Research indicates that the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR) lacks a data monitoring system to track child labor cases, which may hamper its efforts to address child labor concerns in Papua New Guinea. (2) Although the government maintained the I-Tok Kaunselin Helpim Lain hotline to report concerns related to child welfare and allegations of physical or sexual violence, it was not active in 2019. The IOM also maintained a hotline that provided anti-trafficking information and resources, but the number of cases identified related to children is unknown. (2,29-31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the DLIR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the number of labor inspectors conducting inspections.

The Government of Papua New Guinea did not respond to requests for information related to its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (2) Although research indicates that labor inspectors sometimes carry out routine inspections in hazardous workplaces or in the manufacturing sector, due to limited personnel capacity, labor inspectors generally respond to specific child labor complaints on a case-by-case basis as complaints were filed. (1,2,32) Insufficient resources hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, including administrative and budgetary constraints that prevented officers from receiving sufficient training. (2,6,33) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Papua New Guinea's workforce, which includes approximately 3.68 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Papua New Guinea would employ about 245 labor inspectors. (24,34) Most child labor occurs in the informal sector and outside of cities—suburban and rural areas—where inspections are seldom conducted. (2) When labor inspections do occur, they are conducted in all three of Papua New Guinea's languages (English, Hiri-Motu, and Pidgin/Tok Pisin).

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (6)	No (2)

The Government of Papua New Guinea did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Research indicates that there are not enough officers to conduct criminal investigations into child labor accusations due to a lack of funding, training, and report writing skills. (2) Research was unable to find evidence of trainings occurring in 2019 and was unable to determine whether training for prospective law enforcement officials would include all child labor elimination components, including recognizing the worst forms of child labor, victim identification, and prevention strategies. (30,35)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Department of Justice and the Attorney General, with representatives from more than 15 government agencies, NGOs, and international organizations. (2,35) The Committee met in June 2019; however, for the first time, NGOs were not invited to participate, which is mandated. (30,32)
National Council for Child and Family Services	Coordinates the implementation of the Child Protection Act and the National Child Protection Policy. In partnership with UNICEF, is overseen by senior government officials, civil society organizations, faith-based organizations, and private sector representatives, and comprises 42 Child Protection Officers. (2,36,37) While the Council met a few times in 2019, research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken to coordinate efforts to eliminate child labor. (32)
National Child Welfare Office	Coordinates the promotion of children's rights through awareness campaigns and trainings. The office also refers perpetrators to police and provide help to police and social services when a child is rescued from child labor. (32) In 2019, the National Child Welfare Office worked with UNICEF produced awareness materials and appeared on radio and television to advocate for children's rights as well as implementing the Child Protection Policy. (32)

Research indicates that there is a lack of senior governmental leadership and participation at the National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee meetings. (32,35)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including policy implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor in Papua New Guinea (2017–2020)	Promotes government coordination efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor through more effective prevention, protection, rehabilitation, and reintegration measures and capacity building. (38,39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor in Papua New Guinea during the reporting period.
Papua New Guinea Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan (2015–2020)	Seeks to prevent human trafficking, protect victims, and prosecute offenders. (40) Research indicates that the government did not allocate any resources toward implementing this plan. (41)
Universal Basic Education Plan (2010–2019)	Promotes the enrollment of children in school and aims to improve retention rates to ensure that children receive 9 years of basic education, which also includes child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (13,30,42) In 2019, was funded with approximately $172 million and was incorporated into the Tuition Fee-Free Policy during the reporting period. The National Educational Department provided digital and print advertisements detailing the need for all children to attend school from elementary through grade 8. (32) Research was unable to determine whether child labor elimination strategies were incorporated into the Universal Basic Education Plan.
National Child Protection Policy (2017–2027)	Seeks to strengthen child protection laws, including increased data gathering and analysis, full implementation of the Lukautim Pikinini Act, and elimination of violence against children at the hands of the police. (2,43) In 2019, UNICEF and Child Protection Officers from the National Child Welfare Office provided trainings covering child protection laws for law enforcement officers, court officials, teachers and NGO workers. (32)
Tuition Fee-Free Policy	Aims to improve access to education by abolishing school tuition fees and providing subsidies to cover costs for primary and secondary school children who cannot afford an education. (6,14,44) In 2019, provided some subsidies to select schools in Papua New Guinea. (2)

Research was unable to confirm whether the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor began enacting policies or programs in 2019—none were implemented in 2018 due to a lack of effective administrative planning and human and financial resources. (11) Research was also unable to determine whether child labor elimination strategies were incorporated into the Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Research was unable to determine whether the government carried out programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, or mining. Research found no evidence of any programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,35,47)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Papua New Guinea (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2018 – 2019
	Accede the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2019
	Accede the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for light work to age 13 to comply with international standards, and ensure that the law's light work provisions are sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work, and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law does not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking.	2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that the law establishes a compulsory education age that is equal to the minimum age for employment.	2009 – 2019
	Fully fund and reopen I-Tok Kaunselin Helpim Lain .	2018 – 2019
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor penalties imposed.	2014 – 2019
	Strengthen the inspection system by ensuring that inspectors conduct routine or targeted inspections in addition to those that are complaint-driven.	2014 – 2019
	Provide inspectors with the resources necessary to enforce labor laws and other laws that protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including funding, training, and report writing skills.	2009 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor and criminal law enforcement authorities and social services agencies to ensure that victims of child labor receive appropriate support services.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure the number of labor inspectors meets the ILO's technical advice.	2017 – 2019
	Institutionalize and fully fund training for criminal inspectors on the worst forms of child labor, including training for new labor inspectors at the beginning of their employment.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspections occur in all areas of Papua New Guinea, especially outside of urban areas.	2019
	Publish information on the criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of child labor penalties imposed, and the number of criminal law enforcement convictions secured.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Establish a data monitoring system to track child labor cases.	2019
	Ensure that the established coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor, including the worst forms of child labor, fully carry out their mandates.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information related to anti-child labor activities undertaken by government coordinating mechanisms.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that there is senior governmental leadership and participation at the National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee meetings.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that all anti-human trafficking stakeholders, including NGOs, are invited to and participate in the National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee coordination meetings as per the Committee's mandate.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure all policies are funded and implemented according to their mandate, including the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor in Papua New Guinea, the Papua New Guinea Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan, and the National Child Protection Policy.	2017 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination strategies into the Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan and Universal Basic Education Plan.	2019
	Fully reimburse schools for the added costs of accommodating additional students as mandated under the Tuition Fee-Free Policy.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Increase access to education by instituting programs to address gender-based violence against girls in schools and fully eliminating school-related fees.	2014 – 2019
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Implement and fully fund programs and anti-human trafficking services that assist children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in all relevant sectors, especially commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and mining.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that Child Care Centers are active and are fully funded, and publish their activities undertaken during the reporting period.	2019

In 2019, Paraguay made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The labor inspectorate increased its budget in order to hire more inspectors; inspectors received training on forced labor, trafficking in persons, child labor, and agricultural inspections; and judges were trained on the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security and the Ministry of Children and Adolescents also signed an agreement to strengthen inter-agency coordination on child labor, and the latter launched the Immediate Response Program to provide support to street children. In addition, the government updated the National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents for the 2019–2024 period, with a focus on strengthening minimum family incomes, inspection of adolescent work, and access to quality education. Finally, the government enacted a law that provides domestic workers with the same minimum wage as all other workers, effectively changing a law that previously provided domestic workers with only 60 percent of the national minimum wage. However, children in Paraguay are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in debt bondage in cattle raising and in domestic servitude, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Limited funding for law enforcement agencies and social programs hampered the government’s ability to fully address the worst forms of child labor, particularly in rural areas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Paraguay engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in debt bondage in cattle raising and in domestic servitude, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) The 2011 National Survey of Child and Adolescent Activities found that 21 percent of all Paraguayan children were engaged in hazardous work. (4) The 2015 Survey of Activities of Rural Area Children and Adolescents, published in 2016, identified 384,677 children ages 5 to 17 engaged in child labor in agriculture. (1) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Paraguay.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	7.4 (49,956)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.4
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	6.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.0

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of manioc/cassava, corn, beans, peanuts, peppers, sesame, sugarcane, tomatoes, lettuce, melons, sweet potato, onions, carrots, cabbages, yerba mate (stimulant plant), and charcoal (1,7-11)
	Raising poultry, hogs, cattle,† sheep, and goats and producing milk (4,9)
	Fishing, including using hooks and harpoons,† preparing bait, and cleaning fish† (1)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown, and production of bricks (2-4,7,8)
	Limestone quarrying† and gold mining† (2,4,7,8,12)
Services	Domestic work† (2-4,13-18)
	Street work,† including vending, shoe shining, and begging (3,4,7,8,18,19)
	Horse jockeying (7,18)
	Garbage dump scavenging† (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Debt bondage in cattle raising, dairy farms, and charcoal factories (2,3,20)
	Commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,14,19,21)
	Use in the production of child pornography (2,3,7,8,22-25)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug smuggling and drug trafficking (2,3,7,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Criadazgo, a practice in which middle-class and wealthy families informally employ and house child domestic workers from impoverished families, is pervasive in Paraguay; the 2011 National Survey of Child and Adolescent Activities estimated that more than 46,000 children were engaged in criadazgo. (3,21) Many of these children are in situations of domestic servitude, subjected to violence and abuse, and highly vulnerable to sex trafficking. (4,16,18,19) Lack of political will continues to prevent Congress from considering draft legislation criminalizing or regulating criadazgo. (3) Children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Ciudad del Este; in the Tri-Border area between Paraguay, Argentina and Brazil; and along commercial shipping routes on the Paraguay River. (2,3,7,26) Children work alongside their parents in debt bondage on cattle ranches, dairy farms, and charcoal factories in the remote Chaco region. (2,3,7,18) Children shine shoes on the street and in government buildings. (8)

Children from rural and indigenous communities face difficulties accessing and completing their education, including language barriers and inadequate facilities and staff. (2,27,28) A study released in 2019 by the Coordinator for the Rights of Infancy and Adolescence of Paraguay estimated that half of all children in indigenous communities do not attend school. (29) The 2011 National Survey of Child and Adolescent Activities indicated that children who speak Guaraní exclusively are more likely to be involved in child labor and have higher rates of school absence compared to other working children; poverty is pervasive in rural Paraguay, where Guaraní is the predominant language. (4,30) Public transportation is limited in rural areas and school infrastructure and staff are often lacking in rural and indigenous communities. (3) The government has noted that girls from rural areas leave school at an earlier age than boys, and has estimated that more than 50 percent of children with disabilities could not attend school due to lack of access to public transportation. (7,8) Such challenges may leave these children more vulnerable to child labor. Approximately 13 percent of children engaged in child labor in agriculture do not attend school and 11.8 percent of working children ages 14 to 17 have not completed primary school. (1,31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Paraguay has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Paraguay's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibition of child recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 1 of Law No. 2332; Article 58 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,33)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 54 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 3 of Decree No. 4951; Articles 122 and 125 of the Labor Code; Article 15 of the First Employment Law; Article 5 of Law No. 5407 on Domestic Work (32-38)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 54 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 2 of Decree No. 4951; Article 15 of the First Employment Law; Articles 122, 125, and 389 of the Labor Code; Article 5 of Law No. 5407 on Domestic Work (32-38)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5–7 of the Comprehensive Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 125, 129, 223, and 320 of the Penal Code; Articles 10 and 54 of the Constitution (39-42)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 6 and 7 of the Comprehensive Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 125, 129, and 223 of the Penal Code; Article 54 of the Constitution (39-42)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 135 and 223 of the Penal Code; Article 2.19 of Decree No. 4951; Article 31 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,34,40,42)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 1657; Article 32 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,43)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 3 and 5 of the Obligatory Military Service Law (44,45)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 3 and 5 of the Obligatory Military Service Law (44,45)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 2 of Law No. 4088; Article 32 of the General Education Law No. 1264, Decree 6162 (46,47)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 76 of the Constitution; Article 32 of the General Education Law No. 1264 (39,46)

In 2019, the Paraguayan government passed a law that provides domestic workers with the same minimum wage as all other workers in the country, effectively changing a law from 2015 that provided domestic workers with only 60 percent of the national minimum wage. This change may affect child labor because adults who work as domestic workers would have reduced need for their children to work. (48,49) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32,33,46-48)

Paraguay

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security (MTESS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforces laws related to child labor, inspects workplaces for child labor, and recommends penalties or fines for companies found in violation of labor laws. Refers cases involving criminal violations of child labor to the Ministry of Adolescents and Children (MINNA). (2,3,9)
Paraguayan National Police	Maintains a special unit of 33 police officers, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Unit, which handles trafficking in persons complaints, including in relation to children, with offices in 5 cities. (2,9)
Public Ministry (Attorney General)	Responsible for the investigation and prosecution of criminal laws against forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, the recruitment and use of child soldiers, and use of children in illicit activities. (3) Provides support to local prosecutors throughout Paraguay. (2) Maintains the Specialized Unit to Combat Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (ATU). (2) Comprises 3 specialized prosecutors based in Asunción and 35 assistants. (2,9,17)
Ministry of Adolescents and Children (MINNA)	Maintains a unit dedicated to fighting child trafficking and a hotline to report cases of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Provides social services to victims referred by law enforcement agencies and refers cases of sexual exploitation and child labor to the Public Ministry's ATU. (2,3,9,50)
Ministry of Women's Affairs	Provides social services to female victims of human trafficking, half of whom are estimated to be children. Houses an office staffed with five personnel dedicated to combating trafficking of children. (2,9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MTESS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, Paraguay's labor inspectorate increased its budget in an effort to hire 50 more inspectors in the 2020 calendar year. (51,53,54) During the reporting period, MTESS carried out both proactive and reactive inspections in sectors and geographical areas in which children are at high risk of engaging in child labor, although inspections were general and not specifically seeking incidents of child labor. (3) As part of Paraguay's plan for continual training of labor inspectors and in coordination with the Okakuaa Project, 38 inspectors were trained on forced labor, trafficking in persons, child labor, and agricultural inspections throughout the year. (51) MTESS also emphasized its commitment to the use and sustainability of the labor inspection computerized system through the issuance of a formal decree and training for labor inspectors nationwide on how to use the system. (20,55) The recently created Complaints and Followup Office received the majority of complaints on irregular work of adolescent workers and those working as cleaners. (51)

Although Paraguay has ratified ILO C. 81, its labor inspectors are contractors rather than public officials and they do not receive sufficient training on child labor issues. (2,3) Due to the instability of contract employment, the authority and training of these labor inspectors may be called into question. (56) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Paraguay's workforce, which includes over 3 million workers. According to the ILO's recommendation of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Paraguay would employ about 229 inspectors. Government agencies, international organizations, NGOs, and labor organizations agree that inadequate funding and the insufficient number of labor inspectors hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, especially in the informal sector, including in agriculture and domestic work, and particularly in rural areas like the Chaco region. (2,3,7) The inspectorate is particularly limited by the lack of dedicated vehicles or travel funds. (2,3,7) The Labor Ministry, other government agencies, and NGOs agree that labor inspectors receive useful and necessary training, but that inspectors could benefit from more training specific to child labor. (3)

An additional constraint to labor law enforcement is the lack of efficient and timely cooperation by judicial authorities in granting workplace inspection search warrants to the Public Ministry and MTESS when an employer does not permit an inspector to enter a workplace to conduct an inspection. The system is paper-based and orders routinely take more than 3 months to arrive. (2,3,8-10,61) Research was unable to determine whether the government has implemented a 2016 agreement with judicial and law enforcement authorities that would accelerate the authorization of search warrants.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Number of Investigations conducted between January and November of 2019.

From January to November of 2019, the Specialized Unit to Combat Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (ATU) processed 211 child labor cases, 119 of which involved sexual exploitation,

Paraguay

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In July 2019, 25 of Paraguay's Peace Judges received training on the child labor manual and access to justice at the community level for cases of child labor. (51) In August, 28 trial-court judges were trained in a workshop on legal prohibitions and sentences on the worst forms of child labor, with specific focus on indigenous communities. (51) During the reporting period, the government also created a working group led by the ATU to assist indigenous victims of human trafficking. (21) Through its Assistance Program for Victims of Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation, the Ministry of Adolescents and Children (MINNA) inaugurated a new shelter for trafficking victims in San Lorenzo. (21)

Training for criminal investigators was considered insufficient. (3) Government agencies, international organizations, NGOs, and labor organizations have also observed a need for more specialized prosecutors to support local prosecutors nationwide and increase the Public Ministry's ability to investigate and prosecute cases involving human trafficking. (8-10,14) Overall, Paraguay's criminal law enforcement agencies lack resources, including vehicles, fuel, staff and training, to sufficiently identify, investigate, and prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor, especially in remote areas. (21) As a result, the number of convictions of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor is insufficient. Additionally, existing penalties are inadequate deterrents. (2,7-10,14) Inconsistent application of fines and criminal penalties remain significant challenges in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (3) In 2019, the National Police's Anti-Trafficking Unit budget remained low and staff decreased from 38 to 36. (21)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient financial and human resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Labor (CONAETI)	Leads government efforts against child labor and includes representatives from MTESS, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, the Ministry of Women's Affairs, MINNA, and other government agencies, and labor union representatives, industry associations, and NGOs. (2) Met seven times during the reporting period and discussed the application of the national strategy, the need to raise the minimum age for work, and the strengthening of the labor training program. (3,51)
Inter-Institutional Working Group on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking	Coordinates inter-agency efforts to combat all forms of trafficking in persons, including child trafficking, and collects and reports statistics on those efforts. (3) Headed by the Ministry of Foreign Relations. (2) Held four plenary sessions and two committee sessions during the reporting period. (3,21)
Defense Councils for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (CODENIs)	Coordinate efforts to protect children's rights at the municipal level, including by maintaining a registry of adolescent workers and coordinating with vocational training programs for adolescents. (32) Continued to meet and undertake activities in 2019, though each municipal government's capacity varied based on political will and financial and human resources. (3) In coordination with MTESS, worked during the reporting period to promote decent work for adolescents and increase participation in the Registry of the Adolescent Worker (RAT), including a workshop with indigenous students on their rights as workers. (51)

In November 2019, MTESS and MINNA signed an agreement to strengthen inter-agency coordination in the context of the National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents. (3,51,59) Through the alliance, adolescents and their families will receive job training through the National Professional Promotion Service and encourage formal employment for parents so that children will be less vulnerable to child labor. (59,60) The MTESS, in cooperation with Project Okakuaa, trained 331 representatives of Defense Councils for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (CODENIs) in 4 regions on the digital Registry for Adolescent Workers. (51) Fifty members of the National Institute of Rural Development (INDERT) were trained on the subjects of child labor and protection of adolescent workers. (51) INDERT and the MTESS also signed an alliance in January to work together to eradicate child labor in rural areas, specifically in livestock fairs, by exchanging information and developing joint actions. (61)

The MTESS also signed a resolution in September 2019 that proposes decentralizing the National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Work into department-level commissions to better focus its efforts at the regional level. (51,62)

While the Inter-Institutional Working Group for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons was effective in fostering dialogue and coordination among government agencies on anti-Trafficking in Persons efforts, it faced challenges in collecting and reporting statistics and a lack of participation from all relevant government agencies. (21) Coordination between the MTESS and the ministries of Education and Health remains insufficient to combat the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the CODENIs require additional financial and human resources to fulfill their mission to address child labor. (2,8,9,17,21,63)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents (2019–2024)†	Aims to raise awareness and strengthen enforcement of child labor laws. Provides child laborers with access to free quality education and offers livelihood alternatives for their families. (2,8) The government continued to support this strategy and again updated it in 2019, with a focus on strengthening minimum family incomes, inspection of adolescent work, and access to quality education. (3,64,65) In June, members of MTESS traveled to Santiago, Chile for an exchange with the Chilean government on best practices in combating child labor and the protection of adolescent workers, with a focus on how to operationalize the national child labor prevention strategy at the local level. (66)
National Strategy to Prevent Forced Labor (2016–2020)	Aims to prevent and eradicate forced labor and care for victims. (63) During the reporting period, the government held two meetings to discuss the second national plan to prevent forced labor for the 2020–2024 period and the role of the National Commission on Fundamental Work Rights and Prevention of Forced Labor. (20,51,67) In November, MTESS also held a seminar on “Best Practices in the Prevention of Forced Labor” in cooperation with the Government of Brazil as part of this national plan. Labor inspectors, public defenders, and members of the national police participated. (68) A similar seminar on forced labor inspection procedures was held in September with the Government of Peru. (20)
National Plan for Development (2014–2030)	Aims to reduce social exclusion and poverty, including by preventing and eliminating child labor. (69) The government continued to implement this plan during the reporting period. The Technical Secretariat for Planning worked with UN agencies and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development on implementation. (56)
National Plan on Human Rights	Promotes human rights, including the prevention and elimination of child labor and forced labor. (70) In 2019, in line with this national plan and under the Okakuaa Project, civil servants and officials from the Department of Human Rights and the Supreme Court of Justice prepared a manual for judges, “Guidelines on the Regulatory System for the resolution of Cases of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.” (20,71)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the Inter-Institutional Working Group on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking approved a National Plan for the Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons in 2017, it is still pending a presidential decree for its implementation. (21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including coverage and funding to fully address the problem in all sectors.

