New Assessment Training Offered

Assessment is more often compared to math than to the arts. However, assessment is a key tool that allows us to tell the Student Affairs story. While data is a necessary part of working in higher education, how we put that data into a compelling package is important.

If you are looking to increase your capacity to tell the story of your department or the student experience, the division is offering a series of assessment trainings to address your needs. There are eight courses intentionally designed to support your assessment work. We are working with Talent Management to create a certificate for those who complete all eight courses.

Register for each course in the UNT Learning Portal. The week of December 10, each course will be offered in sequential order for those wanting to complete the series. Participants are encouraged to attend with a specific assessment project in mind.
