

Contents

Executive Summary	iv
Introduction	1
Farmland Protection Programs and Rural Amenities	3
The Loss of Farmland	3
Box: Preservation of Non-Urban Lands, With a Focus on the Northeast: 1800s—1960s	5
Box: Non-Market Outputs from Agricultural Lands	7
Box: Externalities, Non-Market Goods, and Public Goods	8
Farmland Preservation and Rural Amenities	8
Box: Policies for Protecting Farmland	10
Farmland Protection Programs	12
Box: Purchase of Development Rights in Federal Programs	13
The Overall Demand for Farmland Protection	14
Preferences For Rural Amenities	15
Analysis of Farmland Protection Programs	19
National Analysis: A Review of Enabling Legislation	19
The Legislative Process	19
The Data	20
Results	20
In Depth Analysis: Focus on the Northeast	23
Analysis of Ranking Criteria Used in PDR Programs	24
Overview	24
Importance of Soil Quality	25
Unique Contribution to Agricultural Community	26
Preserving Larger Farms and Blocks of Farms	26
Location of Preserved Farms and Amenities Relative to Populated Areas	26
Effect of Purchasing Easements at Least Cost	27
Summary	27
Case Studies of Several State Programs	28
Overview	28
Summary of Maryland Case Study	29
Summary of Massachusetts Case Study	31
Summary of New Jersey Case Study	32
Summary of Pennsylvania Case Study	32
Summary of Vermont Case Study	33
Lessons Learned	35
Lesson 1: Though agricultural viability is the focus of farmland protection programs, that goal tells us little about the underlying amenities preferred	35
Lesson 2: Critical mass and the spatial pattern of permanent protection are often cited	36
Lesson 3: Permanent preservation does not mean no development of protected farmland	36
Lesson 4: The emphasis on high quality cropland seen in most farmland protection programs seems inconsistent with broader goals revealed in other analyses	37
Lesson 5: Suites of farmland protection laws evolve over time	38

Lesson 6: The design of a State’s suite of farmland protection programs depends on the State’s specific circumstances	39
Lesson 7: Other rural land protection programs substitute for, and complement, farmland protection programs	39
Conclusions: The Role of Farmland Protection in the Supply of Rural Amenities	41
Implications for a Federal Role	43
Appendix 1. Rural Amenities: A Problem in the Private Provision of a Public Good	45
Appendix 2: Econometric Analysis of the Adoption of PDR Programs	47
Appendix 3: Classifying Farmland Protection Laws, Using the Expanded List of Rural Amenities	49
Appendix 4: Review of Ranking Criteria	53
Box: Example of a Ranking System	53
Appendix 5: Farmland Protection Programs in a Multi-Program Policy Environment	57
Glossary	61
References	63