Paraguay

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, through research, improved monitoring and enforcement, policy development, and awareness raising. These projects include Attaining Lasting Change (ATLAS), a $7.5 million project that aims to build the capacity of host governments to more adequately combat child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking; and Paraguay Okakuaa (Paraguay Progresses), a $6.8 million project implemented by Partners of the Americas. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Immediate Response Program*†	Program created to provide support to street children. Under the “ Dispositivo de Respuesta Inmediata ,” MINNA employees with a range of specializations, including psychologists and social workers, respond to tips from the MINNA hotline for reporting mistreatment, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, and negligence of children, as well as information from roving street patrols in high-risk areas. (3)
Embrace Program (Programa Abrazo)†	MINNA program to assist children engaged in exploitative work by providing them and their families with health and education services, food deliveries, and cash transfers conditioned on children’s school attendance and withdrawal from work. (2,73) Works closely with the NGO Fortalecer in the implementation of ILO-IPEC programs and with the Sugarcane Growers’ Association, Ministry of Education and Culture, and CONAETI to set up programs tailored to at-risk children who work during the sugarcane harvesting season. (74) The program was redesigned during the reporting period, and under Abrazo , the First Lady of Paraguay announced the construction of two additional health centers in San Lorenzo. (3,75)
Combating Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Girls, Boys, and Adolescents in Trips and Tourism†	National campaign of the National Secretariat for Tourism (SENATUR) and the Association of Female Tourism Executives to raise awareness on protecting children from commercial sexual exploitation. (17) Launched campaign in the Department of Itapúa in November 2018. (76) In 2019 under this initiative, Las Lomas Casa Hotel was the first hotel in Paraguay to adopt a seal “The Code”, an international code of conduct of social responsibility for the protection of children and adolescents from sexual exploitation. (77) SENATUR also signed an agreement with MINNA and the Ministry of Women to promote the prevention of trafficking and sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (78)
Well-Being Conditional Cash Transfer Program (Tekoporã)†	Government-administered program through the Secretariat for Social Action. Provides conditional cash transfers to families in rural communities. (9) Incorporates aspects of the Embrace Program, such as the family monitoring methodology, to ensure participant children do not engage in child labor. In 2019, 168,317 children in Paraguay were added as participants in the program. (80)

* Program was approved during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Paraguay.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,3,73,74,79)

As part of the Paraguay Okakuaa Project, MTESS held awareness-raising campaigns among employers on trafficking in persons in the Chaco region during the reporting period. (21)

The 2012 Law Against Trafficking in Persons requires the Ministry of Women’s Affairs to provide compensation and financial assistance to victims of sexual and labor trafficking, including minors, but NGO and government officials report that compensation takes too long to be helpful. (9,10,14,26,41,81) Although Paraguay has programs that target child labor, the coverage and funding of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, and programs are limited by the absence of government funding in education and health services in rural areas. Additional programs are needed to reach the large numbers of working children, especially in agriculture, including cattle herding and domestic work. (7,9,10,14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Paraguay (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age of completion of compulsory education.	2018 – 2019
	Protect children from the abuse of the criadazgo system by regulating the practice with legislation.	2019
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to determine and assess penalties for child labor violations.	2016 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by making labor inspectors public officials rather than contractors and ensuring that they receive more training specific to child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the funding and resources available to the labor inspectorate, including dedicated vehicles and travel funds, to build enforcement capacity to address child labor in the informal sector, agriculture, and domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Implement the 2016 agreement to accelerate authorization of workplace inspection search warrants to improve the cooperation mechanisms among judicial authorities and labor enforcement officials.	2013 – 2019
	Increase efforts to prosecute crimes related to the exploitation of children in the worst forms of child labor, including by hiring and training more specialized criminal investigators and prosecutors; providing resources, such as vehicles and fuel, to enable investigations in remote areas; and increasing penalties for crimes.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that fines and penalties for the worst forms of child labor are consistently applied.	2019
	Discontinue the practice of allowing children to shine shoes in government buildings.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Police's Anti-Trafficking Unit is properly funded and staffed.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the Inter-Institutional Working Group for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons fulfills its mandates, including in collecting and reporting statistics.	2018 – 2019
	Strengthen inter-agency coordinating mechanisms, with particular focus on the communication between the Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security and the ministries of Education and Health, to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2019
	Provide additional financial and human resources to the Defense Councils for the Rights of Children and Adolescents to strengthen their ability to address child labor at the municipal level.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that there is a comprehensive approach to combat trafficking in persons by approving the National Plan for the Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons.	2019
Social Programs	Further expand government programs to assist more families and children affected by child labor in agriculture in rural areas, including cattle herding, and domestic work.	2010 – 2019
	Increase access to education for children vulnerable to child labor, particularly children with disabilities, children living in rural and indigenous communities with language barriers, and girls who leave school early. Address the lack of infrastructure, staff, and transportation, in order to improve access to education for all children.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that financial assistance programs for child trafficking and forced labor victims are properly funded.	2018 – 2019

In 2019, Peru made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published a law modifying the Penal Code to strengthen penalties for the sexual exploitation of women and minors and drafted an executive decree to establish a standardized government procedure to register adolescent workers. Under Operation Mercury to stop illegal gold mining, Peruvian authorities also dismantled a human trafficking network in the Madre de Dios region. In addition, the government renewed the National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for the 2019–2022 period and the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations approved a guide for the reintegration of human trafficking victims. Moreover, under the Semilla Project, the Ministry of Labor created the Child Labor Free Seal which recognizes products and services whose supply chains are free of child labor. However, children in Peru engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Peruvian law allows children ages 12 to 14 to do light work without specifying the activities in which children may work. In addition, labor law enforcement agencies in Peru lack sufficient inspectors and training to adequately combat child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Peru engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) In the 2015 National Child Labor Survey, the government identified 1,619,200 children, ages 5 to 17, engaged in child labor. Rates of child labor were higher in the sierra and jungle regions than in the coastal region, and higher in rural areas than in urban areas. (3) The government estimated that 1,251,400 children, ages 5 to 17, were engaged in hazardous child labor and that 58.4 percent of these children worked in agriculture, fishing, or mining. The government also identified 70,500 children, ages 10 to 17, who were at risk of forced labor. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Peru.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	21.8 (1,261,484)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	25.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.1

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Mining,† including for silver and gold (6-9)
	Construction and production of bricks† and fireworks†, metal manufacturing (6-11)
Services	Street work,† including vending, begging, shoe shining, carrying loads, selling in kiosks and markets, collecting fares on public buses,† and washing cars (3,6,8,12)
	Treating leather and working on shoes, tailoring work (8,13)
	Repairing motor vehicles† (14)
	Garbage scavenging† (7,15,16)
	Working in restaurants, domestic work† and cleaning offices and hotels (7-9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in mining, including gold mining (6,9,14,17,18)
	Forced labor in logging timber, street vending, and begging (6,9,15-18)
	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,9,19)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in bars, nightclubs, brothels, and mining camps, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,19,20)
	Growing and processing coca (stimulant plant), sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and transporting drugs (1,6,9,19,21,22)
	Counterfeiting U.S. dollars and lightbulbs (3,19,23,24)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (9,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Peru work in informal and small-scale mining, particularly for gold, sometimes in situations of forced labor, and are exposed to hazards, including wall and mine collapses, landslides, explosives accidents, and exposure to mercury and harmful gases. Near mining areas, children are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (2,11,18,28-30) Young girls from Ecuador, Colombia, and Venezuela are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and forced labor in mining regions. (29) Remnants of the Shining Path terrorist group continue to use children in combat, domestic servitude, and drug trafficking. (11,21) Forced labor in support of narco trafficking can include using hazardous chemicals to process coca or working as a drug courier. (11) Communities located near illegal mining operations are often isolated and lack a permanent government presence, increasing the likelihood of illicit activity, including commercial sexual exploitation and labor trafficking of girls who are indebted for transportation fees. (13)

The influx of more than 800,000 Venezuelan migrants and refugees into Peru since 2017 may have exacerbated child labor and human trafficking. (11,31) During the 2019 school cycle, the Ministry of Education struggled to provide free public education to approximately 35,000 Venezuelan students, 71 percent of them in Lima alone. (11,32) The 2018 National Institute of Statistics report found that an estimated 54 percent of Venezuelan children ages 6 to 11 were not enrolled in school, with both a lack of economic resources and necessary documentation being barriers to education access. (11,33) However, the Peruvian government did take measures throughout the reporting period to ensure that Venezuelan families were aware of the process for enrollment and the educational assessment process in place for students without documentation. (34,35)

Indigenous and Afro-Peruvian children and children from rural communities experience lower school enrollment and completion rates, with indigenous children being especially vulnerable to dropping out of school and engaging in hazardous work in agriculture. (12,36,37) NGOs and government officials report that there is a lack of data on migration and forced labor; however, in 2019 the National Institute of Statistics and Technology and the ILO worked on a forced labor survey in the Cusco region to address this issue. (15,22,23,38)

The swift removal of several sitting presidents in recent years, ultimately leading to the dissolution of Congress in late 2019, may have impacted work on child labor issues during the reporting period due to the high turnover of staff in each cabinet. (15,22,39)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Peru has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 51 of the Child and Adolescent Code (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 58 of the Child and Adolescent Code (26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections A and B of Supreme Decree No. 003-2010-MIMDES; Article 58 of the Child and Adolescent Code (26,27)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 23 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 128, 129, 153, 168, and 182 of the Penal Code; Article 153 of the Law Against Trafficking of Persons and the Illicit Trafficking of Migrants; Article 153 of the Law that Perfects the Typification of the Crime of Trafficking of Persons (26,28-31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 153 and 182 of the Penal Code; Article 153 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons and the Illicit Trafficking of Migrants (26,28-30)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 128 and 297 of the Penal Code (29,33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 2, 6, and 42 of the Military Service Law (34)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 12 and 36 of the General Education Law; Article 61 of Supreme Decree No. 011-2012-ED (31,35-37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the General Education Law (31,35)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (42,46-49)

In 2019, the government published a law modifying the Penal Code, which added multiple new provisions that defined additional crimes and strengthened penalties for the commercial sexual exploitation of children. The government also established a single, standardized procedure to process work authorizations for adolescents.

Peru

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Regional labor departments will have to carry out an evaluation of the proposed work activities to ensure that they will not affect the health, safety, or school attendance of the adolescents involved. These evaluations will be used by the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL) to target labor inspections. (11,30,51) The National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor also agreed to update the list of hazardous work for adolescents with guidance from the ILO's Latin America and Caribbean Free of Child Labor Regional Initiative using studies of agriculture supply chains developed under the Semilla Project. (11)

The Child and Adolescent Code provides a light work exception for children as young as age 12 to receive work authorization without specifying the activities permitted. (11,39) In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (36,42,46,47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment (MTPE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment (MTPE)	Sets national policies and guidelines for labor law enforcement, including for inspections. (38,39) Maintains an online reporting service to receive complaints of labor law violations. (40) Responsible for supporting the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL), which enforces labor laws in 16 regions by inspecting workplaces with more than 10 registered workers and referring cases of child labor to the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP) and the Public Ministry, as appropriate. (3,41-43) SUNAFIL maintains a dedicated unit of 10 inspectors who target forced labor and child labor violations and who train other inspectors on these topics. (3,43,44) Regional Directorates for Labor consist of one representative of the regional government, one representative of MTPE, and one representative of SUNAFIL. These directorates operate in regions without a SUNAFIL office and conduct inspections in workplaces with fewer than 10 registered workers. (45) The Department of Promotion and Protection of Fundamental Labor Rights implements the child labor free supply chains program [Child Labor Free Seal/ Sello Libre de Trabajo Infantil (SELTI)], to help agricultural producers comply with child labor laws, including in rural agricultural zones that are difficult for the labor inspectorate to regulate. (46)
Ombudsman's Department for Children and Adolescents (DEMUNA)	Coordinates government policies and programs that target children and adolescents. Helps MTPE investigate child labor complaints. (47) Operates 28 offices nationwide, one per region, with 10 modules, or small offices. (11) Works collaboratively with local municipal officials, including police, under the Municipal Management Model's referral protocol, to ensure adolescents who are removed from hazardous work receive appropriate social services. (46)
Public Ministry	Coordinates with MTPE, SUNAFIL, and the National Police to investigate and prosecute cases of criminal violations of child labor laws. Maintains a specialized human trafficking prosecutorial unit in the Public Prosecutor's Office. (48)
Ministry of the Interior (MININTER)	Investigates child trafficking cases. (9) Maintains a hotline to receive reports of human trafficking. Provides victims and the public with information on human trafficking, refers cases of human trafficking to the relevant government offices, and coordinates services for victims. (9,49) Within MININTER, the Peruvian National Police (PNP) enforce criminal laws regarding child labor and child exploitation, and maintain a human trafficking investigation unit to investigate cases of child trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation. Coordinates with the Public Ministry and MIMP to place rescued minors with family members or state social services. (3,19) PNP's Trafficking in Persons Directorate has approximately 150 investigators. (6) Municipal police also use the Semilla Project's Municipal Management Model to work collaboratively with DEMUNA to remove children and adolescents from hazardous work. (46)
MIMP Children's Bureau	Designs, promotes, coordinates, monitors, and evaluates government policies and programs for the well-being of children. (47,50) Provides social services to children found in the worst forms of child labor and refers cases to MTPE. (6)

In 2019, SUNAFIL opened 5 new regional inspection offices in Junin, Lima, Madre de Dios, Pasco, and San Martin, resulting in 21 offices across Peru's 25 regions and the Province of Lima. (11,59) The Peruvian National Police (PNP) also established a local presence in Madre de Dios. (13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTPE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

‡ Data are from March to October 2019.

From March to October 2019, SUNAFIL's special inspection group on forced labor and child labor, comprising 10 labor inspectors, conducted inspections throughout the country, ultimately removing 26 minors from child labor. (59,62) In January 2019, SUNAFIL inspectors carried out a joint operation with the PNP and the Attorney General's trafficking in persons office at a brickyard in Cusco where five minors between the ages of 13 and 17 worked. In April and May 2019, SUNAFIL followed up with a series of awareness-raising workshops for brickyard employers and workers in the region about forced labor and child labor. (11,13) In March, SUNAFIL and the PNP's anti-trafficking unit also removed three minors from the Gamarra garment district of Lima and who had been working in dangerous conditions by operating industrial sewing machines without proper authorization. (11,13) In 2019, SUNAFIL, the MTPE, and the Public Ministry coordinated child labor training for more than 3,800 labor inspectors and regional government officials. During the reporting period, SUNAFIL continued to remove children from dangerous working conditions in quarries, timber fields, markets, public transportation, restaurants, and the metal manufacturing industry and trained at-risk adolescents at non-traditional education centers. (11,59)

Despite these efforts, NGOs, the MTPE, and SUNAFIL report that budgetary constraints continue to hamper efforts to address child labor in Peru. Although the inspection budget has increased each year, funding remains inadequate to carry out inspections, train inspectors, and maintain offices. (1,6,11,63) Civil society and labor sector experts reported that SUNAFIL labor inspector training was not adequate to reduce child labor. (11) Not all labor inspectors receive regular training on child labor and forced labor, although SUNAFIL reported that it was working on expanding this training to more inspectors. (59) Enforcement against child labor in the informal sector, which is a large portion of Peru's economy, remains inadequate due to these constraints. (11) Despite efforts to expand SUNAFIL's reach, experts have noted the lack of labor inspections in rural areas. (11,59)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Peru's workforce, which includes over 17 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every

Peru

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Peru would employ about 1,135 inspectors. (66,67) In addition, many of Peru’s inspectors are “auxiliary” or junior-level inspectors with limited authority to conduct inspections until they complete 2 years of service and an examination. (68) Auxiliary inspectors must have full inspectors supervise their inspection processes and review their inspection acts for any businesses with more than 10 employees. (65,68) SUNAFIL reported plans to remove the auxiliary inspector classification and require that all inspectors at the national level be full-fledged inspectors with full authority. (65) SUNAFIL prohibits inspectors from conducting follow-up inspections of any given worksite within the same year. (68) Furthermore, SUNAFIL collected no fines for child labor violations issued between 2014 and 2019 because the fines remained in the judicial appeals process. (1,6,69)

Throughout the reporting period, the MTPE implemented the risk identification model by using information from the national household survey to identify regional areas of risk for child labor and better target efforts on prevention and eradication. (23,70) Also, under the Semilla Project, the government adopted the Municipal Model for Child Labor Detection and Response, formally establishing a referral system for cases of child labor detected at the municipal level. The model, developed and implemented in conjunction with the Ombudsman’s Department for Children and Adolescents (DEMUNA), incorporates child labor oversight into the existing enforcement function of municipal governments with regard to regulating public spaces, including by imposing sanctions, such as closing down establishments engaging in the worst forms of child labor; establishing a referral system for cases of child labor detected at the municipal level; promoting local governments as child labor free zones; launching a municipal adolescent worker registry; and showcasing local businesses that comply with child labor laws. (23,60) However, the MTPE failed to replicate critical components of the model during its adoption and expansion. (59)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

In 2019, the Government of Peru continued “Operation Mercury” to combat the pervasive practice of illegal gold mining in the Amazonian region, which has historically fostered child labor, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation. (71) In September 2019, during this operation, Peruvian authorities dismantled a human trafficking network in Madre de Dios, arresting 15 people, including 2 officers with the PNP who were accused of providing information about police operations to the network. (72) In June 2019, the Peruvian government convicted a couple for human trafficking, labor exploitation, and enslavement following the heavily publicized case of forced labor found at their illegal workshop in Lima, which caught fire and killed two workers, including a 17 year old. (11,13) In November 2019, the trafficking in persons prosecutors’ mandate was expanded under the modifications made in the Penal Code to include crimes of sexual exploitation, forced labor, and slavery, which previously were handled by general prosecutors. (13) Although these changes were recognized as a positive advancement, both government and civil society officials noted that justice system operators will require significant training to understand these changes in an already complex legal system. (13)

Despite these efforts, reports indicate that investigations and prosecutions were inadequate to deter child trafficking, particularly in illegal mining areas and bars. Moreover, reports noted too few investigators, insufficient funding or resources to carry out investigations, low conviction rates, and inadequate training for MTPE investigators, police, and members of the judicial system. (2,11,13,15,22,30)

In December, members of the MTPE, DEMUNA, the Ministry of the Interior's (MININTER) trafficking team, and the Educadores de la Calle program worked together to assist eight children who were involved in forced street work in the city of Chimbote. (73) In 2019, the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP) established five new shelters dedicated specifically to child trafficking victims, for a total of seven shelters for children in Peru. (13) However, these shelters only serve girls. (13) In 2019, MIMP also approved a guide for the reintegration of trafficking victims, designating MIMP as the lead agency for the management of these plans. (11,74,75) The Minister of MIMP also met with members of the armed forces and national police working to combat labor issues in the mining sector through Operation Mercury in the Madre de Dios region. During the visit, she reinforced the need to identify victims of human trafficking and child commercial sexual exploitation and refer them to the recently renovated local shelter “Centro de Acogida Residencial Florecer.” (73) Despite the increase in shelters, there is an insufficient number of shelters throughout the country, including shelters to serve boys. In addition, there is a lack of specialized services for victims of human trafficking. (2,22,30,76)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the creation and implementation of action plans under the Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (CPETI)	Implements the National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, which includes the Semilla Project as one of its three national pilot projects. (3,40) Proposes public policies and coordinates, evaluates, and monitors government actions to combat child labor. Maintains subcommittees, including on informal mining, child labor in indigenous villages, and project evaluations. (47) Led by MTPE, comprises representatives from 17 government agencies, including MININTER; the Ministries of Education and Justice; PNP; and business associations, unions, and NGOs. (47,53) During the reporting period, the Commission met on a monthly basis and collaborated with MTPE and the Semilla Project to create the Child Labor Free Seal. (6,54,55)
Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Manage and implement regional public policy for the prevention and eradication of child labor. Present in all 25 regions of Peru. (56) Some Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor have not fulfilled their mandate to create action plans to combat child labor, while others have action plans but have failed to provide the necessary funding to carry them out. (3,1,20) In 2019, the regional commission for Metropolitan Lima organized a MTPE-led training for 95 local government officials on protocols related to child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. (57) The regional commissions also received technical assistance from the MTPE's General Directorate of Fundamental Rights and Health and Safety at Work which included analysis of the commissions to achieve leveling capacities between the regions and improve policy implementation. (6)
National Commission Against Forced Labor	Coordinates government efforts to combat forced labor, including conducting research and awareness-raising campaigns, developing legislation, and strengthening Peru's institutional capacity to address forced labor. Led by MTPE, with the participation of eight additional government ministries. (3) In 2019, held two sessions, one in which members agreed to update the National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for the 2019–2022 period, and one in which members approved the 2019 Annual Operation Plan. (6)
Permanent Multi-Sectoral Commission on Illegal Mining	Coordinates government efforts to address illegal mining by developing programs to eradicate child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children in mining areas. Led by the Prime Minister's Office and includes representatives from regional governments and six national government agencies, including the Ministry of Energy and Mines and MININTER. (58) Met several times in 2019 to plan interventions across the country to address illegal mining, forced labor, child labor, and dangerous working conditions. (59,60)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Multi-Sector Commission Against Trafficking in Persons	Leads and coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking by designing, recommending, monitoring, and implementing policies to combat human trafficking, including of children. Chaired by MININTER, comprises 12 government agencies, including MTPE, MIMP, and the Ministries of Justice, Education, and Health. (61) In 2019, the Commission held training and awareness workshops for 774 individuals in 10 regions of the country and videoconferencing sessions for 4 regions on forced labor and its link to human trafficking. In November, the Commission also held a trafficking identification workshop for the PNP's Special Operations Unit. (6) However, the Commission and the Ministry of Finance and Economy missed the deadline of September 2019 to produce a multi-sectoral anti-trafficking budget, which contributed to anti-trafficking budget cuts across government ministries including MININTER. (9)

‡ The government has other coordinating mechanisms that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (11)

In 2019, the MTPE and Ecuador's Ministry of Labor signed an Action Plan (2019–2020) to exchange experiences on the prevention and eradication of child labor. (83) The MTPE also signed an inter-institutional agreement with the Government of Chile to exchange knowledge and experiences on the eradication of child labor, youth employment, job skill certification, and occupational safety and health. (84)

Under the U.S.-Peru Child Protection Compact Partnership Bilateral Dialogue (2017–2021), the Peruvian government pledged to provide $2.4 million to increase personnel of the relevant member entities of the Multi-sectoral Commission Against Trafficking in Persons to strengthen prosecution of child trafficking crimes, identification of child victims, and coordination of protective services. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (2012–2021)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by improving livelihoods of low-income families, educational opportunities, and working conditions for adolescents; raising awareness of child labor; and increasing child labor law enforcement. (3,12,56) Also seeks to improve the quality of child labor data in Peru. (12) In 2019 under this strategy, MTPE held an event in Lima to raise awareness in commemoration of World Day Against Child Labor. (62) The Minister of Labor and the Superintendent of SUNAFIL also met with local municipal leaders in the La Libertad region to reinforce inter-institutional work on eradicating child labor and forced labor, highlighting the important role that local mayors play in these efforts. (63) Members of MTPE also met with municipal mayors in Chincha, Ica, Nazca, Plapa, and Pisco to discuss efforts to eradicate child labor and dangerous adolescent work and develop a series of technical assistance workshops on SUNAFIL's inspection and sanction process. (20,64)
National Action Plan for Children and Adolescents (2012–2021)	Establishes a comprehensive set of government policies for children and adolescents to eradicate the worst forms of child labor. (3,50,56) The National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (CPETI) met in September 2019 to discuss advances made under this strategy. (54,65)
National Plan to Combat Forced Labor (2019–2022)†	Establishes policies and priorities for combating forced labor, including programs and projects focusing on the most vulnerable populations, such as children. (56,66) In September 2019, the government of Peru renewed this national plan for the 2019–2022 period as part of its commitments under Alliance 8.7 to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (9,66,67)
Inter-sectoral Protocol Against Forced Labor	Outlines the government's role in combating forced labor and provides for the housing, legal defense, and educational reintegration of children and adolescent victims of forced labor. Monitored by the National Commission Against Forced Labor. (56,68,69) In 2019, the National Commission proposed that February 1 st be recognized as Peru's National Day in the Fight Against Forced Labor; the proposal passed in early 2020. (6,70)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2017–2021)	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by addressing root causes, prosecuting perpetrators, assisting victims, and strengthening programs for vulnerable populations, including child laborers. (3,19,71,72) Emphasizes the needs of human trafficking victims through a dedicated Victim Reintegration Plan. (3,19) In 2019, under this plan, individual government ministries and bodies were actively engaged in anti-trafficking efforts at the national, regional, and local levels through prevention, prosecution, and protection actions. In addition, 24 regions created their own anti-trafficking plans to increase efforts. (9)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2019, the Government of Peru became one of the 17 countries designated as a “Pathfinder Country” under the ILO’s Alliance 8.7 program to eliminate child labor by 2025 and forced labor and human trafficking by 2030, solidifying its commitment to significantly accelerate efforts in these areas, specifically through the use of the ILO’s Child Labor Risk Identification Model. (94) The government also approved a National Multi-sectoral Policy to Combat Organized Crime (2019–2030), which establishes strategic actions to prevent and eradicate the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Educational Programs†	The Carabayllo Project provides scholarships, education assistance, psychological help, and other services to 1,000 families and 1,500 children to reduce urban child labor, especially in garbage dumps. (15,16,48) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this project in 2019 for inclusion in this report. The Secondary Tutorial Program is a rural basic education program supported by the Ministry of Education that includes school meal plans (Qali Warma) for rural students throughout the country, including hard-to-reach indigenous communities. (46) In 2019, the Ministry of Education issued a resolution approving this model program, the first of its kind, and giving its participants access to the Qali Warma school meal plan, thereby expanding access to nutrition and education. (46)
Learn Program (Yachay)†	MIMP program to increase protection and access to social services for children subjected to street work, begging, and commercial sexual exploitation. (76) The Street Educators (Educadores de Calle)† program is part of the broader Yachay Program and provides counseling and training to children engaged in child labor, begging, and street work. Operates 68 centers at the national level for educational activities, parent training, and workshops. (3,1,77) Connects working children and their families to educational and social services to withdraw them from exploitative work and improve family welfare. (6,77-80) Between January and November 2019, the Educadores de Calle program reached 7,922 children throughout the country, and of those children, 1,090 discontinued their street work. (6)
Together Program (Juntos)†	Ministry of Development and Social Inclusion program that provides cash transfers to approximately 763,000 low-income households in 15 of the country’s 25 regions. (3,1,40,82) The program was active during the reporting period and closed out 2019 with 747,540 families affiliated with its benefits. (83)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, through research, improved monitoring and enforcement, policy development, and awareness-raising. These projects include Promoting Better Understanding of Indicators to Address Forced Labor and Labor Trafficking in Peru, a $2 million, 4 year project implemented by Capital Humano y Social Alternativo (CHS); Proyecto Semilla (Seed Project): Combating Exploitative Rural Child Labor in Peru, a $16.25 million, 8 year project implemented by Desarrollo y Autogestión ; Engaging Workers and Civil Society to Strengthen Labor Law Enforcement, a $2.8 million, 3-year project implemented by the American Center for International Labor Solidarity; and From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project), a global project implemented by ILO. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (46,84) In 2019 under the Semilla Project, the MTPE created the Child Labor Free Seal [Sello Libre de Trabajo Infantil (SELT1)], which recognizes companies and organizations, including cooperatives and associations, that incorporate specific measures to monitor, prevent, and eradicate child labor in their production processes and supply chains. Businesses receive training on child labor from the MTPE and support for access to socially responsible markets. (46,55,85) The Semilla Project and MTPE also hosted an international forum in July on “Productive Supply Chains without Child Labor: Public Policy and Social Responsibility” as an opportunity for regional government officials, business leaders, and civil society to exchange experiences on promoting child labor free social responsibility in the agricultural sector. (86)

In 2019, the government issued a law that recognizes the implementation of temporary shelters for victims of human trafficking and sexual exploitation as a national interest and public need and mandates the design of a multi sectoral-funded program to address these issues. (11,13,50)

