National Archives Genealogy Tutorial

By Nancy Fortna

Researcher education is a principal function of the National Archives Customer Services Division under the Know Your Records (KYR) program. To meet the needs of beginning researchers, a free tutorial was developed to introduce the National Archives' genealogical holdings, Beginning Your Genealogical Research at the National Archives and Records Administration.

This online tutorial describes major records of interest to those doing family research at the National Archives. The table of contents (see image) has hyperlinks to these various topics grouped into three columns. The first column has the records for census, passenger arrival (immigration), naturalization, land, and military records. The second column has search topics grouped by Native, African, Japanese, Chinese, and Hispanic Americans. The third column includes the Customer Service Division's contact information and descriptions of the records in the Washington, DC, area and regional research facilities. You will also find links on this page on how to begin research at the National Archives and rules for using records.

Interactive features in the tutorial include user-friendly navigation "buttons," photographs, illustrative images of records, and hyperlinks to numerous sources of information of interest to genealogists.

Educators, staff, volunteers, and researchers are encouraged to use the tutorial. You may use the online tutorial at www.archives.gov/genealogy/tutorial/beginning-research-2008.ppt on the public access computers in the National Archives Building Research Room, Washington, DC, or request a compact disc from the Know Your Records staff with an e-mail to KYR@nara.gov.

This newsletter is designed to provide you with the most up-to-date information needed to conduct research at the National Archives Building in Washington, DC, and the National Archives at College Park, MD. For more information, please visit www.archives.gov.

Fifth Annual Genealogy Fair

Genealogy Fair Draws Record 1,500 Over Two Days

By James Worsham

The fifth annual genealogy fair in Washington, DC, expanded outside the walls of the National Archives Building into tents on the Pennsylvania Avenue entrance

Some 1,500 visitors passed through the exhibition tents and session lecture areas at NARA's fifth annual Genealogy Fair in April—the largest turnout to date for this event.

"Countless people who were beginning genealogists who had never come to the National Archives Building prior to the fair showed up," said Diane Dimkoff (NWC). "All in all, a huge success."

This year's fair theme was "Identity at the Crossroads, Discovering Who You Are." The fair showcased both Federal records located at the National Archives and the resources offered by professional genealogy organizations by providing information and guidance for experienced genealogy professionals and beginners.

This free event was presented in partnership with the Foundation for the National Archives and Ancestry.com.

In the Welcome Tent at the entrance to the building, NARA staff greeted those coming to the genealogy fair and directed them to the various activities

Because of the Foundation's generous backing and that of Ancestry.com, we were "bigger and better" in four major areas, Dimkoff said.

This support helped us to enlarge the size of the fair by increasing the physical size (the tents outside) and creating a lecture area inside, including guest genealogy exhibitors, expanding the fair to two days, and increasing the marketing with paid advertising, multiple tent and building banners outside, and more advertising through online organizations.

Nancy Fortna

Nancy Fortna began her career at the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in 1987 after serving as an archivist at the Pennsylvania State Archives for nine years. During Nancy's career at NARA in the Washington, DC, area, she has worked in the Regional Records Services central office, the Professional Development Office, and Life Cycle Management program office.

Currently, she educates customers as the Training Development Specialist for the National Archives' Customer Services Division (NWCC), where she develops, implements, and oversees programs for NARA staff, volunteers, and researchers using NARA holdings.

Arriving at the NWCC office in 2004, she was assigned with facilitating the expansion of several Division programs. Under the Know Your Records program, she added weekly lecture series, symposia, the annual Genealogy Fair, and the From the Records Book Group to the existing genealogy workshops. In addition, she expanded this newsletter, Researcher News, and currently serves as one of the editors.

As part of the Division's expanding role in researcher education, Ms. Fortna collaborated with the National Archives Old Military and Civil Records Licon staff (NWCTB), regional archives staff (NR), and the National Archives in Washington, DC, Research Support Branch staff (NWCC1) to develop a user-friendly, computerized tutorial introducing researchers to our genealogical holdings (see article on page 1). Please see the online version at www.archives.gov/genealogy/tutorial/beginning-research-2008.ppt

Present staff development activities by Nancy include developing curriculum and teaching. She is currently leading a class entitled "Oral Presentation Skills: The Road to Successful Public Speaking." Originally designed for Know Your Records presenters, the class has successfully grown and expanded to other NARA staff. Staff, volunteers, and researchers are greatly benefiting from Nancy's expertise in customer service training.

