931st Airmen receive 4th Air Force aircrew of the year award

BY STAFF SGT. K.L. KIMBRELL
931ST ARG PUBLIC AFFAIRS

An 18th Air Refueling Squadron crew was chosen to receive the 4th Air Force Aircrew Excellence award.

Col. (Ret.) Nancy Driscoll, President of the Bob Hope Chapter of the Air Force Association, presented the award to three of the four crewmembers in a ceremony at March Air Reserve Base, Calif., July 27 during the annual Raincross Dinner.

Maj. Larry Brown, 1st Lt. Austin Aggson and Master Sgt. Tonya Halenka were present to receive the award; Maj. Byron Rager was unable to attend due to being deployed.

The award is presented annually to a Fourth Air Force aircrew.

Events that occurred between Oct. 2004 and Dec. 2005 solidified the award for the Air Force Reserve KC-135 Stratotanker crew.

During this period, the individuals participated in numerous voluntary deployments to the Central Command Area of Responsibility in support of Operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom.

"The actions that helped them win this award were performed while deployed in support of OIF as part of the total force," said Col. Clayton Childs, 931st Air Refueling Group Deputy Commander. "It is a visible reminder that Reservists from across the Group continue to fight the Global War on Terrorism side by side with our Active Duty and Air National Guard counterparts."

Members of the crew were honored and team oriented after receiving the award.

"I think the award says more than I ever could. The crews of the 18th ARS are well trained and disciplined and we did what we were trained to do and that's bringing the gas to the fight," said Maj. Brown. "You could substitute any pilots or boom operators names for ours from the 18th ARS and the result would still be the same."

The boom operator of the crew echoed similar sentiments.

"We are no more deserving than anyone else that was over there with us. We did what anyone else would have done," said Sergeant Halenka.

Up against the best in Fourth Air Force the 931st came out on top.

"This award speaks for itself as far as the individuals are concerned. To be selected as the outstanding aircrew from all of Fourth Air Force means the competition was extremely keen," said Col. Childs. "This is one of the most coveted awards in Fourth Air Force, and the one every unit puts in its best people and best packages for."

COMMANDER'S MESSAGE

Welcome to the August UTA. I will be filling in for Col. Hurdle while he continues to deal with some medical issues. I have visited with him and he is doing well, but requests no visitors or calls at this time. His primary concern is that the 931st Air Refueling Group continue to focus on the mission at hand and not worry about him. I can assure you that we are taking care of him - just as he has done for our fellow group members in similar circumstances.

This UTA brings us one month closer to the 18th Air Refueling Squadron Standardization/Evaluation inspection (ASEV). In fact, several aircrews have already received in-flight evaluations with great results and I'm sure more are to come. We are also getting much closer to our Unit Compliance Inspection in December and those issues identified in our 4th AF Staff Assistance Visits should be cleared up by now. We want to be ready to welcome those inspectors when they get here.

Please remember that the October UTA will be our annual fitness testing and family day activities. The Air Force PT uniform is mandatory for all personnel as of Oct. 1 and will be required for our fitness testing -- get yours now before the rush!

I'd like to offer my congratulations to our crewmembers that won the 4th AF Aircrew Excellence Award, to Maj. Jeff Pickard on his first full UTA as the new commander of the 931st Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, and to Chief Master Sgt. Joe Tytanic on his retirement. Our new Command Chief, Senior Master Sgt. Tina Long (she will be a Chief in September - pass on your congratulations) will be here this UTA. If you see her, please stop, introduce yourself and make her feel welcome in her new Kanza home.

We're coming to the end of summer, but with some big events ahead. Let's keep our eye on the ball and accomplish our mission while taking care of each other.

Thanks for serving - see you this weekend.

931st AMXS Commander takes the helm

BY STAFF SGT. K.L. KIMBRELL
931ST ARG PUBLIC AFFAIRS

During the July Unit Training Assembly the 931st Aircraft Maintenance Squadron's newest commander took the reigns of the squadron.

Maj. Jeffrey J. Pickard was introduced to his new troops as commander in assumption of command ceremony on July 15 in the 931st AMXS auditorium.

Prior to this assignment the major was the Assistant Chief of Logistics Resources for 4th Air Force at March Air Reserve Base, Calif.

"I really enjoyed my tour on the Fourth Air Force Staff; it gave me a more 'Global View,'" said Maj. Pickard.

The commander has come into a situation that was already heading in the right direction.

"My task is to continue with the course set by Lt. Col. (James) Brock (former 931st AMXS commander) and to continue to build a strong relationship with the 22d Maintenance Group," said Maj. Pickard.

The Major plans on fully absorbing his role with the squadron and be ready for whatever is thrown his way.

