84.268 FEDERAL DIRECT STUDENT LOANSFEDERAL AGENCY:

Office of Student Financial Assistance Programs, Department of Education

AUTHORIZATION:

Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, Title IV, Part D.

OBJECTIVES:

To provide loan capital directly from the Federal government (rather than through private lenders) to vocational, undergraduate, and graduate postsecondary school students and their parents.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Loans

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

To help defray costs of education at a participating school. Repayment on Federal Stafford loans begins six months after the student ceases to carry at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload. Repayment of principal and interest on PLUS loans generally begins within 60 days of disbursement of the last installment; repayment of a Consolidation loan begins within 60 days after the proceeds of the loan have been used to discharge the liability of the borrower on the loans selected for consolidation. Deferments and forbearance of payment may be granted for certain authorized periods.

Applicant Eligibility:

The applicant must be a U.S. citizen, national, or person in the United States for other than a temporary purpose. A student borrower must be enrolled or accepted for enrollment in a degree or certificate program on at least a half-time basis as an undergraduate, graduate, or professional student at a participating postsecondary school. An otherwise eligible student is eligible for loans during a single twelve-month period in which the student is enrolled in a non-degree/non-certificate course of study that the school has determined is necessary in order for the student to enroll in a program leading to a degree or certificate. Under the Direct PLUS program, parents may borrow for dependent students. Also, graduate and professional students are eligible to borrow PLUS Loans. Direct Unsubsidized and PLUS loans are non-need based programs. In order to receive a Direct Subsidized Loan, all borrowers must undergo a financial need analysis to determine eligibility for Federal interest. The Budget Control Act of 2011 eliminated the eligibility of graduate and professional students to receive Federal Direct Subsidized Loans as of July 1, 2012. A student that is presently enrolled at a participating institution must be maintaining satisfactory academic progress in the course of study that they are pursuing. The borrower may not owe a refund on any Title IV grant or be in default on any Title IV loan received for attendance at any school. The borrower must also file a Statement of Registration compliance (Selective Service). Borrowers that are unable to obtain consolidation loans from lenders under FFEL or who are unable to obtain a consolidation loan with income sensitive repayment terms acceptable to the borrower from a lender, shall be eligible for a Direct Consolidation Loan.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Vocational, undergraduate, and graduate postsecondary school students and their parents.

Credentials/Documentation:

The borrower will need certification of eligibility from the school and may be required to supply documentation to verify the accuracy of data used in the Direct Subsidized loan need analysis. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. Applications for the Direct Subsidized and Unsubsidized loans are obtained from the school. Direct consolidation loan applications are obtained from the Department of Education. To obtain a Direct Subsidized or Unsubsidized loan, a student shall complete and submit a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). All applications (with the exception of PLUS) for Direct Loans are processed by the Central Processor System (CPS) in the initial step to determine a student's Title IV eligibility. Schools will receive official output from the CPS, and then will be able to assemble a financial aid award package. A school participating in the Direct Loan program may award Direct Loans as part of the financial aid package. If a Direct Loan is not included in the aid package, a student may contact the school to request loan information.

Award Procedure:

Schools participate in the Direct Loan program either by originating loans or by using an alternative originator to originate loans. The school must certify the borrower's eligibility to receive the funds. To obtain a Direct PLUS Loan, the parent completes an application and authorizes a credit check. If the parent does not have an adverse credit history the loan maybe disbursed. Schools may disburse funds by crediting them directly to the student's account at the school, issuing a check or cash, or by initiating an electronic fund transfer.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

Not Applicable.

Appeals:

Not Applicable.

Renewals:

Not Applicable.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

This program has no statutory formula.
This program has no matching requirements.
This program does not have MOE requirements.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Applicants may apply for a loan for any year of school. The interest rate on new Stafford Loans starting July 1, 2012 is fixed at 3.4 percent. The Moving Ahead for Progress in the 21st Century Act (P.L. 112-141) extends for one year the interest rate established in the College Cost Reduction and Access Act (CCRAA) of 2007, meaning the interest rate will become 6.8 percent beginning July 1, 2013. As of July 1, 2006, the interest rate for both Unsubsidized Stafford and Direct PLUS loans is fixed at 6.8 percent. There are four repayment plans that are available for Direct Loan borrowers: (1) A standard repayment plan with a fixed monthly payment amount over a period of up to 10 years; (2) an extended repayment plan with a fixed monthly payment amount paid over a period of 12 to 30 years, depending on the amount owed; (3) a graduated repayment plan with a monthly payment that will increase generally every 2 years. The repayment period varies from 12 to 30 years, depending on the amount owed; and (4) except for Direct PLUS Loan borrowers, an income contingent repayment (ICR) plan with a monthly payment that is adjusted annually based on the income of the borrower and paid over a extended period of time not to exceed 25 years. Any unpaid balance remaining after 25 years in the ICR plan is forgiven by the Secretary of Education. However, under current IRS rules, the amount written off is considered taxable income to the borrower in the year it is written off. CCRAA created a new income-based repayment plan for those borrowers meeting a standard of "partial financial hardship" based on their annual repayment amount in relation to their adjusted gross income. Generally a borrower would not have to repay on a monthly basis more than 15 percent of their discretionary income. Any outstanding balance would be forgiven after 25 years of repayment in the income-based repayment option. A provision in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act lowered these limits to 10 percent of discretionary income and forgiveness after 20 years for new borrowers on/after July 1, 2014. CCRAA also created a new loan forgiveness program for Direct Loan borrowers who work in public service during a 10-year period while they are repaying their loans. If these borrowers during repayment have an outstanding loan balance after 10 years of working in public service, the Federal Government will forgive the remaining balance on behalf of the borrower. Public service may include a variety of public disciplines such as education, health, law, military service and public safety. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released:

Electronic transfer.

Reports:

The Department will produce a variety of management information system accounting, and financial management reports. Schools must submit all reports required by 34 CFR 685 and 34 CFR 668. Cash reports are not applicable. Progress reports are not applicable. Expenditure reports are not applicable. Performance monitoring is not applicable.

Audits:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-133. Schools are subject to examination and program review by the Department of Education. Program reviews are performed on a fiscal year basis.

Records:

Schools must maintain proper administrative and fiscal procedures and all necessary records as set forth in the regulations in 34 CFR 685 and 34 CFR 668. Schools must keep all records involved in any loan, claim, or expenditure questioned by a Federal audit until resolution of any audit questions. In addition to records required by 34 CFR 668, for each Direct Loan received under 34 CFR 685 by or on behalf of this student, a school shall maintain a copy of the loan application and data electronically submitted to the Secretary.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: In 2011, the Fourth Annual Life Sciences Awards, sponsored by the public-private partnership of the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, a Federal government agency, and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce were presented on July 11 in Washington, D.C. The Awards are intended to recognize, through seven monetary awards and research funds, one scientist and provide research funds; three high school educators; and three current high school students who are judged to exemplify excellence in the field of life sciences.

Melissa Knothe Tate, Ph.D., Professor of Biomedical Engineering, Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, OH, was awarded the $25,000 Chairmen's Distinguished Life Sciences Scientist Award. Dr. Knothe Tate is an internationally recognized leader in the fields of orthopaedic mechanobiology as well as the development and clinical translation of novel technologies and materials. Dr. Knothe Tate's work involves studying the mechanobiology of living cells and how stresses, strains and mechanical forces affect cell signaling, differentiation, etc. This expands understanding of bone healing and supports development of synthetic tissues. Dr. Knothe Tate will also receive up to $25,000 in research funds.

Deborah Wasylik, Life Sciences Educator, Dr. Phillips High School, Orlando, FL, was awarded the $10,000 Life Sciences Educator Award. Creating curiosity in science class is important to Deborah Wasylik. She accomplishes this when she tells her students that before she became a teacher she had climbed inside a pyramid, jumped out of an airplane and sold drugs! She was a pharmaceutical sales rep. For the last 10 years she has enjoyed teaching life sciences at Dr. Phillips High School. Deborah has been the recipient of many awards including being selected last year as a NASA Endeavor STEM Fellow and previously received the Presidential Award of Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching from President Bush at the White House.

Coit Hendley, Chemistry Educator, Eleanor Roosevelt High School, Greenbelt, MD, was awarded the $10,000 Life Sciences Educator Award. Mr. Hendley has been teaching for 32 years, and currently teaches AP Chemistry and Research Practicum. The AP Chemistry program he developed has been recognized by the College Board since 2006 for having the most number of African-American students with a score of 3 or better. A National Board Certified grant writer, Coit has received many grants used to fund such projects as the Watershed Integrated Study Program, in which teams of students measure the water quality of fourteen sites in the area and use the data to study local and general water quality.

Leslie Brinson, Biology Educator, North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics (NCSSM), Durham, NC, was awarded the $10,000 Life Sciences Educator Award. A teacher for 30 years, Leslie has been teaching at the NCSSM since 1995, and has come to believe that there is no better educational environment than NCSSM. In this residential setting, students are provided a competitive and nurturing pedagogical setting to conduct their own research and pursue a myriad of science competitions within North Carolina and beyond.

The highlight of the school year is when she leads students to Belize where they are immersed in research projects on the coral reef. Inspired by her colleagues, Leslie has also enthusiastically embraced a key mission of the school - providing outreach to biology teachers throughout the State.

Amy Chyao, Junior, Plano East Senior High School, Plano, TX, was awarded the $5,000 Life Sciences Student Award. Amy became intrigued by science in the first grade. Inspired by Marie Curie's dedication to discoveries and scientific contributions, Amy was determined to follow her example. Amy's passion for science led her to a unique opportunity offered by the University of Texas at Dallas. She joined the 2009 Nano-Explorers summer program and stepped into the intricate world of nanotechnology. Her passion for science propelled her to work hard and to excel as she continues to work toward becoming a next generation scientist. In 2010, she was the winner of the first Gordon Moore Award at the Intel ISEF. She also had the honor to attend President Obama's 2011 State of the Union Address.

Kayla Dowell, Junior, Germann Hills Christian School, Manhattan, KS, was awarded the $5,000 Life Sciences Student Award. In just the last three years, Kayla Dowell has become proficient in the use of near-infrared spectroscopy (NIRS) technique which measures the traits of biological materials. Kayla learned about NIRS as a student volunteer with the USDA Agricultural Research Service. In 2009, Kayla used her NIRS skills at a malaria research lab in Tanzania, Africa, conducting research on mosquitoes that transmit malaria. In 2010, at a medical clinic at an orphanage in Zimbabwe, she showed that NIRS could be used to determine artemisinin content in extracts of a local plant, Artemisia annua, which is used to cure malaria. This research could be used to rapidly evaluate new cultivars of this important cure for a disease that kills over 1 million people each year. Her research has prompted further studies by scientists in Tanzania, Kenya and Nigeria.

Christopher Duncan-Lewis, Senior, Winter Springs High School, Winter Springs, FL, was awarded the $5,000 Life Sciences Student Award. From a young age, Christopher has shown interest in the medicine and health sciences. Excelling in science courses, Christopher undertook a significant research project during his junior and senior high school years. Christopher believes his research on the harmful effects of certain compounds on the sense of smell provide evidence against the use of such compounds in the nasal passage, and have the potential to increase our understanding of the sense of smell. His research report has been accepted for publication in Comparative Medicine: a medical journal. A National Achievement Scholar, AP Scholar, and AXA Achievement Scholar, in addition to many other awards, Christopher won a second prize in medicine and health at the 2011 Intel International Science and Engineering Fair. Christopher will attend the University of Pennsylvania in the Fall, majoring in biochemistry. Fiscal Year 2012: In 2012, the Fifth Annual Life Sciences Awards, sponsored by the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce were presented on July 19, in Washington, D.C. The Life Sciences Awards are intended to recognize, through four monetary awards, a scientist; one high school educator; and two current high school students all of whom exemplify excellence in the field of life sciences. The 2012 Life Sciences Awards recipients are:

Daniel G. Colley, Ph.D., Professor of Microbiology and Director of the Center for Tropical and Emerging Global Diseases, University of Georgia, Athens, Georgia, was awarded the 2012 $10,000 Distinguished Life Sciences Scientist Award. Dr. Colley is a renowned scientist most notably in the area of tropical medicine and parasitology, with a main focus on the immunology of schistosomiasis, a debilitating, chronic worm disease that affects 240 million people worldwide, in order to control and eliminate it.

Camilla Walck, Ph.D., International Baccalaureate (IB) Biology Teacher, Princess Anne High School, Virginia Beach, Virginia, was awarded the 2012 $5,000 Life Sciences Educator Award.

For the past 17 years, Dr. Walck has worked for the City of Virginia Beach Public Schools. Dedicated to teaching and learning both in and out of the classroom, her passion for biology is contagious - engaging and exciting her students to learn about the scientific world. A National Board Certified teacher, an adjunct professor at Virginia Wesleyan College, and an international evaluator for International Baccalaureate biology, Dr. Walck was selected as one of six teachers to visit Cardiff, England to collaborate on the IB grading process.

Vaishnavi Rao, Junior, Canyon Crest Academy, San Diego, California, was awarded the 2012 $1,000 Life Sciences Student Award. Vaishnavi's passion and love for science, especially for neuroscience and the brain, began in elementary school. Most recently, her pioneering research on neurotransmitter plasticity at the University of California, San Diego, has been recognized as having far-reaching applicability in potential therapies targeting neurological disorders such as stroke, Alzheimer's disease, epilepsy and Parkinson's disease. Her work has received tremendous recognition at local, State as well as International (Intel ISEF) Science Fairs. Recently, she also won the San Diego Brain Bee 2012 and placed 6th overall at the USA National Brain Bee competitions held in Baltimore, Maryland.

Justin Roth, Sophomore, West Branch High School, West Branch, Iowa, was awarded the 2012 $1,000 Life Sciences Student Award. Taking accelerated math and science classes beginning in elementary school, Justin joined an extra-curricular science club in middle school. As a result of the science club projects he has been involved in, three ordinances have been introduced in the town of West Branch, three bills have been introduced to the Iowa State Legislature (with one being passed), and West Branch High School has started saving $10,000 annually on its energy costs, brought about by his eighth grade science club team's research into energy cost savings brought about by replacing high-cost, low efficiency T12 fluorescent bulbs to T8 lighting. Justin has also worked with his church to help establish a community clothes pantry to enable those in need to receive clothes and school supplies at no cost to them. He also volunteers in packaging many shipments of food to Africa and Haiti through Kids Against Hunger. In addition, Justin enjoys participating in his high school's extra-curricular activities. He plays football and wrestles and plays trombone in the marching, concert, jazz, and show choir bands. Fiscal Year 2013: No Current Data Available

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: In 2011, the Second Annual Agriscience Awards, sponsored by the public-private partnership of the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, a Federal government agency, and the American Farm Bureau Federation were presented on July 12, in Washington, D.C. The Awards are intended to recognize, through eight monetary awards and research funds, two scientists and provide research funds; three high school educators; and three current high school students who are judged to exemplify excellence in the field of agriscience and to highlight the importance of agriculture in the 21st century. Randall Prather, Ph.D., Distinguished Professor of Reproductive Biotechnology, Division of Animal Science, The University of Missouri, Columbia, MO, was awarded the $25,000 Distinguished Agriscience Scientist Award. Dr. Prather's research has focused on the early mammalian embryo, and he cloned the first pigs and some of the first cattle, by nuclear transfer, while at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Now at the University of Missouri, his lab has made over 495 cloned pigs representing over 25 different genetic modifications for agriculture and medicine. Dr. Prather is a co-Director of the NIH-funded National Swine resource and Research Center. Dr. Prather will also receive up to $25,000 in research funds. Andrew H. Paterson, Ph.D., Distinguished Research Professor at the University of Georgia was awarded the $25,000 Distinguished Agriscience Scientist Award. Dr. Paterson is the head of the Plant Genome Mapping Laboratory, and is jointly appointed in three Departments (Crop and Soil Science, Plant Biology, and Genetics). His research uses genomic tools and approaches to study crop improvement, plant biodiversity, and molecular evolution. His lab has contributed to knowledge of sorghum, cotton, sugarcane, peanut, Miscanthus, switchgrass, Bermuda grass, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, rice, tomato, maize and other crops, as well as several major weeds, one nitrogen-fixing bacterium (Azospirillum), and a group of viruses important in poultry. Dr. Paterson will also receive up to $25,000 in research funds. Michele Sutton, Agriscience Educator and FFA Advisor, Tompkins Seneca Tioga BOCES, Ithaca, NY, was awarded a $10,000 Agriscience Educator Award. Michele left a ten-year career in government to pursue an education degree when she realized she wanted to work with students in the field of agriculture. During her first secondary school teaching position, she transformed an outdated, struggling program of 13 students into a program of more than 100 students in two short years. She is now a teacher of the BOCES New Visions in Life Sciences program for area high school students at Cornell University where she has taught agricultural science for the past six years.

Melissa Braun, Agriscience Educator and FFA Advisor, Gillett Secondary School, Gillett, WI, was awarded a $10,000 Agriscience Educator Award. For the last eight years, Melissa has taught agriscience to students in grades 7-12. This Fall she begins a new venture at Shawano High School in the agriculture department. Melissa teaches a wide array of agriscience courses, but has a great interest in the areas of food science, horticulture, and greenhouse management. Her teaching includes many hands-on activities and field trips to reinforce the scientific principles throughout her lessons. She follows an agricultural education model which involves all components--classroom instruction, FFA involvement and a Supervised Agricultural Experience Project.

Paul Heasley, Agriscience Educator and FFA Advisor, State College Area School District, State College, PA, was awarded a $10,000 Agriscience Educator Award. Mr. Heasley has taught Agricultural Sciences in grades 9-12 for 30 years. The program's courses are grouped in Career Paths including: Ag Mechanics, Animal Science, Natural Resources and Plant Sciences. A senior year option includes a "Dual Enrollment" with The Pennsylvania State University's College of Agricultural Sciences and 18 different agricultural Science courses provided on campus or through the World Campus. The program has active chapters in the FFA and Young Farmers.

Laura Lane, Senior, Aztec High School, Aztec, NM, was awarded a $5,000 Agriscience Student Award. Laura's love of science inspired her project to tackle indicators of soil ecosystem health for oil and gas reclamation. One out of every three abandoned wellsite does not reestablish plant biodiversity, leaving thousands of acres of undesirable soil that cannot support grazing. Laura has worked with Habitat for Humanity, and last summer went to Guatemala on a build. In the Fall she plans to attend New Mexico Tech to study pre-medical; and major in biochemistry or chemical engineering. After her undergraduate studies, she wants to attend medical school and become a trauma doctor.

Bhiravi Rathinasabapathi, Senior, Eastside High School, Gainesville, FL, was awarded a $5,000 Agriscience Student Award. Bhiravi's interests include science, service and literature. She is currently researching the biofortification of crops with iron. Biofortification is the breeding or genetic modification of plants to increase their nutrient content. Bhiravi is examining the effects of the overexpression of a ferritin gene on plants' iron content and biomasses. This research may eventually lead to an iron-biofortified crop. Such a crop would combat anemia, which affects an estimated two billion people worldwide.

Stephen Bethel, Senior, Lake Brantley High School, Altamonte Springs, FL, was awarded a $5,000 Agriscience Student Award. Stephen's research "Evaluation of Ubiquitin Promoter Express Abilities for Potential Use in Transgenic Grape Vine" (Vitis vinifera), explored consumer-friendly genetic alternatives to replace viral DNA currently used in genetically modified produce. Stephen met Nobel Laureate, Dr. Martin Chalfie, a biological sciences researcher who first demonstrated the value of GFP, a luminous genetic tag that Stephen used in his work. This Fall, Stephen will attend the University of Florida Honors Program in Aerospace Engineering. Fiscal Year 2012: In 2012, the Third Annual Agriscience Awards, sponsored by the public-private partnership of the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, a Federal government agency, and the American Farm Bureau Federation were presented on July 10, in Washington, D.C. The Awards are intended to recognize, through four monetary awards, a scientist; one high school educator; and two current high school students who are judged to exemplify excellence in the field of agriscience and to highlight the importance of agriculture in the 21st century. The 2012 Agriscience Awards recipients are:

Andrew Sharpley, Ph.D., Professor in the Department of Crop, Soil and Environmental Sciences, Division of Agriculture, University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, AR, was awarded the $10,000 Distinguished Agriscience Scientist Award. Dr. Sharpley's research investigates the fate of phosphorus in soil-plant-water systems in relation to soil productivity and the effects of agricultural management on water quality. He also evaluates the role of stream and river sediments in modifying phosphorus transport and response of receiving lakes and reservoirs. He developed decision-making tools for agricultural field staff to identify sensitive areas of the landscape and to target management alternatives and remedial measures that have reduced the risk of nutrient loss from farms. Dr. Sharpley works closely with producers, farmers and action agencies, stressing the dissemination and application of his research findings.

