

The Postal Service has developed the following list of commercial printers capable of manufacturing Customized MarketMail™ (CMM)-compatible mail pieces as a public service to our customers. The Postal Service does not recommend any of the following firms, nor do we vouch for the quality of their work, the competitiveness of their pricing, or their ability to meet specific customer printing and/or mailing specifications. This list is being provided solely to facilitate the identification of potential commercial printers capable of manufacturing CMM pieces for our customers. The Postal Service assumes no liability nor provides any warranty for work completed by the following printers. In addition, the Postal Service will not intervene with these printers on behalf of its customers. If a customer believes that they have experienced a problem with a listed printer, please e-mail your concerns to Tim McGinley at timothy.p.mcginley@usps.gov. The Postal Service will remove the names of printers from this list if, at the sole discretion of the Postal Service, it believes grounds exist for such a removal. Postal Service Sales staff are prohibited by current Federal Ethics Guidelines from referring customers to any company, or from recommending or endorsing the products and services of vendors. This list does not represent the comprehensive list of commercial printers capable of manufacturing CMM mail pieces. Customers are encouraged to check with their current printers to ascertain if they are capable of manufacturing die-cut mail pieces, as well as other local, regional and national commercial printers. If you wish to be added to this list, please contact Tim McGinley for further details.
