INTRODUCTION

Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance

The Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance is a government-wide compendium of Federal programs, projects, services, and activities that provide assistance or benefits to the American public. It contains financial and nonfinancial assistance programs administered by departments and establishments of the Federal government.

In 1984, Public Law 98-169 authorized the transfer of responsibilities of the Federal Program Information Act from the Office of Management and Budget to the General Services Administration (GSA). The transfer took place in July 1984. These responsibilities include the dissemination of Federal domestic assistance program information through the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance, pursuant to the Federal Program Information Act, Public Law 95-220, as amended by Public Law 98-169. GSA now maintains the Federal assistance information database from which program information is obtained. The Office of Management and Budget serves as an intermediary agent between the Federal agencies and GSA, thus providing oversight to the necessary collection of Federal domestic assistance program data.

As the basic reference source of Federal programs, the primary purpose of the Catalog is to assist users in identifying programs that meet specific objectives of the potential applicant, and to obtain general information on Federal assistance programs. In addition, the intent of the Catalog is to improve coordination and communication between the Federal government and State and local governments.

The Catalog provides the user with access to programs administered by Federal departments and agencies in a single publication. Program information is cross referenced by functional classification (Functional Index), subject (Subject Index), applicant (Applicant Index), deadline(s) for program application submission (Deadlines Index), and authorizing legislation (Authorization Index). These are valuable resource tools that, if used carefully, can make it easier to identify specific areas of program interest more efficiently.

Other sections of the Catalog provide users with information on programs added and deleted since the last edition of the Catalog, a crosswalk of program numbers and title changes, regional and local offices, intergovernmental review requirements, definitions of the types of assistance under which programs are administered, proposal writing, grant application procedures, and additional sources of information on Federal programs and services.

Programs selected for inclusion in the Federal assistance data base are defined as any function of a Federal agency that provides assistance or benefits for a State or States, territorial possession, county, city, other political subdivision, grouping, or instrumentality thereof; any domestic profit or nonprofit corporation, institution, or individual, other than an agency of the Federal government.

A "Federal domestic assistance program" may in practice be called a program, an activity, a service, a project, a process, or some other name, regardless of whether it is identified as a separate program by statute or regulation. It will be identified in terms of its legal authority, administering office, funding, purpose, benefits, and beneficiaries.

"Assistance" or "benefits" refers to the transfer of money, property, services, or anything of value, the principal purpose of which is to accomplish a public purpose of support or stimulation authorized by Federal statute. Assistance includes, but is not limited to grants, loans, loan guarantees, scholarships, mortgage loans, insurance, and other types of financial assistance, including cooperative agreements; property, technical assistance, counseling, statistical, and other expert information; and service activities of regulatory agencies. It does not include the provision of conventional public information services.

For years, GSA has published a printed version of the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance (CFDA or Catalog), as required by legislation. That same legislation allowed GSA to distribute free copies of the printed Catalog to designated recipients. In fiscal year 2003, nearly 10,000 paper copies of the Catalog were distributed at no cost to the recipients

Current legislation, however, authorizes GSA to determine in what form to prepare and publish the Catalog. Consistent with the Administration's Electronic-Government initiatives, the Government Paperwork Elimination Act, and a move to a paper free environment, GSA will now disseminate the Catalog electronically through the CFDA website on the Internet. As a result, effective immediately, GSA will no longer print and distribute free copies of the Catalog.

The Internet and GSA's free CFDA website at <http://www.cfda.gov> will be the primary means of disseminating the Catalog. The CFDA website will also contain a PDF file version of the Catalog that, when printed by any user, will have the same layout as the printed document that the Government Printing Office (GPO) has provided.

GPO will continue printing and selling the CFDA to interested buyers. For information about purchasing the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance from GPO, call the Superintendent of Documents at 202-512-1800 or toll free at 866-512-1800, or you may reach GPO's on-line bookstore at <http://bookstore.gpo.gov>.

Types Of Assistance

Currently, programs in the Catalog are being classified by GSA into 15 types of assistance. (Cooperative Agreements as a type of assistance is used for programs administered under that mechanism. However, the definition does not appear in this section.) Benefits and services of the programs are provided through seven financial types of assistance and eight nonfinancial types of assistance. The following list defines the types of assistance that are available through the programs. Code letters below (A through O) which identify the type of assistance) will follow program titles in the Agency Index, Applicant Eligibility Index, the Functional Index, Deadlines Index, and in the list of added programs.

- A. Formula Grants - Allocations of money to States or their subdivisions in accordance with distribution formulas prescribed by law or administrative regulation, for activities of a continuing nature not confined to a specific project.
- B. Project Grants - The funding, for fixed or known periods, of specific projects. Project grants can include fellowships, scholarships, research grants, training grants, traineeships, experimental and demonstration grants, evaluation grants, planning grants, technical assistance grants, survey grants, and construction grants.
- C. Direct Payments for Specified Use - Financial assistance from the Federal government provided directly to individuals, private firms, and other private institutions to encourage or subsidize a particular activity by conditioning the receipt of the assistance on a particular performance by the recipient. This does not include solicited contracts for the procurement of goods and services for the Federal government.
- D. Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use - Financial assistance from the Federal government provided directly to beneficiaries who satisfy Federal eligibility requirements with no restrictions being imposed on the recipient as to how the money is spent. Included are payments under retirement, pension, and compensatory programs.
- E. Direct Loans - Financial assistance provided through the lending of Federal monies for a specific period of time, with a reasonable expectation of repayment. Such loans may or may not require the payment of interest.
- F. Guaranteed/Insured Loans - Programs in which the Federal government makes an arrangement to identify a lender against part or all of any defaults by those responsible for repayment of loans.
- G. Insurance - Financial assistance provided to assure reimbursement for losses sustained under specified conditions. Coverage may be provided directly by the Federal government or through private carriers and may or may not involve the payment of premiums.

- H. Sale, Exchange, or Donation of Property and Goods - Programs which provide for the sale, exchange, or donation of Federal real property, personal property, commodities, and other goods including land, buildings, equipment, food and drugs. This does not include the loan of, use of, or access to Federal facilities or property.
- I. Use of Property, Facilities, and Equipment - Programs which provide for the loan of, use of, or access to Federal facilities or property wherein the federally owned facilities or property do not remain in the possession of the recipient of the assistance.
- J. Provision of Specialized Services - Programs that provide Federal personnel directly to perform certain tasks for the benefit of communities or individuals. These services may be performed in conjunction with nonfederal personnel, but they involve more than consultation, advice, or counseling.
- K. Advisory Services and Counseling - Programs which provide Federal specialists to consult, advise, or counsel communities or individuals to include conferences, workshops, or personal contacts. This may involve the use of published information, but only in a secondary capacity.
- L. Dissemination of Technical Information - Programs that provide for the publication and distribution of information or data of a specialized or technical nature frequently through clearinghouses or libraries. This does not include conventional public information services designed for general public consumption.
- M. Training - Programs that provide instructional activities conducted directly by a Federal agency for individuals not employed by the Federal government.
- N. Investigation of Complaints - Federal administrative agency activities that are initiated in response to requests, either formal or informal, to examine or investigate claims of violations of Federal statutes, policies, or procedure. The origination of such claims must come from outside the Federal government.
- O. Federal Employment - Programs that reflect the Governmentwide responsibilities of the Office of Personnel Management in the recruitment and hiring of Federal civilian agency personnel.

Organization of the Catalog

The Catalog is divided into three basic sections -- the indices, the program descriptions, and the appendices.

INDICES --To locate specific programs of interest, determine eligibility, and to obtain information on the dates applications for assistance should be submitted to the funding agency, users may consult the Agency Program Index, the Functional Index, or the Subject Index; the Applicant Eligibility Index, and the Index listing deadlines for program applications.

The Agency Index Summary provides a description of the functions and activities of Federal agencies responsible for administering programs in the Catalog. Program numbers are also listed with the administering agency.

The Agency Program Index lists all programs in the Catalog in numerical order by the five-digit program identification number, the program title, the Federal agency responsible for administering the program, and whether the program offers financial assistance, nonfinancial assistance, or a combination of both.

The Functional Index Summary lists the basic functional categories and the subcategories that further identify specific areas of interest. Following the Summary is the Functional Index listing each program number and title under the appropriate basic category and subcategory.

The Subject Index provides a detailed listing of programs by various topics, popular name, general functional terms, categories of services, and selected beneficiaries, and is followed by the applicable program numbers.

The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act Index lists CFDA programs that are funded in whole or in part by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) of 2009, Public Law 111.5.

The Applicant Eligibility Index is a listing in program number sequence, along with program titles, indicating the applicants eligible to apply. The index lists programs that may be applied for by:

- Any of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of a State exclusive of State institutions of higher education and hospitals;
- Local governments which include a county, parish, municipality, city, town, township, village, State-designated Indian tribal government, local public authority, school district, special district, intrastate district, council of governments, sponsor group representative organizations, and other regional or interstate government entity, or any agency or instrumentality of a local government;
- U.S. Territories (and possessions) of the United States which include the Commonwealths of Puerto Rico and the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, Guam, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and American Samoa;
- Federally-recognized Indian Tribal governments which include the governing body or a governmental agency of any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community (including any Native village as defined in Section 3 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 85 Stat. 688) certified by the Secretary of the Interior as eligible for the special programs and services provided through the Bureau of Indian Affairs;
- Nonprofit organizations and institutions which include quasi-public, public and private institutions of higher education and hospitals, Native American Indian Organizations, and other quasi-public and private nonprofit organizations such as, but not limited to, community action agencies (CAAs), Head Start agencies, research institutes, educational associations, and health centers. Excluded under this definition are government-owned contractor operated facilities or research centers providing support for mission-oriented, large scale programs that are government-owned or controlled, or are designed as federally-funded research and development centers; and
- Private individuals such as Native Americans, homeowners, students, farmers, artists, scientists, consumers, small business, refugees, aliens, veterans, senior citizens, low-income persons, health and education professionals, builders, contractors, developers, handicapped persons, the physically afflicted.

The Deadlines Index (for program applications) is a listing of program numbers and titles and the deadline date(s) by which funding agencies must receive applications. This information is also contained in the Deadlines Section of the program descriptions.

Users should also consult the following listings:

The Archived Programs list identifies programs that have been archived since the previous edition of the Catalog due to: expiration of budget authority; rescission of budget authority for the current fiscal year; program consolidation which has rendered the former program number(s) obsolete; the replacement of a categorical grant program by a block grant program; the replacement of two or more categorical programs by a block grant program; the abolishment of an agency; or the criteria for including a program in the Catalog no longer valid being (e.g., a program which no longer operates under Federal funding).

The Added Programs list identifies programs that have been added since the previous edition of the Catalog due to: the appropriation of new budget authority; the consolidation of two or more programs creating a new program; the splitting of elements from a former program creating two or more new programs; the transformation of a single categorical grant program into a block program; or the consolidation of two or more categorical grant programs into a block program.

The Crosswalk of Changes to Program Numbers and Titles which lists programs that have undergone a title change, or a program number change due to restructuring of programs, or reorganization of a Federal agency.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTIONS -- The center section of the printed Catalog and the listings available on this web site contain descriptions of Federal programs listed by program number in the same numerical sequence as in the Agency Program Index. Detailed information concerning programs is contained under the description headings of each Catalog program. The following is an explanation of each program description heading followed by examples of the type of information found under each heading.

NOTE: The program used in the example below does not exist. It is provided for the purpose of illustration only.

PROGRAM NUMBER, TITLE, AND POPULAR NAME -- Each program in the Catalog is preceded by a five-digit program identification number. The first two digits identify the Federal department or agency that administers the program, and the last three numbers are assigned in numerical sequence. Thus, program number 10.500 is administered by the Department of Agriculture, 11.500 by the Department of Commerce, 12.500 by the Department of Defense, 93.500 by the Department of Health and Human Services, and so on. (In the numerical sequence of program numbers, some numbers do not appear due to program deletions or consolidations. To accommodate users' systems and records, the numbers are not reassigned to other programs but are reserved for the reinstated programs.) The program title is the descriptive name given to a program. The popular name, which is less descriptive than the program title, is the name by which programs are commonly known or most often used by applicants and agencies.

Example: 93.259 Mental Health -- Children's Services

FEDERAL AGENCY -- The Federal agency is the Federal department, agency, commission, council or instrumentality of the government, and the primary organizational sub-unit (the administering office) that has direct operational responsibility for managing a program.

Example: SUBSTANCE ABUSE AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES ADMINISTRATION, PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

AUTHORIZATION -- This section lists the legal authority upon which a program is based (acts, amendments to acts, Public Law numbers, titles, sections, Statute Codes, citations to the U.S. Code, Executive Orders, Presidential Reorganization Plans, and Memoranda from an agency head). Information provided here is used to produce Appendix II, the Authorization Appendix.

Example: Community Mental Health Centers Act of 1975, Part A, Section 203(e), Public Law 94-63, 42 U.S.C. 2689.

OBJECTIVES -- This is a brief statement of specific objectives stated in terms of what the program is intended to accomplish along with the goals toward which the program is directed.

Example: To stimulate innovative approaches to children's mental health problems emphasizing prevention and coordination of community services; to expand training activities; and, to broaden resources for children's mental health services.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE -- This section indicates the form in which the assistance is transmitted from the Federal government and is initially received for use or distribution by the applicant.

Example: Project Grants.

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS -- This section describes the potential uses for the assistance provided to meet stated objectives, and the specific restrictions placed upon the use of funds. The section cites one or more applications depending upon the nature of a particular program. Since this section translates objectives into the uses of a program, users may develop a clearer understanding of the program's objectives.

Example: Support for Continuation Grants only. Program authorizes funds on a matching basis for initial staffing of facilities offering mental health services for children. Staffing grants may be used for a portion of the costs of professional and technical personnel to operate a facility for child mental health services; a higher percentage may be paid if an area has been designated a poverty area by the Secretary, HHS. The proposed program must provide consultation and coordinating services with other community agencies serving children in service area, and must include a plan with the means by which it will be evaluated.

ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS:

Applicant Eligibility -- This section indicates who can apply to the Federal government for assistance and the criteria the potential applicant must satisfy. For example, individuals may be eligible for research grants, and the criteria to be satisfied may be that they have a professional or scientific degree, 3 years of research experience, and be a citizen of the United States. Universities, medical schools, hospitals, or State and local governments may also be eligible. Where State governments are eligible, the type of State agency will be indicated (State welfare agency or State agency on aging) and the criteria that they must satisfy.

Certain programs in the Catalog (e.g., the Pell Grant program which provides grants to students) involve intermediate levels of application processing, i.e., applications are transmitted through colleges or universities that are neither the direct applicant nor the ultimate beneficiary. For these programs, the criteria that the intermediaries must satisfy are also indicated, along with intermediaries who are not eligible.

Example: To be eligible for staffing grants, applicants must be part of, or affiliated with, a community mental health center, unless there is no center serving the community. Applicants may then be any public or private nonprofit agency providing, or coordinating with programs that will provide a full range of mental health services for children and their families residing in the service area.

Beneficiary Eligibility -- This section lists the ultimate beneficiaries of a program, the criteria they must satisfy and who specifically is not eligible. The applicant and beneficiary will generally be the same for programs that provide assistance directly from a Federal agency. However, financial assistance that passes through State or local governments will have different applicants and beneficiaries since the assistance is transmitted to private sector beneficiaries who are not obligated to request or apply for the assistance.

Example: Children and their families in the service area as well as personnel of schools and other community agencies serving children.

Credentials/Documentation -- This is a brief description of the credentials or documentation required prior to, or along with, an application for assistance. The eligibility factors that must be proven, certified, or established are indicated in this section. This section also indicates whether OMB Circular No. A-87 requirements, "Cost Principles Applicable to Grants and Contracts with State and Local Governments," are applicable. In cases where specific Federal circulars or other regulatory requirements are not applicable to the program, disclaimer statements may be included referencing the requirement(s) from which the program is excluded, e.g., "This program is excluded from coverage under (applicable requirement)."

Example: Proof of nonprofit status is required of nonprofit organizations and institutions. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

APPLICATION AND AWARD PROCESS:

Preapplication Coordination -- This section indicates whether any prior coordination or approval is required with governmental or nongovernmental units prior to the submission of a formal application to the Federal funding agency. For example, programs may require: (1) State agency approval prior to the submission of an application to a Federal agency; (2) the submission of environmental impact information as required by the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, and Executive Order 11514 of March 4, 1970; (3) coordination with the policies of the recently revised OMB Circular No. A-102, "Uniform Administrative Requirements for Grants and Cooperative Agreements to State and Local Governments" (referenced here for construction, land acquisition, and land development projects for which Federal funding exceeds $100,000); (4) coverage for eligibility under Executive Order 12372, "Intergovernmental Review of Federal Programs"; or (5) a preapplication or preapplication conference. Applicants should also ascertain from the Federal agency the existence of other circular requirements not indicated by this section, and from the State, any State requirements that may be in effect. In cases where E.O. 12372 is not applicable to the program, a disclaimer statement is included referencing the exclusion, e.g., "This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372."

Example: Preapplication consultation with the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) Branch of the HHS Regional Office is not mandatory. Application must be accompanied by evidence of approval and recommendation by the appropriate State agency or agencies. The standard application forms, as furnished by the Federal agency and required by OMB Circular No. A102, must be used for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedure -- This section discusses the basic procedural steps required by the Federal agency in the application process, beginning with the lowest level (e.g., State and local government units, institutions or organizations) and ending eventually with the Federal government. Each program will indicate whether applications are to be submitted to the Federal headquarters, regional or local office, or to a State or local government office. Numerous programs in the Catalog require the standard application forms in OMB Circular No. A-102 (Attachment M). Other applications may be in the form of a written request to the funding agency stating the need for assistance and requesting available services, or a formal proposal prepared in response to an announcement in the Federal Register or the Commerce Business Daily. Also indicated in this section is guidance concerning the applicability of OMB Circular No. A-110, "Grants and Agreements with Institutions of Higher Education, Hospitals, and Other Nonprofit Organizations." In cases where specific Federal circulars or other regulatory requirements are not applicable to the program, disclaimer statements may be included referencing the requirement(s) from which the program is excluded, e.g., "This program is excluded from coverage under (applicable requirement)."

Example: Continuation Application Form ADM-115 should be used for staffing. Instructions and consultation may be obtained from the mental health section of the appropriate HHS Regional Office. Applications are sent to the Regional Office with copies to Acting Director, Division of Mental Health Service Programs, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, MD 20857. This program is subject to the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-110. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102.

Award Procedure -- This section lists the basic procedural steps for awarding assistance, beginning with the organizational components of the Federal agency that has final approval authority for the application and ending with the lowest level at which Federal resources are expended. Also indicated is whether assistance passes through the initial applicant for further distribution by intermediate level applicants to groups or individuals in the private sector.

Accepted applications are subject to evaluation by the headquarters, regional, local or district office to determine the feasibility of the proposed project to include consistency with Federal and individual agency policies concerning its scope and purpose. Grant payments may be made by a letter of credit, advance by Treasury check, or reimbursement by Treasury check. The headquarters office may make awards directly to the applicant, an agency field office, a regional office, or by an authorized county office.

Example: The Regional Health Administrator makes awards to approved applicants.

Deadlines -- When available, this section indicates the deadlines for applications to the funding agency that will be stated in terms of the date(s) or between what dates the application should be received. Reference is made to new applications, continuations, renewals, and supplementals. Application deadline information is also indicated in the Deadlines Index, in the agency's program guidelines, or announced in the Federal Register. Where not available, applicants should contact the funding agency for deadline information.

Example: Staffing: Determined by award period (contact the Regional Office).

Range of Approval or Disapproval Time -- This section informs the applicant of the representative range of time required for the application to be processed (in terms of days or months) at the Federal level. Example: From 90 to 120 days.

Appeals -- In some cases, there are no provisions for appeal. Where applicable, this section discusses appeal procedures or allowable rework time for resubmission of applications to be processed by the funding agency. Appeal procedures vary with individual programs and are either listed in this section or applicants are referred to appeal procedures documented in the relevant Code of Federal Regulations (CFR).

Example: Not applicable. (An appeal was not applicable in this case. A related program (93.231) allows applicants to reapply if revised applications are submitted.)

Renewals -- This section advises the applicant as to whether renewals or extensions of applications are available and indicates the appropriate procedures to follow. In some instances, renewal procedures may be the same as for the application procedure, e.g., for projects of a non-continuing nature renewals will be treated as new, competing applications; for projects of an ongoing nature, renewals may be given annually.

Example: This program is renewed annually. Grantees are required to update their plan and submit a current year budget.

ASSISTANCE CONSIDERATIONS:

Formula and Matching Requirements -- This section indicates the formula and matching requirements prescribed in the allocation of funds or maintenance of effort requirements. A formula may be based on population, per capita income, and other statistical factors. Applicants are informed whether there are any matching requirements to be met when participating in the cost of a project. In general, the matching share represents that portion of the project costs not borne by the Federal government. Usually, a minimum percentage for matching share is prescribed by program legislation, and matching share requirements are included in the grant agreement. Attachment F of OMB Circular No. A-102 sets forth the criteria and procedures for the evaluation of matching share requirements which may be cash or in-kind contributions made by State and local governments or other agencies, institutions, private organizations, or individuals to satisfy matching requirements of Federal grants or loans.

Cash contributions represent the grantees' cash outlay, including the outlay of money contributed to the grantee by other public agencies, institutions, private organizations, or individuals. When authorized by Federal regulation, Federal funds received from other grants may be considered as the grantees' cash contribution.

In-kind contributions represent the value of noncash contributions provided by the grantee, other public agencies and institutions, private organizations or individuals. In-kind contributions may consist of charges for real property and equipment, and value of goods and services directly benefiting and specifically identifiable to the grant program. When authorized by Federal legislation, property purchased with Federal funds may be considered as grantees' in-kind contribution.

Maintenance of effort (MOE) is a requirement contained in certain legislation, regulations, or administrative policies stating that a grantee must maintain a specified level of financial effort in a specific area in order to receive Federal grant funds, and that the Federal grant funds may be used only to supplement, not supplant, the level of grantee funds. Programs that have maintenance of effort requirements and have total allocations over $100 million (current FY) should have the following statement in this section: This program has maintenance of effort (MOE) requirements; see funding agency for further details.

Example: Staffing: Federal funds on a decreasing percentage basis over a period of 8 years 90 percent - 1st and 2nd years; 80 percent - 3rd year; 75 percent - 4th and 5th years; 70 percent - 6th, 7th and 8th years. Nonpoverty areas are entitled to: 80 percent - 1st and 2nd years; 75 percent - 3rd year; 60 percent - 4th year; 45 percent - 5th year; 30 percent - 6th, 7th and 8th years.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance -- This section indicates the time period during which the assistance is normally available, whether there are any restrictions placed on the time permitted to use the funds awarded, and the timing of disbursement of the assistance, e.g., lump sum, annually, quarterly, or as required. Example: Staffing grants are limited to 8 years by law. Payments are made on a Monthly Cash Request System or under a Letter of Credit.

POST ASSISTANCE REQUIREMENTS:

Reports -- This section indicates whether program reports, expenditure reports, cash reports or performance monitoring is required by the Federal funding agency, and specifies at what time intervals (monthly, annually, etc.) this must be accomplished.

Example: Interim progress reports must be submitted annually as part of a non-competing application; reports of expenditures are due annually. Immediate reporting of any inventions is required.

Audits -- This section discusses audits required by the Federal agency. The procedures and requirements for State and local governments and nonprofit entities are set forth in OMB Circular No. A-133. These requirements pertain to awards made within the respective State's fiscal year -- not the Federal fiscal year, as some State and local governments may use the calendar year or other variation of time span designated as the fiscal year period, rather than that commonly known as the Federal fiscal year (from October 1st through September 30th).

Example: In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133, "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that receive financial assistance of $300,000 or more in Federal awards will have an audit made for that year. Nonfederal entities that expend less than $300,000 a year in Federal awards are exempt from Federal audit requirements for that year, except as noted in Circular No. A-133.

Records -- This section indicates the record retention requirements and the type of records the Federal agency may require. Not included are the normally imposed requirements of the General Accounting Office. For programs falling under the purview of OMB Circular No. A-102, record retention is set forth in Attachment C. For other programs, record retention is governed by the funding agency's requirements.

Example: Records must be retained at least 3 years; records shall be retained beyond the 3-year period if audit findings have not been resolved.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION:

Account Identification -- This 11-digit budget account identification code represents the account that funds a particular program. This code should be consistent with the code given for the program area as specified in Appendix III of the Budget of the United States Government. (See Appendix III for further information on the meaning of the 11 digits of this code.)

Example: 75-1361-0-1-550.

Obligations -- The dollar amounts listed in this section represent obligations for the past fiscal year (PY), estimates for the current fiscal year (CY), and estimates for the budget fiscal year (BY) as reported by the Federal agencies. In each succeeding edition of the Catalog, the dollar amounts are revised to reflect changes that may result from supplemental appropriations or amendments. Each program indicates what the obligation figures represent in terms of the type of assistance provided. Obligations for nonfinancial assistance programs indicate the administrative expenses involved in the operation of a program as an indication of the magnitude of the services being provided, or the items involved in obligations.

Example: (Grants) PY $19,853,000; CY est. $20,407,000; and BY est. $14,830,000.

Range and Average of Financial Assistance -- This section lists the representative range (smallest to largest) of the amount of financial assistance available. These figures are based upon funds awarded in the past fiscal year and the current fiscal year to date. Also indicated is an approximate average amount of awards that were made in the past and current fiscal years.

Example: Formula: $26,355 to $691,481; $235,305.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS -- This section briefly describes the accomplishments of a program using quantitative data, focusing on program output, results achieved, or services rendered during the past fiscal year, the current fiscal year, and projections for the coming fiscal year.

Example: In the past fiscal year, 140 applications were received and 140 staffing awards were issued. Approximately 147 continuation grants were funded during the current fiscal year and 103 are estimated to be funded in the budget fiscal year.

REGULATIONS, GUIDELINES, AND LITERATURE -- This section lists the title, number, and price of guidelines, handbooks, manuals, and other officially published information pertinent to a program. Since program regulations are published first in the Federal Register (FR) and later in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), citations to the CFR are listed.

Example: Interim guidelines available in application kits.

INFORMATION CONTACTS:

Regional or Local Office -- This section lists the agency contact person, address and telephone number of the Federal Regional or Local Office(s) to be contacted for detailed information regarding a program such as: (1) current availability of funds and the likelihood of receiving assistance within a given period; (2) preapplication and application forms required; (3) whether a preapplication conference is recommended; (4) assistance available in preparation of applications; (5) whether funding decisions are made at the headquarters, regional or local level; (6) application renewal procedures (including continuations and supplementals) or appeal procedures for rejected applications; and (7) recently published program guidelines and material.

However, for most programs in the Catalog, this section will instruct the reader to consult Appendix IV of the Catalog (Agency Regional and Local Office Addresses) due to the volume of Regional and Local Office Contacts for most agencies. For those agencies with fewer contacts, the actual information will be provided in this section.

Example: Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMSHA) Branch of the appropriate HHS Regional Office (see Appendix IV of the Catalog for listing).

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS -- This section indicates the different types of projects which have been funded in the past. Only projects funded under Project Grants or Direct Payments for Specified Use should be listed here. The examples give potential applicants an idea of the types of projects that may be accepted for funding. The agency should list at least five examples of the most recently funded projects.

Example: Awards are made only for staffing of facilities offering mental health services for children.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS -- This section indicates the criteria used by the Federal grantor agency to evaluate proposals in order to inform potential applicants of the application review process and the criteria used to award funds for projects.

Example: The criteria for selecting proposals are based upon the extent the project will contribute to needed services and training, capability of applicant to provide services and training, more effective utilization of personnel providing mental health services, and development of new methods or information.

The Extension activities of the Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service coordinates and provides administrative, technical, and other services to a nationwide Cooperative Extension System, in partnership with State and local governments and the private sector. The primary function of this system is to take the research findings of the Department of Agriculture, the State Land-Grant Colleges and programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, and to develop and deliver informal, out-of-school educational programs. These programs communicate and demonstrate to people how they can apply research findings to identify and solve farm, home, and community problems. This work is carried out through extension offices in each State, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, and Micronesia, plus 16, 1890 land-grant universities and Tuskegee University as the State partner.

The Meat, Poultry, and Egg Products Inspection Programs provide continuous in plant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat, poultry, and egg products for sale or distribution in commerce. In addition, these acts include the review of inspection systems in foreign establishments that prepare meat, poultry, or egg products for export to the United States under inspection programs that are equivalent to the U.S. program. FSIS provides technical and financial assistance to States which maintain meat and poultry inspection programs equal to Federal inspection. FSIS also enters into Cooperative Agreements with Academic institutions; State, local and tribal government agencies; and non-profit organizations to improve Food Safety and Food Defense.

The Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) administers the USDA food assistance programs. These programs, which serve one in six Americans, represent our Nation's commitment to the principle that no one in this country should fear hunger or experience want. They provide a Federal safety net to people in need. The goals of the programs are to provide needy persons with access to a more nutritious diet, to improve the eating habits of the Nation's children, and to help America's farmers by providing an outlet for distributing foods purchased under farmer assistance authorities. The Service works in partnership with the States in all its programs. State and local agencies determine most administrative details regarding distribution of food benefits and eligibility of participants and FNS provides commodities and funding for additional food and to cover administrative costs.

AGENCY INDEX SUMMARY

Foreign Agricultural Service (10.600-10.606, 10.608-10.610, 10.612-10.614, 10.777, 10.960-10.962)

The export promotion and service agency for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Stimulates overseas markets for U.S. agricultural products. FAS fulfills its role as the promotional agency for the world's largest agricultural export business through its network of agricultural counselors, attaches, and trade officers stationed overseas and its backup team of analysts, marketing specialists, negotiators, and related specialists. FAS maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting system through its attached service. FAS also has a continuing market development program to develop, service, and expand commercial export markets for U.S. agricultural products. By virtue of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, FAS received authority to open at least 6 and not more than 25 agricultural trade offices overseas to develop, maintain and expand international markets for U.S. agricultural commodities. Ten of these offices have been established and are located in such key markets as West Germany, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, and Mexico City. To improve access for U.S. farm products abroad, FAS international trade policy specialists coordinate and direct USDA's responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations. FAS also manages the Public Law 480 Program, Titles I and III (Food for Peace Program), and the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) Export Credit Guarantee Programs. Public Law 480 is aimed at long-range improvement in the economies of developing countries. Commercial programs promote commercial agricultural exports by providing credit guarantees to exporters which are used to obtain additional U.S. exports. Title I, the concession sales section of Public Law 480, provides for low-interest, long-term credit to recipients of U.S. farm commodities. The Title II program authorizes the donation of agricultural commodities to foreign governments, voluntary relief agencies, or intergovernmental organizations. Title III permits multiyear programming and forgiveness of dollar payments, provided the recipient country undertakes specific agricultural and economic development projects for commodities delivered under Title I agreements. FAS focuses on sharing knowledge of agriculture through development assistance and cooperation with other countries. Primary activities are providing technical assistance and training in agriculture to other countries, particularly the developing world; working with international food and agricultural organizations to solve world food problems; and sponsoring scientific exchanges and research that will help farmers both at home and abroad.

Forest Service (10.652, 10.664-10.666, 10.672, 10.674-10.676, 10.678-10.685, 10.687-10.694)

Cares for the land and serves people. Promotes the sustainability of ecosystems by ensuring their health, diversity, and productivity, which is coupled with this service ethic: work collaboratively and use appropriate scientific information in caring for the land and serving people. Provides financial, technical and scientific assistance to outside organizations in order to achieve these goals when authorized by statute. These land and service ethics are applied by the Forest Service through ecosystem management. Ecosystem management is the integration of ecological, economic, and social factors in order to maintain and enhance the quality of the environment to meet current and future needs. The four strategic goals of the Forest Service are to: (1) protect ecosystems, (2) restore deteriorated ecosystems, (3) provide multiple benefits for people within the capabilities of ecosystems, and (4) ensure organizational effectiveness. The Forest Service Natural Resource Agenda identifies four key areas of national focus. They are: watershed, health and restoration; sustainable forest ecosystem management; forest roads management; and recreation enhancement. Implementation of the agenda will help bring people together and help them find ways to live within the limits of the land. This in turn will ensure that future generations will forever be endowed with the rich natural bounty of our Nation.

National Agricultural Statistics Service (10.950)

Agricultural estimates involve collecting, analyzing, and publishing agricultural production and marketing data, including: number of farms and acreage in farms; crop acreage, yields, production, stocks, value, and utilization; inventories and production of livestock, poultry, eggs, and dairy products; prices received by farmers for products, prices paid for commodities and services for living and production, and related indexes; farm employment and wage rates; cold storage supplies; agricultural chemical use; aquaculture; and other relevant aspects of the agricultural economy. Estimates for about 120 crops and 45 livestock items are published in about 400 Federal and 9,000 State-Federal reports each year. Beginning in 1997, NASS is responsible for the Census of Agriculture, previously conducted by the Bureau of the Census, Commerce Department. The Census of Agriculture is taken every 5 years and provides comprehensive data down to the county level on all aspects of the agricultural economy for the U.S., as well as selected data for American Samoa, Puerto Rico, Guam, Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands. All information is made available to the news media and the public at scheduled release times and is available for free on the Internet. Statistical research and service is directed toward improving crop and livestock estimating techniques. Considerable emphasis is placed on improving survey sample designs as well as testing new forecasting and estimating techniques, such as using satellite data.

