

Information for Public Education

The following are issues typically addressed with public education:

1. What people should do if they notice the river is unexpectedly high and rising or they notice a problem with the dam.
2. What are signs that a problem is developing at the dam. (This is applicable primarily for residents that live within view of a remote structure.)
3. Where people could go to be out of the inundation zone.
4. How people should treat moving or deep standing water.
5. What residents should do if they are trapped in their house.
6. What people should do if they hear a siren or get a Reverse 911 call.
7. Who people should contact if they have questions.

These issues should be addressed in consultation with the local Emergency Management Agency.