However, reports indicate that existing social programs are not sufficient to fully address the problem of child labor in Peru, including the large number of children who perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Peru also lacks targeted programs to assist children who are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and children who work in mining, logging, and domestic work. (6,109,110)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Peru (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children younger than age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of labor law enforcement efforts including the number of inspections conducted at work sites and violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that inspectors are properly trained on child labor and forced labor issues.	2019
	Ensure adequate enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector, including in artisanal mining and domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2019
	Increase the collection rate for fines related to child labor law violations to deter future violations.	2015 – 2019
	Establish National Labor Inspection Superintendency offices in all regions of Peru to support labor law enforcement throughout the country, including rural areas, and remove the "auxiliary inspector classification" to increase efficiency in the inspection process.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that there are sufficient shelters, including shelters for boys, and specialized services available for victims of trafficking.	2019
	Increase the level of funding and the resources allocated for labor and criminal law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor, including for increased training on the worst forms of child labor for criminal investigators.	2015 – 2019
	Publish information on the total number of criminal investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that authorities conduct adequate inspections, investigations, and prosecutions in mining areas and bars to deter the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor develop action plans to combat child labor and allocate sufficient funding to implement these plans.	2010 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that efforts to address trafficking in persons of minors are fully funded by the approval of a multi-sectoral anti-trafficking budget.	2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, regardless of documentation, in particular in indigenous and Afro-Peruvian communities and rural areas, and in Venezuelan migrant and refugee communities.	2014 – 2019
	Expand social programs to reach a greater number of children who perform dangerous tasks in agriculture; initiate social programs to address child commercial sexual exploitation, child labor in mining, child labor in logging, and child domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information on activities taken under all social programs that address child labor.	2018 - 2019

In 2019, the Philippines made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President signed Executive Order No. 92 institutionalizing the National Council Against Child Labor to help further implement the Philippines Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework. The government also permanently closed nine establishments found to be in violation of child labor laws, and launched the 6-year #SaferKidsPH campaign, which aims to strengthen the investigation and prosecution of cases of online commercial sexual exploitation of children. Additionally, through new Republic Act No. 11310, the government institutionalized the Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program, which is a conditional cash transfer program that focuses on reducing child labor. However, children in the Philippines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and gold mining. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it did not adequately protect children allegedly engaged in drug trafficking from inappropriate incarceration, penalties for crimes they were forced to commit, or physical harm. Additionally, research was unable to find evidence that the government investigated police officers accused of extrajudicial killings of children during anti-drug operations in 2019. The enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging, especially due to the limited number of inspectors, lack of resources for inspections, and inspectors' inability to assess penalties.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Philippines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and gold mining. (1-3,4-7) The Survey on Children indicated that 3.2 million children ages 5 to 17 engage in child labor, of whom approximately 3 million engage in hazardous work. (10) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Philippines.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.5 (1,549,677)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		108.7

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, primarily girls, are trafficked domestically from rural communities to urban centers and tourist destinations for the purpose of domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (31,32,34,39) Research indicates that the Philippines continues to be one of the top global Internet sources of online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC), which continues to be a highly profitable and growing sector. (33,34,40-42) Children are induced to perform sex acts at the direction of paying foreigners and local Filipinos, including family members, for live Internet broadcasts that usually take place in small Internet cafes, private homes, or windowless dungeon-like buildings commonly known as “cybersex dens.” (6,7,32-34,41-48) NGOs reported an increase in the number of sex tourists visiting the Philippines after first initiating contact with their victims online. (34) According to data from OSEC cases analyzed by the International Justice Mission Philippines, the median age of the victims at the time of rescue was 11 years. (6,32,34,49,50) In addition, according to 2019 data, the Philippines Department of Justice’s Office of Cybercrimes received more than 45,000 reports of online child abuse and cybercrimes from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children; research could not confirm the number of these reports that were confirmed cases of OSEC. (7)

During the reporting period, the government—led by the Anti-Money Laundering Council—conducted a study entitled “Child Pornography in the Philippines: Evaluation using Suspicious Transaction Reports (STR) Data from 2015 to 2018,” which revealed common red flag indicators in financial transactions that may be linked to OSEC. It also demonstrated an increase in child pornography cases from 2015 to 2018. (34)

Recruitment of child soldiers by non-government militias and terrorist organizations, predominately on the southern island of Mindanao, remains a concern. (6,7,33,34,41,35) In Marawi City, many children as young as age 7 were recruited, paid, and trained as fighters by the Maute Group, a terrorist organization linked to the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS). Research also suggests that the New People’s Army, Abu Sayyaf Group, and the Bangsamoro Islamic Freedom Fighters continue to recruit children from schools for use as human shields, cooks, and fighters, while offering religious education and material incentives to join. (6,7,33,34) The Government of the Philippines continued to convene formal coordination meetings with the UN on incidents of grave violations against children, to facilitate appropriate responses to such situations. (7,34,51)

The most recent Functional Literacy, Education and Mass Media Survey, published in 2015 with 2013 data, indicated that 10.6 percent of all school-aged children did not attend school. (6,52) A more recent survey published in 2018 with 2017 data, the Annual Poverty Indicator Survey, estimated that of the 44 million school-aged children (ages 3 to 19), one-third were not enrolled in or attending school. The highest percentage of children not in school was in the newly formed Bangsamoro Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (BARMM). (7) In an effort to facilitate youth school attendance, the BARMM authorities provided the Ministry of Basic, Higher, and Technical Education the largest share of its budget for calendar year 2020. (7,41) In addition, the Department of Education made improving accessibility and resources for schools in geographically isolated, disadvantaged, and conflict-affected areas a top priority in 2019. (7) It identified nearly 7,200 schools (15 percent) as “Last Miles Schools,” an initiative launched in July 2019 to provide additional resources to needy schools. Schools meeting this criteria must: (a) be located more than 1 hour away from the town center, (b) be only accessible through difficult terrain, (c) have fewer than 4 classrooms, (d) have fewer than 100 students, (e) have indigenous students comprise more than 75 percent of the school’s population, or (f) have little or no educational equipment. (7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Philippines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Section 2 of the Philippine Constitution (66)

* No conscription (64)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (65)

The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

On January 10, 2019, President Duterte signed into law Republic Act No. 11188 (R.A. No. 11188), Special Protection of Children in Situations of Armed Conflict. (7,34,41,67) R.A. No. 11188 provides protection for children involved in and affected by armed conflict. (7,68,69) R.A. No. 11188 also requires that the Government of the Philippines take all feasible measures to prevent the recruitment, use, or displacement of children, or grave child rights' violations against children involved in armed conflict. (7,34,41,67-69) On June 4, 2019, the government enacted implementing rules and regulations for R.A. No. 11188. (34,35)

For a second year, the Government of the Philippines reportedly continued reviewing proposed amendments to R.A. No. 9231, that would: (a) increase the minimum age of employment from age 15 to age 16, (b) devolve the issuance of child work permits to local government units, (c) institute stricter working hours for children, (d) mandate that part of the money legally earned by children be set aside in a trust fund, (e) authorize the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to determine the types of non-hazardous agricultural employment or work that children ages 16 to 18 can perform, and (f) design a holistic intervention program for children working in the informal economy. It is unclear what progress was made in 2019 toward passing these amendments. (6,7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the DOLE that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE): Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC) and Bureau of Workers with Special Concerns (BWSC)	BWC enforces child labor and child trafficking laws and regularly trains inspectors and regional personnel. (6,32,34,71) Inspects establishments and monitors compliance with labor laws in the formal sector. (71) Registers DOLE enforcement activities using the Labor Law Compliance System, a management information system. (72) During the reporting period, identified 16 establishments in violation of child labor laws, and subsequently closed 9 of the 16 establishments. In addition, in collaboration with the Department of the Interior and Local Government, hired 2,509 employees, including 301 project-based community facilitators, to supervise all profiling activities, conducted needs assessments, facilitated the provision of necessary services, and monitored the status of child laborers until they were withdrawn from child labor. (7) Also on-boarded 100 new labor inspectors during the reporting period. (7) BWSC oversees the Profiling Child Laborers Initiative. (7,73) Mandated to develop policies, programs, and systems that champion the development and protection of disadvantaged workers, by contributing to their decent and productive employment. Provides advisory and technical assistance to the Labor Secretary and Regional Offices. (74) During the reporting period, BWSC continued to profile child laborers nationwide (excluding the Bangsamoro Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao), with regional DOLE offices profiling 85,582 child laborers as of June 2019. (75) Issued Administrative Order No. 579 on “Revised Guidelines on the Profiling of Child Laborers and Provision of Service to Remove Them from Child Labor.” (42) Also, participated in an advocacy campaign to bring awareness of child labor issues, provided multiple trainings to child profilers and community facilitators on how to encode information, and conducted an orientation program on the issuance of child labor permits to regional and local DOLE offices, as well as to a prominent television station (ABS-CBN). (7)
Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD)	Rehabilitates and reintegrates child laborers. Coordinates regional Special Action Units, with at least one dedicated staff member per region to conduct rescue operations for child laborers, and cooperates with social workers to manage ongoing cases. (17) Maintains 16 Crisis Intervention Units to address human trafficking, operates 44 temporary or residential care facilities nationwide (including 24 specifically for child victims of human trafficking and other forms of abuse and exploitation), and maintains social media accounts to address cases of child abuse and support child abuse victims, including children exploited in hazardous labor. (17,32,34,36,51) Oversees and implements the Recovery and Reintegration Program for Trafficked Persons. (34) During the reporting period, provided assistance to 446 child laborers, including educational and livelihood assistance, birth registration, and counselling services. (7)
Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams (Sagip Batang Manggagawa—SBM QAT)	Detects, monitors, and rescues child laborers in hazardous, exploitative, or extremely abject working conditions. (6,7,36,76,67) An interagency, quick reaction mechanism that is chaired by DOLE-BWSC. During the reporting period, led 19 rescue operations and removed 44 child laborers from child labor, reflecting a 50 percent increase in operational activity from 2018. (34,42) Since its inception in 1993 through October 2019, rescued a total of 3,656 children from child labor. (42)
Criminal Law Enforcement Agencies: Philippine National Police (PNP), National Bureau of Investigation (NBI), Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA)	PNP investigates and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor. In the case of the Women and Children’s Protection Center (WCPC), enforces laws on child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and has 273 personnel nationwide. (34) During the reporting period, launched a hotline and textline exclusively for cases of online sexual exploitation of children. (34) In addition, conducted two separate trainings on the “Proper Handling of Children at Risk (CAR) and Children in Conflict with the Law (CICL)” reaching 202 police officers, and the “Investigation of Crimes against Women and Children” reaching 115 PNP and WCPC officers. (7,42) NBI investigates and prosecutes child labor cases and operates a national Trafficking in Persons Task Force and a Task Force on the Protection of Children from Exploitation and Abuse. (6,77) Oversees the Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTRAD), which investigates trafficking and illegal recruitment nationwide. (34) PDEA enforces the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act, maintains a national hotline for reporting cases of children used in illicit activities, and coordinates with the DSWD to assist during rescue operations. (6) Between January and September 2019, PDEA rescued 703 children during anti-drug operations nationwide. (7)

Cybersecurity Law Enforcement Agencies: National Telecommunications Commission, Dept. of Justice—Office of Cybercrime, Philippines Internet Crimes Against Children Center (PICACC),* Dept. of Information and Communication Technology—Cybersecurity Bureau	National Telecommunications Commission enforces the Anti-Child Pornography Law. Coordinates with Internet Service Providers to block websites containing pornographic material involving children. (60,78) Department of Justice—Office of Cybercrime receives CyberTips reports from the U.S.-based National Center for Missing and Exploited Children regarding potential online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) cases, conducts initial investigation into CyberTips, prioritizes cases, then sends cases to the PNP's Internet Crime Against Children Center for follow-up. (79) Comprises legal and investigative divisions. (79) During the reporting period, acted on 18 National Center for Missing and Exploited Children Priority CyberTipline Reports involving OSEC, which were sent to police for investigation. (34) Philippine Internet Crimes Against Children Center (PICACC) aims to combat the online sexual exploitation of children. Comprises the PNPWCPC-Anti-Human Trafficking Division and NBI Anti-Human Trafficking Division, and aims to coordinate WCPC and NBI investigation of Internet crimes against children. (51,80) Coordinates international investigations with the United Kingdom's National Crimes Agency (UK NCA) and the Australian Federal Police (AFP). (33,34,47,80-82) Receives funding from the UK NCA, AFP, and the U.S. Government. (47,81) Launched in February 2019. (34) Department of Information and Communication Technology—Cybersecurity Bureau provides preventative technological assistance to law enforcement and protects cybersecurity of Filipino citizens. (83) Oversees an anti-OSEC program comprising awareness-raising programs, computer software, website monitoring, cybersecurity, and a Visible Internet application, a form of artificial intelligence which allows for remote screen access. Shows an educational anti-OSEC video for communities, in collaboration with the Philippines Online Corporation. (83) Coordinates efforts with the Inter-Agency Council Against Child Pornography, and consults with telecommunications companies and civil society organizations to produce the National Cybersecurity Strategy. (62,83,84) During the reporting period, developed and implemented CyberSafePH, an awareness campaign and capacity-building program with a 3-year roadmap aimed at combating OSEC and cyberbullying. (34) The launch of an online hotline to report OSEC cases in collaboration with the National Computer Emergency Response Team remained pending in 2019. (75)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

A lack of resources, including staff, is an area of concern within law enforcement agencies because it impedes their ability to act quickly upon complaints of child labor, including OSEC, in both investigations and prosecutions. (34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of DOLE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, DOLE's budget more than doubled due to the approval of additional labor inspector positions and the need to further support regional labor inspectorate operations. (51)

In November 2019, DOLE issued Administrative Order No. 495 (A.O. No. 495) mandating that all regional offices suspend inspection activities during the holiday season – from November 14, 2019 through January 15, 2020 – except for: (a) complaint inspections, (b) occupational safety and health standards investigations, (c) technical safety inspections, and (d) inspection of any establishment or industry as directed by the DOLE Secretary. (7,51) Complaint-based and other special inspections, under which child labor inspections are categorized, were not affected. Routine inspections recommenced on January 15, 2020. (75)

During the reporting period, the Philippine Congress provided the Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC) with an additional $560,400 in funding for additional trainings for labor inspectors, procurement of personal protective equipment, and additional supplies for enforcement activities. Despite this, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to the lack of resources for inspections and the limited number of inspectors, especially in rural areas where many vendors are unregistered and highly mobile. (6,7,17,36,72) The BWC acknowledged that more specialized training on child labor is needed to enhance labor inspectors' ability to readily identify and act on child labor situations. (7)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the Philippines's workforce, which includes approximately 42 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, the Philippines would employ about 2,852 labor inspectors. (6,85-87)

During the reporting period, the BWC exceeded its initial inspection target of 64,000 by more than 5,000. (7) DOLE's Department Order No. 131-B, Series of 2016 remains in effect, prioritizing the inspection of establishments and workplaces employing children. In addition, the DOLE Secretary identified the following additional priority industries for inspections: (a) construction, (b) manufacturing, (c) agriculture, (d) fishing, (e) Philippines Offshore Gaming Operations, (f) security agencies, and (g) hotels. (7)

Scheduling routine inspections is based on the national target set by the DOLE Central Office, with regional offices implementing their inspections based on factors such as prevailing industries and geographical areas. (6,7,73) Despite this, enforcement of child labor protections is not sufficient for children employed in the informal sector and in small- and medium-size enterprises, particularly in agriculture, due to DOLE's lack of capacity and resources. (6,7,41,88) The Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams (SBM QATs) are permitted to conduct unannounced compliance visits to video karaoke bars, massage parlors, sauna and bath houses, and farms, but they are not authorized to conduct visits to private homes to search for underage child domestic workers. (6,7,72)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts relating to the number of worksite inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the ongoing government anti-drug campaign, which began in 2016, and did not ensure that children in the worst forms of child labor were protected from inappropriate incarceration, penalties, or physical harm. (41,89-92)

The government continued its anti-drug campaign, which began in 2016, and did not adequately protect children allegedly engaged in drug trafficking from inappropriate incarceration, penalties, or physical harm. (89,90,93-98) The government attests that 2,799 minors were arrested between July 2016 and November 2019 during anti-drug operations nationwide, of whom 879 were arrested in 2019. (7,51) Of those, 1,556 were identified as drug pushers, 732 as possessors, 353 as users, 139 as drug den visitors, 10 as drug den employees, 7 as drug den maintainers, and 2 as drug cultivators. (7)

According to a leading children’s rights NGO, from January to July 2019, 13 children were victims of extrajudicial killings during law enforcement operations. (7,51) In addition, there were collateral deaths of children caught in the crossfire during police operations connected to the drug war, including a 3-year old whose father was the target. (7,92,99-105) Some high-level government officials suggested that killing suspected drug traffickers and users was necessary to wipe out drug-related crime, increasing the vulnerability of children being used in the drug trade. (92,93,103,106-108) The Philippine National Police (PNP) referred children involved in drug trafficking to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) to receive shelter or rehabilitation programs through the Houses of Hope. (6,38) Research was unable to find evidence that the government investigated, prosecuted, or convicted police officers accused of killing children during anti-drug operations in 2019. (109-111)

During the reporting period, two women from Cebu province were given sentences of 21 and 26 years, respectively, for an OSEC crime. Both were arrested after attempting to offer to sexually abuse children online in exchange for money. (112,113)

The International Justice Mission provided Video In-Depth Interview (VIDI) kits to the PNP’s Women and Children’s Protection Center (WCPC) to allow for an overall victim-centered approach during prosecution. The VIDI kits are an innovative case work approach to assisting child victims by reducing the number of forensic interviews and allowing them to avoid physically appearing before a court, thus helping to prevent re-traumatization. (34,51) During the reporting period, the use of VIDI kits protected 91 OSEC victims from appearing in court. (34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council Against Child Labor (NCACL)*	Formerly the National Child Labor Committee (NCLC) and reorganized after the signing of E.O. No. 92 in 2019. Chaired by DOLE and co-chaired by DSWD. (7,34,114-116) Expanded membership to include seven other government agencies, two members from managerial associations, two members from employee associations, and two members from NGOs working on child labor issues. (7,115) New members will be nominated and serve a 3-year term. (7) Coordinates national efforts to combat child labor and implements the Philippine Program Against Child Labor. (6,67,116,117) Promotes information-sharing at the national, regional, and provincial levels, and tasked with establishing and disseminating a child labor reporting mechanism for use by local and national authorities. (7,34) Held its first meeting in January 2020. (7) During the reporting period, prior to transitioning into the NCACL, the NCLC offered media training to members to improve awareness of child labor policies, celebrated World Day Against Trafficking through awareness campaigns targeting child labor in the agricultural sector, and held a roundtable discussion on proposed amendments to Republic Act (R.A.) No. 9231. (7)
Anti-Trafficking: Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT) and Task Force Against Illegal Recruitment, Recruitment of Minor Workers, and Trafficking in Persons	IACAT oversees the 1343 Actionline emergency hotline for trafficking in person victims. (32,118) Coordinates, monitors, and oversees efforts to combat human trafficking, including child trafficking. Chaired by the Department of Justice and co-chaired by DSWD. (6,32-34,51,118) Composed of 11 government agencies and 3 NGOs. (34) Comprises 24 anti-human trafficking task forces, including 16 regional task forces and 8 interagency task forces in major seaports and airports. (17,51,72) During the reporting period, the government increased the budget to $1.8 million, a 16 percent increase from 2018, with $61,000 for the operations of the 1343 hotline. (34) In June and November 2019, collaborated with the U.S. Embassy-Manila and International Justice Mission, and provided a training for 132 prosecutors and investigators in combating OSEC. (119,120) In addition, during the reporting period, continued to identify and address gaps in implementation of the Prosecutor's Trafficking in Persons Case Management System (PTCMS), including securing missing information on archived and dismissed cases. (32,33,42) Hired administrative staff in the Regional Task Forces to work specifically on case monitoring and updating of PTCMS. (42) Through Regional Anti-Trafficking Task Forces, conducted 8 trainings specifically designed to train 221 law enforcement officers on how to properly handle OSEC and labor trafficking cases. (7) The Task Force addresses illegal recruitment, recruitment of minor workers, and trafficking in persons. Coordinates all DOLE programs and initiatives and is chaired by DOLE. (6) During the reporting period, created a technical working group to formulate the operational guidelines for the Task Force which will allow it to create standard operating guidelines in addressing reports, complaints, and information on illegal recruitment. Draft standard operating guidelines have been under review since 2018. (121)
Inter-Agency Council Against Child Pornography (IACACP)	Serves as the primary government coordinating mechanism to address child pornography. (6,7) Monitors and implements the Anti-Child Pornography Act (R.A. No. 9775). (7,122) Comprises 12 government agencies and 3 NGOs. (117) Chaired by DSWD. (123) During the reporting period, Guidelines on the Management of Compensation for Victim-Survivors of Online Sexual Abuse and Exploitation of Children – which were approved in 2018 but later retracted – continued to be edited and have not been fully implemented. (42)
Children Involved in Conflict: Inter-Agency Council for the Welfare of Children (CWC) and Inter-Agency Committee on Children in Situations of Armed Conflict (IAC-CSAC)	CWC initiates, promotes, and advocates policies and measures protecting children's rights. (6,7) Operates and maintains the Monitoring, Reporting and Response System (MRSS) for reporting incidents of children in armed conflict, including monitoring the six grave child rights violations. (34,121) Received 181 total reports from 2013 to 2019. (121) IAC-CSAC advocates protecting children and preventing the involvement of children in armed conflict. Chaired by the CWC. (34,72,76) Coordinates and monitors the implementation of the Children in Armed Conflict Program Framework. (51,124) Convenes quarterly. Ensures that international instruments, including the Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict, are referenced in discussions. (124) Formulates guidelines and develops programs – in coordination with concerned agencies – for the handling of children involved in armed conflict, and monitors or documents cases of capture, surrender, arrest, rescue or recovery by government forces. Works closely with applicable agencies in coordinating and monitoring the implementation of the enhanced CSAC program framework. (124) Conducts human rights training, advocacy and information campaigns, and capability building of local government units. Implements a monitoring, reporting, and response system for grave child rights' violations in situations of armed conflict. (124) In 2019, continued to develop an Advocacy and Communication Plan for children in armed conflict, whose drafting began in 2018. (121,124)
Juvenile Justice and Welfare Council	Leads community outreach and education efforts, through offices located throughout the country, to prevent the use of children in illicit activities, including drug trafficking. Manages livelihood, rehabilitation, food, and scholarship programming. (38) Overseen by DSWD. (125) During the reporting period, conducted five council meetings. Additionally, conducted profiling in 55 Bahay Pag-asas nationwide that highlighted areas of improvement, including program delivery and personnel compliance. (126) In May 2019, conducted the first Regional Juvenile Justice and Welfare Committee Summit with 271 participants, including Council members, and regional Juvenile Justice and Welfare Councils (JJWCs), as well as JJWC partners. (126)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Philippines

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In October 2019, the Government of the Philippines, in collaboration with the Government of Australia, UNICEF, Save the Children Philippines, and the Asia Foundation, launched the #SaferKidsPH campaign. This 6-year campaign aims to strengthen investigation and prosecution of OSEC cases in the country, promote safe online habits for children through awareness campaigns, and improve service delivery for OSEC survivors. (7) Led by the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT) in conjunction with DSWD, the Department of Information and Communication Technology, and the Department of Education, the #SaferKidsPH campaign will partner with a coalition of government agencies, educational institutions, private companies, and local community members, including parents and children to combat OSEC. (7)

On the sidelines of the 74th session of the UN General Assembly, the Governments of the Philippines, Bahrain, and Nigeria hosted a high-level meeting on combating human trafficking in migration entitled, “Combating Trafficking in Migration Contexts: Best Practices, Challenges, and the Global Compact for Migration.” During the meeting, the Philippine government reiterated its solidarity in the fight against child trafficking, in particular, with fellow UN member states. (127) In November 2019, as part of the 4-year U.S.-Philippines Child Protection Compact Partnership, the two governments held talks related to progress being made in combating OSEC cases, including efforts to “provide comprehensive, trauma-informed care for child victims,” as well as to mark progress in “efforts to prosecute and convict child traffickers.” (128,129)

In May 2019, the Secretary of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) issued Memorandum Circular No. 2019-73, Profiling of Child Laborers, to provide guidelines on the roles of local government units (LGUs) in profiling child laborers. (7,34) The aim is to help LGUs provide all necessary interventions and remove children from child labor situations by: (a) identifying and profiling child laborers and their families, (b) assessing their needs, (c) conducting referrals, (d) providing all necessary services, and (e) monitoring the status of child laborers until they are removed from child labor situations. (7) In addition, as of December 2019, 38,811 barangays have established a Barangay Council for the Protection of Children (BCPC), which is tasked with handling concerns related to children. (34)

During its 41st session in 2019, the UN Human Rights Council approved a resolution put forth by Iceland requesting the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights produce a report on potential human rights abuses surrounding the anti-drug operations in the Philippines. (130,131) The report was released in June 2020. (131,132)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Philippine Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework (2017–2022)	Aims to gradually reduce violence against children through consultations with government institutions, local and international NGOs, civil society organizations, faith-based groups, professional associations, academia, the private sector, parents, and children. (6,133) Aims to remove at least 630,000 children from child labor by 2022. (75,134) During the reporting period, held events during the nationwide celebration of the 2019 World Day Against Child Labor, including conducting a training on child labor for the Speakers Bureau and Writers Bureau, commencing the profiling of child laborers, and conducting four regular meetings with the former NCLC. (7) Implementation led by DOLE's BWSC. (75,135)

Policy	Description
Anti-Trafficking Policies: National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2017–2021) and Child Protection Compact Partnership (CPC) (2017–2021)	The National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (Third StratPlan) aims to address labor trafficking and sex trafficking, including OSEC. (136) Chaired by the Secretary of the Department of Justice and co-chaired by the Secretary of the Department of Social Welfare and Development. Employs a multi-stakeholder approach to fight human trafficking. (137) Mandated to prevent and suppress trafficking, and ensure victim recovery, rehabilitation, and reintegration into society via four key result areas: 1. Prevention and Advocacy; 2. Protection, Recovery, Rehabilitation, and Reintegration; 3. Prosecution and Law Enforcement; and 4. Partnership and Networking. (137) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (51) The Child Protection Compact Partnership , a plan jointly developed with USDOS, seeks to increase prevention efforts and protections for child victims of OSEC and labor trafficking, while holding perpetrators accountable. (118,138) Aims to improve the response to child trafficking, including live-streaming online of child sexual exploitation and child trafficking for labor purposes, by (1) increasing criminal investigations, prosecutions, and convictions; (2) strengthening the government's and civil society's capacities to identify and provide comprehensive services for victims; and (3) strengthening existing community-based mechanisms that identify and protect victims of child trafficking. (118,139,140) The government committed approximately $800,000 for its implementation. (138,141) During the reporting period, provided additional specialized training, identification and protection of exploited children, and prosecution and conviction of traffickers. (51)
Philippine Development Plan (2017–2022)	Aims to build the socio-economic resilience of individuals and families by reducing their vulnerability to various risks and disasters; this includes the goal of universal social protection for all Filipinos. (5) Aims to reduce the number of children engaged in child labor by 30 percent or about 630,000 children. (117) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (51)
National Strategic Framework for Plan Development for Children (Child 21) (2000–2025) and 3rd National Plan of Action for Children (2017–2022)	Child 21 sets out broad goals for national government agencies, local governments, and NGOs to achieve improved quality of life for Filipino children by 2025. (142) Addresses concerns related to the worst forms of child labor under the section on children in need of special protection. (17) Chaired by the Council for the Welfare of Children. (6) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (51) 3rd National Plan of Action for Children strengthens strategies, policies, and programs for children to achieve Child 21's vision for Filipino children by 2025. (6,51,142,143) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (7,51)
Philippine Plan of Action to End Violence Against Children (2017–2022)	Multi-sectoral plan to gradually reduce violence against children through consultations with government institutions, local and international NGOs, civil society organizations, faith-based groups, professional associations, academia, the private sector, and parents and children. (7,144) Consistent with Child 21 and the National Plan of Action for Children visions. Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (7)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (58,146,147)

In September 2019, President Duterte signed Executive Order (E.O.) No.92 institutionalizing the National Council Against Child Labor to help further implement the Philippine Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework. E.O. No.92 formally changed the name of the National Child Labor Committee to the National Council Against Child Labor. (7,34,41,114-148)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the provision of adequate services for victims of child pornography.

