

Jonathan B. Hunter

Deputy to the Garrison Commander

Prior to becoming part of the Fort Campbell Garrison Command team in January 2015, Mr. Hunter served as the Deputy Chief of Staff, U.S. Army Installation Management Command (IMCOM). Mr Hunter began his civil service career following a 27 year Army career where he served in a variety of command and staff positions in intelligence, plans and installation management fields, including command of two Army Garrisons. As a Army civilian, Mr Hunter has previously served as the Director of the IMCOM Commanding General's Initiatives Group, Deputy Director Southeast Region IMCOM, Region Installation Support Team Chief, and Region Plans Division Chief.

Mr. Hunter has extensive experience in cost management and performance management related to delivery of installation services, as well as development of installation support agreements in support of Army units located on sister service installations. While commanding the U.S. Army Garrison Fort Huachuca, the Garrison was recognized as best cost management program in the Army, and also recognized for implementation of a variety of innovative partnerships to improve support to Soldiers and Families as well as reduce costs. During his command he led the development and successful execution of one of the Army's first municipal service partnership agreements under the Municipal Service Agreement Pilot Program.

Mr. Hunter holds a Masters Degree from the US Army Command and General Staff College's School of Advanced Military Studies, a Masters Degree from the US Army War College, and is a graduate of the War College's Advanced Strategic Arts Program. He is contributing author to "National Security Challenges for the 21st Century" published by Strategic Studies Institute in 2004.