National Institute of Food and Agriculture (10.200, 10.202-10.203, 10.205-10.207, 10.210, 10.212, 10.215-10.217, 10.219-10.223, 10.225-10.228, 10.303-10.320, 10.322, 10.324-10.327, 10.500)

The National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) is an agency within the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), part of the executive branch of the Federal Government. Congress created NIFA through the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008. NIFA replaced the former Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service (CSREES), which had been in existence since 1994. NIFA's unique mission is to advance knowledge for agriculture, the environment, human health and well-being, and communities by supporting research, education, and extension programs in the Land-Grant University System and other partner organizations. NIFA doesn't perform actual research, education, and extension but rather helps fund it at the state and local level and provides program leadership in these areas.

Natural Resources Conservation Service (10.072, 10.901-10.905, 10.907, 10.912-10.914, 10.916-10.917, 10.920-10.929)

Develops and carries out a national soil and water conservation program in cooperation with landowners, operators and other land users and developers, community planning agencies and regional resource groups, Federal, State, and local government agencies; also assists in agricultural pollution control, environmental improvement, and rural community development. Preserves, protects, and restores valued wetlands, and improves wildlife and migratory bird habitat. Supports the objectives of the Nation's commitment to the 1973 International Boundary and Water Commission Agreement concerning the quality of water in the Colorado River delivered downstream to users in the United States and the Republic of Mexico. Conserves water; preserves, maintains, and improves migratory waterfowl habitat and other wildlife resources. Encourages good forestry management through the development, management, and protection of non-industrial private forest lands, to increase the production of timber and enhance other forest resources.

Risk Management Agency (10.450, 10.456, 10.458, 10.460)

The Risk Management Agency (RMA) is part of USDA. RMA's role is to help producers manage their business risks through effective, market-based risk management solutions. RMA's mission is to promote, support, and regulate sound risk management solutions to preserve and strengthen the economic stability of America's agricultural producers. As part of this mission, RMA operates and manages the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC). RMA was created in 1996; the FCIC was founded in 1938. RMA, via the FCIC, provides crop insurance to American producers. Private-sector insurance companies sell and service the policies. RMA develops and/or approves the premium rate, administers premium and expense subsidy, approves and supports products, and reinsures the insurance companies. RMA through the formation of partnerships with public and private organizations fund projects that:

(A) Create new products, seek enhancements in existing products, and expand the use of non-insurance risk management tools that will be utilized by agricultural producers to assist them in mitigating the risks inherent in agricultural production. Risk management tools include a variety of risk management options and strategies developed to assist producers in mitigating the risks inherent in agricultural production. Risk management tools may include financial management tools to mitigate price and production risks; tools to enhance measurement and prediction of risks in order to facilitate risk diversification; tools to improve production management, harvesting, record keeping or marketing. (B) Provide women, limited resource, socially disadvantaged, and other traditionally underserved producers of Priority Commodities with risk management training, informational opportunities, and assistance necessary to understand: (1) The kind of risks addressed by existing and emerging risk management tools; (2) The features and appropriate use of existing and emerging risk management tools; and (3) How to make sound risk management decisions. (C) Deliver crop insurance education and information to U.S. agricultural producers in certain States that have been designated as historically underserved with respect to crop insurance. The states, collectively referred to as Targeted States, are Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wyoming. (D) Deliver risk management education and information in the management of production, marketing, and financial risk to U.S. agricultural producers. The program gives priority to educating producers of crops currently not insured under Federal crop insurance, specialty crops, and underserved commodities, including livestock and forage.

Rural Business-Cooperative Service (10.350, 10.352, 10.767-10.769, 10.771, 10.773, 10.778, 10.782, 10.854, 10.856, 10.865-10.868, 10.870-10.871, 10.874)

The mission of the Rural Business-Cooperative Service is to enhance the quality of life for all rural Americans by providing leadership in building competitive businesses and sustainable cooperatives that can prosper in the global marketplace.

Rural Housing Service (10.405, 10.410, 10.415, 10.417, 10.420, 10.427, 10.433, 10.438, 10.446-10.448, 10.766)

Provides credit to families and communities that still do not have effective access to credit because of the isolated nature or small scale of the rural market and provides subsidies to those low income families and communities that could not otherwise afford rent or debt service payments.

Rural Utilities Service (10.759-10.763, 10.770, 10.781, 10.850-10.851, 10.855, 10.857-10.859, 10.861-10.864, 10.886)

Electricity, telephone, water and waste disposal services have been taken for granted in American cities since at least the 1920's. But if you lived in a rural area only 60 years ago, chances are you went without these necessities of modern life and high standard of living they make possible. Modern utilities came to rural America through some of the most successful government initiatives in American history, carried out through the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) working with rural cooperatives, nonprofit organizations, public bodies, and for-profit utilities.

The Office of the Chief Economist (10.290)

The Office of the Chief Economist (OCE) advises the Secretary on the economic implications of policies and programs affecting the U.S. food and fiber system and rural areas as well as coordinates, reviews, and approves the Department's commodity and farm sector forecasts. OCE staff also coordinates USDA's Agricultural Outlook Forum, which has been hosted annually since 1923.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE (11.001-11.999)

Economic Development Administration (11.010, 11.300, 11.302-11.303, 11.307, 11.312-11.313)

The EDA's mission is to lead the federal economic development agenda by promoting innovation and competitiveness, preparing American regions for growth and success in the worldwide economy.

International Trade Administration (11.112-11.113)

Promotes world trade and strengthens the international trade and investment position of the United States.

National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) (11.013, 11.609, 11.611, 11.616-11.619)

The NIST mission is to promote U.S. innovation and industrial competitiveness by advancing measurement science, standards, and technology in ways that enhance economic security and improve our quality of life. Since 1901, NIST, a non-regulatory agency, has been supplying the measurements and tools from standardized high-precision gage blocks needed to manufacture interchangeable parts to the world's most accurate atomic clock to help U.S. industry compete successfully through innovation. Over the last few decades, NIST has been assigned important new roles and responsibilities, including awarding competitive grants to foster development of promising, high-risk technologies; diffusing advanced technologies and business practices to smaller manufacturers; and promoting quality management methods in key sectors. Old and new, all NIST programs support the nation's agility, innovation, and competitiveness.

NIST Laboratory Program

For more than 100 years, NIST has maintained the national standards of measurement, a role that the U.S. Constitution assigns to the Federal Government. Today, the NIST Laboratories address increasingly complex measurement challenges. For example, NIST develops measurements focusing on the very small (e.g., nanotechnology devices) and the very large (e.g., skyscrapers), the physical methods for characterizing strands of DNA for forensic testing and the virtual methods for testing electronic health record systems, and tests the performance of walk-through metal detectors.

The NIST Laboratories work at the frontiers of measurement science to ensure that the U.S. system of measurements is firmly grounded on a sound scientific and technical foundation. NIST promotes the use of measurements based on the international system of units (SI). The measurement science research at NIST is useful to all science and engineering disciplines.

The NIST Laboratories work to assure that the U.S. realization of the basic and derived measurement units is consistent with the realization in other nations. NIST Laboratories engage in a number of international activities to support trade and global science, and to promote the international acceptance of U.S. measurement standards.

The NIST Laboratories provide industry and academia with unique user facilities that support innovation in materials science, nanotechnology, and other emerging technology areas through the NIST Center for Neutron Research, which provides world class neutron measurement capabilities to the U.S. research community, and the NIST Center for Nanoscale Science and Technology, which supports nanotechnology development from discovery to production.

The NIST Laboratories also support the development of standards and specifications that define technical and performance requirements for goods and services. These standards also known as documentary standards are often developed collaboratively with the private sector through an open, consensus-based process. NIST scientists and engineers lend their expertise to these efforts in order to promote standards that are based on sound science, and to ensure that the standards are supported by effective measurements and testing methods for conformity. In addition, NIST is designated under the National Technology Transfer Advancement Act (NTTAA) as the coordinator for all Federal agencies using documentary standards that are developed by private-sector consensus bodies to carry out their policy objectives.

Innovation and Industry Services

Hollings Manufacturing Extension Partnership

Through partnerships between Federal and state governments and non-profit organizations, NIST's Hollings Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MEP) provides technical and business assistance to smaller manufacturers through a nationwide network in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Field agents and programs are helping manufacturers understand, adopt, and apply new technologies and business practices, as well as reap the benefits through increased productivity, better performance, cost savings, waste reduction, and creation and retention of manufacturing jobs. MEP acts as a strategic advisor to promote business growth and innovation and to connect manufacturers to public and private resources essential for increased profitability and competitiveness in the global marketplace.

Technology Innovation Program (TIP)

The TIP statute originated in the America Creating Opportunities to Meaningfully Promote Excellence in Technology, Education, and Sciences (COMPETES) Act of 2007 (P.L. 110-69). The COMPETES Act was recently reauthorized as the America COMPETES Reauthorization Act of 2010 (P.L. 111-358). TIP was established to help U.S. businesses, institutions of higher education, and other organizations such as national laboratories and nonprofit research institutes to support, promote, and accelerate innovation in the United States through high-risk, high-reward research in areas of critical national need. The final FY 2012 appropriations did not provide funding for TIP. The program is currently implementing an orderly close down of the program.

Baldrige Performance Excellence Program (BPEP)

NIST's Baldrige Performance Excellence Program (BPEP) provides global leadership in the learning and sharing of successful strategies and performance practices, principles, and methodologies to strengthen U.S. organizations. The program promotes organizational excellence through education, outreach, and an annual Presidential awards program. The Baldrige Award is given to organizations in six categories: manufacturing, service, small business, health care, education, and nonprofit. BPEP works closely with these organizations to recognize and disseminate proven best practices for management and operation, leading to organizations that are more strategic, innovative, competitive, and effective. BPEP also takes advantage of more than 20 years worth of learning from Baldrige Award recipients to identify strategies and practices that are most likely to strengthen the performance and competitiveness of U.S. industry and other organizations.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS (42.001-42.999)

Under the organic law, the Library's first responsibility is service to Congress. One department, the Congressional Research Service, functions exclusively for the legislative branch of the Government. As the Library has developed, its range of service has come to include the entire governmental establishment in all its branches and the public at large, so that it has become a national library for the United States. The Library's extensive collections are universal in scope. They include books and pamphlets on every subject and in a multitude of languages. Among them are the most comprehensive collections of Chinese, Japanese, and Russian language books outside Asia and the Soviet Union; volumes relating to science and legal materials, outstanding for American and foreign law; the world's largest collection of published aeronautical literature; and the most extensive collection in the western hemisphere of books printed before 1501 A.D. The manuscript collections relate to manifold aspects of American history and civilization and include the personal papers of most of the Presidents from George Washington through Calvin Coolidge. The music collections contain volumes and pieces (manuscript and published) from classic works to the newest popular compositions. Other materials available for research include maps and views; photographic records from the daguerreotype to the latest news photo; recordings, including folksongs and other music, speeches, and poetry readings; prints, drawings, and posters; government documents, newspapers, and periodicals from all over the world; and motion pictures, microforms, and audio and video tapes. Admission to the various research facilities of the Library is free. No introduction or credentials are required for persons over high school age who wish to read in the general reading rooms; however, certain collections, like those of the Manuscript, Rare Book and Special Collections, Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Divisions, can be used only by those with a serious purpose for doing so. The Library is also responsible for copyrights, which are registered by the Copyright Office. The American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress, has a coordinative function both in and outside the Federal establishment to carry out appropriate programs to support, preserve, and present American folklife through such activities as the collection and maintenance of archives, scholarly research, field projects, performances, exhibitions, festivals, workshops, publications, and audiovisual presentations. The Center for the Book was established in the Library of Congress to provide a program for investigating the transmission of human knowledge and to heighten public interest in the role of books and printing in the diffusion of knowledge. Drawing on the resources of the Library of Congress, the Center works closely with other organizations to explore important issues in the book and educational communities, to encourage reading, and to encourage research about books and about reading. Its goal is to serve as a useful catalyst by bringing together authors, publishers, librarians, booksellers, educators, scholars, and readers to discuss common concerns and work toward the solution of common problems. The Library provides technical information related to the preservation and restoration of library and archival material. A series of leaflets on various preservation and conservation topics has been prepared by the Preservation Office. Information and publications are available from the National Preservation Program Office, Library of Congress. A free national library program of braille and recorded materials for blind and physically handicapped persons is administered by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS), Library of Congress. With the cooperation of authors and publishers who grant permission to use copyrighted works, NLS selects and produces full-length books and magazines in braille on recorded disc and cassette. Reading material are distributed to a cooperating network of regional and subregional (local) libraries where they are circulated to eligible borrowers. Reading material and playback machines are sent to borrowers and returned to libraries by postage-free mail. Established by an act of Congress in 1931 to serve blind adults, the program was expanded in 1952 to include children, in 1962 to provide music materials, and again in 1966 to include individuals with other physical impairments that prevent the reading of standard print. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY (81.001-81.999)

DOE is major government enterprise. If included among the Nation's Fortune 500 firms, it would rank in the top 50. Its $16.5 billion appropriation comprises close to 3 percent of total Federal discretionary spending DOE Funds the largest environmental cleanup in history, and research and development that supports the Nation's defense and its energy and economic security. DOE employs over 11,000 Federal employees and about 108,000 contract employees. DOE owns and manages over 50 major installations located on 2.4 million acres in 35 States and is the fourth largest Federal landowner in the United States. DOE is an energy policy, supply, and technology enterprise. It invests in developing a secure, clean, and sustainable energy system. It helps the Nation meet its environmental challenges by administering the largest pollution prevention and efficiency program in the world, with partners from every sector of the economy. It enhances the Nation's energy security by increasing the diversity of energy, and fuel choices and sources; bringing renewable energy sources into the market, strengthening domestic production of oil and gas, maintaining the U.S. nuclear energy option, and increasing the efficiency with which we use energy and generate electricity. The Department also maintains the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and operates five Power Marketing Administrations that sell and distribute over $3 billion of electric power generated at Federal hydroelectric plants. DOE is a national security enterprise. It is a key player in the Administration's furtherance of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and its overall goal of reducing the global danger from nuclear weapons. It ensures the safety and reliability of the U.S. nuclear weapons stockpile without underground testing. At the same time, it manages and safely dismantles excess nuclear materials, and ensures the security of vital departmental nuclear assets. It provides policy and technical assistance to curb global proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, emphasizing U.S. nonproliferation, arms control, and nuclear safety objectives in the states of the former Soviet union and worldwide. Further, it develops and ensures the safety and reliability of nuclear reactor plants to power U.S. Navy warships. DOE is an environmental remediation enterprise. It cleans up the 50-year environmental legacy left at the industrial complexes where nuclear weapons were designed and manufactured. It manages the problems associated with the large quantities of various types of radioactive wastes, surplus nuclear materials, and spent nuclear fuels that remain at the sites of the Nation's nuclear weapons facilities and at nuclear energy research and development sites. In addition, it must address the growing inventory of spent nuclear fuel from commercial nuclear reactors that is awaiting disposal. These wastes must be dealt with responsibly to ensure the safety and health of the public. DOE is a science and technology enterprise. At the center of all we do are our 27 laboratories, our additional scientific user facilities, and our researchers at the Nation's universities. These form the backbone of U.S. scientific leadership by conducting and facilitating breakthrough research in energy sciences and technology, high energy physics, global climate change, genomics, superconducting materials, accelerator technologies, environmental sciences, and super-computing in support of DOE's mission. The laboratories, described as the crown jewels of the Nation's science establishment, and the Department's funding of research at universities have resulted in 66 Nobel prize winners, including three in 1996. The Department is also an investor in the Nation's most precious resource - its youth - by supporting science and mathematics education in our schools through grants, educational programs, and fellowships. DOE is global enterprise. The outcome of our work is the technology that stimulates the private market for the expansion of clean energy to meet national and global energy requirements of almost 500 quadrillion Btu's by the year 2010 - a staggering 36 percent increase over 1995. Overseas energy market needs include coal, nuclear power, oil and gas exploration, energy efficiency, and renewable energy technologies that are available for export now or that will soon be available for the international marketplace. DOE supports the export of U.S. energy services and technologies by assisting the nations in Asia, South America, Eastern Europe, an Africa, and the states of the former Soviet Union in developing private markets for environmentally responsible, sustainable energy. These alliances support U.S. competitiveness in a global economy of growing energy infrastructure requirements and create jobs in the U.S. at all skill levels.

The Corporation administers two benefit insurance programs separately covering single-employer and multi-employer plans. Nearly 40 million workers participate in more than 112,000 covered plans. Single-Employer Insurance: Under the single-employer program, the Corporation guarantees payment of a covered plan's basic benefits if that plan terminates without sufficient assets to pay those guaranteed benefits. Multi-employer Insurance: Under Title IV of the Act, as originally enacted, the Corporation guaranteed nonforfeitable benefits for multi-employer plans in a similar fashion as for single-employer plans. However, the payment of guaranteed benefits was at the agency's discretion under the provisions of the law that remained in force until August 1, 1980. The Multi-employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 (29 U.S.C. 1001) revised the law applicable to multi-employer pension plans by changing the insurable event from plan termination to plan insolvency. In accordance with the Act, the Corporation provides financial assistance to plans that are unable to pay basic benefits. The plans are obligated to repay such assistance. The act also made employers withdrawing from a plan liable to the plan for a portion of its unfunded vested benefits. Premium Collections: All defined benefit pension plans covered by Title IV of Employee Retirement Income Security Act are required to pay premiums under prescribed rates to the Corporation.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION (96.001-96.999)

On March 31, 1995, the Social Security Administration (SSA) became an independent agency. SSA administers a national program of contributory social insurance. Employees, employers, and the self-employed pay contributions which are pooled in special trust funds. When earnings cease or are reduced because the worker retires, dies, or becomes disabled, monthly cash benefits are paid to replace part of the earnings the family has lost. Part of the workers contribution goes into a separate hospital insurance trust fund. This fund helps disabled workers, retirees, and their dependents with their hospital bills. They may also elect to receive assistance with medical expenses. This is done by the workers paying a percentage of supplementary medical insurance premiums. The Federal government pays the balance. Together, these two programs are often referred to as "Medicare." Medicare protection is also provided, under certain conditions, to Railroad Retirement beneficiaries based on a disability. The principal functions of SSA include, but are not limited to; research and recommendations oriented to the problems of poverty; health care for the aged, blind, and disabled; long-range planning, design, and development of SSA administrative plans; data processing systems used in establishing and maintaining records essential to its' various programs; statistical measurement and systematic evaluation of its' programs; policy guidance for the administration of the OASDI and SSI programs; and development of programs and materials to assure that Congress, Federal and State agencies, and the general public have an adequate understanding of the protections, rights, and responsibilities under SSA administered programs. In addition, SSA, through a world-wide organization of ten regional offices, six program service centers, and over 1,300 field offices, guides and directs all aspects of the cash benefit program operations of SSA

10.051 COMMODITY LOANS AND LOAN DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS
(Price Supports)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008
, Public Law 110-246, as amended by American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012, Public Law 112-240.

OBJECTIVES:

To improve and stabilize farm income, to assist in bringing about a better balance between supply and demand of the commodities, and to assist farmers in the orderly marketing of their crops.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT LOANS; DIRECT PAYMENTS WITH UNRESTRICTED USE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Loans and loan deficiency payments (LDP's) give farmers a means of promoting more orderly marketing. Loans to producers may be "nonrecourse" which means that producers have the option of forfeiting the collateral to CCC at loan maturity in full satisfaction of the loan obligation; or "recourse" for low quality grain, or non-ginned seed cotton, which means that producers must repay the loans by maturity." If market prices are above the support level producers may repay their loans at the original loan principal plus interest and market their commodities. When market prices are low, most nonrecourse commodity loan repayments are less than the original loan principal plus interest. Eligible commodities for loans are wheat, corn, grain sorghum, oats, barley, rice, peanuts, upland cotton, extra-long staple cotton, soybeans, crambe, canola, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower, sunflower seed, sesame seed, dry peas, lentils, small and large chickpeas, graded and ungraded wool, honey, and sugar. LDP's are offered for wheat, corn, grain sorghum, oats, barley, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, crambe, canola, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower, sunflower seed, sesame seed, peanuts, dry peas, lentils, small and large chickpeas, graded and ungraded wool, unshorn pelts, honey, hay, and silage. If the loan repayment rates for these commodities are less than the established loan levels, producers may, for most commodities that are eligible for a nonrecourse loan, agree to forego such loan and elect to receive an LDP. The LDP payment rate equals the amount by which the loan rate exceeds the loan repayment rate in effect at the time the LDP application is approved, or the delivery date, or date sold or date beneficial interest is lost, as applicable.

Applicant Eligibility:

Owner, landlord, tenant, or sharecropper on an eligible farm that has produced the eligible commodities or, in the case of sugar, a processor or refiner who meets program requirements as announced by the Secretary.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Owner, landlord, tenant, or sharecropper on a farm that has produced the eligible commodities, meets program requirements as announced by the Secretary, and maintains beneficial interest in the commodity.

In the case of farm-stored commodities (including sugar), producer/processor or Cooperative Marketing Association requests a loan at the FSA county office.

OBJECTIVES:

The Farm Storage Facility Loan (FSFL) Program provides low-interest financing for producers to build or upgrade farm storage and handling facilities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT LOANS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Loans are used to finance the purchase and construction of new storage structures, handling equipment and drying equipment, and to finance the remodeling of existing storage structures. The loan amount is limited to $500,000 per storage facility for each loan. The following are security requirements for farm storage facility loans: All loans must be secured by a promissory note and security agreement, as well as a UCC-1 describing the storage facility and accompanying equipment; and Severance agreements from all lien holders on the real estate where the facility will be located or from owners of real estate when the loan applicant is not the landowner, except when CCC holds the first lien on the real estate. Severance agreements will not be required if the borrower increases the down payment from 15 percent to 20 percent. For loans that exceed $50,000 or the borrower's aggregate outstanding loan balance exceeds $50,000, the borrower must be able to provide at least one of the following: A first lien on the real estate on which the facility is located; Real estate owned by the borrower other than where the facility is located, provided the real estate offered is sufficient to secure the loan; or An irrevocable letter of credit from a financial institution in an amount sufficient to protect CCC's interest for each year the loan has an outstanding balance. The following are the terms for farm storage facility loans: A 15 percent cash down payment is required; thus, CCC's loan is limited to 85 percent of the net cost of the eligible storage facility and permanent drying and handling equipment (subject to the applicant's storage needs test). The down payment cannot include any trade-in, discount, rebate, deferred payment, or post-dated check. Loan terms available are seven (7) years, ten (10) years or twelve (12) years depending on the amount of the loan. Interest rate is fixed for the loan term based on the rate in effect during the month the loan is initially approved. The interest rate is equivalent to the rate of interest charged on Treasury Securities of comparable term and maturity. Loans are to be repaid in equal amortized annual installments. Loan will not be disbursed until the facility has been erected and inspected with the exception of one (1) qualifying partial disbursement, once 50 percent of the facility has been completed at a maximum amount of 50 percent of the approved loan amount, not to exceed $250,000. Cost of Obtaining a Loan. Each applicant will be charged a nonrefundable $100 application fee. CCC will pay all collateral lien searches and recording fees for filing Form UCC-1 and credit reports. Applicants pay all other fees, such as severance agreements, attorney fees, real estate lien search fees, and instrument filing fees. For loans that require additional security and/or are greater than $50,000, applicants will be required to pay the cost of obtaining a title search/opinion or title insurance. TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT PAYMENTS FOR A SPECIFIED USE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Eligible owners or operators may place highly erodible or other environmentally sensitive land into a 10-15 year contract. The participant, in return for annual payments, agrees to implement a conservation plan approved by the local conservation district for converting highly erodible cropland or other environmentally sensitive land to a long-term resource conserving cover i.e., eligible land must be planted with a vegetative cover, such as, perennial grasses, legumes, fobs, shrubs, or trees. Financial and technical assistance are available to participants to assist in the establishment of a long-term resource conserving cover.

Applicant Eligibility:

An individual, partnership, association, Indian Tribal ventures corporation, estate, trust, other business enterprises or other legal entities and, whenever applicable, a State, a political subdivision of a State, or any agency thereof may submit an offer to enroll acreage.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

If their offer is accepted for enrollment, an individual, partnership, association, Indian Tribal ventures, corporation, estate, trust, other business enterprises or other legal entities and, whenever applicable, a State, political subdivision of State, or any agency thereof may earn benefits.

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is required. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. FSA has three methods for enrolling acreage in the CRP. One method is a continuous signup process where acreage suitable for certain environmental priority practices, including but not limited to grass waterways, riparian buffers or filterstrips, and acreage within wellhead protection areas may be offered and accepted without going through a competitive offer process. The second method is similar to continuous signup and is available only in distinct geographic areas. These areas are targeted by FSA and State governments under partnership agreements. The third method is to offer acreage during a general signup period where eligible offers to enroll highly erodible and other environmentally sensitive acreage are submitted and ranked competitively based on an environmental benefits index. Regardless of the method of enrollment, the local FSA office that serves the area in which the farm or ranch is located will provide the maximum payment rate CCC will accept to enroll certain acreage in the program. Producers may submit a rental rate per acre offered that may be equal to or less than CCC's maximum payment rate.

Award Procedure:

FSA will notify persons whose offers are determined acceptable as soon as practicable after the close of the signup.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application

deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

From 7 to 120 days.

Appeals:

Producers may appeal any determination to county FSA committee, State committee, or National Appeals Division. Matters that are generally applicable to all producers are not appealable.

10.072 WETLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Natural Resources Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Food Security Act of 1985, Title XII, Part Subtitle D, Section 1237, Public Law 99-198, 99 Stat. 1504, 16 U.S.C 3831.

OBJECTIVES:

To assist landowners in restoring and protecting wetlands on eligible lands on which they agree to enter into a permanent or 30- yearlong-term easement (30-year contract for Indian tribes) , or a restoration cost-share agreement with the Secretary. The goal of WRP is to maximize wetland functions and values and wildlife benefits on every acre enrolled in the program. Total acreage enrollment limitation is 3,041,200,275,000 acres.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT PAYMENTS FOR A SPECIFIED USE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Eligible landowners may offer farmed wetlands, prior converted wetlands, wetlands farmed under natural condition, former or degraded wetlands on lands that have been used or are currently being used for the production of food and fiber, including cropland, rangeland and forest production land, lands substantially altered by flooding, certain riparian areas, along with certain adjacent areas. The goal of the WRP is to achieve the greatest wetlands functions and values, along with optimum wildlife habitat on every acre enrolled in the program. At least 70 percent of the wetland and upland areas will be restored to the natural condition to the extent practicable; the remaining 30 percent of the project area may be restored to other than natural conditions. Enrollment options include permanent easements, 30-year easements, restoration cost-share agreements, and, for acreage owned by Indian Tribes, 30-year contracts. To be eligible for participation, land must be restorable and be suitable for wildlife benefits. Participating landowners must comply with the terms and conditions of their easement, agreement or contract for the duration of the document. For easement projects, landowners shall ensure the easement is superior to the rights of all others and shall agree to implement a wetland restoration plan designed to restore and maintain the easement area. Landowners must agree to a permanent retirement of crop acreage bases, allotments, and quotas to the extent that the sum of the crop acreage bases and allotments will not exceed the remaining cropland on the farm.

Participating landowners receive financial and technical assistance to install necessary restoration practices as follows.

Permanent easements: Easement duration is in perpetuity. Landowners receive an easement payment after the easement is filed. In addition NRCS shall share the cost of carrying out the establishment conservation measures and practices, and the protection of wetland functions and values including necessary maintenance activities to the extent that the Secretary determines that cost-sharing is appropriate and in the public interest.

30-year easements: Easement duration is 30 years. Landowners receive an easement payment after the easement is filed that is the equivalent of 75 percent of the value for a permanent easement and up to 75 percent of the eligible restoration costs.

Restoration cost-share agreements: Restoration cost-share agreements are made available to participating landowners as an alternative mechanism to restore wetlands, without requiring the participant to sell an easement. Agreements are generally for a 10-year period, although longer agreement periods may be required for unique projects that are funded at a higher level. There is no easement payment; however, NRCS pays up to 75 percent of the eligible restoration costs.

30-year contracts: Acreage owned by Indian Tribes can be enrolled through the use of a 30-year contract which shall be equivalent in value to a 30-year easement.

For both permanent and 30-year easements, WRP pays for all the overhead costs associated with recording the easement in the local land records office including recording fees, charges for title abstracts, surveys, appraisal fees, records searches, and title insurance associated with acquiring an easement. These overhead costs are generally not paid to participants but are provided directly to the vendor performing the service. Therefore, payments appearing on USAspending.gov will be reflective of payments to participants and payments to vendors for services associated with restoration and management activities and administrative costs associated with recording an easement.

Under Credentials/Documentation

Eligible applicants must be in compliance with the highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions in 7 CFR part 12 and the Adjusted Gross Income provisions in 7 CRP part 1400. They must be the landowner of the eligible land being offered for participation. The 12-month requirement is not applicable to restoration agreement. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Food, Conservator and Energy Act of 2008, Title 1, Part E, Section 1506, Public Law 110-246, 7 U.S.C 7981-7982, as amended by American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012, Public Law 112-240.

OBJECTIVES:

To maintain and expand existing markets for dairy which are vital to the welfare of milk producers in the United States. TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

DIRECT PAYMENTS WITH UNRESTRICTED USE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Each fiscal year, eligible dairy operations can receive a monthly payment based on monthly milk marketing, up to a maximum of 2.4 million pounds per dairy operation, for fiscal year October 1, 2007 through September 30, 2008. Maximum eligible pounds increase to 2.985 million pounds from October 1, 2008 through August 31, 2013, except that the cap reduces back to 2.4 million pounds during the month of September, 2013. Dairy operations who make changes to their producer status or who reconstitute their farm operations on or after October 1, 2007 for the sole purpose of receiving additional payments will not be eligible for the benefits under the program implemented by this rule.

The CCC-580 must show total pounds of all milk produced and marketed during each month for all persons receiving a share of the marketed milk. Monthly milk production may not be apportioned to circumvent the maximum payment quantity. All persons who share in the risk of a dairy operation's total production must certify information on the CCC-580. FSA will accept only one CCC-580 per operation. When applying for MILC, operators must also have on file: (1) form AD-1026, "Highly Erodible Land Conservation and Wetland Conservation Certification," used to certify understanding of the conservation compliance requirements under USDA programs; and (2) form SF-3881, "Direct Deposit Sign Up Form," used to sign up for the direct deposit of payments into the payee's account.

10.087 BIOMASS CROP ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

(BCAP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, Title IX, Section 9001, Public Law 110-246; Supplemental Appropriations Act, 2010, Title 1, Part Chapter 1, Section 101, Public Law 111-212; The Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, Title IX, 7 U.S.C 8101.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of BCAP is to encourage the production of biofuels. BCAP accomplishes this by providing funding for agricultural and forest land owners and operators to receive matching payments for certain eligible material sold to qualified biomass conversion facilities for conversion to heat, power, bio based products, or advanced biofuels. It also provides funding for producers of eligible crops of renewable biomass within specified project areas to receive establishment payments and annual payments.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

BCAP is intended to encourage the production of biofuels by assisting agricultural and forest land owners and operators with the establishment and production of eligible crops in selected project areas for conversion to bioenergy, and with the collection, harvest, storage, and transportation of eligible material for use in a biomass conversion facilities.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be eligible to enter into a BCAP contract for the purposes of receiving an annual payment or establishment payments, a person or legal entity must be an owner, operator, or tenant of eligible land within a project area. Eligible land must be agricultural land or nonindustrial private forest land. Eligible agricultural land includes cropland; grassland; pastureland, rangeland, hayland, and other land on which food fiber, or other agricultural products are produced or capable of being legally produced for which a valid conservation plan exists and is implemented. Ineligible land is as follows: (1) Federal lands; (2) State-owned, municipal, or other local government-owned lands; (3) Native sod; and (4) Land that is already enrolled in CCCs CRP, Wetlands Reserve Program, or Grassland Reserve Program. Eligible crops for annual and establishment payments are renewable plant materials such as feed grains, other agricultural commodities, or other plants and trees, and algae; waste materials including vegetative waste, materials, such as woods wastes and wood residues, animal waste and byproducts, such as fats, oils, greases, and manure, food waste, and yard waste. Ineligible crops are any crop eligible to receive payments under Title I of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (See 8-LP, paragraph 126 and 7-CN for Title I commodities); and any plant that is invasive or noxious or has the potential to become invasive or noxious. Eligible materials for matching payments include various types of renewable biomass collected or harvested directly from the land in accordance with an approved conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or an equivalent plan before transport and delivery to the biomass conversion facility. Materials will only be eligible if USDA determines that there is no higher value use for that material within a reasonable distance of the biomass conversion facility.

Matching payments are not available for the following products:

(1) Material that is whole grain from any crop that is eligible to receive; payments under Title I of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 or an amendment made by that title, including, but not limited to, barley, corn, grain sorghum, oats, rice, or wheat; honey; or material that is mohair; certain oilseeds such as canola, crambe, flaxseed, mustard seed, rapeseed, safflower seed, soybeans, sesame seed, and sunflower seeds; peanuts; pulse crops such as small chickpeas, lentils, and dry peas; dairy products; sugar; wool; and cotton boll fiber; (2) Animal waste and by-products of animal waste including fats, oils, greases, and manure; (3) Food waste and yard waste; and (4) Algae.

