- Congressional volumes noted in the above tables are generally by session, which don't always correspond to precise years, while executive material is by year, which doesn't always correspond to the named President who would take office on March 4 after first elected or on January 20 (per 20th Amdt to Const. adopted in 1933).
- + Indicates added session(s) of the U.S. Senate, usually for confirmations and/or ratifications.
- The Annals of Congress (covering 1789-1824) were published retrospectively from 1834 to 1856 by Gales and Seaton from newspaper and other accounts.
- Between 1834-37 [23rd - 25th (1st session) Congresses] the Register of Debates, published by Gales and Seaton, continued publication (v. 10-14) contemporaneously with the Congressional Globe.
- The U.S. Serial Set is an on-going collection of House and Senate reports and documents published by the U.S. Congress and arranged in numbered volumes.
- The American State Papers (1789-1838) are a collection of early government documents that are bound in a series of volumes on specialized topics including Indian Affairs, Military Affairs, Naval Affairs, Foreign Relations, Public Lands, Commerce and Navigation, Claims, Finance, Post Office Department, and Miscellaneous.
