Wyo. Air Guard answers the Texas wildfire call

Wyoming Military Department public affairs

The Wyoming Air National Guard sent 13 personnel and one aircraft to Texas in support of the Texas wildfires, on April 18. The Wyoming Air Guard is one of four military units nationwide equipped with the second generation of the U.S. Forest Service's Modular Airborne Fire Fighting System or MAFFS 2, capable of dispersing 3,000 gallons of fire retardant per load.

According to Col. Steve Rader, vice commander for the 153rd Airlift Wing, it was the first time Wyoming has used the new MAFFS 2. "It is a different delivery system. Instead of five separate tanks, it's got one large tank. And instead of two tubes coming out the back of the airplane, we've got one tube that comes out the paratroop door on the rear side, but it's got the same amount of retardant," Rader said. "We had two crews trained a couple of weeks ago in Colorado Springs, and they are ready for the mission."

Rader said that the aircraft and 13 member crew and maintenance personnel landed at Dyess Air Force Base, near Abilene, Texas, where they fall under the command and control of the 302nd Air Expeditionary Group from Boise, Idaho.

As of April 15, a total of 722,891 acres and 151 homes and structures have burned in Texas fires. There are approximately 1,250 firefighting personnel being managed by the Texas Forest Service from 34 states assigned to the Texas fires.

The last time the Wyoming Air National Guard was called to fight fires was in 2008, for fires in California. 🇺🇸

MAFFS is capable of dispensing 3,000 gallons of water or fire retardant in less than five seconds. The wildfires have spread across various parts of Texas and have burned more than 1,000 square miles of land.

MAFFS is capable of dispensing 3,000 gallons of water or fire retardant in under 5 seconds. Wildfires have spread across various parts of Texas and have burned more than 1,000 square miles of land.

Career Days Symposium to be held

The Career Days Symposium will start at 7 a.m. on May 15, at Laramie County Community College (LCCC). Col. Dennis D. Grunstad II, wing commander, and Chief Master Sgt. Thomas Loftin, wing command chief, will kick off the symposium with a few words and then 1st Lt. Rusty Ridley will give a short presentation on the impact of Social Media.

This symposium is targeting members in the ranks of Airman 1st Class through Technical Sergeant with the goal to prepare these Airmen to be the future leaders of tomorrow. The symposium will be structured similar to break out sessions at a conference, with each topic presented numerous times throughout the morning. This will provide our Airmen the opportunity to choose the class that best fits their schedule.

The class schedule is listed below with a summary of the topic to be presented. Use this information when selecting a class that will best benefit you and your career.