Matthew B. Eddy, Agriscience Educator and FFA Advisor, Southeast Polk High School, Pleasant Hill, IA, was awarded a $5,000 Agriscience Educator Award. Mr. Eddy has taught agriculture education for 13 years, teaching at Southeast Polk for the past eight years. Participating in the inaugural CASE curriculum institute in 2009, he earned the level of Master Teacher in 2012. Matthew's agriculture program emphasizes STEM concepts in agriculture, a rigorous curriculum that has been recognized on the State and national level. He was recently recognized as having the Iowa Outstanding High School Agriculture Education program and as a finalist for the National FFA Agriscience Teacher Award.

Michelle Chin, Junior, West Shore Jr./Sr. High School, Melbourne, FL, was awarded a $1,000 Agriscience Student Award. Michelle's science research concentrates on genetic engineering and biotechnology using organic and transgenic crops. Under the supervision of Dr. Sixue Chen at the University of Florida, she worked on her project that uses plants to phytoremediate selenium contaminants, an effective, inexpensive and non-intrusive means of in situ reduction and removal of environmental contaminants. She hopes her research will aid worldwide efforts to alleviate chemical run-off and environmental pollution. In 2011, Michelle won the Green Connection scholarship, sponsored by the French government. Her two week trip to France to study environmental protection fostered her passion for protecting the environment, which led her to create a website to promote sustainability. She was recently selected as one of the 2012 Yings Scholars in the Dr. Nelson Ying Science Competition, which encourages students to help humanity through science research.

Jill Dolowich, Senior, Jericho High School, Jericho, NY, was awarded a $1,000 Agriscience Student Award. Jill has developed a strong interest in environmentalism and conservation through her extensive entomology research at both Yale University and Michigan State University. She was interested in exploring honeybee populations, and ultimately her goal was to spread the word about the environmental impact of declining insect populations. Jill has been involved in many activities throughout high school. Her passion for writing about scientific and environmental news led to her role as New York Correspondent for Mother Nature Network. She also authored an article entitled, "Flight of the Honeybees," in the Johns Hopkins University national online publication (Cogito.org). In the fall, Jill will attend Yale University, where she plans to major in Biology and Environmental Studies. Fiscal Year 2013: No Current Data Available OCR protects the civil rights of all individuals who are subject to discrimination in health and human services programs, and protects the health information privacy rights of consumers, and ensures that electronic protected health information is safeguarded against unauthorized use of disclosure through investigations, voluntary dispute resolution, enforcement, technical assistance, policy development and information services.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

ADVISORY SERVICES AND COUNSELING; INVESTIGATION OF COMPLAINTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Office for Civil Rights (OCR) in the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is responsible for promoting and ensuring that people have equal access to and the opportunity to participate in and receive services from all HHS-funded programs without facing unlawful discrimination, that the privacy of their health information is protected, and that electronic protected health information is safeguarded against unauthorized use or disclosure. These HHS funded programs are provided through state agencies, nursing homes, skilled nursing facilities, medical laboratories, hospitals, day care centers, social service agencies and other providers. Any person who believes that an individual has been discriminated against in the provision of these services because of race, color, national origin, disability, age, sex or religion, may file a complaint with OCR. An individual who believes that discrimination on the basis of disability has occurred in a health or social services program of a state or local government entity may file a complaint with OCR under Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, regardless of whether the entity receives Federal funds. Individuals may also file complaints of denials of health care for reasons other than the need and availability of services, by recipients of Hill-Burton grants and loans. In addition, a person may file a complaint under the Multiethnic Placement Act if 1994, as amended by Section 1808 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996, alleging that an adoption or foster care agency or entity funded by HHS discriminatorily relied on a parents or child's race, color, or national origin in making a placement decision. OCR will investigate complaints and take steps to ensure compliance with applicable civil rights laws.

OCR also enforces the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) Privacy Rule and Security Rule as well as the HITECH Breach Notification Rule and the confidentiality provisions of the Patient Safety and Quality Improvement Act (PSQIA) of 2005. OCR's activities under the Privacy, Security and Breach Notification Rules include enforcement actions, including conducting investigations, taking compliance actions, and making penalty determinations, and conducting public education, technical assistance and other outreach activities: to health care providers, health care clearinghouses and health plans, to ensure that they understand their responsibilities under the Rules; to other entities that may be impacted by the Rules, including Federal, State and local government agencies, researchers, and business associates of covered entities; and to consumers, to inform them of their rights under the Privacy Rule. Anyone who believes that a person, agency or organization covered under the HIPAA Privacy and Security Rules ("a covered entity") has violated the Privacy and/or Security Rules may file a complaint with OCR. In addition, the Breach Notification Rule requires HIPAA covered entities to promptly notify affected individuals of a breach, as well as the HHS Secretary and the media in cases where a breach affects more than 500 individuals; OCR is required to publish a list of entities that incur large breaches. OCR's activities under PSQIA include administering an enforcement program regarding the confidentiality protections, including conducting investigations, taking compliance actions, and making penalty determinations and interpreting standards for confidentiality protections and the enforcement program for guidance and technical assistance to Patient Safety Organizations (PSOs) and providers and public information.

Applicant Eligibility:

Anyone who believes he or she has been discriminated against in the manner outlined above or seeks information concerning civil rights, and recipients of Federal financial assistance who desire technical assistance and information for the purpose of assuring their compliance with nondiscrimination laws. Regarding the HIPAA Privacy and Security Rules, anyone who believes that the Privacy and/or Security Rules have been violated in the manner outlined above, or who seeks information about these Rules; consumers that need to know their rights under the Privacy Rule; and entities that need technical assistance and information for the purpose of assuring compliance with the Privacy and Security Rules.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Individuals subject to discrimination and recipients who require technical assistance and information. Regarding the HIPAA Privacy Rule, individuals subject to violation of their health information privacy, covered entities, and others needing or seeking technical assistance and information concerning the Rule.

Award Procedure:

None.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

A complaint must be filed not later than 180 days of the alleged discrimination, unless the time for filing is waived for good cause. Complaints under the Privacy and/or Security Rules must be filed within 180 days of the date when the complainant knew, or should have known, that the act or omission complained of occurred, unless the time limit is waived for good cause.

Appeals:

Individuals can appeal a civil rights discrimination complaint determination in some instances by submitting, in writing, a request for reconsideration to the Director, Office for Civil Rights. OCR imposes civil money penalties (CMPs) on a covered entity found to be in violation of the HIPAA Privacy, Security and/or Breach Notification Rules. If CMPs are imposed by OCR, the covered entity may request a hearing in which an HHS administrative law judge (ALJ) decides if the CMPs are supported by the evidence in the case. OCR is required to present the evidence to support the imposition of CMPs to the ALJ. The covered entity may also then appeal the ALJ's decision to the HHS Departmental Appeals Board (DAB) and ultimately to the U.S. Courts of Appeal.

93.007 PUBLIC AWARENESS CAMPAIGNS ON EMBRYO ADOPTION

(Embryo)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Office of the Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

This program is authorized by Section 1704 of the Public Health Service Act, 42 U.S.C. Section 300u-3, 42 U.S.C 300u-3.

OBJECTIVES:

To fund public awareness campaigns on embryo adoption. The intent is to fund at least one project in each of three distinct categories (1) training for professionals to equip them with the specific knowledge and skills to support the unique needs of embryo donors; (2) regional/local strategies for informing and educating professional audiences; and (3) the use of new media with the goal of increasing public awareness regarding embryo donation and/or adoption. Entities may apply for more than one category; however, a separate application is required for each category identified in this announcement. Applicants should demonstrate experience with embryo donation and/or adoption programs that conform to professionally recognized standards governing embryo donation and/or adoption and other applicable Federal or State requirements. For the purposes of this announcement, embryo donation and/or adoption is defined as the donation of frozen embryo(s) from one party to a recipient who wishes to bear and raise a child or children.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The increasing success of assisted reproductive technologies (ART) has resulted in a situation in which an infertile couple typically creates several embryos through in-vitro fertilization (IVF). During IVF treatments, couples may produce many embryos in an attempt to become pregnant with several being cryopreserved (frozen) for future use. If a couple becomes pregnant without using all of the stored embryos, they may choose to release the remaining unused embryos for donation and adoption allowing other infertile couples the experience of pregnancy and birth. Embryo donation and/or adoption is a relatively new process in which individuals who have extra frozen embryos agree to release the embryos for transfer to the uterus of another woman, either known or anonymous to the donor(s) for the purpose of the recipient(s) attempting to bear a child and be that child's parent.

Applicant Eligibility:

Eligible applicants include public agencies, nonprofit organizations, and for-profit organizations. Eligibility to compete for this announcement is limited to particular applicant organizations. Only agencies and organizations, not individuals, are eligible to apply. One agency must be identified as the applicant organization and will have legal responsibility for the project. Additional agencies and organizations can be included as co-participants, subgrantees, subcontractors, or collaborators if they will assist in providing expertise and in helping to meet the needs of the recipients. Faith-based and community-based organizations meeting the eligibility requirements may apply, or they may be included as co-participants, subgrantees, subcontractors, or collaborators if they will assist in providing expertise and in helping to meet the needs of recipients. Eligibility is limited to organizations that can demonstrate previous experience with embryo adoption and are knowledgeable in all elements of the process of embryo adoption.

93.009 COMPASSION CAPITAL FUND

(CCF)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Administration for Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 1110 of the Social Security Act governing Social Services Research and Demonstration activities; the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 2004. , Public Law 107-116.

OBJECTIVES:

To provide grants to charitable organizations to emulate model social service programs and to encourage research on the best practices of social service organizations. This is accomplished through the goal of assisting faith-based and community organizations to increase their effectiveness, enhance their ability to provide social services, expand their organizations, diversify their funding sources, and create collaborations to better serve those most in need. This is accomplished by funding experienced intermediary organizations in well-defined geographic locations with a proven track record of providing technical assistance to smaller faith-based and community organizations in their communities, providing one-time $50,000 grants to smaller faith-based and community organizations to build their capacity, and providing grants to strengthen broad-based collaborative community that are working to reduce gang involvement, youth violence, and child abuse and neglect and to foster positive youth development.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Intermediary organizations use the CCF funds to provide two services within their communities: 1) Training assistance to faith-based and community organizations; and 2) Financial support through sub-awards to some subset of the faith-based and community organizations in their communities. Technical assistance activities funded under CCF are to be conducted at no cost to interested faith-based and community organizations. Applicants must have demonstrated experience in the delivery of capacity-building assistance to smaller organizations in several of the following areas: strategic planning, financial management, board development, fund development, and outcome measurement. Technical assistance should be provided on a long-term, on-going basis to smaller organizations. The program goals are further accomplished through the issuance of sub-awards by the funded intermediary organizations to a diverse set of small faith-based and community organizations that seek to increase program and organizational effectiveness for a 12-month period. Sub-award recipients must adhere to the following: sub-award recipients must be chosen from fair and open competitive process; sub-award recipients must not be pre-selected; the awarding process must be fair and open competition and include outreach to both faith-based and community organizations; intermediary organizations must provide on-going technical assistance and capacity-building support to the organizations to which they issue sub-awards; and the criteria for selection must not include consideration of the religious nature of the program it offers. Priority for sub-awards is given to organizations that historically have not received grants from the Federal government. Intermediaries must not require sub-award applicants to provide matching funds even if the applicants offer matching funds in their applications. Intermediaries must not require sub-award applicants to have 501 (c) (3) status or to identify a sponsoring organization with 501 (c) (3) status; Organizations that partner with an intermediary to deliver technical assistance or provide a cost-sharing fund for the proposed project are not to be eligible for sub-awards, unless approved by the Administration for Children and families; Sub-awards should not be used to assist organizations in differing stages of development. Sub-awards may also be provided to promising organizations to expand the reach of existing programs; Sub-awards must not be used to provide direct services, but rather improve the sub-awardee's efficiency and capacity. The Office of Community Services (OCS) will not fund any project, where the role of the applicant is primarily to serve as a conduit for funds to organizations other than the applicant. The applicant must have a substantive role in the implementation of the project for which funding is requested. This prohibition does not bar the making of sub-grants or sub-contracting for specific services or activities needed to conduct the project. CCF monies shall not be used to support inherently religious practices such as religious instruction, worship, or proselytization. Grant or sub-award recipients, therefore, may not and will not be selected based on religious criteria. Neutral, non-religious criteria that neither favor nor disfavor religion must be employed in a selection of a grantee and sub-award recipients.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the Program is to assist entities to establish or expand health education and communication programs at the community level that support the goals of current and future FDA tobacco regulations. The Program will advance public health by supporting community-based programs that work to identify and disseminate evidence-based, community-level best practices for tobacco regulation, communication and education, and increase access to standardized, community-level data. Strong applications would seek to educate and communicate to 1) promote the understanding of tobacco product regulation and the consequences of tobacco use; 2) protect youth from the dangers of tobacco use; and 3) help those who use tobacco to quit. Funding recipients must implement a comprehensive public education and/or communication program that addresses federal tobacco regulations and the public health goals which flow directly from them, as identified in the applicants needs assessment and that will improve health outcomes for members of target population(s).

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

- (d) Evaluate program processes and outcomes, including formative and summative. Program funds may not be used to duplicate or supplant existing tobacco control, prevention, or cessation efforts, but can enhance existing communication/education efforts relevant to FDA/CTP and the Tobacco Control Act. Funds may not be used to fund other tobacco control areas such as surveillance, price and tax measures, clean indoor air laws, tobacco control compliance and enforcement efforts, and treatment services like quit lines, nicotine replacement therapy, or any other pharmaceutical or biomedical

Refer to the FOA for additional review criteria.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: Activity 1: Provide Training and Marketing Assistance on the Model Law Revision
During Year 4, NAPHSIS has provided extensive support to the NCHS and the Model Law Committee for the 2011 revision project. We hosted four meetings of the committee and provided content and administrative support; convened a series of 6 telephone meetings by the NAPHSIS Registration Committee to review and recommend revisions; held 4 teleconferences of the Mass Fatality Subcommittee; and coordinated a series of six webinars for the membership on key aspects of the revision. We developed supportive documentation for the Model Law, including an extensive list of definitions that serves as a glossary. We promoted the use of the revisions at the 2010 regional meetings, and will provide presentations for members at the annual meeting. We will also coordinate the process for the membership to vote on endorsing the Model Law revisions.

As part of our technical assistance to challenged jurisdictions, we discuss with the jurisdiction areas of policy and practice that differ from Model Law, and we encourage them to change their legislation and business practices to be in compliance. We have included in our technical assistance reports various recommendations (depending on problems identified) relating to being in compliance with Model Law. The 2011 revisions to the Model Law are expected to be released to the NAPHSIS membership prior to the June joint annual meeting.

Starting with the materials obtained by the Model Law Working Group, NAPHSIS has begun collecting state laws and statutes related to vital statistics for inclusion in an electronic registry for reference of the vital records jurisdictions. The vital records offices are being solicited for their input on this project individually, as each jurisdiction has its laws and statutes in different formats and in varying degrees of availability. This registry will be posted on the public side of the NAPHSIS website and advertised to the membership by the end of Year 4. The registry will consist of a series of web links directly to the statutes posted on state websites. We had originally proposed to identify ten categories of legal information of most interest to the membership cross walked to each jurisdiction's laws. After exploring this approach, it did not turn out to be helpful in promoting use of the Model Law revisions.

Activity 2: Continue Re-engineering Technical Assistance to Jurisdictions

During Year 4, we have continued to work with non-revised jurisdictions to identify the means and establish a time line for re-engineering to the national standards for birth, death and fetal death reporting. We helped Mississippi and Rhode Island apply for HRSA MCH Integrated Information System Grant funding to re-engineer to the 2003 birth items. We also assisted several jurisdictions, including Hawaii, Mississippi and Rhode Island, in their submission for CDC Infrastructure grants. Hawaii and Tennessee were awarded significant infrastructure grant funding that will be used to re-engineer. Hawaii will update its EDRS and will redevelop its EBRS to become 2003 compliant. Tennessee plans to re-engineer its current client server birth system and build a web-based EBR and EDR.

During Year 4, we developed a front-end application to STEVE to provide automation support for the Pacific Rim territories. STEVE-Electronic Record, or STEVE-ER, is an electronic form-based application that allows the territories to collect 2003 birth and fetal death data directly into an electronic form and follows the business process they are currently using. STEVE-ER complies with all basic NCHS field edits. However, because it is a small-scale application, it does not apply any cross-field edits and uses limited FIPS coding. The application automatically transmits the reportable data through main STEVE to all trading partners. By late 2010, the birth module was completed and ready to deploy; fetal death was completed in late January 2011.

We traveled to Guam and CNMI in early February 2011 with representatives from SMS to and successfully installed STEVE and STEVE-ER, although both installations were difficult due to infrastructure issues. We made sure that remote connectivity with SMS was in place before our departure to support troubleshooting and updates. We will be completing development of the death module in July 2011 and will remotely update the territorial platforms. We will also be installing the full component of STEVE and STEVE-ER in U.S. Virgin Islands, and the death and fetal death modules in Puerto Rico before August 31st. Several other jurisdictions, including Ohio, Vermont, and Hawaii are exploring using STEVE-ER/Fetal Death as their automation solution. Appendix A contains detailed charts and maps on re-engineering progress to date.

We are actively supporting American Samoa to move to STEVE-ER, but this is a more complicated implementation due to Vital Records being located in the Department of Homeland Security and Vital Statistics being within the Department of Health. Infrastructure platforms are not robust, and the LBJ Hospital is not embracing collecting the full set of 2003 birth items. However, we are continuing to meet with various officials and will move forward with this project in Year 5. Any travel funds from last year dedicated to American Samoa will be requested to roll over to Year 5.

In addition, NAPHSIS has continued to work with NCHS on developing HL-7 standards for vital record electronic transmission. We participated in committee that developed the Vital Record Domain Analysis Model. We are also participating in the EHR-Vital Record Functional Profile Committee and have supported two HL7 ballot initiatives by conducting a detailed review of all functional items. We assigned each NAPHSIS Board member to convene a review team, and assigned each line item to one of the teams. Collaboratively, we reviewed the final comments and made recommendations to NCHS. We submitted a vote on the September 2010 ballot and will also be voting next week on the May 2011 ballot. We participated in other workgroups, such as the planning team for the January 2011 Connectathon. NAPHSIS has submitted comments to the Meaningful Use Recommendations and the ONC Health Information Technology (HIT) Strategic Plan expressing its caution over aspects of linking vital record data with electronic health records. We will continue to support standardization efforts of the NCHS while advocating for HIT efforts to proceed carefully.

We have not received any requests to date to support the VIEWS project, and therefore have no activity to report on this task.

Activity 3: Maintain and Enhance Re-engineering Survey Data

NAPHSIS initially conducted a formal survey in March-May 2006 by interviewing by phone every continental U.S. jurisdiction. Throughout this project year, we have updated this information on a regular basis using information gathered from site visits, regional meeting updates, periodic email inquiries and conversations with jurisdictions about their status. As we have installed STEVE-ER in the territories, we added this information to the database. We provide a snapshot of the most current survey data on the members-only section of the NAPHSIS website and have provided survey information and associated national maps to the NCHS Project Officer on request.

By the end of Year 4, we will complete a comprehensive resurvey of all states and territories and will compile a jurisdictional profile that will be distributed to each member for review and verification. We will do the initial outreach by email, and will follow up with personal phone calls to assure a 100% response. Future updates will continue to be collected via spreadsheet and periodically updated. EBR and EDR utilization maps are posted on the NAPHSIS website for general access. These maps will be kept updated on a regular basis and provided to the NCHS. Appendix A contains the survey information.