Program	Description
Anti-Child Labor Programs: Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program†, Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers (Kabuhayan para sa Magulang ng Batang Manggagawa)†, and Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program (Conditional Cash Transfer Program)	Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program is a DOLE anti-child labor program that implements local awareness-raising campaigns, institutes child labor-monitoring mechanisms, and requires neighborhoods to develop child labor elimination plans. (6) Includes a provision of livelihood assistance to parents of child laborers, Sagip Batang Manggagawa, and Project Angel Tree. (6,118) From July to December 2019, profiled a total of 188,577 child laborers and removed 623 children from child labor situations. (7,42) Project Angel Tree is a social service with local government agency benefactors, known as “angels,” who provide educational supplies to communities. (73,149) From January to October 2019, conducted 15 Project Angel Tree gift giving activities, providing school supplies, food packs, toiletries, and other donated items to 7,000 child laborers and children at risk. (42) Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers is a DOLE program that provides livelihood assistance to parents, guardians, or other family members of child laborers. Seeks to prevent and eliminate child labor by providing necessary materials to start a livelihood undertaking. (47) During the reporting period, provided starter kits or materials needed to begin earning money through legitimate means to 3,533 parents of child laborers. (42) To receive this assistance, beneficiaries must pledge to stop allowing children to engage in situations of child labor. (7) Conditional Cash Transfer Program is a DSWD program that provides conditional grants, local awareness-raising campaigns, and child labor-monitoring mechanisms to assist poor families with children’s access to health care, adequate nutrition, and education. (6,7,150) Includes a child labor module within the sessions on family development for program participants. (6,36,151) Covers 1,627 cities and municipalities in 79 provinces in all 17 regions. (6,7,72) During the reporting period, raised awareness and combated the prevalence of child labor as being “socially acceptable.” Studies conducted by the Asian Development Bank and the World Bank indicated that this program has aided in child labor reduction efforts. (7,34)
Strategic Helpdesks for Information, Education, Livelihood and Other Developmental Interventions (SHIELD) for Child Laborers†	DSWD-led project implemented in 13 barangays in Catanauan, Labo, Jose Panganiban, Paracale, Kananga, and Ormoc City, with support from the ILO CARING Gold Mining Project. Currently in a 2-year pilot, with official program launch in 2020. (73) During the pilot, from July 2017 to September 2019, removed 407 children from child labor. (75) Comprises three components: (1) Child Labor Local Registry (CLLR); (2) Helpdesk and Convergence of Services; and (3) Advocacy, Organizing, and Capacity Building. (6,151) Focuses on areas with a high child labor incidence rate, with interventions based on data from the Child Labor Local Registry. (151) Focused particularly on eliminating the worst forms of child labor in the small-scale gold mining, deep sea fishing, and sugarcane industries. (6,7,67,152) During the reporting period, compiled profiles of child laborers in 15 barangays in Regions IV-A, V, VIII, and X, which will be used by the Philippine Statistical Development Program. (7,42) As of November 2019, reported having identified 596 child laborers needing assistance, and removing 380 from child labor situations. (7)
Anti-Trafficking Programs: Recovery and Reintegration Program for Trafficked Persons (RRPTP)† and Strengthening Local Systems and Partnerships for More Effective and Sustainable Counter-Trafficking in Persons in the Philippines (Strength CTIP), 2019-2022	RRPTP is a DSWD and IACAT program that provides recovery and reintegration services to victims of human trafficking and raises awareness in vulnerable communities. Includes the National Referral System, which strengthens coordination among agencies providing services to human trafficking victims through the use of standard referral and reporting forms. (153) There are 149 referral networks established in 16 regions. (36) Program was active during the reporting period. (51,154) Strength CTIP works in partnership with the Advocate for the Protection and Prevention of Abuse and Exploitation of Children (APPROACH) Consortium. Initiates and sustains counter trafficking in persons activities in selected project sites in Iloilo City, Dumaguete City, and Cebu province. (7) Designed to accommodate the needs of victims of human trafficking, specifically children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (7) Program was active during the reporting period. (51,155)
Alternative Learning System Program†	Department of Education program that offers non-formal education to out-of-school children, including child laborers and children displaced from military conflict, and opportunities to attain a certificate of education equivalency. (156) Enrolled 759,723 participants in 2019. (42)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in the Philippines that aim to eliminate child labor in its worst forms by improving the capacity of the national government, implementing the National Action Plan Against Child Labor, conducting research and data collection, developing strategic policies, drafting legislation, and supporting social services delivery for child domestic workers. Include: Against Child Exploitation (ACE) Project (2019-2023), a $5 million project implemented by World Vision; BuildCA2P: Building Capacity, Awareness, Advocacy and Programs Project (2018-2022), a $2.6 million project implemented by ChildFund International; SAFE Seas, implemented by Plan International USA; RICHES, implemented by the Grameen Foundation with the Philippines; Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor, implemented by ILO; CARING Gold Mining Project, implemented by ILO; Building the Capacity of the Philippines Labor Inspectorate, implemented by ILO; Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers: SafeYouth@Work, implemented by ILO; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR), implemented by ILO. (157-165) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (168,169)

During the reporting period, President Duterte signed into law R.A. No. 11310, which institutionalized the Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program (4Ps), also referred to as the Conditional Cash Transfer Program. (7,34,170) R.A. No.11310 designated the 4Ps as the national poverty reduction strategy and human capital investment program, providing conditional cash transfer to poor households for a maximum period of up to 7 years to improve the health, nutrition, and educational needs of beneficiaries. (7,34,170)

R.A. No.11315, signed in April 2019, formally established the Community-Based Monitoring System, which is intended to collect, process, and validate disaggregated data used for planning, program implementation, and impact monitoring at the local level to raise Filipinos out of poverty; this includes data related to employment, income, and education. (7,34,171) Overseen by the Philippine Statistics Authority, data will be collected every 3 years by each city and municipality to create a baseline to enact poverty reduction programs. (7,34,171)

Although some specialized resources exist to assist victims of human trafficking, the Philippines lacked sufficient programs to care for and rehabilitate children who have been victims of online commercial sexual exploitation. (36) In addition, there are not adequate programs to provide insight on the impact of OSEC on child victims. (43,45,46,51)

Although the DSWD works in consultation with parents and community leaders to determine how best to assist children suspected of being involved in the drug trade, the DSWD does not have programs specifically designed to increase protections for or assistance to children engaged in drug trafficking to address their heightened vulnerability. (6)

The Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) continued to coordinate with the DSWD when dealing with children involved in drug trafficking. Upon PDEA turning over “rescued” children, DSWD transferred the children to juvenile detention centers, or “houses of hope” (Bahay ng Pag-asa), within 8 hours of the conclusion of their court proceedings. (6,7,95) In 2019, reports continued to surface that children in these detention centers are subjected to physical and emotional abuse, deprived of liberty, and forced into overcrowded and unhygienic cells. (41,95-98,172-175)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Philippines (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase the overall number of law enforcement officials, including police and prosecutors, to ease the workload burden and allow for quicker action on cases involving the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that labor enforcement resources, including funding, are sufficient to enforce child labor protections for children employed in the informal sector, including agricultural work.	2017 – 2019
	Develop and provide specialized training for labor inspectors on identification of child labor.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice, and increase resources available to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, particularly in rural areas where child labor is prevalent.	2014 – 2019
	Allow Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams to conduct unannounced compliance visits to private homes.	2018 – 2019
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2015 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to prevent the inappropriate incarceration of, and violence against, children suspected to be engaged in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2017 – 2019
	Prosecute law enforcement officials and civilians responsible for the killing of children engaged in the drug trade.	2017 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Institute a program to address and combat the sexual abuse and exploitation of children in the production of child pornography, including live streaming.	2017 – 2019
	Provide specialized care and rehabilitative services for children who have been victimized through sexual abuse and exploitation through live streaming and in the production of child pornography by their families.	2017 – 2019
	Develop programs to increase protections for and provide assistance to children engaged in drug trafficking to address their heightened vulnerability.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that Bahay ng Pag-asa child detention centers in the Philippines do not subject children to physical or emotional abuse, and that centers are provided with adequate resources to remedy overcrowding and unhygienic conditions.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Rwanda made a moderate advancement in efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. The government published its first ever comprehensive study examining human trafficking trends in the country and completed the drafting of a light work framework for children working under the minimum age. The government also removed 316 children from hazardous work situations, and punished 74 employers with fines totaling about $3,000. Children in Rwanda engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The number of labor inspectors does not meet the ILO's technical advice for the size of the workforce. In addition, Rwandan law potentially allows authorities to place children engaged in labor in transit centers, where children are often subject to physical abuse. Finally, social programs did not address all relevant sectors where child labor was present.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Rwanda engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Rwanda.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6 to 14	5.4 (156,522)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	89.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		86.5

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Forestry activities (5)
	Production of tea, including applying fertilizers,† carrying heavy loads,† planting, plucking tea leaves, and weeding (7)
	Fishing† (5)
Industry	Construction,† including laying bricks (6,2,8)
	Mining† tantalum ore (coltan) and quarrying (6,2,9)
Services	Domestic work† (6,1,8,10,11)
	Repair and cleaning of motorcycles and motor vehicles (6,12)
	Street work, including collecting scrap metal,† carrying heavy loads as porters,† and small-scale vending (12-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11,12,15)
	Forced labor in agricultural and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,10,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Rwanda

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Data collected in a 2016-2017 national household survey showed that approximately 3.6 percent of all children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, primarily in the agriculture and service sectors. (5,16) In 2019, the government collaborated with the IOM and the NGO Never Again Rwanda, with funding from USAID, to produce Rwanda's first ever comprehensive study on human trafficking in the country. (17) The report showed that although Rwanda is not a major destination for child trafficking, it is a source and transit country for child victims, primarily those heading to Saudi Arabia, Uganda, Kenya, and elsewhere in East Africa and the Middle East. (17,18) Within Rwanda, young girls are vulnerable to being forced into domestic servitude and commercial sexual exploitation, and boys are exploited in forced labor in the agricultural and industrial sectors, including on plantations and in mines. (11,15,17,18)

Although the Ministry of Education established a policy that provides free basic education for 12 years, of which the first 9 are compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school. (16-21) On January 9, 2019, the Ministry of Education issued a statement expressing concern that schools were levying excessive school fees on families and prohibited schools from increasing fees during the first term of the 2019/2020 school year. The Ministry issued the same warning in January 2020. (2,16) Furthermore, children with disabilities face particular difficulties accessing education due to stigma and because schools lack the capacity to accommodate special needs. (16,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Rwanda has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Article 47 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Articles 32-34, 36, and 38 of the Law Governing the Organization and Functioning of Nursery, Primary and Secondary Education (27,35)
Free Public Education	No		Article 47 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Articles 32 and 34 of Law Governing the Organization and Functioning of Nursery, Primary and Secondary Education (27,35)

* No conscription (27,33,34)

Rwanda passed several child labor-related laws in 2018 that entered into force in 2019, but some still required ministerial orders or the implementation of provisions. For example, the Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA) indicated that in 2019, it had drafted a light work framework for children ages 13 to 15 engaged in apprenticeships, but the draft was not yet publicly available. (16)

Although Rwanda has adopted policies to implement fee-free and compulsory education through age 16, national education laws make education compulsory only up to age 12 and provide for free schooling for only 6 years, while basic education is a total of 9 years. (20,27,35) The failure to provide for complete free basic education may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, the age up to which education is compulsory makes children between 12 and 16 vulnerable to child labor as they are not legally required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MIFOTRA that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Rwanda

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA)	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor. (21) In partnership with the Ministry of Education, reintegrates children withdrawn from child labor with their families and enrolls them in school. Mobilizes other ministries and agencies providing social services, including the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion, the National Commission for Children, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of Local Government, to take an active role in child labor law enforcement. (2)
Rwandan National Police (RNP)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and operates a free hotline to report incidents of gender-based violence or child abuse, including child labor. Through its Child Protection Unit and Anti-Trafficking Unit, enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2,21,36) It is unknown how many calls to the hotline, if any, were related to child labor.
Rwanda Investigation Bureau	Conducts investigations into criminal matters, including child labor. In the case of the Directorate for Anti-Gender-Based Violence, assists victims of the worst forms of child labor through anti-gender-based violence officers at each of the country's 78 police stations. (2)
National Public Prosecution Authority (NPPA)	Prosecutes violations of labor laws, including laws on child labor. (2) Through its anti-Gender Based Violence unit, 12 prosecutors work with an additional 60 prosecutors trained in handling relevant cases at the district level. (37)
Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration	Receives referrals for human trafficking cases and employs an anti-trafficking specialist. Trains border and immigration officials to identify potential human trafficking victims and verify that children transported across the border are traveling with the permission of their parents or guardians. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MIFOTRA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

According to MIFOTRA officials, labor inspectors had adequate funding to carry out inspections. MIFOTRA officials indicated that the number of labor inspections increased significantly from 2018 to 2019 because inspectors were required to conduct three child labor inspections per week. (16) In addition, other ministries and agencies received funding for “child rights protection and promotion.” For example, the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPF) had a budget of $1.4 million for child rights protection for fiscal year 2018/2019. (16)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Rwanda's workforce, which includes more than 6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developing economies, Rwanda would employ about 156 labor inspectors. (40,41) Despite

MIFOTRA's indication that the inspectorate was sufficiently funded, research indicates that low resources, lack of personnel, high workloads, and a lack of training may limit labor inspectors' ability to enforce child labor laws and perform onsite inspections. (4) Reports indicate that officials at the local level had difficulty identifying characteristics of child trafficking and child labor. (37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Rwandan National Police (RNP) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (37)	Yes (16)

The government has acknowledged detaining thousands of street children per a 2017 law establishing a National Rehabilitation Service to address “deviant behavior” and the accompanying 2018 Ministerial Order, which defines deviant behavior to include prostitution, begging, and informal street vending. (43,44) Under the purview of these laws, authorities may apprehend children for exhibiting deviant behavior and place children in a transit center before transferring them to a rehabilitation center or reintegrating them into the community. Research indicates that children placed in the primary transit center located in Kigali, also known as Gikondo, faced overcrowding, unsanitary conditions, insufficient food or water, and physical abuse. (21,43-45) Research indicates that rehabilitation services were limited and children were detained for prolonged periods at transit centers before being referred to a rehabilitation facility. (46,47) Since some of types of child labor are included in the 2018 Ministerial Order definition of “deviant behavior,” children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street vending may be penalized for their engagement in child labor. (44)

The RNP did not provide comprehensive data regarding criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor, but it disclosed that it had arrested at least 10 individuals in 3 different cases involving violations related to the worst forms of child labor in 2019. The GOR reported some individuals were arrested for alleged crimes related to forced labor, but specific information regarding how many arrests, prosecutions, or convictions were achieved during the reporting period for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor was unavailable. Meanwhile, MIGEPROF's National Commission for Children reported that between July 2018 and July 2019, 316 children were removed from hazardous work situations, and 74 employers were punished with fines of about $3,000. (16)

According to MIFOTRA, the National Public Prosecution Authority, and the RNP, investigators received training on the worst forms of child labor, including Rwandan law and international convention commitments; trafficking in persons; and social services available to victims. (16) Law enforcement agencies also engaged in a series of campaigns to educate the public and implement existing policies on child labor. For instance, on October 9, 2019, the RNP in Karongi District conducted a campaign, in coordination with the Gender Monitoring Office, to raise awareness of the fight against child abuse and child labor. (48)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Rwanda

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor; reviews child labor laws, advocates the inclusion of child labor policies in national development plans, oversees the implementation of child labor interventions, and conducts field visits to assess the prevalence of child labor and raise awareness of child labor. (2) MIFOTRA coordinates and provides monitoring and evaluation, including the publication of annual updates on program and policy implementation related to child labor. (42) Research was unable to identify activities taken during the reporting period.
Interagency Working Group on Human Trafficking	Enables national-level discussion and coordination of efforts to address human trafficking, including child labor. Includes representatives of the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF), the Ministry of Justice, RNP, and NPPA. (2) Held coordinating meetings once every 2 months during the reporting period. (18)
MIGEPROF's National Commission for Children (NCC)	Monitors, promotes, and advocates children's rights; develops action plans to protect children from abuse and exploitation. Overseen by MIGEPROF and supported by a board of directors and an advisory council of 14 institutions. (2) In 2019, conducted numerous trainings and public awareness campaigns to inform local leaders, service providers, law enforcement officials, and the general public on child protection, the dangers of child labor, and restorative justice for children. (16)
Child Labor Steering Committees	Monitors incidents of child labor nationwide and implements policies developed by the Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Child Labor in 30 districts by coordinating with district-level officials in enforcing labor laws and providing social services to child labor victims. (2) In the case of Gender-Based Violence Committees, operates at the district level to raise awareness about gender-based violence and coordinate social services to assist gender-based violence victims. In the case of Child Protection Committees, identifies and reports cases of child rights violations at the district, sector, and cell levels. (2,11) During the reporting period, the government continued to expand the presence of committees from the national and district levels to the sector, cell, and village levels. (16) MIFOTRA reported that it collaborated with committees to conduct 187 awareness campaigns between July 2019 and December 2019. (18,38)
Kigali City Council Task Force	Coordinates activities to combat child labor in the districts of Gasabo, Kicukiro, and Nyarugenge. (2) Research was unable to identify activities taken during the reporting period.

Reports indicate that poor coordination and resource constraints hindered efforts to combat human trafficking and that efforts were focused on transnational rather than domestic human trafficking. (2,36,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategic Plan for Integrated Child Rights Policy 2019–2024†	Revised in 2018 and implemented in 2019, with a focus on identity and nationality; family and alternative care; health, survival and standard of living; education; protection; justice; and participation. Aims to improve coordination and implementation issues identified in the previous plan that expired in 2016 and includes strategies to address child labor. (49)
7 Years Government Programme: National Strategy for Transformation (2017–2024)	Aims to smooth the transition between the Vision 2020 and Vision 2050 national development plans and improve standards of living for Rwandans, including access to quality education. (53) Research was unable to identify activities undertaken during the reporting relevant to the goals of improving access to quality education.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (20,54,55,56)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Technical and Vocational Education and Training Policy. (57)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Programs to Combat Child Labor and Raise Awareness†	Include MIGEPROF's campaign to teach parents and community leaders to recognize risk factors for human trafficking and to identify victims; and the Friends of the Family Program (Incuti Z'Umuryango), which trains volunteers to prevent and respond to child protection issues and establishes monitoring committees at various levels to combat child labor. (2) In 2019, the government partnered with UNICEF to train more than 10,700 Friends of the Family (Inshuti z'Umuryango) volunteers in 11 districts on child rights, basic psychosocial support, conflict, communication, and referral pathways. (16)
Victim Assistance Programs‡	Musanze Child Rehabilitation Center in Northern Province assists children separated from armed groups in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. (21) Gitagata Center provides education, vocational training, and psychosocial support, and aims to reunite former street children with their families. "One-Stop" centers located in 44 hospitals and district capitals assist victims of gender-based violence and human trafficking. (2,36) In 2019, One-Stop centers provided medical care, counseling, legal aid, short-term shelter, and access to police services. The Musanze Center meanwhile assisted 11 children separated from armed groups. (16)
It Takes Every Rwandan to End Child Exploitation	5-year advocacy campaign against child labor and sexual abuse of children supported by MIGEPROF, the National Commission for Children, and World Vision Rwanda. (2,50) In 2019, the campaign held awareness-raising events at primary and high schools in various parts of the country. (51,52) In 2019 the program provided training to grassroots organizations and that the program had reached 42,803 children thus far. (50)
Strengthening Social Protection Project (2017–2021)	$80 million World Bank-funded project in support of the Vision 2020 Umurenge Program which aims to deliver cash transfers and improve social safety nets. (58) During the reporting period, Rwanda succeeded in ensuring that 100 percent of eligible households were covered by the cash transfer program, surpassing the 2021 target of 70 percent of households. The government also increased the number of project participants from 405,421 in 2018 to 1,520,623 in 2019. (59)
The Children's Forum	Provides a platform at the village, cell, sector, and district levels for children to express their opinions and be heard on matters concerning their lives, family, and country, which are incorporated into government plans of action and considered during the development of policies and programs. Managed by the NCC and Ministry of Local Government (MINALOC), comprises children between ages 6 and 15. (16) Held a nationwide training from April 16 to 18, 2019, of 104,622 children committee members on the committee's responsibilities and child rights. (16)

Although Rwanda has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the child labor problem in the agriculture sector and domestic work. (36,37) The IOM study on human trafficking also revealed that despite efforts to protect and assist victims of human trafficking, the country lacked a sufficient number of shelters, and assistance was typically short-term. Furthermore, One-Stop centers tended to lack services for male victims. (17,18) In addition, service providers lacked sufficient training to properly identify and categorize victims of human trafficking. (17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Rwanda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish by law compulsory education up to the age of 15 and free basic public education.	2019
Enforcement	Disaggregate the number of complaints received by the Rwandan National Police's hotline and the National Public Prosecution Authority's investigations that relate to child labor.	2013 – 2019
	Publish information on the number of penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, the number of criminal investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase the number of inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive sufficient training to identify cases of child labor, including its worst forms.	2017 – 2019
	Cease the Rwandan National Police practice of detaining and beating children who work on the street and ensure that children in detention are not subjected to beatings or unhealthy detention conditions.	2018 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating mechanisms are active and carrying out their intended mandates.	2019
	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources and are able to combat both domestic and transnational human trafficking.	2019
Government Policies	Ensure that actions are taken to implement the National Transformation Strategy.	2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Transformation Strategy, the National Social Protection Strategy, and the National Technical and Vocational Education and Training Policy.	2011 – 2019
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education, such as costs for uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees, and ensure access for children with disabilities.	2010 – 2019
	Expand existing social programs to address all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work.	2017 – 2019
	Expand services for human trafficking victims, including the number of shelters, programs for long-term care, and services for male victims.	2019
	Ensure that service providers are properly trained to identify victims of human trafficking.	2019

Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha (formerly Saint Helena), in 2019 the government made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Children and Adults Social Care Directorate updated its policy on child exploitation, which includes sexual and criminal exploitation. However, the government has yet to define by law or regulation the types of work prohibited to children, other than work on vessels engaged in maritime navigation. Gaps also remain in legislation related to forced child labor and the trafficking of children for labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha. (1-3) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha are three separate territories that generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. (3,4) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (4) The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of child trafficking and using children in illicit activities.

