2. Actively identify requirements and aggressively pursue resources to attain the highest measure of unit, individual, and materiel readiness.
3. Train to the highest measurable standards, emphasizing innovative cost-effective technologies, venues, and solutions which ensure operational readiness and moderate reserve unique characteristics.
4. Optimize the Marine Corps ability to fully integrate the Reserve Component into the Total Force.
5. Revolutionize our approach to providing support services to sustain and enhance personal, family, and Force readiness.
6. Explore and implement new ways to tell the Marine Corps story and project the Marine Corps ethos.

Multifacet Threats; Full-Spectrum Readiness

The U.S. Marine Corps Reserve fully understands that the road ahead will be challenging in the immediate conflict in Iraq and in subsequent battles and campaigns of the Long War, which we believe to be a multifaceted, generational struggle. In an environment where the Total Force Marine Corps must be able to rapidly adapt to broad strategic conditions and wide-ranging threats, the Marine Corps Reserve, a primarily operational reserve, stands ready to meet the challenges before us.

Paramount to maintaining our high level of effectiveness and readiness in this operational reserve environment is the critical task and responsibility for ensuring our Reserve Marines and Sailors are appropriately equipped, trained, and organized to meet and exceed the already high expectations of the Total Force Marine Corps and the American people.

I'm pleased to report that Marine Forces Reserve remains fully funded for all mission requirements in support of the Long War. Upon activation, all deploying Reserve units have had access to the same financial resources for all training and individual equipment requirements as their Active Component counterparts.

As with all we do, our focus is on the individual Marine and Sailor. Our ongoing efforts to equip and train these most valued resources have resulted in obtaining the latest-generation individual combat and protective equipment, such as the M16A4 service rifle, M4 carbine, rifle combat optic scopes, improved helmet pad suspension systems, enhanced small arms protective insert plates, modular tactical vests, and the latest-generation AN/PVS-14 night-vision devices. Every member of Marine Forces Reserve who deployed during each year of the Long War did so fully equipped with the most current authorized individual combat clothing and equipment, including personal protective equipment.

Equipment Readiness

Our top priority for the coming year will be to continue providing every Marine and Sailor in a deploying Reserve unit with the latest generation of individual combat and protective equipment. Equally essential are our equipping priorities for training to enable a balanced approach to training, which includes the full complement of equipment across the Marine Air-Ground Task Force. This complement includes essential communications, crew-served weapon systems, ground mobility, and ground support equipment.

The final equipment support component is to provide adequate funding to our Operation and Maintenance accounts to sustain training and pre-deployment operations.

Continued support of current budget and procurement related initiatives, such as the president's budget submissions, supplemental requests, and National Guard and Reserve

Equipment Appropriations (NGREA), will guarantee our ability to continue to properly equip and train our Marines and Sailors. Marine Corps Reserve equipment requirements are registered in each of these as part of the Marine Corps Total Force submissions. Reserve equipment requirements that cannot be met in a timely manner with these vehicles are identified as the Reserve portion of the Unfunded Programs List, and equipment procurement requirements are sometimes resourced by NGREA.

The value and importance of NGREA to the Marine Corps Reserve is immeasurable. Since 2002, NGREA has provided more than $200 million to Marine Forces Reserve for equipment procurements, which provided some critical capabilities to our nation. In the past three years, through consistent funding, we have been able to close out major equipment purchases— or to buy to our established training allowance—in 32 different end items. The Fiscal Year (FY) 2009 NGREA funding will enable us to close out two other equipment purchases as well as to accelerate the purchase of other equipment deficiencies.

As a result of these current budget and procurement-related initiatives, the Marine Corps Reserve ground equipment readiness rates remain high—above 90 percent—based on the training allowance.

The Marine Corps Reserve equipment investment overseas since 2004 in support of the Long War is approximately 5 percent of our overall equipment and includes various communications, motor transport, engineer, and ordnance equipment, as well as several modern weapons systems such as the new high-mobility artillery rocket system and the latest-generation light-armored vehicle. This investment greatly adds to the war fighting capability of the Total Force Marine Corps with minimal impact to our home-station training requirements. Deliberate planning at the service level is currently under way to reset the Total Force to include resourcing the Reserve equipment investment made to the Long War, which will greatly enhance the Marine Corps Reserve's ability to remain ready, relevant, and responsive to the demands of our Corps.