Activity 4: Provide Business Process Reviews for Challenged Jurisdictions

During Year 4, a team of consultants and staff from NAPHSIS continued to support the Business Process Consultation Program. Lorne Phillips served as lead consultant, assisted by Chuck Hardester (security); Leesa Shem-Tov (technology); and representatives from the NCHS as needed. Garland Land joined the consulting team in January 2011 after his retirement as NAPHSIS Executive Director. We provided assistance to challenged jurisdictions upon application via on-site visit, with additional conference calls and other kinds of remote technical assistance as needed. During Year 4, site visits have been made to Illinois, the District of Columbia, North Carolina and Wyoming. We also completed the Indiana site visit report and follow up, and have provided remote consulting to Arkansas. Continued consultation has been provided to Nevada, Wyoming, Alaska, Rhode Island and the Pacific Rim territories. Technical assistance reports have been provided under separate cover to the NCHS Project Officer.

Activity 5: Facilitate Adoption of Security and Best Practice Guidelines

The draft of the Section on Physical Security Measures for the Security Guidelines Manual was completed, reviewed by the Board, and comments were received from the NAPHSIS membership. The final draft will be reviewed by the Security Committee in May and then posted on the NAPHSIS web site. Initial drafting has begun on the Preservation/Disposition of Records Section and Confidential Information and Amendments/Corrections Section. The Security Committee will start reviewing these sections in the next few months.

The FEWS pilot project was completed and an evaluation report was provided to AAMVA. A MOU was developed and signed between NAPHSIS and AAMVA to give NAPHSIS members access to FEWS. FEWS will be demonstrated at the annual meeting in June and a training webinar(s) will be held after the annual meeting. AAMVA will assist in providing FEWS training to NAPHSIS members.

The American National Standards Institute (ANSI) commissioned the North American Security Products Organization (NASPO) to develop identity proofing standards. Participants on the project include representatives from the largest banks, Microsoft, Intel, Department of Homeland Security, AAMVA and the largest security companies as well as organizations. Because the birth certificate is a primary document for the development of other identity documents, NAPHSIS was invited to participate in the drafting of the standards. The NAPHSIS security guidelines are being considered as part of the identity proofing framework. Additional suggestions for securing birth certificates are also being discussed. Two presentations will be made at the June annual meeting on the project.

Activity 6: Support Implementation of the STEVE System

The State and Territorial Exchange of Vital Events (STEVE) System is still in the process of national rollout. We have made slow progress but have not been able to meet our projected number of participants. We had hoped that the announcement at last years annual meeting of the mandatory use of STEVE in the VSCP contract would stimulate more interest in becoming a trading partner. However, jurisdictions have uniformly been impacted by two factors: lack of funding and lack of connectivity with the NCHS.

Currently, there are 17 jurisdictions installed, as shown on the map in Appendix B. The most recent jurisdiction to join the trading partner community is West Virginia, which installed STEVE on May 6, 2011. Our STEVE implementation team (NAPHSIS and SMS) is actively working with 12 additional jurisdictions in various stages of planning and preparation. Most jurisdictions test their files after installation by exchanging with a small number of volunteer states. Once the exchanges are successful, they move to production and exchange on a full scale. There are, however a handful of states that have not moved into production, usually due to other project priorities. Kansas, Utah, and New Jersey and Colorado are currently not active users. Therefore, we have begun to contact those jurisdictions, identify the reasons for non-use, and have provided one-on-one guidance and assistance to move them to a production environment.

We have continued to promote the use of STEVE for inter-jurisdictional exchange throughout Year 4 in newsletters, at regional meetings and through individual meetings and demonstrations with jurisdictions. We have been promoting the use of the STEVE-ER fetal death modules as an automations solution for jurisdictions that have insufficient volume to install a full electronic fetal death system. We also have promoted the concept of STEVE-ER as a failsafe in case of emergency or catastrophic system failure, as we say earlier this year in Kansas. Several jurisdictions have said they plan to install STEVE in order to have this backup capability.

Establishing connectivity between reNVSS and STEVE remains a high priority but has not met with much progress during Year 4. Shortly after the STEVE Committee met with NCHS representatives at the 2010 annual meeting, we developed a proposal for connectivity and submitted it to NCHS for consideration (see Appendix C). At the time of this report, key issues remain unresolved. We conducted a survey of the jurisdictions on IJE practices, STEVE use and NCHS data submission and provided the survey responses to NCHS, shown in Appendix D. The results of the survey did not conclusively point to any connectivity solution or improvement in NCHS exchange business practice. A partial workaround has been proposed for STEVE (truncation of NCVHS files going to the overflow mailbox) to allow jurisdictions to extract NCHS files and send them manually through the SDN. However, this is far from an ideal solution, and most jurisdictions have said they will continue to submit to NCHS using current methods until point-to-point connectivity can be established.

Activity 7: Improve the Timeliness of Data Reporting to NCHS

In prior years, NAPHSIS developed best practice recommendations for improving the timeliness of reporting birth data. We presented the birth timeliness guidelines at the 2010 annual meeting and at regional meetings in the fall of 2009. We have since revised the timeliness guidelines and recommendations to include both birth and death reporting to NCHS, shown as Appendix E. In talking with jurisdictions about death reporting, most of the delays they experience are similar to those encountered with birth. Requirements for local registration, the need for additional paper documents prior to registration, the performance of quality assurance prior to filing are examples of practice common to birth and death reporting. Unique to death reporting are delays caused when the certifying physician does not enter medical data electronically. The subsequent routing, completion on paper and subsequent keying of medical information is the primary cause of delay in reporting deaths to the NCHS.

Activity 8: Support NCHS International Outreach

See section 2.2 for the status report on this activity.

Activity 9: Assess Jurisdictional Performance

For the past two years NAPHSIS has developed performance measures. Data on the performance measures has been collected from the jurisdictions and individual jurisdiction reports were released at the NAPHSIS annual meeting along with a presentation on the measures. As an outgrowth of the retreats held with the NCHS, NAPHSIS decided to develop jurisdictional vital statistics standards. Five NAPHSIS and two NCHS representatives served on a committee to develop the standards. Garland Land staffed the committee while Executive Director and continued to staff the committee as a consultant.

One hundred standards were developed for the functions of registration, security, issuance, data collection and quality assurance, analysis, data transmission, data analysis and dissemination, staff supervision and training, training of other persons associated with vital records, data and record preservation and policies and procedures. For each standard there is a target, a national best practice guideline, resource or comment and the requirement for documenting that the standard was met. A presentation of the vital statistics standards will be made at the 2011 NAPHSIS annual meeting. The standards will be piloted in 2-3 jurisdictions in each region. Their experiences will be shared at the regional meetings.

Activity 10: Support Jurisdictional Response to Draft Birth Certificate Regulations

Several years ago, NAPHSIS provided recommendations to the NCHS on the development of intelligence reform regulations. Those regulations have still not been promulgated. Therefore, there has been no activity on this task, and it was not included in our budget estimates for Year 4.

Activity 11: Develop and Deliver Training

NAPHSIS continues to expand on the training materials and resources available to the membership. These materials include birth and death certificate completion training materials for medical certifiers, new hospital staff training materials packets, and electronic registration system tutorials created by the vital records jurisdictions. These materials are collected in electronic or hard copy format and made available to the NAPHSIS members through the NAPHSIS Website and also by request in hard copy. We will continue to provide electronic versions of the training materials under separate cover to NCHS. These training materials were promoted to the membership at the national and regional meetings of the organization and throughout the year in newsletters and member-wide emails announcements. NAPHSIS continually solicits more contributions to this list of resources through these methods, and through contacting individual jurisdictions on a case-by-case basis.

Activity 12: New Registrar Training Program

NAPHSIS has noted examples of recently-hired registrars in the vital records jurisdictions who are relatively new to the vital records and statistics field and who have requested education from NAPHSIS on the functions of NAPHSIS, NCHS, the NVSS and key contracts such as the VSCP. During Year 4, NAPHSIS developed a new registrar orientation training program in the format of an orientation for new registrars on the resources that are available through the NCHS and NAPHSIS websites. The orientation is planned to take one day at the state office. This will allow other key staff to also participate who may not be familiar with the resources that are available. Information on new registrar training will soon be posted to the NAPHSIS website and will be promoted at the 2011 annual meeting. During the remainder of Year 4, we will promote and conduct orientations based on requests received and the availability of NAPHSIS consultants.

Activity 13: Develop a Generic Training Tool for Physician Cause of Death Certification

The Physician Cause of Death Training Module will be delivered to the jurisdictions prior to the June 2011 annual meeting. A copy will also be provided to NCHS under separate cover. New York City (NYC) had developed a web based training module to assist physicians in completing the cause of death certification. NAPHSIS contracted with NYC to rewrite their module as a generic tool that all vital records jurisdictions could use. NAPHSIS developed the requirements for the new application and NYC followed the requirements to develop the new resource. The tool was reviewed by the NAPHSIS Board prior to its release to the membership. The module was designed to be generic so it can be used by any jurisdiction. However, a jurisdiction may want to modify the module so it has the jurisdictions name or some other local feature. Each jurisdiction will receive the module via a secure HTTP download, so it can be placed on their own website. It will also be accessible via the NAPHSIS website for download sometime after the initial distribution. Fiscal Year 2012: 1. Assist states with the implementation of the Model State Vital Statistics Act and Regulations.

2. Assist states with the planning, development and implementation of web-based systems.
3. Continue to conduct business process reviews for states having difficulty delivering their vital events records to NCHS.
4. Update and maintain the national database on the re-engineering status of states.
5. Develop a web-based training strategy for enhancing the management and other skills of the leadership of the state vital statistics programs.
6. Complete the security manual and facilitate the adoption of the security procedures and best practices guidelines.
7. Continue to implement the the data transfer system and to link that system with the National Vital Statistics System to allow for the easy exchange of records between states and NCHS.

8. Promote the timeliness of reporting to NCHS.
9. Develop new registrars training program.
10. Assess state performance based on agreed upon standards.
11. Support NCHS technical assistance to and training of international countries in registration methods and practices. Fiscal Year 2013: No Current Data Available

93.069 PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS (PHEP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Public Health Service Act , Section 319C-1, Public Law 112-10; Public Health Services Act, Section 317(d); Public Health Services Act, Section 317(a).

OBJECTIVES:

The PHEP program is a critical source of funding, guidance, and technical assistance for state, territorial, and local public health departments.

Preparedness activities funded by the PHEP program are targeted specifically for the development of emergency-ready public health departments that are flexible and adaptable. These efforts support the National Response Framework (NRF), which guides how the nation responds to all types of hazards including infectious disease outbreaks; natural disasters; biological, chemical, and radiological incidents; and explosions.

To help public health departments with their strategic planning, CDC identified 15 public health preparedness capabilities to serve as national public health preparedness standards. State and local jurisdictions can use CDC's Public Health Preparedness Capabilities: National Standards for State and Local Planning to better organize their work and identify the capabilities they have the resources to build or sustain. These standards help ensure that federal preparedness funds are directed to priority areas within individual jurisdictions.

The 2012 PHEP program is currently funded via a joint cooperative agreement award and aligned with the Hospital Preparedness Program (HPP). PHEP program guidance assists the 62 PHEP awardees in demonstrating measurable and sustainable progress toward achieving the 15 public health preparedness capabilities and other activities that promote safer and more resilient communities.

Maintenance of Funding (MOF)

PHEP awardees must maintain expenditures for healthcare preparedness and public health security at a level that is not less than the average level of such expenditures maintained by the awardee for the preceding two-year period. This represents an awardees historical level of contributions or expenditures (money spent) related to federal programmatic activities that have been made prior to the receipt of federal funds. The MOF is used as an indicator of nonfederal support for public health security and healthcare preparedness before the infusion of federal funds. These expenditures are calculated by the awardee without reference to any federal funding that also may have contributed to such programmatic activities in the past. The definition of eligible state expenditures for public health security and healthcare preparedness includes: Appropriations specifically designed to support healthcare or public health emergency preparedness as expended by the entity receiving the award; and

Funds not specifically appropriated for healthcare or public health emergency preparedness activities but which support healthcare or public health emergency preparedness activities, such as personnel assigned to healthcare or public health emergency preparedness responsibilities or supplies or equipment purchased for healthcare or public health emergency preparedness from general funds or other lines within the operating budget of the entity receiving the award.

AUTHORIZATION:

The Public Health Service Act and the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, Public Law 111-31, 42 U.S.C 300u-3.

OBJECTIVES:

The Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act (TCA) provides the authority to regulate tobacco product manufacturing, distribution and marketing. Regulatory research will provide the scientific evidence to guide the implementation of this authority. Research areas include (1) understanding the diversity of tobacco products, (2) reducing addiction to tobacco products, (3) reducing toxicity and carcinogenicity of tobacco products and smoke, (4) understanding the adverse health consequences of tobacco use, (5) understanding communications about tobacco products, (6) understanding tobacco product marketing, and (7) understanding how economics and policies affect tobacco product use. This regulatory research will help understand tobacco and its ingredients and constituents, tobacco addiction, tobacco marketing and labeling, and childhood tobacco use. The strategic priorities for these research areas can be found at

<http://www.fda.gov/downloads/TobaccoProducts/NewsEvents/UCM293998.pdf>

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Cooperative Agreements; Project Grants; Project Grants (Contracts); Training

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

(1) Research project grants provide support for clearly defined projects or a small group of related research activities, and when appropriate, support of research conferences; (2) program project and center grants support large-scale, broad-based programs of research, usually interdisciplinary, consisting of several projects with a common focus; (3) exploratory/development and clinical exploratory/developmental grants encourage the development of new research activities in categorical program areas; (4) cooperative agreements support single or a group of related research activities with significant involvement of federal staff; (5) small grants support newer, less experienced investigators; investigators at institutions without a well developed research tradition and resources; the testing of new methods or techniques; small-scale exploratory and pilot studies, or exploration of an unusual research opportunity; small grants provide research support of up to $50,000 direct costs per year for a period of up to 2 years; (6) research training grants including fellowships and institutional training grants, career development grants and loan repayment contracts; and (7) SBIR Phase I grants (of approximately 6-months' duration) are to establish the technical merit and feasibility of proposed research or research and development efforts to determine the quality of performance of the small business grantees. Phase II grants are for the continuation of the research initiated in Phase I and that are likely to result in commercially viable products or processes. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to apply for Phase II support; STTR Phase I grants (normally of 1-year duration) are to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of the proposed cooperative effort that has potential for commercial application and the quality of performance of the small business concerns. Phase II funding is based on results of research initiated in Phase I and scientific and technical merit and commercial potential of the Phase II application. Research must directly support the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act and the Center for Tobacco Products, Food and Drug Administration Research Priorities found at <http://www.fda.gov/downloads/TobaccoProducts/NewsEvents/UCM293998.pdf>

Applicant Eligibility:

Applicants should review the eligibility information in the individual funding opportunity announcements issued under this CFDA.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

This Tobacco Control Regulatory Research Program will support research aimed at providing guidance and evidence to develop regulation for tobacco product manufacturing, distribution and marketing. The general public will ultimately benefit.

Credentials/Documentation:

No Credentials or documentation are required. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is generally not applicable, though applicants requesting direct costs of $500,000 or more for any one year must contact the appropriate NIH Institute or Center no later than 6 weeks before the anticipated submission date. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. OMB Circular No. A-110 applies to this program. Most applications must be prepared and submitted electronically. Most applicants use the SF 424 (Research & Related) for electronic submission. Information about the SF 424 form may be found on <http://grants.nih.gov/grants/funding/424/index.htm>, but application packages should be accessed through the appropriate funding opportunity announcement, found either on the NIH Guide to Grants and Contracts (<http://grants1.nih.gov/grants/guide/index.html>) or through the Grants.gov website (<http://www.grants.gov/>). Some institutions may submit the grant data directly (using what is called a system-to-system transfer). For further details, see grants.gov or eRA Commons. Application forms for SBIR and STTR grants may be obtained through the SBIR/STTR funding announcements posted on the NIH Guide to Grants and Contracts and the Grants.gov sites (see URLs listed above). Consultation on a proposed project may be obtained from the Office of Disease Prevention in the Division of Program Coordination, Planning, and Strategic Initiatives at NIH. Applications are reviewed by principally nonfederal consultants recruited nationwide. The amounts of the award and period of support are determined on the basis of merit of the project and the nature of the grant mechanism. Electronic applications are submitted through the Grants.gov website.

Award Procedure:

All applications for research grants, cooperative agreements, training, and SBIR and STTR grants are evaluated for scientific and technical merit by an appropriate scientific peer review panel and by the National Advisory Council of the NIH Institute or Center that will manage the award. Fiscal Year 2011: The performance indicator data reflects 12,227 children and 8,321 adults, representing 7,100 families served by the 53 grantees through March 31, 2010. The lead agencies (applicants) for the 53 grantees are based in 29 States and include six Tribes, though grantees may be serving families in multiple sites. The majority of grantees do not provide substance abuse treatment services to youth who have a substance use disorder; however, 17 grantees reported providing substance abuse treatment services to approximately 530 youth as of March 31, 2010. Fiscal Year 2012: Over the last four years, the regional partnerships have implemented a wide array of integrated programs and services responsive to the needs outlined in the legislation and gaps in current service delivery systems for vulnerable children and families affected by substance abuse. Approximately 85 percent of grantees are providing either trauma-informed or trauma-specific services to the adults they are serving, and 45 percent of grantees are providing trauma services to the majority of children they serve. As of September 2011, the grantees had served more than 20,000 RPG children and nearly 14,500 adults, representing more than 12,200 families. The Child and Family Services Improvement and Innovation Act (Pub. L. 112-34) includes a provision allowing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to continue funding of previously funded targeted grants program for two years (section 437(f)(3)(B)(ii) of the Act). 93.092 AFFORDABLE CARE ACT (ACA) PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY EDUCATION PROGRAM (PREP)FEDERAL AGENCY:

Administration for Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Title II Role Of Public Programs, Subtitle L, Maternal and Child Health Services , Title V, Section 2953, Public Law 111-148, 42 U.S.C 713(c)(1).

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of this program is to educate adolescents and young adults on both abstinence and contraception for the prevention of pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS. The Affordable Care Act was established and provided funding for this program through FY 2014.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Formula Grants; Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

To carry out personal responsibility education programs designed to educate adolescents on both abstinence and contraception for the prevention of pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS. The State program component must fund teen pregnancy prevention and personal responsibility education programs that have been proven on the basis of rigorous scientific research to change behavior, which means delaying sexual activity, increasing condom or contraceptive use for sexually active youth, or reducing pregnancy among youth. State programs must teach adulthood preparation subjects including healthy relationships, adolescent development, financial literacy, parent-child communication, educational and career success, and healthy life skills. Applicants for innovative program funding should describe the research base for proposed projects, such as the rationale for substantial modifications to evidence-based models and/or developmental research that suggests an innovative model is likely to be effective with a vulnerable or underserved population. The list of evidence-based models developed by the HHS Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation (ASPE) is published on the OAH website at <http://www.hhs.gov/ash/oah/prevention/research/programs/index.html>. Additionally, the innovative practices component must implement programs to target high-risk, vulnerable, and culturally under-represented youth populations. Such programs must be either significant modifications of the above list of evidence-based models or are based upon other promising approaches with a strong research basis. All programs must agree to participate in a rigorous Federal evaluation of their project. Innovative programs must conduct their own rigorous, independent evaluations unless they are selected for the Federal evaluation. From the $75,000,000 appropriation, $10,000,000 (13.3%) is designated for demonstrations of innovative teen pregnancy prevention and personal responsibility education programs; $3,250,000 (5% of the appropriation after the $10,000,000 is removed) is set aside for Tribes and Tribal organizations; $6,500,000 (10% of the appropriation after the $10,000,000 is removed) is designated for program support and evaluation. The remaining $55,250,000 (73.7% of the appropriation) is for States to implement evidence-based demonstration projects and is allotted by formula. However, beginning in 2012, funds from States that have not applied for FY10 or FY11 funding may be distributed on a discretionary basis to community-based organizations within those States.

Applicant Eligibility:

Funds are allotted to 59 States and Territories to enable them to carry out personal responsibility education programs. Eligible applicants include the 50 United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, Northern Mariana Islands, Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Republic of Palau. If any States or Territories do not apply for funding in FY 2010 or 2011, they will no longer be eligible to apply for this program and their allotments will be made available to community-based organizations for the same State or territory.

Funds ($10,000,000) shall be reserved to award grants to entities to implement innovative youth pregnancy prevention strategies and target services to high-risk, vulnerable, and culturally under-represented youth populations.