"My plan is to get settled in, listen intently, and when I think I've heard everything, listen some more," said Maj. Pickard. "The unit has some significant challenges ahead with the Logistics Standardization Evaluation Program/Unit Compliance Inspection around the corner, a deployment this winter and another next summer."

The 931st AMXS has 105 Airmen and one civilian assigned to the unit. Of the 105 Reservists, 30 are Air Reserve Technicians and the remainder traditional Reservists.

Reserve income replacement begins Sept. 1

AIR FORCE PRINT NEWS

DENVER -- The Reserve Income Replacement Program became effective as of Aug. 1. The first RIRP payments for eligible service members will begin in Sept. 1.

The RIRP was developed to provide specific payments to eligible members of the National Guard and Reserve who are involuntarily serving on active duty -- the term active duty includes full-time National Guard duty -- and who are experiencing a monthly active duty income differential of more than $50, as determined by the member's service secretary.

An active duty income differential is the difference between the average monthly civilian earned income of the member before mobilization and the member's total monthly military compensation while involuntarily mobilized, when the member's average monthly civilian income exceeds the total monthly military compensation.

RIRP is an entitlement that must be paid to all eligible servicemembers. To be eligible for RIRP payments, the member currently must be serving on active duty in an involuntarily status and have:

- Completed 18 consecutive months of active duty, or
- Completed 24 months of active duty during the previous 60 months, or
- Been involuntarily mobilized for 180 days or more within six months of the previous involuntary period of active duty of more than 180 days.

RIRP is effective as of Aug. 1, the first full month following the 180-day period after enactment of Public Law 109-163. Income replacement payments will be made only for full months of qualifying involuntary active duty performed from August 2006 through December 2008.

The first RIRP payments for eligible service members will occur in September for duty performed in August (the first full month authorized for payments). RIRP payments will be made to an eligible member on a monthly basis. RIRP payments may not exceed $3,000 per month.

For more detailed information about RIRP or assistance in determining or verifying RIRP eligibility, call the Reserve Personnel Contact Center at 800-525-

Chief Tytanic closes 33 year military career

Plans to perform Civil Service, then 'retire'

BY CAPT. BILL PIERCE
507TH ARW PUBLIC AFFAIRS

TINKER AFB, Okla. - Chief Master Sgt. Joseph C. Tytanic retired this month following a career spanning more than three decades.

Chief Tytanic, 507th Air Refueling Wing command chief, heeded the advice of his hero, his father, and joined the Air Force Reserve March of 1968 as a crew chief, advice that helped lead to his success.

Following basic training and technical school, he was assigned to the 10th Maintenance Squadron from 1968 to 1978. From there Chief Tytanic was assigned to the 403rd Combat Logistics Support Squadron before it was renamed the 507th CLSS.

From 1968-1981, Chief Tytanic's objectives were simple, "...be the best crew chief I could be, and make sure every aircraft I worked on was ready for the crew, said Chief Tytanic.

In 1981 he took a break from the reserve and in 1987 he returned to complete a six-year stint and then retire. But something happened, he became a first sergeant. "This is one of the best jobs in the Air Force, and it turned my life around. Being a first sergeant lets you see the big picture of squadron business, and allows you the opportunity to make things better for the enlisted in the squadron," said Chief Tytanic.

His positions in his career included crew chief, assistance team chief, training NCOIC, first sergeant, team chief, chief of maintenance, maintenance superintendent and finally command chief. "Looking back, I feel like I had no control over my destiny. I remember when the commander and senior ART ask me to go back into maintenance I really didn't want to leave my first sergeant position. I have to say working for good leaders is what charted my career. I never thought I would retire as a chief master sergeant, let alone a command chief," said Tytanic.

In 2003, he was activated and led a deployment team to RAF Akrotiri, Cyprus. Upon their return the team was recognized for their efforts. A year later he became the 507th command chief.

Some may say he was destined, others a coincidence but one thing's certain, Chief Tytanic will conclude his career the same way he started, a chief. In the early days he took care of planes and in the end it was the people he looked out for.

Chief Tytanic became the sixth in the line of top enlisted serving the 507th ARW. A champion of the enlisted, he set his objectives early. "My main goal was to serve all the enlisted and officer core in the 507th and the Air Force, be a visible leader for the wing by getting out of the office and visiting the troops, never be too busy to help or talk with anyone and hopefully help mentor the young airmen and make a difference in their careers.

"As I step off into retirement and Senior Master Sgt. Tina Long takes the reigns as your Command Chief, I ask that you give her the support you have given me over the last two years. She's the right person for this position. She left her ART job to take on this responsibility. That shows commitment and willingness to do whatever it takes for the troops.

