

Computers and Elections: The Growing Potential for Cyber Vote Fraud

An analysis of foreign countries' experiences with computerizing their election systems has revealed challenges to the electronic safeguarding of increasingly computer-dependent elections. This presentation, while not addressing US-specific approaches, offers insights for policymakers in this country who seek to enhance the role of computers and computer networks in the electoral process.