Paul McKissick is a native Washingtonian and has served our country for many years as a Federal employee. He first began his career in the military. After a three-year enlistment in the U.S Army, which included a tour of Vietnam, Paul started his career at the National Archives in July 1973.

In the early years of his National Archives career, Paul gained experience in serving our customers as an archives aide in the Old Military and Civil Reference Branch. Part of his work entailed answering the large volume of requests that come to the National Archives from people conducting genealogical research. In order to answer these requests, Paul searched books and articles within our holdings, thus becoming very familiar with our records.

Since that time, Paul has worked in different offices within the National Archives. For a short period of time, he worked in the Records Relocation Branch. This work included prepping and citing the current location of record groups to be moved to the National Archives at College Park (Archives II). Once the records arrived at Archives II, he inventoried and identified the records' new locations for inclusion in the Master Location Register (MLR).

In 1997, Paul started working in the Archives II Research Support Branch (NWCC2) as the lead archives technician. In this position, he was responsible for the quality control auditing and on-the-job training to ensure the high degree of excellence required by management for all reference service operations.

He presently works as the supervisory archives specialist at NWCC2. In this position, he monitors research room activities and continues to answer research questions. His specific duties include supervising a team of archives technicians/aides and overseeing the picking up, receiving, and delivering of records to and from Federal agencies and Congress. For this article his supervisor stated, "Paul has been a dependable and committed NARA employee. His work in the research room has contributed to NWCC2's ongoing success, in the area of customer services, for at least a decade."

New Microfilm Publications

by Rebecca Crawford and Claire Prechtel-Klusens

The National Archives continues to process microfilm that documents arrivals into the United States, turning this film into National Archives microfilm publications. Staff recently completed the following National Archives microfilm publications:

NEW PUBLICATIONS

New Publications by Staff

Periodically, staff publishes articles in order to expand research community awareness of the National Archives' holdings. By targeting state and local historical and genealogical societies with articles about the agency's holdings, we hope to reach people who otherwise would not think of the National Archives as a resource for their research. During the past few months, the staff has published the following:

Digital Partnerships

by Mary Rephlo

The Internet presents an unprecedented opportunity for the National Archives to make our holdings available to researchers and others unable to visit in person. To take advantage of the exciting possibilities, the National Archives has developed a strategy for digitizing archival materials. See <http://archives.gov/digitization/>.

The National Archives' digitization strategy includes this statement: "Partnerships present an opportunity for increased access to historical Government information through the increased availability of information technology products and services. Partnerships will enable the National Archives to make more digitized holdings available than we could on our own, because the partner will bear most of the expense of digitizing."

Two of our digitization partners operate the web sites Ancestry.com and Footnote.com.

Some of the records appearing on these web sites have been available in the past as National Archives microfilm publications, though others currently being digitized could only be viewed until this time in a single National Archives research room.

In September, these two partners will each offer a program that focuses on some of the records now available because of this partnership initiative.

As a result of a May 2008 partnership agreement, Ancestry.com and the National Archives can collaborate in providing immediate worldwide access to digital images of selected National Archives records. The images on Ancestry.com are available to individual Ancestry.com subscribers and may also be seen at the many libraries and other institutions where Ancestry.com is available free to users.

Ancestry.com is available free at all National Archives computers in our research rooms nationwide. Please view National Archives records on Ancestry at www.ancestry.com/nara/.

UPCOMING LECTURE

Thursday, September 17, 11 a.m.
Lecture Room B, National Archives at College Park, MD

National Archives Records on Ancestry.com

Sabrina Petersen, business operations manager from Ancestry.com, will discuss National Archives files recently scanned and published online through the partnership between the National Archives and The Generations Network. The presentation topic will focus on the United States Constitution in celebration of its signing anniversary.

(This lecture will be videotaped and made available at the National Archives library.)