Reflecting on his career, Chief Tytanic credits the people he's been in contact with for his success. "These lasting impressions and learning experiences shaped my career. It's been my honor and privilege to have served and worked with the men and women of the 507th ARW all these years. My plan now is to serve my country through civil service for about eight years and then I will look at retirement. As Marilyn and I start a new chapter in our lives, I know I leave you in good hands, and the Air Force in your capable hands. Keep your focus on winning this war and taking care of each other. God bless America and you for what you do to keep the greatest nation in the world free.

SMSgt Long takes over as new Command Chief Chief select to sew on September 1

BY TECH. SGT. MELBA KOCH
507TH ARW PUBLIC AFFAIRS

TINKER AFB, Okla.—The first traditional reservist and first enlisted person hired for the 513th Air Control Group when the unit was deemed operational is the new command chief for the 507th Air Refueling Wing. Senior Master Sgt. (chief select) Tina Long, operations superintendent for the 970th Airborne Air Control Squadron, was selected for the position. She assumed the duties this month when Command Chief Joseph Tytanic retired.

“Tina has been a top enlisted troop from the very beginning of this historic associate program and has provided unprecedented leadership throughout her years as a reservist,” said Col. Gregory Phillips, 513th ACG commander. “Her dedication to duty and desire to serve is an inspiration to both subordinates and superiors alike and is one of the best SNCOs I have seen in my 30-plus year career.”

Long has been in the military a little over 20 years, with almost half of those years on active duty. “We all have our reasons for entering the military. My reasons were to serve my country, learn a trade, receive an education and see the world,” said Long. “It all sounds fairly glamorous and so far it has been a tremendous ride. My military career wasn’t necessarily planned but I’ve been fortunate to have been afforded assistance and guidance from family, friends, great supervisors and co-workers,” she continued. “Through them I’ve gained the fortitude needed to continue down the path as a career Airman,” Long said.

Long served as an evaluator/instructor air surveillance technician with the 552nd Air Control Wing, at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla. She was the first senior airman air surveillance technician assigned to the 966th AACS in the 552nd ACW history.

In the Air Force Reserve, Sergeant Long served as chief of surveillance for a little over three years, helping recruit surveillance crews for the first Air Force Reserve Command Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) Associate Unit. For the next two-plus years she served as the 513th Air Control Group resource advisor, responsible for the management and tracking of an annual $16.7 million budget of four squadrons under the 513th ACG. She also was activated and deployed to Incirlik Air Base, Turkey.

For the next two years Long was chief of exercises and plans. She coordinated with supporting agencies for exercise planning and the execution of real world contingencies. Long deployed 254 days as first sergeant and senior surveillance technician for Operations Northern Watch and Iraqi Freedom.

From 2003 to February 2006 Long was air battle management systems superintendent. She managed the squadron’s largest section, ensuring compliance of all flying, simulator and ground training requirements. She was directly responsible for the collective completion of 950 ground training events for 38 air surveillance technicians.

In March of this year Sergeant Long became the senior advisor to the 513th ACG commander concerning enlisted aircrew issues.

“To serve as the 507th ARW command chief master sergeant would be the culmination of my career,” said Sergeant Long before she was selected.

“My initial response was ‘wow’ when the announcement was made, and then my head started racing with all of the things there are for me to do and learn in such a short period of time,” said Long. “Chief Tytanic has such an amazing presence about him. I hope I can fill this position half as well as he has over the past two years.

“I look forward to helping steer the ideals and values of the 507th, 513th, and 931st. I have a strong desire to groom our force for the challenges of tomorrow,” concluded Sergeant Long.

Sergeant Long will sew on the rank of chief master sergeant on Sept. 1.

Reserve personnel center launches redesigned Web site

BY TECH. SGT. ROB MIMS
AIR RESERVE PERSONNEL CENTER PUBLIC AFFAIRS

DENVER -- Air Reserve Personnel Center's public Web site has a new look and feel similar to more than 74 other Air Force Web sites currently on the Air Force Public Information Management System, or AFPIMS.

ARPC launched the redesigned Web site Aug. 4.

"The new Web site provides ease of use to our customers, while adhering to Air Force guidelines," said Col. Ann Shippy, ARPC commander. "It's a very well-planned, well-thought-out redesign which will only enhance our ability to serve our customers."

ARPC customers will find the new Web site easier to navigate. It also adds several new features to the front page that are in line with the Air Force Public Web program standard. It will have Air Force Really Simple Syndication, or RSS, feeds, a direct link for Air National Guard personnel services, and eventually a direct sign on to the virtual Personnel Center - Guard Reserve.

The center's new site will not be on the AFPIMS server under the Air Force Public Web program until its scheduled migration in mid-2007.

"We know eventually ARPC will go to AFPIMS," said Thomas Laursen of Personnel Data Systems Directorate here. "So, we created an in-house template to mimic AFPIMS sites. This way our customers, as well as our local page maintainers can get used to the idea of this new style well ahead of actually launching under AFPIMS."