Funds shall be reserved for grants to Indian tribes and tribal organizations.

Funds shall be reserved for program support that may be provided directly or through a competitive award process. Program support includes research, training and technical assistance, providing consultation and resources on a broad array of teen pregnancy prevention strategies, and developing materials to support grant activities. Funds shall also be reserved to evaluate programs and activities.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Personal responsibility education programs shall provide services to adolescents and young adults. Applicants are encouraged to serve youth populations that are the most high-risk or vulnerable for pregnancies or otherwise have special circumstances, including youth in and aging of out foster care, homeless youth, youth with HIV/AIDS, pregnant youth who are under 21 years of age, mothers who are under 21 years of age, and youth residing in areas with high birth rates for youth. Applicants must include the most recent pregnancy data for the State for youth ages 10 to 14 and youth ages 15-19, and the most recent birth rates among the same age groups, and trends in those rates for the most recently preceding 5-year period for which data are available.

Credentials/Documentation:

A signed letter from the authorized representative must accompany each application; it should include documentation establishing the authorized representatives authority to apply for and administer the Personal Responsibility Education grant program funds on behalf of the State or Territory.

For other funding available under this CFDA number, non-profit organizations applying for funding are required to submit proof of their non-profit status. OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. OMB Circular No. A-110 applies to this program. The PREP program includes formula and competitive grant awards to a range of entities. The OMB circulars that are relevant vary according to the funding opportunity and the kind of organization that will be implementing the grant award.

Award Procedure:

For FY 2010 and FY 2011 funds allotted to States and Territories (States), the Administration for Children and Families (ACF) will advise States and Territories of the funding opportunity through a Federal Register notice and/or by a Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA). Applications were rated Approved, Approved with Conditions, or Approval Pending by Program administrators. Applicants that received an Approved rating received grant awards and did not need to send further information. States that submitted applications that were Approved with Conditions" received grant awards with descriptions of weaknesses and subsequent conditions that were to be met in order to receive Approved status. The States were given a set period to send to a response to ACF that addressed the conditions. States that submitted applications that were rated Approval Pending received a list of weaknesses cited by the reviewer and directions for submitting an amended application that addressed the weaknesses. States and Territories that were awarded FY 2010 and/or FY 2011 funds are to submit a letter of intent in order to receive awards in FY 2012, FY 2013 and FY 2014.

A FOA has been published to award funds to community based organizations in the States and Territories that did not receive FY 2010 and FY 2011 PREP funding. Applications will be reviewed by an Objective Review Committee which will apply the criteria given in the Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA) in order to derive priority scores. The review will include both expert peer reviewers and Federal staff who will review each application that met the responsiveness and screening criteria. The awards to the eligible applicants are expected to be made by September 30, 2012.

For funds reserved for innovative strategy grants, applications were reviewed on a nationwide basis and in competition with other submitted applications. Eligible applications were reviewed by an Objective Review Committee which applied the criteria given in the Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA) in order to derive priority scores. The review included both expert peer reviewers and Federal staff who reviewed each application that met the responsiveness and screening criteria. Additionally, the review results formed the basis for development of the programmatic terms and conditions of the cooperative agreement. Applications were provided to the Director of the Office of Adolescent Health and the Commissioner for the Administration on Children, Youth and Families (ACYF) in order by score and rank determined by the review panel. Final award decisions were made collaboratively by the Director of OAH and the Commissioner of ACYF. In making the award decision, the Director and the Commissioner took into account the score and rank order given by the Objective Review Committee, and other considerations given in the FOA.

Funds reserved for grants to Indian tribes and tribal organizations were made in a manner determined by the Secretary, in consultation with Indian tribes and tribal organizations, to be appropriate. In FY 2011, a funding opportunity announcement was issued for the award of the grants. Sixteen applicants were awarded Tribal PREP funding through the discretionary grant review process.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

93.010 Community-Based Abstinence Education (CBAE) ; 93.235 Abstinence Education Program

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Not Applicable.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

Funded State programs must replicate evidence-based, effective programs or strategies that substantially incorporate elements of effective programs that have been proven on the basis of rigorous scientific research to change behavior, which means delaying sexual activity, increasing condom or contraceptive use for sexually active youth, or reducing pregnancy among youth. The programs must include activities to educate youth who are sexually active regarding responsible sexual behavior with respect to both abstinence and the use of contraception. Such activities should teach adulthood preparation subjects including healthy relationships, adolescent development, financial literacy, parent-child communication, educational and career success, and healthy life skills. The programs must: be medically-accurate and complete; include activities to educate youth who are sexually active regarding responsible sexual behavior with respect to both abstinence and the use of contraception; place substantial emphasis on both abstinence and contraception for the prevention of pregnancy among youth and sexually transmitted infections; and must provide age-appropriate information and activities. The information and activities carried out under the program must be provided in the cultural context that is most appropriate for individuals in the particular population group to which they are directed.

REQUIREMENTS OF INNOVATIVE STRATEGIES PROJECTS: Proposals

were funded based on how effectively they can develop, replicate, refine, and test innovative strategies for preventing teenage pregnancy. Programs must be medically accurate, age appropriate, and target services to identified vulnerable and at-risk populations. Funded projects are expected to generate lessons learned so others can benefit from these strategies and innovative approaches and increase the capacity of communities to develop, implement, and evaluate interventions for dissemination and replication by others. Funded projects must show that the proposed intervention is: (a) based on some preliminary evidence of effectiveness; (b) a significant adaptation of an evidence-based program; or (c) is a new and innovative approach to teenage pregnancy prevention with a sound basis in research.

REQUIREMENTS OF TRIBAL PROJECTS: Criteria for Tribal projects were developed as the Secretary, in consultation with Indian Tribes and Tribal Organizations, deemed appropriate. Tribal PREP funding is directed toward the development of culturally appropriate comprehensive teen pregnancy prevention programs that incorporate medically accurate approaches replicating effective programs or elements of programs that have been demonstrated to change behavior. Tribal PREP focuses on the same fundamental requirements as the State PREP projects—the education of youth on both abstinence and contraception and on other adulthood preparation subjects with the goal of preventing teen pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs) including HIV/AIDS. Funds support PREP efforts that are dedicated to the development of comprehensive, high quality interventions and services that rely on the best available research evidence to inform and guide practice. Since there are few studies of teen pregnancy prevention programs targeting youth in Tribal communities adaptation and innovation are important. Further, programs that currently serve Native youth have not been rigorously evaluated and may not offer strong models for replication. Tribes and tribal organizations are encouraged, therefore, to adapt evidence-based (EB) models (or elements of EB models) that address the unique cultural needs of their communities. Adaptation must retain core elements of proven effective programs.

REQUIREMENTS OF COMPETITIVE PREP PROJECTS: Competitive PREP funds support projects that educate youth between the ages of 10 and 19, and pregnant and parenting youth, under age 21, on abstinence and contraception for teen prevention of pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs), including HIV/AIDS. Applicants must also provide programming on at least three of six adulthood preparation subjects that will be discussed in the published funding opportunity announcement. Further PREP funding is directed toward the development of comprehensive, teen pregnancy prevention programs that incorporate medically accurate approaches, while replicating evidence-based programs or elements of programs that have been demonstrated to change behavior. FYSB Competitive PREP funding supports efforts that are dedicated to the development of comprehensive culturally appropriate interventions and services that rely on the best available research to inform and guide practice.

Through a competitive process HPOG projects were approved for five year project periods. Each new budget period begins September 30. In general, funding for each budget period must be obligated within the budget period. Recipients are required to submit a non-competing continuation application and semi-annual performance progress reports as a prerequisite to approval and funding of each subsequent budget period within the approved project period. Funding for each budget period is contingent on satisfactory progress, the availability of funds, and the continued best interests of the Federal government. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released: Funds are drawn down by grantees on a periodic basis, typically each month.

Reports:

Grantees must submit semi-annual performance progress reports. Each semi-annual progress report is due no later than 30 days after the end of the reporting period. Grantees must submit an annual Financial Status Report (FSR). An FSR is due no later than 90 days after the end of the applicable 12 month period and failure to submit these timely could affect future funding. OBJECTIVES:

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Public Law 111-148, amended the PHS Act, Section 751, Area Health Education Centers. The required program activities in the amended legislation embrace the following goals to: (1) educate and train students to become culturally competent primary care health professionals who will provide healthcare in underserved areas and to health disparity populations; (2) increase the number and variety of primary care health professionals who provide care to underserved populations in Health Professional Shortage Areas (HPSAs) and other medically underserved areas; and (3) recruit into health careers individuals from underrepresented minority populations or from disadvantaged or rural backgrounds. The Area Health Education Centers (AHEC) Point of Service Maintenance and Enhancement awards consist of cooperative agreements with accredited schools of medicine and nursing to maintain and improve the effectiveness and the capabilities of an existing AHEC program, and make other modifications to the program that are appropriate due to changes in demographics and needs of populations served. The AHEC awardees link the academic resources of medical schools and participating health professions schools with local educational and clinical sites, and thereby establish a network of primary care oriented community-based training sites to provide educational services to health professions students, faculty-preceptors and health care providers in underserved areas, and ultimately to improve the delivery of health care in an underserved region or in an entire state. Grantees shall allocate not less than 75 percent of the award to area health education centers to coordinate community-based training and interdisciplinary/interprofessional training in underserved areas and for health disparity populations. AHEC health careers recruitment activities shall be coordinated, where practicable, with Department of Labor workforce investment boards, and shall include an emphasis on careers in public health. Interdisciplinary/interprofessional training shall involve physicians, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, nurse midwives, dentists, psychologists, pharmacists, optometrists, community health workers, public health and allied

93.110 MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH FEDERAL CONSOLIDATED PROGRAMS

Special Projects of Regional and National Significance (SPRANS), including the Community Integrated Service Systems (CISS); Public Health Service Act - Section 399BB Programs under the Combating Autism Act of 2006; The Heritable Disorders Program and the Congenital Conditions Program.

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Social Security Act, Title V, Section 502(a)(1) and (b)(1), as amended; 42 U.S.C. 702.; Section 399BB of the Public Health Service Act; Section 1109, 1111 and 1112 of the Public Health Service Act and Section 399T of the Public Health Service Act.

OBJECTIVES:

To carry out special maternal and child health (MCH) projects of regional and national significance; to conduct training and research; to conduct genetic disease testing, counseling, and information development and dissemination programs; for grants relating to hemophilia without regard to age; and for the screening of newborns for sickle cell anemia, and other genetic disorders. and to support comprehensive hemophilia diagnostic and treatment centers. These grants are funded with a set-aside from the MCH Block grant program. SPRANS grants are funded with 15 percent of the Block Grant appropriation of up to $600 million. When the appropriation exceeds $600 million, 12.75 percent of the amount over $600 million is set aside for the Community Integrated Service Systems grants. 15 percent of the balance remaining over $600 million is also for SPRANS. The CISS program is to develop and expand the following: (1) Home visitation; (2) increased participation of obstetricians and pediatricians; (3) integrated service delivery systems; (4) maternal and child health centers for women and infants, under the direction of a not-for-profit hospital; (5) services for rural populations; and (6) community-based services for children with special health care needs in order to enhance or develop an integrated services system. In FY 2008 Congress first funded the Combating Autism Act program, which is for early detection, education and intervention activities on autism and other developmental disorders.

First funded in 2004, the Heritable Disorders Program is established to improve the ability of States to provide newborn and child screening for heritable disorders and affect the lives of all of the nations infants and children. Newborn and child screening occur at intervals across the life span of every child. Newborn screening universally provides early identification and follow-up for treatment of infants affected by certain genetic, metabolic, hormonal and/or functional conditions. It is expected that newborn and child screening will expand as the capacity to screen for genetic and congenital conditions expands.

First funded in 2009, the Congenital Conditions program is established to provide information and support services to women and their families that have received a diagnosis for Down Syndrome, Spina Bifida, Dwarfism and other prenatally or postnatally diagnosed conditions.

OBJECTIVES:

To foster understanding of human health effects of exposure to environmental agents in the hope that these studies will lead to: the identification of agents that pose a hazard and threat of disease, disorders and defects in humans; the development of effective public health or disease prevention strategies; the overall improvement of human health effects due to environmental agents; the development of products and technologies designed to better study or ameliorate the effects of environmental agents; and the successful training of research scientists in all areas of environmental health research. Supported grant programs focus on the following areas: (1) Understanding biological responses to environmental agents by determining how chemical and physical agents cause pathological changes in molecules, cells, tissues, and organs, and become manifested as respiratory disease, neurological, behavioral and developmental abnormalities, cancer, and other disorders; (2) Determining the mechanisms of toxicity of ubiquitous agents like metals, natural and synthetic chemicals, pesticides, and materials such as nanoparticles, and natural toxic substances, and their effects of on various human organ systems, on metabolism, on the endocrine and immune systems, and on other biological functions; (3) Developing and integrating scientific knowledge about potentially toxic and hazardous chemicals by concentrating on toxicological research, testing, test development, validation and risk estimation; (4) Identifying interactions between environmental stressors and genetic susceptibility and understanding biologic mechanisms underlying these interactions, including the study of environmental influences on epigenomics and transcriptional regulation; (5) Conducting environmental public health research, including in areas of environmental justice and health disparities, that requires communities as active participants in all stages of research, dissemination, and evaluation to advance both the science and the development of practical materials for use in communities, with a focus on translating research findings into tools, materials, and resources that can be used to prevent, reduce, or eliminate adverse health outcomes caused by environmental exposures; (6) Expanding and improving the SBIR program; to increase private sector commercialization of innovations derived from Federal research and development; to increase small business participation in Federal research and development; and to foster and encourage participation of socially and economically disadvantaged small business concerns and women-owned small business concerns in technological innovation; (7) Expanding and improving the STTR program to stimulate and foster scientific and technological innovation through cooperative research and development carried out between small business concerns and research institutions; to foster technology transfer between small business concerns and research institutions; to increase private sector commercialization of innovations derived from Federal research and development; and to foster and encourage participation of socially and economically disadvantaged small business concerns and women-owned small business concerns in technological innovation; (8) Providing support for broadly based multi-disciplinary research and training programs in environmental health. These programs include the Environmental Health Sciences Core Centers, which serve as national focal points and resources for research and manpower development. The Centers for Neurodegenerative Science addresses the need for integrated research efforts involving basic and clinical scientists in a quest to discover the causes of and possible treatments for neurodegenerative diseases. The Breast Cancer and the Environment Research Program (co-funded with NCI) studies the impact of prenatal-to-adult environmental exposures that may predispose a woman to breast cancer. A special emphasis is on the impact of environmental factors on a girls pubertal development, a known risk factor for breast cancer. Through these programs, NIEHS expects to achieve the long range goal of developing new clinical and public health applications to improve disease prevention, diagnosis, and therapy. Additional Centers programs developed in recent years, include the Centers for Oceans and Human Health (co-funded with NSF), Children's Environmental Health Centers (co-funded with US EPA) and the Autism Centers of Excellence (co-funded with other NIH Institutes) and the ; (9) Supporting research training programs which serve to increase the pool of trained research manpower with needed expertise in the Environmental Health Sciences through support of Individual and Institutional National Research Service Awards (NRSAs); (10) The Outstanding New Environmental Scientist Program which provides first time research grant funding to outstanding junior scientists in the formative stages of their career who are proposing to make a long term commitment to environmental health sciences research and to address the adverse effects on environmental exposures on human biology, human pathophysiology and human disease.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Research Grants and Cooperative Agreements are intended to support the direct costs of a project, in accordance with an approved budget, plus an appropriate amount for indirect costs. SBIR Phase I grants (of approximately 6-months' duration) are to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research effort that may lead to a commercial product or process. Phase II grants are for the continuation of the research initiated in Phase I and that are likely to result in commercial products or processes. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to receive Phase II support. STTR Phase I grants (normally of 1-year duration) are to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of the proposed cooperative effort that has potential for commercial application. Phase II funding is based on results of research initiated in Phase I, scientific and technical merit, and commercial potential of the Phase II application. A number of Career Development awards are supported. The Independent Scientist Award provides up to five years of salary support for newly independent scientists who have recently obtained independent research funding, generally an R01 research grant from NIEHS. The award is intended to allow the candidate protected time to focus on the further development of the independent research career and does not include additional research support. The Mentored Clinical Research Career Development Award provides three to five years of salary support for investigators with clinical degrees (e.g., M.D., D.V.M.). The Transition to Independent Environmental Health Research (TIEHR) Career Development Award provides three years of support for candidates who are within three years of their first independent faculty appointment and who have not yet obtained significant research grant funding (an R01 or equivalent). The award includes salary support and pilot funding. The Mentored Patient-Oriented Research Career Development Award provides up to five years of support for clinically trained investigators who make a commitment to focus on patient-oriented research. The MidCareer Investigator Award in Patient-Oriented Research provides up to five years of support to outstanding clinical scientists who are actively engaged in patient-oriented research and who are within 15 years of their specialty training. The Mentored Quantitative Research Development Award provides up to five years of support for junior faculty with quantitative scientific and engineering backgrounds outside of biology or medicine that are transitioning to behavioral or biomedical research. The NIH Pathway to Independence Award is divided into two phases. The initial award (K99) provides up to two years of mentored, postdoctoral support. The second phase (R00) provides up to three years of independent research support, when the awardee accepts a full-time tenure track, or equivalent, faculty position. All of these Career Development awards provide salary consistent with the level of effort devoted to the research career development activities, plus fringe benefits, an allowance for career development activities and 8 percent fiscal and administrative costs. All Career Development Awards, with the exception of the NIH Pathway to Independence Award, have a US citizenship requirement. Details of specific restrictions for the Career Development Awards can be found at <http://www.niehs.nih.gov/careers/research/trainingfrom/career/index.cfm>. NIEHS Core Center grants (P30) are primarily intended to provide infrastructure support and the support of core research facilities. In addition, an appropriate facilities and administrative cost is provided as determined by negotiated agreement with the grantee's cognizant government organization. National Research Service Awards (NRSA): Individual predoctoral and postdoctoral training awards are made for the support of fellows who engage in research training in environmental toxicology, environmental pathology, environmental mutagenesis, or environmental epidemiology/biostatistics. In addition to individual training awards, institutional training grants (T32) are made to institutions to enable institutions to make awards to individuals selected by them, for both predoctoral and postdoctoral research training in the aforementioned areas. Each individual who receives a postdoctoral NRSA, either through an institutional or individual training award mechanism, is obligated upon termination of the award to comply with certain service and payback provisions.

Applicant Eligibility:

Research Grants, Cooperative Agreements, Science Education Grants, SBIR Grants, Independent Scientist Awards, Mentored Research Scientist Development Award, Mentored Clinical Scientist Development Award, and the Academic Career Awards: A university, college, hospital, State, local or tribal governments, nonprofit research institution, or for-profit organization may submit an application and receive a grant for support of research by a named principal investigator. Candidates for Academic Career Awards and Midcareer Investigator Awards in Patient Oriented Research must have a doctoral degree and peer-reviewed, independent, research support at the time the award is made. FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institutes of Health, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Public Health Service Act, Title IV, Section 301; 2012 Defense Authorization Act.

