PUBLIC LAW 99—64

S. 883

To extend the Export Administration Act of 1979.

July 12, 1985.—Enacted.

DIGEST:

Amends the Export Administration Act of 1979 to amend the congressional findings and declaration of policy with respect to export controls. Declares that it is U.S. policy to: (1) encourage friendly countries to cooperate in restricting the sale of goods and technology that can harm U.S. security; (2) sustain vigorous scientific enterprise by protecting the ability of scholars freely to communicate their research findings; (3) control the export of goods and substances banned or severely restricted in the United States; (4) cooperate with allies and other countries to minimize dependence on imports of critical resources from potential adversaries and in developing alternative supplies of such resources; and (5) continue to object to exceptions to the International Control List for the Soviet Union.

Authorizes the Secretary of Commerce (the Secretary) to require validated licenses (rather than qualified general licenses) authorizing multiple exports, including distribution licenses, comprehensive operations licenses, project licenses, and service supply licenses. Provides that distribution licenses shall authorize exports to distributors in countries other than controlled countries. Sets forth factors to be considered in determining whether to grant a distribution license.

Prohibits using a distribution license or a comprehensive operations license in connection with exports to controlled countries.

Directs the Secretary to establish a control list stating license requirements for exports of goods and technologies to all destinations to which such exports are controlled under the Export Administration Act. (Current law requires the Secretary to establish a commodity control list consisting of any goods or technology subject to export controls.)

Prohibits the imposition of national security or foreign policy export controls on goods or technology if they are available in sufficient quality and quantity from sources outside the United States so that the imposition of export controls would be ineffective. Directs the President to give strong emphasis to bilateral or multilateral negotiations to eliminate foreign availability. Directs the Secretary and the Secretary of Defense to cooperate in gathering and assessing information relating to foreign availability. Directs the Secretary to keep the public fully informed about changes in export control policy and procedures.

PUBLIC LAWS

- Authorizes the President to prohibit or curtail: (1) reexports of goods and technologies subject to national security export controls; and (2) the transfer of such goods or technologies to embassies and affiliates of proscribed countries.
- Deletes the provision which requires the Secretary to explain the denial of an export license application. Deletes the provision which declares that regulations issued to carry out national security export controls shall not be based on the assumption that there are effective safeguards against diversion of critical technologies to military use by countries that pose a threat to U.S. security.
- Directs the President to establish as a list of controlled countries those countries designated as Communist countries in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961. Authorizes the President to add or remove a country from such list if the President determines that exports to such country would or would not harm U.S. national security. Sets forth factors the President shall consider in making such determination. Excludes from export license requirements certain exports to countries which are members of the agreement of the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Controls (the Coordinating Committee).
- Directs the Secretary to review at least once a year the list of goods subject to national security export controls. Directs the Secretary to publish notice of the review and provide interested parties with an opportunity to comment.
- Declares that it is the intent of the Congress to encourage the use of multiple validated export licenses in lieu of individual validated licenses.
- Prohibits the Secretary from requiring an individual validated export license for replacement parts which are exported to replace on a one-for-one basis parts that were in a good that has been lawfully exported. Requires the Secretary to review periodically the procedures relating to multiple validated export licenses. Authorizes the Secretary to make goods which are subject to national security export controls eligible for a distribution license and other licenses authorizing multiple exports of goods. Makes technology and related goods which are subject to national security export controls eligible for a comprehensive operations license.
- Directs the Secretary to establish as one of the criteria for the removal of goods or technology from the list of goods subject to national security export controls the anticipated needs of the military of countries to which exports are controlled for national security purposes.
- Deletes as an objective of multilateral export controls negotiations reduction of such controls to a level acceptable to and enforceable by all governments participating in the Coordinating Committee. Adds several new objectives to such negotiations.
- Requires any nongovernmental U.S. entity which enters into commercial agreements with the government of a controlled country that is intended to result in the export of unpublished technical data of U.S. origin to report such agreement to the Secretary. Excludes educational institutions from such requirement.
- Directs the Secretary to conduct negotiations with other countries, including countries not participating in the Coordinating Committee, to restrict exports of goods or technology that would contribute to the military potential of countries that would be detrimental to U.S. security.
- Directs the Secretary, if there is reliable evidence that exports which were subject to national security controls have been diverted to an unauthorized use or consignee: (1) to deny all further exports to or by parties who divert or conspire to divert any goods or technology subject to national security controls to an unauthorized use or consignee; and (2) to take any other necessary steps to deter further unauthorized use of previously exported goods or technology.
- Prohibits imposing a national security export control on a good solely because it contains an embedded microprocessor if the microprocessor cannot be used or altered to perform functions other than those it performs in the good in which it is embedded. Permits imposing an export control on such a good only if the functions of the good are such that the good, if exported, would make a significant contribution to the military potential of a country that would be detrimental to U.S. national security.
- Directs the Secretary and the Commissioner of Customs, in consultation with the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to help manufacturers or persons engaged in handling goods or technology subject to national security controls to develop security systems to prevent violations or evasions of such controls.
- Requires Federal agencies to keep records of their actions with respect to export license applications or revisions of the list of controlled commodities.
- Establishes a National Security Control Office within the office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy in order to assist the Secretary of Defense in carrying out responsibilities related to the national security export controls.
- Excludes agricultural commodities from the national security export controls.
- Requires the Secretary of Defense, in developing the list of militarily critical technologies, to give emphasis to keystone equipment which would reveal or give insight into the design and manufacture of a U.S. military system. Requires such list to include technologies that are not available from sources outside the United States.
- Directs the Secretary and the Secretary of Defense to integrate the list of militarily critical technologies into the control list.
- Requires the President to resolve any dispute between the Secretaries over whether a good or technology on the list of militarily critical technologies should be integrated into the control list.
- Requires that the integrated list include only: (1) goods or technologies which are not possessed by nor available to controlled countries; and (2) goods or technologies for which functionally equivalent goods or technologies, as defined in the Act, are not possessed by nor available to such countries.