Career/Professional Development

Master Sgt. Foster and Master Sgt. Jones

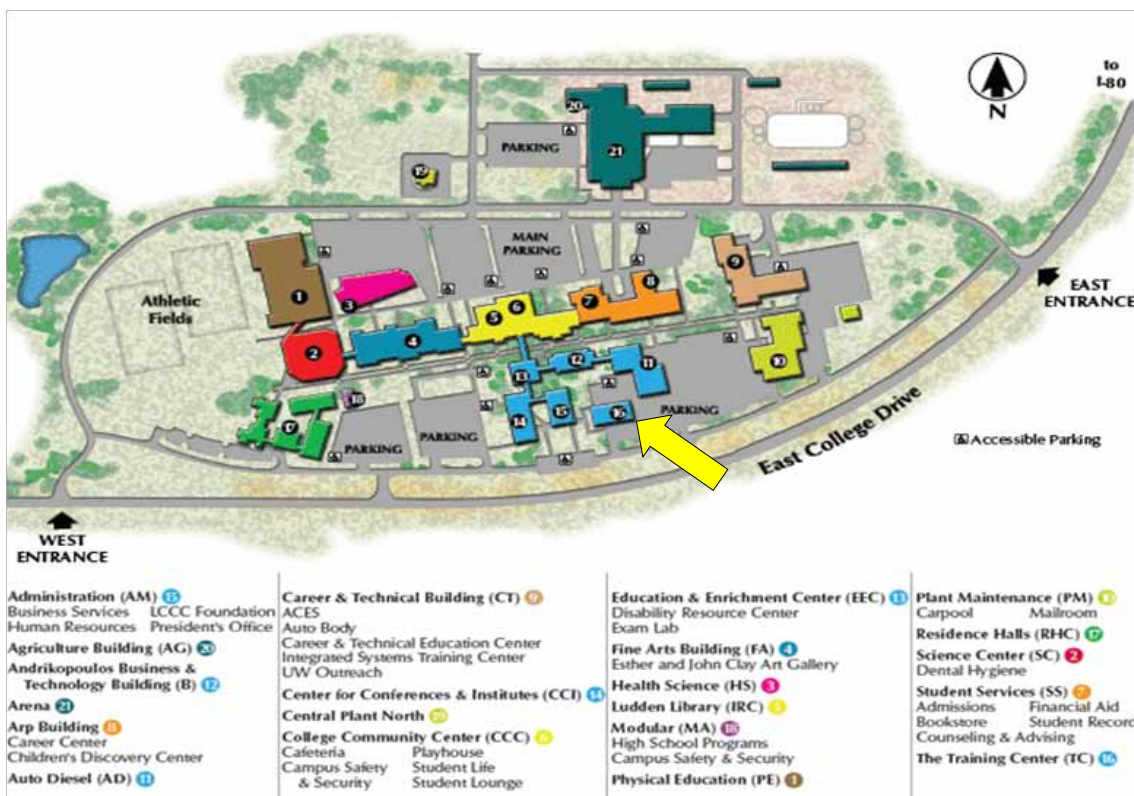

How do you get to where you want to go in your military career? Is it simply having enough time in grade, time in rank, and time in service? What makes a good NCO a great NCO? Have you ever considered becoming an officer? Our Career/Professional Development break out session will guide you on the path toward success and share some insights necessary to having the military career you desire.

The EFDC has developed an online sign-up for these classes. Please access the e-invite listed on the wing Facebook page at www.facebook.com/153AW. The intent of the electronic sign-up is to manage the attendance for each class.

The cooperation and support by each commander is critical to the success of our symposiums. We understand the demands that current training requirements and a high operations tempo has placed upon your members. However, we believe the importance of the material to be presented during this half-day event will be beneficial. We feel the information and discussion opportunities will prove invaluable to each of the attending members as they progress through their military careers.

Total force brings aeromedical evacuation training to the Democratic Republic of the Congo

by Tech. Sgt. Todd Wivell

17th Air Force

KINSHASA, Democratic Republic of the Congo -- A two week medical exercise, in partnership with the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and U.S. Air Forces Africa, focusing on aeromedical evacuation, kicked off here at the Centre Superior Militaire Academy Monday.

MEDLITE 11 is an exercise that will improve the readiness of both countries' medical personnel and will consist of classroom instruction, an aeromedical evacuation training scenario and is scheduled to conclude with a mass casualty exercise, May 4th.

"Our months of planning are now culminating in this mission and exercise as we build on lessons learned from MEDFLAG 2010," said Air Force Lt. Col. June Oldman, mission director for MEDLITE 11 and a member of the 137th Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron, Oklahoma Air National Guard.

"We look forward to the opportunity to learn from each other," Oldman said. "The more we work together with our partners in Africa, the better we understand each other."

The purpose of this joint exercise is to focus on five key points, said Oldman. Reinforcing the training of the Armed Forces of the DRC Medical Immediate Response Unit, enhancing the capabilities of the U.S. and Armed Forces of the DRC to respond to medical emergencies, sharing our training and experiences with the Medical Rapid Intervention Unit, building a partnership and relationship with the Congolese military and cultivating a professional Armed Forces of the DRC as part of the U.S. government's efforts to support peace and stability in the DRC.

"What an in depth broad relationship we have here with the DRC," said Ambassador James Entwistle, U.S. Ambassador to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. "Not only did we have the DRC and the U.S. forces here today at the opening ceremonies but we were able to get representatives from Rwanda to attend as well.

"We are hoping to increase the capabilities between the Congolese military and the U.S. military and to eventually learn more than we teach," Entwistle said.

About 60 U.S. Air Force active duty, National Guard and Reserve military personnel and 150 Congolese military personnel will participate in MEDLITE 11 from April 25 through May 5.

"I came here to teach aeromedical evacuation to the Congolese," said Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Julie Swearingin, an aeromedical evacuation technician with the 187th AES, Wyoming Air National Guard.

"My hopes are the things I teach them will one day help save lives and provide them a more increased chance of survivability for their military members," Swearingin said.

"A great opportunity presented itself to me with this exercise," said Air Force Staff Sgt. Amber Weaver, an aeromedical evacuation technician, also assigned to the 187th AES.

"I'm hoping to help the Congolese military medical personnel with helping their own wounded, while at the same time learning a great deal from them," Weaver said.

The start of MEDLITE 11 signifies the latest in a series of exercises that were initiated in 1987 as a now U.S. Africa Command-sponsored, bilateral medical exercise to facilitate an exchange of medical information and techniques with militaries in Africa.

"This mission is truly a total force effort," Oldman said.

"It is a key element in a series of military to military activities that demonstrate the strong partnership and cooperation between the U.S. and Congolese militaries."
