 or below as of the first day of law school.

Applications for Fiscal Year 2013 FLEP and ELP will be accepted from Jan. 1, through Feb. 28, 2013. Both programs require attendance at an American Bar Association accredited law school. Upon graduation and admission to practice law in the highest court of any state, commonwealth, or territory of the United States, candidates are eligible for designation as judge advocates. To be considered for FLEP or ELP, applicants must complete all application forms, apply (acceptance is not required at the time of application for FLEP/ELP) to at least one ABA accredited law school, receive their Law School Admissions Test results, and interview with a Staff Judge Advocate by Feb. 15, 2013. Officers must provide a letter of conditional release from their current career field. Selection for both programs is competitive.

Applications will meet a selection board in early March 2013, and selections are made based on a review of the application package using a “whole person” concept. The total number of applicants selected for any academic year is based on the needs of the Air Force. Air Force Instruction 51-101, Judge Advocate Accession Program, Chapters 2 and 3, discuss the FLEP and ELP. For more information and application materials, visit <http://www.airforce.com/jag>, or contact the 509th BW legal office, or contact Capt. Laura DeSio, HQ USAF/JAX (laura.desio@pentagon.af.mil or 1-800-JAG USAF).

Whiteman library kicks off youth summer reading program

By Senior Airman Montse Belleau
509th Bomb Wing Public Affairs

The Whiteman library kicked off their annual youth summer reading program June 6, in support the Department of Defense sponsored program designed to promote reading in children 15 and younger.

“For those who are trying to continue their success in school, it is crucial to continue to read and keep their comprehension, vocabulary and overall reading speed up,” said Dennis Wilson, 509th Force Support Squadron, Whiteman library director.

The program takes place Wednesdays and Thursdays at 11:30 a.m. and offers story time and a variety of activities for children to take part in, along with prizes for completing reading logs.

Wilson said children can start at any time and sign-ups are still open. So far, almost 200 children have signed up this year.

“We continue to have registration throughout the month of June, so we encourage everybody to come by and sign up,” he said.

According to Wilson, studies have shown children who aren’t involved in summer reading programs lose two to three months of reading comprehension when they return to school.

“It’s very important for children to read through the summer,” said Brandy Schafer, 509th FSS senior library technician. “They should read yearlong, but during the summer especially so they don’t lose what they’ve gained throughout the years.”

To encourage children to read and complete reading logs, Wilson said they have several incentives.

“We have a completion certificate and a variety of coupons for free or discounted meals in various fast-food places for those individuals who have reached their reading goals,” Wilson said. “Scholastic Books donated paper backs ranging from easy picture books all the way to young adult literature. Those who complete their goals can select a book to keep at the end of the program.”

Schafer said reading as a leisure activity can improve a student’s reading proficiency.

“It’s important for them to play, but also have that time to read and keep up with their vocabulary and their fluency,” Schafer said. “Plus, it’s great free activity.”

For more information about the program, contact the Whiteman Base Library at 660-687-6217.

The Whiteman Enlisted Spouses' Club and Whiteman Officers' Spouses' Club congratulate the recipients of the 2012 Whiteman Spouses' Scholarships May 12. Each year the two non-profit organizations work together to create a joint scholarship program awarding scholarships to Whiteman dependent high school seniors, continuing undergraduates and spouses. The funds used to provide the scholarships are jointly given by the two spouses' clubs and are earned through fundraisers and volunteers dedicating their time working at the Whiteman Thrift Store. This year the spouses' clubs were able to award nine $1,000 scholarships to nine students totaling $9,000 in scholarships to Whiteman families.

 compete," said Reese.
 Applicants must have at least two years of retain ability by Aug. 1, and three years time-on-station by June 2013 (or be in a must-move status next summer or have a date eligible to return from overseas between January and May 2013). Applicants must also have their master's degree and a superior performance record.
 "Detachment commanders are the first Air Force leaders most ROTC cadets will meet," said Reese. "They will help mold future Air Force leaders at a critical time in their education and development, so it is essential that committed, focused members apply for this opportunity."
 For application instructions and a list of projected detachment commander vacancies, go to the myPers website at <https://mypers.af.mil>, select the leadership opportunity tab and select the 91C career field.