All eligible material must be harvested or collected directly from the land by the eligible material owner according to a conservation, forest stewardship, or equivalent plan and be separated from the higher value product before the point of delivery. Woody biomass harvested or collected outside of project area contracts is limited to eligible material resulting from preventative treatments to address fire fuel load reduction, insect or disease outbreaks, or restore ecosystem health. Woody biomass harvested or collected outside of project area contracts is limited to eligible materials that do not have an existing market for non-biomass use and cannot be co-mingled with higher product value materials. Eligible material owner, for purposes of the matching payment, means a person or entity having the right to collect or harvest eligible material, who has the risk of loss in the material that is delivered to an eligible facility and who has directly or by agent delivered or intends to deliver the eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility, including: (1) For eligible material harvested or collected from private lands, including cropland, the owner of the land, the operator or producer conducting farming operations on the land, or any other person designated by the owner of the land; and (2) For eligible material harvested or collected from public lands, a person having the right to harvest or collect eligible material pursuant to a contract or permit with the US Forest Service or other appropriate Federal agency, such as a timber sale contract, stewardship contract or agreement, service contract or permit, or related applicable Federal land permit or contract, and who has submitted a copy of the permit or contract authorizing such collection to CCC. Eligible facilities are biomass conversion facilities that convert or propose to convert renewable biomass into heat, power, bio based products, or advanced biofuels and have been approved for the BCAP program by the CCC.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Owners and operators of agricultural and non-industrial private forest land will receive the ultimate benefits because it will provide financial assistance to establish, produce, and deliver biomass feedstocks. Eligible material owners who are the person or entity having the right to collect or harvest eligible material, who has the risk of loss in the material that is delivered to an eligible facility and who has directly or by agent delivered or intends to deliver the eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility.

Credentials/Documentation:

In order to enroll land in BCAP, the participant must enter into a contract with the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). Acceptance or rejection will be at the sole discretion of CCC, and offers may be rejected for any reason as determined appropriate to accomplish the purposes of BCAP. Contracts will be for a term of up to five years for annual and non-woody perennial crops and 15 years for woody perennial crops; or time period may vary due to type of crop, agronomic conditions, and other factors. Eligible material owner who enter into a contract with CCC may receive matching payments up to a period of two-years following the first payment for the delivery of eligible material to a qualified biomass conversion facility. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

FSA prepared a Final Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement (PEIS) for BCAP and NOFA and was published in the Federal Register on June 25, 2010 (75 FR 36386). On September 15, 2011, FSA published the BCAP interim rule (76 FR 56949). The BCAP interim rule provided FSA with the authority to prioritize establishment and annual payments (BCAP project areas) and if sufficient funding remains, to consider applications for matching payments. The interim rule also enables prioritization among project area proposals if eligible requests exceed available funding. Future funding for BCAP could make such prioritizing unnecessary. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. In order for a delivery of eligible materials to a biomass conversion facility to qualify for a BCAP payment, the receiving biomass conversion facility must be qualified for BCAP. To become qualified, the biomass conversion facility must enter into an agreement with CCC, through the FSA State office in the State where the facility is physically located. For any facility, whether or not yet in operation, the entity requesting that a facility become qualified must provide proof of all applicable Federal, State, local, and Tribal permits and licenses required for operation or proof of application completions or letters of renewal submissions from the applicable governmental entity. Applicable permits and licenses may include, but are not limited to, business licenses, air quality permits, water discharge permits, storm water permits, or Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives registrations. Each biomass conversion facility must enter into a separate agreement with CCC regardless of whether a single owner has multiple facilities. CCC will issue a unique facility identification number to each qualifying biomass conversion facility. Eligible material owners must apply at an FSA county office and receive approval for that application before delivering the eligible material to the qualified biomass conversion facility. Applications must include the following based on information obtained from contracts, agreements, or binding letters of intent: (1) An estimate of the total dry tons of eligible material expected to be sold to the qualified biomass conversion facility; (2) The type(s) of eligible material that is expected to be sold; (3) The name of the qualified biomass conversion facility that will purchase the eligible material; (4) The expected, fair market, per dry ton payment rate the owner plans to receive for the delivery of the eligible material; (5) The date or dates the eligible material is expected to be delivered to the qualified biomass conversion facility; (6) A new or amended conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan. Eligible material owners who deliver eligible material to more than one qualified biomass conversion facility must submit separate applications for each facility to which eligible material will be delivered. In order to enroll land for Establishment and Annual payments, the participant must enter into a contract with CCC. Only the owners, operators, or tenants of eligible land within a project area that will actually perform the work specified in the contract are eligible to apply for the program. The contract is comprised of: (1) The terms and conditions for participation in BCAP; (2) The conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan; and (3) Any other materials or agreements determined necessary by CCC.

Award Procedure:

Contract approval for matching payments is subject to availability of funds and to eligible material owners completion of required conservation plan, forest stewardship plan or equivalent plan; presentation of proof of material ownership; and compliance with all eligible material provisions. Eligible material owners accepted into the program will receive their matching payments after they provide CCC documentation of deliveries to qualified biomass conversion facilities. Establishment payments will be made based on a determination by CCC that an eligible practice or an identifiable portion exists. Eligible practices are practices specified in the conservation plan, forest stewardship plan, or equivalent plan that meet all standards need to cost-effectively establish annual crops, non-wood perennial crops, and wood perennial crops. Payments will not be more than 75 percent of the cost for establishing a perennial crop for seed and stock costs; planting costs, cost of site preparation for non-industrial forest land; could include but not limited to site preparation for non-tree planting and supplemental or temporary irrigation. Annual payments will be calculated on a per acre basis using market-based rental rates. Rental payment rates will be based on average soil rental rate for cropland and all other agricultural land; marginal pastureland; and for forest land. The first years' payments will be made as an advance in an amount equal to 50 percent with 30 days of contract approval, with the remaining 50 percent being paid within 30 days of the first-year contract anniversary date. Annual payments for subsequent years will be made within 30 days of the contract anniversary beginning with the second-year contract anniversary. If BCAP participants collect both annual and matching payments for their crops, they are subject to a reduction in their annual payment. The size of the reduction depends on the end use of the biomass being delivered to a biomass conversion facility. The annual payment will be reduced by: 1 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to cellulosic biofuels as defined by 40 CFR 80.1401; by 10 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to advanced biofuels; and by 25 percent if the eligible crop is delivered to a biomass conversion facility for conversion to heat, power, or biobased products.

Documentation must also be provided to support the number of livestock in inventory at the time the death occurred. The third party providing the certification must be a reliable source in a position to have knowledge of the dead livestock and shall not be affiliated with the operation such as a hired hand or a family member, etc. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

10.089 LIVESTOCK FORAGE DISASTER PROGRAM

(LFP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Food Conservation and Energy Act of 2008; American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 (ATRA), Public Law 110-246.

OBJECTIVES:

The objective of LFP is to provide financial assistance from the Agricultural Disaster Relief Trust Fund (Trust Fund). The Secretary of Agriculture (henceforth the Secretary) has the authority to use sums from the Trust Fund to provide compensation to livestock producers who suffered grazing losses due to drought or fire. For drought, the losses must have occurred because of a qualifying drought during the normal grazing period for the county on land that is native or improved pastureland with permanent vegetative cover or is planted to a crop planted specifically for grazing covered livestock. For fire, LFP provides payments to eligible livestock producers that have suffered grazing losses on range land managed by a Federal agency if the eligible livestock producer is prohibited by the Federal agency from grazing the normal permitted livestock on the managed range land because of a qualifying fire. Eligible grazing losses must have occurred on or after January 1, 2008, and before October 1, 2011. The eligible grazing losses must occur within the same calendar year for which benefits are being requested.

ATRA provides extending benefits to livestock producers for grazing losses due to drought and wildfires on Federal lands through September 30, 2013, subject to appropriations.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments for Specified Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The assistance can be used to provide financial assistance for grazing losses due to drought equal to one, two, or three times the monthly payment rate to eligible livestock producers if the eligible livestock producer owns or leases a grazing land or pastureland that is physically located in a county that is rated by the U.S. drought Monitor as D2 Drought (severe drought) for at least eight consecutive weeks, D3 (extreme drought) at any time or for four weeks (not necessarily four consecutive weeks), or a D4 (exceptional drought at anytime) during the normal grazing period for the specific type of grazing land or pastureland for the county.

ATRA provides extending benefits to livestock producers for grazing losses due to drought and wildfires on Federal lands through September 30, 2013, subject to appropriations. Eligible livestock producers are eligible to receive assistance if grazing losses due to a fire on Federally managed land if the grazing loss is on range-land managed by a Federal agency such as the Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Indian Affairs or Tribal government and the eligible producer is prohibited by the Federal agency from grazing the normal permitted livestock and/or normal permitted days. Livestock producers are eligible to receive assistance if grazing losses due to drought or fire occur on or after January 1, 2008 and before October 1, 2011.

Applicant Eligibility:

An eligible applicant or livestock producer may use assistance for grazing or fire losses for any specific purpose. Eligible covered livestock includes cattle (including dairy cattle); buffalo/beefalo/ alpacas, deer, elk, emu, equine, goats, llamas, poultry; reindeer, sheep; swine; and other livestock as determined by the Secretary.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Beneficiary eligibility is extended to an eligible livestock producer who is an owner, cash share lessee, a contract grower of covered livestock that provides the pasture land or grazing land (including cash-leased pasture land or grazing land for the livestock) that is physically located in a county affected by drought.

The term "eligible livestock producer" does not include an owner, cash or share lessee, or contract grower of livestock that rents or leases pasture land or grazing land owned by another person on a rate-of-gain basis. The eligible producer on a farm must have during the 60 calendar days before the beginning date of a qualifying drought or fire, owned, cashed or share leased, or been a contract grower of eligible covered livestock. An eligible livestock producer must also be an individual or entity that is a citizen of the United States (U.S.); a resident alien; a partnership of citizens of the U.S.; or a corporation, limited liability corporation, or other farm organizational structure organized under State law. An eligible livestock producer shall only be eligible for assistance if the livestock producer meets the risk management purchase requirement by obtaining a policy or plan of insurance or filed the required paperwork and paid the administrative fee by the applicable State application closing deadline date for the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) for the grazing land crop that incurred the loss for which assistance is being requested. For 2008 only, a waiver was authorized to allow producers to pay a buy-in fee or receive a waiver by September 16, 2008, for grazing land for which the producer did not obtain a policy or plan of insurance for 2008. The risk management purchase requirement will be waived for producers who are considered to be a socially disadvantaged farmer or rancher, limited resource farmer or rancher, or beginning farmer or rancher.

Credentials/Documentation:

A livestock producer must certify that they have a grazing loss due to drought or fire. There is no minimum loss percentage required by the producer. A livestock producer must provide an FSA-925 (LFP application for payment) in their administrative FSA county office along with required supporting documents.

Supporting Documentation includes: CCC-502 Farm Operating Plan for Payment Eligibility Review, applicable for 2008 calendar year. CCC-901 Members Information 2009 and Subsequent Years, applicable for 2009 and subsequent years. AD-1026 - Highly Erodible Land Conservation and Wetland Conservation Certification, applicable for 2008, 2009, 2010, and 2011. CCC-526 Payment Eligibility Average Adjusted Gross Income Certification for 2008. CCC-926 Average Adjusted Gross Income Statement for 2009 and Subsequent Years. Copy of contract grower contract. Report of acreage for the grazing land is owned or leased. Evidence that grazing land is owned or leased. Evidence of meeting risk management purchase requirement or an approved waiver. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110.

Award Procedure:

Payment Eligibility for Losses Due To Drought. An eligible livestock producer will be eligible to receive payments for grazing losses for qualifying drought equal to one, two, or three times the monthly payment rate. Total LFP payments to an eligible producer in a calendar year for grazing losses due to a qualifying drought will not exceed three monthly payments for the same livestock. To be eligible for a one month payment, the eligible livestock producer must own or lease grazing land or pastureland that is physically located in a county that is rated by the U.S. Drought Monitor as having at least a D2 severe drought (intensity) in any area of the county for at least 8 consecutive weeks during the normal grazing period for the specific type of grazing land or pastureland in the county. To be eligible for a two month payment, the eligible livestock producer must own or lease grazing land or pastureland that is physically located in a county that is rated by the U.S. Drought Monitor as having at least a D3 extreme drought (intensity) in any area of the county at any time during the normal grazing period for the specific type of grazing land or pastureland for the county. To be eligible for a three month payment, the eligible livestock producer must own or lease grazing land or pastureland that is physically located in a county that is rated by the U.S. Drought Monitor as having at least a D3 extreme drought (intensity) in any area of the county for at least four weeks during the normal grazing period for the specific type of grazing land or pastureland for the county, or is rated as having a D4 exceptional drought (intensity) in any area of the county at any time during the normal grazing period for the specific type of grazing land or pastureland for the county. The monthly payment rate for grazing losses due to a qualifying drought for producers who suffer grazing losses on grazing lands located in a county due to drought will be equal to 60 percent of the lesser of the monthly feed cost for all covered livestock owned or leased by the eligible livestock producer or the monthly feed cost calculated using the normal carrying capacity of the eligible grazing land of the eligible livestock producer. If an eligible livestock producer sold or otherwise disposed of covered livestock due to a qualifying drought in one or both of the two production year immediately preceding the current production year, the payment rate is 80 percent of the monthly payment rate. Payment Eligibility For Losses Due To Fire. Livestock producers who suffer grazing losses on grazing lands managed by a Federal agency due to a fire, will receive a payment equal to 50 percent of the monthly feed cost for the number of days the producer is prohibited from grazing the managed range-land because of the qualifying fire, not to exceed 180 calendar days. The payment begins on the first day the permitted livestock are prohibited from grazing the eligible range-land and ending on the earlier of the last day of the Federal lease of the eligible livestock producer or the day that would make the period a 180 calendar day period. ATRA provides extending benefits to livestock producers for grazing losses due to drought and wildfires on Federal lands through September 30, 2013, subject to appropriations. Payments for these losses will not occur if funds are not appropriated.

Deadlines:

Dec 10, 2009 To apply for LFP, producers that suffer eligible grazing losses during 2008 must file FSA-925 and required supporting documentation by no later than December 10, 2009. Producers that suffer eligible grazing losses during 2009 and later years must submit a completed FSA-925 and supporting documentation to the administrative FSA county office no later than 30 calendar days after the end of the calendar year in which the grazing loss occurs. Late filed applications will not be accepted.

10.090 SUPPLEMENTAL REVENUE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

SURE

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Trade Act of 1974, Section 902, Public Law 93-618; The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA), Public Law 111-5; The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (The Farm Bill), Title XII, Part B, Section 12033, Public Law 110-246, 7 U.S.C 1501; The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, Title XV, Section 15101, Public Law 110-246.

OBJECTIVES:

The objective of the SURE program is to provide financial assistance for farm revenue losses due to natural disaster. Assistance is provided from the Agricultural Disaster Relief Trust Fund (Trust Fund) established under Public Law 110-246. The Secretary of Agriculture (henceforth the Secretary) has the authority to use the Trust Fund to make crop disaster assistance payments to eligible producers on farms in disaster counties whose actual production is less than 50 percent of their normal production. A disaster county means a county included in the geographic area covered by a qualifying natural disaster declaration by the Secretary. SURE is the 2008 Farm Bill's successor to the prior Crop Disaster Programs. SURE is legislated through fiscal year 2011.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

SURE assistance can provide benefit payments to eligible producers who have suffered eligible crop losses due to a natural disaster. To be eligible for crop loss assistance, a producer must show that the actual production on the farm for at least one crop of economic significance is reduced for at least 10 percent due to disaster, adverse weather, or disaster-related conditions. Payment limitations apply for SURE. For 2008, no person may receive more than $100,000 total for the 2008 program year under the Emergency Assistance for Livestock, Honeybees, and Farm Raised Fish Program (ELAP), Livestock Forage Disaster Program (LFP), Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP), and SURE. For 2009 and subsequent program years, no person or legal entity, excluding joint ventures and general partnerships may receive, directly or indirectly, more than $100,000 total per program year under ELAP, LFP, LIP and SURE. Producers or legal entities whose average adjusted gross income (AGI) exceeds $2.5 million in crop year 2008 shall not be eligible for benefit payments unless 75 percent or more of the income is from agriculture. For 2009 and subsequent years, the average AGI income cap changes to $500,000 of non-farm income, with no on-farm income cap. SURE assistance will be provided to an eligible producer in the amount equal to 60 percent of the difference between the SURE Guarantee and the total farm revenue. The SURE guarantee for the farm cannot be greater than 90 percent of the total of the normal production of the farm. There are specific eligibility criteria a producer must meet before becoming eligible for assistance. To be eligible, a producer (for all of the farming operation's crops that are planted or intended nationwide) must have obtained a policy or plan of crop insurance such as Catastrophic Risk Protection (CAT) for all insurable crops and/or Non-insured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) coverage for non-insurable crops that are of economic significance. However, statute does not require coverage for grazed crops for the SURE program. Sales closing dates for insurance and application closing dates for NAP have passed for the 2008 crop year for all insurable and non-insurable crops. A waiver was authorized in Public Law 110-246 to allow producers to pay within 90 calendar days of the enactment, a buy-in-fee to be eligible for Supplemental Agricultural Disaster Assistance for crops for which the producer did not obtain crop insurance or NAP coverage for 2008. The administrative service fee is equal to the lesser of $100 per crop per county, or $300 per producer per county, not to exceed $900 per multi-county producer. The final date for the buy-in fee was September 16, 2008. The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (ARRA), Public Law 111-5, authorized an additional waiver which allows producers another opportunity to pay a buy-in-fee for 2008 Supplemental Agricultural Disaster Assistance. The buy-in fee must be paid within 90 calendar days of the enactment of ARRA. The buy-in fee is $100 per crop, but not more than $300 per producer per administrative county, or $900 total per producer for all counties less any previously paid fees for NAP relief and other buy-in. Producers must buy-in for all non-insurable and insurable crops that are not already covered by NAP, crop insurance, or meet the previous waivers. The fee is nonrefundable and due at the time a producer files FSA-752 and/or FSA-753. Crop insurance and NAP coverage are not a requirement if the producer is considered a Socially Disadvantaged, Limited Resource, or Beginning Farmer or Rancher.

Applicant Eligibility:

An eligible applicant or eligible "producer on a farm", is an individual or entity who assumes the production and market risks associated with the agricultural production of crops or livestock. An individual or entity is a citizen of the United States (U.S.), a resident alien, or a partnership of citizens of the U.S.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

The SURE program will provide financial assistance to an eligible producer on a farm who has insurable or noninsurable commodity or agricultural commodity (except livestock) for which the producer on a farm is eligible to obtain a policy or plan of insurance. Benefits are also extended to the Socially Disadvantaged Farmer or Rancher who has been subject to racial or ethnic prejudice because of his or her identity as members of a group without regard to their individual qualities; a beginning farmer or rancher who has not operated a farm or ranch for more than 10 years and materially and substantially participates in the operation; and limited resource producer with direct or indirect gross farm sales not more than $100,000 in both of the previous two years, adjusted upwards for any general inflation since fiscal year 2004, and if the total household income is at or below the national poverty level for a family of four or less than 50 percent of county median household income in both of the previous two years.

Credentials/Documentation:

An eligible producer must provide a total crop acreage report (FSA-578) including crops on cropland and non-cropland in all counties that the producer has interest. The total farm acreage report includes native and improved grass that will be hayed or grazed, all grazing land and uninsurable land by either crop insurance or NAP coverage and file an AD-1026.

Award Procedure:

The applicant will submit the required forms to applicants local FSA office. Applications will be reviewed and the award will be distributed based on 60 percent of the difference of the SURE guarantee and total farm revenue calculation. Total farm revenue include estimated crop value, crop insurance indemnities, NAP payments, Market Assistance Loan proceeds, other disaster payments, DCP payments (15% of direct payments, plus all Counter-Cyclical and ACRE payments. To assist farmers and ranches in evaluating their options with SURE, USDA has created a SURE calculator. To utilize the calculator, visit the website www.fsa.usda.gov. 10.091 EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE FOR LIVESTOCK, HONEYBEES, AND FARM-RAISED FISH PROGRAM

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012, Public Law 112-240, 7 U.S.C 702; The Trade Act of 1974, Public Law 19-2497, 19 U.S.C 2010.

OBJECTIVES:

The objective of ELAP is to provide emergency assistance to eligible producers of livestock, honeybees, and farm-raised fish who have losses due to disease, adverse weather, or other conditions, including losses due to blizzards and wildfires, as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture (Secretary). Assistance is provided from the Trust Fund established under Public Law 110-246. ELAP assistance is for losses not covered under other Supplemental Agricultural Disaster Assistance Payment programs specifically Livestock Forage Program (LFP), Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP), and the Supplemental Assistance Program (SURE). ELAP is authorized for fiscal years 2008 through September 30, 2011. The American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 extended authority for ELAP under the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (the 2008 Farm Bill) for the 2012 and 2013 fiscal years. However, for 2012 and 2013 fiscal years funding has not been appropriated for ELAP.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments for Specified Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

ELAP covers losses occurring on or after January 1, 2008 and before October 1, 2011. Public Law 110-246, Sections 12033 and 15101, authorized the Secretary to provide payments to producers of livestock, honeybees, and farm-raised fish to aid in the reduction of losses due to disease, adverse weather, or other conditions such as blizzards and wildfires. ELAP also covers some species, loss conditions, and losses that are not eligible for other disaster assistance programs, including colony collapse disorder and wildfires on non-Federal land. The American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 extended authority for ELAP under the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (the 2008 Farm Bill) for the 2012 and 2013 fiscal years. However, for 2012 and 2013 fiscal years funding has not been appropriated for ELAP. Assistance will be granted only to eligible livestock, honeybee, and farm-raised producers. ELAP benefits, compensation, or relief will be strictly used to compensate eligible losses. For program year 2008, no person may receive more than $100,000 total in payments under ELAP, LFP, LIP, SURE, combined. For 2009 and subsequent program years, no person or legal entity may receive directly or indirectly, more than $100,000 total in payments under ELAP, LFP, LIP, and SURE combined.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be considered an eligible applicant, the participant must be a producer or contract grower of livestock, honeybee, or farm-raised fish that assumes the production and market risks associated with the agricultural production of crops or livestock on a farm and that meet the requirements to receive ELAP payments.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Eligible producers of livestock, honeybees, and farm-raised fish will receive the ultimate benefits from ELAP. An eligible producer of livestock must have owned, cash-leased, purchased, entered into a contract to purchase, or been a contract grower of eligible livestock during the 60 days prior to the beginning date of the eligible adverse weather or eligible loss condition. To be considered an eligible honeybee producer, a participant must have an interest and risk in the eligible honeybee colony, for the purpose of producing honey or pollination for commercial use as part of a farming operation. To be considered an eligible farm-raised fish producer the participant must have produced eligible farm-raised fish, with the intent to harvest for commercial use as part of a farming operation.

Credentials/Documentation:

Risk Management Purchase Requirement (RMPR). For every commodity on every farm in which the producer has an interest for the relevant program year, the producer must obtain catastrophic coverage (CAT) or better under a policy or plan of insurance administered under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (FCIA). In the case of non-insurable commodity, the producer must obtain the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) coverage by filing the required paperwork and paying the administrative fee by the applicable state application closing date, except this requirement will not include forage on grazing land. Due to the lateness of P.L. 110-246, producers were allowed to "buy-in" to the ELAP for 2008 by paying fees equivalent to the NAP service fee or CAT fee by September 16, 2008. If a producer who is otherwise ineligible because of the purchase requirement and did not meet the buy-in deadline of September 16, 2008, still may be eligible for ELAP if the producer paid the applicable fee no later than May 18, 2009.

For 2009, the RMPR was waived for insurable crops where sales closing dates for crop insurance coverage occurred before August 14, 2008, if the buy-in fee was paid by January 12, 2009. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Producers are required to obtain CAT or NAP coverage prior to applying for ELAP benefits. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. To apply for ELAP, the participant that suffered eligible livestock, honeybee, or farm-raised fish losses must submit to the FSA administrative county office that maintains the participant's farm records the following: 1. A Notice of Loss for calendar years 2008 and 2009 must be provided no later than May 5, 2010 and for subsequent year losses, the producer must provide a notice of loss to FSA the earlier of 30 calendar days of when the loss is apparent to the producer or 30 calendar days after the end of the calendar year in which the loss occurred. 2. A complete application for payment no later than May 5, 2010 for calendar years 2008 and 2009 and for subsequent crop years, January 30, after the year in which the loss occurred.

Award Procedure:

Livestock payment calculations will be based on losses for no more than 90 days during the calendar year. ELAP payments for feed losses will be based on 60 percent of the producers actual cost for livestock feed, that was purchased or mechanically harvested for forage or feedstuffs; the additional cost incurred for providing or transporting livestock feed or to purchase additional livestock feed above normal to maintain the eligible livestock due to an eligible adverse weather or eligible loss condition. Grazing losses will be calculated based on 60 percent of the lesser of the total value of the feed cost for all covered livestock based on the number of days grazing was lost, not to exceed 90 days of daily feed cost for all covered livestock or the total value of grazing lost for all eligible livestock based on the normal carrying capacity of the eligible grazing land. Livestock death losses will be calculated by multiplying the national payment rate for each livestock category times the number of eligible livestock that died in each category as a result of an eligible loss condition in excess of normal mortality. ELAP payments for honeybee losses will be based on 60 percent of the actual cost of honeybee feed that was damaged or destroyed and intended as feed for an eligible honeybee colony. Payments for honeybee colony losses will be based on 60 percent of the average fair market value of the honey bee colonies in the year in which the loss occurred times the number of honey bee colonies that were damaged or destroyed. Payments for honeybee hive losses will be based on 60 percent of the average fair market value of the honey bee hives in the year in which the loss occurred, times the number of honey bee hives that were damaged or destroyed due to an eligible adverse weather or eligible loss condition. ELAP payments for eligible farm-raised fish feed losses are based on 60 percent of the actual cost of purchased or harvested feed that was intended as feed for eligible farm-raised fish and was damaged because of an eligible adverse weather or loss condition in the calendar year in which the loss occurred. Payments for farm-raised fish death losses will be based on 60 percent of the State's average fair market value of the bait or game fish times the number of bait or game fish lost due to an eligible adverse weather or loss condition.

10.093 VOLUNTARY PUBLIC ACCESS AND HABITAT INCENTIVE PROGRAM

(VPA-HIP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Food Security Act of 1985, Public Law 99-198, 15 U.S.C 714b and 714c.

OBJECTIVES:

The primary objective of the VPA-HIP is to encourage owners and operators of privately-held farm, ranch, and forest land to voluntarily make that land available for access by the public for wildlife-dependent recreation, including hunting or fishing, under programs implemented by state or tribal governments.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Formula Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The funding provided by the VPA-HIP will help states and tribal governments address many issues that can greatly increase access and recreational experiences. Grant recipients will be able to use the funding to provide higher rental payments, provide technical and conservation services to landowners, and increase acreage enrolled for public access. Twenty-six states have public access programs for hunting, fishing, and other related activities. These programs provide rental payments and other incentives, such as technical or conservation services to landowners who allow the public to hunt, fish, or otherwise appropriately recreate on their land. Section 726 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012, effectively ended any new obligations, or modifications to existing obligations, under VPA-HIP. Only state and tribal governments are eligible to directly receive VPA-HIP grants.

Applicant Eligibility:

Only States and Tribal governments are eligible for VPA-HIP. An eligible State government means any State or local government, including State, city, town, or county government. An eligible Tribal Government means any Federally-recognized Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group, or community, including pueblos, rancherias, colonies and any Alaska Native Village, or regional or village corporation as defined in or establish pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C 1601-1629H), which is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

The beneficiary eligibility is extended to the public for the purposes of expanding existing public access programs or create new public access programs or provide incentives to improve habitat on enrolled program lands. Proposals for grant money should be submitted to the local State or Tribal governments by owners and operators of privately-held farm, ranch, and forest land. An eligible owner is one who has legal ownership of farmland. An eligible operator (individual, entity, or joint operation) who is determined by the FSA county committee to be in control of the farming operations on the farm. For the purposes of receiving grant money, an appropriate wildlife habitat should be suitable or proper, as determined by the applicable State or tribal government, to support fish and wildlife populations in the area. A eligible farmland or ranch land means the sum of the Direct and Counter-Cyclical (DCP) cropland, forest, acreage planted to an eligible crop acreage and other land on the farm. Eligible forest land is at least 120 feet wide and one acre in size with at least 10 percent cover (or equivalent stocking) by live trees of any size, including land that formerly had such tree cover and that will be naturally or artificially regenerated. Forest land includes transition zones, such as areas between forest and nonforest lands that have at least 10 percent cover (or equivalent stocking) with live trees and forest areas adjacent to urban and built-up lands. Roadside, streamside, and shelterbelt strips of trees must have a crown width of at least 120 feet and continuous length of at least 363 feet to qualify as forest land. Unimproved roads and trails, streams, and clearings in forest areas are classified as forest if they are less than 120 feet wide or an acre in size. Tree-covered areas in agricultural production settings, such as fruit orchards, or tree-covered areas in urban settings, such as city parks, are not considered forest land. Eligible privately-held land means farm, ranch, or forest land that is owned or operated by an individual or entity that is not an entity of any government unit or Tribe.

Credentials/Documentation:

Funding priority will be given to proposals that will use the grant money in a public access program to address these objectives: Maximize participation by landowners; Ensure that land enrolled in the program has appropriate wildlife habitat; Provide incentives to strengthen wildlife habitat improvement efforts on Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP) land; Supplement funding and services from other federal, state, tribal government or private resource that is provided in the form of cash or in-kind services; and Provide information to the public about the location of public access land. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. CCC will issue periodic Request for Applications (RFA) on the federal government grants portal www.grants.gov. Applicants must file an original and one hard copy of the required forms and an application. A State or tribal government must include all proposed activity under a single application per RFA review period. Multiple applications from an applicant during a single RFA period will not be considered. The applicant is the individual State or Tribe; any application from any unit of the State or tribal government must be coordinated for a single submission of one application from the State or Tribe. Incomplete applications will not be considered for funding. However, incomplete applications may be returned, and may be resubmitted, if time permits. Data furnished by grant applicants will be used to determine eligibility for the VPA-HIP benefits. Furnishing the data is voluntary; however, the failure to provide data could result in program benefits being withheld or denied. The following forms must be completed, signed, and submitted as part of the application; other forms may be required, as specified in the applicable RFA: 1. Application for Federal Assistance; 2. Budget Information-Non-Construction Programs; and 3. Assurances-Non-Construction Programs.

Each application must contain the following elements; additional required elements may be specified in the applicable RFA: Title page; Table of contents; Executive summary, which includes activities which provide a summary of the application that briefly describes activities proposed to be funded under this grant; objectives, funding, performance which includes the tasks to be accomplished, the amount of funding requested, how the work will be performed, whether organizational staff, consultants or contractors will be used, and whether other resources will be used.

Award Procedure:

Grants will awarded through a competitive RFA process. Before receiving grant funding, the grantee will be required to sign an agreement similar in form and substance to the form of agreement published within or as an appendix to the RFA. The agreement will require the grantee to commit to do all the following:

1. Take all practicable steps to develop continuing sources of financial support from other Federal, State, tribal government, or private resources;
2. Make arrangements for the monitoring and evaluation of the activities related to implementation of the public access program of the owners or operators that enroll farm, ranch, and forest land; and
3. Provide an accounting for the money received by the grantee. The grantee will be required to monitor funds or services as specified and must agree to that monitoring before grant funds are awarded. The grantee must also certify that the grant funds and services will not be used for ineligible purposes.

OBJECTIVES:

The Durum Wheat Quality Program (DWQP) compensates producers of durum wheat for up to 50 percent of the actual cost of fungicide applied to control Fusarium head blight (FHB), commonly known as wheat scab, for fiscal years (FY) 2009 through 2012, subject to availability of funding.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The assistance will be used to compensate producers of durum wheat. Cost share assistance will be used to compensate producers for 50 percent of their share of both the purchase price of an eligible fungicide and the cost of applying the eligible fungicide to durum wheat acres.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be considered an eligible producer for DWQP, the producer must have a share in the treated durum wheat crop planted on eligible acres, have a share in the cost of either or both of purchasing an eligible fungicide or applying an eligible fungicide to eligible acres.

An eligible fungicide for DWQP must be registered with EPA, as required under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), unless exempt from FIFRA requirements, compliant with pesticide regulations in the State in which benefits are being requested, and used specifically for one fungicide treatment in the applicable crop year, to control FHB on eligible acres.

An eligible acre for DWQP must be planted to durum wheat and treated with an eligible fungicide, to specifically control FHB and applied during the flowering stage, the period of time during the wheat growth stage after the head emergence has completed and before milk development in the kernel.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Subject to available funding, eligible producers of durum wheat will be partially compensated for the cost of purchasing and applying fungicides to a crop of durum wheat to control Fusarium head blight on acres accurately certified as planted to durum wheat.

The following types of documentation are under consideration as acceptable proof of fungicide purchases:

- 1) original commercial sales and purchase receipts for an eligible fungicide
- 2) original invoices from licensed custom applicators that explicitly specify the cost of an eligible fungicide.

All supporting documentation must be completed by the participant and on file in the County Office before CCC-551 may be approved. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

RTCP

FEDERAL AGENCY:

Farm Service Agency, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, Title I, Section 1621, Public Law 110-246, as amended by Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2013, Section 720, Public Law 113-6.