* No conscription (10)

† No standing military (10)

The Government of Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work prohibited to children, other than work on vessels engaged in maritime navigation. (3,5) The laws prohibiting forced labor in Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha are not sufficient because debt bondage and slavery are prohibited constitutionally but not criminally. (6) While the UK Sexual Offences Act, which is applicable to this territory, prohibits trafficking for sexual exploitation, there are no laws prohibiting the trafficking of children for labor exploitation. (7) The law also does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

In 2019, the Children and Adults Social Care Directorate updated its policy on child exploitation, which includes sexual and criminal exploitation. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

During the reporting period, the Government of Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha improved social services for vulnerable children, specifically child protection. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristán da Cunha (Table 3).

In 2019, Saint Lucia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a trafficking in persons hotline and the Ministry of Home Affairs, National Security, and Justice implemented a case management system for victims of human trafficking. In addition, the government assumed full financial responsibility for an International Organization for Migration program, which aims to counter human trafficking. A rapid assessment conducted by the International Labor Organization in 2016 revealed limited evidence that children in Saint Lucia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in the sale and distribution of drugs. Saint Lucia's law does not sufficiently protect children from hazardous work and illicit activities. The government also does not have any policies addressing all forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Lucia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in the sale and distribution of drugs. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Lucia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the sale and distribution of drugs (1,2)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Saint Lucia lacks detailed data on the extent of child labor in the country. A rapid assessment conducted by the ILO in 2016 revealed limited evidence that children engage in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes in exchange for rides, clothing, or cell phones, or with the knowledge or encouragement of parents in situations of financial need. (1-4) Local and foreign children are also subjected to human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation, including by parents and caregivers. (2,3) Limited evidence also suggests that children are used to transport and sell drugs. (1,2,4)

All children in Saint Lucia are entitled to free public education. However, violence in schools, some gang-related, may hinder some children from attending. (7) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Saint Lucia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

† No standing military (14)

In 2019, the government drafted an amendment to the 2010 Counter Trafficking Act to ensure penalties are commensurate with penalties of other serious crimes. The amendment has been submitted for Parliament's approval. (15)

Saint Lucia has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (8) Although the Criminal Code prohibits the use of children in some illicit activities, such as street work, the use, procurement, or offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (12) Moreover, forced labor is only criminally prohibited if it results from human trafficking, and the use or offering of children for commercial sexual exploitation is not criminally prohibited. (8,10,12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Infrastructure, Ports, Energy and Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Infrastructure, Ports, Energy and Labor	Enforces laws on child labor through labor inspections conducted by its Department of Labor. (2)
Royal Saint Lucia Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2) Through its Vulnerable Persons Unit, in collaboration with the Division of Human Services, investigates cases of child labor, abuse, and neglect. The Vulnerable Persons Unit consists of 2 units of 12 officers each and leads in the enforcement of child labor laws. (2,4) Uses a specific manual to investigate crimes related to children. (2)
Ministry of Home Affairs, Justice, and National Security	Coordinates and leads anti-human trafficking efforts among various ministries. (16,17)
Human Services Department	Leads efforts related to child care, protection, and adoption as mandated in the 2018 Child Care, Protection, and Adoption Bill. (7,18) Located within the Ministry of Equity. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Infrastructure, Ports, Energy and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Although inspectors look for child labor and forced labor violations during all conducted inspections, reports indicate that insufficient funding may hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws in all relevant sectors, especially in communities in which children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (2) Inspectors can make recommendations to the Labor Commissioner, but cannot assess penalties, and furthermore existing penalties are insufficient to deter employers from committing child labor violations. (4,20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient resources.

In August and November 2019, criminal law enforcement officers received training on the use of the newly implemented human trafficking case management system coordinated by the Ministry of Home Affairs, National Security, and Justice. (21) In addition, the government finalized a comprehensive standard operating procedure for human trafficking victim identification, protection, and referral, which police officers have begun using as a uniform guide. Police officers also received training on human trafficking victim identification and protection procedures, and a trafficking in persons hotline, which operates 24 hours a day in the Police Control Room, was launched during the reporting period. (21)

However, insufficient resources, including funding, transportation, and equipment, hamper police capacity to enforce child labor laws. (4,22) The judicial system within the Ministry of Home Affairs, National Security, and Justice also has a backlog of cases and lacks the personnel and resources needed to address these issues. (23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Education, Innovation, Gender Relations, and Sustainable Development	Coordinate investigations of child labor cases and ensure the use of established protocols in collaboration with the Royal Saint Lucia Police. (22) Active in 2019. (2)
Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates the identification and referral of human trafficking cases among law enforcement, social services, and immigration officials under the Counter-Trafficking Act. Includes public servants, representatives from the Department of Labor, police, and victim-service NGOs. (11,24) In 2019, the Task Force's mandate was reauthorized, and it coordinated anti-trafficking efforts and conducted trainings and awareness-raising campaigns. (2,21)
Office of Gender Relations	Provides referrals to human trafficking victims for health, advocacy, crisis, and legal services. (25) Active in 2019. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including no evidence of a policy regarding other worst forms of child labor beyond the government's policy related to trafficking in persons.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2016–2019)	Identified the strategic goals and objectives for combating human trafficking, and the means to achieve them. Established the coordination of counter-trafficking measures and the adequate cooperation between all actors through the National Framework for Combating Trafficking in Persons. (2,4,26) Active in 2019. (2)
National Social Protection Policy (2014–2024)	Established a social protection policy in Phase I (2014–2019) by consolidating the Social Safety Net programs. In Phase II (2019–2024), will implement wider reforms for creating a coherent social protection policy. (4) Child protection policies are incorporated into poverty reduction concepts and promote access to education. (22,27) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Research did not reveal policies addressing other worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, aside from human trafficking.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Educational Programs†	Programs focused on increasing school attendance and promoting access to education. Includes the Saint Lucia Social Development Fund and Public Assistance Program, which fosters school attendance; the Community Empowerment's After School Program, which aims to improve academic performance and maintain school attendance of children ages 8 to 16; the Upton Garden Girls Center, which provides education, training, and self-development opportunities to teenage girls; the Center for Adolescent Renewal and Education, which provides second-chance education, training, and self-development services to adolescents; the Boys Training Center, which supports boys ages 10 to 18 who have come in contact with the law or require care and protection; and the Koudmen Sent Lisi program, which funds textbook rentals, a book bursary that reimburses students for textbooks, a school feeding program, and a transportation subsidy program at most secondary schools. (16) All programs were active in 2019. (2)
Building the Capacity of the Government of Saint Lucia and Promoting Awareness of Counter-Trafficking‡	$105,000 government-funded, 2-year public awareness project to counter human trafficking; led by the Trafficking in Persons Task Force. Focuses on running radio and television announcements, printing posters and brochures, and maintaining a Facebook page to ensure a growing media and social media presence on human trafficking. (21) In 2019, the government assumed full financial support for this program from the IOM. (21)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,28)

Research found no evidence of any programs with the specific goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. In addition, overall funding for social programs remains a concern because it does not meet the needs of all children in the country, especially children subjected to human trafficking and those engaged in illicit activities, and funding is highly dependent on foreign assistance. (16,19)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Lucia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the forced labor of children in all instances.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit using or offering a child for commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit procuring or offering a child for illicit activities, including drug trafficking and production.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives sufficient funding for conducting labor inspections.	2015 – 2019
	Authorize labor inspectors to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that new labor inspectors receive training on child labor law enforcement, and that refresher courses are provided for all labor inspectors.	2015 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data on risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2015 – 2019
	Increase the resources allocated to criminal investigators, including transportation and equipment.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that existing penalties are sufficient to deter employers from committing child labor violations.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the judiciary has sufficient resources and personnel to allow cases to be tried in a timely manner.	2017 – 2019

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit trained criminal law enforcement personnel on identifying child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children. The government also conducted public awareness-raising seminars at primary and secondary schools, reaching over 1,500 students and 70 teachers. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps remain in the legal framework, as the minimum age for hazardous work falls below international standards and there is no law to prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. In addition, the law does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown (1,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation (1,2)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited research and information received from various sources suggest that some children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, including by their relatives, in exchange for money or goods. (1,2)

All children in the country are able to access education. (5,6) However, inadequate public transportation for children in rural villages causes them to walk long distances, which may make attending school difficult. (5) Children out of school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for hazardous work and the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* No conscription (11)

† No standing military (12)

The government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited to children. (7,8) In addition, the law does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. (10)

The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (6,7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces child labor laws through its Department of Labor, and refers victims to appropriate social services. (13)
Royal Police Force	Makes criminal arrests, including those involving the worst forms of child labor. Addresses human trafficking through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (ATIPU), refers victims to appropriate social services, and funds financial requests made by ATIPU. (14)
Ministry of Social Development	Maintains the Child Protection Unit, which includes Child Protection Officers who report cases of child abuse. (15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including allocating resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Ministry of Labor, through its Department of Labor, can inspect all sectors and is responsible for investigating labor violations. If the Department finds a criminal violation, it forwards the case to the Royal Police Force. (13)

During the reporting period, the Department of Labor reported that the number of inspectors and funding was sufficient; however, a lack of appropriate resources, such as computers and training, hampered the Department's abilities to enforce child labor laws. (2,5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating resources.

Number of Convictions	0 (5)	0 (2)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	0 (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (2)

In 2019, more than 100 police officers received initial and refresher training on child labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. According to the police department, officers received sufficient training; however, insufficient resources hampered the capacity of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit to combat human trafficking on both islands, and especially in remote, mountainous areas. (2, 16)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Develops a national plan to address human trafficking, coordinates the collection of data among government agencies, establishes policies to enable government agencies to work with NGOs to prevent human trafficking and assist victims, and provides training to all relevant government officials and authority figures. Chaired by the Prime Minister. (10) Comprises representatives from police, immigration, public prosecutions, social services, gender affairs, and the Department of Labor. (16) In 2019, trained more than 100 police officers on child labor, child trafficking, and child prostitution, and conducted various awareness-raising events. (2, 16)

Research shows that there is no specific coordinating mechanism dedicated solely to addressing issues related to the worst forms of child labor, outside the scope of human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Protection Policy Framework (2015–2020)	Strengthens national child protection strategies and programs, and ensures effective coordination among all organizations and entities working for the protection and development of children in the country, including child labor victims. (17) Research was unable to determine whether the National Child Protection Policy Framework was implemented during the reporting period.
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2016–2020)	Establishes procedures to eradicate human trafficking, including training for frontline staff and other relevant stakeholders; conduct awareness-raising campaigns; and provide victim protection and assistance. Administered by the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons, which is chaired by the Prime Minister as head of the Ministry of National Security. (16, 18) In 2019, increased training for frontline officers, including ATIPU staff, Passport and Immigration Department officials, and 79 police officers. (16)
Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on Countering Human Trafficking in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines	Outlines the responsibilities of each signatory agency in combating human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. Assigns tasks and responsibilities among nine government stakeholders regarding trafficking in persons. (19) Includes the Department of Labor, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Commerce, ATIPU, and others. (20) In 2017, the MOU was extended to 2020. During 2019, the government continued to support the MOU between signatory agencies. (16)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-funded educational programs†	Provide free meals to students and low-income families through the Supplementary Feeding Program. (21) In 2019, the government also continued to fund other programs, such as the Book Loan Program, the Street Children Rehabilitation Program, and the Foster Care Program. (2)
Zero Hunger Trust Fund†	Provides meals, materials, and uniforms to children in need. (22) Research indicates that during the reporting period, limited resources prevented the program from sufficiently assisting all children in need. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

In 2019, the government conducted public awareness-raising seminars at primary and secondary schools, reaching more than 1,500 students and 70 teachers. (2)

Although the government has implemented programs to address educational and food needs, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically to assist children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (23)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited to children, in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations, and ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the laws regarding commercial sexual exploitation of children are sufficient and do not only apply to human trafficking.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of a child in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2016 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by providing sufficient resources to conduct labor inspections, including computers and training.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors are provided refresher courses related to child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Increase the amount of resources, including personnel and vehicles, for the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor.	2019
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Child Protection Policy Framework is implemented.	2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children in rural communities, by providing public transportation.	2018 – 2019
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the Zero Hunger Trust Fund program has sufficient resources to assist all children in need.	2019

In 2019, Samoa made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Samoa continued to fund the Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools. Children in Samoa are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. Research found no evidence of laws that ban using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. While the government has a mechanism to coordinate interagency efforts to address child labor, it did not meet during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Samoa are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Samoa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

	Use in illicit activities, including producing and trafficking drugs (1)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children who are street vending may work late at night, are exposed to exhaust fumes, and have an increased risk of being hit by passing traffic. (1,8) The Samoa School Fee Grant Scheme and the Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools provide financial assistance to families to help offset and alleviate some of the burden of school fees, such as registration, uniforms, and transportation fees. (11,12)

In 2019, a measles outbreak prompted the government to shut down all schools and mandated vaccinations; schools were closed for about a month and a half, which likely left children without alternative educational opportunities as children were banned from all public gatherings. (3,13-15) The government responded to this by drafting and passing the Infants Amendment Bill No. 2, which introduced an immunization and vaccination policy mandating up-to-date vaccinations for all school-aged children before being admitted to attend schools; there have been no reported cases of children prevented from attending. (3,16,17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Samoa has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Samoa's legal framework do not adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 51 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 51 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (18)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 (Section 2) of the Education Amendment Bill (24)
Free Public Education	No

In 2019, the Division for Research, Policy, and Planning met with the Division for Social Development to review two draft legislations—the Child Protection Policy and the Inter-Agency Services Guide—which will be forwarded to the Samoan cabinet for approval. (25) While a separate Child Care and Protection Bill draft bill—prohibiting children under age 14 to engage in street vending—does not meet the international standard of age 15 as the minimum age for work, it does prohibit children younger than the compulsory education age from engaging in street vending after 7 p.m. (26,27) The current law permits children between ages 12 and 14 to engage in light work for a limited number of hours; however neither the current law or the draft Child Care and Protection Bill specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken, nor do they define the activities that are permitted. (19)

Research found no evidence of laws that ban using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Samoa does not meet the international standard for prohibiting non-state military recruitment because its International Criminal Court Act does not apply to children age 15 to 18. (23) Samoa also does not meet the international standard for the prohibition of child commercial sexual exploitation because the Government of Samoa's Crimes Act does not protect children age 16 to 18. (22) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (18,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL)	Enforces the Labour and Employment Relations Act, which includes investigating complaints of child labor law violations. (28,29) Refers cases to the Ministry of Police and the Office of the Attorney General for enforcement. (29)
Ministry of Police	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (29)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. (29)
Ministry for Women, Community, and Social Development	Assists in MCIL investigations as needed. Mandated to protect children, including those working on the street. (30-32) In 2019, under the division of the Child Protection (CP) Unit, sweeps to monitor children in street vending were conducted. Once a child was identified, his or her family was located and a home visit scheduled, during which the CP teams would educate families on the importance of attending school and the risks and hazards of street vending. (25)
Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture	Assists in MCIL investigations, as needed. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Samoa took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MCIL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of labor inspectors' ability to assess penalties.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Transnational Crime Unit	A multi-agency unit that comprises the Ministry of Police, the Ministry for Revenue-Customs, and the Ministry of the Prime Minister's Immigration Unit to investigate and enforce laws against human trafficking, including possible commercial child exploitation. (38,39)
Child Vendor Taskforce (CVTF)	A multi-agency taskforce that comprises the MCIL; Ministry of Police; Ministry of Women, Community, and Social Development; and Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture to reduce the prevalence of child vendors in towns and cities through patrol sweeps and conducting outreach activities. (29) While the CVTF did not meet in 2019, research indicates that child vendor sweeps did occur during the reporting period. (29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

The government has not integrated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Strategy for the Development of Samoa or the Education Sector Plan. (43,44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Samoa Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020)†	ILO and government program that promotes decent work in Samoa. Supports legal reform and improved implementation of laws related to child labor, and promotes access to information and employment services for youth. (45) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Samoa Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.
Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools†	A government-sponsored program that provides financial support to families to assist with ancillary school fees, supplies, and equipment that their child may need during the school year. (12) In 2019, the government allocated $5.6 million to continue this grant. (3,46)
One Government Grant†	Provides direct financial support to Samoan primary and secondary public schools, mission and private schools, and primary schools for students with disabilities and special needs to offset fees normally charged to students. (37,46) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement One Government Grant program during the reporting period.

Although the government has implemented educational support programs, research also found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Samoa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor, including street vending.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits commercial sexual exploitation of children between ages 16 to 18.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, or offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2019
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of investigations conducted, violations found; prosecutions initiated; convictions made, and penalties imposed.	2013 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor enforcement authorities and social services providers.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure the Child Vendor Taskforce meets regularly and effectively carries out its mandate.	2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Strategy for the Development of Samoa and the Education Sector Plan.	2012 – 2019
	Publish information regarding the activities carried out by the United Nations Pacific Strategy.	2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children by fully eliminating school-related costs, including registration fees, uniforms, transportation fees.	2016 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor, including in street vending and commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2009 – 2019
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information regarding the activities carried out by the Samoa Decent Work Country Program.	2018 – 2019
	Publish information regarding the activities carried out by the One Government Grant program.	2019

In 2019, São Tomé and Príncipe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched the Family Program to implement education policies and provide cash stipends to vulnerable families. However, children in São Tomé and Príncipe engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The Labor Code permits children younger than age 14 to work under certain circumstances, which is not consistent with international standards. In addition, limited financial resources hampered law enforcement efforts and prevented the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor from being implemented. Social programs also do not address child labor in all relevant sectors, including in agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in São Tomé and Príncipe engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in São Tomé and Príncipe. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	24.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		84.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2014. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including weeding and fertilizing† (2,5,6)
	Fishing,† including line and hook fishing (2,6)
Industry	Carpentry and woodworking (7)
	Construction† (2)
Services	Working in shops, restaurants, and bars† (2,5)
	Street work,† including begging and street vending† (2,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation (1)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

São Tomé and Príncipe has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 268(2) of the Labor Code (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 274 of the Labor Code; Article 171 of the Civil Code (8,9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List in Annex IV of Labor Code (8)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 159–160 and 181 of the Penal Code (10)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 160 and 181 of the Penal Code (10)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 179–182 of the Penal Code (10)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 279–280 and 289 of the Penal Code (10)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Legislation title unknown (11)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 1 of Decree-Law 3/83 (12)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15†	Articles 11–12 of the Basic Education System Law (13)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 12 of the Basic Education System Law (13)

† Age calculated based on available information (13)

The Labor Code permits children younger than age 14 to work under certain circumstances, which is not consistent with international labor standards. In addition, the Labor Code permits children age 14, who have completed their compulsory education, to perform light work that is not deemed harmful to their health or development; however, special legislation specifying the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken has yet to be adopted. (8)

The minimum age protections contained in the Legal Regime of Individual Employment Conditions do not apply to children working outside of a formal labor relationship, such as children who are self-employed. (14,15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs	Enforces labor laws, including child labor. (5)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (5)

Reports indicate there are a total of three labor inspectors and five assistants in the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. Although inspections are permitted in all sectors, they are seldom conducted in the informal sector, in which instances of child labor are more prevalent, and are rarely conducted at worksites. (5) Reports also indicate that the allotted budget for the labor inspectorate was insufficient to cover operating costs, including fuel and transportation. (5)

Children found working during inspections by labor inspectors are referred to the Department of Social Protection and Solidarity in the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

During the reporting year, investigators lacked resources, including transportation, fuel and other necessities to carry out investigations. (5)

Children found by Ministry of Justice and Human Rights officials are referred to the Department of Social Protection and Solidarity in the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs for integration and counseling services. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Child Labor Committee	Leads efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (17) Led by the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. (18) In 2019, conducted workshops and seminars for government officials. (5)
Department of Social Protection and Solidarity, Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs	Provides counseling and integration services to children found during labor inspections and criminal investigations. (1) Due to a lack of financial resources, the Department of Social Protection and Solidarity was inactive during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor	Guides the government's efforts to combat child labor. (19) Lack of funding prevented the implementation of the policy during the reporting period. (5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Family Program (Programa Família)*†	$10 million World Bank-funded, 4-year education program to implement education policies. In addition, the program provides cash stipends in the amount of $55, distributed twice a month, to the poorest families. (5)
Support Centers†	Three government-funded centers, run by NGOs, operating in areas with high concentrations of poor families, orphans, and street children. Provide household stipends to keep children in school, and teach income-generating skills. (20) Active in 2019. (5)
Disadvantaged Mothers Program (Mães Carenciadas)†	Government program that provides family stipends, school materials, and uniforms on an as-needed basis. The support is distributed by social workers. (21) Active in 2019. (5)
Decent Work Country Program (2018–2021)†	Government program in collaboration with ILO that aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor through legislative action and strategic programs. (1,22)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe.

