The Importance of Breakfast

Your Morning Meal

We've all heard it before...breakfast is the most important meal of the day. Research backs this concept up, but do you? Eating breakfast has several health benefits, including improved concentration, weight control, improved performance, and much more. Breakfast helps growing children and young adults concentrate in school, perform better on tests, and retain more information. Having a well fueled brain also supports important skills such as creativity and critical thinking. Unfortunately, it is not uncommon for people to start their day without breakfast, or just as bad, load up on a quick, sugar-filled treat like a muffin or pastry. Both options sabotage health and performance, and can make it difficult to maintain a healthy body weight. Feel your best each day by creating healthier morning habits!

Say No to Skipping Breakfast

Eating a nutritious morning meal that includes protein and fiber can help you consume fewer calories throughout the day by keeping blood glucose levels stable. A common misconception is that it is okay to skip your morning meal and "save" those calories for lunch and dinner. Ideally, calories should be eaten throughout the day. People who skip breakfast tend to overeat at other meals, experience cravings for carbohydrates in the afternoon, and feel hungrier in the evening. Fueling up in the morning also helps to kick start your metabolism, which will in turn help your body burn more fat

What is a "Good" Breakfast?

According to the USDA standards for a healthy diet, each plate of food you consume should be $\frac{1}{2}$ fruits and vegetables, $\frac{1}{4}$ proteins, and $\frac{1}{4}$ starches. Choose from as many food groups as you can, including protein, healthy complex carbohydrates, fruits, vegetables and low-fat dairy. Next, combine them any way you desire. Be creative; there is no wrong recipe when the ingredients are fresh and healthy. Try whole grain cereal topped with strawberries and skim milk. Or perhaps create a yogurt parfait with granola and fruit. Cook some oatmeal and sprinkle it with cinnamon and nuts. Eggs are a great source of protein and omega fatty acids. Make an omelet filled with seasonal chopped veggies for a satisfying start to your day. The possibilities are endless...

Healthy Breakfast Ideas

Feeling bored with your regular morning routine? Need quick meals on the go? Try these ideas:

- Sauté onion and tomatoes, add scrambled eggs, wrap it up with a whole wheat tortilla and top with salsa.
- Blend together – a banana, an apple, chopped kale leaves, orange or other juices, and ice cubes for a quick grab and go breakfast. Add ground flax seeds for an extra nutritional boost.
- Greek yogurt with fruit and granola
- Whole wheat toast with nut butter and fruit
- Oatmeal – add fresh, frozen, or dried fruit and nuts for a little variety!

USDA & My Plate Recommendations

Not exactly sure how many fruits, vegetables, servings of protein, and carbohydrates to fit into your daily calorie count? Check out these guidelines provided by the USDA and My Plate (based on the average need of an adult):

- Fruit: 2 cups
- Vegetables: 2.5 - 3 cups
- Grains: 6-8 ounce servings (making at least ½ of these whole grain servings)
- Protein: 5-6 ounce servings
- Dairy: 3 cups
- Oils: 5-7 teaspoons (most servings should come from unsaturated fat sources)