OBJECTIVES:

To improve oral, dental and craniofacial health through research, research training, and the dissemination of health information. The research portfolio supports basic, clinical and translational research from molecular biology to patient-oriented and community-based clinical investigations. The Developmental Biology and Genetics Program supports research on etiology, pathogenesis, epidemiology, prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of inherited craniofacial-oral-dental diseases and disorders (e.g., ectodermal dysplasia, cleft lip and palate, amelogenesis imperfecta, dentinogenesis imperfecta, osteogenesis imperfecta, and other inherited diseases that have craniofacial-oral-dental manifestations) as well as on normal craniofacial-oral-dental development, and genome-wide association studies. 2. The Translational Genetics and Genomics program supports genetic/genomic research using epidemiologic and family-based methods, gene discovery using high throughput technologies, and gene-environment interactions. 3. The Microbiology Program supports basic and translational research on the role of oral microbes in health and disease including the etiology, pathogenesis, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of oral infectious diseases. Areas of interest include biofilms and microbial ecology, microbial genomics and metagenomics, microbial virulence and disease pathogenesis, prevention and treatment. 4. The AIDS and Immunosuppression Program supports basic, translational and clinical research on HIV infection and AIDS to advance understanding of the underlying molecular, cellular, and genetic mechanisms that enable or prevent HIV infection and development of oral complications associated with AIDS and AIDS malignancies. 5. The Immunology and Immunotherapy Program supports basic and translational research on the immune aspects of oral diseases such as caries and periodontal diseases. The program includes host responses to microbes, immunology of biofilms, oral inflammation, systemic diseases, immunotherapy, immunopathologies, and host susceptibility to infection. 6. The Epithelial Cell Regulation and Transformation Program supports basic and translational research on the molecular mechanisms of oral epithelial cell regulation as they relate to the development and progression of diseases of the oral mucosa, including head and neck cancer. The program also supports and encourages the application of genomic, proteomic, and imaging technologies through research on the early diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of head and neck cancers. 7. The Mineralized Tissue and Salivary Gland Physiology Program supports basic and translational research on craniofacial skeletal biology and pathobiology including the physiology of tooth, bone and cartilage, and associated disorders and diseases, saliva and salivary glands, and pharmacogenetics. The goal of the program is to promote interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches to advance the understanding of normal and abnormal processes underlying oral, dental and craniofacial diseases and disorders. 8. The Molecular and Cellular Neuroscience Program supports basic and translational research on orofacial pain and neuropathies, temporomandibular joint and muscle disorders, development of biomarkers for diagnostics and prognostics and development of therapeutics. 9. The Tissue Engineering and Dental and Craniofacial Regenerative Medicine Program supports basic and translational research on the reconstruction, remodeling and repair of the oral and craniofacial tissues damaged as a result of disease or injury. The goal of this scientific program is to promote interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approaches to engineering of biocompatible oral and craniofacial tissue constructs and their functional integration into the host tissue microenvironment. The program also supports efforts that employ bioengineering approaches for restoration, remodeling and regeneration of diseased and injured native host tissues. 10. The Dental and Biomaterials Program supports basic and translational extramural research on dental materials and devices, dental implants, biocompatibility of dental restorative materials, and biomaterials for craniofacial reconstruction. 11. The Behavioral and Social Sciences Research Program supports basic and applied BSS research to promote oral health, to prevent oral diseases and related disabilities, and to improve management of craniofacial conditions, disorders and injury. 12. The Center for Clinical Research supports clinical trials, dental practice based research networks, epidemiology research, and health disparities research. The Research Training and Career Development Program insures the future of dental and craniofacial research by developing an outstanding and diverse scientific work force through training and fellowship programs designed primarily for graduate, and post-doctoral stages of education, including dual degree (DDS, PhD) programs, as well as for continued career development of scientists and retraining of mid-career scientists. Diversity fellowships serve to expand the diversity of the scientific work force by supporting the training of predoctoral students from underrepresented groups. The Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program seeks to increase private sector commercialization of innovations derived from Federal research and development; to increase small business participation in Federal research and development; and to foster and encourage participation of socially and economically disadvantaged small business concerns and women-owned small business concerns in technological innovation. The Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) program seeks to stimulate and foster scientific and technological innovation and foster technology transfer through cooperative research and development carried out between small business concerns and research institutions; to increase private sector commercialization of innovations derived from Federal research and development; and to foster and encourage participation of socially and economically disadvantaged small business concerns and women-owned small business concerns in technological innovation.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:PROJECT GRANTS*USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Research Grants: Research Grants and cooperative agreements provide funds for salaries, equipment, supplies, travel, and other expenses associated with scientific investigation in the oral health sciences. They are awarded to universities, colleges, medical and dental schools, hospitals, and other nonprofit and for-profit institutions. Awards include investigator-initiated project grants, exploratory and developmental grants, small grants, program project grants, center grants, and career development awards. Individual and institutional Dentist Scientist Awards provide support for research career development in both clinical and basic science. National Research Service Awards (NRSAs) provide support directly to individuals for research training in specified biomedical areas, and can be made to institutions to enable them to accept individuals for research training. Individuals who receive NRSAs may be obligated upon termination of the award to comply with service and payback provisions. SBIR Phase I grants (duration of approximately 6 months) provide support to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research effort that may lead to a commercial product or process. Phase II grants support the continuation of the research initiated in Phase I to further develop the commercial products or process initiated in Phase I. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to receive Phase II support. STTR Phase I grants (duration of typically 1 year) support cooperative efforts between small businesses and research institutes to determine the scientific and technical merit, and commercial feasibility of a product or process with potential for commercial application. Phase II funding is based on the results of the research initiated in Phase I and the scientific and technical merit, and commercial potential of the Phase II application.

Applicant Eligibility:

Grants: Scientists at universities, medical and dental schools, hospitals, laboratories, and other public or private nonprofit and for-profit institutions. NRSA and career development awards: (1) Nonprofit domestic organizations may apply for institutional awards. (2) Individual candidates or applicants must arrange sponsorship by a public or nonprofit private institution having staff and facilities appropriate to the proposed research training program. (3) All awardees must be citizens, or non-citizen nationals, of the United States or have been admitted to the United States for permanent residence, except for K99/R00 and T90/R90 grants. 93.134 GRANTS TO INCREASE ORGAN DONATIONS

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Reimbursement of Travel and Subsistence Expenses toward Living Organ Donation: Section 377 of the Public Health Service (PHS) Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. Section 274f. Clinical Interventions to Increase Organ Procurement (CIOP): Section 377A of the Public Health Service (PHS) Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. Section 274f-1(b). Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation: Section 377A(a)-(b) of the Public Health Service (PHS) Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. Section 274f-1(a)-(b). Public Education Efforts to Increase Solid Organ Donation Program: Section 377A(a)-(b) of the Public Health Service (PHS) Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. Section 274f-1(a)-(b). Donation and Transplantation Community of Practice Initiatives to Increase Organ Donation (DTCPIOD): Public Health Service Act, Section 377A, as amended, 42 U.S.C. Section 274f-1(d).

OBJECTIVES:

To support grants for the purpose of increasing public commitment to organ donation and the number of organs recovered and ultimately transplanted. To that end, the Division of Transplantation has cooperative agreements and grant programs with the following objectives: Reimbursement of Travel and Subsistence Expenses toward Living Organ Donation: The purpose of this program is to operate a national system to provide reimbursement of travel and subsistence expenses, and other non-medical expenses that may be authorized by the Secretary to individuals making living donations of their organs. Clinical Interventions to Increase Organ Procurement (CIOP): This program provides support for the implementation of highly promising research in clinical management of deceased organ donors. The program supports an evaluation of model interventions for identifying appropriate Donation after Neurological Determination of Death (DNDD) and Donation after Circulatory Determination of Death (DCDD) candidates, evaluating donated organs, maintaining donor stability, and optimizing methods for organ procurement. Recent CIOP research requests have focused upon Donor Management Research primarily in DNDD candidates. Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation: This program provides support for the implementation and rigorous evaluation of highly promising strategies and approaches for increasing public attitudes, practices and ultimately commitment to organ donation as well as family consent at a relatives time of death. Projects may increase the knowledge of options available through living donation among patients who may need transplants and/or individuals considering serving as a living donor, but may not promote living donation. Public Education Efforts to Increase Solid Organ Donation: The purpose of this program is to support the implementation of public education and outreach programs that show promise of increasing organ donation. Specifically, this program supports the replication of strategies demonstrated in the Divisions grant program Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation or through other research efforts to be effective in increasing organ donation. The program also supports the implementation of efforts to increase organ donation that adopt and replicate strategies demonstrated in the public health literature as being effective methods for modifying other health behaviors. The program also supports the implementation of public education and outreach efforts that are based on an established framework for successful public health outreach programs. This grant program is supportive of the Divisions mission to educate the public about deceased and/or living donation and to encourage individuals to document their decision to be a donor in their statewide donor registry or by some other mechanism where a registry is unavailable. Projects may focus on increasing knowledge of opportunities for and the process, risks, advantages and disadvantages of deceased and living donation, but may not promote living donation. Donation and Transplantation Community of Practice Initiatives to Increase Organ Donation (DTCPIOD): This program supports in the planning of strategic development and implementation of a comprehensive group of programs and professional experiences to increase organ donation and transplantation in the United States.

In six months since initial award, Collaborative Conversion rate increased from 76.3% to 76.9% and Donation after Circulatory Determination of Death increased from 12.7% to 12.8%. Participation at meetings and educational offerings held under this cooperative agreement was higher than ever before.

Clinical Interventions to Increase Organ Procurement Grant Program:

No data available

The Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation grant program was launched in FY 1999. From FY 1999-2012, HRSA/DoT has supported 96 research projects totaling $77 million to test strategies for increasing organ and tissue donation or to replicate successful donation interventions. Since its launch several strategies for increasing organ donation have been shown to be successful and have been disseminated throughout the field of organ donation. One such strategy is the in-house coordinator now widely adopted throughout the country. Another strategy shown to successfully increase registration rates is point-of-decision outreach and education often located in department of motor vehicle offices. The Public Education Efforts to Increase Solid Organ Donation grant program was launched in 2007. Through this grant program HRSA has supported 21 projects totaling over $12 million. These projects replicate and disseminate strategies that have been proven to be successful through other means, such as the Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation grant program. EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: Reimbursement of Travel and Subsistence Expenses toward Living Organ Donation Program (FY 2010 through FY 2013): HRSA awards a cooperative agreement to the Regents of the University of Michigan to continue the operations of the National Living Donor Assistance Center to provide reimbursement of travel and subsistence expenses to living organ donors who meet the program eligibility guidelines. Transplant centers screen prospective donors for program eligibility requirements and submit applications and supporting documents to the program on behalf of their prospective donors. Donation and Transplantation Community of Practice Initiatives to Increase Organ Donation: This program engages one recipient, the Organ Donation and Transplantation Alliance, in the strategic development and implementation of a comprehensive group of programs and professional experiences to increase organ donation and transplantation in the United States. In the first six months of the project, the Alliance conducted meetings and webinars to improve organ donor management; quality improvement; action team processes; transplant program effectiveness; and support and advocacy for donors, donor families, and staff involved in these cases,

Clinical Interventions to Increase Organ Procurement Grant Program:

HRSA funded two projects in FY 2011 to support for the implementation of highly promising research into improvements in clinical management of deceased organ donors.

In 2011 five new Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation grants were awarded. Four of those grants focused on increasing the number of registered donors among their target populations. Two proposed to reach their target population through primary care physicians, one through the Mexican consulate and the other through challenge campaigns on college campuses. The fifth grant focused on educating Hispanics about living donation through a bilingual, culturally competent Website. In 2011 four new Public Education Efforts to Increase Solid Organ Donation grants were awarded. Two of these grants proposed to increase organ donor registration by providing targeted education in department of motor vehicles offices. Another proposed to increase donor registration through text messaging. The fourth grant is disseminating an education program that has been previously shown to be successful to increase dialysis patients about living donation. Fiscal Year 2012: In 2012 it is anticipated that two Social and Behavioral Interventions to Increase Solid Organ Donation grants will be awarded. Both grants seek to increase knowledge of living donation, one among Native Americans through story-telling and the second among kidney transplant candidates. In 2012 three Public Education Efforts to Increase Solid Organ Donation grants are anticipated to be awarded. The goal of all three grants is to increase organ donor registration among their target audience, one through targeted messaging at department of motor vehicle offices, one through targeted messaging to 50 64 year olds, and the third through an electronic health information system. Fiscal Year 2012: No data available. Fiscal Year 2013: No Current Data Available.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: The Superfund Research Program is committed to protecting the nations citizens by supporting research on the effects of environmental contaminants and developing strategies to reduce exposures and prevent disease.

For example, in Fiscal Year 2011, Program grantees demonstrated the potential for consuming unhealthy amounts of arsenic via rice. The grantees found significant differences in the urinary arsenic concentrations of pregnant women who had eaten rice in the previous two days in comparison those who had not. The Investigators findings highlight the importance to monitor arsenic in the food supply, as both the U.S. and the E.U. do not have statutory limits on arsenic content in rice. This study also reveals the need to determine the potential health impacts from this source of exposure.

In another example for Fiscal Year 2011, Superfund Research Investigators devised a water purification technique that eliminates the need for addition of expensive and harmful chemicals to degrade toxic organic compounds. To accomplish this, Program researchers utilized nanostructured materials immobilized onto a membrane that reacted with simple glucose to degrade toxic organic compounds from groundwater. Fiscal Year 2012: In FY 2012, the Superfund Research Program continued to support research and make advances in the areas germane to its legislative mandates: to develop methods to detect hazardous substances in the environment; advance techniques for the detection, assessment, and evaluation of the effects of hazardous substances on humans; research methods to assess the risks to human health presented by hazardous substances; and develop basic biological, chemical, and physical methods to reduce the amount and toxicity of hazardous substances. Fiscal Year 2013: In Fiscal Year 2013, the Superfund Research Program will continue to support large, multi-project center grants, individual investigator grants and Small Business Innovative Research (SBIR) and Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) programs in order to advance research in accordance with the mandates specified in with the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act (SARA) of 1986.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2011: In Fiscal Year 2011, NIEHS renewed three new multi project grants. One grant provides $ 12.9 million over a period of five years to enhance the broad understanding of chemical impacts on developing organisms and develop approaches for reducing these impacts. This research concentrates on a mechanistic approach: mechanisms underlying developmental perturbations, mechanisms underlying ameliorations of and adaptations to these effects, and mechanisms underlying engineered solutions for the ultimate removal of these chemicals from the environment. A major cross-cutting theme is that of potential biological "costs" of early life exposures to humans and ecosystems, and of remediation strategies.

In another grant, $14.7 million over five years will be used to study the human health and environmental risks associated with hazardous waste sites, with the goal of more accurately assessing risks and more efficiently remediating hazardous waste sites. It will focus is research on developing biomarkers of exposure and effect for human and experimental models of environmental disease; applying new molecular and analytical tools in a systems biology framework to understand metabolic pathways critical for environmental disease; elucidating mechanisms that associate maternal cadmium exposure with poor newborn health outcomes and identifying molecular pathways that underlie susceptibility to metal-induced toxicity; determining the genetic and metabolic factors contributing to dermal absorption and the relationship of internal dose to total systemic exposure; elucidating the modes of action for major chlorinated hydrocarbons and polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons and examining whether modes of action hold constant over the range of likely exposures; evaluating the extent to which remediation and bioremediation practices result in measurable reductions in toxicity and genotoxicity; and developing and evaluating remediation methods in complex, field-relevant systems for their potential to reduce overall human exposures and risks.

In a third grant, $14.5 million is being directed to using state-of-the-art technology, including 'omics' and nanotechnology, to develop biological markers and apply them in human population studies, especially those involving susceptible populations such as children and pregnant women; to improve chemical detection; and facilitate and lower the cost of waste site remediation. This highly integrated research endeavor is focusing on environmental exposures currently encountered at hazardous waste sites and several contaminants of emerging human health concern. Specific aims are to develop advanced techniques for the detection, assessment, and evaluation of the effect of hazardous substances on human health and improve methods to assess the risks to human health presented by benzene, arsenic, trichloroethylene and other hazardous substances. It is using nanotechnology to develop methods to detect hazardous substances in the environment in a simple, inexpensive fashion and is developing biological, chemical, and physical methods to remediate waste sites and reduce the amount and toxicity of hazardous substances.

It is anticipated that a fourth grant will be award later in the fiscal year to addresses the synergistic interactions of combustion-generated organic pollutants and particles that increase their chemical and biological activity. Goals include understanding the relationships between the origins, mechanisms of formation, nature of emissions; biological availability; and biological activity of toxic combustion by-products. Research will focus on the origin and health impacts of four classes of pollutants: combustion generated ultra-fine particles (UFPs); persistent free radicals (PFRs); chlorinated hydrocarbons (CHQs); and brominated hydrocarbons (BHG).

In 2011, NIEHS released an RFA, Innovative Bioavailability Assays to Assess the Effectiveness of Contaminated Sediment Remediation for individual investigator project grants. Grants awarded in response to this RFA will be for three years and directed to the development of innovative assays of bioavailability that may be used to determine the effectiveness of sediment remediation in reducing risks to humans. The ultimate goals of funding grants under this solicitation are two-fold: first, to develop and introduce new tools to assess whether remediation efforts are protective of human health; and second, to increase use of bioavailability in risk assessment through providing scientifically-valid, practical, and cost-effective tools. It is anticipated that four five awards will be made in 2011.

In 2011, the Superfund Research Program funded three new Small Business Innovative Research grants for a total of $1.2 million. The grants will be for the detection and remediation of hazardous substances. Fiscal Year 2012: In Fiscal Year 2012, NIEHS Superfund Research Program renewed three multi-project center grants (<http://tools.niehs.nih.gov/srp/programs/index267.cfm>). One grant provides $13.2 million over a period of five years to study the health effects and geochemistry of arsenic and manganese. Included in its investigations area longitudinal epidemiologic study to evaluate the effects of arsenic exposure in a population in Bangladesh; consequences of As and Mn exposure on children's health; and impact of nutrition on arsenic-induced epigenetic dysregulation.

This research endeavor is intimately intertwined with other research projects that will look at arsenic, iron, sulfur and organic carbon speciation, and their impact on groundwater arsenic; application of enhanced mitigation methods for groundwater As at US Superfund Sites; and defining the sustainable uses of low-As aquifers in Bangladesh.

Another previously funded multi-project grant was awarded $14.5 million over a period of five years. Under this grant, investigators are gaining new perspectives on the molecular and genetic basis of the biological effects of toxicant exposure leading to new methodologies for gauging health risks and assessing health effects; innovative detection and monitoring systems for toxicity; and novel models for bioremediation. Using the prior observation that chemical exposure leads to alterations in patterns of gene expression, which are controlled and regulated by underlying signal transduction pathways, the researchers will test the hypothesis that alterations in biological response by Superfund site chemicals can be exploited to develop models for the detection and bioremediation of chemical toxicants. The investigators have also formed partnerships with local industry and community groups to develop biological tools for assessment of exposure levels arising from waterborne pollutants in order to predict health risk.

In the third grant renewal, $11.6 million was awarded over five years to identify receptor-based toxic effects of superfund chemicals on development and reproduction in humans and wildlife. The chemicals under study are organic compounds of special interest to the SRP mandate that initiate their toxic actions by interacting with specific molecules inside cells called receptors that can lead to cell development alterations. A special feature of this research center is a coordinated set of parallel projects examining molecular and population effects of developmental toxins in the standard laboratory zebra fish model and a widespread environmental sentinel, the killifish. Epidemiological studies of developmental and reproductive outcomes from exposure to the high-prevalence Superfund chemicals perchloroethylene (PCE, tetrachloroethene), PCBs, the pesticide methoxychlor, phthalate, organotins and metals target knowledge gaps identified as special research needs by EPA/ATSDR. A major feature is the development of novel methods to address some of the most difficult problems associated with the typical hazardous waste epidemiological and toxicological datasets, temporal spatial distribution and interaction in mixtures.

In 2011, NIEHS Superfund Research Program released an Request for Applications (RFA), Innovative Bioavailability Assays to Assess the Effectiveness of Contaminated Sediment Remediation for individual investigator project grants. In response to this RFA, in 2012 five grants were awarded for a period of three years. These grants were directed to the development of innovative assays of bioavailability that may be used to determine the effectiveness of sediment remediation in reducing risks to humans. The ultimate goals of funding grants under this solicitation are two-fold: first, to develop and introduce new tools to assess whether remediation efforts are protective of human health; and second, to increase use of bioavailability in risk assessment through providing scientifically-valid, practical, and cost-effective tools. Additional information for these awards can be found at (<http://tools.niehs.nih.gov/srp/programs/r01current.cfm>).

Also in Fiscal Year 2012, the NIEHS Superfund Research Program, funded a new Small Business Innovative Research grant (<http://tools.niehs.nih.gov/srp/programs/index269.cfm>) for a total of $141,000. The grant will be for detection of hazardous substances. Fiscal Year 2013: No current data are available for Fiscal Year 2013.

93.157 CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE

Centers of Excellence (COEs)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Public Health Service Act, Title VII, Section 736, 42 U.S.C. 293, as amended by the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010 (P.L. 111-148) Section 5401.