By Lt. Gen. Jack Bergman

In addition, funding has been provided to meet the associated demands that the Long War has levied on supporting installation infrastructure; Marine Forces Reserve is comprised of 183 sites in 48 states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. More than $165 million was authorized during 2008 to repair aging Reserve training centers and enhance their capability to train and support deploying Reservists.

Marine Forces Reserve Facilities Sustainment, Restoration, and Modernization (FSRM) program funding levels continue to address immediate maintenance requirements and longer term improvements to our older facilities. Sustainment funding has allowed us to maintain our current level of facility readiness for our 32-owned sites without further facility degradation. The proposed FY 09 budget should result in programmed upgrades to facility readiness for eight of those sites with corresponding upgrades in facility readiness by FY 10 for two additional sites. This enables the Restoration and Modernization program to be put back on track to address any remaining deficiencies. Additionally, further use of Real Property Exchanges (RPX) and other similar laws has been an invaluable tool toward addressing shortfalls and emerging requirements. The RPX program extension to 2010 will allow us further opportunities to use proceeds from existing older properties to fill gaps in minor construction projects for our centers to meet evolving needs. Additionally, the Military Construction, Navy Reserve (MCNR) program, including Marine Corps-exclusive and Navy-led projects, is addressing critical needs for new facilities to replace older buildings and accommodate changes in Marine Corps Reserve force structure. The MCNR and FSRM programs are essential to addressing the aging infrastructure of the Marine Corps Reserve.

Force Generation Model

While a strong foundation in equipment and infrastructure exists to support the training of our force, the cornerstone of our ability to provide ready-to-go units and personnel lies with the Force Generation Model.

The Force Generation Model continues to assist service and joint force planners who can count on a consistent flow of manned, equipped, trained, and ready Selected Marine Corps Reserve units to support future operations in the Long War. This steady flow of Reserve force packages also supports our Active Component in reaching their stated goal of 1:2 dwell time.

The model, based on a one-year activation to four-plus years in a non-activated status, continues to be both supportable and sustainable, providing the Marine Corps with a truly operational Reserve force. Predictable activation dates permit unit commanders to focus their training on core mission capabilities early in the dwell and then train to specific mission tasks for Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom once they are within 12 to 18 months of activation. Furthermore, regularly scheduled dwell time enables our units to recover from past activation practices that had required substantial cross-leveling while simultaneously degrading parent unit cohesion in order to deploy combat capabilities. With each subsequent rotation, the requirement to cross-level Reserve units decreases.

We continue to believe the full benefit of the Force Generation Model will be realized once we have completed a full cycle of rotations, which is presently nine rotations per cycle, and the Active Component reaches the authorized end-strength of 202,000. That, coupled with our use of the Force Generation Model, will be instrumental in the Selected Marine Corps Reserve attaining a 1:5 dwell.

Realizing that deployments take a toll on Active Component Marines, causing some to transition from Active Duty because of high personnel tempo, we continue to offer the Selected Marine Corps Reserve Affiliation Involuntary Activation Deferment policy, which was instituted in June 2006. It allows a Marine who has recently deployed an option for a two-year deferment from involuntary activation if he or she joins a Selected Marine Corps Reserve unit. The intent of the two-year involuntary deferment is to encourage good Marines to participate and still maintain breathing room to build a new civilian career.

The activation deferment and other initiatives support our focus of providing an environment that attracts and retains dedicated, high performing individuals, which is evidenced by strong Reserve recruiting and retention results. In FY 08, the Marine Corps Reserve achieved 100 percent of its recruiting goal for non-prior-service recruiting (4,235) and prior-service recruiting (4,501). For the current year, Reserve officer retention has thus far remained above historical norms, whereas enlisted Reserve retention is currently slightly lower than the FY 06 and FY 07 average, but is being monitored closely. We continue to offer several incentives for enlisted Marines to stay in the Selected Marine Corps Reserve (SMCR), including the maximum allowable $15,000 SMCR affiliation bonus for an initial three-year commitment. We also offer a $10,000 SMCR officer affiliation bonus for those officers who affiliate with an SMCR unit and agree to participate for three years.