Although São Tomé and Príncipe has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem, especially in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in São Tomé and Príncipe (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the minimum age for work of age 15 applies to all children.	2018 – 2019
	Adopt legislation defining the activities and conditions permissible for light work.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children who are self-employed.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2017 – 2019
	Provide inspectors and investigators with appropriate training, and equip labor inspectors and criminal investigators with the necessary resources to conduct inspections, including fuel and transportation.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites and the number of investigations conducted.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies to combat child labor are able to fulfill their mandates, including the Department of Social Protection and Solidarity.	2019
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor has sufficient resources for implementation.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Implement programs that specifically target child labor in agriculture.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Senegal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The country's first national human trafficking database, "Systraite," was piloted in five regions, and the Ministry of Supervised Education and Social Protection released a multi-disciplinary action plan to address forced begging. However, children in Senegal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Hazardous work prohibitions do not include domestic work and street work, areas in which child labor is prevalent, and labor and criminal law enforcement agencies lack resources to adequately enforce child labor law. In addition, an overlap of mandated activities among mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor creates confusion and obstructs effective collaboration.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Senegal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. (1-5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Senegal.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	53.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		57.1

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2015. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding cattle (7)
	Fishing, activities unknown (5)
	Farming, including the production of cotton, rice, peanuts, and mangoes (2,5)
Industry	Washing ore, crushing rocks, using mercury, and carrying heavy loads† while mining gold, iron, and salt, and quarrying rock (3,7)
	Welding and auto repair (8)
Services	Domestic work (2-5)
	Street work, including vending (4,5,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work, gold mining, fishing, and farming, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,10,11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,12,13)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,10,14-22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Senegal are exploited in domestic servitude and forced labor in gold mines, and are victims of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, particularly within the country. (4,14,15) Forced begging remains a significant problem in Senegal. It is a traditional practice to send boys to Koranic schools called daaras, at which

Senegal

students known as talibés receive a Koranic education from teachers known as marabouts; however, some daaras have corrupted the traditional practices, forcing many students to beg. (4,5,12,15,23-26) Corrupt marabouts take the talibés' earnings and beat those who fail to meet the daily quota. (5,12,16,18,24,25) According to a report by UNODC, this practice enriches marabouts, bringing in over $10 million annually in Dakar alone. (27,28) Talibés at such institutions often live in overcrowded, unsanitary conditions, receive inadequate food and medical care, and are vulnerable to physical and sexual abuse. (5,12,13,16,17,25) Children from rural areas in Senegal and neighboring countries are particularly vulnerable to this practice, and are sometimes victims of human trafficking. (12,16,23,25,26,29)

Barriers to education exist that force some students to quit school, including school-related fees, a lack of birth registration documents, and a lack of both teachers and rural schools. Some girls reportedly quit school due to sexual harassment, including by teachers. (8,10,30,31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Senegal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Senegal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37 (40)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37; Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution (40,41)

* No conscription (7)

While the 2005 anti-trafficking law criminalized forced begging, provisions in the penal code that allowed seeking of alms under certain conditions may have hampered the ability of law enforcement officials to distinguish between traditional alms seeking and exploitation through forced begging. (3,26,36,42) Government officials, UNODC, UNICEF, and local NGOs have stated that penalties for child labor violations may not be severe enough to deter employers from exploiting children, particularly because the penalties are rarely enforced. (43) Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include domestic work or street work, areas in which there is evidence of potential harm to child workers. (7,34-36) The light work provisions are not specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child because they do not limit the number of hours per week for light work, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, or specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken. The light work framework also does not meet international standards as it applies to children under the age of 13. (32,33) Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (23,32,33,40) In September 2018, as part of the draft law comment period, government finalized and publicized a draft of the revamped Child Code but it was still pending final approval at the end of the reporting period. (5,44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, Professional Organizations, and Institutional Relations (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, Professional Organizations, and Institutional Relations (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through the Directorate General of Labor and Social Security and by using social security inspectors. (31,43)
Ministry of Women, Family, Gender, and Child Protection (MWFGCP)	Contributes to the creation and implementation of child protection policies and provides services to victims of exploitative child labor. Operates the Ginddi Center for vulnerable children and a toll-free child protection hotline through which the public can report child labor abuses. (14,19,26) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Good Governance and Child Protection (MGGCP) collaborated with international donors and an NGO to lead a train-the-trainers session for juvenile justice practitioners on child protection, especially for victims or witnesses of violence, human trafficking, or exploitation. MGGCP also partnered with religious leaders to participate in the second phase of the president's campaign to remove vulnerable children from the streets of Dakar. (11) In April 2019, MGGCP was incorporated into MWFGCP. (4)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes violations of child labor laws. (45) Trains police and judiciary on laws related to human trafficking and forced begging. (16) Through its Department of Correctional Education and Social Protection, helps develop draft texts in the field of social protection and juvenile delinquency; strengthens the capacity of stakeholders to care for children; and shares responsibility with the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children to provide services to vulnerable children. (19,46,47)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Oversees all law enforcement agencies, including the local and national police officials who investigate cases of human trafficking and forced child begging, and arrests perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor. (45,48-50) Houses the Children's Unit, located in Dakar, which employs three officers who specialize in child protection, victim identification, and reintegration. (19,48,49) Through its Children's Unit, receives assistance from the Vice Squad in child protection cases. (51) Through its Air and Border Police (Police de l'air et des frontières), focuses on migrant smuggling and transnational crimes. (52)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$183,685 (54)	$203,100 (5)

Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (54)	Yes (5)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (54)	Yes (5)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (54)	Yes (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	No (54)	No (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (54)	Yes (5)

The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Senegal's workforce, which includes over 6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Senegal would employ about 175 labor inspectors. (56,57) MOL acknowledged that the current number of labor inspectors is insufficient; and although the number of inspectors increased during the reporting period, a high turnover rate and limited funding level have further hindered the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (7,45)

Anecdotal reports indicate that there is a lack of child labor law enforcement in the informal sector, in which most children are employed. This is especially true in the artisanal gold mining sector because most activities take place in the far southeast of the country in the Kédougou region, far from the capital. (5,14,26,58) Article L. 241 of the Labor Code grants inspectors the authority to assess penalties for all offenses; however, they typically do so only for minor offenses and refer the more serious infractions to the courts for determination of penalties. (32,45,58) Courts may require violations to be resolved through conciliation at the labor inspectorate and if that fails, refer cases to a tribunal for judgment. (45) The Ginddi Center’s child protection hotline was operational during the reporting period, but research was unable to determine how many children were supported. It was noted that the Ginddi Center was overcrowded, so the government relied on NGOs to support victims of human trafficking. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including poor coordination among agencies.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (54)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (54)	N/A (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (54)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (54)	9 (5)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (54)	7 (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (54)	7 (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (54)	2 (55)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (26)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (54)	Yes (5)

Of the seven cases prosecuted during the reporting period, five were for exploitation of child begging and two were for child procurement for sexual services. (5)

The authorities have had limited success in prosecuting cases related to forced begging due to a lack of coordination and resource constraints, and partly due to a perceived lack of political support, cultural norms, and pressure from influential Koranic teachers who support this practice, particularly in rural areas. (14,58,60,61) Although police stations in Senegal are expected to report cases involving children to the Ministry of the Interior and Public Security’s Children’s Unit, research found no evidence that this occurs regularly. (62) Research indicates that training for criminal investigators was cursory and not sufficient to fully enforce existing laws against labor abuses involving children. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including clarity of institutional mandates.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinates initiatives, policies, and partnerships with civil society organizations to address child labor. Chaired by MOL and includes representatives from three ministries, the police, and elected officials. (58) Research was unable to determine whether this organization was active during the reporting period.
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP)	Reports on human trafficking in Senegal, with a focus on women and children; coordinates the implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings and other efforts to prevent human trafficking; prosecutes perpetrators; and protects victims. (14,49,58,63) Chaired by MOJ and employs five staff members. (48,58,63)
Childhood Protection Unit (CAPE)	Coordinates government efforts related to child protection, including through the implementation of the National Strategy on Child Protection. (51,52,54,58,64) Contributes to the creation and implementation of child protection policies, and develops a national system for collecting and disseminating data on vulnerable children. Advocates on behalf of all entities working on issues related to child begging, violence against children, and child labor. (65) During the reporting period, CAPE became attached to MWFGCP. (4) Research was unable to determine whether CAPE was active during the reporting period.
Trafficking in Persons Database “Systraite”	In October 2019, the Government of Senegal officially launched the country’s first national trafficking in persons database, Système de suivi de la traite , or “Systraite.” Currently in a pilot phase collecting information on human trafficking victims, convictions, and perpetrators in five regions: Dakar, Saint Louis, Thies, Kedougou, and Tambacounda. (4,66,67) Launched in partnership with IOM and with funding from USDOS. (68)
Daara Mapping	In collaboration with local communities, USAID, foreign NGOs, UNODC, and CNLTP, daara mapping has been taking place since 2014. (4,11) During the reporting period, mapping took place in the four municipalities of Dakar, which resulted in the closure of several substandard facilities. (4)

The National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons remains underfunded. Overlap among the activities of the coordinating bodies due to their institutional mandates also creates confusion and obstructs effective collaboration and implementation of efforts. (14,15,58)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2018–2020)	Implemented by CNLTP, a continuation of the previously ended action plan along four axes: prevention, protection and prosecution, capacity building, and research and evaluation. (14,58) During the reporting period, CNLTP continued the 2018–2020 National Action Plan, with wide participation by both public and non-public entities. However, it continued to utilize international donors as the primary mechanism to provide training due to insufficient government funding. (4)
National Strategy on Child Protection	Aims to establish an integrated national social protection system and specifically identifies the issue of child begging through an action plan with a recommended budget of $18 million. (19) Implemented through Child Protection Committees, currently established in 24 prefectures, which refer victims to social services and assist law enforcement with reintegrating child trafficking victims. (19,48) It has not been operational since 2012. The committee did not meet in 2019. However, government and civil society stakeholders have held informal, ad hoc consultations throughout the year. (55)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (48)

Research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken in 2019 to renew the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolition of Child Labor in Senegal, which expired in 2016.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Removal of Street Children (Retrait des enfants de la Rue)	Government program to remove children who are begging from the streets of Dakar and place them in government-run shelters or return them to their homes. (4,26,54,69) The first phase removed over 1,500 children, including around 1,000 talibés , from the streets of Dakar from June 2016 to early 2017. In early 2018, the government launched phase two, picking up over 300 talibés between April and June 2018. (70) During the reporting period, the government continued planning for a third phase to take place in the cities of Dakar, Thies, and Saint-Louis. (4)
Daara Modernization Program†	$18.5 million government-funded voluntary program implemented by Tostan and La Rencontre Africaine pour la Défense des Droits d'Homme that aims to regulate, inspect, and fund daaras and eliminate forced begging. (3,61,71) Research was unable to determine whether activities were conducted during the reporting period.
Ginddi Center‡	Shelter that serves abused and vulnerable children, including runaway talibés , street children, and child trafficking victims. (19,31,58,61) Provides food, education, vocational training, family mediation, medical care, and psychological care. (46,58,72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were conducted during the reporting period.
Centers to address child trafficking‡	MOJ-run transit houses in Dakar, Pikine, and Saint-Louis that provide monitoring, education, and rehabilitation and reintegration services for victims of child trafficking. (48) Research was unable to determine whether activities were conducted during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (73-75)

Although the Government of Senegal has implemented programs to address child trafficking and forced begging, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children involved in domestic work, agriculture, or mining. (10)

In December 2019, the Ministry of Supervised Education and Social Protection released a multi-disciplinary action plan to address the problem of forced begging. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Senegal (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that penalties for child labor violations, including the worst forms, are stringent enough to serve as a deterrent.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Clarify ambiguity in forced begging provisions in the Penal Code and the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons to explicitly guarantee that no exceptions can enable a child to be forced to beg.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children's involvement in child labor.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age for work.	2018 – 2019
	Publish all relevant information on labor inspections conducted, including those at worksites.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure all penalties are assessed, particularly in the most serious cases.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice, and ensure adequate labor inspectorate funding.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that labor law enforcement and inspections are carried out in the informal sector.	2014 – 2019
	Establish a mechanism to receive child labor complaints, and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2014 – 2018
	Establish a formal and reciprocal complaint mechanism between labor law enforcement .	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that training for criminal investigators adequately addresses issues related to the worst forms of child labor in Senegal.	2019
	Ensure courts have sufficient resources and coordination to be able to successfully prosecute cases.	2019
Disaggregate Ginddi Center hotline call data to show how many calls are regarding children.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms on child labor are active and able to carry out their intended mandates by providing adequate resources, support, and distinct scopes of responsibility.	2010 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy to address child labor.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, building schools in rural areas, training additional teachers, ensuring that all children have access to birth registration, and ensuring that schools are free from sexual abuse.	2011 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work, agriculture, and mining, and ensure that adequate funding is available to support existing programs targeting the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure the Daara Modernization Program and the Centers address child trafficking conduct activities to eradicate forced begging and support victims of child trafficking.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Serbia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government implemented the Law on Simplified Hiring of Seasonal Labor in Certain Economic Areas to regulate seasonal work, including in agriculture where child labor occurs. The City of Belgrade also opened a shelter to provide services to street children. In addition, the government identified 21 child trafficking victims and 32 child labor violations. However, children in Serbia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Serbia's laws do not treat forced child beggars as victims of child labor and the country's social welfare centers are overburdened, which limits efforts to provide services to victims of child labor. In addition, investigations and prosecutions of child labor crimes significantly decreased in 2019 compared with 2018.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Serbia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (4,5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Serbia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.7

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2014. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15,16)
	Use in illicit activities, including in petty crime (4,9,12-14,17)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Serbia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children from Serbia, particularly those from Roma communities, are victims of domestic human trafficking to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (4,9,13,14) Girls, Roma children, and children from low-income families in rural communities are most vulnerable to child labor, including trafficking in persons. (1,18)

Undocumented migrants are at a significantly higher risk of human trafficking for the purposes of labor or sexual exploitation. (52) In 2019, UNHCR encountered 30,216 migrants arriving in Serbia, many of whom were unaccompanied children. (19) Asylum seekers and grantees are allowed to access free primary and secondary education in Serbia. (1,20) In addition, Serbia has social programs to assist migrant children with access to education. (15,20-22)

Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children experience challenges in obtaining birth registration, which may make school enrollment difficult and increases their vulnerability to engage in child labor. (9,23-28) Although the government has a program to increase the attendance of Roma children in preschool, and the law allows children to enroll in school without identity documents, economic hardship, ethnic discrimination, language barriers, disabilities, and placement in non-mainstream schools sometimes discourage Romani children, especially girls, from attending school. (9,23-30) In addition, Roma children are more likely to begin school at a later age and drop out of school more frequently than their non-Roma peers. (9,24)

Constitutional and legal protections prohibit discrimination against individuals with disabilities in the education system. (23,31,32) However, some individuals with disabilities, especially Roma children, face difficulties in accessing education due to social prejudices. (23,27,28,33,34)

Reports indicate some children are being recruited to participate in non-state-affiliated military training camps at which they learn how to use weapons and other basic paramilitary skills. (35-38) In 2019, pictures surfaced online indicating that the camps were still in operation despite a local government announcement that they were disbanded. (36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Serbia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Labor Law; Article 66 of the Constitution (31,39)

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 4 of the Law on the Ratification of the Optional Protocol Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (44)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 71 of the Constitution; Articles 94 and 98 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (31,45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 71 of the Constitution; Article 91 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (31,45)

* No conscription (43)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31,44)

In January 2019, Parliament implemented the new Law on Simplified Hiring of Seasonal Labor in Certain Economic Areas. (5,9,46) The Law regulates seasonal work, including in agriculture, and specifies that a work contract be required to employ minors. (46) In addition, the Department for Family Care has continued drafting the Law on Children’s Rights and Child Ombudsman that would create an Ombudsman for Children’s Rights, establish a new agency to oversee the protection of children’s rights in government agencies, and would increase other protections for children. (5,9,47)

Serbia’s law does not treat child beggars as victims, but rather as perpetrators and offenders. (5,48,76) In addition, Serbian law does not criminally prohibit use of a child in illicit activities except when it results from human trafficking. (41)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA)	Through the Labor Inspectorate, inspects businesses, including unregistered businesses. Per mandate established by the Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protecting Children Against Child Labor, receives and investigates child labor complaints and informs Centers for Social Work of child labor violations. (5,9,49) Has internal sub-units that focus on the protection of children with disabilities and children working on the street. (5) Through the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection (CPTV), MOLEVSA identifies victims of child trafficking and those at risk, conducts needs assessments, contributes to trafficking research projects, and refers victims to social services. (17) CPTV is divided into two parts: the Agency for Coordination of Protection of Trafficking Victims and the new Urgent Reception Center, which opened in early 2019. (13,16,23) In addition, CPTV works with state institutions, international organizations, and NGOs on human trafficking prevention and protection efforts and activities. (23) In 2019, CPTV identified 29 victims of human trafficking, 21 of whom were minors. (5)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Oversees the General Police Directorate and enforces laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through the Criminal Police Department. (14,17,50) Informs the Centers for Social Work of any child labor violations found. (5,16) In 2019, MOI completed the transfer of jurisdiction of human trafficking law enforcement from the Border Police Department to the Criminal Police Department. (5) The move was done to improve human trafficking investigation techniques. (13,23)
Republic Public Prosecutor's Office	Leads investigations on human trafficking cases and exchanges information through a network of 27 local prosecutors and NGOs. Provides financial support to CPTV. (5)
Parliamentary Committee on Children	Reviews draft legislation and monitors the implementation of laws pertinent to children's rights. (5)
Deputy Ombudsman for Children's Rights, Office of the Protector of Citizens	Monitors and conducts research on the situation of children's rights in Serbia. Produces reports on child begging, promotes inclusive education and legal prohibition of corporal punishment, and manages draft laws on children's rights for parliamentary approval. (5)

Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) provide social services, track the number of street children, and receive labor violations from MOLEVSA and the Ministry of the Interior. According to the MOLEVSA, the SWCs are significantly overburdened. (5,9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLEVSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

† Data are from January 2018 to December 2018.

Labor inspectors are responsible for inspecting registered and unregistered businesses, including businesses within the agricultural sector. (9) The Labor Inspectorate utilizes a work plan for inspections that is drafted at the beginning of each year, and targets high-risk sectors in which child labor is known to occur, such as in agriculture and construction. (9,53) In addition, the Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protecting Children Against Child Labor requires labor inspectors to use a checklist to identify child labor during inspections and mandates that police and labor inspectors inform Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) on cases of child labor. (9,10,54)

In 2019, the Labor Inspectorate identified 32 child labor violations, one of which involved an individual under 15 years of age. The Labor Inspectorate issued 6 decrees for a minor to stop working and filed 13 misdemeanor charges against employers. (5)

The Labor Inspectorate has designated experts on child labor at each of its branches to provide training to other inspectors. However, new labor inspectors do not receive formal training but are trained instead on-the-job by working alongside seasoned inspectors. According to the ILO, this informal training may be inadequate without also including formal training. (5)

During the reporting period, the government adopted a 2020 budget that includes authorization to hire 40 new inspectors and purchase new vehicles over the next 2 years to facilitate the level of travel necessary for conducting countrywide worksite inspections. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (13)	No (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (52)	No (5)
Number of Investigations	22 (9)	30 (51)
Number of Violations Found	4 (9)	26 (51)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	21 (9)	15 (51)
Number of Convictions	19 (9)	5 (51)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	25 (9)	5 (51)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (5)

Training on identifying human trafficking is provided as a part of the general police curriculum given to law enforcement officials who process immigration cases. (52) Continuous training on identifying human trafficking is also provided to one public prosecutor in each of the 25 Higher Public Prosecutor's Offices. (5) However, sources indicated that some agencies responsible for investigation of trafficking in persons cases lack funding. (5)

The SWCs, the primary provider of social services to human trafficking victims, assist with child trafficking cases. (17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Council for Children's Rights	Coordinates government efforts to address child labor by monitoring and evaluating government activities, and includes representatives from international organizations and government ministries, such as MOLEVSA. (55) In December 2019, had a meeting to finalize the strategy for combating child labor for 2020–2023. (5)
National Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings	Sets government policies on trafficking in persons, chaired by MOI. Drafts updated annual SOP for the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection. (5) The National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons acts as the Secretary of the Council and manages the work of the implementation team. (17) In February 2019, the Council opened an Urgent Reception Center for victims of human trafficking, which accepted its first participants in June 2019. During the reporting period, the Council prepared the 2020 SOP for final review and adoption by the government. (5)
Refugee Protection Working Group	Serves as the main mechanism for coordinating non-food related services to refugees, including children, and shares information on protection of refugees. Co-chaired by UNHCR and the Commissariat for Refugees and Migration with the participation of NGOs, local governments, and international organizations. (22) The group met quarterly throughout the reporting period. (51)

The position of National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons continues to experience constraints on time and financial resources. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant Roma policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia (2018–2022)	Creates a roadmap for eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Activities focus on the prevention and elimination of child abuse, support for children working on the streets and vulnerable families, the creation of a system within Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) to monitor and record risks of child labor, and continuous development for professional workers. (56) During the reporting period, the Center for Social Protection began collecting data on child labor as recommended by the ILO per the Roadmap's framework. (5)
Action Plan for Protection of Children from Violence (2018–2022)	Provides improved prevention, protection, and support for children against violence. (57,58) Part of the Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia. Includes enhanced interventions for the protection of children from violence, including organizational mechanisms. (57) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.
Strategy for Preventing and Suppressing Human Trafficking and Action Plan (2017–2022)	Creates a legislative framework, budget, benchmarks, and strategic areas in need of improvement to combat trafficking in persons. (10,59) In 2019, in keeping with the strategy, MOI's Criminal Police assumed complete investigative authority for human trafficking cases from the Border Police. The National Trafficking Coordinator reports that this has increased Serbia's capacity to investigate cases of human trafficking. (5)
Protocol on Rules and Procedures for the Institutions and Organizations Working with Children Involved in Life and Work on the Streets of Belgrade	Aims to enhance institutional cooperation among MOI, the Criminal Police Directorate, the Communal Police, city SWCs, the City Secretariat for Education, the City Secretariat for Health, and civil society organizations. (62) Defines street children, worst forms of child labor, child work, and child trafficking. (1,62) Stipulates lead institutions, rules, and procedures for interacting with street children. Save the Children is funding the first round of training on the Protocol. (1) In 2019, the city of Belgrade opened a shelter to house children engaged in street work. (5,52)
National Strategy for Roma Inclusion (2016–2025)	Seeks to include representatives from Roma communities in policy implementation and aims to improve access to education for Roma population in Serbia, including access to preschool. (63) In addition, the government adopted the Action Plan for the Strategy for Social Inclusion of Roma Men and Women for 2017–2018, which mandates the inclusion of Roma in education and employment. (20) In 2019, Serbia recorded increased primary school enrollment for Roma children. (5)

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion (2016–2025). (11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Access to Education Programs†	The Inclusive Early Childhood Education and Care program is a World Bank, Ministry of Finance, and Ministry of Education, Science, and Technological Development project that aims to improve access to early childhood education for socially disadvantaged children. (70) In 2019, a bylaw was adopted defining procedures for internal and external evaluation to improve program efforts. (5) The Child Allowance program is a government cash benefits program for poor families, conditional on school enrollment for children ages 7 and older. (9)
Assistance to Roma Children in Education*	A Ministry of Education, Science, and Technological Development policy that seeks to improve the school attendance rate of Roma children. In 2019, school attendance rates for Roma children improved. (5) Includes the Law on the Foundations of the Education System, which encompasses affirmative action measures to improve participation and performance of Roma children in the education system. (9)
Belgrade Children's Shelter†*	A social welfare institution funded by the City of Belgrade; opened in 2019. (5) Caters to vulnerable children 7 to 18 years of age. Provides accommodation services and daytime shelter services to meet the needs of young people and street children from which they are referred to competent social work centers and judicial authorities. (5)
Strengthening the Identification and Protection of Victims of Trafficking†	An IOM, CPTV, and MOI project that contributes to the implementation of the National Anti-Trafficking Strategy by improving mechanisms for the prevention and identification of victims of human trafficking. (24) In 2018, MOI, MOLEVSA, and the Public Prosecution Office signed a Memorandum on Cooperation in the Field of Suppression of Human Trafficking and the Rights Protection of Human Trafficking Victims. (9,71) The Memorandum defines mutual rights in the identification of human trafficking, assistance and protection of victims, and statistical reporting. (13,71) In 2019, the "Fundamentals of Child Safety" program was implemented via 3,848 lectures held at primary schools discussing the prevention and protection of children from human trafficking. During the lectures, the mobile phone application "Basics of Child Safety" was presented and 50,000 handbooks on child safety were distributed to children and educators. (51)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	The government collaborates with the ILO to implement the USDOL-funded MAPI6 project in Serbia. Specific goals of the program include improving application of knowledge in support of efforts to eliminate child labor; strengthening the policy-making process; improving the capacity of the government, national authorities, employers' and workers' organizations, and other relevant entities to combat child labor; and strengthening partnerships to accelerate progress in combatting child labor. (5,67-69)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Serbia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9, 13,72)

The Government of Serbia has implemented programs on child labor and inclusive education. In 2019, the government took steps to assist children living and working in the streets by opening the Belgrade Children's Shelter. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Serbia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law does not treat child beggars as criminals.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2019
	Ensure that the Law on Children's Rights and Child Ombudsman is passed.	2019
Enforcement	Ensure that staff members at the Social Welfare Centers have sufficient resources, such as personnel and funding, to address the specific needs of child trafficking victims.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that children are not recruited by non-state armed groups, including to participate in non-state-affiliated military training camps.	2019
	Train new labor inspectors on child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal investigators and agencies combating trafficking in persons have the necessary funding to conduct thorough investigations.	2010 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that the National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons has a level of financial support that facilitates efforts to eliminate child labor.	2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Address barriers to education, including access to birth registration documentation; increase access to education for children with disabilities; and increase access and retention rates for minority populations, particularly migrant and Roma children.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Sierra Leone made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In early 2020, the government officially overturned a 10-year-old policy that prohibited pregnant girls from attending regular public schools or taking secondary and post-secondary school entrance exams. The government also published a report on the results of a 2018 household-level survey on child labor and employment. However, children in Sierra Leone engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the mining sector and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in quarrying stone and fishing. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover all sectors where child labor is known to occur, and the government does not have a sufficient number of labor inspectors to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country. In addition, Sierra Leone lacks a national policy and social program to address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sierra Leone engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the mining sector and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in quarrying stone and fishing. (1) In 2019, the government published a report based on household-level survey data collected in 2018, which included a discussion of child labor in Sierra Leone. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sierra Leone.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	35.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	32.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		81.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivation of cassava, coffee, cocoa, palm oil, peanuts, and rice (1,5)
	Fishing, including deep-sea fishing,† mending nets, and working on boats in the open sea† (1)
Industry	Mining† for alluvial diamonds, sand, and gold, including loading gravel in sacks or basins, carrying sacks on their heads, washing, and sieving (1)
	Quarrying† and crushing stone, including granite, and transporting gravel (1)
	Construction, activities unknown (1)
	Manufacturing,† activities unknown (1,2,6)
Services	Scavenging scrap metals and recyclable materials from dumpsites (1,7-9)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,12)
	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,12)
	Forced labor at street hawking, domestic work, mining, agriculture, scavenging for scrap metal, and motorbike taxi driving, granite and alluvial diamond mines, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,11,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Sierra Leone is a source, transit, and destination country for children trafficked for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (13-15) Sierra Leone has a form of internal child trafficking called “men pikin,” meaning foster care in Krio, in which family members send children with promises of better educational opportunities to relatives in urban areas. However, some children are instead subjected to forced labor, including in street hawking, domestic work, mining, agriculture, scavenging for scrap metal, and motorbike taxi driving. Some children sent to Koranic schools are trafficked for labor exploitation. (9) In addition, LGBTQI children are at a higher risk for human trafficking. (16) There are also reports that children, mostly boys ages 5–17, are forced to mine for diamonds for long hours in hazardous conditions, sometimes without pay. (13-15)

In December, the Economic Community of West African States ruled that Sierra Leone’s policy, which prohibited pregnant girls from attending regular public schools or taking secondary and post-secondary school entrance exams, was illegal. Since that time, the government has allowed pregnant girls to take secondary and post-secondary school entrance exams, and on March 30, 2020, the government officially overturned its policy that prevented pregnant girls from attending school and taking entrance exams. (1,17,18) Despite government initiatives to make education free through secondary school, substantial barriers remain, including a lack of schools and teachers, limited transportation to schools, and sexual abuse by teachers. (1,19-21) However, the government enacted the Sexual Offenses Amendment Act in 2019, which provides harsher punishments for offenders, which may lessen a barrier to education. (22) The government also conducted a survey of household data throughout the country; however, the data were not disaggregated to illustrate the level of child labor found in Sierra Leone. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sierra Leone has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 125 of the Child Right Act; Section 52 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act (23,24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 128 of the Child Right Act; Sections 47–56 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act (23,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 128 of the Child Right Act; Sections 47–56 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act; Sections 164 and 170 of the Mines and Minerals Act (23-25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Part II, Section 2, and Part IV, Sections 14–15 and 21 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 19 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone (26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part II, Section 2, and Part IV, Sections 14–15 and 21 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 60 of the Child Right Act (23,26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 19–34 of the Sexual Offenses Act; Part II, Section 2, of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (22,26,28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 7 and 13 of the National Drugs Control Act (29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 28 of the Child Right Act (23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 125 of the Child Right Act (23,30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 9 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone; Section 11(c) of the Child Right Act (23,27,30)

* No conscription (29)

Although Sierra Leone's Child Right Act identifies areas of hazardous work prohibited for children, such as portage of heavy loads, going to sea, and working in places in which machines are used, the types of hazardous work identified do not include, among others, street work. (15,23,24,) Furthermore, children may be exposed to hazardous conditions while working in agriculture and domestic work. (15,23,24,31)

The Child Right Act sets the minimum age for light work at age 13; however, it is not specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor because it does not limit the number of hours per week for light work, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Formulates, implements, and monitors compliance with child labor regulations through its Child Labor Unit. (1) MLSS District Labor Officers enforce labor laws in the formal sector. (1) In October 2019, the Ministry of Labor embarked on nationwide sensitization and popularization of the labor migration policy, impacting child labor. (33)
Ministry of Justice's Director of Public Prosecution	Responsible for undertaking criminal proceedings, including enforcement of criminal laws against forced child labor; child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, recruitment and use of child soldiers, and use of children in illicit activities. (1)

Organization/Agency	Role

Ministry of Gender and Children's Affairs (MGCA)	Serves as the umbrella agency to oversee child protection issues, including child labor. (1,31) In November 2019, President Bio announced the split of the Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender, and Children Affairs (MSWGCA) into the Ministry of Social Welfare (MSW) and the Ministry of Gender and Children's Affairs (MGCA). (1,33)
Ministry of Internal Affairs' Police and Transnational and Organized Crime Unit	The Sierra Leone Police lead the investigation and prosecution of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse through Family Support Units, which are mandated to minimize and eradicate the incidence of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse. (1) Transnational Organized Crime Unit (TOCU) enforces human trafficking laws and provides statistical data and general information on particular cases of human trafficking. (1)

The Child Right Act requires the establishment of a Child Welfare Committee in every village and chiefdom, however, research indicates that these committees have been established in only a few parts of the country due to budgetary constraints. (33,35,36) The Ministries of Social Welfare and Justice lead the TIP Task Force. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Sierra Leone's workforce, which includes more than 2.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Sierra Leone would employ about 75 inspectors. (37,38) In addition to the insufficient number of inspectors, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to insufficient training and the lack of resources for inspections. (1) Although the Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources can conduct inspections of mines and revoke licenses from license holders who are found to be using child labor, reports indicate that a limited number of inspectors and a lack of funding may have hindered the enforcement of these laws in the diamond-mining sector. (13,16,24,32) Routine inspections were conducted only in the formal sector. The MLSS inspected the construction, agriculture, mining, manufacturing, and fishing industries. Labor inspections were not conducted in the informal economy in which most child labor is known to occur. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of data on criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (13)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	No (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (13)	No (1)
Number of Investigations	0 (13)	0 (1)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (13)	Unknown (1)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (13)	Unknown (1)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (13)	Unknown (1)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (15)	Unknown (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	Yes (1)

Reports indicate that criminal law enforcement in Sierra Leone, particularly efforts to address human trafficking, is hampered by a lack of coordination, limited funding, and a lack of training of law enforcement personnel and the judiciary. (1) The government does not provide information on the number of violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, or whether it imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (1,15) On February 11, 2020, and for the first time in 15 years, the High Court of Sierra Leone convicted perpetrators of human trafficking. (39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps may exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to address child labor. (1) Led by MLSS and MGCA and includes representatives from 10 other government agencies, international organizations, and NGOs. As part of the National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor, the National Commission for Children advises the government on ways to improve child welfare. (1)
National Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates the needs and requirements of agencies that provide shelter and services for human trafficking victims, gathers data on reported human trafficking cases, and meets regularly to develop policies related to child trafficking. During the reporting period, the Government of Sierra Leone made efforts to increase funding to fight human trafficking. (1)
Child Welfare Committees	Promote awareness of children's rights and report child welfare concerns to officials responsible for children's issues. Provide recommendations on the support of village children and address complaints and concerns by village inhabitants. (1,34,35)

During the reporting period, Child Welfare Committees in all district capitals across the country were active monitoring mining sites.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sierra Leone has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of policies that cover all worst forms of child labor.

Sierra Leone

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking (2015–2020)	Includes strategies to address human trafficking through prevention efforts, victim identification, protection and referral of victims to services, training of personnel, and government coordination and monitoring. (1,14) In 2019, this plan was implemented. Among the activities during the reporting period include providing temporary housing to TIP survivors and training social welfare personnel in TIP caregiving and police in victim identification. (33)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (1,19,40)

Although the Government of Sierra Leone has adopted the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Trafficking Shelters†	Government-funded program that refers child trafficking victims to privately run shelters that house child victims of forced labor and human trafficking. (41) In 2019, the government provided World Hope International with a building to be used as a recovery and rehabilitation shelter for human trafficking victims. (1)
Free Quality School Education (2018–2023)	Program that covers the costs of school tuition and fees, food programs in remote communities, textbooks, and some teaching materials. (1) In 2019, 21 percent of the national budget was allocated to implement this program, which increased access to primary, secondary, vocational, and university education. (1) President Bio, Vice President Jalloh, and other government officials each donated 3 months of their salaries to establish a government program to pay for textbooks, eliminate school fees, and train teachers in an effort to support free public primary and secondary education for more than 2 million students. (13,17,18,42,43) Immediately after implementation, school enrollment at the primary and secondary school levels increased. (33)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (44,45)

Sierra Leone has insufficient and under-funded shelters and safe houses for children who have been withdrawn from working on the streets or in forced labor. (6,14,25)

Although the Government of Sierra Leone has implemented programs to assist child trafficking survivors, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children working on the streets, in agriculture, and in domestic work. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sierra Leone (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that children are protected from hazardous work in sectors that have dangerous conditions and in which child labor is known to occur, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children's involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Establish a complaint and reciprocal referral mechanism for labor law enforcement efforts.	2015 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO's technical advice.	2011 – 2019
	Provide labor law and criminal law enforcement officials with sufficient resources to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2012 – 2019
	Enforce laws prohibiting child labor in mining, particularly in the diamond mining sector.	2015 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Publish information on the number of labor law violations found and routine inspections targeted as well as criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and whether penalties were imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2019
	Improve coordination between criminal law enforcement agencies and provide sufficient training to enforcement personnel and the judiciary to ensure that violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the National Trafficking in Persons Task Force, and all government bodies, are active and able to adequately coordinate anti-child labor efforts.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that Village Child Welfare Committees are established and operational in all areas.	2014 – 2019
	Adopt policies to address child labor in relevant sectors, such as mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2019
Social Programs	Ensure that data for household surveys are disaggregated so the prevalence of child labor in Sierra Leone is known.	2019
	Institute programs to address child labor in the education sector by providing transportation, increasing the number of schools, and eliminating abuse by teachers.	2013 – 2019
	Increase the availability of and funding for shelters and safe houses for victims of forced labor and for children removed from street work.	2009 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor in the sectors of agriculture, domestic work, and street vending.	2019

In 2019, the Solomon Islands made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Anti-Human Trafficking Advisory Committee was fully established and began meeting quarterly to coordinate the government's anti-human trafficking efforts. Further, the government actively investigated two child sex trafficking cases involving five children. However, children in the Solomon Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of palm oil fruits. The minimum age for employment does not meet international standards, and the government has not comprehensively identified the hazardous occupations prohibited for children. In addition, education is not compulsory, which increases children's vulnerability to child labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Solomon Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of palm oil fruits. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Solomon Islands. Data on some of these key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		86.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on plantations, including harvesting palm oil fruits (5)
	Harvesting sea cucumbers, including diving in deep water (3,5)
Industry	Alluvial mining† (5)
	Furniture construction (5)
	Construction on roads and buildings, including making bricks (5)
Services	Domestic work, including working as cooks (3,5)
	Scavenging for cans and metal in garbage dumpsites, streets, and streams (2,5)
	Working in nightclubs, casinos, and motels (3,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-5,8-10)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the cultivation and trafficking of drugs (2,5)
	Forced domestic work and forced work as cooks (3,5,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In the Solomon Islands, the commercial sexual exploitation of both boys and girls is prevalent near logging camps; near or aboard fishing vessels; and at hotels, casinos, and entertainment establishments. (1,4,5,8,11) Children are exposed to toxic pesticides on palm oil plantations while tending to, harvesting, and collecting palm oil fruits. In addition, children—mainly boys—are exposed to extreme water depths and temperatures while diving for sea cucumbers. (3,5) The government provides a nominal amount of funding towards its Fee Free Basic Education Policy for free education. Additional school fees, teacher absenteeism, and transportation limitations make it challenging for some children to access education. (5, 12) There are no nationally representative data available on the prevalence and nature of child labor in the Solomon Islands.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Solomon Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Solomon Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the minimum age for hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Article 46 of the Labor Act (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 47–49 of the Labor Act (13)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 6 of the Constitution; Articles 251 and 256 of the Penal Code; Part 7 of the Immigration Act (14-16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Part 7 of the Immigration Act; Article 145 of the Penal Code (15, 16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 141 and 143–144 of the Penal Code (16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (17)

The minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because the Labor Act permits children as young as age 12 to work. (13) While the Labor Code prohibits all children under age 18 from working at night and regulates work in mines and on ships, it does not clearly establish a minimum age for hazardous work or delineate the type of work considered hazardous for all children. In addition, the legal framework does not prohibit dangerous work in scavenging or in agricultural activities for which there is evidence of children being exposed to injuries, extreme temperatures, or chemicals. (13, 18, 19)

The Penal Code includes heightened penalties if an offense is committed against a child, but has insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking because threats, the use of force, or other forms of coercion are required to be established for the crime of child trafficking. Furthermore, the laws on child commercial sexual exploitation are insufficient, as they do not include prohibiting pornographic performances. (16) Although there are no laws that provide free basic education, there is a policy that sufficiently provides for free basic education. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration	Enforces child labor laws. (5) Through the Immigration Division, leads efforts to combat human trafficking, including the trafficking of children. (21)
Royal Solomon Islands Police	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (5) Lead investigations of internal human trafficking cases. (22)
Joint Monitoring and Investigation Team	Monitors and investigates cases of transnational human trafficking, specifically in the logging industry. Comprising representatives from the Immigration Division, the Royal Solomon Islands Police, Customs, and the Forestry Division. (21,23)

While the Government of the Solomon Islands has agencies to enforce child labor laws, research found that the agencies' commitment, coordination, and priorities vary widely depending on their mandates, structural capacity, and budget allocations. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information related to its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Insufficient resources continue to hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, including a lack of budget transparency and enforcement efforts. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

While the Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information related to its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report, the government is actively investigating two cases of trafficking for the purpose of child sexual exploitation. (5,11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Human Trafficking Advisory Committee (AHTAC)	Coordinates efforts across the government to address human trafficking. (21) Includes the Immigration Division, which acts as secretariat, and representatives from law enforcement agencies, NGOs, and UN agencies. An Executive Officer from the Royal Solomon Islands Police acts as the Committee Chair. (9,19,22) In 2019, the AHTAC was fully established and met quarterly during the reporting period; entities cooperated to coordinate all anti-human trafficking efforts in the Solomon Islands. (11)
National Advisory and Action Committee on Children (NAACC)	Coordinates government and NGOs to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (24) The committee consists of several ministries, including the Ministry of Women, Youth, Children and Family Affairs; Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration; and Ministry of Home Affairs. Several NGOs participate, including Save the Children, UNICEF, and the WHO. (19) In 2019, the NAACC was active and met quarterly. (10)

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information on its coordination efforts to eliminate child labor. (5) Although the National Advisory and Action Committee on Children was established in 2012, and met quarterly in 2019, research was unable to determine whether activities took place during the reporting period to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (19,25)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling (2015–2020)	Establishes a framework for national anti-human trafficking efforts. (26) Raises awareness about commercial sexual exploitation of children and the services available for vulnerable children. The National Action Plan is funded by NGOs and the Government of the Solomon Islands. (9,19,26) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling during the reporting period
Fee Free Basic Education Policy	Subsidizes school fees for grades one through nine to increase access to education. (18-20,27) This policy was active during the reporting period. (28)

Policy	Description
National Education Action Plan	Establishes a timeline within the National Development Strategy 2016–2035 to provide free primary and secondary education to boys and girls by 2020. (29) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Education Action Plan during the reporting period.
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (30) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (30)

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information regarding its policies to eliminate child labor. (5) Child labor prevention and elimination strategies do not appear to be integrated into the Fee Free Basic Education Policy. (27) Research did not find evidence that the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling contains policies to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of preventing or eliminating child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Solomon Islands (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2014 – 2019
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2019
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for employment to comply with international standards.	2009 – 2019
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work.	2009 – 2019
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, including the types of work for which there is evidence of hazards, such as in scavenging and agriculture.	2009 – 2019
	Establish by law an age up to which education is compulsory that extends to the minimum age for employment.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits child trafficking, regardless of whether threats, the use of force, or other forms of coercion can be established.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2011 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018 – 2019
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding; the number and type of labor inspections conducted; violations found; and penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by ensuring the ability to assess penalties.	2019
	Publish information on the number of criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of child labor penalties imposed, and the number of criminal law enforcement convictions secured.	2009 – 2019
Government Policies	Allocate sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws, including increasing budget transparency.	2014 – 2019
	Adopt a policy via the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling that addresses all worst forms of child labor, including using children in commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Fee Free Basic Education Policy.	2014 – 2019
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling.	2018 – 2019
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Fee Free Basic Education Policy.	2018 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Somalia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs unveiled an expansive social protection policy and finalized a National Employment Policy, while a newly established tripartite labor committee also drafted an action plan to eradicate child labor. Additionally, the Ministry of Defense committed to a UN Roadmap to end and prevent grave violations against children, including recruitment and use in combat. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Somalia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The Somali National Army continued to recruit and use children in armed conflict, in violation of its national law, during the reporting period. Somalia is also receiving this assessment because it lacks a labor inspectorate, and as such conducted no worksite labor inspections. Children engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Somali laws do not criminally prohibit child trafficking for labor, commercial sexual exploitation, or the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Somalia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Somalia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. (3) However, in 2019 the ILO funded the completion of Somalia's first labor force survey in 2019, which included sectoral information on child labor and IDPs. (3-6)

	Domestic work (2,4,13)
	Street work, including shining shoes, washing cars, driving minibuses, vending, and transporting khat (a legal, amphetamine-like stimulant) (2,4-9,12,13)
	Voluntarily recruited children used in hostilities by state armed groups (1,4,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and supporting roles, including as cooks, porters, and informants, or to operate checkpoints (1,4,9,10)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, herding livestock, breaking rocks, selling or transporting khat , begging, and construction work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,4,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

As Somalia approaches its fourth decade of civil war, the country’s IDPs are estimated at 2.6 million, with unofficial estimates approaching 3.6 million. (4,14) IDPs, including children, are vulnerable to human trafficking for sexual and labor exploitation. Members of the terrorist group Al-Shabaab infiltrate madrassas and mosques, using deception or coercion tactics to forcibly recruit victims, including children, into sexual slavery and combat and support roles. (1) Some children fleeing Al-Shabaab seek shelter in Kenya, where they are subsequently revictimized for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (1) Some are transited through Nairobi’s Eastleigh neighborhood, a known trafficking hub, en route to Somalia. (15) Research also found that children in Somalia are trafficked to Saudi Arabia and Djibouti and forced to beg on the streets. (1) Children from minority clan households are uniquely vulnerable to forced recruitment by military groups, including at school. (16)

In 2019, Somalia also recorded the highest number of child abductions by non-state actors in the world. (17) State and non-state armed groups recruited 1,495 children during the reporting period, down from 2,300 in 2018. (17,18) The majority of these violations were attributed to Al-Shabaab, which forcibly recruited children as young as age 8 for combat. (1,17-19) The group continued the practice of forcing communities to “volunteer” children to join its ranks in the Galgadud and Middle Shabelle regions. (1,17-21) Al-Shabaab recruited children or “taxed” families to provide male children to serve as child soldiers. (4,22) These children planted explosive devices, acted as human shields, conducted assassinations and suicide attacks, gathered intelligence, and provided domestic services. Some girls were also forced into sexual servitude. (1,4,22) Moreover, research found that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama’a militia, which to date has not yet integrated into the Somali National Army (SNA), recruited at least 14 children during the reporting period. Additionally, Somalia’s numerous clan militias reportedly recruited children for use in armed conflict. (1,9,20)

The reporting period also saw an increase in grave violations against children linked to government forces, including recruitment and use, killing and maiming, and sexual violence. (17-19,23) Perpetrators included the SNA, the Somali Police Force, and the National Intelligence and Security Agency. Officials also verified child recruitment by Galmudug, Jubaland, and Puntland forces. (18,20) The trend coincided with an escalation in military operations against Al-Shabaab. (17-19,23) Child recruitment is in violation of General Order No. 1, which prohibits military personnel from recruiting and employing child soldiers. (1,20,24)

Protracted violence has reduced access to all basic services, including public education. Seventy-six attacks on schools and hospitals were documented between January and September 2019; the majority (60) were attributed to Al-Shabaab. (17-20,23) State and non-state forces also occupied and damaged schools during the reporting period, further limiting access educational facilities. (18,20,25,26) The limited number of public schools outside of Mogadishu, and high fees charged by private schools, also undercut enrollment rates. (4,16) In 2019, 3 million school-aged children, including 65 percent of girls and 59 percent of boys, did not attend school. (27) The primary enrollment rate for nomadic or pastoralist children was 3.1 percent. (4) Children and youth among these groups are considered at high risk of exploitation or recruitment into armed groups like Al-Shabaab. (4,16)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) has not conducted a standalone survey of child work, child labor, or the worst forms of child labor. Somalia also lacks a country-wide birth registration system, further complicating efforts to identify victims of child labor. (4)

The FGS maintains limited territorial control outside the capital. Al-Shabaab occupied rural areas in south-central Somalia. (4) In other parts of the country, essential governance functions were provided by regional administrations, including the self-declared independent region of Somaliland in the northwest and the federal member state of Puntland in the northeast. (4,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Somalia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

For the first time, the FGS fulfilled the reporting requirements mandated under ILO Convention 182 in 2019. (3,8) The government also submitted letters of intent to the ILO to accede to the Minimum Age Convention and Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict. (8)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Somalia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a prohibition of recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡	Articles 13 and 15 of the General Education Law (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the General Education Law (33)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) finalized a National Labor Code mandating safe and legal work environments for minors. (4,5) As of March 2020, the law was pending ratification in the upper house of Parliament. (6) The Ministry of Women and Human Rights also drafted the Child Rights Bill, which will domesticate into law the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (6,20) The law will protect all children under age 18 from prosecution as an adult and will codify a compulsory education age. (6) Currently, however, the gap between the end of compulsory education and the minimum age for work leaves children age 14 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but may not legally work. (13,33)

It is unclear whether laws issued prior to 1991 are still in effect in Somalia. However, in 2014, Parliament issued a public statement citing some pre-1991 laws, which suggests that the FGS continued to recognize relevant historic laws. (6) Although the Provisional Constitution of 2012 does not provide a minimum age for employment, the pre-1991 Labor Code establishes age 15 as the minimum age for work. (29) Moreover, although the Labor Code establishes age 12 as the minimum age for light work and describes the conditions under which it may be undertaken, it neither determines the activities in which light work may be permitted nor prescribes the number of hours per week for light work. Furthermore, there is no legislation that comprehensively prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children. (29) While the labor code enables the publication of a hazardous works list, MOLSA has the government has not determined by regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (4)

Laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children are not sufficient, because using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. Furthermore, it appears that under Article 405 of the Criminal Code, children involved in prostitution would not be protected from criminal charges. (32) The Penal Code requires extensive updating. Many fines in the Code equal less than $1, which does not serve as an effective deterrent. (32,34)

Both Somaliland and Puntland, which are semiautonomous regions, maintain separate legal systems. (35) Somaliland has criminalized trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, and a draft human trafficking law remains under review. (36,37) Although Puntland State’s 2017 penal and criminal procedure codes reportedly meet international standards, research could not find a publicly available version of these laws. (36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Somalia lacks a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Somali National Police	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (38) The Counter-Trafficking and Organized Crime Unit has six officers. (39)
Ministry of Defense	Operates separately from civilian law enforcement bodies, and leads efforts to combat the use of child recruitment and abduction by Al-Shabaab. (4) Through its Child Protection Unit (CPU), screens Somali National Army (SNA) units for child soldiers. (9,4) Raises awareness of child soldier issues, and implements standard operating procedures on protecting children associated with armed conflict. (11,40,41)
Puntland Security Forces	Investigate and enforce human trafficking laws. (42)
Puntland Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes human trafficking cases. (42)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the lack of a labor inspectorate in Somalia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Somalia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

The Somali National Police remained understaffed and undertrained, and lacked the capacity to investigate or enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor. (4) Research also found that child labor referral mechanisms only address children in armed conflict. (45) In addition, there were reports that in 2019, the Somali National Police recruited and used at least 99 children in police activities. (20,44) Generally, the FGS lacks the capacity and resources to fully implement laws that are technically in force. (4)

Somaliland, Galmudug, and other semiautonomous regions rely on their own police and military forces, some of whom are not answerable to the FGS. (46)

Despite a 2016 general staff order prohibiting the enlistment of children under age 18, reporting confirms SNA recruitment and use of children continued in 2019. (4,17-19) The Defense Ministry's Child Protection Unit (CPU) theoretically prosecutes these violations in the military justice system. (4) However, research found no evidence that the CPU investigated or prosecuted SNA officials who recruited or used child soldiers during the reporting period. (1,4,47) In 2019, state security forces detained at least 257 children, at times in the company of adults, for their alleged association with non-state armed groups. (19-21,48,49) Children who were detained under suspected affiliation with non-state armed groups were sometimes interrogated without legal representation and coerced into signing or recording confessions. Moreover, these children were at times threatened or physically harmed in ways that amount to torture. (21) In addition, although the Provisional Constitution defines a child as anyone under age 18, more than 30 children were given sentences ranging from 8 years to life imprisonment for association with Al-Shabaab. (21,31) Moreover, the Juvenile Justice Law of Puntland defines a child as anyone age 14 and under; consequently, the government detained and issued prison sentences, including life imprisonment, to children over age 14 for their association with armed groups. (21,45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 7. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
CPU, Ministry of Defense	Raises awareness of child soldier issues and works with UNICEF to implement standard operating procedures on protecting children associated with armed conflict. (11,40,41) In 2019, with support from the UN Assistance Mission in Somalia, trained 179 SNA soldiers and officers on screening for and preventing the recruitment of children into armed conflict. Trainees included child protection focal points from various regions, as well as officers at sector headquarters. (4,22) With support from the UN, the African Union Mission to Somalia, and the U.S. Embassy, carried out 6 screening missions that examined more than 1,500 soldiers and resulted in the identification of 4 minors. (22) The CPU established a national Children Associated with Armed Conflict working group (CAACWG). The CPU also coordinated with the Ministry of Women and Human Rights, which oversees an informal child soldier referral system from CPU to NGOs. (4) Throughout the year, CPU developed and disseminated radio and print media content regarding the prevention of child recruitment and conscription in armed conflict. (4,9)
CAACWG	Implements the Child Soldier Action Plan and the Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law. (4,40,41) Co-Chaired by CPU and UNICEF, includes other Ministry of Defense officials, representatives from the Ministry of Women and other relevant ministries, as well as UN officials. (40,48) In 2019, the government revived activities under the CAACWG by holding three meetings in Mogadishu. Discussions covered the implementation of actions plans on eliminating the use of children in armed conflict. (4)
Human Trafficking Task Forces	The FGS, Puntland, and Somaliland maintain different coordinating bodies to combat human trafficking. The Office of the Special Envoy for Children and Migrants' Rights, which includes a Task Force on Human Trafficking and Smuggling, leads FGS anti-trafficking efforts. (22) The Task Force, which is led by the Ministry of Interior and Federal Affairs, took steps to improve coordination across FGS. (50) Separately, Puntland's Counter Trafficking Board leads the region's anti-trafficking efforts. Somaliland's Counter Human Trafficking Agency coordinates the development of legislation and collection of data in the semi-autonomous region. (22)
Somali National Tripartite Labor Committee*	Manages the implementation of the Labor Code as well as the National Employment Policy. An ILO-recognized body, meets quarterly to review progress and has taken on child labor as an area of special concern. (4) In October 2019, held a workshop that resulted in a draft action plan on eradicating child labor in Somalia. (4) The establishment of the MOL-led Somali National Tripartite Labor Committee, and the inclusion of child labor as a special focus, has enabled the ministry to coordinate efforts within the government and between the government and the private sector. (4)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Although Somalia has mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child soldiering, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, and herding livestock.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including limited scope of existing policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Employment Policy†	Provides the Somali National Tripartite Labor Committee with a roadmap for improving labor conditions, including stipulations related to child labor. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor, in consultation with ILO, finalized a macroeconomic analysis of the labor market in Somalia and used the data gathered to inform the policy. (4,9,39,51) The policy was designed with ILO support under a Joint UN Project on Youth Employment in Somalia and was adopted in February 2019. (4,5)
Child Soldier Action Plan	Establishes a strategy for identifying and removing children from SNA ranks through education and monitoring of military camps. (40) In 2012, FGS committed to two UN Action Plans to end grave violations against children, including recruitment and use and killing and maiming. In October 2019, the government committed to a UN Roadmap to expedite the implementation of the two Action Plans. (47,52) The adoption of the roadmap will address grave violations, including recruitment and use. (18,53) In 2019, 1,315 children previously associated with armed groups received UNICEF reintegration support under the roadmap. (44)

