

Redesigned WTC Public Website www.WTC.army.mil

What does a new WTC website mean to me?

Based on feedback from Warrior Transition Unit (WTU) Soldiers and Cadre, WTC created a more user-friendly website with information on vital aspects of your recovery and transition process. Access to information empowers wounded, ill and injured Soldiers throughout their recovery and transition. WTC is using today's technology to provide you, Soldiers, Families and Cadre, with information and tools to learn about programs, resources and benefits.

Who will benefit from the new website?

Everyone involved in the Warrior Care and Transition Program (WCTP) will benefit from the new website including wounded, ill and injured Soldiers, Veterans, their Families, Caregivers, Cadre and support organizations.

What information is available on the new website?

You can find additional information on topics that most interest you, such as the Integrated Disability Evaluation System (IDES), adaptive reconditioning, federal internships, career planning, WTU transfer/exit criteria, spiritual support, pay and benefits, non-medical attendants, WCTP policies and more. Within the reorganized WTC Community Support Network (CSN), it's easier than ever to find out about free or discounted products and services.

The new website has many benefits, including:

- Ability to easily find information you need by topic of interest, stage of recovery in the WCTP or your interest in the program
- Information on resources, programs and benefits for the transitioning Soldier and Family members
- Simpler viewing and navigation across a wide range of devices, from smartphones to tablets to desktop computers
- Regular updates on upcoming initiatives and additional information on the topics most requested by Soldiers, Families and Cadre throughout the calendar year.

What can I do to help?

WTC is always looking for ways to improve this website to ensure that WTU Soldiers, Families and Cadre can access information on all aspects of the recovery and transition process. What would make our website more valuable to you? What functions would you like to see on our website?