As I stated in my article in last year's December issue of The Officer, junior officer recruiting and consequently meeting our Reserve company grade requirement continues to be the most challenging area. The Active Duty Marine Corps has for decades been the primary source of officer accessions into the Marine Corps Reserve, which meant that officers were senior first lieutenants or junior captains by the time they entered the Reserve. Additionally, current Active Component manpower practices and high officer retention rates have significantly reduced the number of officers leaving Active Duty following their initial three- or four-year service obligation.

Therefore, we continue to offer Reserve officer commissioning programs in order to increase the number of company grade officers within deploying Reserve units while addressing our overall shortage of junior officers in our Reserve units. Eligibility for the Reserve Enlisted Commissioning Program is offered to qualified Active Duty enlisted Marines. The Meritorious Commissioning Program—Reserve is offered to qualified enlisted Marines, Reserve and Active, who possess an associate's degree or equivalent number of semester hours.

The Officer Candidate Course—Reserve (OCC-R) is the most successful of the three programs. The OCC-R is an innovative program that directly accesses individuals into the Reserve Component and has proven to be a valuable tool to address Reserve lieutenant shortages in the SMCR. The program enables qualified college seniors and graduates to apply for a Marine Reserve commission for a billet in their hometown, filling a niche market previously unavailable in the Marine Corps. In existence since October 2006, the program has already produced 117 second lieutenants in the Marine Corps Reserve with many more in the pipeline. This precedence-setting program provides Reserve officers the opportunity to undergo the same basic training as their Active Duty counterparts: Officer Candidate School, the Basic School, and a military occupational specialty course. It also offers the opportunity for an additional year of Headquarters Marine Corps-funded Active Duty at their Reserve unit. The OCC-R focuses on ground related billets. Priorities of fill for recruitment of candidates are tied to our Force Generation Model.

A New Paradigm

In the long run, if the Marine Corps Reserve is to remain ready and relevant, we must begin to implement necessary changes to the superseded Cold War Reserve model. In particular, we must develop a new paradigm that allows our top performing Marines to extend their service to the Total Force through a continuum of service. We must continue to develop policies and procedures that allow the seamless transition of individual Reservists on and off of active duty and that permit varying levels of participation by the servicemembers over the course of a military career. Current administrative policies routinely raise unnecessary obstacles to transitions between military jobs and duty status, creating barriers to volunteerism. Presently, there are a significant number of different types of Reserve service, primarily tied to the Cold War model of a strategic reserve.

In order to successfully transition a specified number of individuals and unit capabilities to an operational reserve, that number of duty statuses could and should be reduced.

Lastly, I would like to briefly mention the fact that we have wonderful programs in place that support family readiness, which I firmly believe have a direct correlation to our Marines' and Sailors' readiness.

Opportunity that focuses primarily on these programs and the types of support they offer.

Understanding Reserve duty - how duty is fulfilled in Marine Forces Reserve

Editor's Note: This story was first published in the April-June 2006 Marines Magazine.

SGT. JOHN LAWSON III

HEADQUARTERS MARINE CORPS

Most people think being a reservist means serving one weekend a month and two weeks a year. In many instances, that's the right idea, but there are a variety of other ways to be a Marine without being part of the active-duty Corps.

To name just a few options, a reserve Marine can serve part time with an active-duty unit, serve full time in a unit while remaining close to home, or serve on a special task for 179 days or less. Service, of course, must satisfy Corps needs, and the possibility of mobilization to active duty always exists. Still, there is much more flexibility in reserve duty than most people realize.

Generally, reserve duty entails drills and annual training – a drill being a general period of service. Each year, a typical reserve Marine performs about 24 drill days, plus two weeks of annual training. However, as an examination of the various reserve programs shows, Marines can perform the requisite number of drills and the two-week annual training in many ways. What's more, there are some arrangements that don't involve the usual drills and annual training.

Active Reserve (AR)

The Active Reserve program, which may sound like an oxymoron, allows a reserve Marine to serve on a full-time basis in billets such as recruiter, administrator, or even drill instructor. This is a good option for Marines coming off active duty who want to stay closer to home, but still want to be part of the Corps.

For example, as a member of the Active Reserve, Staff Sgt. Douglas Levesque is a transitional recruiter at Marine Corps Base Quantico, Va. He has been an active-duty Marine, and he has experienced life outside the Marine Corps as a civilian. Now he works as a full-time Marine reservist, drawing on his background to counsel Marines who are contemplating a life beyond active duty.

Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMA)

Another option is the Individual Mobilization Augmentees program. In this program, a reservist who can fill a particular need with an active-duty unit performs reserve duty with that unit. The ability of the reservist to fill the need is the deciding factor, and it doesn't matter whether that ability is the result of military training, civilian education, work experience, or something else.

Dale McNeil, who oversees roughly 250 IMA reservists at Marine Corps Base Quantico and Marine Corps Combat Development Command in Virginia, said that flexibility is usually a hallmark of an IMA tour of duty.

While everything hinges on what works for the sponsoring unit, McNeil said IMA reservists commonly perform their drills and annual training on schedules that create minimal friction with civilian-world obligations.

For example, there are IMA Marines who do all of their drills and their two-week annual training consecutively, McNeil said.

As long as the sponsoring unit is getting what it needs and the reserve Marine is meeting annual drill and training requirements, it doesn't matter whether the work is done on particular days, weeks, or months.

Selected Marine Corps Reserve (SMCR)

The Selected Marine Corps Reserve offers the most traditional form of reserve duty.

A typical unit in the Selected Marine Corps Reserve has a designated drill weekend each month. Also, the unit typically performs its two weeks of annual training as a group; very little is done on an individual basis.

McNeil said a Selected Marine Corps Reserve unit offers a good way for a reservist to experience that "band of brothers" camaraderie without being on active duty. Also, Selected Marine Corps Reserve units offer the most opportunities to train in traditional Marine Corps specialties; i.e. infantry, artillery, tanks, etc.

Active Duty Operational Support (ADOS)*

Sometimes the Corps needs reserve Marines to perform active-duty tours of less than six months. Reservists seeking orders for one of these tours can contact a Reserve Support Unit and request information on Active Duty Operational Support. The work can support a variety of activities, ranging from military operations to administration to training.

In addition to providing information on Active Duty Operational Support, a Reserve Support Unit has a staff that can answer almost any conceivable question about reserve opportunities. A Reserve Support Unit can be found at most major Marine installations.

Individual Ready Reserve (IRR)

The Individual Ready Reserve is a pool of reservists who can be called to active duty in a time of crisis.

Marines in the Individual Ready Reserve typically report one day per year to demonstrate that they meet all requirements for physical appearance and uniforms. Most of these Marines have some time remaining on their contracts, but have fulfilled their obligations as active-duty Marines or as members of reserve entities such as the Selected Marine Corps Reserve.

Associate Duty

Some Marines leaving active duty are so focused on adjusting to civilian life that they aren't prepared to set aside time for reserve obligations, even though reserve duty might be something they would like once they settled into civilian life.

Associate Duty offers a way to keep an iron in the fire. A Marine on Associate Duty drills with a reserve unit without formally joining the unit or getting paid. Associate Duty offers a means of preserving status and readiness without incurring obligations. Should the Marine choose to become more formally involved in the reserves, Associate Duty allows for an easy transition.

Knowing Your Options

There are several ways to find out what opportunities are available in the reserves.

Civilians can enlist in the Marine Corps, go to boot camp, receive all necessary additional training, and move over to the reserves in less than a year. Anyone interested can contact a Marine recruiter.

Civilians also can seek an officer's commission in the Marine Corps Reserve, though about two years on active duty are necessary before making the switch to reserve duty. An Officer Selection Officer can provide details.

Marines leaving active duty typically have many options in the reserves.

A transitional recruiter can answer questions and help find the right fit.

Staff Sgt. Levesque, a transitional recruiter, says any Marine who is mentally, morally, and physically qualified can find a place in the reserves.

"There's always something," he said. "We always find something for Marines." If necessary, Levesque said, the Marine Corps can even train a Marine in a new occupational specialty if doing so is necessary to find a reserve billet.

If a Marine gets out of the Corps but then wants to get back in as a reservist, a prior-service recruiter can help.

The Rewards

No one joins the Marine Corps to get rich, and the same holds true for the reserves.

Depending on pay grade, the money is about "a car payment" a month, as Charmale Gallagher said. Gallagher retired as a gunnery sergeant in March 2006 after serving three years of active duty and 20 years in the reserves. She currently works as a civilian administrator at Quantico.

Reservists can also make themselves eligible for college money through the G.I. Bill and for retirement benefits that kick in at age 60.

