Solis announced that the U.S. Department of Labor is releasing an additional $49.9 million to the state of Michigan to provide career training and employment and case management services to workers whose jobs are impacted for traderelated reasons, as well as for associated administrative costs. Combined with the original fiscal year 2009 allocations, Michigan now has nearly $60 million available to assist trade-affected workers.  "This distribution will assist the state of Michigan in providing needed career services to workers who are impacted by foreign trade," said Secretary Solis. "Today the department reaffirms its commitment to these workers and their long-term career success."  The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (Recovery Act) includes a major expansion and reform of the Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program to ensure that all U.S. workers negatively affected by trade have the skills, resources and support to gain re-employment.