Directs the Secretary of Defense to establish a procedure for annually reviewing the goods or technology on the list. Authorizes the Secretary of Defense to add items to the list. Directs the President to resolve disagreements between the Secretaries over whether items should be added to or removed from the list.

Requires the establishment of adequate export controls for militarily critical technology and keystone equipment to be accompanied by suitable reductions in the controls on the products of that technology and equipment.

Directs the Secretary of Defense to report to the Congress within one year of enactment of this Act on the impact that transferring items on the list of militarily critical technologies to controlled countries has had or will have on the military capabilities of those countries.

Directs the Secretary to make a foreign availability determination on the Secretary's own initiative after receiving an allegation of such availability from an export license applicant or upon request of the appropriate technical advisory committee established under the Export Administration Act. Directs the Secretary to accept the applicant's representations made in writing and supported by evidence unless they are contradicted by reliable evidence, expert opinion, or intelligence information. Lists factors to be considered in making such determination.

Requires that the President "actively pursue" rather than "take steps to initiate" negotiations with governments of countries which export goods that are subject to national security export controls.

Establishes in the Department of Commerce an Office of Foreign Availability which shall be responsible for gathering and analyzing information relating to determinations of foreign availability under the Export Administration Act. Requires such information to be made available to the Congress every six months. Requires the Office to be under the direction of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Trade Administration in FY 1985 and under the direction of the Under Secretary of Commerce for Export Administration thereafter.

Requires that representatives of the intelligence community participate in the technical advisory committees established under the Export Administration Act. Requires such committees to be consulted on questions relating to actions designed to avoid contributing to the military potential of countries that would be detrimental to U.S. security.

Requires the Secretary to report to the Congress within 90 days on a finding by a technical advisory committee that goods or technology subject to national security export controls are available in foreign countries. Prohibits the Secretary from requiring a validated export license for such goods or technology if, after six months, the foreign availability has not been eliminated. Authorizes the President to extend the validated export license requirement for one year if the President certifies to the Congress that the negotiations to eliminate the foreign availability of such goods or technology are progressing and that the absence of the export control involved would prove detrimental to U.S. national security.