Ask reservists why they carve time from civilian life for the sake of the Marine Corps, and the answer is typically like the one from Chief Warrant Officer 4 Helen Holman:

RESERVE FORCE FIGURES

INDIVIDUAL READY RESERVE (APPROX. 60,000)

SELECTED MARINE CORPS RESERVE (APPROX. 39,600)

{INCLUDES:

INDIVIDUAL MOBILIZATION AUGMENTEES (3,487), AND ACTIVE RESERVE(2,261)}

“The camaraderie in the Marine Corps – the sense of family – is incredible.”

Holman joined the Corps in 1967 as an active-duty Marine and became a reservist in 1974. She is currently on active duty as an administrative chief at Quantico, but her home is Sacramento, Calif.

Master Sgt. Ted Bogosh, who became an active-duty Marine in 1974, joined the reserves in 1978. He said it hasn't been easy to juggle his landscaping business with reserve duty.

Regardless, he said, it has been worth all the time and trouble. From May 2004 through January 2006, Bogosh deployed, spending most of his time in Iraq and some in Afghanistan.

* ADOS was formerly known as Active Duty Special Work (ADSW)

His job was repairing the robots that search for or dispose of improvised explosive devices. Given all the dangers posed by IEDs, any opportunity to take a Marine out of the equation and substitute a robot is a welcome opportunity. “We save a lot of people having those robots there,” Bogosh noted.

Helping the Corps is the reward that makes being a reserve Marine worthwhile, Bogosh said. “As for somebody wanting to make a difference, I can't think of a better way to make a difference.”

Marine Forces Reserve

Marine Forces Reserve is the headquarters command for approximately 100,000 Reserve Marines and 187 Reserve Training Centers located throughout the United States.

The United States Marine Corps Reserve was established when Congress passed the Naval Appropriations Act of Aug. 29, 1916 and is responsible for providing trained units and qualified individuals to be mobilized for active duty in time of war, national emergency or contingency operations. Marine Forces Reserve also provides personnel and operational tempo relief for active component forces in peacetime.

The Marine Reserve team possesses capabilities across the full spectrum of military operations; from humanitarian assistance and disaster relief support to the most potent combat forces in the world.

Marine Forces Reserve, the largest command in the Corps, has four major subordinate commands: the 4th Marine Division, 4th Marine Aircraft Wing, 4th Marine Logistics Group, and Marine Corps Mobilization Command.

Serving with great distinction, in every clime and place, Reserve Marines have regularly operated alongside the active component in both World Wars, Korean Conflict, Vietnam War, Persian Gulf War and numerous other conflicts including Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom. In order to keep its fighting edge, Marine Forces Reserve's units participate annually in numerous large exercises in places such as Norway, South Korea, the Balkans, Central America, Thailand and Africa.

The vision for Marine Forces Reserve is to be the Nation's premier Reserve component, seamlessly integrating with the active forces, enhancing the operational reach and endurance of the Marine Corps... always capable of fighting and winning.

Marine Forces Reserve's motto, "Ready, Relevant, Responsive," articulates the necessary actions required to provide a sustainable force for the long-term defense of our nation.

Mobilization Command

Maj. Gen. Kenneth J. Lee,
Commanding General,
Mobilization Command

Sgt. Maj. Clinton Carter,
Sergeant Major,
Mobilization Command

The Marine Corps Mobilization Command (MOBCOM) is the sole administrative provider for four distinct and varied sections of the Marine Corps Reserve—Individual Ready Reserve (IRR), Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMA), Mobilization Training Unit (MTU), and the Peacetime Wartime Support Teams (P/WST).

IRR Marines are those Marines who have finished their initial active or reserve obligation and are now members of the Individual Ready Reserve. IRR Marines may muster annually for administrative purposes.

IMA Marines are paid drilling reserve Marines that perform duty in support of active duty units. Typically the drill schedule has more flexibility than an SMCR drilling reserve Marine. IMA Marines are required to maintain annual training/medical readiness just like SMCR Marines.

MTU Marines are drilling reserve Marines that earn reserve retirement credit but there is no pay associated with their drills (IDT). The training/medical readiness standards remain the same as with IMA/SMCR. MTU Marines may elect SGLI coverage and pay their own premiums. Like the IMA/SMCR Marines, the MTU Marines must also have performance evaluations.

