

Take a Journey with the Nuclear FHIZ Kids

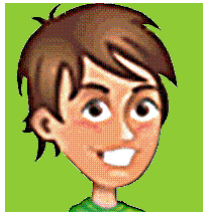

FIONA

The Nuclear FHIZ Kids, also known as Fiona, Horace, Ira, and Zoe, are mythical characters who came into existence through the process of nuclear fission. Once upon a time in a faraway land, a nuclear power plant produced massive amounts of energy and provided a wealth of services for its customers. However, controversy brewed about how to dispose of residual materials. In the process of experimenting with how to resolve this matter, something unbelievable happened—those who witnessed it are still in shock. The nuclear materials still had value; they contained extraordinary atoms. Without warning, the atoms started to split, but this time was different, and something unique emerged . . . the Nuclear FHIZ Kids. The FHIZ Kids are a group of middle-school students who are clever, focused, and fearless.

Just like the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), Fiona, Horace, Ira, and Zoe have a mission. Their mission is to partner with the NRC by helping provide students with information and resources that will increase awareness and interest in science, engineering, and technology.

Finding a career that appeals to you and builds on your strengths can be like going on a journey. The FHIZ Kids have recently begun their journey to discover a career that is right for them. It's not too late to join them, and they are always looking for other middle-school students who are interested in finding out what they want to be when they grow up.

The journey begins by reading A Journey to Your Future: Make Discovering Your Career an Adventure. The purpose of this booklet is to make the journey easier, exciting, and worthwhile. The booklet focuses on the careers you can find at the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission and answers your questions about those careers: the educational requirements, types of work, and effects on the lives of others. The booklet also has information about additional career resources. The goal is to bring you and the FHIZ Kids closer to making a decision about your career—a career that will be exciting, that will build on your strengths, and that might result in your becoming known as an “expert” in your field. Once you’ve become an expert in your career field, you can continue to do great work by becoming a leader. This could mean that you supervise or manage a group of people or that you manage a project.