Smithsonian celebrates annual 'Become A Pilot Day'

By Airman 1st Class Alexander W. Riedel
Air Force News Service

Officials at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum held the annual "Become a Pilot" family day June 16, in Chantilly, Va.

More than 45 aircraft were on display as the museum's Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Center, including two A-10 Thunderbolt IIs and a C-17 Globemaster III, which had its cargo bay and flight deck opened to the public.

In the C-17 and other aircraft, kids could climb behind the controls, ask questions to experienced pilots and aircrew and learn about what Capt. Anthony Bombaci, of the 305th Air Mobility Wing at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, N.J., calls "the best job in the Air Force."

"I really love flying this aircraft," said Bombaci of the C-17. "So I like to share some of the enjoyment I find in my job and hopefully motivate some of the kids (to pursue a career in aviation)."

After guiding a young visitor to the pilot's seat, Bombaci smiled. "I wanted this job since I was about his age," he said. "So anytime I get the opportunity to show somebody else what I do, that's awesome."

Nothing in the C-17, from the cargo bay to the flight deck, was off-limits. But while Bombaci's head was on a constant swivel to prevent injuries to visitors and damage to his aircraft, he said he is not worried; his crew has their eyes on everything, while they guided the visitors and answered any inquiries.

"We get a lot of really good questions," said Bombaci. "It's a great chance to show people what we do."

Bombaci himself is a frequent visitor to the museum, he said, and could spend hours perusing the different aircraft.

"I'm like a little kid here," Bombaci said. "Even though I get to do this for a living, I am all-smiles myself, checking it all out."

His feelings were shared by his crew.

"Events such as this are one of my favorite things to do," said 1st Lt. David Bishop, the C-17's co-pilot.

"It's nice to see people get excited about what I do; it's one of the easiest things to talk about."

Bishop hoped that some of his enthusiasm for his profession may inspire future generations.

For Kiron Khashnobisch, 12, the event did just that.

"I liked the glass display," said Kiron, speaking of the C-17's heads-up display. "It has different colors and information, and it was really cool."

While Kiron is new to aviation, others his age are already veterans of the flightline: Cadets of the Virginia Civil Air Patrol, clad in battle dress uniforms, assisted with flight-line security for the parked aircraft.

"Today's events provide the cadets a good experience of working with aircraft," said CAP 2nd Lt. Iain Ronis, of the Leesburg Composite Squadron in Leesburg, Va. "What they get to experience at events like this really exposes them to a wide range of things that other kids typically may only read about -- here they get to go out to see, do, touch and feel aviation."

While the event hosted a wide variety of aircraft, including the U.S. president's VH-3D Sea King helicopter, better known by its call sign "Marine One," the C-17 was by far the biggest aircraft outside the museum's hangar.

"The C-17 is hands-down the winner," said Margy Natalie, the museum's docent program manager and event organizer. "Kids and parents love seeing and experiencing the aircraft. It's big and it's cool. The CAP cadets just stopped in awe when they saw it."

For Natalie, Become a Pilot Day is one of the best ways to get children interested in aviation and technology.

"A lot of people simply don't know what it takes to become a pilot," said Natalie. "With tighter security at airports, they also don't have the opportunity to get up-close and personal with the aircraft and personnel, so we try to highlight and offer all types of aviation whether it's military or civilian -- we have everything."

Planning the event that hosts an expected crowd of more than 15,000 visitors, is a work of passion for Natalie, who is a pilot herself. "We're the National Air and Space museum, so we like airplanes -- I'm already thinking about next year," she said.

The museum's Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Center is located in Chantilly, Va., near Washington Dulles International Airport. The museum is open daily from 10 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. (closed Dec. 25). Admission is free, but there is a $15 fee for parking at the Udvar-Hazy Center.