The National Archives and Footnote.com are partnering to bring unprecedented access to selections of the vast holdings of the National Archives. Footnote.com is a subscription web site that features searchable original documents, providing users with an unaltered view of the events, places, and people that shaped the American nation and the world. An interesting aspect of the Footnote.com presentation of documents is that it incorporates social networking tools. All are invited to come share, discuss, and collaborate on their discoveries with friends, family, and colleagues. For more information, visit www.footnote.com.

Footnote.com is available free at all National Archives computers in our research rooms nationwide. Please view National Archives records on Footnote at www.footnote.com/nara/.

UPCOMING LECTURE

Tuesday, September 29, 11 a.m.
Room G-24, Research Center, National Archives in Washington, DC (Enter on Pennsylvania Avenue)

Using Footnote.com for Jewish Records Research

Laura Prescott, content editor at Footnote.com, will give a presentation that explores recently scanned and published Jewish records made available by the National Archives partnership with Footnote. Attend this session to learn how to effectively use the site and discover fascinating records pertinent to your research.

(This lecture will be repeated at the National Archives at College Park, MD, Lecture Room B on Thursday, October 1, at 11 a.m.)

Select Passenger Arrival Records

by Lynn Goodsell

There are approximately six million records of selected 19th-century passengers who arrived at the ports of Baltimore, Boston, New Orleans, New York, and Philadelphia available online via the National Archives' Access to Archival Databases \(AAD\) resource. The Center for Immigration Research at the Balch Institute transcribed these records into electronic databases from a selection of original ship manifests. The Center donated the digital records to the National Archives. The records are part of the following series:

- Data Files Relating to the Immigration of Russians to the United States, 1834–1897
- Records for Passengers Who Arrived at the Port of New York During the Irish Famine, 1/12/1846–12/31/1851
- Data Files Relating to the Immigration of Germans to the United States, 1850–1897
- Data Files Relating to the Immigration of Italians to the United States, 1855–1900

More than 100 unique "country" codes appear in these records. In each of the respective series, more than 90 percent of the passengers identified their country of origin or nationality as Russia or part of the Russian empire, Ireland, Germany or a German state or city, or Italy or a part of Italy. The remaining passengers identified other countries of origin.

For example, in the Data Files Relating to the Immigration of Germans to the United States there is a record for Lillian Nordica, a prominent American opera singer, who returned to the United States in 1895 after a trip abroad. There is also a record for Carl Laemmle, a German who immigrated to the United States in 1884, and later co-founded the Universal Pictures Company, Inc. (also known as Universal Studios).

Each series includes two files. One file contains passenger records, including information such as name, age, town of last residence, country of origin, destination, and other details. Information on each ship is in a separate file and includes the name of the ship, date of arrival, and port of departure. Both the passenger records and the ship manifest records contain a manifest identification number, which links the two records. The manifest identification number also indicates the port of arrival.

These passenger records are available online for searching and viewing at www.archives.gov/aad. More details about the records series and files are also available via AAD. Please contact the electronic records staff at cer@nara.gov with any questions about AAD.

For a list of all the records available on AAD and to search the records, please visit the AAD main page at www.archives.gov/aad.

Washington, DC, Building

What's that Noise?

by Andrea B. Matney

Starting in May 2009, you might have noticed strange noises when on the Ground floor of the National Archives Building. The noises are the sounds of construction work overseen by our Facilities office. They are doing major changes to the loading dock on the 7th Street side of the building. The work is disruptive enough to necessitate closing the loading dock completely, so deliveries are temporarily taking place on the 9th Street side. The construction work includes removal of the loading dock turntable and the installation of a new Self-Closing Flood Wall (SCFW). The SCFW will sense water seeping into the loading dock area and automatically raise a flood barrier to keep the water back like a dam. In the past, the threat of flooding required sandbagging the area to protect it.

Although this is a huge undertaking, Facility Manager Timothy Edwards, expects the work to be completed by the end of the summer. Once the work is complete on the 7th Street side of the building, the loading dock will reopen and the installation of the 9th Street automatic flood barrier will begin. The work on the 9th Street side of the building should be completed by the end of 2009.

