

Thanks for supporting the Archaeology Fair

The Fort Hood Archaeology Team would like to give a very deep and heartfelt Thank You to our sponsors and partners for this year's Archaeology Fair, held on Saturday, October 25 at Kouma Village Community Center: Fort Hood Family Housing (FHFH), Embarq, Colorado State University's Center for Environmental Management of Military Lands (CEMML), Kouma Village Community Center, the Nature Warehouse of Fiber, and the Tonkawa Chapter of the Native Plant SNIemann of Fort Hood Directorate of Public Works Environmental Division (DPW-ENV) for all your endless support in these events; to Jolene Brindle (FHFH) and Carrie Curry (FHFH; Kouma Community Center Manager) for providing us an awesome space for our fair and for helping with so many of the details; and to David Tweedale and James Zeidler of CEMML for giving their long-distant support of all our many weird requests (like a new atlatl and buckskins) for this event.

We would also like to give another deep and heartfelt Thank You to the wonderful and hard-working volunteers who helped in so many different ways at the fair: Mary and Steve Hanik, Raymond Perez, and Mary Jane Shelby of Embarq; Jim and Karen Hickman of Nature Warehouse of Fiber; Charlotte Reemts, Marsha Cole, Beth Brewer, Donna Slack, Ed and LaVerne Wood, and Ilse Meier of NPSOT; Christine Luciano and Adam and Jill Alexander of Fort Hood Directorate of Public Works; and Stephanie Van Gorden and Crissy London (Fort Hood Archaeology Volunteers). Christine Luciano also acted as our Public Outreach Coordinator, connecting us with most of our sponsors and partners, and arranging the location and advertisement of our event. And last, but certainly not least, a giant Thank You goes out to the public who came out and participated in the activities and fun of the fair. This year's fair was our most successful to date, with about 250 visitors. We could not have done this fair, nor been as successful, without the work and help of every one of our sponsors, partners, and volunteers, and the participation of the public. We deeply appreciate you all and all you've done. We hope to continue working with all of you for our many future fairs. Thank you so much—Karl Kleinbach, Sunny Wood, and Heidi Fuller (the Fort Hood Archaeology Team).