Changes the standard for finding foreign availability of goods subject to national security export controls from "sufficient quality" to "comparable quality" goods.

Provides that the Secretary of Commerce shall exercise the foreign policy export controls in consultation with, among others, the Secretaries of Defense, Agriculture, and the Treasury and the U.S. Trade Representative.

DIGEST:

Subtitle H, Title I, Section 1352 et seq.: Section 1956 establishes a new offense, chargeable against anyone who conducts or attempts to conduct a financial transaction involving property which represents the proceeds of unlawful activity, if that person acts with knowledge of the property's taint, and either: (1) has the intent to promote carrying on of a specified unlawful activity; or (2) knows that the transaction is designed to either conceal or disguise the nature, location, ownership, or control of the proceeds of the specified unlawful activity or avoid a transaction reporting requirements imposed under State or Federal law.

Section 1956 establishes another offense, chargeable against anyone who transports or attempts to transport a monetary instrument or funds, into or out of the United States, and has either the intent described in (1) or the knowledge described in (2) above. Penalties imposed for violations of Section 1956 are up to 20 years in prison; fines up to $500,000, or twice the value of the monetary instrument involved, whichever is greater; or both.

Section 1956 also provides operative definitions of "knowledge that the property represents proceeds of unlawful activity"; "conducts"; "financial transaction"; "monetary instruments"; and "specified activity". Section 1956(f) establishes grounds for asserting extraterritorial jurisdiction for the purposes of enforcing this provision.

Depositing unlawfully generated proceeds, with criminal intent or knowledge, is also punishable under the money laundering provisions. Fines: as under title 18; prison: up to 10 years; or both. Alternate fine: twice the amount of criminally derived property involved in the transaction.

For the purpose of carrying out its provisions, Subtitle H incorporates several amendments of the Right to Financial Privacy Act. First, 12 U.S.C. 3403(c) is amended by a stipulation that disclosed information may include only the name or other identifying information concerning any individual or account involved in, and the nature of, any suspected illegal activity. Section 1353 of the Anti-Drug Act exempts participating financial institutions from any liability for disclosure of such information, or for failure to notify the customer of these disclosures. Further, a court shall have the authority, pursuant to a grand jury subpoena of customer records, to order the financial institution not to notify the customer.

Section 1354 makes it an offense to structure financial transactions with the purpose of evading reporting requirements. Under this section it is illegal to: (1) cause or attempt to cause a financial institution to fail to file a report required under section 5313(a); (2) file a report that contains a material omission or misstatement of fact; or (3) structure or assist in structuring, or attempt to structure, a transaction with the purpose of evading a sec. 5313(a) reporting requirement.

Gives the Customs Service authority to stop and search at border crossings, in order to ensure compliance with section 5316 of 31 U.S.C.

Provides for seizure and forfeiture of monetary instruments involved in financial transactions prohibited under Subtitle H. Pursuant to the seizure, holding, forfeiture and transference of tainted monetary instruments, the Secretary of the Treasury is vested with extensive powers of subpoena under the new law. Section 1356 enables the Secretary to examine papers, books, records and other data relevant to recordkeeping and reporting requirements; to summon financial institution officers and employees (including former officials and employees); to require such summoned persons to testify under oath and produce requested data.

A summons issued by the Secretary is enforceable by court order, and evasion is punishable as contempt of court. However, this subpoena power is available to the Secretary only in civil enforcement cases.

Exemptions are available to individuals only if his or her financial institution prepares a statement that describes in detail why the person is qualified for such amendment, and if the statement is signed by the person requesting the exemption.

Subtitle H also requires the Secretary of the Treasury, in conjunction with the Federal Reserve Board, to discuss with foreign central banks and appropriate government authorities the establishment of an information exchange system, in order to eliminate the international flow of money derived from illicit drug trade.

Nine months after enactment of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the Congress a report on the results of such discussions, and a second report on the money laundering activities of foreign branches of domestic financial institutions.
