RECORDING SESSIONS –

Student made recordings can be booked in the classrooms anytime they are available or in the performance halls – Voertman Hall & Recital Hall with faculty approval.

Self-recording sessions in Voertman and the Recital Hall are limited to 5 hours total per semester, per student. During heavy recitals months, November & April, recording times may be limited in the halls.

A Recording Form is required prior to making a request and is located at the end of this packet. Events may still be booked until two weeks in front of a date, so prime recital time may not be booked for a recording session until two weeks in front of the requested date between the hours of 3:00 PM and 9:15 PM.

Recording Sessions by UNT Recording Services are also limited to 5 hours per semester, but do not require faculty permission. You must request and clear the date/time/location with recording services prior to making a roomview request. You will need to check the recording box and select “session – pay after.”

Self-Recording in classrooms may be limited in time as well and the students are required to put the purpose of the recording and the submission filing deadline in the description of their Roomview request.

Further information about services provided by Recording Services is located on their website at recordingservices@unt.edu
