1st BMT HONOR GRAD

Airman Douglas L Wunder recently became the first person from the 190th DSEG to be recognized as an honor graduate from USAF Basic Training. Airman Wunder, who is now assigned to the photo lab, was one of only four airmen to be so honored from a flight of 41.

"It was a hectic first week," Airman Wunder admitted in speaking of his "6 long weeks" at Lackland AFB, Tex. He added, "I wondered why I was there," but by the second week he said he was in the routine of classes, physical conditioning, parades, retreats, etc. During the first couple of weeks there wasn't much emphasis placed on honor grad selections, Airman Wunder noted, but after receiving an outstanding on the Phase I test he said he started to keep closer attention to his demerits. He received a certificate for his accomplishment.

Airman Wunder has been interested in photography, and is now working on his 3 level in that field through Career Development Courses and on-the-job training. His father and sister are also members of the 190th DSEG. His father, SSgt Robert Wunder is assigned to the 190th Civil Engineering Flight, and his sister, Annette is finishing up Basic Training, and will be assigned to the Clinic, after attending tech school at Sheppard AFB, Tex. Airman Wunder will be a second year student at Benedictine College in Atchison, next fall, majoring in Biology.

New Law to help Tenants/Landlords

By Capt Joseph O'Sullivan

Landlord vs. Tenant. That case has been argued thousands of times, and possibly you have been on one side or the other. Now the Residential Landlord-Tenant Act is on the books and regulates many of the continuing areas of disagreement.

Under the act, the landlord is entitled to: (1) a security deposit which can vary as to the rent due, and as to pets, (2) hold the tenant liable for damages not normally associated with normal usage, (3) enter the premises to inspect for damage after reasonable notice has been given to the tenant and, (4) collect, store at tenant's expense, and sell after 30 days abandoned tenant property.

The tenant is entitled to: (1) an inspection by the landlord specifying existing damage when the tenant moves in, (2) return of the security deposit, less appropriate deductions, within thirty days of termination, (3) a residence that meets public health codes, including heating, plumbing and electrical standards and, (4) privacy from unwarranted and unannounced entry by the landlord.

To terminate tenancy, the tenant must provide thirty days written notice beginning on the next rent paying date. The landlord need only give thirty days written notice beginning on the day notice is affected. It should be noted that many long term leases renew themselves unless 30 days notice is provided by either party before the termination date.

If the tenant fails to give proper notice before moving, the landlord may take his damages out of the security deposit to cover the unexpired portion of the tenants obligation. If the deposit isn't enough, the landlord can seek a court judgement for damages, if he cannot, after a good faith effort, rereat the residence.

The tenant can also recover his damages if he is wrongfully removed or excluded, and a penalty of up to 1½ month's rent can be assessed.

Holding a tenant's personal property for nonpayment of rent has been abolished, and tenants cannot apply the security deposit to the last month's rent. The new law establishes the Small Claims Court as the authority for hearing landlord/tenant disputes. Each
