Residential Network: Origins and Overview

Better Buildings Neighborhood Program (BBNP)

- Leveraged $508M in ARRA and FY10 funding to spur nationwide energy efficiency program innovation
- Targeted urban, suburban, and rural environments
- Capitalized on economies of scale
- Encouraged industry partnerships and investment
- Emphasized sustainability beyond the grant
- Goal: Learn what is effective and replicable

The Better Buildings Neighborhood Program used federal support to promote program innovation and market investment

BBNP Grantee Locations

BBNP Grantees

- 13 state governments
- 24 local governments

Residential Network FAQs

Q: Does the Network cover new construction?

A: No, the Network addresses existing buildings.

Q: Can individuals become members of the Network?

A: Institutions can become members of the Network, but not individuals.

Q: Does the Network offer grant funding?

A: The Network is not a grant program. It offers valuable resources other than funding, such as Peer Exchange Calls on a range of topics, tools, templates, and resources shared by members, optional benchmarking, newsletter updates on trends, and opportunities to be featured in media, case studies, and materials.

Minnick's Inc. Joins New DOE Residential Network

Posted October 20, 2014 & filed under News.

Minnick's Inc. has become a new member of the new U.S. Department of Energy Better Buildings Residential Network, which connects energy efficiency programs and partners to share best practices and learn from each other to dramatically increase the number of American homes that are energy efficient.

The Better Buildings Residential Network launched on April 30, at the ACI National Home Performance Conference and Leadership Summit in Denver, Colorado.

The Better Buildings Residential Network expands on the foundation of existing energy efficiency programs such as the Better Buildings Neighborhood Program and its partners, as well as Home Performance with ENERGY STAR Sponsors and their partners, which have leveraged over $1 billion in federal funding and local resources to build more energy efficient communities since 2010, as well as others that have operated for years. These programs have saved Americans money, created jobs and lowered greenhouse gas emissions.

DOE is now expanding this network of residential energy efficiency programs and partners to new members. The new Better Buildings Residential Network is engaging energy efficiency programs, businesses, nonprofits, state and local governments, financial institutions, universities, utilities, and other organizations to accelerate the pace of upgrades in homes.

Members of the Better Buildings Residential Network include AFC First, Austin Energy, Boulder County, Clean Energy Durham, Clean Energy Works, CNT Energy, City & County of Denver, Efficiency Maine, Greater Cincinnati Energy Alliance, LEAP (Local Energy Alliance Program), Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, Michigan Saves, Mountain Association for Community Economic Development (MACED), and the New York State Energy Research & Development Authority.
