Mission: To provide and participate in social, recreational, educational events and leadership developing activities while improving the quality of life for single service members.

What is BOSS? (BOSS) Better Opportunities for Single Service Members. The program is designed to support the overall quality of life for single service members. BOSS identifies real soldier issues and concerns and recommends improvements utilizing the Chain of Command. BOSS encourages and assists single service members in planning for recreational and leisure activities. Additionally, it gives single service members the opportunity to participate in and contribute to their respective communities. BOSS is a demonstration of the Senior Leaderships commitment to offer "Better Opportunities for Single Service Members".

How does BOSS work?

Installations establish a formal BOSS program to include a BOSS council consisting of single soldier representatives from Garrison tenant units. Typically the installation (CSM) Command Sergeant Major serves as the senior military advisor to the council. The installation FMWR BOSS advisor is appointed to provide guidance in planning soldier activities, financial accountability, community support, marketing programs, and assist soldiers to improve quality of life issues.

Who can participate in BOSS?

Events are targeted to support single soldier activities. However some installations also include single parents and unaccompanied soldiers to support their community. The intent of the BOSS program is to support single soldier activities and promote soldier moral. BOSS events are open to all authorized FMWR users.