The Air Force plans to consolidate and standardize the appearance of its sites as part of the AFPW program. The Secretary of the Air Force Office of Public Affairs initiative centralizes Web content and establishes a global network for all of the service's public sites, including those originating at major commands, wings and specialty organizations like the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force. (Leslie Brown, Air Force News Service, contributed to this article.)

Retirement application process centralized for reservists

BY TECH. SGT. ROB MIMS
AIR RESERVE PERSONNEL CENTER PUBLIC AFFAIRS

DENVER -- All eligible members of the Air Force Reserve will now submit their retirement application electronically via the virtual Personnel Center Guard and Reserve, a 24/7 customer service Web portal operated by the Air Reserve Personnel Center here.

"The ultimate goal is to improve and streamline how we deliver services to our reservists," said Col. Ann Shippy, ARPC commander. "We're leveraging technology and Web application to help strike the balance necessary to continue to deliver service with fewer personnelists."

Previously, reservists had to visit their local military personnel flight, complete the required retirement application package, submit it to their supervisor or commander, and send it to ARPC.

This new Web-enabled service is available at any time from anywhere in the world and will give Airmen the ability to monitor the status of their application from start to finish. Reservists can log on to the vPC-GR at <http://arpc.afrc.af.mil/support/default.asp> to begin the process.

When the submission is received, the customer is e-mailed a tracking number. After the member's commander (or program manager for individual mobilization augmentees) has electronically endorsed the application, the Reserve Personnel Contact Center at the ARPC will verify eligibility and finalize the application.

Once approved, the vPC-GR will send e-mail notifications to the member and the person's commander or program manager. This new process only applies to members who have not yet initiated a retirement application. This process does not apply to Airmen who have already applied for retirement through their local MPF.

ARPC and the National Guard Bureau are working together to expand this capability to Air National Guard members in the near future.

The technical wizards and personnel specialists of the Service Delivery Transformation Team at ARPC continuously study which processes handled by local MPFs can be centralized and automated at ARPC.

Craig Carter, Thomas Laursen and Gregory Zipprich from ARPC's Personnel Data Systems directorate, developed vPC-GR from scratch with limited investment while expanding on an Air Force standard case management tool that is fully integrated to Web service delivery. Each time a new process is tagged for automation, the team works on developing the application to deliver the service.

In the future, centralized services should account for nearly every aspect of every reservists' personnel actions, from initial enlistment to far beyond retirement and everything in between.

ARPC and the Air Force Personnel Center are working simultaneously on centralizing and automating many of their processes for all Airmen and civilians in the Total Force.

August HRDC meeting

The purpose of the 931st Air Refueling Group Human Resources Development Council is to advise and make recommendations to the commander on any and all matters pertaining to human resources within the unit.

Areas of interest include, but are not limited to: work force diversity, career development, assignments, creating initiatives to recruit and retain a fully diverse work force, provide a work place free of discrimination and harassment, reward achievements with unit and personal awards and promotion opportunities. The overall goal is to create and maintain a fully diversified work force.

Col. Clayton Childs, 931st ARG Deputy Commander and chairman of the HRDC, invites all staff sergeants and below to meet with the council for questions, comments, suggestions and gripes.

The meeting will be held at building 1185 in the second floor auditorium from 3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. August 12. Members should obtain permission from their immediate supervisor prior to attending.

Enlisted Uniform Change

Following the Air Force Chief of Staff's vision of "lasting heritage - limitless horizons," the Air Force Uniform Board made minor changes to the enlisted uniform.

These changes include returning to the U.S. insignia with circle for the service dress uniform and the deletion of the optional shoulder board rank for the blue uniform, making the sleeve chevrons mandatory.

The implementation date for the circled insignia is Jan. 1, 2007; mandatory wear of chevrons on the sleeves is Oct. 1, 2006.

AFRC Patch

Wear of the Air Force Reserve Command patch becomes mandatory on Oct. 1. The patch will go on the right breast pocket. Unit commanders may approve the wear of one sewn-on, subdued patch on the left breast pocket, either a numbered air force, wing, group or squadron organizational patch.

Commission Meets

The Commission on the National Guard and Reserves, charged by Congress to recommend changes in the laws and policies governing its citizen Soldiers, met in San Antonio July 21. Six high-ranking members of the Guard and Reserve branches, including the chief of the Air Force Reserve and director of the Air National Guard, gathered to testify before the commission on issues including training, financial limitations and mobilization.

The Air Force contingent showed a confidence in the way the forces are handling things now and their ability to conform to future needs.

Airmen in the face of high ops tempos, more diverse missions and budget cuts.

The commission will release their findings, along with any recommendations for change, to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees in March 2007.