This year marks the 44th anniversary of MOBCOM. It was during the opening stages of American involvement in Vietnam that the precursor of MOBCOM underwent a series of name changes, though its initial mission to provide total administrative support for the Marine Corps Individual Ready Reserve continues.

MOBCOM's mission is to contact, accept, track, screen and prepare reserve Marines so they are ready for active duty in order to provide ready Marines. Readiness means that MOBCOM can contact and field reserve Marines medically and administratively capable of immediate deployment to global operations.

The support MOBCOM provides helps Marine Forces Reserve mobilize rapidly and efficiently, as was proven in Operations Desert Shield/Storm and is evident today with Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom. □

4th Marine Division

Maj. Gen. James L. Williams
Commanding General,
4th MarDiv

Sgt. Maj. George L. Shine,
Sergeant Major,
4th MarDiv

Fourth Marine Division is the largest ground combat element in the Marine Corps and is comprised of approximately 22,000 Marines across 42 states.

The 4th Marine Division provides a commander with the personnel and equipment to conduct infantry, artillery and mechanized operations.

Activated on Aug. 16, 1943, this unit was plunged into several famous World War II campaigns including the Marshall Islands, Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima.

After peace was declared in 1945, 4th Marine Division was the first Marine division selected to return to the United States. It was deactivated at Camp Pendleton on Nov. 28, 1945. On Feb. 16, 1966, a headquarters nucleus of the division was reactivated at Camp Pendleton, and its colors were uncased June 23, 1966.

During Operations Desert Shield and Storm, numerous units were mobilized and deployed to the Persian Gulf Region. These units provided combat personnel and combat support that contributed to the victory of the allied forces.

The 4th Marine Division's primary mission is to provide trained combat and combat support personnel and units to augment and reinforce the active component in time of war or national emergency; and to have the capability to reconstitute the division, if required.

Three infantry regiments make up the division's fighting backbone: the 23rd, 24th, and 25th. This team is reinforced by the 14th Marine Artillery Regiment, 4th Combat Engineer Battalion and 4th Reconnaissance Battalion. The division is further strengthened by the 4th Tank Battalion, Reinforced and also by 4th Assault Amphibian Battalion and 4th Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion, Reinforced.

To remain ready for mobilization, 4th Marine Division participates in approximately 60 annual training exercises.

Some of these exercises included training in desert, jungle, mountain, urban and cold weather environments. They also maintain the ability to conduct amphibious assaults and security operations. □

4th Marine Logistics Group

Maj. Gen. Darrell L. Moore,
Commanding General,
4th MLG

Sgt. Maj. Alexander Williams,
Sergeant Major,
4th MLG

The Marines and sailors of 4th Marine Logistics Group (4th MLG) provide the full range of critical logistical support needed to keep Marine Forces Reserve units fully combat ready.

The mission of 4th Marine Logistics Group is to provide general and direct support plus sustained combat service support above and beyond the organic capabilities of a Marine Air-Ground Task Force (MAGTF). 4th Marine Logistics Group provides support to MAGTF units both in garrison and during amphibious assaults and subsequent operations ashore. They are capable of providing global service support in multiple locations around the world. 4th MLG's functional capabilities lie in six main areas: maintenance, supply, transportation, medical services, dental care and engineering support.

The 4th Force Service Support Regiment headquarters was activated Feb. 6, 1966, at the Armed Forces Reserve Center in Midland, Texas. In January 1968, the headquarters relocated to the Marine Reserve Training Center, Orlando, and then to the Navy and Marine Corps Reserve Training Center, Atlanta, during 1971.

In May 1976, the unit was re-designated as the 4th Force Service Support Group, Fleet Marine Force. The headquarters remained in Atlanta for 10 years, then moved to Marietta, Ga., in 1987. The flag of the 4th Marine Logistics Group has been located in New Orleans since February 1992.

The group consists of Headquarters and Service Battalion, 4th Maintenance Battalion, 4th Supply Battalion, 6th Engineer Support Battalion, 4th Landing Support Battalion, 6th Motor Transport Battalion, 6th Communications Battalion, 4th Medical Battalion and 4th Dental Battalion.