See an animated illustration of the self-closing flood wall at www.floodbarrier.nl/AnimatieSCFB.wmv.

Know Your Records!

KYR@nara.gov

The Know Your Records program offers opportunities for staff, volunteers, and researchers to learn about the National Archives' records through lectures and genealogy programs, symposia, the annual genealogy fair, editions of Researcher News, a genealogy tutorial, and the From the Records Book Group discussions.

We publicize our offerings in NARA's Calendar of Events at www.archives.gov/calendar/ and on our home page at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/know-your-records/

Lectures describe National Archives' records, explain how and where to locate the records, and demonstrate how to use the records for research. Each one-hour lecture is delivered twice within the same week—on Tuesdays at the National Archives Building (Archives I) at 700 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC, and on Thursdays at the National Archives (Archives II), located at 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park,* MD. Most of these sessions are videotaped and made available for interlibrary loan through NARA libraries and our regional facilities throughout the United States.

Genealogy programs include monthly workshops and lectures from our staff archivists with extensive experience in genealogy. We provide lectures on basic genealogical research and techniques and one-on-one assistance. Programs take place each month on the first Wednesday and select Saturdays at the National Archives Building.

The Annual Genealogy Fair is held every April at the National Archives Building in Washington, DC. The fair is a free, two-day open house, with guidance on a wide variety of genealogical research topics.

Save the date!

April 14 & 15, 2010

Symposia are one to two full-day programs on specific genealogy research topics. Past topics included Hispanic and African American genealogy information and guidance for seasoned professionals and novices alike.

The 2009 From the Records Book Group will meet the third Tuesday of September, October (College Park location), and November. We meet at 11 a.m. in Room G-24 of the National Archives Building in Washington, DC, for a discussion or film relating to the book and then, at noon, to discuss the book. Enter on Pennsylvania Avenue. The books may be purchased anywhere; the Archives Shop offers a discount to those who are participating in the book group.

* College Park location: 8601 Adelphi Road, College Park, MD 20740–6001, Lecture Room B. Visit our web site for directions at www.archives.gov/dc-metro/college-park/index.html#transp.

The General and the Jaguar: Pershing’s Hunt for Pancho Villa: A True Story of Revolution and Revenge, by Eileen Welsom

The General and the Jaguar takes a detailed look into the early morning of March 9, 1916, when Pancho Villa launched an attack on Columbus, NM, an action that took the lives of 18 American civilians and soldiers. The American government responded by dispatching troops, led by Gen. John Pershing, into Mexico in pursuit of Villa, while tensions continued to escalate between the two countries, bringing them to the brink of war.

Secret Empire: Eisenhower, the CIA, and the Hidden Story of America's Space Espionage, by John Elwood Clark

During the early and most dangerous years of the Cold War, a handful of Americans, led by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, revolutionized spying and warfare. In great secrecy and beyond the prying eyes of Congress and the press, they built exotic new machines that opened up the Soviet Union to surveillance and protected the United States from surprise nuclear attack. Secret Empire is the dramatic story of these men and their inventions. Veteran New York Times reporter and editor Philip Taubman interviewed dozens of participants and mined thousands of previously classified documents to tell this hidden, far-reaching story.

The Whiskey Merchant's Diary: An Urban Life in the Emerging Midwest, by Joseph J. Mersman (edited by Linda A. Fisher)

Joseph J. Mersman was a liquor merchant, a German American immigrant who aspired—with success—to become a self-made man. The diary he kept from 1847 to 1864 provides an intriguing account of life in Cincinnati and St. Louis—America's emerging frontier. Outside of Gold Rush diaries and emigration journals, few narrative records of the antebellum period have been published. As a record of both the man and the time in which he lived, The Whiskey Merchant's Diary is a valuable resource for social historians, providing significant details about bachelorhood, whiskey making, ballroom dancing, circus history, card games, steamboat transportation, gender roles, theater history, and Victorian etiquette. The diary is also the story of a man who confronted serious disease, and his descriptions of cholera and syphilis are exceptional. The late Linda A. Fisher was a public health physician, and a trained documentary editor.
