

CAROL H. RASCO
ACCEPTANCE REMARKS -

January 14, 1993

I welcome the opportunity today to join the Clinton White House team. I know what teamwork means when working for Bill Clinton - I've been a part of such a team for 11 years and I firmly believe in the approach--it works!

I consider myself fortunate to be continuing not only a professional working relationship with both the Clintons but also valued shared experiences as friends and parents.

In addition to the Clintons, I acknowledge with gratitude today three individuals whose significant roles in my life have helped to prepare me for the job I am about to undertake.

Mildred Barnes Hampton - my mentor, my grandmother.
She nurtured self-confidence, a belief in myself developed in me a deep love of learning
inspired me to have vision of all the many possibilities before me
instilled in me the understanding that all people are of great worth, are unique individuals worthy of respect.

I wish for all Americans young and old, the opportunity for meaningful mentoring relationships which promote vision and hope, excitement and service.

I acknowledge my two children, Hamp and Mary-Margaret--they both have taught me and continue to teach me about the enormous capabilities of all people, children's eagerness to learn and explore their world, and above all, you two have taught me the need for and the exquisite beauty of parental-child love.

I wish for every child this kind of relationship whether in a two parent family, a single parent household, foster care, relative care--whatever the configuration. But these primary caretakers must be empowered in their ability to be nurturing through economic security, health care coverage, meaningful education for their children and themselves as well as other quality, accessible services.

These wishes are not new concepts, we know and have known of the need for them. We now must embark with new vigor and dedication to fulfill these "wishes" for our country's citizens and I pledge my full energies to it.

I welcome the opportunity today to join the Clinton White House team. I know what teamwork means when working for Bill Clinton - I've been a part of such a team for 11 years and I firmly believe in the approach - it works!

I consider myself fortunate to be continuing not only a professional working relationship with both the Clintons but also valued shared experiences as friends and parents.

In addition to the Clintons I acknowledge with gratitude today three individuals whose significant roles in my life have helped to prepare me for the job I am to undertake.

Mildred Barnes Hampton - my mentor, my grandmother. She nurtured self-confidence, a belief in myself, developed in me a deep love of learning, inspired me to have vision of all the many possibilities before me, instilled in me the understanding that all people are of great worth, are unique individuals worthy of respect.

I wish for all Americans young and old, the opportunity for meaningful mentoring relationships which promote vision and hope, excitement and service.

I acknowledge my two children, James and Mary Margaret - they both have taught me and continue to teach me about the enormous capabilities of all people, children's eagerness to learn and explore, and to love. You two have taught me the need for and the exquisite beauty of parental child love.

I wish for every child this kind of relationship whether in a two parent family, a single parent household, foster care, relative care - whatever the configuration. But these primary caretakers must be empowered in their ability to be nurturing through economic security, health care coverage, meaningful education for their children and themselves as well as other quality, accessible services.

These wishes are not new concepts, we know and have known of the need for them. We now must embark with new vigor and dedication to fulfill these "wishes" for our country's citizens and I pledge my full energies to it.

Carol H. Rasco