“ Meeting the war-fighting needs of the troops now and taking care of them properly when they get home must be the priority. ”

—Robert M. Gates, Secretary of Defense

“Our warriors are our country’s most important resource and when they return injured or ill from war, we must care for them without fail.”

Gordon England
Deputy Secretary of Defense

In September 2007, the JTF CAPMED, a fully functional Standing Joint Task Force was established. Located on the National Naval Medical Center campus in Bethesda, MD, and reporting directly to the Secretary of Defense through the Deputy Secretary of Defense, this Command has been charged with leading the way for the effective and efficient realignment of military health care in the National Capital Region.

MISSION

THE WHOLE IS GREATER THAN THE SUM OF ITS PARTS

“ Our warriors are our country's most important asset and we must accommodate their every need when they return from Harm's Way. ”
—Gordon England, Deputy Secretary of Defense

“ As we look to the exciting time ahead it's important to remember that each Service brings unique and critical capabilities to our mission, and our goal is to achieve an integrated healthcare delivery system which will bring the 'best of the best' together to work in concert on behalf of the population they serve. ”

Only the best care for our nation's best will do

ACCOMPLISHING THE MISSION:

As a new integrated medical, research, teaching and care center of excellence at the hub of the nation's premier military regional healthcare system, we provide care to our Nation's President, world leaders including Congress, as well as our service members, past and present. As we continue to evolve in meeting their needs and exceeding their expectations, our core mission will never waiver. Change, as we know it, is inevitable. So, as we continue to grow, integrating functions and sharing resources across Service lines, we embrace the opportunities our growth bestows us, which allows our customers to reap the benefits they rightly deserve.