OBJECTIVES:

The goal of this program is to assist eligible schools in supporting programs of excellence in health professions education for underrepresented minority (URM) individuals. The Centers of Excellence (COE) program is a catalyst for institutionalizing a commitment to under-represented minority (URM) students/faculty and to serve as a national resource and educational center for diversity and minority health issue. Additionally, the COE program will help to strengthen the national capacity to produce a culturally competent healthcare workforce whose diversity is representative of the United States Population.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Section 736 authorizes awarding funding to health professions schools to: (1) develop a large competitive applicant pool through linkages with institutions of higher education, local school districts, and other community-based entities; and establish an education pipeline for health professions careers; (2) establish, strengthen, or expand programs to enhance the academic performance of underrepresented minority students attending the school; (3) improve the capacity of such school to train, recruit, and retain underrepresented minority faculty including the payment of stipends and fellowships as the Secretary may determine appropriate; (4) carry out activities to improve the information resources, clinical education, curricula and cultural competence of the graduates of the school as it relates to minority health issues; (5) facilitate faculty and student research on health issues particularly affecting underrepresented minority groups, including research on issues relating to the delivery of health care; (6) carry out a program to train students of the school in providing health services to a significant number of underrepresented minority individuals through training provided to such students at community-based health facilities. These facilities provide such health services and are located at a site remote from the main site of the teaching facilities of the school; and (7) provide stipends as the Secretary determines appropriate in the amounts the Secretary determines.

Applicant Eligibility:

Eligible applicants include designated Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and health professions schools that are accredited schools of allopathic medicine; osteopathic medicine; dentistry; pharmacy; or a graduate program in behavioral or mental health; or other public and nonprofit health or educational entities that meet the required conditions regarding: underrepresented minorities as described in Section 736 of the Public Health Service Act.

The second eligibility criteria requires eligible health professions schools to demonstrate effectiveness in the applicant organization meeting or exceeding a specified minimum threshold in the number of URM students graduating with appropriate health professional degree. This is calculated by dividing the total number of URM students graduating from the health professions school with a degree by the total number of students graduating with a degree in a given health professions school.

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The research project grant is awarded to an eligible institution in the name of a principal investigator for a discrete project or group of related projects representing the investigator's interest and competence. Funds may be used for salaries and wages, equipment, supplies, travel and other costs required to carry out the research project. National Research Service Awards are made directly to individuals for research training in disciplines supporting the research areas. In addition, grants may be made to institutions to enable them to select individuals for National Research Service Awards. Each individual who receives a National Research Service Award is responsible for certain service and payback provisions. Responsibilities of grantees and restrictions on use of funds are set forth in the Public Health Service policy statement on grants for research projects, which is available on request from the Division of Extramural Outreach and Information Resources, Office of Extramural Research, National Institutes of Health (NIH), 6701 Rockledge Drive, Room 6207, MSC 7910, Bethesda, MD 20892-7910. Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Program: SBIR Phase I grants (of approximately 6 months' duration) are to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research effort that may lead to a commercial product or process. Phase II grants are for the continuation of research initiated in Phase I and which are likely to result in commercial products or processes. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to apply for Phase II support. STTR Phase I grants (normally of 1-year duration) are to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of the proposed cooperative effort that has potential for commercial application. Phase II funding is based on results of research initiated in Phase I and scientific and technical merit and commercial potential of Phase II application.

Applicant Eligibility:

93.197 CHILDHOOD LEAD POISONING PREVENTION PROJECTS STATE AND LOCAL CHILDHOOD LEAD POISONING PREVENTION AND SURVEILLANCE OF BLOOD LEAD LEVELS IN CHILDREN

(Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program (CLPPP))

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Executive Order Section 317 (k)(2) and 3171 of the Public Health Service Act, [42 U.S.C. Sections 247b and 247b-10], as amended, Title 42, Part 247b, Section 247b-10.

OBJECTIVES:

To (1) Develop and/or enhance a surveillance system that monitors all blood lead levels; (2) assure that children who are potentially exposed to lead receive follow up care; (3) assure awareness and action among the general public and affected professionals in relation to preventing childhood lead poisoning in high risk areas in collaboration with other government and community based organizations.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Awards are to be used by State and local government agencies to develop, improve, and expand their capacity to address the problem of childhood lead poisoning in communities with demonstrated high-risk populations. Recipients of awards are expected to: (a) write, implement and evaluate a jurisdiction-wide childhood lead poisoning elimination plan; (b) write, implement and evaluate screening plans to target resources to children at the highest risk for lead poisoning; (c) maintain a jurisdiction-wide childhood lead surveillance program, with an analysis plan for collected data, (d) conduct primary prevention activities for pregnant women and/or families with children at high risk for lead poisoning, (e) develop an assurance plan for timely and appropriate case management of children with elevated blood lead levels, (f) demonstrate strategic partnering with community organizations and with other state/local agencies involved in environmental and child health activities, (g) coordinate with organizations and agencies involved in lead-based paint hazard reduction activities and development of protective policy; and (h) evaluate programmatic impact on childhood lead poisoning within the applicant's jurisdiction. Awards cannot supplant existing funding for childhood lead poisoning prevention programs or activities. Grant awards may not be expended for medical care and treatment, or for environmental remediation of lead sources, however, there must be an acceptable plan to ensure that these program activities are appropriately carried out. The surveillance component of this grant is intended to assist State health departments in implementing or enhancing a complete surveillance system to track all PbB levels in children. This is essential for grant recipients to target interventions to high-risk populations and to track progress toward eliminating childhood lead poisoning.

Applicant Eligibility:

Assistance will be provided to State health departments or their bonafide agents and the health departments of the following five local jurisdictions (or their bonafide agents) that have the highest estimated number of children with elevated blood lead levels : New York, NY; Chicago, IL; Detroit, MI; Los Angeles County, CA, and Philadelphia, PA, or their bona fide agents. Also eligible are health departments or other official organizational authorities of the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, American Samoa, Guam, the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Republic of Palau, and federally recognized Indian tribal governments. Competition is limited by authorizing legislation.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

In addition to the eligible applicants, others who receive benefits from the program include infants and children from six months to six years of age who are screened for lead poisoning and family members who care for lead-poisoned children. Lead poisoning potentially affects all children, but disproportionately affects minority children and children of low-income families. Since the effects of lead poisoning can be long lasting, benefits of the program can also affect youth and adults, persons at all educational and income levels, and urban, suburban, and rural populations.

Credentials/Documentation:

Applicants should document the need for assistance, state the objectives of the project, present their approach to meeting the objectives, and outline the methods of operation. OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

This program is subject to the provisions set forth in 45 CFR 92 for State and local governments.

Award Procedure:

Approved grants are funded based on a priority score ranking from an objective review process coordinated by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. CDC will give funding preference to state programs with significant estimated numbers of children with elevated blood lead levels that direct federal funds to localities with high concentrations of children at risk for childhood lead poisoning. CDC will also give funding preference to the five local jurisdictions with the highest estimated number of children with elevated blood lead levels. Awards are made based on availability of funds and other significant factors as deemed necessary and appropriate by the agency. Funds are awarded for a one-year (12 month period). A Notice of Grant Award (Form PHS 5161-1) is provided which indicates the current award as well as support recommendations for the remainder of the project period (up to three years). 93.211 TELEHEALTH PROGRAMS

There are three separate telehealth programs as follows:
Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP)
Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP)
Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

The Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) Sec. 330I(d)(1) of Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254c-14(d)(1), as amended. ; The Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP) is authorized by:
Sec. 330I(d)(2) of Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254c-14(d)(2), as amended by the Health Care Safety Net Amendments of 2002 (P.L. 107-251); The Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP) is authorized by Section 330L of Public Health Service Act as amended, (42 USC 254c-18).

OBJECTIVES:

The Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) has two provisions: Telehealth Networks (TNGP-TH) grants demonstrate how telehealth networks improve healthcare services in rural communities. Telehomecare Networks (TNGP-THC) grants fund demonstration or pilot projects for telehomecare, services that may include, but are not limited to, case management by physicians, hospitals, medical clinics, home health agencies, or other health care providers who supervise the care of patients in their homes.

The Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP) is designed to expand the availability of technical assistance in the development of telehealth services, leveraging the experience of mature programs with expertise in providing and implementing telehealth services.

The Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP) supports State professional licensing boards to carry out programs under which licensing boards of various States cooperate to develop and implement State policies that will reduce statutory and regulatory barriers to telemedicine.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) - Funds support the use of telehealth (electronic information and telecommunications technologies to support and promote long-distance health care and ancillary services) in two ways:

- 1) Telehealth Networks, for improving access to health care services; provide a baseline of information for a systematic evaluation of telehealth systems; purchase or lease and install equipment; and to operate and evaluate the telehealth system.
- 2) Telehomecare Networks, for improving access to health services for patients in their homes and for evaluating the cost and effectiveness through provision of clinical care and remote monitoring of patients in their own homes using telehealth technologies. Primary expenses for telehomecare shall be for personnel costs for provision of services and for evaluation. Overall, not more than 40 percent of grant funds may be expended for equipment. Not more than 15 percent of grant funds may be expended for indirect costs. Grant funds may not be used for purchasing and installing telecommunications transmission equipment (e.g., microwave towers, satellite dishes, amplifiers, digital switching equipment or laying cable or telephone lines) or to acquire real property. Construction costs are allowable only for minor renovations related to the installation of equipment.

Important: For both Telehealth and Telehomecare Networks, the Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) seeks to fund non-profit or public organizations with a network of partners in place and committed to the project as of the date of application. Projects with prospective network partners not committed to the project will not be competitive. Applicants failing to submit verifiable information with respect to the commitment of network partners will not be funded. Projects selected for funding must provide clinical services for which performance measures can be developed. In addition, an applicant must provide evidence to show that it will be ready to begin to implement the project upon grant award.

Applicants must provide an evaluation design to measure quantitative outcomes, which should be measured in the following areas: impact on quality of care; appropriateness of use of the technology; whether access was improved; whether clinical outcomes were improved; and, how the cost of service delivery was affected in terms of efficiency and effectiveness of care. Of particular interest will be programs that can clearly measure the costs of their telehealth services and measure the impact of the telehealth program on :

- 1) improving access to health care services for residents of communities that did not have such services locally before the program;
- 2) hospitalization rates and emergency room visit rates per year for patients receiving disease management services for diabetes, congestive heart failure, stroke and other chronic diseases, as well as for patients receiving home care/home monitoring services;
- 3) controlling blood glucose levels in diabetic patients;
- 4) improving the efficiency of health care;
- 5) reducing medical errors; and,
- 6) other clear outcome measures.

Note: For FY 2012, the Agency is conducting a competition for the 4-year project period commencing September 1, 2012 and ending August 31, 2016

Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP) - Funds support the establishment and development of Telehealth Resource Centers (TRCs), which serve as a focus for customizing the provision of telehealth technical assistance across the country. Funds support both Regional Telehealth Resource Centers and two national Telehealth Resource Centers. One National TRC will focus on providing specialized technical assistance in telehealth technology. Technical assistance will be provided in the following areas: requirements for specific technologies to be used for specific clinical applications; advances in m-health including software and hardware; assessing organizations need for telehealth technology including specific cost effective solutions; multiple software systems and their application in EHRs (not specific product lines); provider and patient medical information and education; direct patient care and remote patient monitoring; and current data delivery mechanisms. The other National TRC will focus on policy issues such as physician and nurse licensure, credentialing and privileging, state and national policies and initiatives regarding Electronic Health Records (EHRs); legal and regulatory issues regarding e-Prescribing; National telecommunications implications for telehealth and the policies of the Federal Communication Commissions (FCC) National Broadband Plan; Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement, and private insurance payment policies. Grant funds are used for salaries, equipment, operating, travel expenses, or other costs for: providing technical assistance, training and support; disseminating information and research findings related to telehealth services; promoting effective collaboration among telehealth resource centers and HRSA; conducting evaluations to determine the best utilization of telehealth technologies to meet health care needs; promoting the integration of the technologies used in clinical information systems with other telehealth technologies; fostering the use of telehealth technologies to effectively provide healthcare information and education for health care providers and consumers; and, implementing special projects that involve collaboration among TRCs to advance the field of telehealth. Grant funds are not used for: acquiring real property; equipment costs of more than 40 percent of total grant funds; for equipment or transmission costs not directly related to the grant purposes; to purchase or install general purpose voice telephone systems; construction costs; and indirect costs exceeding 15 percent of total grant funds.

Per Section 330I(g)(5) of the Public Health Service Act (42 USC 254c-14), applicants must provide information on the source and amount of non-Federal funds that the entity will provide for the project.

Important for both Regional and National TRCs:

The grantee and their partners must have experience in providing technical assistance related to the provision of telehealth services. The grantee must establish a baseline level of activity and then measure performance. Specific areas to measure/address are: Satisfaction, Efficiency, Effectiveness and Sustainability. In addition consortiums must be established and able to demonstrate a history of working together. A signed consortium agreement that outlines tasks must be provided.

The Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP) - Grant funds are used for salaries, equipment, software development, operating, or other costs associated with developing legislative, administrative, and technical projects to address licensure barriers that hinder the practice of telemedicine across state lines. Grant funds may also be used for activities involving significant expansion of existing state agreements for cross-state recognition of professional licenses to other states.

Applicant Eligibility:

Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) - A grantee must be a nonprofit or public entity that will provide services through a Telehealth Network (TNGP-TH) to rural communities or through a Telehomecare Network (TNGP-THC) to patients in their homes located in either urban underserved or rural communities. Telehomecare Network (TNGP-THC) grantees should have demonstrated experience in providing telehomecare services. For both Telehealth Networks (TNGP-TH) and Telehomecare Network (TNGP-THC) networks, proof of non-profit status is required. Each entity participating in the network may be a nonprofit or for-profit entity. Faith-based and community based organizations are eligible under the Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP).

Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP) - A grantee must be a public or private nonprofit organization. Faith-based, tribal and community based organizations are eligible to apply. Services may be provided to rural or urban communities.

Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP) - A grantee must be a State professional licensing board, or a national organization of professional licensing boards that provides services to state licensing boards. Note: American Indian and/or Alaska Native Tribal Organizations are eligible provided those organizations meet the eligibility requirements above.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Telehealth Network Grant Program (TNGP) - Health care providers in rural areas, in medically underserved areas, in frontier communities, and for medically underserved populations. TNGP-TH grantees include in the network at least two (2) of the following entities (at least one (1) of which shall be a community-based health care provider: (a) community or migrant health centers or other federally qualified health centers; (b) health care providers, including pharmacists, in private practice; (c) entities operating clinics, including rural health clinics; (d) local health departments; (e) nonprofit hospitals, including community (critical) access hospitals; (f) other publicly funded health or social service agencies; (g) long-term care providers; (h) providers of health care services in the home; (i) providers of outpatient mental health services and entities operating outpatient mental health facilities; (j) local or regional emergency health care providers; (k) institutions of higher education; or (l) entities operating dental clinics. TNGP-THC grantees are experienced in providing telehealth services, have a substantial caseload, are targeted to patients with chronic illnesses and senior citizens, have a history of doing evaluations and monitoring telehomecare network performance in terms of quality, cost, and effectiveness or services.

Telehealth Resource Center Grant Program (TRCGP) - Health care providers in rural areas, in medically underserved areas, in frontier communities, and medically underserved populations. The regional telehealth resource centers must support the activities of existing or developing telehealth networks in their regions to meet the health care needs of rural or other populations to be served, including the improvement of access to services and the quality of the services received by those populations. Regional TRCs should have expertise in at least seven (7) of the following areas: A wide Range of Clinical Telemedicine Services; Telecommunications Technologies; Critical or Emergency Care; Residential telehealth (home care)/chronic disease management; Nursing Home/Inpatient Care; Distance Education and Training; Telehealth Technologies both Interactive and Store-and-Forward. A Regional TRC collaborates with other TRCs or organizations to address any of the seven areas where the TRC may not be expert. The National Policy TRC exhibits expertise in the following areas: Reimbursement (Medicare, Medicaid, private insurance); Licensure (legislative and regulatory issues); Privacy, security, and confidentiality legislation at federal and state levels; Food and Drug Administration regulation; Telecommunications legal and regulatory issues; and, Private credentialing and accreditation organizations and issues (e.g., Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations). The National Technology TRC exhibits expertise in the following areas: software/hardware for clinical applications; evaluating national technology innovations, multiple software systems and their applications in EHRs (not specific product lines); requirements for specific technologies to be used for specific clinical applications; advances in m-health including software and hardware; assessing organizations need for telehealth technology including specific cost effective solutions; provider and patient medical information and education; direct patient care and remote patient monitoring; and current data delivery mechanisms. Note: American Indian and/or Alaska Native Tribal Organizations are eligible beneficiaries provided those organizations meet the beneficiary requirements above.

Licensure Portability Grant Program (LPGP) - State professional licensing boards to carry out programs under which licensing boards of various States cooperate to develop and implement State policies that will reduce statutory and regulatory barriers to telemedicine. Non Competing Continuation grants will continue to focus on licensure issues for physicians and nurses. The funded projects are to build on the first year of efforts to develop national models for implementing model agreements to expedite the licensure process and eliminate redundancies associated with applying for physician licenses in multiple jurisdictions.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

This program has no statutory formula. Matching requirements are not applicable to this program. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Competitions are conducted every four years, with up to a 4-year project period. For projects awarded under a competition, grants are made annually each year for up to 4 years. For example, projects awarded in FY 2012 have a 4-year project period commencing September 1, 2012 and ending August 31, 2016. However, a new competition is being conducted in FY 2012 for a 4-year project period, commencing September 1, 2012 and ending August 31, 2016. The Licensure Portability Grant Programs project period began on July 1, 2012 and ends June 30, 2015. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released: Grantees drawdown funds, as necessary, from the Payment Management System (PMS). PMS is the centralized web based payment system for HHS awards.

Reports:

No program reports are required. No cash reports are required. Six-month Progress Reports are required. An electronic quarterly Federal Financial Report (FFR) is due to the Division of Payment Management within 30 days of the end of each quarter. A final FFR must be submitted to HRSA via the Electronic HandBooks (EHB) within 90 days of the end of each budget period. Annual progress and reports are required 90 days from the end of the budget period and the final performance report is due 90 days from the end of the project period.

As required by the Government Performance and Review Act (1993), all federal agencies must develop strategic plans, describing their overall goals and objectives. These "GPRA Plans" must provide annual performance reports containing quantifiable measures of each program's progress in meeting the stated goals and objectives. The performance assessment instruments developed by the Office for the Advancement of Telehealth (OAT) with its grantees fulfill GPRA requirements to report to Congress on the impact of OAT's telehealth network grants and telehealth resource center grant programs. Moreover, OAT hopes to use the information derived from these instruments to demonstrate the "value-added" that telehealth services contribute to improving health care. OAT has incorporated these performance assessment tools into the routine reporting required as part of the "mid-year or mid-cycle" and annual reports required under each grant. Each of the programs will also get reports comparing themselves to the entire set of grantees, on these same measures. There are two data reporting periods each year; during these biannual reporting periods, data is reported for the previous six months of activity. Grantees have approximately six weeks to enter their data during each biannual reporting period. No expenditure reports are required. See above for additional information.

Audits:

In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133 (Revised, June 27, 2003), "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that expend financial assistance of $500,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. Nonfederal entities that expend less than $500,000 a year in Federal awards are exempt from Federal audit requirements for that year, except as noted in Circular No. A-133.

Records:

Grantees are required to maintain grant accounting records 3 years after the date they submit the Federal Financial Review (FFR). If any litigation, claim, negotiation, audit or other action involving the award has been started before the expiration of the 3-year period, the records shall be retained until completion of the action and resolution of all issues which arise from it, or until the end of the regular 3-year period, whichever is later.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

For FY 2012, the Agency is conducting competitions for the TNGP and the TRCGP for the project period commencing September 1, 2012 and ending August 31, 2015. For the competing LPGP grant program, the project period will commence on July 1, 2012 and end on June 30, 2015.

TNGP

Applications will be funded based on the extent which documentation is provided in the following areas:

- Need, the documented need for the project and the likely demand for the proposed services;
- Response, the extent to which project objectives, activities and benefits are consistent with the objectives of the grant program and the needs for the project;
- Evaluative Measures, the extent to which the project measures success in meeting its goals and objectives;
- Impact, the level of local involvement in planning and implementing the project, level of commitment as evidenced by cost participation of applicant, other network members and/or other organizations, and long-term plans for sustainability;
- Resources/Capabilities, the ability of network members, including clinicians, to implement the project and the corresponding feasibility of the projects plan of activities;
- Support Requested, the reasonableness of the budget to proposed activities and anticipated outcomes/results; and,
- Technology/Integrating Administrative and Clinical Systems, the extent to which the applicant proposes to integrate administrative and clinical information systems and effectively deploy technology.