OBJECTIVES:

The intended goal of the program is to provide direct reimbursement payments to a geographically disadvantaged farmer or rancher who transports an agricultural commodity, or inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity during a fiscal year. Input transportation cost are transportation costs of inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity including, but not limited to, air, ocean, and land freight of chemicals, feed, fertilizer, fuel, seeds, plants, supplies, equipment parts, and other inputs.

The Farm Service Agency (FSA), Deputy Administrator for Farm Programs (DAFP) administers RTCP. The program will be carried out in the field by FSA State and county committee and FSA employees. State and local governments and their political subdivisions and related agencies are not eligible for RTCP payments.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Direct Payments with Unrestricted Use

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

RTCP provides monetary assistance to geographically disadvantaged farmers and ranchers by reimbursing them for a portion of the transportation cost of their agricultural commodity, or transported inputs used to produce an agricultural commodity during the fiscal year. The payments provided by RTCP are intended to offset a portion of the high cost of transporting inputs for production purposes and transporting products to markets.

The types of transportation rates used to determine reimbursable amounts are:

- (1) Actual transportation rates which are based on the actual costs incurred by the applicant and must be determined in all cases from verifiable records.
- (2) Fixed transportation rates are determined by FSA and will establish per unit transportation costs for each eligible commodity or input used to produce the eligible commodity.
- (3) Set transportation rates are established for those transportation costs that are not on the FSA list of fixed rates and for which a actual rate cannot be documented. They will be set by FSA based on available data of transportation costs similar commodities and inputs.

Applicant Eligibility:

To be eligible to receive program benefits, a geographically disadvantaged farmer or rancher must:

- (1) Be a producer of an eligible agricultural commodity in substantial commercial quantities
- (2) Incur transportation costs for the transportation of the agricultural commodity or input used to produce the agriculture commodity
- (3) Submit an application for payment during the specified period applicable for each fiscal year.
- (4) Be in compliance with conservation and wetland protection requirements on all their land
- (5) Be a citizen of or legal resident alien of the U.S.

Eligible commodities include any agricultural commodity (including horticulture, aquaculture, and floriculture) food, feed, fiber, livestock (including elk, reindeer, bison, horses, and deer), insects or products thereof.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

The U.S. farmers and ranchers outside the continental U.S.(the 48 contiguous U.S.) receive the ultimate benefit from the program because they operate at a competitive disadvantage relative to farmers and ranchers in the continental U.S. This disadvantage is due to the high cost of transporting agricultural commodities from those areas to markets in the continental U.S. and in other countries, and the high cost of transporting agricultural inputs to those areas.

Geographically disadvantage farmers and ranchers located in Hawaii, Alaska, or an insular area such as the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, the Republic of Palau, and the Virgin Islands of the U.S. are the primary beneficiaries.

Credentials/Documentation:

Each producer requesting payment must certify to the accuracy and truthfulness of the information in their application and any supporting documentation. Producers who submit actual costs for reimbursement at the actual cost rate, must provide verifiable records.Failure or refusal to allow FSA to verify the information provided will result in a denial of eligibility. Furnishing the information is voluntary; however, without it program benefits will not be approved. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is not applicable. Environmental impact information is not required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. An application for payment must be submitted on a completed application form. Applications and any other supporting documentation must be submitted to the FSA county office that services the county where the agricultural operation is located, but, in any case, must be received by the FSA county office by the close of business on the last day of the application period established by the Deputy Administrator.

An application received after the close of business after the application period will not be eligible for benefits.

Award Procedure:

Eligibility reimbursement amount will be calculated by multiplying the number of units of the reported transportation amount times the applicable transportation fixed, set, or actual rate times the applicable non-foreign area cost of living allowance or post differential (COLA).

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

10.200 GRANTS FOR AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH, SPECIAL RESEARCH GRANTS

Special Research Grants (SRGP)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 2 (c), Public Law 89-106, 7 U.S.C. 450i(c), as amended.

OBJECTIVES:

To carry out research, to facilitate or expand promising breakthroughs in areas of the food and agricultural sciences of importance to the nation and to facilitate or expand on-going State-Federal food and agricultural research programs.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences. Awards are generally limited to high priority problems of a regional or national scope. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Funds shall not be used for tuition remission.

Indirect Costs are generally not allowable for this program.

Generally, there are no matching requirements associated with Special Research Grant programs and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

Please refer to RFA, Part IV.D. Applications Funding Restrictions for specific details.

Exceptions to the general rules, as related to Indirect Cost and matching requirements, are indicated below, as deemed appropriate and necessary.

The following programs are EXCEPTIONS to the general rules:

- (1) Critical Agricultural Materials (Pub. L. 95-592)
- (2) Federal Administration - Research
- (3) Pest Management Alternatives (aka PMAP)
- (4) Supplemental and Alternative Crops [7 U.S.C. 3319d (c)].
- (5) Policy Research Centers (Section 1419A of 7 U.S.C. 3155) and
- (6) Rangeland Research

For the above-referenced EXCEPTIONS to the general rule, [i.e. #'s (1) thru (5)], the following provisions are applicable:

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardees' indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent.

Exception # 6:

For the Rangeland Research program the following provisions are applicable: Per 7 CFR 3401.5, Indirect Cost is allowable if the award is made to a Federal lab.

Pursuant to Section 1480 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 as amended [7 USC 3333(b)(1)], applicants are required to provide 50 percent matching funds from non-federal sources for all proposed Federal funds sought in the application. Non-federal matching contributions, such as cash and third party in kind, are accepted under this program as qualified by 7 USC 3015 and 7 USC 3019. Foregone indirect costs cannot be used as part of the required match. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: (A) Expert IPM Decision Support System:

For the FY 2012 award cycle, NIFA had $141,544 available for a project grant award after subtracting administrative costs.

NIFA received one application requesting a total of $143,000. In August 2012, a three-member peer review panel evaluated this application. The peer panel included faculty from land grant universities and federal agency scientists from the agricultural sciences community.

Funds were available to support one award.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 was 100%.

Funded projects should support development of expert systems that help guide, demonstrate and multiply impacts of USDA supported Integrated Pest Management (IPM) programs.

(B) Global Change, UV-B Monitoring

The program made one non-competitive award to operate and manage USAs ultraviolet radiation climatology network, and to conduct, in collaboration with other institution, research on ultraviolet radiation effects on agriculturally relevant crops. Coupled with economic models, effects research and simulations will enable us to project regional and national climate change impacts on agriculture.

(C) Integrated Pest Management & Biological Control

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(D) Interregional Research Project # 4 - Minor Crop Pest Management (IR-4) Program

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $11,073,505 was awarded in the IR-4 program. A diverse peer review panel reviewed the 5 applications from the 5 regions and recommended funding for all 5 projects. Funds support research on pesticides for use in specialty crops and minor crops.

(E) Pest Management Alternatives

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $1,479,427 was awarded in the Pest Management Alternatives program. The program received 40 applications. A diverse panel reviewed the applications and a total of 7 awards were made. The success rate was 17.5%. Funds were used to support projects that reduce herbicide use and reduce pesticide use in agricultural crops and in connection with agriculturally important animals..

(F) Other - Potato Breeding Research

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $1,238,000 was available for this program.

A total of four applications, requesting a total of $1,642,995, were received in this years competition. On June 8, 2012, a five-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty from land grant colleges and universities, and an ARS national program leader.

Funds were available to support a total of four awards.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 was 100 %.

Funded projects should support potato (Solanum tuberosum L.) research programs that focus on varietal development and testing and potato varieties for commercial production. Aspects of evaluation, screening and testing must support variety development.

NOTE:

Obligations reported under Other Special Research Grants

(G) Critical Agricultural Materials

The Critical Agricultural Materials program supports biobased product development, demonstration, and validation of performance under operational field conditions. The program specifically targets paints, coatings, and adhesives produced from agricultural materials that are of strategic and industrial importance to benefit the economy, defense, and general well-being of the Nation. Many of these products replace petroleum-based counterparts; offering the opportunity to create new businesses and markets for agricultural communities.

In FY 2012, the program was funded with $1 Million, 15 applications were received and two awards were made:

1. Soy-based Functional Building Blocks for Sustainable Advanced Coatings
2. Dried Distiller Grain Based Polymer Dispersions for Paper Coatings

(H) Aquaculture Centers

The program involves five distinct regional aquaculture centers that administer a competitive regional grant awards process with priority topics and problem statements identified by industry advisory committees. Some funded proposals are developed by regional work groups with open participation by qualified institutions. The programs have contributed to addressing high priority needs to advance sustainable aquaculture development in the Nation across a diversity of farmed aquatic species, production systems and aquatic environments. The program is particularly effective in soliciting real-world problems from industry representatives and fostering regional and multi-institutional project team building to address high priority industry needs. Regional proposals are funded by a rigorous and competitive peer-review process.

(I) Supplemental and Alternative Crops (aka Canola Research)

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $780,000 was available for this program. Maximum award size is $210,000.

A total of 6 applications requesting a total of $ 1, 203,229 were received in this years competition. In June 2012, a four-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty and administrators from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

Funds were available to support a total of 4 awards.

The funding ratio for this program in FY11 was 66 %.

Funded projects should address research to develop canola as a viable supplemental and alternative crop in the United States; involve stakeholders in priority setting, project development and implementation; include multi-state cooperation; and complement research being conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service (ARS). Extension, education, and communication activities related to the research must be addressed.

(J) Policy Research Centers (aka Agriculture and Rural Policy Research)

Available funds: $3,840,000
Total funds requested: $23,998,415
Total number of applications: 32
Number of awards: 5
Funding ratio: 16%

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $ 3,840,000 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 32 applications requesting a total of $23,998,415 were received in this year's competition. In February 2012, a 8-member peer review panel and panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty from land grant and colleges and universities, individuals from federal agencies and a practitioner from the agricultural policy community.

Funds were available to support a total of 5 awards for Policy Research Centers.

Purpose of centers: Centers will include the development or enhancement of existing capacity to perform public policy analysis. Funds will support development of theoretical and empirical research methods and models to evaluate and quantify the economic impact of existing or proposed alternative policies and regulations on the agricultural sector, consumers, the environment and taxpayers, (as appropriate). Approaches may include econometric or large-scale simulation models which provide baseline and outlook projections of near- and long-term economic activity and policy impacts. Funding may also be used to collect, analyze, and disseminate data for policy makers, analysts, and individuals. Finally, centers should include training opportunities for developing public policy analytical skills for new analysts.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 was 16%.

(K) Rangeland Research Program (aka Joe Skeen Institute for Rangeland Restoration)

For the FY 2012 award cycle, approximately $897,000 was available from NIFA for project grant after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 11 applications requesting approximately $4.6 Million were received in this year's competition. In August 2012, a 5-member peer review panel evaluated these applications virtually. The peer panel included research and extension faculty from EpSCOR, Hispanic Serving land grant universities. Panelists were geographically, culturally and gender diverse.

Funds were available to support a total of 2 awards (approximately $440,000 each) in one of the following Project Priorities:

(1) Rangeland Restoration emphasis on evaluating the optimal combination of management methodologies and technologies that result in the establishment, after drastic disturbance, of functional plant communities providing the products and services desired from rangeland ecosystems. The focus should be placed on research integrated with outreach to restore degraded rangeland, enhance overall soil quality, increase biomass productivity, retain and enlarge wildlife habitat, and improve water and air quality.

(2) Management of Rotational Grazing identification and evaluation of the role of management on the effectiveness of rotational grazing. Management decisions can be informed by an understanding of the spatial variability of rangeland pastures, grazing activity, and use of information technology and spatial monitoring in livestock systems, among other contributions to elevate pasture utilization.

The funding ratio for this program in FY11 was 18%.

(L) Forest Products Research Program

For the FY 2012 award cycle, the amount of $1.35M was appropriated by Congress and the amount of $1.25M was available for grant awards after subtracting administrative costs and others.

Four applications received awards in the amount of $1,249,889 out of 21 applications. A 5-member peer review panel evaluated the applications in June 2012. The peer review panel though small was so diverse that it included two females, one minority and three white males. All panelists but one came from the academia. The only non-academic came from government (federal) research.

The funding ratio for this program was 19%.

Funds were available to support multi-institutional and multi-functional type of projects. The four funded applications addressed three of the four stakeholder-driven priority areas;

(J) Policy Research Centers (aka Agriculture and Rural Policy Research)

Several highly policy briefs were developed and presented by many of the centers. Examples include:

(1) How Does Domestic Food Assistance Affect Rural and Urban Household Incomes? In this brief, the focus is on the increases to household income generated by SNAP payments. Specifically, we highlight SNAPs impact on household incomes in the Portland urban core and rural periphery, and in low-income, middle-income and high-income households in these economies.

(2) What Can be Done to Reinvigorate U.S. Agricultural Research? This brief describes the evolving patterns of support for public agricultural and food R&D, the shifting emphasis of spending within the broad portfolio, and some potential policy approaches to revitalize U.S. agricultural research.

(3) Safety Assessment of Genetically Engineered Foods: US Policy & Current Science.

Summary of findings:

Safety of GE foods is evaluated through the U.S. Food and Drug Administrations voluntary consultation process.

The FDA can take action if food, including GE food, presents a demonstrable safety risk post-market.

GE safety studies focus on toxicity, adverse nutritional changes, allergenicity and horizontal gene transfer.

Scientific studies testing whole GE food show some mixed results so statements about all GE foods being safe or unsafe are unwarranted.

Whole-food feeding studies for GE safety assessment are tricky, as plant varieties are diverse in chemical composition and the effect of the introduced genes or changes caused by them are hard to tease out.

Strong agreement exists for better testing protocols, especially for allergenicity and whole-food feeding trials.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: (A) Expert IPM Decision Support System:

Only one (1) project was funded to support all integrated pest management (IPM) stakeholders by providing access through interconnected online IPM databases to research, extension and education priorities; program and project outputs; logic model-based program reports; and program impacts. Redesign and integrate two important existing sites, ipmcenters.org and IPM.gov.

(B) Global Change, UV-B Monitoring

The USDA has long been concerned about high levels of ultraviolet radiation from the Sun, which are known to have harmful effects on agricultural crops, rangelands, forest ecosystems, humans, and livestock. The purpose of this program is to support research which:

generates an uninterrupted stream of climatology data;
determines mechanisms and symptoms of plant and animal response; and applies tightly integrated crop and climate models to assess regional and national impacts (both biological and economic) of multiple plant stressors.

(C) Integrated Pest Management & Biological Control

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(D) Interregional Research Project # 4 - Minor Crop Pest Management (IR-4) Program

Interregional Research Project No. 4. Minor Crop Pest Management for the North Central Region - This project will continue to support the North Central Regional IR-4 Center. Since the plant protection industry has little economic incentive to develop registrations for specialty crop chemicals, IR-4 develops the data that provide legal, effective, safe and IPM-compatible pest control agents for minor and specialty crops. Without this program, many specialty crops could no longer be produced in the US or would be greatly compromised in cost and quality. This projects objectives for minor and specialty crops are to obtain pesticide clearances for food uses, further the development and adoption of biopesticides, and conduct research to protect ornamental crops. There are five regions that can apply for IR-4 funding.

(E) Pest Management Alternatives

An Integrated Multi-Tactic Approach For Managing Native Weevil Pests of Multiple U.S. Fruit Crops - This proposal will develop, evaluate, and implement novel low-risk multi-tactic strategies to monitor and manage two weevil pests of peaches and blueberries - the plum curculio and the cranberry weevil. The specific objectives of the proposal include using olfactory stimuli to promote aggregation of these insects and use novel multi-component strategies for control. Once the procedures have been refined and the products developed, the procedures will be shared with growers through extension activities.

Integrated Management of Cereal Viruses - This project will look at the impact surrounding vegetation (the green bridge) has on wheat curl mite (WCM). This mite vectors Wheat streak mosaic virus to wheat. There are currently no effective pesticides registered for the WCM so this project will look at management options such as control of the green bridge, planting date, timing of nitrogen fertilization applications, etc. in reducing the impact of WCM virus on this valuable commodity Sustainable Management of Grape Root - This proposal seeks a safer control of grape root borer in commercial vineyards. The grape root borer is a major pest in the Eastern U.S. and has been difficult to control without the use of chlorpyrifos which is a non-selective insecticide with a threatened availability as a result of the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA). This proposal will look at the use of a novel nematode application method which eliminates the need for water and post-application irrigation. The project will look at two methods of delivery of nematodes, post-season carryover of the applied nematodes, perform economic and commercial feasibility analyses, and conduct a multifaceted grower outreach program in four states.

(F) Other - Potato Breeding Research

Potato breeding and variety development for specific high-value specialty areas. Collaborative multi-site selection, evaluation, and variety development work among states and with USDA-ARS. The overall goal is to develop an array of attractive, highly productive, disease- and insect-resistant potato varieties that can be employed by small and large potato producers to enhance marketing opportunities, farm sustainability and grower profits. The project focuses on classical breeding techniques, but also includes marker-assisted selection for resistance to internal defects, diseases, and insect pests. A coordinated, team approach for helping to solve current and future problems encountered by the U.S. potato industry.

Release and commercialization of new potato varieties that will directly benefit all segments of the potato industry and all US producing regions. The strategy is to identify traits, make crosses, and apply selection pressures that will increase the probability of developing varieties that can be produced and utilized more efficiently than existing varieties. Goals include high yield, improved processing quality, genetic resistance to major pests and diseases, higher levels of resistance to stresses, increased nutrient use efficiency, improved human nutritional value, and high tuber quality, and reduced use of pesticides, water, and fertilizers. This is accompanied by myriad minor objectives involving germplasm enhancement, germplasm production, selection procedures, disease and stress screening, variety trial design and conduct, seed increases, management studies, and commercial evaluations.

(G) Critical Agricultural Materials

$481,669

The overall goal of this program is the design and the development of environmentally friendly advanced coatings based on agriculture-based soybean oil and demonstration of their commercial potential through systematic assessment of the critical success factors, in collaboration with the key stake holders of the product supply-chain. The specific objective is to design and develop a platform of soy-based functional materials that serve as building-blocks that can replace petroleum-based products in the formulation of currently used and emerging advanced coating technologies. The Eastern Michigan University research team will evaluate proposed soy-based products for their functional performance, environmental life-cycle assessment, and economic performance against competitive petroleum-based products, as well as the feasibility of scale-up for manufacturing and their eligibility for applicable eco-labeling standards.

Dried Distiller Grain Based Polymer Dispersions for Paper Coatings
$499,426

The proposed research, by the University of Wisconsin, will close the technical gaps to allow extracted hemicellulose to be used as a paper coating and quantify the sustainability impact as compared to petroleum based coatings. Specifically the research will:

(1) develop high-solids, low viscosity dispersions of the extracted hemicellulose polymer and (2) Compare the environmental impact of utilizing this renewable biomaterial as compared to traditional petroleum based materials.

To accomplish this, the project has five specific objectives including:

(1) Creation and characterization of extracted hemicellulose from a variety of wood and pulp samples varying extraction conditions;
(2) Modification of the extracted hemicellulose barrier properties through chemical derivatization;
(3) Development of high-solids, low-viscosity dispersions of the extracted and derivatized materials;
(4) Evaluation of the hemicellulose dispersion products as a paper coating utilizing cast film and paper coating experiments; and
(5) Determination of the paper coating chemical's environmental impact through lifecycle assessment.

The design of socially responsible public policy requires a comprehensive, rigorous, and timely assessment of its economic, environmental and social impacts. This project will address this need by establishing a Partnership for Agricultural and Resource Policy Research. The mission of the Partnership will be to provide the highest quality, objective economic analysis of critical public policy issues on agriculture, natural resources, environment, food systems, nutrition, and technology. The Partnership represents an institutional innovation towards productive regional collaborations between Land Grant institutions.

The overarching goals are: to help policymakers and stakeholders understand how policies affect the economy, natural resources, the environment, and society; and to provide innovate research focusing on specialty crops, conservation and consumer issues, with an emphasis on the Western United States. The Partnership will cover the four emphasis areas specified in the NIFA request. Our primary approach will be to conduct multi-disciplinary research rooted in economic theory and quantitative methods, capitalizing on the policy experience and expertise of faculty at the two institutions. In the first year, the team will use existing modeling capability to address current policy analysis; in the second year, models will be integrated into a more unified framework for policy analysis. An innovative, comprehensive education and dissemination program complements the policy research. Building on strong institutional support, this Partnership represents a long-term commitment to policy research and education. The Partnership will provide value to society by supporting informed decision making and reducing the uncertainties associated with future policies.

(K) Rangeland Research Program (aka Joe Skeen Institute for Rangeland Restoration)

Weather Data And Forecasting Applications For Management Of Ecological Site Transitions focuses on the fact that millions of hectares of rangeland in the western United States have been invaded, and are now dominated, by expanding populations of introduced annual weeds. These weeds are very effective competitors for soil water and nutrients, produce fine fuels that increase fire frequencies, and are resistant to many rangeland rehabilitation and restoration actions. Fire rehabilitation costs on western rangelands continue to escalate as hundreds of thousands of hectares a year are lost to weed dominance. Post-fire wind erosion in these annual-weed dominated systems can also result in irreversible soil loss that lowers ecological site potential. Restoration of degraded rangelands is hampered by a generally dry climate and exceptionally high variability in seedbed water availability and soil stability. They have developed relatively efficient procedures to temporarily control annual weeds, but these practices are ineffective if we are unable to subsequently establish desirable rangeland plant species. More efficient utilization of existing weather data, and development of seasonal weather forecasting tools would greatly enhance our ability to establish desirable plant species in good weather years, and avoid wasting money on large-scale restoration efforts in bad weather years. Production of better weather data and planning tools, however, is insufficient. Choices among restoration alternatives are affected by sociological factors, local traditions, economic constraints, and both actual and perceived accessibility of new knowledge. Reducing barriers to restoration success within human systems will require better understanding of how to enhance the user-friendliness of improved forecasting tools when they become available, and also managers' capacity to use those tools given various other constraints on their decisions. In this project, they will be developing weather-data tools that can be used in the fall planting season to make decisions about how to most efficiently spend limited restoration funds in a way that maximizes the probability of successful establishment of rangeland plant species. Throughout the project, they will work directly with land managers and land management agencies to ensure that the tools that we develop are practical, user-friendly, and integrated into current planning and management programs.

Linking Management Decisions With Ecological And Economic Outcomes In Grazed Systems will address a significant gap in the study of human dimensions of rangeland management by conducting the first in-depth analysis of rancher short- and medium-term grazing management decision-making using repeated interviews and participant observation to document decision-making processes and criteria at weekly, monthly, and annual time scales. The combination of study approaches including a real-time collaborative adaptive management experiment and observational study of individual operators, also allows the opportunity to compare decision-making processes, benefits and limitations of collaborative adaptive decision-making compared to decision-making at the scale of an individual operation. In addition, by integrating these measurements of rancher and agency goals and behavior with assessment of ecological and economic outcomes, this study is the first to evaluate rigorously the ecological and economic outcomes of varying grazing management decisions and decision-making processes as implemented on working ranches (in contrast to highly controlled studies of rotational grazing outcomes). In so doing, our research significantly advances our understanding of rangelands as complex adaptive systems in which humans contribute to learning and system adaptation.

A Systems Approach To Seedling Establishment On Degraded Rangeland: Managing Ecological Processes Driving Recruitment Bottlenecks where altered disturbance regimes are shown to be systematically destroying healthy rangeland and directly threatening U.S. agriculture, food security, and sustainability. While every major stakeholder group in the West has recognized that restoration is critical to stem the massive and continuous loss of rangeland, establishment of functional plant communities on arid rangeland following disturbance is difficult and failure rates are high. Although ecologists and managers have been aggressively working towards improving their ability to establish plant communities, work to date has largely been pursued as a series of unlinked, site-specific studies. They lack a systems framework for developing general principles, identifying key knowledge gaps and directing future research and management. The broad goal of this proposal is to develop, validate and deploy a systems approach for improving seedling establishment in Wyoming big sagebrush ecosystems. The core of our framework uses life-cycle population models to link plant population dynamics to management. To address our goal we will:

- 1) Quantify the patterns of seedling germination, emergence and death as well as juvenile and adult plant growth and survival across gradients of elevation, soil texture and invasive plant abundance.
- 2) Use sensitivity analysis to identify which life stage transitions most limit seedling recruitment along major ecological gradients.
- 3) Identify how winter environmental conditions, seed pathogens and soil physical properties influence seedling recruitment.
- 4) Develop hydrothermal time models, seed coating technologies and knowledge of seed genetics that influence seedling recruitment.
- 5) Integrate findings and understanding of social barriers limiting adoption of knowledge into education and economic assessment programs aimed at enhancing adoption of ecologically-based restoration.

Outcomes will include database of findings, webpage and user friendly information on research findings distributed through website, a field school as well as new technologies and strategies for managing seedling establishment. Restoring functional plant communities on arid rangeland following disturbance is a long-standing, serious and complex problem. Developing and adopting a systems approach that can organize and direct seedling establishment research is essential if we are to make continuous and measured advancements in management.

Innovative Use Of Seed Coating Technologies For The Restoration Of Soil Hydrology And Functional Plant Communities In Burned Semi-Arid Rangelands focuses on the concept that in the western United States, pinyon and juniper (PJ) expansion constitutes one of the greatest weedy invasions of our time. As PJ woodlands mature, increased fuel loads and canopy cover can lead to large scale, high intensity crown fires. Despite reseeding efforts following fire, PJ woodlands often remain bare of vegetation for one or more years, leaving resources available for invasion by cheatgrass and other weeds. These weeds outcompete native species, degrade ecological processes, and modify natural fire patterns. Consequently, research is needed to develop reseeding technologies that improve establishment of desired species after fire in order to preserve the ecological integrity of our rangeland systems. Soil water repellency (WR) is one factor that may significantly limit post-fire recovery and promote subsequent weed domination. Based on their preliminary research, they hypothesized that post-fire WR may reduce ecological resilience by limiting the establishment of seeded species and allowing weeds to invade as WR diminishes over time. We further hypothesize that the extent and severity of this soil condition increases as PJ woodlands continue to age and expand. Restoration approaches that focus on ameliorating WR could potentially improve the reseeding success of native plant materials. Their preliminary greenhouse research demonstrates that newly-developed wetting agents, applied to the seed through the use of innovative seed coating technologies, significantly improve the ecohydrologic properties required for plant growth. Wetting agents increase soil water content for seeds and seedlings in WR soil by breaking up WR around the seed. This allows precipitation to drain from the surrounding soil towards the seed and for soil moisture to move upwards by capillarity towards the seedling as the soil surface dries. The proposed technology could be applied to grass, forb and shrub plant materials seeded after fire to increase seedling establishment in the water-limited seedbed environments. Coating seeds with wetting agent could reduce seeding costs by reducing frequent seeding failures in semiarid rangelands, and by increasing plant establishment, thereby enabling lower seeding rates for expensive native species. This project introduces important research that will:

- 1) determine the physical and temporal controls influencing the extent and severity of soil WR,
- 2) develop models that predict how current and future PJ woodland encroachment will impact soil health and revegetation success after fire,
- 3) further develop innovative seed coating technologies,
- 4) field test these technologies and evaluate their ability to enhance revegetation success in areas constrained by a post-fire WR soil layer, and
- 5) enhance opportunities for land owners and land managers to confidently incorporate this and other proven technologies in their native seed restoration projects.

Spatial Methods For Low Cost Restoration Of Rangeland Ecosystem Services focus on the concept that rangelands constitute 50% of California, and produce 70% of the forage for a livestock industry with gross value > $3 billion. Rangelands supply most of the drinking water and provide habitats for thousands of species. These valuable ecosystems are degraded by invasive exotic species. Restoration is hindered by high costs and low private returns. They aim at promoting restoration of rangelands by testing and disseminating spatial methods to reduce cost and improve restoration success. They hypothesize that restoration success per unit cost can be improved by careful site selection and strip-seeding patterns within sites. First, in an observational and large-scale study, they will survey restoration projects to determine the relationship between restoration and selected ecosystem services (responses, forage production, vegetation and insect diversity, weed abundance, soil N and C fractions and nutrient leaching below the rooting zone). Success in restoring ecosystem services will be modeled as a function of pre-restoration state, history of seeding, management, biophysical site and landscape characteristics, weather and cost to create a decision support tool for site selection. Second, at an intermediate scale they will apply strip-seeding restoration treatments with various levels of area coverage. An economic analysis will compare cost per area and per unit ecosystem service. Third, they will apply the strip-seeding treatments in runoff plots and measure hydrologic function and water quality as further input for the comparison of costs/service. An advisory committee and working group composed of ranchers, agency personnel, extension agents, and faculty will guide the project and disseminate results.

(D) Interregional Research Project # 4 - Minor Crop Pest Management (IR-4) Program

Interregional Research Project No. 4 Minor Crop Pest Management for the North Central - This project will continue to support the North Central Regional IR-4 Center. Since the plant protection industry has little economic incentive to develop registrations for specialty crop chemicals, IR-4 develops the data that provide legal, effective, safe and IPM-compatible pest control agents for minor and specialty crops. Without this program, many specialty crops could no longer be produced in the US or would be greatly compromised in cost and quality.

This projects objectives for minor and specialty crops are to obtain pesticide clearances for food uses, further the development and adoption of biopesticides, and conduct research to protect ornamental crops. There are five regions that can apply for IR-4 funding.

(E) Pest Management Alternatives

Combining tactics for sustainable insect and weed pest management in vineyards This project will look at two serious threats to the Eastern grape industry the grape berry moth and perennial weeds. The project will look at the economics of targeted pesticide applications. It will also look at the efficacy and economics of under-row tillage as a means of disrupting grape berry moth pupation and reducing weeds as an alternative management practice. Results of this research will be shared with the grower community through Extension.

Meeting the Research & Outreach Needs for Managing Leek Moth, a New Invasive Pest of Allium Crops - This project looks for answers in combating the invasive Leek moth. Research will aim to develop management practices that will help both large-scale and small-scale conventional and organic growers avoid catastrophic losses in Allium crops throughout the U.S. by filling in gaps in knowledge about the Leek moth's ecology, the efficacy of cultural practices and insecticides against the Leek moth, the potential roles of natural enemies in Leek moth management, and the economics of such practices. A strong outreach program will help growers nationwide adopt management practices that are effective and economically viable.

Alternative Approaches to Managing Chilli Thrips, An Emerging Pest for Ornamental Nursery Production - This project will look at the invasive Chilli thrips on 'Knock Out' Roses to develop alternative control strategies in lieu of the current heavy reliance on conventional insecticides and the likelihood of resistance development in the thrips. The overall objective of this project is to develop a biologically-based chilli thrips management strategy by integrating the use of action thresholds, cultural practices (specifically, fertilization), and biopesticides into a 'Knock Out' Rose production system. Guidance will be provided to growers on how to manipulate fertility and use biopesticides to manage chilli thrips. A long-term goal is to make the green industry more sustainable.

(F) Other - Potato Breeding Research

Collaborative multi-site selection, evaluation, and variety development work among states and with USDA-ARS. The overall goal will continue to be to develop an array of attractive, highly productive, disease- and insect-resistant potato varieties that can be employed by small and large potato producers to enhance marketing opportunities, farm sustainability and grower profits. Projects will likely use classical breeding techniques and will likely also use marker-assisted selection as needed for resistance to internal defects, diseases, and insect pests.

Anticipated: All projects will aim at release and commercialization of new potato varieties that will directly benefit all segments of the potato industry and all U.S. producing regions. These projects use a wide range of effective methods to identify valuable traits, recombined them with otherwise outstanding genotypes through making crosses, and then apply selection pressures to increase the probability of creating varieties that can be produced and used more efficiently than existing varieties. Potato is a complex crop, such that there are numerous breeding goals, including high yield, improved processing quality, genetic resistance to major pests and diseases, higher levels of resistance to stresses, increased nutrient use efficiency, improved human nutritional value, and high tuber quality, and reduced use of pesticides, water, and fertilizers. This complexity of breeding objectives is accompanied by myriad minor objectives involving germplasm enhancement, germplasm production, selection procedures, disease and stress screening, variety trial design and conduct, seed increases, management studies, and commercial evaluations.

(G) Critical Agricultural Materials

A Proposal for Commercialization of Vegetable Oil Macromonomers
$433,786

The goal of this proposal is to confirm commercial viability of vegetable oil macromonomer (VOMM) derived latex polymers, free of volatile organic content (VOC), and capable of high performance equal to or exceeding that of leading commercial latexes, and coatings.

Biobased Bisphenol-A Free Epoxides for Paint, Coating, and Adhesive Applications $500,113

The two year program includes the preparation of isosorbide-based epoxy resins and their evaluation in model coatings. Leading candidate coatings systems will be scaled-up for demonstration of product feasibility through field testing and validation using industry standard chemical, physical, and performance tests. Life cycle analysis will be performed using a cradle-to-gate approach to evaluate the environmental, cost and social aspects of the bio-derived epoxide resin. The long term goal of this project is to commercialize a cost-effective, protective coatings platform that is based on non-food agricultural materials and meets or exceeds the high performance of today's petroleum-based epoxy coatings.

(H) Aquaculture Centers

At this time regional planning processes are underway to identify and recommend funding for new specific regional projects from FY 2013 funding. Numerous regional projects are funded for multiple fiscal years as well. Funded regional projects are anticipated to advance commercial aquaculture development by solving critical problems and bottlenecks to support successful enterprises with new science-based knowledge, improved practices and tools and new technologies for a wide diversity of aquaculture species, production systems, marketing outlets, and aquatic environments in the Nation.