In recent years, 4th MLG has evolved into an operational-level logistics arm for the Marine Corps through its Marine Logistics Command (MLC) and the attendant operations center. The MLC is designed to provide a "warm start" capability that facilitates a rapid transition from peacetime potential to real-world, real-time execution of needed operational logistics capacity during war-time.

The diversified command is comprised of more than 10,000 Marines and Sailors in more than 50 locations across the United States, with more than 150 Military Occupational Specialties represented.

These Marines and Sailors keep their skills sharp by participating in a multitude of exercises throughout the United States and around the globe in addition to providing regular combat service support for the Global War on Terror. □

4th Marine Aircraft Wing

Brig. Gen. John M. Croley,
Commanding General,
4th MAW

Sgt. Maj. Paul K. Anderson,
Sergeant Major,
4th MAW

The 4th Marine Aircraft Wing is composed of Marine Aircraft Groups: MAG 41, MAG 46 and MAG 49. The aircraft groups are supported by Marine Wing Support Group 47 and Marine Air Control Group 48.

At its inception, Marine Reserve Aviation consisted of a few men with obsolete aircraft. World War II saw the activation of 1,278 reservists who fought in the Pacific skies and supported ground operations.

Currently, there are approximately 8,500 Marines assigned to 4th Marine Aircraft Wing.

Their rotary-wing assets include the CH-53E Super Stallion, CH-46E Sea Knight, AH-1W Super Cobra, and the UH-1N Huey. The fixed wing aircraft are the F/A-18A+ Hornet, UC-12 King Air, UC-35C Citation, F-5 Tiger II and KC-130 Hercules.

The 4th Marine Aircraft Wing's mission is to organize, train and equip individual Marines and combat ready groups, squadrons and air defense control units to augment and reinforce the active component when required. They continue to strive toward seamless integration with active units in order to serve as part of the total force.

To make the integration with the active component seamless, 4th Marine Aircraft Wing takes part in approximately 25 exercises annually. These exercises help ensure they will be ready to answer their country's call when needed.

The strength of 4th Marine Aircraft Wing lies in the highly trained and motivated Marines who work behind the scenes performing all the necessary duties that keep the aircraft safely operating. From the mechanics, ordnance specialists, air traffic controllers and fire and rescue personnel, safety is everyone's responsibility and one they take very seriously.

It is this mindset that allows the 4th Marine Aircraft Wing to maintain its high operational tempo and outstanding safety record. □

Bonuses and programs aimed at those who would like to serve the Marine Corps Reserve

Reserve Enlistment Bonuses

The Marines are offering an enlistment bonus of $20,000 for individuals who enlist in the Marine Corps Reserves in specified Military Occupational Specialties during Fiscal Year 2009 (Oct. 1, 2008 through Sept. 30, 2009).

Additionally, the Marine Corps Reserves is offering extra educational money to certain applicants who enlist in the Marine Corps Reserves through the Montgomery GI Bill Kicker.

This incentive is offered to all individuals who enlist in the Marine Corps Reserves under the 6 x 2 program, in select MOS's.

The MGIB-SR Kicker incentive provides educational assistance payments of $350 a month, for up to 36 months of full time educational pursuit, in addition to current MGIB benefits.

Complete information about these two programs is available in MARADMIN 549/08

SMCR Enlisted Affiliation Bonus

This program offers a bonus of $15,000 for enlisted Marines who affiliate with an SMCR unit. Eligible Marines must have 36 months of contractual time at the time of affiliation; or be eligible to re-enlist for 36 months in the SMCR; or be eligible to extend in order to have a total of 36 months of contractual time at the time of affiliation. Noncommissioned officers ineligible due to a PMOS mismatch may retrain, and recipients of this incentive will incur a three-year obligation. Due to finite funds, incentives will be issued on a first come/first serve basis. Complete information is available in MARADMIN 553/08.

Selected Reserves Active Reserve Re-enlistment Bonus

Sergeants may have no more than 10 years of active duty and Staff Sergeants may have no more than 15 years of active duty service. Marines may have no more than 20 years of total service.

Marines must be career designated or are reenlisting for the purpose of career designation in the Active Reserve program.

The incentive amount is $15,000. For complete information see MARADMIN 571/08

Reserve Promotion Affiliation Program

Lance corporals and corporals who have not previously served in a drilling reserve unit may receive a noncompetitive promotion to the next higher grade upon joining the Selected Marine Corps Reserve during fiscal 2009.

Marines must be free of nonjudicial punishment and previous rank reduction, possess two consecutive first-class physical fitness scores, complete the appropriate Marine Corps Institute course, be within height and weight standards, and possess the minimum time in grade and service necessary for promotion. See MARADMIN 553/08 for details.

SMCR Officer Affiliation Bonus

MARADMIN 552/08 outlines the Corps' only monetary incentive for company-grade officers to stay Marine. Under the officer affiliation bonus policy, officers who left the active component within the last three years and join a drilling unit in fiscal year 2009 can receive a $10,000 affiliation bonus in exchange for a three-year tour.

The officer must not be selected for major at the time of affiliation or be receiving retirement or retainer pay.

Only certain MOSs qualify for the officer affiliation incentive, but officers can retrain into an eligible MOS under the same program offered to enlisted Marines who must do the same.

Selective Re-enlistment Bonus and Broken Service Program

The Marine Corps is offering former Marines who have been off active duty for as long as four years cash incentives to rejoin the ranks, while boosting bonuses for others.

Under the old policy, only first-term Marines who came back within a year of leaving the Corps were eligible to return. And if no more than 90 days had passed since their end of active service, it was as though they never left.

But MARADMIN 632/06 expands the policy by opening the door for returnees who did as many as 14 years on active duty before getting out sometime in the last four. Everyone who comes back is eligible to cash in on their MOS's current listed bonus, but the percentage of payment is based on how long one has been separated. See the most recent updates in MARADMIN 153/08.

Officer Commissioning Programs

These approved programs, which became effective Oct. 1, 2006, provide opportunities for experienced and qualified enlisted Marines, both active and reserve, and qualified college seniors/graduates to pursue commissioned service in SMCR units of the Marine Corps Reserve. Please see MARADMIN 571/06 for more information.

Reserve Enlisted Commissioning Program

The Reserve Enlisted Commissioning Program (RECP) allows qualified enlisted Marines with a baccalaureate degree in the SMCR Program to apply for assignment to Officer Candidates School and subsequent appointment to unrestricted commissioned officer grade in the Marine Corps Reserve. The policy, eligibility criteria, and application process are contained in MCO 1040R.10k.

The Meritorious Commissioning Program - Reserve

The Meritorious Commissioning Program - Reserve (MCP-R) allows qualified enlisted Marines, active and Reserve component, with an associates degree or requisite number of semester hours, to apply for a Reserve commission and follow-on service in an SMCR unit upon completion of all required training, including Officer Candidates School, The Basic School, and appropriate Military Occupational Specialty school. The program requirements will mirror those listed for the active component MCP with the exceptions being commissioning date and component in which appointment is made.

The Officer Candidate Course - Reserve

The Officer Candidate Course - Reserve (OCC-R) is for qualified civilian college seniors or graduates who may apply for a Reserve commission and follow-on service directly with an SMCR unit upon completion of all required training: OCS, TBS, and an appropriate MOS school. The program requirements will mirror those for OCC with the exception being the component in which appointment is made. Members of the ready reserve are not eligible and should apply for commissioning via RECP or MCP-R.

Suffice it to say, there has been tremendous progress in the Marine Corps' Combat Operational Stress Control program that should prove to have a long-lasting, positive impact on our Marines, Sailors, and their family members.

Overall, the Marine Corps Reserve is relatively healthy; we continue to recruit and retain quality men and women who are willing to manage commitments to their families, their communities, their civilian careers, and their Corps. Despite high operational tempo, the morale and patriotic spirit of our Reserve Marines and Sailors, their families, and their employers remain extraordinarily high. We are prepared, equipped, and trained to continue our primary mission of reinforcing and augmenting the Active Component Marine Corps in time of war, and we do so with a resolve that deepens further as each day passes.

I've always enjoyed the opportunity to inform and update readers of The Continental Marine magazine about the absolutely outstanding long-term contributions and commitment of the patriotic group of citizens we have in the Marine Corps Reserve. It has been my honor to serve this great nation and Corps for the past 38 years, but by the time you read this article, you may find that I have retired from the Marine Corps. If that is the case, rest assured that I'll continue to serve our great country and the Marines, Sailors, and families of the Total Force Marine Corps for many years to come. Semper Fidelis! □