The TNGP will seek to select projects that have demonstrated skill in evaluation. In addition, applicants must evidence a successful track record in providing telehealth services and to demonstrate how the proposed funds will expand services to new communities and/or populations. Applicants must provide an evaluation design to measure process and outcomes. Quantitative outcomes should be measured in the following areas: impact on quality of care; appropriateness of use of the technology; whether access was improved; whether clinical outcomes were improved; and, how the cost of service delivery was affected in terms of efficiency and effectiveness of care.

Of particular interest will be programs that can clearly measure the costs of their telehealth services and measure the impact of the telehealth program on :

- 1) improving access to health care services for residents of communities that did not have such services locally before the program;
- 2) reducing hospitalization rates and emergency room visit rates per year for patients receiving disease management services for diabetes, congestive heart failure, stroke and other chronic diseases, as well as for patients receiving home care/home monitoring services;
- 3) controlling blood glucose levels in diabetic patients;
- 4) improving the efficiency of health care;
- 5) reducing medical errors; and,
- 6) other clear outcome measures.

Also, of particular interest are networks that include Community Health Centers funded by the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) in the network (i.e.,330 grantees).

TRCGP

TRC applicants will be assessed on their current activities and success in addressing the following areas:

Telecommunications, industry standards, and technology assessment;
Extensive experience in providing technical assistance at the local, regional, and national levels

Breadth of clinical services offered by their network and integration of clinical information systems;

Ability to overcome reimbursement and other policy challenges to achieve sustainability of their networks;

Comprehensive evaluation strategy (including collecting baseline data) and implementation as evidenced by publications, especially ones that address effectiveness, costs, and productivity;

Experience in maintaining a strong and efficient operational/management structure; and Experience in developing and implementing strategic/business plans.

LPGP

The LPGP seeks projects that can clearly serve as national models and have implications for overcoming State statutory and regulatory licensure barriers to cross-state practice of telemedicine for all the health professions, with an emphasis on projects proposed by boards or national organizations of professional licensing that have demonstrated success in pioneering creative programs to address these issues. As a result, grantees must display a clear understanding of the barriers to cross-state practice and a realistic, feasible approach to overcome legislative, regulatory, or administrative barriers to cross-state practice and the clarity of the proposed goals and objectives and their relationship to the identified project.

Non-Competing Continuation Funding

For FY 2012 non-competing continuation funding for Telehealth grantees will be based upon an evaluation of each of the grantees first and second years of respective performance, as applicable, the third year program design, and expenditure justifications.

93.213 RESEARCH AND TRAINING IN COMPLEMENTARY AND ALTERNATIVE MEDICINE

National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institutes of Health, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Public Health Service Act, Section 485D, Title VI, Section 601, Public Law 105-277, 112 Stat. 2681-387, 42 U.S.C 281 as amended.

OBJECTIVES:

To evaluate complementary medical treatments. The following objectives support this goal: (1) coordinate and facilitate the investigation of complementary medical practices through peer-reviewed grant solicitations; (2) interface with the Center's National Advisory Council; (3) conduct technology assessment conferences for the purpose of establishing areas of Clinical and Pre-clinical research that need to be further developed within complementary medicine; and (4) maintain a comprehensive bibliographic data base in conjunction with the National Library of Medicine.

The National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine (NCCAM) regularly examines and redefines its research priorities. In setting research priorities, NCCAM considers its existing research portfolio, its 5-year strategic plan, the recommendations of the National Advisory Council for Complementary and Alternative Medicine, current scientific advances, the plans of other NIH institutes and centers, and input from expert panels and stakeholders. Research constituting a rigorous evidence base for CAM practices will be developed through a range of research strategies including basic and translational research, and clinical investigation.

Current research priorities are shaped by the following considerations regarding Research Approaches, Areas of Special Interest, and Areas of Lower Program Priority.

Research Approaches

Basic, translational, efficacy and effectiveness research
CAM interventions, approaches, and disciplines need to be studied across the continuum of basic, translational, efficacy, and effectiveness research. NCCAM continues to emphasize basic research that defines biological effects and mechanisms of action; clarifies scientific hypotheses; supports development of translational tools to understand biological effects and mechanisms of action. NCCAM also continues to encourage efficacy studies to determine specific clinical effects of CAM interventions under carefully controlled conditions that minimize nonspecific and contextual effects. There is also the need to strengthen translational and preliminary clinical research required to design and implement definitive clinical research and "real world" outcomes and effectiveness research that capitalizes on the reality that many CAM interventions are in widespread public use. NCCAMs support of translational research addresses the need for valid, reliable and relevant research tools, outcome measures, and innovative methodology to enhance the rigor of CAM clinical studies and to ensure that they are maximally informative. NCCAM emphasizes studies that inform the design of future trials such as those that will: develop and validate outcome measures; standardize treatment protocols or algorithms; validate treatment algorithms and/or; develop measures of quality control or treatment fidelity; assess effects of various doses or intervention durations; develop preliminary clinical evidence regarding efficacy and safety to support estimates of sample size; or establish feasibility of interventions or study designs in specific populations for future studies.

NCCAM's clinical research portfolio utilizes clinical trial, case-control, observational, cohort, qualitative, and other experimental methodologies to determine safety and estimate the efficacy of CAM approaches. The clinical research portfolio also includes effectiveness studies of the contribution to improved health and wellness made by CAM interventions as they are practiced in "real-world" settings.

In general phase III clinical trials will be supported under the cooperative agreement mechanism after careful consideration by NCCAM Staff. Investigators interested in proposing phase III studies are strongly encouraged to contact a relevant NCCAM Program Officer.

Areas of Special Interest

Although a wide range of research topics are of interest to NCCAM, studies focusing on CAM interventions used frequently by the American public (including the context(s) in which these interventions are used), and that are amenable to rigorous scientific inquiry are particularly encouraged. These areas include, but are not limited to, investigations of the effects of CAM modalities on chronic pain syndromes and inflammatory processes, and in disease prevention and improving health and wellness. Among all types of studies, attention to a range of endpoints meaningful to improved health, well-being, and quality of life, as well as a biological signature that provides mechanistic information, is strongly encouraged.

In addition to their use to promote health and wellness, CAM approaches are most often used to manage symptoms that may be idiopathic or associated with underlying diseases and conditions, including back pain, neck pain, arthritis, and other musculoskeletal pain. Research to understand more clearly whether and how such interventions add value to existing approaches and to identify the biological and/or behavioral mechanisms by which they exert beneficial effects will advance the science and practice of symptom management.

Newly emerging evidence suggests that CAM use may be associated with greater degrees of positive health behaviors. While causal relationships between CAM use and healthy behavior have not been established, the claims and preliminary data deserve investigation given the formidable public health challenges in motivating behavior change. Research is needed to explore, clarify, and examine the hypothesis that certain CAM approaches or practices can, in fact, be useful in encouraging better self-care, an improved personal sense of well-being, and a greater commitment to a healthy lifestyle.

Areas of Scientific Promise

The expanding evidence base includes a large body of intriguing albeit preliminary evidence that points towards specific opportunities to improve health care and health promotion using CAM strategies that have been divided into two groups- mind and body and natural products. Mind and Body interventions, practices and disciplines are based in mental or physical procedures or techniques administered or taught to others by a trained practitioner or teacher. Natural products include a large and diverse group of orally or topically administered substances such as herbal medicines, botanicals, dietary supplements and probiotics.

Examples of important clinical research opportunities and needs in the mind and body portfolio include but are not limited to the development of better, comprehensive strategies for management of chronic back pain and defining the roles of acupuncture, spinal manipulation, and massage in those strategies; exploration of the role of specific promising CAM practices or disciplines (e.g., meditation, yoga, or acupuncture) in developing better strategies for alleviating symptoms (e.g., chronic pain, stress) or in promoting healthier lifestyles; exploration of the association between well-characterized pathways of pain processing and acupuncture analgesia or the placebo response; exploration of the associations of major pathways of cognitive processing and emotional regulation by meditative practices; and studying the influence of the provider-patient/client interaction, context effects, and the placebo response on outcomes of CAM interventions

Examples of important clinical research opportunities and needs in the natural products area include but are not limited to studying the molecular targets and biological effects of potentially beneficial small molecules that are constituents of natural products or diet (e.g., quercetin, curcumin, or other polyphenols and flavonoids); defining the anti-inflammatory actions of omega-3 fatty acids; employing state-of-the-art tools and technologies to study the effects of probiotics on the human microbiome; and developing evidence regarding the safety profile of certain widely used natural products, including interactions with drugs and other herbals or dietary supplements.

Early Stage and New Investigators

NCCAM is strongly committed to assisting new and early stage investigators in establishing a research career. Early stage investigators are those within 10 years of completing their terminal research degree, or their medical residency, or its equivalent. New investigators are those who have yet to compete successfully for a substantial (e.g., R01) NIH research grant. Each Advisory Council round, based on available funds, NCCAM: 1) will consider early stage or new investigator status as one of the criteria for designating grant applications as being of high program priority and 2) may make additional R01 grant awards to new and early stage investigators with percentiles or scores out of payline order..

NCCAM continues to accept applications in areas not listed as a specific priority area via the investigator initiated funding opportunities. All investigators are urged to discuss potential applications with the relevant NCCAM Program Officer.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS; TRAINING

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Research Grants provide funds for salaries, equipment, supplies, travel, and other expenses associated with scientific investigation relevant to program objectives. Individual National Research Service Awards (NRSA) are made to individuals for research training in specified biomedical shortage areas. In addition, grants may be made to institutions to enable them to make NRSA to individuals selected by them. Each individual who receives a NRSA is obligated upon termination of the award to comply with certain service and payback provisions. Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Phase I grants (of approximately 6-months' duration) are to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research effort that may lead to a commercial product or process. Phase II grants are for the continuation of the research initiated in Phase I that are likely to result in commercial products or processes. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to receive Phase II support. Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) Phase I grants (normally of 1-year duration) are to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of the proposed cooperative effort that has potential for commercial application. Phase II funding is based on results of research initiated in Phase I and scientific and technical merit and commercial potential on Phase II application.

Applicant Eligibility:

Universities, colleges, hospitals, laboratories, and other public or private nonprofit domestic institutions, including State and local units of government, and individuals are eligible to make application for grant support of research by a named principal investigator or a research career development candidate. For-profit organizations are also eligible, with the exception of NRSA. Individual NRSA awardees must be nominated and sponsored by a public or nonprofit private institution having staff and facilities appropriate to the proposed research training program. All NRSA awardees must be citizens or have been admitted to the United States for permanent residence. To be eligible, predoctoral candidates must have completed the baccalaureate degree, and postdoctoral awardees must have a professional or scientific degree (M.D., Ph.D., D.D.S., D.O., ND, DC, D.V.M., Sc.D., D.Eng., or equivalent domestic or foreign degree). SBIR grants can be awarded only to domestic small businesses (entities that are independently owned and operated for profit, are not dominant in the field in which research is being proposed and have no more than 500 employees). Primary employment (more than one-half time) of the principal investigator must be with the small business at the time of award and during the conduct of the proposed project. In both Phase I and Phase II, the research must be performed in the U.S. or its possessions. STTR grants can be awarded only to domestic small business concerns (entities that are independently owned and operated for profit, are not dominant in the field in which researches proposed and have no more than 500 employees) which "partner" with a research institution in cooperative research and development. At least 40 percent of the project is to be performed by the small business concern and at least 30 percent by the research institution. In both Phase I and Phase II, the research must be performed in the U.S. and its possessions. To be eligible for funding, a grant application must be approved for scientific merit and program relevance by a scientific review group and a national advisory council.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Any nonprofit or for-profit organization, company, or institution engaged in biomedical research.

Credentials/Documentation:

Each applicant for research projects must present a research plan and furnish evidence that scientific competence, facilities, equipment, and supplies are appropriate to carry out the plan. For SBIR and STTR grants, the applicant organization (small business concern) must present in a research plan an idea that has potential for commercialization and furnish evidence that scientific competence, experimental methods, facilities, equipment, and funds requested are appropriate to carry out the plan. Individual NRSA applications for postdoctoral training must include the candidate's academic record, research experience, citizenship, institutional sponsorship, and the proposed area and plan of training. Institutional Training grant applications for predoctoral and postdoctoral training must show the objectives, methodology and resources for the research training program; the qualifications and experience of directing staff; the criteria to be used in selecting individuals for stipend support; and a detailed budget and justification for the amount of grant funds requested.

For-profit organizations' costs are determined in accordance with Subpart 31.2 of the Federal Acquisition Regulations. For other grantees, costs will be determined in accordance with HHS Regulations 45 CFR, Part 74, Subpart Q. All applications receiving a priority score ranging from the best (10) to worst (90) compete for available funds based on scientific merit, program relevance, and program balance and are made annually. Initial award provides funds for the first budget period (usually 12 months) and Notice of Grant Award (Form PHS 1533) indicates support recommended for remainder of project period, allocation of Federal funds by budget categories, and special conditions, if any. . All accepted SBIR/STTR applications are evaluated for scientific and technical merit by an appropriate scientific peer review panel and by a national advisory council or board. All applications receiving a priority score compete for available SBIR/STTR set-aside funds on the basis of scientific and technical merit and commercial potential of the proposed research, program relevance, and program balance among the areas of research.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

An NoA is issued for the initial budget period. If subsequent budget periods are also approved, the NoA will include a reference to those budgetary commitments. Funding for subsequent budget periods are generally provided in annual increments following the annual assessment of progress. This funding is also contingent on the availability of funds. The NoA includes all applicable terms of award either by reference or specific statements. It provides contact information for the assigned program officer and grants management specialist. The grantee accepts an NIH award and its associated terms and conditions by drawing or requesting funds from the Payment Management System, or upon the endorsement of a check from the US Treasury for foreign awardees. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: lump sum.

Reports:

No program reports are required. No cash reports are required. Project Grants: Expenditures and other financial records, including documents supporting accounting records and substantive charges to each grant, must be retained for 3 years from the day on which the grantee submits the last expenditure report for the report period. NRSAs: Documentation of expenditures and other fiscal records must be kept readily available for examination by authorized Government personnel and must be retained for 3 years from the day on which the grantee submits the last expenditure report for the report period. Reports are required after termination of NRSAs to ascertain compliance with service and payback provisions. Expenditure reports on a quarterly basis are sent to the data warehouse. Performance monitoring is not applicable.

Audits:

In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133 (Revised, June 27, 2003), "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that expend financial assistance of $500,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. Nonfederal entities that expend less than $500,000 a year in Federal awards are exempt from Federal audit requirements for that year, except as noted in Circular No. A-133. In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133 (Revised, June 27, 2003), "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that expend financial assistance of $500,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. Nonfederal entities that expend less than $500,000 a year in Federal awards are exempt from Federal audit requirements for that year, except as noted in Circular No. A-133. Records must be available for review or audit by appropriate officials of the Federal agency, pass-through entity, and Government Accountability Office (GAO). In accordance with 45 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 74.26, for-profit (commercial) organizations are subject to audit requirements for a non-Federal audit if, during its fiscal year, it expended $500,000 or more under HHS awards and at least one award is a HHS grant or subgrant. The regulation incorporates the thresholds and deadlines of OMB Circular No. A-133, but provides for profit organizations with two options for the type of audit that will satisfy the audit requirement: 1. a financial related audit of the HHS awards in accordance with Government Auditing Standards, or 2. an audit that meets the requirements of OMB Circular No. A-133. In accordance with NIH grants policy, Foreign grantees are subject to the same audit requirements as for-profit (commercial) organizations

Records:

Grantees generally must retain financial and programmatic records, supporting documents, statistical records, and all other records that are required by the terms of a grant, or may reasonably be considered pertinent to a grant, for a period of 3 years from the date the annual financial status reports (FSR) is submitted. For awards under the Streamlined Non-competing Award Process (SNAP) (other than those to foreign organizations and Federal institutions), the 3-year retention period will be calculated from the date the FSR for the entire competitive segment is submitted. Those grantees must retain the records pertinent to the entire competitive segment for 3 years from the date the FSR is submitted to NIH. Foreign organizations and Federal institutions must retain records for 3 years from the date of submission of the annual FSR to NIH. See 45 CFR 74.53 and 92.42 for exceptions and qualifications to the 3-year retention requirement (e.g., if any litigation, claim, financial management review, or audit is started before the expiration of the 3-year period, the records must be retained until all litigation, claims, or audit findings involving the records have been resolved and final action taken). Those sections also specify the retention period for other types of grant-related records, including F&A cost proposals and property records. See 45 CFR 74.48 and 92.36 for record retention and access requirements for contracts under grants. In accordance with 45 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 74.53(e), the HHS Inspector General, the U.S. Comptroller General, or any of their duly authorized representatives have the right of timely and unrestricted access to any books, documents, papers, or other records of recipients that are pertinent to awards in order to make audits, examinations, excerpts, transcripts, and copies of such documents. This right also includes timely and reasonable access to a recipients personnel for the purpose of interview and discussion related to such documents. The regulation incorporates the thresholds and deadlines of OMB Circular No. A-133, but provides for profit organizations with two options for the type of audit that will satisfy the audit requirement: 1. a financial related audit of the HHS awards in accordance with Government Auditing Standards, or 2. an audit that meets the requirements of OMB Circular No. A-133. In accordance with NIH grants policy, Foreign grantees are subject to the same audit requirements as for-profit (commercial) organizations.

Those grantees must retain the records pertinent to the entire competitive segment for 3 years from the date the FSR is submitted to NIH. Foreign organizations and Federal institutions must retain records for 3 years from the date of submission of the annual FSR to NIH. See 45 CFR 74.53 and 92.42 for exceptions and qualifications to the 3-year retention requirement (e.g., if any litigation, claim, financial management review, or audit is started before the expiration of the 3-year period, the records must be retained until all litigation, claims, or audit findings involving the records have been resolved and final action taken). Those sections also specify the retention period for other types of grant-related records, including F&A cost proposals and property records. See 45 CFR 74.48 and 92.36 for record retention and access requirements for contracts under grants. In accordance with 45 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 74.53(e), the HHS Inspector General, the U.S. Comptroller General, or any of their duly authorized representatives have the right of timely and unrestricted access to any books, documents, papers, or other records of recipients that are pertinent to awards in order to make audits, examinations, excerpts, transcripts, and copies of such documents. This right also includes timely and reasonable access to a recipients personnel for the purpose of interview and discussion related to such documents. TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grants may support salaries, equipment, supplies, travel, and patient hospitalization as required to perform the research effort. Restrictions or limitations are imposed against the use of funds for entertainment, foreign travel, general-purpose equipment, alterations and renovations, and other items not regularly required for the performance of research. National Research Service Awards (NRSA) are made directly to individuals for research training in specified biomedical shortage areas. Grants may be made to institutions to enable them to make NRSA to individuals selected by them. Certain service and payback provisions apply to individuals upon termination of the award. SBIR Phase I grants (of approximately 6-months' duration) are to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research effort that may lead to a commercial product or process. Phase II grants are for the continuation of the research initiated in Phase I and which are likely to result in commercial products or processes. Only Phase I awardees are eligible to apply for Phase II support. STTR Phase I grants (normally of 1-year duration) are to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of the proposed cooperative effort that has potential for commercial application. Phase II funding is based on results of research initiated in Phase I and scientific and technical merit and commercial potential on Phase II application. . Fast-Track is an option whereby Phase I and Phase II SBIR or STTR projects are submitted and reviewed concurrently with the aim of reducing or eliminating the funding gap between Phase I and Phase II. While the intent of the STTR/STTR programs is commercialization (Phase III), no SBIR/STTR funds are allowed for commercialization activities such as patents; market and sales; market research; business development/product development/market plans; legal fees, travel and other costs including labor relating to license agreements and partnerships.