Few regional projects have been determined for FY2013 but the following are two examples; Environmental and endogenous factors affecting egg quality and caviar yield in farmed sturgeon (Sturgeon Caviar) and year 2 funding for Determination and practical application of egg quality measures toward reliable culture of high value marine finfish species (Finfish Egg Quality)

(I) Supplemental and Alternative Crops (aka Canola Research)

It is anticipated that projects funded in 2013 will significantly increase canola production by developing and testing superior germplasm, methods of planting, cultivation, and harvesting, and then transferring new knowledge to producers as soon as possible. Extension, education, and/or communication activities related to the research areas above must be addressed in the project proposal.

(J) Policy Research Centers (aka Agriculture and Rural Policy Research)

No funding for NIFA for new projects.

(K) Rangeland Research Program (aka Joe Skeen Institute for Rangeland Restoration)

No data, zeroed out in FY2013.

(L) Forest Products Research Program

The RFA has been released and application deadline is set for July 31, 2013. Four to five projects are anticipated to be funded addressing any of the six priority areas. Fiscal Year 2014: (A) Expert IPM Decision Support System:

No project data available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(B) Global Change, UV-B Monitoring

The USDA has long been concerned about high levels of ultraviolet radiation from the Sun, which are known to have harmful effects on agricultural crops, rangelands, forest ecosystems, humans, and livestock. The purpose of this program is to support research which:

- generates an uninterrupted stream of climatology data;
- determines mechanisms and symptoms of plant and animal response; and
- applies tightly integrated crop and climate models to assess regional and national impacts (both biological and economic) of multiple plant stressors.

(C) Integrated Pest Management & Biological Control

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(D) Interregional Research Project # 4 - Minor Crop Pest Management (IR-4) Program

Interregional Research Project No. 4 Minor Crop Pest Management for the North Central - This project will continue to support the North Central Regional IR-4 Center. Since the plant protection industry has little economic incentive to develop registrations for specialty crop chemicals, IR-4 develops the data that provide legal, effective, safe and IPM-compatible pest control agents for minor and specialty crops. Without this program, many specialty crops could no longer be produced in the US or would be greatly compromised in cost and quality. This projects objectives for minor and specialty crops are to obtain pesticide clearances for food uses, further the development and adoption of biopesticides, and conduct research to protect ornamental crops. There are five regions that can apply for IR-4 funding.

(E) Pest Management Alternatives

No data is available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(F) Other - Potato Breeding Research

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(G) Critical Agricultural Materials

FY 2014 Critical Agricultural Materials program is contingent upon the re-authorization of the Farm Bill.

(H) Aquaculture Centers

Continued regional aquaculture research, demonstration and extension education projects Continued regional aquaculture research, demonstration and extension education projects based on regional industry priorities and needs. Funded regional projects are anticipated to advance commercial aquaculture development by solving critical problems and bottlenecks to support successful enterprises with new science-based knowledge, improved practices and tools, and new technologies for a wide diversity of aquaculture species, production systems, marketing outlets, and aquatic environments in the Nation.

(I) Supplemental and Alternative Crops (aka Canola Research)

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date

(J) Policy Research Centers (aka Agriculture and Rural Policy Research)

No funding for NIFA for new projects.

(K) Rangeland Research Program (aka Joe Skeen Institute for Rangeland Restoration)

10.202 COOPERATIVE FORESTRY RESEARCH

McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Research Act (M/S) Program

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Executive Order Public Law 87-778 (76 Stat. 806, 16 U.S.C. 582a, et seq.) signed into law on October 10, 1962 is also known as the McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Research Act.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of this funding is to increase forestry research in the production, utilization, and protection of forestland; to train future forestry scientists; and to involve other disciplines in forestry research. Funding should also address the high priority issues described in the current M/S Strategic Plan: Sustaining Healthy and Productive Forests: An Investment in Americas Competitive Position in the Global Marketplace: (1) science of integration; (2) forest ecosystem services; (3) human attitudes and behaviors; (4) conflict, uncertainty, and decision-making; (5) technological advancements, productivity, and forest applications; and (6) urban ecosystems.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

FORMULA GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Research Act (M/S) grant is used to assist all states in carrying out a program of state forestry research at state forestry schools and colleges and developing a trained pool of forest scientists capable of conducting needed forestry research, which should include:

- (1) ecological restoration;
- (2) catastrophe management;
- (3) valuing and trading ecological services;
- (4) energy conservation, biomass energy and bio-based materials development;
- (5) forest fragmentation;
- (6) carbon sequestration and climate change; and
- (7) ways of fostering healthy forests and a globally competitive forest resources sector.

Additionally, M/S funds should be allocated to the following high priority issues:

- (1) science of integration (ecosystem or landscape approaches including interdisciplinary multi-state projects);
- (2) forest ecosystem services;
- (3) human attitudes and behaviors;
- (4) conflict, uncertainty, and decision-making;
- (5) technological advancements (biotechnology, nanotechnology and geospatial technology), productivity, and forest applications; and
- (6) urban ecosystems.

Funding is provided to the States through a formula-based allocation process which depends on several factors. First, a base amount (approximately $25,000) is allocated to each State; however, this base amount is excluded from the formula. The balance of funding to each State is determined through a ranking process and dependent upon the following three factors:

- (1) forty percent of the remaining balance is allocated based on the area of non-Federal commercial forest land;
- (2) forty percent is allocated based upon the volume of timber cut annually from stock; and
- (3) twenty percent is allocated based on the total expenditures for forestry research from non-Federal sources.

Funds are then distributed to the eligible State-certified Institutions within the State as determined by the Governors designee. Applications may be submitted by State-certified Schools of Forestry as stipulated in accordance with Section 2 of Public Law 87-788, McIntire-Stennis Act. Section 7412 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 amended Section 2 of the McIntire-Stennis Cooperative Forestry Act (16 U.S.C. 582a-1) to include the 1890 Land-grant Institutions and made this change effective October 1, 2008.

- (1) Approved CSREES M/S Projects, CSREES will fund the M/S Program for authorized activities. Funds must be expended on approved M/S projects.
- (2) Cost-Sharing and Matching funds are mandated in Section 4 of the McIntire-Stennis Act (16 U.S.C. 582a-3). 7 CFR 3015.50-56 prescribes the standards applicable to determining the allowability of cash and in-kind contributions for matching funds. Matching funds also must be expended on approved M/S projects. Formula grant recipients are to provide matching (as detailed in Part VIII.A.6 of the Formula Grant Opportunity (FGO)), either cash or in-kind, on a dollar-for-dollar basis (100 percent) on all Federal funds allotted. Eligible institutions located in insular areas (i.e., American Samoa, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Marianas, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) are not required to match amounts at or below $100,000, if the allocation is below $200,000.
- (3) Waiver of Indirect Costs. Only applicable to Insular Areas (i.e., American Samoa, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Marianas, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) for amounts at or below $200,000.

(4) Indirect Costs and Tuition Remission. In accordance with Section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3319), indirect costs and tuition remission are unallowable as an M/S formula grant or matching expenditure. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Funds are appropriated by Congress for distribution to State institutions certified as eligible by a State representative designated by the Governor of each State. Funds are apportioned among States by the Secretary of Agriculture after consultation with a National Advisory Council representing the State-certified forestry schools and other groups concerned with forestry research. This program is also available to Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Northern Mariana Islands, and Micronesia.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: $32,934,000 was appropriated by Congress for the Program for FY 2012. The net amount awarded to support the different programs was $31,077,985. Each recipient of the grant is expected to match the grant amount 100% and the total match was $127M. Two major accomplishments of the Program are:

1. Plantation pine acreage is now the predominant pine management regime practiced in the South. Rapid pine timber growth increases the size of the juvenile wood core that was relatively modest in naturally regenerated, slower grown trees. Juvenile wood results in production of weak lumber, warp-prone lumber, weak composite products, buckling in plywood veneers and weak paper products. The single issue of warp induced by inclusion of juvenile wood is estimated to result in most of the annual loss to the lumber manufacturing industry of $500 million due to excessive warp following kiln drying. Researchers in a state university in the South have recently developed and patented a technology capable of detecting juvenile wood in green lumber in the sawmill. The technology utilizes non-contact radio frequency electrode scanners. This technology allows lumber containing juvenile wood to be identified and segregated for drying by warp-reducing techniques. Or, the lumber can be marketed for uses in which juvenile wood is not a quality issue. A considerable portion of the $500 million in value degrade now lost can be prevented by application of this patented technology. Southern forest products industries will benefit by receiving increased value for their products.

2. Using funds provided by the McIntire-Stennis program, a University from the south has developed biologically engineered trees that can clean up the thousands of acres of land in the U.S. contaminated with mercury. Using these trees, instead of the conventional methods, can not only save millions of dollars per contaminated site, but will also avoid the environmental disruption of the sites with conventional technologies. Fiscal Year 2013: The amount appropriated after two budget recessions and a sequestration is $30.46M. The amount are principally used to address challenges along:

1. Climate change adaptation and mitigation;
 2. sustainable bioenergy (feedstock development, production and processing);
 3. food security (agroforestry and novel chemicals);
 4. forest ecosystem services;
 5. new forest products technologies; and
 6. new educational efforts aimed at training highly skilled research foresters.
- Fiscal Year 2014: The Presidents request for the Program is $32.934 M for FY 2014.

State Agricultural Experiment Stations are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: The previous years base plus the current year increase as follows:

Three percent (3%) for Federal Administration,

Twenty percent (20%) equally,

Twenty-six percent (26%) in an amount which bears the same ratio to the total amount to be allotted as the rural population of the State bears to the total rural population of all the States as determined by the last preceding decennial census;

Twenty-six percent (26%) t in an amount which bears the same ratio to the total amount to be allotted as the farm population of the State bears to the total farm population of all the States as determined by the last preceding decennial census. Twenty-five percent (25%) for the Hatch Multistate Research Fund.

- (B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

However, section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year (FY) 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of American Samoa, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Mariana Islands, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than fifty percent (50%) of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section. The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of fifty percent (50%)] for any fiscal year (FY) if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year (FY).

Section 7403 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 amended section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act to subject the District of Columbia to the same matching requirements as the insular 1862 Land-Grant Institutions upon enactment (May 22, 2008).

NIFA may consider and approve matching waivers submitted by State Agricultural Experiment Stations in the Insular Areas and the District of Columbia.

- (3) Indirect Costs and Tuition Remission

In accordance with section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3319), indirect costs and tuition remission are unallowable as Hatch formula grant expenditures.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

(1) Approved NIFA Hatch MRF Projects

Hatch MRF Federal funding must be used on approved Hatch MRF projects.

(2) Matching

Section 3(d)(1) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(1)) states, with regard to institutions in the 50 states, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for agricultural research and for the establishment and maintenance of facilities for the performance of the research. However, section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year (FY) 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of American Samoa, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Mariana Islands, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than fifty percent (50%) of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section. ... The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of fifty percent (50%)] for any fiscal year (FY) if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year (FY).

Section 7403 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 amended section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act to subject the District of Columbia to the same matching requirements as the insular 1862 Land-Grant Institutions upon enactment (May 22, 2008).

NIFA may consider and approve matching waivers submitted by State Agricultural Experiment Stations in the Insular Areas and the District of Columbia.

(3) Indirect Costs and Tuition Remission

In accordance with section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3319), indirect costs and tuition remission are unallowable as Hatch MRF formula grant expenditures.

Section 3(d)(1) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(1)) states, with regard to institutions in the 50 states, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for agricultural research and for the establishment and maintenance of facilities for the performance of the research. However, section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act of 1887 (7 U.S.C. 361c(d)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year (FY) 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of American Samoa, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, Micronesia, Northern Mariana Islands, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than fifty percent (50%) of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section. ... The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of fifty percent (50%)] for any fiscal year (FY) if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year (FY).

Section 7403 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 amended section 3(d)(4) of the Hatch Act to subject the District of Columbia to the same matching requirements as the insular 1862 Land-Grant Institutions upon enactment (May 22, 2008).

Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply for funding provided that such arrangements are necessary to complete the project.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated in accordance with the statutory formula stated in the Act to the State agricultural experiment stations of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Micronesia, and Northern Mariana Islands. Credentials/Documentation:

No Credentials or documentation are required. OMB Circular No. A-87 applies to this program.

Preapplication Coordination:

All Formula Grant Opportunities (FGOs) are published on the Agencies website and Grants.gov. Applicants must complete the Grants.gov registration process. Please see the following Grants.gov link for more information: http://www.grants.gov/applicants/get_registered.jsp. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to the Hatch as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. As noted previously, these application packages complement, rather than duplicate, the information collected via the Plan of Work (POW) system and the Current Research Information System (CRIS), and together satisfy all legislative and regulatory pre-award requirements.

Section 202 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended the Smith-Lever Act and the Hatch Act to require approved plans of work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1862 Land-Grant Institution must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted each year as an update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due by April 1.

Specific project details and pertinent information should be entered in the Current Research Information System (CRIS) as in prior years. CRIS is the U.S. Department of Agriculture's documentation and reporting system for ongoing agricultural, food and nutrition, and forestry research and education. CRIS contains over 30,000 descriptions of current, publicly-supported research and education activities. This work is sponsored or conducted by the USDA research agencies, the State agricultural experiment stations, the State Land-Grant Institutions and universities, State schools of forestry, cooperating schools of veterinary medicine, and USDA grant recipients. See Part VI.C. of the Formula Grant Opportunity (FGO) for specific CRIS requirements. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

OMB Circular No. A-102 applies to this program. OMB Circular No. A-110 applies to this program. State Five (5) year plans of work must be submitted to and approved by NIFA before funds are released. Applications should be submitted as outlined in the FGO. Applications must follow the instructions provided per Grants.Gov. Applicants are required to submit applications in response to both an interim FGO and a final FGO. The final FGO reflects the final formula allocations for the current fiscal year (FY).

Award Procedure:

The Office of Planning and Accountability and CRIS Office will notify the OEP Financial Operations Branch regarding each institutions compliance with the Plan of Work reporting requirements [i.e., Five (5) Year Plan of Work Update and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results]. If all current program and administrative requirements have been met by the eligible institution, funding will continue to be released on a quarterly basis. The OEP Financial Operations Branch will notify the institutions when all requirements have been met or approved.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: (A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)

Example 1: Central Metabolism and Transport in Plant Systems

Objectives: To understand central metabolism and transport in plant systems well enough to rationally manage and engineer them for human benefit.

1) Mapping metabolic fluxes underlying starch, protein, and oil production in developing seeds of crop and model plant species. 2) Mapping metabolic fluxes underlying the synthesis of bioenergy feedstocks in plant cells and their bioconversion by microbes. 3) Delineating the uptake metabolism storage and transfer of nitrogen and other nutrients in the arbuscular mycorrhizal symbiosis.

The project uses embryo culture and developing seeds of oilseed rape (B. napus), soybean (G. max), corn (Z. mays), or the model plant Arabidopsis thaliana to develop a better understanding of plant physiological processes.

Example 2: Alternative Crops for Industrial Uses

Objectives: 1) Assess and culture non-traditional plant species that may have potential for agricultural and industrial uses. 2) Re-examine old crops that have renewed agricultural or industrial potential for improvement of cultural methods. 3) Improve production of plant species with potential via cultural methods, such as fertility, cultivation, population density, as appropriate. 4) Adapt new plant species to agricultural needs via selection and genetic improvement.

Example 3: Bio-derived Fuels and Chemicals: Facilitating Development Through Property Characterization

This project concerns measurement and prediction of properties such as vapor pressure, surface tension and cold flow behavior to facilitate blending and increased adoption of biofuels. Another thrust focuses specifically on measurement and correlation of vapor-liquid, liquid-liquid, and solid-liquid solubilities for mixtures related to the succinic acid platform, to facilitate development of bioderived chemicals from succinic acid.

Objectives: 1) Characterize boiling points, surface tensions, cold flow properties of biofuel components and their mixtures. 2) Develop and extend molecular simulation predictions for properties of biofuel components and bioderived chemicals. 3) Measure and develop correlations for vapor-liquid, liquid-liquid, and liquid-solid behavior for support of the succinic acid platform and reactive distillation as a method of upgrading for products such as diethyl succinate. 3) Disseminate information through publications and meetings. This project aims to capitalize on bioderived fuels and chemicals having more oxygen content in the molecular structure compared to petroleum-derived products.

Example 4: Integrated Systems Research and Development in Automation and Sensors for Sustainability of Specialty Crops

This project intends to establish the relationship between the internal characteristics of specialty crops and the quality of value-added processed products.

Objectives: 1. Adapt biological concepts associated with specialty crop production, harvest and postharvest handling into quantifiable parameters which can be sensed.

Experiments will study stone fruits (cherries, plums, apricots, peaches, etc) and other specialty crops.

Example 5: Sustainable Solutions to Problems Confronting Bee Health

Objectives: 1) Develop recommendations for beekeepers "best practices" to control varroa mites based on currently available methods and strategies for mite management. 2) Evaluate the role and causes of parasitic mites and pathogens such as viruses, protozoa and bacteria and their role in honey bee colony deaths. 3) Determine the effects of pesticides and other environmental chemicals on honey bee colony health. 4) Assess environmental factors, including nutrition and management practices that affect honey bee colony health will be determined; as well as determine the effects of interactions among various factors affecting honey bee colony health. 5) Coordinate research and extension efforts related to bee colony health; facilitate, through research and extension activities, the development of industry-based honey bee stock selection, maintenance and production programs that demonstrably incorporate traits that confer resistance to pests, parasites and pathogens.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

1) This project will: assess the extent and nature of injury caused brown marmorated stink bug; develop monitoring methods for brown marmorated stink bug; determine the potential for biological control of the brown marmorated stink bug; determine the toxicity and field efficacy of selected insecticides for brown marmorated stink bug control in field crops, fruit, nursery and vegetable; develop best management practices for the brown marmorated stink bug; and deliver research based IPM recommendations to growers.

2) This project deals with biological control of arthropod pests and weeds. The project addresses the general goals of improving biological control through: conservation of existing natural enemies; augmentation programs involving repeated rearing and release; introduction of new natural enemies against invasive pests (Classical Biological Control); and evaluation and education.

3) This project addresses animal genome research. The project works to create shared genomic tools and reagents and sequence information to enhance the understanding and discovery of genetic mechanisms affecting traits of interest; facilitate the development and sharing of animal populations and the collection and analysis of new, unique and interesting phenotypes; and develop, integrate and implement bioinformatics resources to support the discovery of genetic mechanisms that underlie traits of interest.

4) The project investigates the ecology and management of European Corn Borer and other lepidopteran pests of corn; investigates the relationship between transgenic maize and the agricultural environment; adapts IPM systems for the changing pest complexes in maize; investigates ecology, evolution, genetics, and behavior of pest Lepidoptera; and employs electronic delivery methods to disseminate information related to sustainable management of Lepidopteran pests.

5) This project covers sustainable solutions to problems affecting bee health. The project is: developing and recommending to beekeepers "best practices" for varroa mite control based on currently available methods and strategies for mite management; evaluating the role and causative mechanisms of parasitic mites and pathogens such as viruses, protozoa and bacteria in honey bee colony deaths; determining the effects of pesticides and other environmental chemicals on honey bee colony health; determining how environmental factors, including nutrition and management practices affect honey bee colony health; determining the effects of interactions among various factors affecting honey bee colony health; coordinating research and extension efforts related to bee colony health; facilitating, through research and extension activities, the development of industry-based honey bee stock selection, maintenance and production programs that demonstrably incorporate traits that confer resistance to pests, parasites and pathogens; and focusing on non-Apis bees, their conservation, pathology, susceptibility to pesticides, and their contribution to crop pollination including economic value. Fiscal Year 2013: (A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)

N/A Reporting period ends December 2013 reports are due within 90 days. Specific details will be provided by Program Unit at a future date.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

The research will: characterize dispersal and population biology of stable flies and house flies, and develop monitoring methods for use in indoor and outdoor environments; establish extent of fly-borne dispersal of human and animal pathogens; and improve management tactics for stable flies and house flies.

2) This project addresses the adaptation, quality, and management of sustainable cellulosic biofuel. The research will: compare cropping systems such as annual, perennial, cool-season, and warm-season cellulosic crops and combinations with oil seed crops for biofuel potential in representative environments of the western region; measure biomass feedstock production, energy conservation, and economics with various management treatments at diverse locations in the region; determine production and economic sustainability and carbon sequestration of dedicated biofuel feedstocks; develop regional based bioenergy and transitional grants to expand resources; and explore regional private-public partnerships with the emerging biorefinery industry.

3) This project focuses on integrated management of Russian wheat aphid and other cereal arthropod pests. The project will: develop integrated management strategies for cereal aphid and other arthropod pests in small grains to improve economic viability of small-grain cropping systems while maintaining environmental quality and facilitate research into improved integrated pest management approaches at the field and landscape level to manage cereal arthropod pests.

4) This project researches reproductive performance in domestic ruminants. The project will discover and translate molecular, metabolic, genomic, endocrine, and immunologic mechanisms that influence testicular and ovarian function, reproductive behavior, conception rate, embryo and fetal development, attainment of puberty, and effects of climate/season on reproductive patterns of domestic ruminants.

5) This project addresses the assessment of the carbon sequestration potential of common agricultural systems on benchmark soils. The project will: evaluate the effects of land use, crop rotation, tillage practice, soil texture, and ecosystem age/rotation duration on soil carbon concentration, content, and sequestration and related soil physical and chemical properties; quantify and understand the physical and chemical processes that relate to and control soil carbon sequestration; and investigate spatial variability issues associated with soil carbon content and sequestration.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research Fund):

1) This project will research flies impacting livestock, poultry, and food safety. The research will: characterize dispersal and population biology of stable flies and house flies, and develop monitoring methods for use in indoor and outdoor environments; establish extent of fly-borne dispersal of human and animal pathogens; and improve management tactics for stable flies and house flies.

2) This project addresses the adaptation, quality, and management of sustainable cellulosic biofuel. The research will: compare cropping systems such as annual, perennial, cool-season, and warm-season cellulosic crops and combinations with oil seed crops for biofuel potential in representative environments of the western region; measure biomass feedstock production, energy conservation, and economics with various management treatments at diverse locations in the region; determine production and economic sustainability and carbon sequestration of dedicated biofuel feedstocks; develop regional based bioenergy and transitional grants to expand resources; and explore regional private-public partnerships with the emerging biorefinery industry.

4) This project researches reproductive performance in domestic ruminants. The project will discover and translate molecular, metabolic, genomic, endocrine, and immunologic mechanisms that influence testicular and ovarian function, reproductive behavior, conception rate, embryo and fetal development, attainment of puberty, and effects of climate/season on reproductive patterns of domestic ruminants.

Fiscal Year 2014: (A) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Regular Research)

Specific details will be provided by Program Unit at a future date.

(B) The Hatch Act of 1887 (Multistate Research)

1) This project seeks to enhance economically and environmentally sustainable practices in temperate fruit production by focusing on rootstocks and root systems. Specifically, this project addresses high priorities within the crosscutting research areas of agricultural production, processing, and distribution, genetic resource development and manipulation, integrated pest management and economic development and policy.

2) This project will serve to further analyze and understand the results and potential of agriculture of the middle type values-based supply chains. This new effort will both re-examine the existing research studies from new perspectives and add additional baseline projects. Examples of the new issues to be explored are the implications of these values-based supply chains on the distribution of decision-making within the food system, the management of rural landscapes and natural resources, the well-being of rural communities, and the impact of public and private sector policies.

3) This project addresses the improvement of human health, nutrition, and wellness of the US population. The project addresses this challenge directly by focusing on the role of dietary n-3 fatty acids on numerous health conditions and translating information on n-3 fatty acids to the public. Two crosscutting objectives are: (1) Emphasize research that expands our understanding of the relationship between diet, health and disease prevention with particular focus on antioxidants, dietary lipids, functional foods/nutraceuticals, nutrient bioavailability, nutrient regulation of gene expression and nutrition and physical activity, and (2) Design effective nutrition education programs and delivery methods that modify human behavior such that individuals including those most at risk (pregnant women, infants, adolescents and the elderly) choose healthier diets.

(4) This project will focus on understanding and improving the response of photosynthesis to developmental and environmental factors that limit productivity. The research spans all levels of organization from the molecular and cellular through the leaf, whole plant and canopy levels. Particular emphasis will be placed on abiotic stresses (i.e., heat, cold, drought and salinity), nitrogen and water use efficiency, and the signaling pathways that initiate the plant response.

(5) This project will generate necessary data on established and invasive soybean pest densities, distributions and biology that are critical to improve overall national soybean IPM programs. A focus on soybean aphids will continue, but invasive stink bugs, plataspid and insecticide-resistant Lepidoptera will receive more attention. The project will continue to focus on maintaining a sustainable soybean IPM program where sustainability is defined as pursuing maximal profitability in the short-term without sacrificing the potential for long-term stability of the system. We will continue our focus on utilizing a combination of biological, cultural, physical, and chemical tools to regulate pest populations while minimizing environmental risks.

Notwithstanding [redistributing the funds], the Secretary may waive the matching funds requirement ... above the 50 percent level for any fiscal year for an eligible institution of a State if the Secretary determines that the State will be unlikely to satisfy the matching requirement.

7 CFR 3419.1 defines matching funds as funds from non-Federal sources made available by the State to the eligible institutions ... [for] programs or activities that fall within the purposes of agricultural research and cooperative extension under sections 1444 and 1445 of NARETPA ... or [for] qualifying educational activities. Matching funds means cash contributions and excludes in-kind matching contributions. It defines non-Federal sources as funds made available by the State to the eligible institution either through direct appropriation or under any authority (other than authority to charge tuition and fees paid by students) provided by a State to an eligible institution to raise revenue, such as gift acceptance authority or user fees. Finally, it defines qualifying educational activities as programs that address food and agricultural sciences components of an eligible institution.

7 CFR 3419.6 states that The required matching funds for the formula programs shall be used by an eligible institution for agricultural research and extension activities that have been approved in the plan of work required under sections 1444(d) and 1445(c) of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977... or for .. qualifying education activities.

Please note that while Federal funds must be expended on agricultural research, the matching funds may be used for agricultural research, agricultural extension, or qualifying educational activities. NIFA may consider and approve matching waivers above the 50 percent level.

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to the Hatch as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. As noted previously, these application packages complement, rather than duplicate, the information collected via the Plan of Work (POW) system and the Current Research Information System (CRIS), and together satisfy all legislative and regulatory pre-award requirements.

Section 202 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended the Smith-Lever Act and the Hatch Act to require approved plans of work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1862 Land-Grant Institution must submit both a Five (5) Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted each year as an update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due by April 1.

Specific project details and pertinent information should be entered in the Current Research Information System (CRIS) as in prior years. CRIS is the U.S. Department of Agriculture's documentation and reporting system for ongoing agricultural, food and nutrition, and forestry research and education. CRIS contains over 30,000 descriptions of current, publicly-supported research and education activities. This work is sponsored or conducted by the USDA research agencies, the State agricultural experiment stations, the State Land-Grant Institutions and universities, State schools of forestry, cooperating schools of veterinary medicine, and USDA grant recipients. See Part VI.C. of the Formula Grant Opportunity (FGO) for specific CRIS requirements. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

The final FGO reflects the final formula allocations for the current fiscal year (FY).

Award Procedure:

The Office of Planning and Accountability and the OEP Formula Grants Section will be reviewing submitted documents to determine if all program, financial, and administrative requirements have been met and are current. To receive an annual allotment of funds, each eligible institution or State must first submit a plan of work to NIFA for approval. During the grant period, the Office of Planning and Accountability will notify the OEP Formula Grants Section and the institution regarding each institutions compliance with the Plan of Work reporting requirements (i.e., Five (5) Year Plan of Work Update and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results). If all current program and administrative requirements have been met by the eligible institution, funding will continue to be released on a quarterly basis. The OEP Formula Grants Section will notify the institutions when all requirements have been met or approved. Statutory Formula: Title Evans-Allen Research, Public Law 95-113. 7 U.S.C. 321326 and 328

The 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, including Tuskegee University and West Virginia State University, are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: Funds up to the total amount made available to all eligible institutions in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, under section 2 of the Act of August 4, 1965 (79 Stat.431; 7 U.S.C. 450i), shall be allocated among the eligible institutions in the same proportion as funds made available under section 2 of the Act of August 4, 1965, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, are allocated among the eligible institutions. Of the funds in excess of that amount, 20 per cent shall be allotted among eligible institutions in equal proportions; 40 per cent shall be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the rural population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total rural population of all the States in which eligible institution are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated; and the balance shall be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the farm population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total farm population of all the States in which the eligible institutions are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated. In computing the distribution of the allocated funds, the allotments to Tuskegee University and Alabama A&M University shall be determined as if each institution were in a separate State.

Matching Requirements: Percent: 100%. NARETPA section 1449 (7 U.S.C. 3222d) states that the State shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources. Such matching funds shall be for an amount equal to not less than ... 100 percent of the formula [grant] funds to be distributed to the eligible institution for fiscal year 2007 and each fiscal year thereafter. ...

Notwithstanding [redistributing the funds], the Secretary may waive the matching funds requirement ... above the 50 percent level for any fiscal year for an eligible institution of a State if the Secretary determines that the State will be unlikely to satisfy the matching requirement.. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Please note there is no limitation on the amount of Federal funds that may be carried over for this one additional fiscal year. No prior approval from NIFA is required. Since this limitation is legislatively mandated, NIFA is not authorized to grant any carryover requests beyond this one additional year. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: quarterly.

In accordance with the provisions of OMB Circular No. A-133 (Revised, June 27, 2003), "Audits of States, Local Governments, and Non-Profit Organizations," nonfederal entities that expend financial assistance of $500,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. Nonfederal entities that expend less than $500,000 a year in Federal awards are exempt from Federal audit requirements for that year, except as noted in Circular No. A-133. Audits will be conducted in accordance with guidelines established in the revised OMB Circular No. A-133 and implemented in 7 CFR 3052. This program is also subject to audit by the cognizant Federal audit agency and the USDA Office of Inspector General.

See Appendix A of the Formula Grant Opportunity (FGO) for the specific allocations.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: A total of $ 50,898,000 was appropriated for the Evans-Allen Program. After administrative costs were deducted, a total of $47,977,052 was available to support research projects at each of the 1890 Land-Grant Institutions (18). Based on a formula, funds were distributed in range from $1,225,169 - $4,874,894. There is a dollar for dollar match requirement under this program. However, institutions may request waivers of up to 50% of their available funds, if matching funds cannot be secured. In 2012 ten institutions requested waivers for a total of $9,402,418. Fiscal Year 2013: A total of $47,073,749 was appropriated for the Evans-Allen Program. The funds available to the states after Federal administration deductions were $44,331,196. Funds were distributed to each 1890 institution based on a formula and ranged in the amounts of $1,170,883 - $4,436,652. This program requires a 1:1 dollar match; but institutions might request and be granted a waiver for up to 50 percent of the total funds available. In FY 2013, it is anticipated that half of the institutions will request and demonstrate a need for a waiver of the matching requirement. Fiscal Year 2014: Pending appropriations; it is estimated the funding levels will be the same as FY 2013. Specific details will be provided by Program Unit at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: Following are examples of projects that were initiated with FY 2012 Evans-Allen Funds:

The project will decode and profile the whole active genome of the whole plant of individual cultivated peanut groups, for the first time. Genes will be used for comparisons among peanut groups to identify absolute differences and similarities. Resulting genes common to all four peanut groups will be used to compare it to soybean and medicago genes, respectively, to determine and profile genes that are common to all these species and potentially to all or most of the legume species.

This project addresses program priority areas in Global Food Security and Hunger, and Climate Change. The specific knowledge areas include:

- (1) appraisal of soil resources,
- (2) soil, plant, water, nutrient relationships,
- (3) processes and transformation in soil, water and air,
- (4) weather and climate,
- (5) nutrient utilization,
- (6) economics of agricultural production and farm management,
- (7) management and agricultural sustainability,
- (8) pollution prevention and mitigation,
- (9) waste disposal, recycling and use,
- (10) communication, education and information delivery,
- (11) domestic policy analysis, etc.

Our overall goal is to assess soil microbial community dynamics in relation to nitrogen compositions, sequestration and biochemical processes in organic agriculture practices. This information will aid in the selection of organic agricultural systems/practices with enhanced or sustained biogeochemical process achieved when land is subsequently converted to organic agriculture practices.

It is proposed to develop and evaluate two systems of sustainable aquaculture to determine feasibility and merits for use by small farmers and limited-resource families to supplement their diets with home-grown animal protein and fresh vegetables. These systems will operate at two spatial/social scales: household, and small farm/community. The overriding goals for the research component of this project are to develop and evaluate several aquaculture/gardening systems. Fiscal Year 2013: The following four projects have been proposed under the Evans-Allen Program.

