P R E F A C E

The first compilation of the credits officially awarded to members of the U.S. Air Service for victories won in aerial combat during World War I was made in France by historians of the Air Service, American Expeditionary Forces, during the weeks following the Armistice of 11 November 1918. Although the historians must have encountered many difficulties in obtaining documentary materials and in handling all of the data used in the project, they did a remarkably fine piece of work. The results of their labors appeared in the "Thirtieth Report of Air Service Activities, A.E.F., for Week Ending May 26, 1919." The report, which had very limited distribution, listed the victories of each squadron and the names of the persons credited. In addition, it provided an alphabetical listing of the persons credited, with the number of victories (airplanes, balloons, and total) for each.

Another list of the persons officially credited with victories in World War I was published the following year in Air Service Information Circular (Heavier-than-Air), Volume I, Number 7 (February 9, 1920). In preparing the list the Office of the Director of Air Service in Washington apparently did not review all of the credits but only attempted to correct some errors which had been found in the earlier compilation. The Circular did not list separate victories but showed only the total numbers of airplanes and balloons credited to each person. It was revised by the Air Corps in 1931, and other changes in official records were made later. The present study, however, provides the first official tabulation of individual victories since the one prepared by the Air Service, A.E.F., in 1919.

This pamphlet, USAF Historical Study No. 133, records the victory credits officially awarded to members of the U.S. Army who served with the Air Service, A.E.F. It includes credits awarded to members of the U.S. Air Service who were attached, individually or with their units, to British, French, or Italian organizations for duty. It does not include credits that personnel of the U.S. Air Service received for victories won while they were members of foreign services rather than members of the U.S. Army. Credits won in the service of foreign nations were excluded in accordance with policy which was adopted by the Air Service, A.E.F., and which has remained continually in effect in the U.S. Air Force to the present time. Even without the limitation imposed by policy, the USAF Historical Division could not have included victories won in foreign service because its authority for determining credits is, and must be, confined to the United States Air Force and does not extend to the air force of Great Britain, France, Italy, or any other foreign country.

As a result of the limitation stated above, the actual number of victory credits for some persons is greater than the number given in the pamphlet. David E. Putnam, for instance, had a total score of 13, but the pamphlet shows only the 6 credits he won while he was a member of the U.S. Air Service and does not list the 7 he gained while a member of the French Air Service. Furthermore, some members of the U.S. Air Service who won official credits are not listed because all of their credits are for victories gained while they were members of foreign services. For example, Raoul Luffbery, an American citizen who was credited with 17 victories while in the service of France, must be accorded recognition as an American ace and an ace of the French Air Service, but he was not a U.S. Air Service ace and is not listed in this pamphlet because he had no credits for victories won after he became a member of the U.S. Air Service.

The elimination of credits earned by persons before they became members of the U.S. Air Service, deletion of duplicate awards, and correction of earlier errors have lowered the scores of a few men. In other cases scores have been raised by the discovery of credits which had been awarded but which were not included in the listings of 1919, 1920, or 1931. Only a few names have been deleted from or added to the list as a result of the exhaustive research during this project.

Study No. 133 was authorized in June 1965 by Dr. Albert F. Simpson, Chief of the USAF Historical Division (since redesignated Historical Research Division), the Air Force agency responsible for determining the combat credits of individual members of the U.S. Air Force and its predecessor organizations. The project was under the supervision of Dr. Maurer Maurer, Chief of the Division's Historical Studies Branch. The research was accomplished by two reserve officers, Lieutenant Colonels Frank E. Donilon, Jr., and Gilbert B. Hollingsworth, Jr., who had mobilization assignments with the Studies Branch.

The USAF Historical Division is grateful for assistance provided by the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis, the Air Historical Branch of the Ministry of Defence in England, and the Service Historique de l'Armee de l'Air in France. The research data was processed for the Historical Division by the Data Automation Center of Air University. Mr. Donald D. Little of the Studies Branch proofed the drafts of the computer tabulations provided by the Data Center.

Comments or questions concerning this study may be addressed to Historical Research Division (ASHAF-S), Maxwell AFB, AL 36112.

INTRODUCTION

The first aero squadrons of the U.S. Air Service that went into combat in France during World War I were under the tactical control of French and British units, and the victory credits earned by members of these units during this period were confirmed and recorded by the French or British. Later, after U.S. aero squadrons were operating under American control, the Air Service, American Expeditionary Forces, set up its own victory credits program.

Under the American rules, official credit for a victory won in aerial combat could be awarded to an aviator of the A.E.F. if an enemy aircraft was destroyed over enemy territory or fell or landed within an area held by U.S. or allied forces. No credit could be awarded for an enemy aircraft that was forced down but made a normal landing in enemy territory. In practice these rules, in which the term "aircraft" included both airplanes and balloons, were expanded to give credit for destruction of balloons inflated in their beds on the ground.

