National Strategy on Countering Violent Extremism Announced

Today's threats are rapidly evolving, and they require our vigilance, as well as our willingness to learn and adapt. We know that violent extremism isn't constrained by international borders, or by any single ideology. The new strategy on Empowering Local Partners to Prevent Violent Extremism in the United States—announced last week—is the first U.S. Government strategy to address ideologically-inspired violent extremism in the homeland. The strategy elaborates on the federal government's existing efforts and emphasizes the need to work hand-in-hand with diverse communities to protect civil rights and civil liberties of all individuals—a key facet of the work DHS CRCL has undertaken since its inception.

Secretary Napolitano said in a recent blog post “Our approach to countering violent extremism emphasizes the strength of local communities. We begin with the premise that well-informed and -equipped families, communities, and local institutions represent the best defense against terrorist ideologies and violent extremists.” The Department's work on countering violent extremism (CVE) emphasizes that communities are the solution, not the problem. Diverse communities across American are best positioned to push back against violent extremists.

CRCL's role in the effort to counter violent extremism focuses on providing useful and accurate training to DHS and other law enforcement agencies and ensuring that DHS's CVE efforts, and work as a whole, respect civil rights and civil liberties.

President Obama Directs New Steps to Prevent Mass Atrocities and Impose Consequences on Serious Human Rights Violators

On August 4, 2011 President Obama, issued a Presidential Proclamation – Suspension of Entry as Immigrants and Nonimmigrants of Persons Who Participate in Serious Human Rights and Humanitarian Law Violations and Other Abuses (read the Fact Sheet). Through the proclamation, the President takes key steps to strengthen existing laws and better deter serious human rights violators. While existing U.S. law prohibits the admission of certain human rights violators, such as participants in genocide, torture, or extra-judicial killings into the United States, this proclamation expands the grounds for denial of entry to cover a broader array of recognized violations of international humanitarian law and international criminal law, such as war crimes and crimes against humanity.

The proclamation also creates a new tool to deter would-be organizers of atrocities, serious human rights violations, and related abuses—empowering the United States to warn groups that have carried out, may be about to carry out, or are complicit in organizing such abuses that their conduct falls within explicit, standing bans on admission to the United States.

The President is issuing this proclamation pursuant to his authority under Section 212(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, which authorizes the President to suspend entry into the United States of aliens whose entry “would be detrimental to the interests of the United States.” There are currently seventeen 212(f) Proclamations in effect, including Proclamation 8342 (2009), which suspends entry to foreign government officials responsible for failing to combat human trafficking.

TSA Takes Next Steps to Further Enhance Passenger Privacy

In July, TSA Administrator John Pistole announced that TSA will begin installing new software on millimeter wave Advanced Imaging Technology (AIT) machines that will enhance privacy by eliminating passenger-specific images. AIT screens passengers for both metallic and non-metallic threats, including weapons and explosives, which may be concealed under a passenger’s clothing without physical contact to keep the traveling public secure.

The new software, called Automated Target Recognition (ATR), will detect items that could pose a potential threat using a generic outline of a person for all passengers. The generic outline will be identical for all passengers. If no potential threat items are detected, an "OK" will appear on the monitor and the passenger is cleared.

By eliminating the image of an actual passenger and replacing it with a generic outline of a person, passengers are able to view the same outline that the TSA officer sees. Further, a separate TSA officer will no longer be required to view the image in a remotely located viewing room.

White House Holds First-Ever Hispanic Policy Conference

In July, the White House hosted a two-day policy conference bringing together 160 Hispanic leaders from 25 states, Washington D.C., and Puerto Rico. During the conference, more than 100 administration officials joined stakeholders to discuss the President’s agenda and its impact on the Hispanic community, as well as best practices improve outcomes and access for the Hispanic community.

Community leaders engaged with federal policy makers on a variety of issues including creating jobs and strengthening the economy, expanding access to affordable and quality health care, reforming the nation’s education system, protecting civil rights, and fixing the nation’s broken immigration system.