According to the researchers for this project, statistics show that teen pregnancy is associated with high societal costs in the form of health and foster care, incarceration, and lost tax revenue. While many teen pregnancy prevention programs exist, very few programs have been developed that address the quality of life of the pregnant or parenting teen. This population can suffer from poor nutrition, increased risk of obesity, negative body image, and financial insecurity due to the challenges of caring for a child in their own adolescence. If not addressed, these issues can be passed onto their children, thus negatively impacting future generations. Therefore, research will be conducted to address the nutrition and well-being of teen mothers through a mentoring program designed to capitalize on the skills and efficiencies of Family and Consumer Science (FCS) students and professionals. FCS faculty will design a mentoring program that utilizes FCS students as mentors to teen mothers. The program content will be developed to address the most relevant needs of the population and FCS student mentors will be trained to deliver the content through engaging activities for mothers and children. Since childhood obesity is a national issue, the focus of the program is to improve the nutrition of the teen mothers in the program, and in turn, the nutritional outlook of their children. However, since FCS is interdisciplinary, the program will also include content to improve the well-being of the teen mothers through mentoring in appearance and dress, child development and parenting, and financial literacy.

In this project, research programming for Global Food Security and Hunger will focus efforts in four areas: aquaculture, genetic mapping, genomics and breeding for selected vegetables, and trialing of vegetables and cut flowers. To address climate change research scientists will:

- (1) develop innovative drainage systems;
- (2) evaluate vegetable, fruit and ornamental varieties for small farm production under changing environmental conditions;
- (3) investigate the use of high tunnels to ameliorate changing environmental conditions; and (4) develop rating method for soil-based runoff mitigation practices. The sustainable energy program will utilize a pilot plant thermophilic anaerobic digester by:
 - (1) testing the process thresholds and ecological resilience of thermophilic digesters using replicate experimental reactors;
 - (2) develop methods of repairing soil quality and vegetative growth of mined soils by utilizing treated solid waste to alleviate pollution and contamination, as well as improve productivity, and develop innovative drainage systems; and
 - (3) evaluate the use of anaerobically digested poultry litter as a soil amendment at a local mountaintop removal site. Provide mine operators with novel management practices for the development of healthy and productive soil that will economically benefit the local communities. The targeted audience will include: Fish feed manufacturers, federal agencies (ARS) involved in rainbow trout breeding, fish farmers, Horticulturalists, plant breeders, farmers/growers, small-farm operators, minority farmers and landowners, underserved rural communities, state and federal agencies, and students, homeowners, consumers, volunteer organizations, various segments of the youth population, and other agricultural and natural resource focused entities.

The overall goal of one research project is to use a holistic approach to provide an environment that promotes healthy eating habits, active lifestyles, and concern for each other and the environment to foster lifelong habits. The project objectives are to:

- (1) conduct research on food preferences to revise/develop menus that meet or exceed the USDA Dietary Requirements;
- (2) conduct research to identify age-appropriate physical activities that will promote a healthier lifestyle;
- (3) use laboratory setting to introduce culturally diverse foods and physical activities; and
- (4) introduce environmentally friendly practices at the center to promote an environmentally healthy lifestyle.

The specific changes in action outcomes of this project include an:

- (1) increase in children's daily consumption of diversified fresh fruits and vegetables;
- (2) increase in the amount and overall length of age appropriate daily structured and open-ended physical activity times;
- (3) increase in the distribution of educational training and materials related to promoting healthy lifestyles; and
- (4) increase in the number of pre-service teachers and childcare centers trained to adopt sound nutrition and physical activity policies in childcare settings.

The main purpose of this proposed project is to increase production and use of cowpea so as to increase farm revenue and enhance the nutritional well-being of the farm family and other consumers while at the same time maintaining a sustainable food system. This goal will be met through the following four broadly interactive areas of focus: a) variety evaluation for broad ecological adaptability; b) sustainable pest management (tactics and efficacy), c) use as human food and forage/livestock feed supplement, d) soil health improvement (cover crop, fertility enhancement, weed suppression). Specific objectives are: a) to evaluate cowpea accessions for pest and disease resistance and vegetative vigor across three ecological zones; b) develop pest management practices appropriate for organic and small-scale production of cowpea for the fresh market food system; c) determine the molecular distinctiveness and biochemical/nutritional profiles of selected cultivars that determine their potential use for animal and human food; d) determine growth rates of goats raised on grass forage versus grass/cowpea mixed paddocks, and goat performance in cowpea over-seed into pasture rotational grazing system for goats; and e) perform economic analysis of cowpea-based Best Production Practices recommended from this project. Fiscal Year 2014: Pending appropriations, pertinent details will be provided at a future date.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

10.206 GRANTS FOR AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH_COMPETITIVE RESEARCH GRANTS

National Research Initiative Competitive Grants Program (NRI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Competitive, Special and Facilities Research Grant Act, Section 2(2)(b), [7 U.S.C. 450i] ., 7 U.S.C 450i.

OBJECTIVES:

To support research, education and extension grants that address key problems of national, regional and multistate importance in sustaining all components of agriculture (farming, ranching, forestry, aquaculture, rural communities, human nutrition and obesity, food and fiber processing, etc.) Providing this support to US agriculture requires that the NRI advance fundamental. Building on these discoveries will necessitate new efforts in education and extension that deliver science-based knowledge to people, allowing them to make informed practical decisions. All grants were awarded on a competitive basis.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

NIFA Competitive Programs Unit administers the NRI. The purpose of the NRI Competitive Grants Program was to support research grants and integrated research, extension, and education grants that address key problems of National, regional, and multi-state importance in sustaining all components of agriculture (farming, ranching, forestry including urban and agroforestry, aquaculture, rural communities, human nutrition, processing, etc.). Providing this support requires that NRI advances fundamental sciences in support of agriculture and coordinates opportunities to build on these discoveries. Building on these discoveries will necessitate new efforts in education and extension that deliver science-based knowledge to people, allowing them to make informed practical decisions. Hence, the NRI accepted applications for fundamental research, mission-linked research, and integrated research, extension, and education projects. However, applicants should know that the NRI utilized no more than twenty-two percent (22%) of available funds to support integrated projects and that these funds were not distributed uniformly, but targeted to specific priorities. Targeted priorities for integrated projects were clearly identified within the detailed descriptions of program offerings [see Part II, E of the Fiscal Year (FY) 08 Request for Applications (RFAs)]. Funds may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research spaces (including energy retrofitting); purchase or installations of fixed equipment in such spaces; or planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

For research projects, the eligibility requirements for the NRI were as follows: except where otherwise prohibited by law, State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals were eligible to apply for and to receive a competitive grant. The Agricultural Research Enhancement Awards (AREA) have some notable differences from these requirements. See Part II C, 2. of Fiscal Year (FY) 08 Requests for Applications (RFAs).

For integrated projects, the eligibility requirements for the NRI were as follows: except where otherwise prohibited by law, State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, research foundations maintained by colleges or universities, private research organizations with established and demonstrated capacities to perform research or technology transfer, Federal research agencies, and national laboratories were eligible to apply for and receive a competitive grant. The bridge grants have some notable differences from these requirements. See Part II, C, 3(b) of Fiscal Year (FY) 08 RFAs for details.

Unsolicited applications were not considered and applications from scientists at non-United States organizations were not accepted. Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply provided such organizations were necessary for the conduct of the project.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

For research grants eligibility includes State Agricultural Experiment Stations, U.S. colleges/universities, other U.S. research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals. For integrated research, education and extension grants eligibility includes State Agricultural Experiment Stations, U.S. colleges/universities, research foundations maintained by colleges or universities, private research organizations with established and demonstrated capacities to perform research or technology transfer, Federal research agencies and national laboratories. Proposals from scientists at non-U.S. organizations will not be considered for support.

Credentials/Documentation:

A Data Universal Number System (DUNS) number must be obtained - A DUNS number is a unique number that identifies an organization. It has been adopted by the Federal government to help track how Federal grant money is distributed. If your organization does not have a DUNS number, call the special Dun & Bradstreet hotline at 1-866-705-5711 to receive one free of charge. You will receive a DUNS number within several days of your request. Please note, individual proprietorships (i.e. farmers, ranchers) can request and receive a DUNS number, but must register with Grants.gov as an organization, not as an individual.

Registration with Central Contractor Registry (CCR) is required - The CCR is the central government repository for organizations working with the Federal government. If your organization is not already registered, identify the primary contact who should register your organization. When your organization registers with CCR, it will be required to designate an e-Business Point of Contact (e-Business POC). The e-Business POC authorizes individuals to submit grant applications on behalf of the organization and creates a special password called a Marketing Partner ID Number (M-PIN) to verify individuals authorized to submit grant applications for the organization. Visit the CCR Web site at <http://www.ccr.gov> to begin this process. It may take several days to collect the information needed for your organizations registration. The CCR Assistance Center can be reached at 888-227-2423. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the RFAs. Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but were not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one (1) time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there were factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

All RFAs were published on the Agencies website and Grants.gov. Applicants must complete the Grants.gov registration process. Please see the following Grants.gov link for more information: http://www.grants.gov/applicants/get_registered.jsp. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. OMB Circular No. A-110 applies to this program. Applications should be submitted as outlined in the RFA. Applications must follow the instructions provided per Grants.gov and in the Agency guide to submitting applications via Grants.gov. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs.

Award Procedure:

Applications were subjected to a system of peer and merit review in accordance with Section 103 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7613) by a panel of qualified scientists and other appropriate persons who were specialists in the field covered by the proposal.

Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications were judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA. This information collection is approved under OMB Control No. 0524-0039, NIFA Application Kit for Research and Extension Programs. Reviewers were selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors: (a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities; (b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields; (c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs; (d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations; (e) the need to maintain a balanced composition of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and (f) the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness to producers and the general public of each application.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: As occurs each year under this program, several dozen smaller ($1,000 to $30,000 each) projects were funded during FY-2011. Because so many smaller studies are supported annually some aspect of each of the topic areas listed below are generally represented in one or more projects each program year. In accordance with the legal authority for this program, all of the following project topic areas relate directly to health and/or disease in agriculturally relevant animals: infectious disease, metabolic disease, genetic disease, infertility, toxicoses, host-pathogen interactions, Ecology and epidemiology of disease, pathophysiology/pathogenesis of disease, prevention, diagnosis, treatment and control of disease, genetic/genomic/proteomic mechanisms of disease, strategies and resources to enhance US animal agrosecurity capacities and capabilities against high consequence foreign and endemic animal disease. Fiscal Year 2013: As occurs each year under this program, several dozen smaller ($1,000 to $30,000 each) projects were funded during FY-2012. Because so many smaller studies are supported annually some aspect of each of the topic areas listed below are generally represented in one or more projects each program year. 10.210 HIGHER EDUCATION GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS GRANT PROGRAM

Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Grant Program (Graduate Fellowships)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 7106 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 (Public Law 110-246) amends the legislative authority for this program contained in Section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152) to include the University of the District of Columbia as an eligible applicant. , 7 U.S.C 3152.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the NNF Grants Program is to train students for Masters and/or doctoral degrees and provide additional postdoctoral training for Fellows who have completed their doctoral degrees at colleges and universities that have demonstrable teaching and research competencies in the food and agricultural sciences. Fellowships and IRTA awards are specifically intended to support traineeship programs that encourage outstanding students to pursue and complete their degrees or obtain postdoctoral training in areas where there is a national need for the development of scientific and professional expertise in the food and agricultural sciences. Fellowships and IRTA awards invest in graduate training and relevant international experiential learning for a cadre of diverse individuals who demonstrate their potential to successfully complete graduate degree programs in disciplines relevant to the mission of the USDA.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:PROJECT GRANTS*USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Competitive annual grants providing for a limited number of graduate stipends are awarded to selected U.S. institutions of higher education so as to distribute support for graduate study to promising food and agricultural scientists and professionals. Individuals selected initially by the institution must enroll in a program leading to a graduate, master's or doctoral degree in one of the targeted national needs areas of the food and agricultural sciences. Such persons may not have been enrolled previously in the program at the same degree level. Current fellows are eligible to receive supplemental grants of $3,000 to cover travel and living expenses for special international study or thesis/dissertation research experiences. Funding for the supplemental grants will be awarded on a competitive basis using no-year funds drawn from expired fellowship grants with unspent funds remaining as set forth in the annual program guidelines. No indirect cost allowed. Institutional allowance in lieu of indirect cost.

NNF stipend funds for fellowship must be used to:

- (1) support the same Fellow at the Masters degree level who maintains satisfactory progress and is eligible to receive grant support for a maximum of twenty-four (24) months during a thirty-month period, and/or
- (2) support the same Fellow at the doctoral degree level who maintains satisfactory progress and is eligible to receive grant support for a maximum of thirty-six (36) months within a forty-two-month period. Institutions must use a minimum stipend of $18,500 per year for Masters Fellows and $24,500 per year for Doctoral Fellows.

If funds remain as a result of USDA Fellows completing their studies early (less than twenty-four months for a Masters degree or less than thirty-six months for a doctoral degree) or Fellowships being terminated prematurely, such funds may be used, within the time remaining on the award, to support:

- (1) pursuit of a doctoral degree in a TESA in the food and agricultural sciences by a Masters degree level Fellow at the grantee institution, or
- (2) a Replacement Fellow.

The tenure of such a Replacement Fellow is limited to whatever time is remaining on the grant before it expires; however, an institution may not appoint a Replacement Fellow unless there is time for the student to complete at least one semester/quarter of study before the expiration date of the grant. Replacement Fellows must meet all of the eligibility criteria and other requirements established for Fellow selection and are subject to the same provisions as other Fellows during their tenure in the program. Replacement Fellows are entitled, during their tenure, to the same benefits that other Fellows receive from the grant award and National Needs Graduate and Postdoctoral Fellowship Grants Program. Institutions may, but are not required to, continue a Replacement Fellow's tuition and other benefits beyond the expiration date of the grant using institutional or other funds. A Fellow may not be simultaneously supported under multiple National Needs Graduate and Postdoctoral Fellowship Grants Program awards. Remaining funds cannot be used to increase annual Fellowship stipends provided to existing Fellows. If less than one semester/quarter remains on the award, the grantee must refund unexpended monies to NIFA. Such funds cannot be used to increase the annual stipend amounts for current USDA Graduate Fellows. Should a USDA Fellow require additional time beyond the grant period to complete his or her degree, it is expected that the grantee will consider alternatives to continue supporting the Fellow through other means. Tuition and fees are the responsibility of the Fellow unless an institution elects to use its cost-of-education institutional allowance for this purpose or elects to pay such costs out of non-USDA monies. No dependency allowances are provided to any USDA Graduate Fellows. Stipend payments and special international study or thesis/dissertation research travel allowances may be made to Fellows by the institution, in accordance with standard institutional procedures for graduate fellowships and assistantships. When grants are for IRTAs that will be used by To-Be-Recruited Fellows: The IRTA funds for To-Be-Recruited fellows will be withheld until the Project Director has submitted, to the NNF Program Office, all of the required documentation for eligibility of the Graduate Fellow for the IRTA as well as the required specifics outlined in the RFA for the IRTA. The information must be submitted for approval, no less than 150 days prior to the use of the IRTA funds (see PART IV, B, 3, b, Section 1). This requirement will become a condition of the award. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

10.212 SMALL BUSINESS INNOVATION RESEARCH

(SBIR Program - Phase I and II)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

This program solicitation is issued pursuant to the Small Business Innovation Development Act of 1982, Public Law 97-219, as amended (15 U.S.C. 638) and Section 630 of the Act making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies programs for fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, and for other purposes, as made applicable by Section 101(a) of Public Law 99-591, 100 Stat. 3341.

OBJECTIVES:

To stimulate technological innovation in the private sector, strengthen the role of small businesses in meeting Federal research and development needs, increase private sector commercialization of innovations derived from USDA-supported research and development efforts, and foster and encourage participation, by women-owned and socially disadvantaged small business firms in technological innovation.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The selected areas for research are Forests and Related Resources; Plant Production and Protection-Biology; Animal Production and Protection; Air, Water and Soils; Food Science and Nutrition; Rural and Community Development; Aquaculture; Biofuels and Biobased Products; Small and Mid-Size Farms, Plant Production and Protection-Engineering. The Small Business Innovation Research Program is carried out in three separate phases: Phase I projects are supported to determine the scientific or technical feasibility of ideas submitted by small business applicants on the selected research areas; Phase II awards are made to firms with approaches that appear sufficiently promising as a result of Phase I studies. Only those small businesses previously receiving Phase I awards in either of the two preceding fiscal years are eligible to submit Phase II proposals.

Phase II projects are limited to $450,000 for a period normally not to exceed 24 months; Phase III is to be conducted by the small business concern (including joint ventures and limited partnerships), and will be non-SBIR funded through the exercising of a follow-on funding commitment. The purpose of Phase III is to stimulate technological innovation and the national return on investment from research through the pursuit of commercialization objectives resulting from the USDA-supported work carried out in Phases I and II. Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences.

Fee:

A reasonable fee, not to exceed seven percent of total Federal funds awarded is permitted under this program, but applicants are encouraged to minimize fee requests due to the small amount of funds available. All fees are subject to negotiation with USDA.

Indirect Costs:

If available, the current rate negotiated with the cognizant Federal negotiating agency should be used. Indirect costs may not exceed the negotiated rate.

If no rate has been negotiated, a reasonable dollar amount in lieu of indirect costs may be requested, which will be subject to approval by USDA. In the latter case, if an application is recommended for funding, an indirect cost rate application must be submitted to support the amount of indirect costs requested. NIFA will request an indirect cost rate application and provide instructions, as necessary.

An applicant may elect not to charge indirect costs and, instead, use all grant funds for direct costs.

Further detailed instructions are provided in the SBIR RFA (solicitation). Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applicant Eligibility (1) is organized for profit, with a place of business located in the United States, which operates primarily within the United States, or which makes a significant contribution to the United States economy through the payment of taxes or use of American products, materials or labor; (2) is in the legal form of an individual proprietorship, partnership, limited liability company, corporation, joint venture, association, trust or cooperative, except that where the form is a joint venture, there can be no more than 49 percent participation by foreign business entities in the joint venture; (3) is at least 51 percent owned and controlled by one or more individuals who are citizens of, or permanent resident aliens in, the United States, except in the case of a joint venture, where each entity in the venture must be 51 percent owned and controlled by one or more individuals who are citizens of, or permanent resident aliens in the United States; and (4) has, including its affiliates, not more than 500 employees. EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: SBIR Phase I:

Control of the mountain pine beetle (MPB) is a critical problem. The SPLAT (Specialized Pheromone & Lure Application Technology) approach involves the incorporation of the MPB anti-aggregation semiochemical verbenone into a flowable substrate so that verbenone is released over a sustained period of time to control MPB attacks on pine trees.

Development of robotic selective harvesting technology will help to make the Florida citrus industry more productive. Modern citrus groves use high density semi-dwarf trees and open hydroponics with optimized nutrient and water availability to accelerate plant growth. To maximize the productivity of these new groves improved harvesting technology is needed.

Walleye is a highly valued foodfish and sportfish and efforts will be made to determine the feasibility of using hybridization together with intensive, in-tank fry-fingerling culture to produce food size walleye in one growing season in recirculating aquaculture systems .

Production of green diesel or biodiesel from biomass has many environmental benefits. Many different types of biomass can be converted to pyrolysis oil and then catalytically ungraded to green diesel. The process does not produce sulfur-containing compounds or any other environmentally harmful by-products.

Rural student math and science solving skills is a priority in many rural elementary and middle schools where distance and lack of resources pose special problems. A web-based distance learning software product will be developed that is designed to train students in all of the problem types required by the Common Core Math Standards.

SBIR Phase II:

Developing new markets for forest by-products, which encourages healthy timber management, is an important goal. Testing of small diameter round timbers and of Y-branched timbers has demonstrated that they have substantial strength and can be widely used in building systems. Development of cost-effective selection, grading and manufacturing techniques will enhance the commercial use of these special timbers.

Pruning of grapevines is a labor intensive operation. Efforts are under way to develop the necessary algorithms, software and hardware to develop a grapevine pruner that will be fast enough and accurate enough to make an autonomous grapevine pruner a commercial reality.

Soilborne fungal pathogens are a serious problem for plant agriculture. A new bacterium (Streptomyces scopoliridis) is being investigated as a potential biocontrol agent against various soilborne fungal pathogens. The manufacture of this bacterium will be scaled up to permit large scale field trials against selected fungal pathogens.

A real challenge for ranchers on the Great Plains is providing drinking water in winter for their livestock when water in stock tanks typically freezes. A solar stock tank heating system is being developed that will provide enough heat to keep the stock tank water open, so that the rancher does not have to travel to each stock tank to remove the ice.

Tower-mounted wind turbines have limited applicability due to high costs and the unavailability of high winds at low altitudes in most areas. An Airborne Wind Turbine (AWT) is being developed where a helium-filled balloon lifts a wind turbine 500 to 2000 feet above ground level where wind speeds are much higher. The AWT is connected to a ground-based electrical grid via a conductive tether. The tether also serves to keep the AWT in one place. Fiscal Year 2013: SBIR Phase I:

Cyanobacteria are photosynthetic N-fixing organisms that can be used as a source of N-rich bio-fertilizer. Field tests to compare crop yields and nitrogen use efficiency will be run comparing cyanobacterial bio-fertilizer with conventional fertilizer and other common organic fertilizers.

Vibrio tubiashii is a serious bacterial pathogen that kills larvae of shellfish such as oysters. Bacteriophages are viruses that are specific for certain bacteria. Bacteriophages that are specific for V. tubiashii will be tested for their ability to reduce oyster larvae mortality due to V. tubiashii.

Hydrokinetic river energy generates zero emission electricity from river currents. This system is ideal for isolated rural communities that are located on river systems where the hydrokinetic river energy can be used to replace diesel generators for production of electricity.

Porcine Respiratory Disease Complex (PRDC) is one of the major challenges for the swine industry. A rapid and easy-to-use diagnostic test that can be used in the field for rapid detection of PRDC is being developed.

Honey bees are critical to many aspects of American agriculture. An effective monitoring system is needed to better understand how to improve bee pollination efficiency and bee survivability. A solar powered beehive that is outfitted with various sensors will be developed to permit a better understanding of bee behavior and physiology.

SBIR Phase II:

Consumer demand for locally produced, all-natural meat has been growing substantially in recent years. The biggest challenge is how to insure a steady supply of meat and how to insure the economical transport of the meat from the local farmers to the customers. A food hub has been developed that is working with a group of local farmers, a local meat processor and various institutional customers to provide a steady supply of locally-sourced, high quality meat for a number of wholesale buyers.

Oil and gas production often produces large amounts of contaminated water at the same time and one of the contaminants of concern is boron. Treating the water so it can be reused is the best solution to this problem. To achieve this objective rapid, on-site testing methods are required. A microfluidics-based chemical testing system is under development to deal with this problem.

Dietary guidelines recommend eating 7-9 servings of fruits and vegetables per day. Vegetables also contain secondary metabolite phytochemicals that enhance nutrition and help to reduce the chances of chronic disease. Specific wavelengths of LED lights can enhance the content of some of these phytochemicals in leafy specialty crops, herbs and tomatoes. Efforts are underway to use LED lights to produce specialty crops with enhanced nutritional quality.

Mussels are a popular seafood that can be farmed on special rafts. These rafts can be positioned in sheltered locations but such locations are limited. More exposed locations provide a better environment for growing mussels but the exposure to wind, currents and sea ice can be damaging to mussel rafts. Efforts are underway to develop submersible mussel rafts that can be lowered 10-20 feet below the sea surface to avoid damage from waves and sea ice and provide superior conditions for the growth of mussels.

Lignocellulosic biomass can be broken down into C5 and C6 sugars that can be converted to myristic (C14) and palmitic (C16) fatty acids. These fatty acids can be converted into a variety of cosmetic and topical medicinal compounds. Conversion of lignocellulosic biomass into fatty acids adds considerable value to the lignocellulosic biomass. Fiscal Year 2014: SBIR Phase I

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program (SARE) program is to encourage research designed to increase our knowledge concerning agricultural production systems that: (1) maintain and enhance the quality and productivity of the soil; (2) conserve soil, water, energy, natural resources, and fish and wildlife habitat; (3) maintain and enhance the quality of surface and ground water; (4) protect the health and safety of persons involved in the food and farm system; (5) promote the well being of animals; and (6) increase employment opportunities in agriculture (section 1619-1624 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 (FACTA), Public Law 101-624 (7 U.S.C. 5801). The request for applications (RFA) is for the regional SARE host institutions to apply for funds to carry out the regional SARE programs under the direction of the SARE Regional Administrative Councils (section 1622 of FACTA (7 U.S.C. 5812)), and for selected national projects. Most SARE competitive grants are made by the SARE regions as subawards. Typically, approximately 85% of the award to a SARE regional host institution is used for subawards. Individuals and organizations interested in applying for SARE competitive grants should NOT respond to this funding opportunity; rather they should apply to the appropriate SARE regional program. Funded projects should build capacity at the host institution in the areas of research, education, and/or extension. The grants are intended to address key problems of national, regional, and multi-institutional importance in sustaining all components of agriculture, including farm efficiency and profitability, ranching, renewable energy, forestry (both urban and agroforestry), aquaculture, rural communities and entrepreneurship, human nutrition, food safety, family and consumer sciences, biotechnology, and conventional breeding. Also in 2012, all projects had to address one of five Priority Areas: Global Food Security and Hunger, Climate Change, Sustainable Energy, Childhood Obesity, and Food Safety. Fiscal Year 2013: For FY 2013, approximately $16,500,000 was available for grant awards. A total of 18 institutions representing 17 states submitted 188 applications (50 teaching, 91 research, and 34 extension).

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: Research Project Example # 1 -- Drought is a global problem that is worsening as a result of the continued climate warming. Maintaining fast seedling growth even under drought condition is a major challenge for growing switchgrass, as the lignocellulose biomass production should not compete with established food/feed systems for water resources. This project seeks to identify protein networks and produce tolerant plants that will enhance switchgrass seedling growth under drought conditions.

Research Project Example # 2 -- The primary objective of this project is to enhance and strengthen research, teaching, and extension programs at the 1890 university in agriculture science by focusing on a comprehensive screening and diagnostic of grapevine diseases to ensure that the Certified Mother Blocks are maintained disease-free for propagation, and clean plant material is distributed to growers for the sustainability of grape and wine industry in the state and region.

Teaching Project Example # 1 --The goal of the project is to enrich recruitment strategies to build a critical mass of talented high school students in the enrollment pipelines for the Agronomy and Ag Education degree programs and to increase the number of graduates with strong background in food and agricultural sciences. This will be achieved through enhanced recruitment and retention approaches mobilizing academic communities, offering appropriate curricula, providing students with scholarships and/or on-campus job opportunities, and thus creating general awareness and appreciation for careers in food and agricultural sciences.

Teaching Project Example # 2 -- With the advancement in information and communication technology (ICT), traditional agriculture is transforming to modern and intelligent agriculture. The objective of this project is to establish an intelligent equipment lab for precision agriculture on Prairie View A&M University (PVAMU) campus to provide students the opportunity to improve their hands-on experiences with the cutting-edge agricultural ICT and decision making techniques.

Extension Project Example This project will create a Residential Energy Efficiency Network to ensure that the energy concerns of the rural disadvantaged and low-to moderate income audiences are addressed. This program will focus on providing low-to-moderate income State residents with the education and information they need to adopt energy practices that produce economic benefits, reduce environmental impact and increase sustainability of energy supply. EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: Create and evaluate an educational interactive gaming module for use by postsecondary students as an effective instructional tool to improve the understanding and awareness of food safety within the larger context of agriculture, food manufacturing and public health. This gaming module will have substantial merit for use in food science classrooms throughout the United States.

Create new curriculum content (pathogenesis animations, integrated case scenarios, and a virtual microscopy slide set) for selected transboundary and high-impact zoonotic diseases of production animals. The curriculum will be delivered via websites, existing on-line courses, and through an advanced pathology elective. The project will create high quality learning materials that will enhance effective learning and awareness of disease that threaten food security.

Establish low-cost, bioenergy coursework through a system of degree and certificate offerings.

Develop a educational resource center for child and adolescent obesity training particularly focusing on environment and policy approaches.

Address the need for preparing Native Americans for the scientific work force by expanding the availability of academic degree offerings of natural resource sciences. Fiscal Year 2013: Curriculum development for renewable energy technologies including the bioenergy and woody biomass sector, solar and solar thermal energy, and wind energy generation. The proposed curriculum will provide a portal through which a diverse undergraduate population can advance their understanding of renewable energy technologies in agricultural landscapes. Funding will support both resident instruction as well as online, distance education courses.

Integrated, transdisciplinary curriculum development for undergraduates on the causes and consequences of childhood obesity. Academic institutions across the nation will be able to freely access the curriculum via a pass-word protected web site. Micro-lectures will be created by leading experts across multiple disciplines that can be used to flip the classroom whereby students view the lecture prior to coming to class. Class time is then spent in interactive activities.

Develop eLearning curricula on controlled environment animal production.

Curriculum development to improve interdisciplinary U.S. Masters level education to address the shortage of qualified individuals working at the nexus of food, agricultural and rural policy and policies for sustainability--especially in climate change adaptation, sustainable energy development and use, and agricultural and rural development that lead to improved quality of life for farmers, rural residents and society in general. Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, Section 7210 , Public Law 101-171 , 7 U.S.C 5921; Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990, Section 1668 , 7 U.S.C 7901.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the BRAG program is to assist Federal regulatory agencies in making science-based decisions about the effects of introducing into the environment genetically engineered organisms, including plants, microorganisms (including fungi, bacteria, and viruses), arthropods, fish, birds, mammals and other animals excluding humans. Investigations of effects on both managed and natural environments are relevant. The BRAG program accomplishes its purpose by providing Federal regulatory agencies with scientific information relevant to regulatory considerations derived from the risk assessment research that the program funds.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research objectives. Funds may not be used for purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular No. A-21, (codified at 2 CFR 220), some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project. Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

*Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

10.220 HIGHER EDUCATION - MULTICULTURAL SCHOLARS GRANT PROGRAM

Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Grant Program (Multicultural Scholars)

[Formerly: Minority Scholars Program]

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Legislative authority for this program is contained in section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152). USDA/NIFA administers this federal assistance grant program to support food and agricultural sciences baccalaureate and Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (D.V.M.) degree training of the next generation of scientists, policy makers, and educators in the Food and Agricultural Sciences. USDA initiated the Higher Education Multicultural Scholars Program in FY 1994. This program, functioning collaboratively with eligible higher education institutions, is developing intellectual capital to secure the preeminence of U.S. food and agricultural systems., 7 U.S.C 3152.

OBJECTIVES:

To increase the ethnic and cultural diversity of the food and agricultural scientific and professional work force, and to advance the educational achievement of minority Americans, by providing grants to colleges and universities that have a demonstrable capacity to attract, educate, and graduate minority students for careers as agriscience and agribusiness professionals, and have unique capabilities for achieving the objective of full representation of minority groups in the fields of agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Competitive annual grants to selected U.S. institutions of higher education provide for a limited number of four-year undergraduate scholarships to support minority students pursuing baccalaureate degrees in the food and agricultural sciences. Institutions also receive an annual cost-of-education allowance for each scholar supported by a grant. The scholars are selected by the institutions and students must apply for the scholarships through procedures established by the individual institutions.

No scholarship grants are made directly to students and students cannot apply directly to USDA for scholarships. Scholarship monies may be used for tuition, fees, room, board, and other educational expenses as announced in a Federal Register notice inviting applications for new awards.

The institutional cost-of-education allowance may be used by the selected institutions to defray program expenses including, but not limited to, travel and publications costs incurred for student recruitment, and salaries of project personnel. Indirect cost is not allowable. Pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 3152(b), no indirect costs may be recovered under the MSP Program. Funds are restricted to the clearly designated uses found within the RFA.

For Award Category No. 2 Proposals, the budget sharing criteria are: (i) no single institution may receive more than forty percent (40%) and (ii) any institution may not receive less than fifteen percent (15%) of the requested funding for the baccalaureate and/or D.V.M. degree level training project (see Part II, C of the RFA).

When grant is for SEL that will be used by To-Be-Recruited Scholars: The SEL funds for To-Be-Recruited Scholars will be withheld until the Project Director has submitted, to the MSP Grants Program Office, all of the required documentation for eligibility of the MSP/SEL Scholar(s) for the SEL as well as the required specifics outlined in the RFA for the SEL. The information must be submitted for approval, no less than 150 days prior to the use of the SEL funds (see Part IV, B., 3, b, Section 1 of the RFA). Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Proposals may be submitted by all U.S. colleges and universities with baccalaureate or higher degree programs in agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system, including land-grant colleges and universities, colleges and universities having significant minority enrollments and a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences, and other colleges and universities having a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Funds awarded under this program are used to support full-time undergraduate students pursuing a baccalaureate degree in an area of the food and agricultural sciences or a closely allied field. Persons eligible to receive scholarships under this program are students who either are enrolled or have been accepted as full-time baccalaureate or DVM degree candidates, and who are members of groups traditionally under-represented in food and agricultural scientific and professional fields.

This grants program is designed to promote and strengthen higher education instruction in the food and agricultural sciences at the 33 Tribal Colleges designated as 1994 Land-Grant Institutions in the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994, as amended. Plans of Work should focus on undergraduate and/or graduate studies in the food and agricultural sciences in one or more of the following areas: Curricula Design and Materials Development, Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching, Instruction Delivery Systems, Student Experiential Learning, Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching, or Student Recruitment and Retention.