A victory claimed by a member of the U.S. Air Service had to be confirmed before official credit could be granted. Confirmation could be provided by any person who witnessed the combat from the air or from the ground, or who saw the debris of the enemy aircraft at the place specified by the claimant.* After a mission a pilot or observer sometimes went out to try to find someone who could confirm his victory. Some units even established "confirmation teams" to obtain evidence that would support the claims of their members. But despite such efforts, many victories, especially those won far behind enemy lines, could not be confirmed. Thus, members of the U.S. Air Service undoubtedly won many aerial victories that could not be officially credited to them.

When a claim was properly confirmed, credit was awarded by a general order issued by the air service of the Army (U.S. First or Second) with which the person and his unit were associated. Credits awarded by French and British organizations to which members of the U.S. Air Service were attached, either individually or with their units, were recognized and accepted as valid by the U.S. Air Service but usually were not recorded in American orders.

* A member of a pilot-observer team could not confirm a victory by the other member because a victory gained by one crew member would, when confirmed, be credited as a victory for each of the two men of the team.

The British divided credits so that each person who contributed directly to a victory received an equal fraction of the credit. The French and Americans, however, awarded a full credit to each person who contributed to a victory. Under the latter system, if two pilots in monoplace pursuit planes brought down an enemy aircraft, each pilot received one credit. If either the pilot or observer in a biplace airplane shot down an enemy aircraft, each received one credit, which resulted in credits for persons who, in fact, did not shoot down any enemy aircraft. Furthermore, the credits became rather complicated when several pilot-observer teams were involved in one victory. In two cases, sixteen men (eight pilots and their observers) were each given one credit for the enemy airplane they all helped to bring down.

This pamphlet records 1513 credits for the destruction of 832 enemy aircraft (756 airplanes and 76 balloons). In each of 491 cases the credit was awarded to one person. The remaining 341 victories resulted in 1022 awards, with each victory being credited to two or more men. Three complete lists of the credits are presented: (1) an alphabetical listing of members of the U.S. Army Air Service with the credits awarded to each; (2) a chronological listing in which the persons who received credits for the same enemy aircraft are grouped together; and (3) a listing of credits by U.S. units, and by foreign services with which members of the U.S. Air Service served in combat.

NOTE ON FORMAT

Data relating to credits are presented under the following headings:

NAME: The name (last name and, usually, first name and middle initial) of the person credited.

RANK: The person's rank at the time of the victory.

SERVICE: The service to which the person was assigned or attached for duty at the time of the victory. "US" indicates assignment or attachment to an aero squadron of the Air Service, A.E.F.; "BR," "FR," and "IT" indicate formal attachments to British, French, or Italian units.

SQUADRON: The number and function (BMR, bombardment; OBS, observation; PUR, pursuit) of the U.S. aero squadron with which the person was serving at the time of the victory. The unit designation is not given if the person was individually attached to a foreign unit.

CREW POSITION: The position (P, pilot; O, observer; G, gunner) the person occupied in the airplane during the action which resulted in the victory.

CREDIT: The credit is listed by type and number.

Type: "A" indicates credit for an enemy airplane; "B" indicates credit for a balloon. The total number of credits awarded to any person is found by adding the airplanes and balloons listed for that person. The Air Service total of such credits exceeds the number of enemy aircraft covered by the credits because of the practice of giving a full credit to each of two or more persons who contributed to a single victory.

Number: A whole (WH) credit (1.00) indicates that the person named was the only one credited with the victory. A fraction (FR) indicates that credit for the victory was given to two or more persons, with the fraction representing each person's equal share of the whole credit: 0.50, two persons sharing; 0.33, three; 0.25, four; 0.20, five; 0.16, six; 0.14, seven; 0.12, eight; 0.10, ten; 0.08, twelve; 0.07, fourteen; 0.06, sixteen. The fractional credits, except those awarded by the British, were determined by the Studies Branch in order to show how credits were shared and provide a means for obtaining figures for the number of enemy aircraft covered by the credits. In a few instances, such as a victory gained by a U.S. observer flying with a French pilot, Allied personnel had to be included in the chronological listing in order to make fractional credits add to a whole. Such Allied personnel are referred to only in general terms, such as "French Pilot" or "Italian Gunner."

DATE: The day, month, and year of the victory.

UNIT TOTALS

The previous listing of credits by units provides two sets of totals for each squadron:

(1) Total credit for A /and for/ B, giving the total numbers of credits awarded for enemy airplanes (A) and balloons (B) brought down. As a result of the practice of awarding a full credit to each of two or more persons contributing to a victory, the totals shown for some units exceed the number of enemy aircraft brought down.

(2) Total credit given for A /and/ B, giving the numbers of enemy airplanes (A) and balloons (B) for which victory credits were awarded. The use of decimal fractions, required for computer tabulation, resulted in some totals that are not exact. For example, one-third was tabulated as .33, with the result that the addition of three thirds produced .99 instead of 1.00. The necessary adjustments in the numbers of enemy aircraft brought down have been made in the following recapitulation of unit totals:
