▶ How can we help you?

The Pediatric Evaluation and Treatment Team (PETT) is a transdisciplinary pediatric early intervention team from the fields of:

- Physical Therapy
- Occupational Therapy
- Early Childhood Education
- Nutrition
- Audiology

Located on Five South at Womack Army Medical Center, PETT is part of the Department of Pediatrics and provides developmental services for eligible children who are inpatient in the NICU or Pediatric Ward or as an outpatient in the clinic.

Who is eligible?

- Military dependents who are DEERS eligible from birth to 36 months of age and at risk or demonstrating developmental challenges. If a child resides on the military installation, they will likely be referred to Educational and Developmental Intervention Services (EDIS) for evaluation and intervention.

Specialty Services

- Neonatal Developmental Follow-up Services—Assessment and treatment for high risk infants who required neonatal intensive care services
- Pediatric Feeding Services —Evaluation and treatment of feeding disorders
- Auditory Brainstem Response (ABR) and OtoAcoustic Emissions (OAE)- Testing for infants and children unable to be assessed via conventional audiological evaluations
- Physical and Occupational Therapy Services - Focusing on treatment of acute neurodevelopmental problems, torticollis, plagiocephaly and developmental care of preterm infants

If you are a parent with concerns for the development of your child birth—36 months of age, contact your physician or call 910-907-3347. PETT and EDIS staff will assist in determining the best plan for evaluation of those concerns.