The purpose of the TCEG Program is to provide funding to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans in the food and agricultural sciences. The TCEG program is intended to strengthen institutional capacity to deliver relevant formal education opportunities. The TCEG is intended to be a component of the applicant 1994 institutions land grant roadmap or strategic planning process. To the extent practicable, priorities should reflect the following national critical needs areas:

1. Sustainable energy
2. Global food security and hunger
3. Climate change
4. Nutrition and preventing childhood obesity
5. Food safety
6. Sustainable rural economies

Awards are made upon approval of each institutions application for a grant that relate to an institutions long-range goals. As indicated in Part 1, C. of the RFA, an application may address one (1) or more of the following program areas:

Curricula Design and Materials Development
Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching
Instruction Delivery Systems
Student Experiential Learning
Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching
Student Recruitment and Retention

Recognizing that strengthening instructional programs is a long-term ongoing process, the TCEG program is interested in funding subsequent phases of previously funded projects in order to strengthen institutional capacity, and institutions are encouraged to build on a theme over several grant awards to reach institutional long-range goals.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Tribal College Equity Program (TCEG) provides funds to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans by strengthening instructional programs in the food and agricultural sciences at the thirty four (34) tribal colleges designated as the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions).

Under this authority, appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions) for Education capacity building and funds are to be distributed equally among institutions that meet eligibility requirements. Funding Restrictions:

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Indirect costs for the Equity program are not required and a 1994 institution may take less than the allowable amount or forego indirect costs altogether - adjust budgets accordingly.

Neither research nor extension projects are supported under the TCEG Program.

The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project.

Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Special Notices:

1. NIFA will withhold all funds for a TCEG award to an applicant requesting indirect costs if the applicant has not negotiated an indirect cost rate with its cognizant federal agency.
2. If a grantee is in the process of negotiating an indirect cost rate with its federal agency, NIFA will withhold all funds from that grantee until the indirect cost rate has been established.
3. If an institutions indirect cost rate has expired or will expire in the near future, a clear statement on renegotiation efforts must be included in the application. (See Part IV, B.5. of the RFA - Budget Justification.)
4. It is incumbent on all applicants to have a current indirect cost rate or begin negotiations to establish an indirect cost rate prior to the TCEG submission deadline. Because it may take several months to obtain an indirect cost rate, applicants needing an indirect cost rate are encouraged to start work on establishing these rates well in advance of submitting a TCEG application.
5. In lieu of requesting indirect costs (if the applicant does not have a negotiated rate), an applicant may prepare a budget in which all charges in the budget are included as direct costs.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by any of the Tribal colleges and universities designated as 1994 Land-Grant Institutions under the Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994, as amended. This Act, as amended in Section 533(a), requires that each 1994 Land-Grant Institution be accredited or making progress towards accreditation and be recognized as a legal entity. If accreditation is being sought, a college must demonstrate its progress towards accreditation by a letter from a nationally recognized accreditation agency affirming receipt of application for an accreditation site visit or other such documentation.

An applicant's failure to meet an eligibility criterion by the time of an application deadline will result in NIFA returning the application without review or, even though an application may be reviewed, will preclude NIFA from making an award.

Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply provided such organizations are necessary for the conduct of project goals and objectives.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: For 2012, Equity supported:

Full time faculty = 29; Part time faculty = 23; Interns = 119

For the first time in school history, students at Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College in Michigan can register to take physics thanks to an upgraded laboratory. And at Leech Lake Tribal College in Cass Lake, Minnesota, students were able to take trigonometry for the first time last year. Funded and supported by NIFA Equity, both schools made improvements to bolster their students learning in the areas of science and mathematics.

At Navajo Technical College, New Mexico, the Vet Department had been closed since 2010. The Equity PD, Germaine Daye re-opened the clinics doors to 50 Navajo Tech students majoring in animal science. in 2012, six Navajo Tech Veterinary Technology Program students passed their internship training last year, gaining invaluable veterinary technician experience in three clinics throughout the Navajo Nation. So far, the program has graduated 10 students, some of whom are pursuing college programs that will lead them to vet school, and sparked the interests of 16 excited, new students enrolling this year.

Tribal Colleges are using Equity funds to recruit and retain students in agricultural-related fields; Improve the preparation of high school students for the rigors of college-level coursework, particularly agricultural-related courses; Provide financial support for students who express interest in agricultural-related coursework; and Develop and implement an agricultural-related climate change courses.

Equity funds are also used at Tribal schools to help in the fight against obesity. Faculty are using the latest information on obesity and developing their curriculums to instruct students on obesity prevention. New courses or being developed so that students will be able to learn about different techniques used to prevent obesity. Classrooms are being upgraded with technology to best deliver the instructions to the students. Summer fit camps are being offered as alternatives to actual college courses.

Some Equity funds are used for developing teaching competencies to increase the knowledge of agricultural sciences for American Indian producers. Through participations in workshops, presentations and seminars, American Indian producers are expected to gain knowledge and apply it to their real life situations. Fiscal Year 2013: This is the final year of a 4-year continuation award and the projects are all similar to the first three years. Fiscal Year 2014: This will be the first year of a new 4-year cycle. Project will be similar to previous years.

Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act) will be furnished to the agency by the American Indian Higher Education Consortium - AIHEC) and 40 percent (40%) on an equal base formula.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: One project will address the problem of career opportunities for underrepresented populations by resolving a gap in available Nutrition classes for Hispanic students. PINT will target 145 Hispanic students through a Nutrition Science curriculum, encouraging enrollment in a new transfer certificate in Nutrition. The program will include guest speakers, field trips, and other opportunities to open up career options to targeted students. PINT will develop a new nutrition-based curriculum and negotiate an articulation agreement with the University of Arizona to create a transfer pipeline for students to achieve baccalaureate degrees in nutritional science.

Another project currently enrolls more than 60 Natural Resources Management (NRM) majors; 75% are underrepresented minority (UM) students. We project 50% enrollment increases over the next 3 years. We plan focused advising, early academic intervention, and a Geographic Information System (GIS)-enhanced curriculum to increase the number of UM students graduating with NRM B.S. degrees and GIS skills. Graduates will have the competencies to collect, manage, manipulate, and share geospatial agricultural data as well as to contribute to the sustainment of rural agriculture and management of natural resources impacted by climatic changes.

Another project is an interdisciplinary and collaborative effort between 5 Hispanic serving institutions, which will provide students from agriculture and related disciplines with graduate research assistantships, undergraduate research stipends and educational and training experiences. CETARS scope also involves outreach activities and hands-on research experiences for talented K-12 students. All of CETARS education training activities are aimed at providing innovative, high impact research training and education experiences to students and faculty from underrepresented Hispanics groups. This way, CETARS will establish and consolidate a pipeline attracting, recruiting, retaining and graduating talented individuals while supporting their actual placement in Agriculture-related positions.

Another project is Connecting Underrepresented Latinos To Integrate Values and Academic Resources. Connecting Underrepresented Latinos To Integrate Values and Academic Resources (CULTIVAR) brings added value to Latinos pursuing graduate education and employment in USDA occupations. It will identify, select, and cultivate Masters degree level students in food and agricultural sciences disciplines through an outstanding thesis award competition focused on USDA priority areas of Food Safety, Climate Change, Sustainable Energy and Childhood Obesity. Fifty fellows, including the award winners, will participate in a Career Preparation Institute networking with senior faculty researchers and USDA agency representatives and create a leadership plan focused on developing human capital relevant to meeting the USDA labor force needs. Fiscal Year 2013: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2013, a total of $ 8.1 million was available to support projects in the following areas of emphasis:

- (1) Faculty Preparation and Enhancement for Teaching;
- (2) Curricula Design, Materials Development, and Library Resources;
- (3) Instruction Delivery Systems;
- (4) Scientific Instrumentation for Teaching;
- (5) Student Experiential Learning; and
- (6) Student Recruitment and Retention (including financial assistance).

In April 2013, a thirty-four member peer review panel reviewed 105 proposals. A total of 18 representing five (5) States and Puerto Rico (7 Continuation, 2 STEAM projects, and 8 Regular) projects are in the process to be awarded the amount of $ 8,141,849.

About five (5) webinars have been conducted to provide HSIs with information about grants, jobs, and internship opportunities in NIFA and other USDA agencies. Four other webinars have been conducted specifically to help students apply for summer opportunities at USDA.

Conference calls have been conducted for HSI existing awardees and Collaboration-continuation projects.

Building a Regional Energy and Educational Network. A consortium comprised of four universities and USDA-ARS have established an educational network that will increase the number of Hispanic students being employed by federal agencies such as USDA in areas related to Sustainable Energy. The goal of project is to create a collaborative network of researchers, educators, USDA agencies, and non-profit organizations to coordinate efforts, share resources, and increase educational, training and post-graduation opportunities for Hispanic students pursuing careers in the Sustainable Energy area.

Watershed Management Experiential Learning for USDA Careers. A Regional Collaboration of 14 Hispanic-Serving Institutions (HSIs) within a system seeks to increase the retention and graduation of underrepresented students for careers in the USDA's workforce through an innovative paid experiential-learning Watershed Management Internship program. Utilizing a Center for Water Resources and Policy Initiatives that bring together over 250 CSU water-related faculty and researchers, this collaboration will harness the research capacity of the faculty and students to address critical water issues confronting in the state. Over 4 years, 200 underrepresented undergraduate and graduate students will be selected for a mentored research projects aimed at USDA careers.

Project: Broadening Access to Modern STEAM Education. The School of Natural Sciences, Mathematics and Engineering will develop a new agricultural sciences concentration, the first step towards developing a comprehensive agriculture degree. Interdisciplinary courses will be developed and related sciences courses will be redesigned to integrate hands-on, problem-based learning with an emphasis on regional agriculture needs. Hispanics students will have the opportunity to earn a high quality degree that will prepare them to be successful agriculture professionals. One full scholarship and financial assistance to 3 other students will be provided. Outreach activities will inform local underrepresented groups of educational opportunities and rewarding careers in agriculture.

Innovative Nutrition Track. This project addresses the problem of career opportunities for underrepresented populations by resolving a gap in available

Nutrition classes for Hispanic students. The project target s145 Hispanic students through a Nutrition Science curriculum, encouraging enrollment in a new transfer certificate in Nutrition. The program will include guest speakers, field trips, and other opportunities to open up career options to targeted students. It will develop a new nutrition-based curriculum and negotiate an articulation agreement with the University of Arizona to create a transfer pipeline for students to achieve baccalaureate degrees in nutritional science.

Geospatial Applications in Natural Sciences (GAINS). An university that currently enrolls more than 60 Natural Resources Management (NRM) majors of which 75 percent are underrepresented minority (UM) students is working to increase by 50 percent enrollment increases over the next 3 years. We plan focused advising, early academic intervention, and a Geographic Information System (GIS)-enhanced curriculum to increase the number of UM students graduating with NRM B.S. degrees and GIS skills. Graduates will have the competencies to collect, manage, manipulate, and share geospatial agricultural data as well as to contribute to the sustainment of rural agriculture and management of natural resources impacted by climatic changes.

10.225 COMMUNITY FOOD PROJECTS

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Community Food Projects Competitive Grants Program (CFPCGP) legislative authority is located in Section 25 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2034), as amended by the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008 and Section 4402 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 (Pub. L. 110-246), which authorizes a program of federal grants to establish and carry out Community Food Projects., 7 U.S.C 2034.

OBJECTIVES:

To support the development of community food projects designed to meet the food needs of low-income people; increase the self-reliance of communities in providing for their own needs; and promote comprehensive responses to local food, farm, and nutrition issues.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Community food projects are intended to take a comprehensive approach to developing long-term solutions that help to ensure food security in communities by linking the food sector to community development, economic opportunity, and environmental enhancement. Comprehensive solutions may include elements such as:

- (1) Improved access to high quality, affordable food among low-income households;

(2) support for local food systems, from urban gardening to local farms that provide high quality fresh food, ideally with minimal adverse environmental impact; and

(3) expanded economic opportunities for community residents through local business or other economic development, improved employment opportunities, job training, youth apprenticeship, school-to-work transition, and the like.

Any solution proposed must tie into community food needs.

Successful applicants must provide matching funds, either in cash or in-kind amounting to at least 50 percent of the total cost of the project during the term of the grant award. 1. Construction and Renovation:

With prior approval, and in accordance with applicable Federal cost principles, grant funds may be used to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility, or to acquire land; and for improvements, alterations, renovations, or repairs to land or buildings, necessary to carry out a funded project under this program. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that such expenditures are essential to achieving the major purpose for which the grant request is made.

2. Indirect Costs:

Full Negotiated Rate.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent.

Applicant Eligibility:

Proposals may be submitted by private nonprofit entities. Because projects must promote comprehensive responses to local food, farm, and nutrition issues, applicants are encouraged to seek and create partnership among public, private nonprofit and private for-profit organizations or firms. To be further eligible for a grant, a private nonprofit applicant must meet three mandatory requirements: 1. Have experience in the area of: (a) community food work, particularly concerning small and medium-sized farms, including the provision of food to people in low-income communities and the development of new markets in low-income communities for agricultural producers; or (b) job training and business development activities in low-income communities; 2. demonstrate competency to implement a project, provide fiscal accountability and oversight, collect data, and prepare reports and other appropriate documentation; and 3. demonstrate a willingness to share information with researchers, practitioners, and other interested parties.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Low income people.

Credentials/Documentation:

No Credentials or documentation are required. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-87.

Preapplication Coordination:

All RFAs are published on the Agency's website and Grants.gov. Applicants must complete the Grants.gov registration process. Please see the following Grants.gov link for more information:

http://www.grants.gov/applicants/get_registered.jsp. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-102. This program is excluded from coverage under OMB Circular No. A-110. Applications should be submitted as outlined in the RFA. Applications must follow the instructions provided per Grants.gov and in the Agency guide to submitting applications via Grants.gov.

OMB Circular No. A-122 applies to this program.

Award Procedure:

Applications are subjected to a system of peer and merit review in accordance with section 103 of the Agricultural Research, Extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 1613) by a panel of qualified scientists and other appropriate persons who are specialists in the field covered by the proposal. Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications are judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA.

Reviewers will be selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors: (a) The level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities; (b) the need to include as reviewers experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields; (c) the need to include as reviewers other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs; (d) the need to include as reviewers experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and Federal agencies, private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations; (e) the need to maintain a balanced composition of reviewers with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and (f) the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness to producers and the general public of each application.

Evaluation Criteria will be delineated in the RFA.

Section :095 - Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

From 30 to 180 days.

Appeals:

Renewals:

Specific details are provided in the Request for Applications (RFA) each fiscal year.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

This program has no statutory formula.

Matching Requirements: Percent: 100%. Successful CFP applicants and PP award applicants MUST provide matching on a dollar-for-dollar basis (100%) for all federal funds awarded.

Matching funds are not required for T & TA grants.

The legislation establishing the FSLC requires that as a condition to receiving a grant from NIFA, the NGO must contribute in-kind resources toward implementing the grant. To comply with this provision, NIFA has determined that applicants must provide at least 25 percent of total project resources on an in-kind basis during the term of the grant award. The Federal share of FSLC costs can be no more than 75 percent of total project costs.

CFP, PP and FSCL grantees may provide matching funds through cash and/or in-kind contributions, including third-party in-kind contributions fairly evaluated, including facilities. The non-federal share of the funding may come from state government, local government, other non-profit entities, or private sources. Examples of qualifying matching contributions may include direct costs such as: rent for office space used exclusively for the funded project; duplication or postage costs; and staff time from an entity other than the applicant for job training or nutrition education.

*SPECIAL NOTES:

(1) Use of Indirect Costs as In-Kind Matching Contributions. Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 22 percent pursuant to section 1462(a) of NARETPA (7 U.S.C. 3310(a)), the awardee may request 11 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 22 percent.

(2) MATCHING FUNDS ARE NOT REQUIRED FOR TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE (T & TA) GRANTS.

10.210 Food and Agricultural Sciences National Needs Graduate Fellowship Grants; 10.216 1890 Institution Capacity Building Grants; 10.217 Higher Education Challenge Grants

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: Enhance teacher professional development activities through high-quality structured training in The Curriculum for Agricultural Science Education (CASE) and Delta training. The project will encourage high school teachers to work closely with university faculty to align curricula and to introduce new depth to sustainable energy and phytotechnology lesson plans. Anticipated results are for an increased number of students to be exposed to and develop knowledge of opportunities in agriculture, and for those students to be more adequately prepared to move seamlessly to a postsecondary institution and careers in agriculture-related industries.

Enable high school students to operate and manage a small-scale oyster nursery. This nursery will employ, on a smaller scale, the same equipment and techniques used by commercial aquaculturists, and will be the first of its kind in New York Harbor. Students will directly manage and operate the nursery and produce oysters for use in restoration projects.

Develop a sustainable agriculture certificate and associates degree program to allow students to further their education in agriculture and/or other STEM disciplines and create a pathway to the attainment of advanced degrees through transfer articulation agreements.

Increase faculty teaching competencies and develop curriculum and instructional delivery services for grade 10-14 high school and community college students and educators across the nation by developing a set of research-based instructional webinars. Content will include emerging technologies in sustainable and renewable agriculture, a web-based Introduction to Agriculture-based Sustainable and Renewable Energy course, and instructional activities available in a modular format that includes emerging research-based information and science and inquiry-based activities. Fiscal Year 2013: Urban Agriculture curriculum development providing contextual, hands-on learning environment for secondary grade level student through a standards-based curriculum, integrated into state-approved courses, that models project-based learning.

Precision agriculture curriculum and mobile lab development to increase secondary grade level students exposure to career opportunities in the expanding field of precision agriculture.

Increase number and diversity of agricultural science students in postsecondary degree programs through development of three new agricultural associate in science degree programs and an articulated 2+2+2 program to pipeline students from secondary grade levels into postsecondary academic institutions.

Develop curriculum modules to better prepare U.S. students in math and science skills through instruction in the fields of agriculture and sustainable energy. This project will provide students with skills required to solve complex agriculture issues and compete in a global economy. The project includes teacher training in STEM-specific resources enabling them to effectively integrate STEM across the curriculum. This resulting instructional unit will provide high school students with a foundation to pursue future coursework for STEM-related careers.

This educational partnership will attract and encourage 9th to 12th grade students, with an emphasis on urban, Latino, and Native American youth, to enroll in community colleges and universities for the purpose of filling projected shortages of qualified agriculture graduates in the 21st century. Resourced developed with grant funds will create innovative and targeted college promotional materials centered on what influences area students to choose a career in agriculture. The project will involve agriculture, science, and business instructors, during professional development workshops, in designing problem based learning activities focused around a thematic unit incorporating STEM content and soft skills. Management, marketing, finance and agricultural equipment innovation lessons will introduce students to the challenging, global employment opportunities available in agribusiness and agriscience. The project will provide opportunities for high school students to meet and interact with peers, educators, and industry leaders at career fairs, family nights, high school visits, and student workshop led by various industry organizations. Fiscal Year 2014: Effective FY 2014, this program will be moved to the National Science Foundation and Department of Education.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: Tribal Colleges will utilize award funds from the Tribal College Research Grant Program to build the capacity of land grant staff and students to engage in research activities to explore and document food literacy among Reservation community members. Many of these projects will develop culturally appropriate research methodology and build capacity for Land grant staff to engage in research activities. The aim is to learn about current and traditional tribal food-ways using methods such as Photovoice, interviews, and focus groups.

College proposes to develop BATS (Broadening Achievements Together in STEM) which will enrich STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) research capacity, allow us to recruit and retain Native American students, and produce high-quality graduates with a comprehensive understanding of research methodologies and experience working with a team of scientist.

Succulent plants, such as Agave, Opuntia, and Yucca species, which were important to the Navajo people for generations, but whose use has declined over the years, offer opportunities to adapt food and energy needs in the face of a increasingly warmer and drier climate. Researchers hypothesize that certain Agave, Opuntia, and Yucca species will be suitable food and bio-energy crops for production in the extreme environmental conditions of the high desert of the Navajo Nation. Students will evaluate several species in these genera to determine their survival and productivity under field conditions. Fiscal Year 2013: No data available. Range and Average of Financial Assistance:

If minimum or maximum amounts of funding per competitive project grant or cooperative agreement are established, these will be announced in the annual program announcement or Request for Application (RFA).

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: For the FY 2012 award cycle, $3,057,491 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 5 applications requesting a total of $2,534,699 were received in this years competition. On May 3, 2012, a five-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty and administrators from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

Funding provided via this grant shall be used:

- (1) To support the activities of consortia of Alaska Native-Serving or Native Hawaiian-Serving Institutions to enhance educational equity for under-represented students;
- (2) To strengthen institutional education capacities, including libraries, curriculum, faculty, scientific instrumentation, instruction delivery systems, and student recruitment and retention, in order to respond to identified State, regional, national, or international educational needs in the food and agriculture sciences;
- (3) To attract and support undergraduate and graduate students from under-represented groups in order to prepare them for careers related to the food, agricultural, and natural resource systems of the United States, beginning with the mentoring of students from K-12, and continuing with the provision of financial support for students through their attainment of a doctoral degree; and
- (4) To facilitate cooperative initiatives between at least two or more Alaska Native-Serving or Native Hawaiian-Serving Institutions, which may work in cooperation with one or more other entities including units of State government and private sector organizations, to maximize the development and use of resources, such as faculty, facilities, and equipment, to improve food and agricultural sciences teaching programs.

One of the active on-going consortium projects between eight-ten campuses is doing extremely well in recruiting 500+ students to enroll in food and ag sciences courses and programs. In one university system, 21 new courses and 5 new degree/certificate programs increased the institutions capacity to educate students in related areas. 80+ new agribusinesses were started and 100+ new products have been created. Students also received academic awards. In another state university system, the certificates/degrees that have been developed and implemented include: Associate of Science degree, Veterinary Science Certificate, High Latitude Range Management Certificate, Environmental Studies Certificate, and Ethno-botany Certificate. New programs such as the Forestry Program, cookbooks published, websites, new farmer training program, to name a few have been possible with this funding. Fiscal Year 2013: For the FY 2013 award cycle, $2,827,111 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 6 applications requesting a total of $4,726,959 were received in this years competition. On April 6, 2013, a three-member combined panel reviewed the ANNH, RIIA, DEG and WAMS programs. The peer panel included faculty and administrators from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities and federal employees. Three of the ANNH programs are pending funding for a total of $2,827,111. Fiscal Year 2014: Pertinent data will be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: The majority of funded projects are continued and enhanced from year to year. For example, in FY 2012, all the previous projects were enhanced and re-funded. Especially focusing on programs for students in rural areas with training in environmental studies including ecosystem health and sustainable energy.

Development of the local agricultural and food production workforce through education and training; and expanding local agricultural and food production through more productive agribusinesses. The Agribusiness, Education, Training and Incubator project supports the UH, Hawaii state, and federal goals of developing sustainable and economically viable food and agricultural enterprises.

Training Alaskans to work successfully in fisheries management and salmon hatchery settings or to continue on to another college degree in fisheries or biology. Many industry and agency sectors in Alaskan fisheries are projecting significant retirement and are concerned about being able to recruit Alaskans trained to enter these careers. This project will help ensure there are trained workers to assist in fisheries management and salmon production. Outcomes include new salmon culture training including 2-3 new classes and workshops and new delivery methods.

To increase retention and completion of four year science and technical degree program for students from coastal communities, 3 programs are proposed for grades 7 to 14 in three programs. First, undergraduates will experience Alaska-specific foundational coursework as a group of peers in distance-delivered courses and workshops based upon a central unifying theme connecting marine and terrestrial pathways in the North Pacific. Second, advanced Alaska native high school students will learn to use molecular techniques to answer ecological questions on how changing climate impacts terrestrial and marine systems. Third, UAS will develop a partnership with Native Alaskan culture camps and the US Forest Service (USFS) for high and middle school students to visit USFS field sites to experience career pathways.

An Ethnobotany program, similar to other innovative programs is inter-disciplinary such as involving native plants in indigenous cultures and combined with scientific and anthropological concepts and methods for their natural, social and economic importance.

The agribusiness consortium project of nine campuses also partner with non-profits to reforest a mountain with native trees. Native food plants are important in this project. Students identify with the plants, foods, and family values. Farming and gardening training has been provided to more than 1600 students resulting in a tangible increase in local food production. Tuition waivers are afforded to students for an agricultural/biology course at a 2-yr campus increasing enrollment to a level establishing the first Associate of Science degree on that campus. Fiscal Year 2013: Three projects are anticipated funding in 2013 from a total funding of $2,827, 111. Fiscal Year 2014: Pertinent data will be provided by Program at a future date.

10.303 INTEGRATED PROGRAMSFEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626), as reauthorized by Section 7306 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246), authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a competitive grants program that provides funding for integrated, multifunctional agricultural research, extension, and education activities. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this program, the Secretary may award grants to colleges and universities [as defined by section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3103)], as amended, on a competitive basis for projects that address priorities in United States agriculture and involve integrated research, education, and extension activities, as determined by the Secretary in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB). Section 7129 of the FCEA amended section 406(b) of AREERA (7 U.S.C. 7626(b)), adding Hispanic-serving agricultural colleges and universities (HSACUs) as eligible entities for competitive funds awarded under this authority (see Part III.B. of RFA for more information).
, 7 U.S.C 7626; Section 2(c)(1)(B) of Public Law 89106, as amended.

, Public Law 89-106; Title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972, Public Law 92-419, 7 U.S.C 2204a; Competitive, Special, and Facilities Research Grant Act, Public Law 89-106, 7 U.S.C 450i.

OBJECTIVES:GENERAL:

NIFA Integrated Programs provide support for integrated research, education, and extension activities. Integrated, multi-functional projects are particularly effective in addressing important agricultural issues through the conduct of problem-focused research that is combined with education and extension of knowledge to those in need of solutions. These activities address critical national, regional, and multi-state agricultural issues, priorities, or problems. Integrated Programs hold the greatest potential to produce and disseminate knowledge and technology directly to end users while providing for educational opportunities to assure agricultural expertise in future generations. See individual program Requests for Applications for additional information about the topics.

SEVERAL PROGRAMS ARE FUNDED UNDER CFDA 10.303. SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(1) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: National Integrated Water Quality Program
The goal of the National Integrated Water Quality Program is to improve the quality of our Nation's surface water and groundwater resources through research, education, and extension activities. Projects funded through this program will facilitate achieving this goal by advancing and disseminating the knowledge base available to agricultural and rural communities. Funded projects should lead to science-based decision-making and management practices that improve the quality of the Nation's surface water and groundwater resources in agricultural and rural watersheds. See RFA for priority areas.

(2) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: National Integrated Food Safety Initiative
The purpose of the National Integrated Food Safety Initiative is to support food safety projects that demonstrate an integrated approach to solving problems in applied food safety research, education, or extension. Various models for integration of applied research, education, and extension will be considered for funding. Applications describing multi-state, multi-institutional, multidisciplinary, and multifunctional activities (and combinations thereof) are encouraged. Applicants are strongly encouraged to address at least two of the three functional areas of research, education, and extension (i.e., research and extension, research and education, or extension and education).

(3) Integrated Research, Education, And Extension Competitive Grants Program: Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers

The goal of the Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers (IPM Centers) is to promote the development and implementation of IPM by facilitating collaboration across states, disciplines, and purposes. IPM Centers will establish and maintain information networks, build partnerships to address pest management challenges and opportunities, evaluate the impact of IPM implementation, communicate positive outcomes to key stakeholders, and manage funding resources effectively. Successful applicants to this program will demonstrate the capacity and commitment necessary to advance the goals of the National Roadmap for Integrated Pest Management (www.ipmcenters.org/IPMRoadMap.pdf), and evaluate the progress of this advancement. The IPM Roadmap addresses pest management needs for production agriculture, natural resources and recreational environments, and residential and public areas.

(4) Integrated Pest Management: Crops at Risk Program

The goal of the CAR program is to enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically based sustainable IPM system(s). Preferably, this should involve a diversity of tactics and approaches for a single or specific food or fiber commodity in commercial production for pre- and/or post-harvest system(s). The program addresses either a major acreage or high value crop commodity such as key fruits and vegetables. The primary emphasis is on crop productivity and profitability, while addressing critical environmental quality and human health issues. The CAR program will fund integrated multifunctional/multidisciplinary research, education, and extension projects for crops with high priority IPM needs as identified by stakeholders.

(5) Integrated Pest Management: Risk Avoidance and Mitigation Program

The goal of the Risk Avoidance and Mitigation (RAMP) program is to enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically based sustainable IPM strategies and system(s) for (a) multi-crop food and fiber production systems; (b) an area-wide or a landscape scale agroecosystem; or (c) a documented pesticide impact on water, human or environmental health. RAMP applications may address major acreage agricultural production systems, high value crops such as key fruit and vegetable systems, or other agroecosystems. The primary emphasis of the application should be on productivity and profitability while addressing critical environmental quality and human health issues. The intent of RAMP is to fund medium-term projects that emphasize systems approaches.

(6) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: Integrated Pest Management: Methyl Bromide Transitions Program

The goal of the Methyl Bromide Transitions (MBT) program is to support the discovery and implementation of practical pest management alternatives to methyl bromide uses or minimize methyl bromide emissions for which the United States is requesting critical use exemptions. The program is focused on integrated commercial or field scale research that targets short- to medium-term solutions.

(7) Integrated Organic Program

The purpose of the Integrated Organic Program is to solve critical organic agriculture issues, priorities, or problems through the integration of research, education, and extension activities. The Organic Transitions Program (ORG) funds the development and implementation of research, extension, and higher education programs to improve the competitiveness of organic producers and producers who are adopting organic practices. Funding opportunities for the ORG Program is included in the same Request for Applications (RFA) as the Organic Research and Extension Initiative (OREI).

PLEASE NOTE: THIS PROGRAM DOES NOT FUND START UP BUSINESSES.

(8) Regional Rural Development Centers (RRDCs):

The RRDCs play a unique role in USDA's service to rural America. They link the research and educational outreach capacity of the nation's public universities with communities, local decision makers, entrepreneurs, families, and farmers and ranchers to help address a wide range of development issues. They collaborate on national issues that span regions-like e-commerce, the changing interface between rural, suburban, and urban places, and workforce quality and jobs creation. Each tailors programs to address particular needs in its region.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

This research, education, and extension competitive grants program provides funding for integrated, multi-functional agricultural research, extension, and education activities which addresses priorities in United States agriculture. Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved integrated research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences, in the broadest sense. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Tuition remission is not allowable.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: (A) Water Quality

A total of 73 applications were received in three program areas. Added a focus on consumer-based water resource management programs; projects will begin to develop tools that assist citizens to make improved water management decisions as consumers. Funded two projects for the National Water Resource Projects (Program Area Code 110.A) priority where proposals were solicited for projects that create or develop capacity within the research, education, and extension system and transfer this capacity to stakeholders and decision-makers at the local, regional, or national level. Funded four projects for the Watershed Scale Projects (Program Area Code 110.C) priority where proposals were solicited that promote locally focused solutions to watershed scale water resource issues in agricultural, rural, and urbanizing watersheds. Added a focus on developing the next generation of extension professionals, preparing students to work in extension or use-inspired research while providing immediate outreach functions to landowners, ranchers and farmers. Applicants were asked to design and implement an experiential learning program for students (undergraduate through post-doctoral), and were strongly encouraged to coordinate with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administrations (NOAA) Regional Integrated Sciences and Assessment (RISA) teams. Working directly with an advisor/mentor either in a NOAA RISA or in a USDA research laboratory or Cooperative Extension office, students should gain hands-on experience on farms and ranches while providing services related to drought, flooding or other water issues.

(B) National Integrated Food Safety
No proposals received in FY 2012.

(C) Integrated Pest Management Centers (Regional)

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $3,805,820 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

NIFA received a total of 4 applications requesting a total of $3,805,520 in the FY 2012 competition. In August 2011, a 5-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer review panel included faculty and administrators from Land-Grant universities and a federal agency.

Funds were available to support a total of 4 awards.

The funding ratio for this program in FY 2011 was 100%

Funded projects established a Regional Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Center in each of USDAs four geographic regions: North Central, Northeastern, Southern, and Western. The overarching goals of the Regional IPM Centers program are to improve the cost benefit analysis of adapting IPM practices and to reduce the environmental and human health risks associated managing pests.

(D) Crops at Risk from FQPA Implementation

This program has not been recently funded.

(E) FQPA Risk Mitigation Program

This program has not been recently funded.

(F) Methyl bromide Transition Program

For the FY 2012 award cycle, approximately $ 1,887,651 is available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 12 applications requesting a total of $5,274,752 were received in this years competition and it is anticipated that five will be awarded. In August 2012, a 6-member peer review panel will evaluate these applications. The peer panel includes faculty and administrators from land grant universities and USDA research agencies.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 is anticipated to be 42%.

(G) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

For the FY 2012 award cycle, $3,796,760 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 16 applications, requesting a total of $10,678,804, were received in this years competition. In June 2012, a 6-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty from land grant universities.

Funds were available to support a total of 6 new awards.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 was 37%.

Funded projects seek to support the development and implementation of research, extension and higher education programs to improve the competitiveness of organic livestock and crop producers, as well as those who are adopting organic practices by studying and documenting environmental services provided by organic farming systems in the area of soil conservation and climate change mitigation, including greenhouse gases (GHG). All projects integrate research, education and extension activities.

(H) Regional Rural Development Centers

The regional rural development centers have continued their collaborations in programs including: SET-Stronger Economies Together, eCommerce, CREW-Renewable Energy in the West, Turning the Tide on Poverty, and Triumph Over Tragedy and Ready Community Guide. Additionally, the Centers collaborated on a successful application to NIFAs Policy Research Centers Grant Program.

Solo and partner initiatives of the individual centers are reported below, with particular emphasis given to service to underserved populations.

North Center Regional Center for Rural Development (NCRCRD):

While most rural areas in the North Central Region are experiencing population decline, the number of Hispanics is increasing. Hispanics in the Upper Midwest is a work group supported by the North Central Center that studies this rapidly expanding demographic to determine the best ways to incorporate the newcomers into communities.

Cambio de Colores (Change of Colors) is an annual conference that, since 2002, brings together researchers, practitioners, decision-makers, and community members to discuss the issues that the Heartland states face as a result of the demographic changes reflected since the 2000 Census, which clearly showed large numbers of immigrants most of them Latino or Hispanic, but including significant numbers of migrants and refugees from Asia, Africa, and Europe settling in rural and urban areas of every state in the region. Cambio de Colores is a collaborative effort of the University of Missouri and Extension, other educational institutions in the North Central region, as well as government and private organizations.

The NCRCRD offered a number of webinars to benefit rural poor, inority, and/or underserved populations:

Banking Issues Among Entrepreneurs from Underserved Populations
Great Lakes Land Grant Institutions Tribal Water Resources Summit

The NCRCRD partnered with NIFA to organize a two day small farm and rural development research conference prior to the Regional Science Association International meetings, attracting 61 researchers.

North East Regional Center for Rural Development (NERCRD):

The NERCRD has created an online resource on the Center website titled: Demographic Dimensions of Diversity Relevant for Extension Educators: What To Look For, Why, and Where To Find the Data on The Web. The site includes a briefing room on Race and Ethnicity in Rural America; Resources for Dealing with Hate Groups; and, Mapping Census 2000 the Geography of U.S. Diversity.

NERCRD Director Stephan Goetz was invited to speak at the Federal Reserve System Board of Governors conference in Washington, DC on the Role of Small Business and Entrepreneurship during an Economic. He also served on the Panel Strengthening Entrepreneurship Opportunities in Urban and Rural Communities.

Southern Regional Rural Development Center (SRRDC):

SERA-37 is a Southern Extension Research Activity on The New Hispanic South. As its name implies, its goal is strengthening the capacity to land grant institutions to respond to the New Hispanic South. Core activities focus on mobilizing land-grant faculty to work collaboratively to better understand the challenges and opportunities associated with the current and future growth of Hispanics in the rural South; strengthen the research and Extension outreach work being undertaken by our region's land-grant university system that addresses the growth of Hispanics in the South; and advance the capacity of the land-grant system to lend support to those rural communities that seek to respond to the needs of their growing Hispanic population in a positive and strategic manner.

Members of SERA-37, New Hispanic South, completed a domestic immersion Latino cultural competency program consisting of three phases: distance education, eight-day immersion experience in the North Carolina Latino community and an applied project in the home state. SERA-37 secretary Roberto Gallardo, SRDC research associate, reported individuals from 10 southern states, as well as 22 community partners, participated in this domestic immersion project. As a result of the immersion, preliminary project plans developed:

Mississippi Extension agents will conduct a needs assessment of farm workers and farmers.

Alabama Extension agents will offer a work readiness and health fair with Latino audiences.

Georgia Extension agents are establishing community gardens with Latino families through connections with a local faith community.

North Carolina Extension agents are involving Latino youth in 4-H, as well as engaging the Latino community as vendors and customers in the local farmers market through a multi-cultural day. They are also providing energy savings/personal budgeting classes for Latino families and are developing a safety and health promotion program.

The SRDCs Turning the Tide on Poverty initiative engages residents to improve their communities. Thanks to this SRDC initiative, rural counties across the South have opened the lines of communication, engaged residents who had not previously been involved, and achieved community and economic development goals. The Initiative was recognized by the National Association of Community Development Extension Professions for success in tackling poverty issues for economically-distressed rural communities and was honored with the Diversity Certificate by the National Extension Association of Family and Consumer Sciences.

(F) Methyl bromide Transition Program

For the FY 2013 award cycle, approximately $ 1,734,875 is available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 7 applications requesting a total of $2,988,100 were received in this years competition and it is anticipated that four will be awarded. In June 2012, a 3-member peer review panel with two ad hoc reviews evaluated these applications. The peer panel includes faculty and administrators from land grant universities and USDA research agencies.

The funding ratio for this program in FY12 is anticipated to be 57%.

(G) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

For the FY 2013 award cycle, $3,458,688 was available for project grant awards after subtracting administrative costs.

A total of 40 applications, requesting a total of $27,415,786, were received in this years competition. In June 2013, a 9-member peer review panel evaluated these applications. The peer panel included faculty from land grant universities, researchers from USDA Agricultural Research Service and a non-profit stakeholder group.

Funds were available to support a total of 5 new awards. The funding ratio for this program in FY13 was 12.5%.

Funded projects seek to support the development and implementation of research, extension and higher education programs to improve the competitiveness of organic livestock and crop producers, as well as those who are adopting organic practices by studying and documenting environmental services provided by organic farming systems in the area of soil conservation and climate change mitigation, including greenhouse gases (GHG). Projects were also funded to develop cultural practices and other allowable alternatives to substances recommended for removal from the National Organic Programs National List of Allowed and Prohibited Substances. All projects integrate research, education and extension activities.

(H) Regional Rural Development Centers

The Regional Rural Development Centers have been very successful leveraging their $998,000 shared award. They have used this to more than quadruple their programming budgets though leveraging. Unfortunately, the budgets cuts resulting from sequestration, along with the continual erosion of the base budget (a decline of almost 25% in the past three years) has significantly impaired their ability this year, in part because they have led to the resignation of a key NPL and an RRDC Director, and we anticipate it will take some time to recoup the loss and regain traction for the program.

Title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972 authorized funding for Regional Programs to develop and provide knowledge essential to assist and support rural development in the region and provide for technical consultation and personnel development for research and extension staff. The Code of Federal Regulations indicates that the Regional Programs will be administered through four Regional Rural Development Centers in cooperation with the National Institute of Food and Agriculture. With a vacancy in the NPL position responsible for the Regional Rural Development Centers and diminishing prospects for a replacement, the Division of Family and Consumer Sciences was confronted with the challenge of managing the rural development portfolio under tight fiscal constraints. In January of 2012, we created VCRA, the Virtual Center for Rural America, in order to expand the portfolio and deepen our commitment to Rural Development as indicated in the Goal 1 of the USDA Strategic Plan and Goal 7 of the REE Action Plan*. VCRA is comprised of a team of Program Leaders and Program Specialists assigned individually to different programs and activities within the portfolio, but working jointly to strengthen the portfolio and diffuse rural development goals and objectives throughout all NIFA programming, as appropriate.

The Rural Development scope of work at NIFA encompasses many programs and activities, including the research and outreach work of the four Regional Rural Development Centers; the Farm Bill research and advising of the Rural Policy Research Institute (RUPRI) at the University of Missouri; the work of members of the National Association of Community Development Extension Professionals (NACDEP); efforts of other regional Extension groups, along with multistate research and extension committees engaged in rural and community development; the North Central - Community Resource Economic Development (NC-CRED) initiative; partnerships with the USDA Rural Development Agency on Stronger Economies Together (SET); and activities with the eCommerce initiatives and Regional Innovation grants. Recently added to the conceptual sphere of the rural development portfolio is the research supported by the new Rural Policy Research competitive awards program, AFRIs foundational program in Agricultural Economics and Rural Development, and the SBIR programs in Agricultural Economics and Rural Development, along with the Sustainable Farm Enterprises portfolio.

Using a team approach to the Virtual Center for Rural America brings more talent and energy to the rural development efforts of NIFA. Researchers, educators, and Extension professionals are supported by more program leaders and are able to tap into a wider array of expertise at NIFA. In the future there will be greater opportunity to diffuse rural development goals and objectives more broadly throughout NIFA programming. New synergies are already being realized between and among the many existing efforts in sustainable farm enterprises, family and consumer economics, community health and wellness, housing and community living, military and veterans programs and rural development. New opportunities for collaboration are being identified, along with the potential to better harmonize the regional programs in rural development, risk management, and sustainable agriculture. The growing need for federal austerity challenges NIFA to provide resources sufficient to adequately support expanded efforts in rural development research and outreach. This team approach is allowing NIFA to make a deeper commitment to rural development.

This is a cross-cutting effort within and beyond NIFA. Core team members currently include: Institute and Division Leadership, 5 NPLs, a Program Specialist, and support within the DFCS, IYFC. Six ad hoc team members represent their respective Institutes within NIFA.

The VCRA Team has mobilized quickly to provide expanded commitment, service, and resources to our partners and professionals in the Rural Development research, education, and outreach communities. Each VCRA core team member has taken on additional duties and expended extra effort to strengthen NIFAs rural development portfolio and increase opportunities for additional collaborations and synergies to enhance rural development programming. EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: (A) Water Quality National Projects:

A Management Tool for Small Community Onsite Wastewater Treatment Systems: The Community System Owners Guide focuses on the fact that over 25% of the US population relies on septic systems to safely treat their wastewater. Many of these systems serve clusters of homes through a common septic system with additional management needs. The delivery of proper system management is a key issue to ensure cost-effective and long-term wastewater treatment for both new development and existing communities. The University of Minnesota's Onsite Sewage Treatment Program and its national partners have received a grant to bridge the gap between septic system professionals, regulators, and owners by developing a customizable Community System Owner's Guide (CSOG). The CSOG will help community members and leaders understand how their system works, what management tasks need to occur on a regular basis, and how they can protect their infrastructure from premature failure. A CSOG will be developed using a web-interface tool that will allow an individual to produce an expert-driven and locally-customized manual (electronic or hard-copy) CSOG for any cluster septic system in America. Using this tool, an engineer, septic professional, community facilitator, or educated community member will be able to develop a guide to effective management by entering basic information on the users, system, rate structures and any regional, state, or local differences in regulations that affect the management of community systems. This tool will be useful for thousands of communities across the US to properly manage their septic systems; therefore protecting our ground and surface waters.

Factors Affecting Adoption of Nutrient Management Practices By Farmers and Homeowners focuses on the concept that addressing water pollution from farms and lawns will require voluntary adoption of nutrient management strategies. Research on factors affecting adoption of some best management practices (BMPs) by farmers exists, but less research has been conducted on factors affecting adoption of BMPs by homeowners. Also, little information exists on the value of manure and compost as a substitute for commercial fertilizer. The Hinkson Creek Watershed is on the 303d list as impaired and changes in homeowner behavior will be required to improve water quality and flow characteristics. The research proposed in this project builds on previous research by the PD as well as on the previous scientific and social science research related to the Hinkson Creek watershed to examine factors affecting the adoption of nutrient, sediment and stormwater management BMPs by farmers and homeowners. The education component includes updating the data and software for a watershed modeling course and creating a course that enables journalism students to design media campaigns to change behavior. Graduate and undergraduate student training on watershed issues and research methods are also included. Extension components will be coordinated with local efforts to encourage adoption by homeowners of appropriate fertilizer practices, rain gardens, and water barrels.

Watershed-Scale Projects:

Watershed Scale Project in Oostanaula Creek is concerned with the Oostanaula Creek watershed in eastern Tennessee is typical of the ridge and valley region that occupies much of the eastern United States along the Appalachian Mountain chain from central Mississippi to southern New York. Ridge and valley regions are characterized by rolling hills and many meandering tributaries. Agriculture operations are typically located in the low lying areas. The issues facing the Watershed are common throughout the ridge and valley region; e.g., urbanization and water quality degradation. This project aims to demonstrate how we can use the best available science to identify sources of non-point pollution (bacteria and sediment) in the watershed, prioritize and implement practices to reduce non-point pollution and educate stakeholders on the use of best management practices that maintain agricultural productivity without negatively impacting environmental quality. We will do this by develop a watershed-scale sediment budget that identifies dominant sources of fine sediment to Oostanaula Creek watershed, conduct economic cost-benefit analysis of sediment source-dependent BMPs specific to the Oostanaula Creek watershed and assess the behavior response of farmer willingness to implement sediment BMPs. We will continue a comprehensive watershed-wide education program to inform farmers, youth and adult residents about the importance of maintaining and improving water quality in the Watershed and conduct educational events throughout the Watershed to demonstrate that BMPs can simultaneously improve water quality and increase agricultural productivity.

Watershed Diagnostics For Improved Adoption Of Management Practices: Integrating Biophysical And Social Factors sets the goal of this project to support the adoption and maintenance of targeted Best Management Practices (BMPs) for polluted areas by developing new GIS-based assistive tools that integrate biophysical and social factors. They will achieve this through a multi-level and collaborative combination of three objectives. 1. Social science research and education evaluating the attitudes and behaviors of agricultural producers and broader watershed citizens related to water quality and BMP adoption. 2. Biophysical research on a Diagnostic Decision Support System (DDSS) that includes an adoption behavior sub-model to strengthen the technical abilities of State and Federal partners to precisely target effective BMPs. 3. Extension and education of stakeholders in ecologically oriented water-quality assessment and management, environmental stewardship, and DDSS application. Extension will use findings from social research to develop and improve effective outreach strategies. The selected watershed for this study is the Choptank Basin, which is agricultural, impaired, and drains directly into the Chesapeake Bay. It has been the focus of considerable biophysical data collection and water protection efforts, which this study will leverage to develop a next-generation adaptive environmental management tool. This project involves close partnerships with State and Federal agencies, and they have already participated in developing the objectives. Agency partners will help us engage agricultural producers and broader community citizens.

An Integrated Approach to Precision Conservation Planning In the South Fork Watershed builds partnerships from universities, USDA-ARS, and private industry that will use a combined approach of research, education, and extension to better control a type of erosion called ephemeral gully erosion. Ephemeral gullies are small channels formed in fields by running water. They are erased when the farmer tills the soil, but reappear when another significant rain event occurs. These gullies are recognized to be a very important, but not well-measured, source of sediment to many streams and rivers. Researchers will measure ephemeral gullies in several farm fields and use these measurements to test and validate a model that can predict where ephemeral gullies will form and how much soil erodes from these areas. In addition, newly developed computer models will be used to target and plan conservation practices for ephemeral erosion control on fields throughout the South Fork watershed. These findings will be combined with known information on types of erosion and best management practices to educate high school ag teachers and FFA students. Finally, the information will be shared with landowners and stakeholders in the watershed to prioritize sites that are at high-risk for ephemeral gully erosion and can be effectively treated with erosion control structures like grassed waterways and water and sediment control basins. As successful components of this project develop, the information and technologies will be shared with other farmers, Extension, education and research personnel in the region.

(B) National Integrated Food Safety

No program in FY 2012. Below are examples of on-going projects funded in FY 2011:

The proposed study will determine what role birds and other small mammals actually play in the transmission of these organisms. At the completion of this study we will fill a critical gap in our current understanding how food-producing animals acquire antibiotic resistant organisms and how this transmission can be mitigated.

Campylobacter is a major cause of acute human gastroenteritis in the United States, and consumption of contaminated poultry is a leading risk factor for infection. Campylobacter readily colonizes the intestines of chickens and turkeys, and contaminates poultry meat. A major knowledge gap concerns the farm practices and transmission routes that place flocks at enhanced risk for Campylobacter, or, conversely, have protective effects. The long-term goal of our research is to identify and characterize routes and mechanisms of transmission of Campylobacter to turkeys, a major but understudied reservoir for this pathogen.

Salmonella Enteritidis (SE) is a leading foodborne pathogen in the US with many outbreaks in humans traced back to shell eggs. As a result, the implementation of effective strategies for reducing SE in commercial layer flocks has become a critical public health and economic objective. The overall goal of this project is to integrate applied research and outreach to develop an updated and optimized Egg Quality Assurance Program (EQAP) that will significantly reduce SE contamination of shell eggs.

Shiga-toxin producing Escherichia coli (STEC) and Salmonella species are responsible for approximately 61% of all produce-associated illnesses. Several multi-state outbreaks have been linked to contaminated irrigation waters; even though pathogens are only found sporadically in water and therefore it is often difficult to determine the source of contamination. One area that has been overlooked is the possible contribution of biofilms within irrigation infrastructure as reservoirs for these foodborne pathogens. The goal of the project is to reduce the risks of exposure to enteric bacterial pathogens due to the contamination of irrigation infrastructure with biofilms containing Salmonella and shiga-toxin producing Escherichia coli (STEC).

Researchers are addressing five distinct modules focused on the safety and quality of fresh-cut produce, processing, packaging, distribution, risk/economics, and education/training that have been carefully integrated to ensure a successful and high impact outcome.

(C) Integrated Pest Management Centers (Regional)

Example 1.

Objectives: 1) Establish new and maintain existing information networks; 2) continue to build partnerships to address IPM challenges and opportunities; 3) develop signature global food security programs and foster their sustainability; 4) review and evaluate impacts of IPM implementation and communicate successes; and 5) manage funding resources effectively.

The IPM Center will serve as a catalyst for promoting and reporting IPM accomplishments achieved by our broad-based clientele to increase accountability. Our Center will actively respond to the goals of the National Roadmap for IPM the Global Food Security priority to ensure coordination of efforts and resources to enhance IPM development and adoption for production agriculture, natural resources and recreational environments, and residential and public areas in cooperation with the Federal IPM Coordinating Committee comprised of agency representatives from the Department of Agriculture (ARS, NIFA, NRCS, NASS, ERS, APHIS and the U.S. Forest Service), Department of Interior (National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management and Fish and Wildlife Service), Department of State (Agency for International Development), Department of Health and Human Services (CDC), Department of Housing and Urban Development (Office of Health Homes), Department of Defense, Environmental Protection Agency and the General Services Administration.

Signature programs include Tribal IPM programs, IPM education and outreach, IPM impact assessment, IPM issue-focused working groups and pest management strategic plans. These programs will engage broad representation of our regions stakeholders including our 1994 and 1890 sister institutions, as well as other underserved audiences.

Example 2.

To foster IPM development and adoption, the IPM Center will build on successes and launch new projects. With broad-based stakeholder participation, we will prioritize issues, create a strategic plan, facilitate collaboration across states, disciplines, and regions, and continue our information networks (including a state-of-the-art website, robust listservs, and a grants database). We will build capacity with eXtension and share Pest Alerts and success stories. Our IPM Partnership Grants Program will focus on working groups and critical pests, encouraging project directors to address underserved audiences, food availability, and food accessibility. We will foster sustainability of regional food supplies by strengthening support for small farms and by joining with federal and private partners to sponsor a conference on "IPM, Organic, and Sustainable Ag to Bolster Food Security." We will lead outreach to the region on the invasive brown marmorated stink bug, working with scientists to share new knowledge via the StopBMSB website, curricula, and displays. We will strengthen underserved communities by leading and participating in IPM trainings and workshops for public housing authorities and tribal housing, enhancing the StopPests website, and offering our new "Guide to IPM in Public Housing" in print and online. We will network internationally by attending the OECD workshop and the International IPM Symposium. Overall, our Center will increase coordination of IPM research, education, and extension, and will enhance responsiveness to global food security challenges.

Example 3.

Our mission is to foster development and adoption of IPM, a science-based approach to managing pests in ways that generate economic, environmental and human health benefits. The Advisory Council (AC) comprising diverse stakeholders from across the region will provide guidance and the Steering Committee (SC) will set policy. We will utilize the strategic plan developed in the previous funding cycle. We will maintain a revised version of the Regulatory Information Network to proactively address regulatory issues, respond to queries from EPA and other regulatory agencies, and update at least 12 high-priority Crop Profiles. Stakeholders and partner institutions will be engaged to identify needs and establish priorities through the AC and SC structure, collaboration with regional technical committees, the Small Farms IPM Working Group to engage previously underserved groups, and support of existing working groups including the School IPM Working Group. Global Food Security Programs include the Regulatory Information Network, the Critical and Emerging Issues Grant Program; the Small Farms Working Group; continued financial management and support of ipmPIPE projects; collaboration with eXtension; and our IPM Impacts evaluation Initiative. The Impacts Evaluation Initiative will evaluate IPM projects from across the region to develop and distribute success stories that resonate with the general public. Our communications and outreach will continue the successful methods we have used to date including social networking techniques. We will also continue the Friends of IPM Program to highlight successful IPM professionals and promote IPM.

Example 4.

The Center will advance the National Institute of Food and Agriculture's (NIFA) Global Food Security priority area. Center activities and programs will advance Global Food Security by leading and supporting programs that implement IPM solutions to enhance sustainable food systems and boost U.S. agricultural production. Roadmap goals will be advanced by Center activities that lead to improved economic benefits of IPM adoption and reduced potential risks to human health and the environment caused by pests and the use of pest management practices. The Centers work will address five objectives: 1) to develop signature Global Food Security programs and foster their sustainability, 2) to establish and maintain multistate information networks, 3) to build partnerships and address challenges and opportunities, 4) to review and evaluate outcomes and impacts of IPM implementation and communicate the successes and the value added by IPM programs, and 5) to manage funding resources effectively. All of these objectives will be carried out in the context of two overarching goals: 1) to improve the cost-benefit analyses of adopting IPM practices and 2) to reduce the environmental and human health risks associated with managing pests. In carrying out these objectives and advancing these goals, the Center will provide regional leadership and coordination to facilitate integration of sustainable IPM activities across states, purposes, programs, and pest disciplines and among individuals, institutions, and regions. By offering competitive grants, supporting communication networks, obtaining ongoing stakeholder input about IPM needs, and fostering collaborations and partnerships, the Center will provide a centralized regional platform for addressing critical IPM needs and integrating IPM research, extension, and education in the West. This approach also ensures the Center will be responding to food security challenges on a global scale. The leadership and funding opportunities provided by the Center will bring together the institutional and individual expertise needed to successfully address high-priority pest management issues confronting farmers, pest managers, the non-agricultural public, and others in the West.

(D) Crops at Risk from FQPA Implementation

(E) FQPA Risk Mitigation Program

This program has not been recently funded.

(F) Methyl bromide Transition Program

Most growers have settled on 1,3-D dichloropropene (1,3-D), chloropicrin (Pic), and isothiocyanate (ITC) generators as alternatives to methyl bromide (MeBr) and are looking for ways to improve the efficacy of these systems. The long-term goal of this research is to improve the efficacy of currently adopted MeBr alternatives for the management of weeds and soilborne pests and pathogens in small fruit and vegetable production systems in Florida. The first objective will evaluate inherent weaknesses observed with the current in-bed applications of 1,3-D + Pic that has led to outbreaks of Fusarium wilt at several tomato grower locations, by mapping the effective fumigation zone within the raised bed relative to culturable Fusarium levels after fumigation, and during the growing season. We will further assess the effect of irrigation and supplemental fumigation of row middles with Pic on bed re-colonization with Fusarium. The second objective will compare the effectiveness of new fumigant methyl ITC and allyl ITC to the metam potassium standard in managing weeds, nematodes, and Fusarium spp. It is expected that findings will be transferable to other fumigated crops.

Anaerobic soil disinfestation (ASD) has demonstrated significant potential as an alternative to methyl bromide (MeBr) for the control of soilborne pathogens and nematodes. ASD involves adding a source of carbon to the soil and irrigating the soil to field capacity under a plastic tarp to generate anaerobic conditions. Microbial breakdown of the carbon in the absence of oxygen generates byproducts known to be toxic to pathogens and nematodes. This project examines the efficacy of ASD as a MeBr alternative alone or when integrated with mustard seed meal (MSM) for control of significant soilborne diseases in two cropping systems; pre-plant soil use for strawberry and tree fruit nursery production systems. These ASD systems can be utilized in urbanized areas where buffer restrictions limit the applicability of alternative fumigants and, unlike many other biologically-based alternatives, have a broad-spectrum of activity, impacting most pests that are currently controlled by MeBr. We have obtained consistently effective suppression of Verticillium dahliae in soils with ASD and achieved yields within 76-100% of MeBr and 95-120% of other chemical fumigants in California strawberry systems. Our goals are to fine tune the protocols to optimize disease suppression and economic feasibility of ASD alone or when integrated with MSM for soilborne disease control in commercial scale field trials, improve our understanding of the biological and chemical mechanisms involved in disease suppression by MSM and ASD, and effectively disseminate this information through a variety of formats including production of webinars and an "ASD Manual for Strawberries".

The use of methyl bromide (MeBr) fumigation for quarantine and pre-shipment treatment of wood products continues to rise with increasing globalization, as acceptable alternative treatments are unavailable, ineffective, or cost prohibitive. Prior research by this team has led to formal submission and tentative approval of dielectric heating as the first alternative to methyl bromide fumigation under International Standards for Phytosanitary Measures No. 15 (ISPM-15) by the International Plant Protection Convention, Commission on Phytosanitary Measures (CPM). ISPM-15 stipulates that wood used to ship products between countries must be debarked, heat treated to 56C at the core for 30 minutes or fumigated with MeBr, and stamped or branded with a mark of compliance. ISPM-15 affects all wood packaging material and its purpose is to prevent the international transport and spread of pests that could negatively affect plants and ecosystems in the introduced region. The goal of this project is to facilitate final approval of dielectric heating technology by the CPM for treating SWPM and associated wood products. Outputs will be a universal treatment schedule for wood packaging material using dielectric heating for approval as an annex to ISPM No. 15, a cost/benefit analysis of dielectric heating in comparison with currently approved methods, and extension/outreach activities to promote the adoption of this technology.

(G) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

Optimizing cover crop selection and management to enhance agronomic and environmental services in organic cropping systems. This project is developing effective management strategies for C and N cycling processes, particularly biological N fixation and C/N retention pathways so that production and environmental outcomes are optimized. Particular emphasis is being given to questions about how organic management regimes, and the resulting soil legacies, interact with plant and microbial species to regulate C/N cycling.

Agricultural Greenhouse Warming Potential and Soil Carbon Sequestration in Organic and Long Term Rotational Systems. This research will expand on our capacity to identify cropping system practices that reduce greenhouse gas emissions, sequester soil carbon and enhance desirable ecosystem services provided by sustainable cropping systems. Results from this work will help inform and correct soil conservation models that were developed almost entirely using non-organic systems for parameterization.

Assessing, Modeling, and Maximizing Ecosystem Services in Long-term Organic and Transitioning Farming Systems. Organic farming systems enhance soil quality and biodiversity, but data on their impact on environmental outcomes are lacking. This work will fill this knowledge gap by evaluating the impact of a novel combination of no-till, multi-functional cover crops, and organic amendments as tools to reduce greenhouse gas emissions (CO₂, CH₄, and N₂O) and NH₃ volatilization, increase carbon sequestration and N and P accumulation, reduce nutrient losses by soil erosion and leaching, increase soil food web structural and functional diversity, increase energy flow in soil ecosystems, decrease weed and insect pressure, and enhance natural biocontrol activity.

(H) Regional Rural Development Centers

The NCRCRD provided a number of mini-grants to support poor, minority, and/or underserved populations:

Improving Practice and Collaboration to Aid Distressed Rural Communities
Helping Non-metro Communities and Underserved Entrepreneurs Grow Together
Poverty & Other Socioeconomic Distress in the North Central Region:
Assessing Trends & Determinants

The RRDCs have been engaged in significant work to develop impact indicators and have been conducting workshops to assist their peers to measure, document, and report the impact of community development work the results from the investment in the RRDC and Extension to Communities. These indicators are in various stages of proofing throughout the regional system, but we can report that the North Central Regional Center for Rural Development alone documented over $180M of impacts and 16,090 jobs created or saved as a result of 2011 investments. If extrapolated to the four regional centers, this represents $720M of impacts and over 64,000 jobs created or saved. Fiscal Year 2013: (A) Water Quality

No data: Closing date for proposals was July 10, 2013.

(B) National Integrated Food Safety
No program in FY 2013.

(C) Integrated Pest Management Centers (Regional)

(D) Crops at Risk from FQPA Implementation
This program has not been recently funded.

(E) FQPA Risk Mitigation Program

(F) Methyl bromide Transition Program
Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

(G) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

Biodiversity and Natural Pest Suppression. This project is exploring the emergence of natural pest control following the conversion to organic farming by comparing recent adopters to farms that have been organic for decades. Mixed-vegetable farmers have reported that since adopting organic methods, they see fewer aphids and caterpillars on their farm each year. Growers generally attributed this to the gradual buildup of insect-killing predators, parasitoids and pathogens. Improving soil quality, and thus healthier and more insect-resistant plants, could also explain this pattern. Understanding what makes a farm pest-suppressive could ease future farmers organic transition.

Organic management of fire blight in a post-antibiotic era: developing, evaluating, and delivering options for apples grown in humid climate. This project directly addresses the development of alternatives to antibiotics for fire blight control in organic crops. In order to prepare for the removal of antibiotics from the NOSB Approved Materials List, all available NOSB-approved materials to reduce flower infection and improve efficacy are being evaluated.

Principles for Transitioning to Organic Farming: e-Learning Materials and Decision Case Studies for Educators. A project team is creating a series of online, interactive educational modules with a focus on the fundamentals of organic agriculture and how to transition to organic farming. Modules will cover important crop production topics including rotation, soil fertility, crops to grow during transition, weed and pest management, and many other subjects for both agronomic and horticultural producers.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10.310 Agriculture and Food Research Initiative (AFRI) ; 10.500 Cooperative Extension Service

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2012: The purpose of one (1) project is to further integrate and expand Extension's educational role before, during and after a disaster, using the all-hazards approach adopted by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. This project helped EDEN provide strategic guidance and support to NIFA, USDA, and member institutions in disaster education. Specifically, with this project, EDEN continued use of its network and communication tools to distribute educational materials and information aimed at reducing the impacts of disasters. This project made Extension a more effective partner in food and agricultural defense education by continuing maintenance, promotion, and use of previously developed EDEN materials and the development of new materials.

One (1) project addressed the coordination and collection of diagnostic information from land grant universities and state departments of agriculture in a standardized manner insuring the quality of information. The purpose of this project was to enable complex pattern analysis of diagnostic information collected in order to detect anomalies, thus allowing recognition of new outbreaks earlier than is currently possible.

Five (5) different projects enabled regionally diverse institutions to host regional diagnostic centers for the National Plant Diagnostics Network (NPDN). The NPDN, working together with various federal and state agencies, has the overall goal of enhancing national agricultural security from bioterrorist attack through the protection of health and productivity of plants in agricultural and natural ecosystems in the U.S. The specific purpose of this network is to provide a functional nationwide network of public agricultural institutions with a cohesive, distributed system to quickly detect high consequence pests (here defined as arthropods and weeds) and biological pathogens (here defined as plant microbial disease agents and nematodes) that have been introduced intentionally or accidentally into agricultural and natural ecosystems, identify them, and immediately report them to appropriate responders and decision makers.

Twenty eight (28) projects supported National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) laboratories. The NAHLN has implemented national surveillance systems for highly pathogenic avian influenza, classical swine fever, bovine spongiform encephalopathy, and other important animal diseases. These surveillance programs have been used, among other things, to demonstrate freedom from disease in support of international trade, resulting in increased trade income. Fiscal Year 2013: Awards have not been finalized. It is anticipated that projects will be similar to FY 2012 project. Pertinent data will be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2014: It is anticipated that projects will be similar to FY 2012 project. Pertinent data will be provided by Program at a future date.

10.305 INTERNATIONAL SCIENCE AND EDUCATION GRANTS (INTERNATIONAL SCIENCE AND EDUCATION (ISE) COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 229 of the Agricultural Research, Extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended Section 1459 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. Section 3292b) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make competitive grants to colleges and universities in order to strengthen United States economic competitiveness and to promote international market development.

Section 7141 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 8701 note) authorized the International Science and Education Competitive Grants Program (ISE).

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of ISE is to support the internationalization of food, agriculture and related programs at U.S. universities and colleges. It is intended that ISE will improve the ability of American students, business people, and community members to compete more effectively in the global world of agriculture. ISE projects are to strengthen the global competence and competitiveness of American colleges, universities and businesses in the food, agriculture, and related sectors. In addition, ISE projects must be directed to agricultural research, extension, and/or teaching activities that enhance the capabilities of American colleges and universities to conduct international collaborative research, extension and teaching. Our success in the global arena will increasingly require U.S. colleges and universities to produce graduates who can operate competently in domestic and international settings. Through their outreach efforts, universities and colleges also play a critical role in helping U.S. producers successfully operate in foreign markets.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Funded projects will respond to specific needs and strengths of the university or college that will enable it to strengthen the global competence of students, faculty and staff in agriculture and related areas and enhance business performance in international agriculture and related sectors through extension, research and/or teaching programs. Each institution may submit no more than two proposals as the lead institution. No institution acting as the principal or lead institution will receive more than one grant during the current competition. Therefore, institutions are encouraged to establish on-campus quality control mechanisms to ensure that only the highest quality proposals are submitted for consideration.

Program funds may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities (i.e., greenhouses, laboratories, or other structures).

Section 7132 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, amended the National Agriculture Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3310(a)), limiting indirect costs to 22 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 22 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

*Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions. Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 22 percent pursuant to section 1462(a) of NARETPA (7 U.S.C. 3310(a)), the awardee may request 11 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 22 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by colleges and universities and defined in section 1404 of NARETPA. The terms college and university mean an educational institution in any State which (1) admits as regular students only persons having a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate; (2) is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond secondary education; (3) provides an education program for which a bachelor's degree or any other higher degree is awarded; (4) is a public or other nonprofit institution; and (5) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association.

Within the limit of funds available for such purpose, the NIFA Authorized Departmental Officer (ADO) shall make grants to those responsible, eligible applicants whose applications are judged most meritorious under the procedures set forth in the RFA.

Reviewers will be selected based upon training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors:
