UNION MEMBERSHIP IN KENTUCKY – 2011

Union members accounted for 8.9 percent of wage and salary workers in Kentucky in both 2011 and 2010, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today. Regional Commissioner Janet S. Rankin noted that Kentucky’s union membership rate in 2011 marked the eighth consecutive year it was below 10 percent. (See chart 1 and table A.) The union membership rate for the state was at its peak, 14.8 percent, in 1989, the first year for which comparable state data are available. Nationwide, union members accounted for 11.8 percent of employed wage and salary workers in 2011, little changed from 11.9 percent in 2010. Kentucky’s rate has never exceeded the nationwide average in the history of the series.

Kentucky had 150,000 union members in 2011. An additional 23,000 workers were represented by a union on their main job or were covered by an employee association or contract while not union members themselves. (See table A.) Nationwide, 14.8 million wage and salary workers were union members in 2011 and 1.5 million wage and salary workers were not affiliated with a union but had jobs covered by a union contract.

NOTE: Data refer to the sole or principal job of full-and part-time wage and salary workers. Excluded are all self-employed workers regardless of whether or not their businesses are incorporated. Updated population controls are introduced annually with the release of January data.

In 2011, 21 states had union membership rates above the U.S. average, of which 12 had rates above 15 percent. (See table 1.) Of the 12 states with the highest rates, 4 were located in the Northeast, 3 in the Midwest, and the remaining 5 bordered the Pacific Ocean. (See chart 2.) New York had the highest rate at 24.1 percent, followed by Alaska (22.1 percent), Hawaii (21.5 percent), and Washington (19.0 percent). In fact, New York has had the highest membership rate in the nation for 15 of the past 17 years.

Twenty-nine states and the District of Columbia had union membership rates below the national average of 11.8 percent in 2011. Seven of these states, all in the South, had union membership rates below 5.0

percent, with North Carolina having the lowest, 2.9 percent. The next lowest rates were recorded in South Carolina (3.4 percent), Georgia (3.9 percent), Arkansas (4.2 percent), Louisiana (4.5 percent), and Tennessee and Virginia (4.6 percent each).

Over half of the 14.8 million union members in the United States lived in just seven states (California, 2.4 million; New York, 1.9 million; Illinois, 0.9 million; Pennsylvania, 0.8 million; Michigan, 0.7 million; and New Jersey and Ohio, 0.6 million each), though these states accounted for only one-third of wage and salary employment nationally.

State union membership levels depend on both the union membership rate and the employment level. For example, despite having 2.2 million fewer wage and salary employees statewide, the number of union members in Kentucky (150,000) was similar to that in Georgia (153,000). On the other hand, Kentucky and Connecticut had comparable numbers of wage and salary employees in 2011 but Connecticut had over 100,000 more union members.

Technical Note

The estimates in this release are obtained from the Current Population Survey (CPS), which provides the basic information on the labor force, employment, and unemployment. The survey is conducted monthly for the Bureau of Labor Statistics by the U.S. Census Bureau from a scientifically selected national sample of about 60,000 households. The union membership and earnings data are tabulated from one-quarter of the CPS monthly sample and are limited to wage and salary workers. All self-employed workers are excluded.

Union membership data, particularly for levels, are not strictly comparable with data for earlier years because of the introduction of updated population controls used in the CPS. These updated controls have little or no effect on unemployment rates and other ratios, such as union membership rates. For technical documentation and related information, including reliability of the CPS estimates, see www.bls.gov/cps/documentation.htm.