Applicant Eligibility:

Any nonprofit organization engaged in biomedical research, as well as institutions or companies organized for profit, may apply for grants with the exception of NRSA. An individual may apply for a NRSA or, in some cases, may qualify for a research grant if adequate facilities in which to perform the research are available. SBIR grants can be awarded only to domestic small businesses (entities that are independently owned and operated for profit, are not dominant in the field in which research is proposed and have no more than 500 employees). Primary employment (more than one-half time) of the principal investigator must be with the small business at the time of award and during the conduct of the proposed project. In both Phase I and Phase II, the research must be performed in the U.S. and its possessions. To be eligible for funding, a grant application must be approved for scientific merit and program relevance by a scientific review group and a national advisory council. SBIR projects must be performed at least 67% by the applicant small business in Phase I and at least 50% of the Project in Phase II. STTR grants can be awarded only to domestic small business concerns (entities that are independently owned and operated for profit, are not dominant in the field in which research is proposed and have no more that 500 employees) which "partner" with a research institution in cooperative research and development. At least 40 percent of the project is to be performed by the small business concern and at least 30 percent by the research institution. In both Phase I and Phase II, the research must be performed in the U.S. and its possessions. To be eligible for funding, a grant application must be approved for scientific merit and program relevance by a scientific review group and a national advisory council.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Any nonprofit or for-profit organization, company or institution engaged in biomedical research.

Credentials/Documentation:

Applicants for individual National Research Service Awards must be citizens of the United States or have been admitted for permanent residency; must hold a doctoral degree (M.D., Ph.D., D.D.S., D.O., D.V.M., Sc.D., D. Eng., or equivalent domestic or foreign degree); and must designate a desire for training in one of the health or health-related areas specified by the National Institutes of Health. Each applicant must be sponsored by an accredited public or private nonprofit institution engaged in such training. For-profit organizations' costs are determined in accordance with Subpart 31.2 of the Federal Acquisition Regulations. For other grantees, costs will be determined in accordance with HHS regulations 45 CFR, Part 74, Subpart Q. For SBIR and STTR grants, applicant organization (small business concern) must present in a research plan an idea that has potential for commercialization and furnish evidence that scientific competence, experimental methods, facilities, equipment, and funds requested are appropriate to carry out the plan. SBIR and STTR applicants must use the SF424 Research and Related (R&R) application for electronic submission through grants.gov. Grantees generally must retain financial and programmatic records, supporting documents, statistical records, and all other records that are required by the terms of a grant, or may reasonably be considered pertinent to a grant, for a period of 3 years from the date the annual FSR is submitted. Those sections also specify the retention period for other types of grant-related records, including F&A cost proposals and property records. See 45 CFR 74.48 and 92.36 for record retention and access requirements for contracts under grants. In accordance with 45 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 74.53(e), the HHS Inspector General, the U.S. Comptroller General, or any of their duly authorized representatives have the right of timely and unrestricted access to any books, documents, papers, or other records of recipients that are pertinent to awards in order to make audits, examinations, excerpts, transcripts, and copies of such documents. This right also includes timely and reasonable access to a recipients personnel for the purpose of interview and discussion related to such documents. Abstinence Education Program

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Administration for Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010, Title II Role Of Public Programs, Subtitle L Maternal and Child Services

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Title II Role of Public Programs, Subtitle L, Maternal and Child Health Service, Title V, Section 2954, Public Law 111-148, 42 U.S.C. 713(c)(1)., Title V, Section 2954, Public Law 111-148, 42 U.S.C 710.

The Affordable Health Care Act (ACA) appropriated funding for this program through FY 2014.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

FORMULA GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Pursuant to Section 510(b)(2) of Title V of the Social Security Act, the term "abstinence education" means an educational or motivational program that: (A) has as its exclusive purpose, teaching the social, psychological, and health gains to be realized by abstaining from sexual activity; (B) teaches abstinence from sexual activity outside marriage as the expected standard for all school age children; (C) teaches that abstinence from sexual activity is the only certain way to avoid out-of-wedlock pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, and other associated health problems; (D) teaches that a mutually faithful monogamous relationship in the context of marriage is the expected standard of human sexual activity; (E) teaches that sexual activity outside of the context of marriage is likely to have harmful psychological and physical effects; (F) teaches that bearing children out-of-wedlock is likely to have harmful consequences for the child, the child's parents, and society; (G) teaches young people how to reject sexual advances and how alcohol and drug use increases vulnerability to sexual advances; and (H) teaches the importance of attaining self-sufficiency before engaging in sexual activity.

Applicant Eligibility:

Funds are allotted to 59 States and Territories to enable them to carry out abstinence education programs. Eligible applicants include the 50 United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, Northern Mariana Islands, Micronesia, the republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Republic of Palau.

OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. Application procedures will be given in the Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA).

Award Procedure:

The applicants will be given a set time period to send to ACF a response that addresses the conditions. Appeals:

Not Applicable.

Renewals:

From 90 to 120 days.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

This program has no statutory formula.

Matching Requirements: This statutory formula for this program is based upon census data. Grants awarded to each State are determined by a formula using the State's proportion of low-income children compared to the total number of low-income children in the U.S. based on the most recent Census data for children in poverty. For each fiscal year, the estimated allotment for each State or Territory will be updated based on the most current available census data and will be communicated to States by August 15 of the preceding fiscal year.

Census data are unavailable for the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Republic of Palau. Thus, the allocations for these three entities are based on the amounts allocated to them by HHS in prior fiscal years. There is a required match of 43 nonfederal dollars for every 100 federal dollars. For example, if a states federal award is $100,000, the State must provide a match of $75,250, which would represent 43% of the total project cost of $175,000 (counting both federal grant and state match). The match can be reached by use of state dollars, local government dollars, and private dollars including foundation dollars, in-kind support, or any combination thereof.

This program does not have MOE requirements.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

In accordance with Section 503 of the Social Security Act, Any amount payable to a State under this title from allotments for a fiscal year which remains unobligated at the end of such year shall remain available to such State for obligation during the next fiscal year. For example, funds appropriated and allocated to the States in FY 2009 (starting October 1, 2008) are available for obligation and expenditures through September 30, 2010. Two-year budget periods are contingent upon Congressional re-authorization or the continued extension of the authorization and funding of the program. An interim Financial Status Report (SF-425) is due semi-annually, and a final fiscal report is due 90 days after the end of the project period. Performance monitoring occurs by reviewing program progress reports, conducting monitoring phone calls and conducting monitoring site visits.

Audits:

In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133 (Revised, June 27, 2003), "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that expend financial assistance of $500,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. As described in Title V, Section 506(b)(1) of the Social Security Act, each state shall, not less often than once every 2 years, audit its expenditures from amounts received under this title.

Research supported by the National Institute of Mental Health may employ theoretical, laboratory, clinical, epidemiological, and field studies. Studies may involve individuals with a mental disorder diagnosis, individuals with symptom levels that do not meet diagnostic thresholds, and healthy individuals of all ages. Research also may involve animal, computational, and mathematical models appropriate to the system being investigated and the state of the field. Areas eligible for research support are: basic and clinical neuroscience; genetics; geriatrics research; adult psychopathology; experimental therapeutics; developmental, behavioral, clinical, and epidemiological research relevant to mental disorders, behavioral disorders, and HIV/AIDS, in terms of the causes, prevention, treatment, and service delivery; basic (brain and behavior), clinical, and services research on the mental health problems of women, minorities, and rural populations; and research designed to reduce and eliminate mental health disparities both within and outside the United States.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Cooperative Agreements; Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

(1) Research project grants provide support for clearly defined projects by a named investigator in an area representing his/her specific interests and competencies. (2) Exploratory/Development and Clinical Exploratory/Developmental Grants encourage the development of new research activities in categorical program areas; (3) Small Research Grants provide research support specifically limited in time and amount for studies in categorical program areas; (4) Collaborative Clinical Research Grants support evaluations of various methods of therapy and/or prevention; (5) Program Project and Center grants support large-scale, broad-based programs of research, usually interdisciplinary, consisting of several projects with a common focus; and (6) Cooperative Agreements support single or a group of related research activities with greater involvement of federal staff. Standard small grants are limited to $50,000 direct costs for a period of 2 years or less, while other small grants are for less time and funds. SBIR and STTR grants are awarded in two stages: Phase I grants are awarded to establish the technical merit and feasibility of a proposed research and development effort; only Phase I awardees are eligible to receive Phase II support.

Applicant Eligibility:

Public, private, profit, or nonprofit agencies (including State and local government agencies), eligible Federal agencies, universities, colleges, hospitals, and academic or research institutions may apply for research grants. SBIR grants can be awarded only to domestic small businesses, and STTR grants can be awarded only to domestic small businesses which "partner" with a research institution in cooperative research and development. For further definitions, requirements, and restrictions see the SBIR and STTR Omnibus Solicitations of the NIH, CDC, and FDA for SBIR and STTR Grant Applications.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Public, private, profit, or nonprofit organizations.

Credentials/Documentation:

For-profit organizations' costs will be determined in accordance with 48 CFR, Subpart 31.2 of the Federal Acquisition Regulations. For SBIR and STTR grants, applicant organization (small business concern) must present in a research plan an idea that has potential for commercialization and furnish evidence that scientific competence, experimental methods, facilities, equipment, and funds requested are appropriate to carry out the plan. Instructions for electronic submission may be found with the federal SF424 (R&R) form packages that are found in the SBIR/STTR funding opportunity announcements. Instructions are provided for SBIR Phase I and Phase II awards, respectively; as well as for STTR Phase I and Phase II awards, respectively. OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. OMB Circular No. A-110 applies to this program. Most applications must be prepared and submitted electronically. Most applicants use the SF 424 (Research & Related) for electronic submission. Information about the SF 424 form may be found on <http://grants.nih.gov/grants/funding/424/index.htm>, but application packages should be accessed through the appropriate funding opportunity announcement, found either on the NIH Guide to Grants and Contracts (<http://grants1.nih.gov/grants/guide/index.html>) or through the Grants.gov website (<http://www.grants.gov/>). Some institutions may submit the grant data directly (using what is called a system-to-system transfer). For further details, see grants.gov or eRA Commons. Application forms for SBIR and STTR grants may be obtained through the SBIR/STTR funding announcements posted on the NIH Guide to Grants and Contracts and the Grants.gov sites (see URLs listed above). All SBIR and STTR applications must be submitted electronically. The timeline for transition to electronic applications and the new forms may be found at:

<http://era.nih.gov/ElectronicReceipt/>. For further assistance contact GrantsInfo, Telephone (301) 435-0714, Email: GrantsInfo@nih.gov. Consultation on a proposed project may be obtained from the NIMH branch or office responsible for the research area of interest. Applications are reviewed by principally nonfederal consultants recruited nationwide from the mental health field. The amounts of the award and period of support are determined on the basis of merit of the project and the nature of the grant mechanism. Electronic applications are submitted through the Grants.gov website.

Award Procedure:

All applications for research grants, cooperative agreements, SBIR and STTR grants are evaluated for scientific and technical merit by an appropriate scientific peer review panel and by the National Advisory Mental Health Council. All competitive applications compete for available funds on the basis of scientific and technical merit, program relevance, and program balance. All SBIR and STTR applications receiving a priority score compete for set-aside funds on the basis of scientific and technical merit and commercial potential of the proposed research, program relevance, and program balance among the areas of research.

93.255 CHILDREN'S HOSPITALS GRADUATE MEDICAL EDUCATION PAYMENT

CHGME Payment Program

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 340E of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256e), as amended by the Children's Hospital GME Support Reauthorization Act of 2006.

OBJECTIVES:

The Children's Hospitals Graduate Medical Education (CHGME) Payment Program provides funds to children's teaching hospitals to support the training of pediatric and other residents in graduate medical education (GME) programs. Federal funding for graduate medical education (GME) is extensively provided by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). Prior to the enactment of the CHGME Payment Program, children's teaching hospitals received a disproportionately low amount of this Federal funding when compared to teaching hospitals that serve adult patients. The purpose of the CHGME Payment Program is to compensate for the disparity in the level of Federal funding for pediatric teaching hospitals versus other types of teaching hospitals. The CHGME Payment Program is administered by the Bureau of Health Professions (BHP), Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS).

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Formula Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Funds are restricted to eligible children's hospitals for direct expenses and the other indirect expenses associated with operating approved graduate medical residency programs.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applicants (children's teaching hospitals) must meet the following eligibility requirements in accordance with the Federal Register Notice, Vol. 66, No. 41 published on March 1, 2001: (1) Participate in an approved graduate medical education program; (2) have a Medicare provider agreement as defined by section 340E(g)(2) of the PHS Act; (3) be excluded from the Medicare Inpatient Prospective Payment System (PPS) under Section 1886(d)(1)(B)(iii), of the Social Security Act and its accompanying regulations; and (4) be a "freestanding" children's hospital.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Any public or private nonprofit and profit children's teaching hospital with an accredited residency training program which meets all eligibility requirements may apply.

Credentials/Documentation:

Applicants should review the individual HRSA funding opportunity announcement issued under this CFDA program for any required proof or certifications which must be submitted prior to or simultaneous with submission of an application package. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is required. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. HRSA will use a two-tier submission process for the CHGME applications via Grants.gov and the HRSA's EHBs.

Please note that applicants can only begin Phase 2 in HRSA's EHBs after Phase 1 in Grants.gov has been completed by the applicable due date and HRSA has assigned the application a tracking number.

All qualified applications are reviewed by HRSA Staff. The CHGME Payment Program statute requires a yearly assessment of the full-time resident counts reported by children's hospitals. Fiscal intermediaries working under contract to HRSA assess those reported counts. Final grant payment determinations are based on the final audited numbers.

Award Procedure:

Notification is made in writing by a Notice of Award (NOA).

Section 340E(a) requires the Secretary of DHHS to make payments for direct and indirect expenses associated with operating approved graduate medical residency training programs for each fiscal year. The two statutory formulas (direct medical education and indirect medical education) outline payments to eligible children's teaching hospitals.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

Not Applicable.

Appeals:

Hospitals can appeal the determination of FTE resident counts by CHGME fiscal intermediaries to the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB) under section 1878 of the Social Security Act.

Renewals:

Eligible children's hospitals must complete a CHGME Payment Program application for inclusion in the program for each fiscal year that they are applying for funds. They must also submit a reconciliation application that will reflect the Secretary's determination of the Final FTE resident counts carried out by CHGME fiscal intermediaries led by a contractor. The contractor is under contract to the Bureau of Health Professions (BHP) to conduct the assessments of resident counts reported by children's hospitals on their initial applications for funds.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

Statutory formulas are not applicable to this program. Matching requirements are not applicable to this program. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

In accordance with the Healthcare Research and Quality Act, 1999, Public Law 106-129, the Secretary of DHHS shall determine the number of resident FTE counts before the beginning of each fiscal year that payments are made for a hospital. The amounts of the payments for direct and indirect medical education are made to each hospital in 12 equal interim installments during the Federal fiscal year. The Children's Health Act, Public Law 106-310, amends the length of the CHGME Payment Program through fiscal year 2005. Public Law 109-307 re-authorizes the program, through fiscal year 2011. See the following for information on how assistance is awarded/released: Both interim payments (prior to audits) and final payments are computed using a zero sum gain payment model. The calculations of both direct and indirect graduate medical education payments are formula based. Once payments are determined, grantees drawdown funds, as necessary, from the Payment Management System (PMS). PMS is the centralized web based payment system for HHS awards.

Reports:

Public Law 109-307 requires children's hospitals receiving CHGME payments to submit an annual report that focuses on their GME training programs. The Department is required to submit a report to Congress by 2011. Furthermore, the childrens hospitals comply with the Government Performance Result Act (GPRA) and submit performance data each fiscal year as part of their reconciliation applications for funds. No cash reports are required. No progress reports are required. No expenditure reports are required. Performance monitoring is not applicable.

Audits:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-133. DHHS, or any other authorized Federal agency, may conduct an audit to determine whether the applicant has complied with all governing laws and regulations in its application for funding. Any and all information submitted to DHHS by an applicant or participating hospital during or after the award of funds is subject to review in an audit. Eligible hospitals are subjected to the terms of the Full-Time Equivalent Assessment Process Guidance and Assessments which is available electronically via CHGME Payment Program web site noted in Application Procedure above.

Records:

Grantees are required to maintain grant accounting records for 3 years after the date they submit the Federal Financial Report (FFR). If any litigation, claim, negotiation, audit, or other action involving the award has been started before the expiration of the 3-year period, the records shall be retained until completion of the action and resolution of all issues which arise from it, or until the end of the regular 3-year period, whichever is later.

93.256 STATE HEALTH ACCESS PROGRAM

(SHAP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Health Resources and Services Administration, Department of Health and Human Services

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 301 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 241(a)); Public Law 111-8.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the State Health Access Program is to support States that demonstrate they are ready to implement a program design which provides the uninsured with access to health insurance. The overarching program goal is to provide support to States to implement program designs already developed which provide access to affordable health care coverage to all or a segment of the uninsured citizens in a State.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The purpose of the State Health Access Program (SHAP) is to support States that are ready to implement a program design to provide the uninsured with access to affordable health care coverage. Eligible States will be required to demonstrate that they have achieved the key State and local statutory or regulatory changes required to implement the new program within twelve months of the grant start date. The types of activities that can be supported through this grant can be widely varied, including but not limited to: three share community coverage (employer, State or local government, and the individual); reinsurance plans that subsidize a certain share of carrier losses within a certain risk corridor; subsidized high risk insurance pools; health insurance premium assistance; creation of a State insurance connector authority to develop new, less expensive, portable benefit packages for small employers and part-time and seasonal workers; development of statewide or automated enrollment systems for public assistance programs; health savings accounts; and innovative strategies to insure low-income childless adults. States may choose to implement one activity or a combination of activities. Other innovative programs that expand insurance to a targeted or comprehensive uninsured population will also be considered.

The majority of awarded funds are to be spent directly on implementation activities to start up program operations that are important to the implementation of the health care coverage program. Examples could include funding the administration of a connector model, designing or expanding a management information system to enhance enrollment capacities, development and dissemination of outreach and enrollment materials, development of a comprehensive website which facilitates education of and enrollment into the program, or to pay the start up costs of providing premium subsidies to those eligible for the program.

The intention behind the funding of these types of activities is to demonstrate how a state can significantly increase the States health care coverage under an expansion program. For example, the funded activity may result in an important increase in enrollment or a measurable improvement in progress toward attracting hard to reach target populations. Thus, an evaluation plan must be included in the application which describes the evaluation design and data collection methods to be used.

Two types of State grants are available under this program: 1) targeted grants of $2-4 million a year for a 5 year grant period for States focusing health coverage initiatives on a limited sub population(s); and 2) grants of $7-10 million a year for a 5 year grant period for States planning more comprehensive coverage initiatives .

Applicant Eligibility:

States and US Territories and Possessions.

Eligible applicants are any public State entity designated by the Governor of that State. The Governor must be the requestor of the grant and only one entity per State is permitted to apply. For purposes of this grant program, the term State refers to any of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

See above.

Credentials/Documentation:

A letter signed by an authorized individual on behalf of the lead State agency or organization designated by the Governor must be included. The letter should indicate the potential grants principal contact person, the amount of funding requested, and the names of all agencies and organizations participating in the proposed program. The project must be directed by a component of State government.

Applicants should review the individual HRSA funding opportunity announcement issued under this CFDA program for any required proof or certifications which must be submitted prior to or simultaneous with submission of an application package. OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is required. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Based on the advice of the objective review committee, the HRSA program official with delegated authority is responsible for final selection and funding decisions.

Award Procedure:

Each of the applications will undergo an eligibility and conformance review by Federal staff at the State Health Access Program Office. Applications that meet the eligibility and conformance review criteria will be assigned to members of an Objective Review Committee (ORC) that will review them based on the evaluation criteria listed in the application guidance. The results of the ORC reviews will be shared with the Associate Administrator, Healthcare Systems Bureau, who will make the final decisions. Notification is made in writing by a Notice of Award.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

The time required for the applications to be approved or disapproved is projected to be 90 days.

Not Applicable.

Renewals:

Applicants responding to this announcement may request funding for a project period of up to five (5) years. Renewals will be determined by the Associate Administrator, Healthcare Systems Bureau. Extensions must be requested in writing addressed to the Grants Management Specialist.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

Statutory formulas are not applicable to this program.

State, local, and private dollars from insurers, providers, and other private organizations. Waiver of the matching requirement shall be possible if financial hardship is demonstrated. Evidence of financial hardship should be strongly supported through a letter from the States Budget or fiscal Officer with thorough justification provided. In addition, States are required to demonstrate their ability to financially sustain the health care coverage program without Federal grant funding after the five-year grant period. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.