Policy	Description
Somalia Social Protection Policy†	Develops and strengthens components of a national social protection system, including safety net programs. Provisions include a guaranteed income floor for vulnerable households, and families with children under age 5. (54-56) The tiered policy is designed to protect the poorest strata of society from sinking into destitution, prevent the moderately poor from sliding into extreme poverty, and promote the livelihoods of at-risk populations. (4)
National Development Plan (2017–2019)†	Broad-based security and poverty reduction policy, with provisions for ending all forms of violence against children, including child labor, and developing and implementing a National Child Labor Policy. Under the National Development Plan's Education Sector Strategic Plan, the Ministry of Education launched a primary school curriculum and established a national secondary school graduation examination. (57,58) In October 2019, the Cabinet of Ministers adopted the National Development Plan for 2020–2024, which replaces the previous iteration. (57,59)
United Nations Strategic Framework (2017–2020)	Establishes a broad strategic framework in support of humanitarian, development, political, and security reform in Somalia. Includes measures to prevent child recruitment, rehabilitate former child soldiers, and mitigate human rights violations, including arbitrary arrest of children. The framework targets 90 percent access to child soldier reintegration services and 70 percent implementation of the 2020 Action Plans on Children Associated with Armed Conflict and Conflict Related Sexual Violence. (60) The government also undertook CPU capacity building through training and enhanced screening measures. (22,26) The framework also seeks to establish a nationwide social protection system, which was operationalized in 2020. (54,55)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period. (58)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (61)

Although the government has some policies that address child soldiers, research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, or domestic work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including in their ability to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Program for Treatment and Handling of Disengaged Combatants	FGS program in coordination with UNICEF that rehabilitates former combatants, emphasizing the specific needs of child combatants and of female combatants and their dependents. (62) Centers, located in Baidoa, Belet Weyne, Kismayo, and Mogadishu, provide accommodation, psychological counseling, education, and vocational training to former combatants. (63) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Program for Treatment and Handling of Disengaged Combatants during the reporting period.
Joint Program on Youth Employment Somalia	Joint program by the Food and Agriculture Organization, ILO, UNDP, UN-Habitat, and UN Industrial Development Organization that seeks to improve sustainable employment opportunities for youth and develop their skills to respond to needs in the labor market. (64) In 2019, coordinated with the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Planning to conduct a labor force survey, resulting in the development of a National Employment Policy. (39,51,65)
Donor-Funded Programs	Programs that aim to improve the resiliency of vulnerable families. The $267 million UNICEF Country Program (2018–2020), implemented with FGS support, aims to ensure safe, equitable, and quality education for children through a child protection framework. (66) In 2019, assisted 1,315 children formerly associated with armed groups through reintegration programs, including family reunification and access to formal and informal education. (44,67) UNICEF also provided more than 34,000 children, nearly half of whom were girls, with access to formal or non-formal education and vocational training during the reporting period. UNICEF also reached 36,000 children with psychosocial support. (67) Moreover, the $600 million WFP Country Strategic Plan (2019–2021) provided both conditional and unconditional food or cash-based food assistance to vulnerable children. (68) In 2019, WFP provided 2 meals per day to 200,000 school children enrolled in its school feeding programs. (69)
Peace Building Fund*	$2 million UN-funded project that supports the prevention of child recruitment and the reintegration of former child soldiers. (52) The project, announced in October 2019 in Baidoa, the capital of the South West State, will supplement SNA child soldier prevention and screening methods. Children identified will be released, rehabilitated, and reintegrated into society. (20,22,52)
ACT to Protect Children Affected by Armed Conflict*†	FGS awareness-raising initiative, launched under the auspices of a global UN advocacy campaign highlighting children in armed conflict. (72) Throughout the year, CPU developed and disseminated radio and print media content regarding the prevention of child recruitment and conscription in armed conflict. (22)

* Program was launched during the reporting period. (22)

† Program was funded partially by the government. (22)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (73)

Somalia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although the FGS implemented programs to address child soldiers and child trafficking, existing programs fail to address the scope of the problem, including street work and forced labor in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Somalia (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2019
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2019
	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Clarify whether the pre-1991 Labor Code is still in effect under the Federal Government of Somalia.	2009 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit child trafficking for the purpose of labor and sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that penalties for the commercial sexual exploitation of children are sufficiently stringent to deter violations.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the law protects children involved in commercial sexual exploitation from criminal charges.	2011 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2009 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the compulsory education age to be commensurate with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that Puntland’s regional laws define a child as anyone under age 18, in accordance with international standards.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that a legal framework on child labor is in place that includes a minimum age for hazardous work; determines the activities in which light work may be permitted and prescribes the number of hours per week for light work; and, in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations, determines the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.	2009 – 2019
Enforcement	Establish a labor inspectorate to investigate, monitor, and enforce laws related to child labor, and include adequate funding, human resources, and training for personnel.	2009 – 2019
	Report information on the training of investigators, as well as the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved in all regions of Somalia.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient training and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict violators of the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2019
	Cease the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Somali Police Force, the National Intelligence and Security Agency, and the Somali National Army, as well as Galmudug, Jubaland, and Puntland forces and all allied militia. Investigate, prosecute, and punish, as appropriate, all commanders who recruit and use children.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that children associated with armed groups are not detained with adults and refer these children to social service providers. Cease the practice of sentencing children to long prison terms for associating with armed groups.	2015 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between the Somali National Police and social welfare services for children engaged in forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2019
	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, and domestic work.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible and safe for all children by removing all armed groups from educational facilities, constructing schools outside Mogadishu, and removing enrollment fees.	2013 – 2019
	Develop programs to address child labor, such as in street work and forced labor in agriculture. Expand existing programs to address the scope of children in armed conflict.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure all social programs are implemented as intended.	2019
	Adopt a country-wide birth registration system to facilitate identification of child labor violations.	2019

In 2019, South Africa made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched the Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons National Policy Framework to help government agencies improve capacity and coordination on combatting trafficking in persons. However, children in South Africa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as the result of human trafficking. Labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties, and social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor. In addition, barriers to education remain, especially among children without proper identification documents and children with disabilities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Africa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as the result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Africa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		87.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (4)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming (6-8)
Industry	Factory work (9)
Services	Domestic work (6)
	Garbage scavenging for food items and recyclable items† (10)
	Food service, activities unknown (2,3,11)
	Street work, including transportation services, vending, and begging (2,3,6,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including gang-related activity (12)
	Use in the production of pornography (13-15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4,15-24)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, food service, street vending, illicit activities, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,11,25)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

South Africa is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking. Children are trafficked from poor rural areas or peripheral townships to urban centers, such as Cape Town, Durban, and Johannesburg. (2,3,11,26)

South Africa

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Girls are mainly victimized for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work, and boys are forced to work in street vending, food service, and begging. (2,3,11,17,27-29) Refugees, orphans, and children with disabilities are often vulnerable to child labor, such as forced begging. (30)

In South Africa, parents at a given school may vote to pass a resolution authorizing the collection of school fees during a given year. (31) The government waives tuition for the poorest 60 percent of students; however, in practice, some families must still pay for uniforms and other school-related expenses, which may affect children's access to education. (9,32,33) In addition, non-resident children in South Africa may be denied access to education for failure to present identity documents such as birth certificates. (33-35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Africa has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 43 of the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA) (31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Regulations on Hazardous Work by Children in South Africa (36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 4–10 of the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (36,37)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 13 of the Constitution; Article 141 of the Children's Amendment Act; Article 48 of the BCEA (37-39)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 141 of the Children's Amendment Act (39)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 141 of the Children's Amendment Act; Chapter 3 of Criminal Law Amendment Act 32 (39,40)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 141 of the Children's Amendment Act (39)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 52 of the Defense Act (41)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 52 of the Defense Act (41)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Chapter 2, Articles 1–5 of the South African Schools Act (42)
Free Public Education	No		Chapter 2, Article 5 and Chapter 4, Article 39 of the South African Schools Act (42)

* No conscription (41)

Article 39 of the South African Schools Act permits any public school to charge fees to ensure a sufficient operating budget if a majority of parents at that school vote to do so at the beginning of the year. (42)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the South African Department of Labor (SADOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
South African Department of Labor (SADOL)	Enforces child labor laws by conducting inspections of worksites and operates 127 labor centers throughout the country where complaints may be lodged. (8,43) Refers victims to social workers and reports violations to the South African Police Service (SAPS) for further investigation and to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development for prosecution. (8,44,45) Convenes the Provincial Child Labor Intersectoral Committee and coordinates child labor programs. (8)
South African Police Service (SAPS)	Enforces the legislative mandate under the Children's Act to investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (46,47) Through its Human Trafficking Desk, monitors and evaluates police efforts to investigate human trafficking crimes, trains investigators, and refers human trafficking cases to provincial SAPS units. (48) Operates victim-friendly rooms in police stations across the country. (49)
South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. (1) Through its Children's Court, focuses on litigation involving children accused of or victimized by crimes, and cases involving child abuse, abandonment, and neglect. (50)
National Prosecution Authority (NPA)	Prosecutes criminal cases, including cases of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. (48,51)
Department of Social Development (DSD)	Provides child protection and social services to vulnerable children, including victims of human trafficking. (1) Manages shelters for children living and working on the streets. (52)

In November 2019, in a joint operation by SADOL's Inspection and Enforcement Services branch in Gauteng and the South African Police Service (SAPS), authorities arrested seven Chinese nationals—four men and three women—after an anonymous tip that they were trafficking illegal immigrants and subjecting them to forced labor. Authorities found 91 Malawian nationals, 37 of whom were minors. The accused face charges including human trafficking, debt bondage, kidnapping, and labor law violations. (53)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SADOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of South Africa’s workforce, which includes more than 22 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, South Africa would employ about 1,479 inspectors. (54,55)

Sources indicate that the inspectorate has limited resources to carry out its mandates. Although the inspectorate spent approximately $384,000 on inspection and enforcement training in 2019, SADOL acknowledges that this is insufficient to allow its inspectors to specialize in sectors or occupations. (8) Some labor inspectors encounter difficulties in accessing farms due to concerns for their safety or fear of entering private property. (1) The government did not provide information for inclusion in this report on the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites or penalties imposed and collected.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators which hindered the number of convictions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

Research indicates that, despite assistance from the NGO community, SAPS had difficulties properly identifying victims of human trafficking during law enforcement activities. Due to improper screening, police sometimes arrested child trafficking victims instead of referring them to social services for assistance. (11) In addition, there were no inspectors exclusively dedicated to child labor law inspections. The number of inspectors was insufficient to carry out inspections, as was a lack of training to identify and investigate child labor trafficking, according conversations with NGOs and statutory bodies. (9)

On February 24, 2020, South Africa’s Commission for Conciliation, Mediation, and Arbitration (CCMA) handed down a historic arbitration award, ordering a supermarket franchisee to pay $750,000 to a group of 565 workers at 8 of his 10 locations across South Africa. This high-profile case, the result of a vigorous effort by labor inspectors, comes at the same time that prosecutors are adding enhanced criminal charges against seven Chinese principals of a company accused in January 2020 of trafficking workers into South Africa. (53) It is unknown whether either of these cases involved child victims.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Implementation Committee on Child Labor	Monitors and supports advocacy and awareness raising, mainstreaming of child labor into government policies, and the implementation of child labor programs, legislation, and enforcement. (1) Chaired by SADOL, members include representatives from commercial agriculture, trade unions, and government agencies, including SAPS. (48) Includes provincial-level child labor coordinating structures. (1) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken by the committee during the reporting period.
Provincial Child Labor Inter-sectoral Support Groups	Facilitate the collection of data and prevention of all types of child labor at the provincial level. Established by SADOL and managed by child labor coordinators in each province; members include the SADOL Head Office, SADOL Provincial Child Labor Coordinators, the Department of Justice and Constitutional Development, the NPA, the Department of Home Affairs (DHA), DSD, the Department of Education, NGOs, and labor federations. (48) The national and provincial task teams lack training on human trafficking, resulting in unlawful arrests and detentions of human trafficking victims. (56)
National Trafficking in Persons Task Team	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts, including overseeing strategy, training, and policy decisions made at the provincial level in Gauteng, Mpumalanga, KwaZulu-Natal, Western Cape, Limpopo, and Eastern Cape. Led by NPA's Sexual Offenses and Community Affairs Unit and DOJ's Victim Support Directorate, members include SADOL, DSD, and DHA, as well as other representatives of national law enforcement. (9) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken by the task team during the reporting period.

There has been a significant increase in anti-labor trafficking coordination, including the SADOL's newly instituted required trafficking in persons training and a trafficking in persons manual. This is a direct result of the Government of South Africa's coordination efforts to encourage the SADOL to demonstrate leadership on trafficking in persons. (57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Programme of Action for South Africa, Phase IV (2017–2021)	Serves as the primary policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in South Africa. (1) Promotes government activities by outlining the mandate of each agency to combat child labor. (48,58) Provides a reciprocal referral mechanism through which SAPS informs SADOL of suspected child labor cases. (8) Lead agencies identified in the program include Departments of Labor, Basic Education, Justice and Constitutional Development, Social Development, and Water and Sanitation; SAPS; the National Prosecuting Authority; and Statistics SA. (1,58) In 2019, the government provided food packages to child-headed households and poverty-stricken families, and antiretroviral medicine to those living with HIV/AIDS. (8) The policy does not include a timeframe to meet identifiable benchmarks or to assess the progress and adequacy of implementation efforts.
Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons National Policy Framework†	Outlines the development of new procedures and training programs for police and labor inspectors on human trafficking for labor exploitation, including child labor. Enhances social assistance programs to address the needs of child victims of human trafficking, including psychological and social support, food and shelter, school and community reintegration, and placement and protection in child and youth care centers. (59) The plan is set to be updated every 3 years (60)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the South African Education Action Plan or the National Development Plan. (61,62)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Support Grant†	Led by DSD and the South African Social Security Agency, provides monthly direct cash transfers to primary caregivers who have vulnerable children. Helps alleviate economic pressures and lower the cost of raising a child. (1,48) In 2019, the government expanded funding for the Child Support Grant. To date, approximately 12.5 million children have benefited from the program. (8,9,63)
Foster Care Grants†	Encourages children in the foster care system to remain in school as a preventive technique to combat child labor. The government continued the program in 2019 and, to date, about 386,000 children have benefited from the Foster Care Grant. (8,9,63)
Food Relief Program†	DSD and South African Social Security Agency program that provides food assistance to vulnerable and orphaned children, as well as child-headed households with insufficient income. (64,65) The government continued the program in 2019. To date, the program has financially supported 140 community nutrition development centers and provided food to half a million people. (63) There is also a National School Nutrition Program that provides school meals to vulnerable primary and secondary school children from poor families. (1,66,67) The government continued the program in 2019. To date, approximately 88 percent of vulnerable children have benefited from this program. (8,9,63)
Shelters and Care Centers†	DSD program that funds 14 shelters and oversees 17 NGO-operated temporary safe care centers for victims of abuse and human trafficking, including children. (3)
Awareness-raising Campaigns†	Conduct training on anti-human trafficking initiatives and regulations governing social services providers. (9) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken to implement this program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of South Africa

Although South Africa has programs that target child labor, and data collected and reported by the Government of South Africa state that child labor is decreasing, the scope and reach of social programs are insufficient to address the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (68)

Sources indicate that around 1.8 million children who are most in need of the Child Support Grant have reported difficulties in accessing required application documents. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Africa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2019
	Publish information on the number of child labor inspections conducted at worksites and penalties imposed and collected.	2018 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that sufficient resources and training are provided to the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections, including in sectors in which child labor is known to occur; and publish information about penalties on the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that law enforcement properly identify victims of the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that all coordination bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates, which includes allocating funding for permanent staff and training.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Include a timeframe and benchmarks in the National Child Labor Programme of Action for South Africa to properly monitor and assess the progress of efforts to combat child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the South African Education Action Plan and the National Development Plan.	2013 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Ensure that refugees and children with disabilities have equal access to education and make additional efforts to provide all children with birth documentation.	2016 – 2019
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure access to education for all children by eliminating school-related fees for basic education.	2009 – 2019
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2010 – 2019

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2019, South Sudan is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite initiatives to address child labor, South Sudan is receiving an assessment of no advancement because it demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. State forces continued to recruit children, sometimes forcibly, to fight opposition groups. Otherwise, the government made efforts by signing a UN comprehensive action plan to end grave violations against children, and integrating a unit on child protection issues into the army's 2019 civic education curriculum. Children in South Sudan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and cattle herding. The government did not hold perpetrators of child labor accountable and has yet to ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. In addition, police continued to indiscriminately arrest and imprison children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation rather than treating them as victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Sudan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and cattle herding. (1-9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Sudan.

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,6,9)
	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (2,9,11-15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The 2018 Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS) mandates the release and reintegration of child soldiers by all armed groups. (13,25) During the reporting period, signatories to the R-ARCSS recommitted to a UN Action Plan to end and prevent all grave violations against children, including recruitment and use in armed conflict. (26) Despite this commitment, evidence suggests that the South Sudan People’s Defense Force (SSPDF) continued to forcibly recruit children through July 2019. (23) The government continued to participate in child soldier release and reintegration ceremonies, but did not hold SSPDF officers criminally accountable for the unlawful recruitment and use of children. (24)

Since the start of the conflict in December 2013, government and opposition forces have recruited more than 19,000 child soldiers and children associated with armed forces and groups. (13,27) A decrease in hostilities led to a reduction in active recruitment, including of children. The number of grave violations fell significantly in the second half of the reporting period, as parties to the R-ARCSS began to observe a ceasefire. (28,29) Many former child combatants have since been released or are no longer classified as children. (13,30) Nevertheless, observers documented systematic recruitment of children through July 2019. Both government and non-state armed groups recruited and use children as young as age 10, sometimes forcibly. (23) Recruitment, use, and re-recruitment of children were documented throughout the country. (13,18,20,23,29,31) Perpetrators included the national army of South Sudan—the South Sudan People’s Defense Forces (SSPDF), previously known as Sudan People’s Liberation Army (SPLA), and the Taban Deng-allied SSPDF—and opposition groups, including the pro-Machar Sudan People’s Liberation Army-In Opposition (SPLA-IO), the National Salvation Front-Khalid Butrus (NAS-KhB), and the South Sudan National Liberation Movement (SSNLM). (29) In some instances, local commissioners carried out recruitment drives on behalf of the state National Security Service and the SSPDF. (23,31,32) In Warrap, elements of South Sudan’s National Security Services and SSPDF leveraged a cattle extortion scheme to procure children and young men of fighting age. Non-signatories to the ceasefire, including Paul Malong’s South Sudan United Front and the National Salvation Front (NAS), also forcibly abducted children from their homes, schools, and communities. (13,21,23,30,31)

Additional reporting indicates that children were subjected to rape and sexual slavery by armed elements; some were forced to serve as “wives” of commanders and members of armed groups. (13,22) Although some children joined voluntarily, they were later unable to leave the groups at will. (9,23,33) Children affiliated with non-state armed groups performed active combat roles, perpetrated violence against civilians, and recruited other children. They also collected firewood, manned checkpoints, and carried out other support roles, including as cooks, porters, spies, and bodyguards to senior officers. (13,18,33)

An even greater number of children fight as part of local community defense forces. (15) Children abducted by armed pastoralists may be forcibly incorporated into heavily militarized cattle rustling networks. Younger children in these communities tend smaller livestock, while teenagers serve as auxiliaries for armed pastoralists or self-defense groups. (34,35) Among certain tribes, cattle raiding marks a rite of passage to adulthood. (34,35)

Across South Sudan, conflict and chronic underfunding of the education sector remains a serious barrier to accessing education. Ongoing fighting impaired the government’s ability to deliver aid, provide education, and address the worst forms of child labor. (13,36) At least 2.2 million children are not receiving an education, one of the highest out-of-school rates in the world. (36) Only an estimated 1 in 13 children will complete a full cycle of primary education if the current situation persists. (7,20) Until a payment of arrears in December 2019, public school teachers had not received salary payments in months, leading to low morale and frequent absenteeism. (13) In addition to the abduction and use of children, ongoing military operations in conflict-affected areas have forced teachers to flee. Armed groups, including government forces, continue to occupy schools in contested areas, although school occupations decreased significantly during the reporting period. (13) Government forces occupied at least two schools at the close of the reporting period. (37)

Although the Constitution and the Child Act provide for free primary education, in practice, many families must contribute school fees to pay teacher salaries and other related costs, which may be prohibitive. (20,36,38) Additionally, children in pastoralist communities generally lack access to schools, materials, or teachers. (34)

Since the onset of conflict in 2013, over 4.3 million people have been internally displaced or have fled the country, and UNICEF has registered 11,731 unaccompanied minors, who are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,8,18,20) As South Sudan has never conducted a comprehensive child labor survey, information about sectors in which child labor occurs is unavailable. (13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Sudan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 12 of the Labour Act; Article 25(3) of the Child Act (16,17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 12 and 13 of the Labour Act; Articles 22(3), 24(1), and 25(1) of the Child Act (16,17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 25(2) of the Child Act (16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10(1) and 13(2)(a) of the Labour Act; Articles 277–279 of the Penal Code; Article 13 of the Constitution (17-19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 13(2) of the Labour Act; Article 22(3)(b) of the Child Act; Articles 276 and 278–282 of the Penal Code (16-18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 13(2)(b) of the Labour Act; Articles 22(3)(c)–(d), 22(4), and 25(2)(m) of the Child Act; Articles 258 and 276 of the Penal Code (16-18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 13(2)(c) of the Labour Act; Article 24(1) of the Child Act; Article 383(3)(d) of the Penal Code (16-18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Section 22 of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (16,20)

South Sudan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Sections 20, 22(2) and (7) of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (16,20)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 31(1) of the Child Act (16)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13	Article 9.1(b) of the General Education Act; Article 14(1) of the Child Act (16,21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6(a) of the General Education Act; Article 13(4)(b) of the Labour Code; Article 14(1) of the Child Act; Article 29.2 of the Constitution (16,17,19,21)

The Labour Act, published in 2018, appears to have two contradictory standards for prohibiting children from engaging in hazardous work: Articles 12(6) and 13 both state that hazardous work is prohibited for children under the age of 18, in line with international standards. However, by contrast, Article 12(2) also states that children under the age of 14 shall not be permitted to work “in the worst forms of child labor;” and Section 13(1) equates “the worst forms of child labor” with hazardous work, suggesting that only children under the age of 14 are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work. (39) Another key obstacle is a lack of regulations governing the Labour Act’s implementation. In accordance with the Labour Act, the Ministry of Labor, Public Service and Human Resource Development (MOL) must draft and issue regulations to implement key elements related to child labor, including the number of hours and conditions for light work, the exceptions under which 16-year-old children may perform hazardous work, and a complete hazardous work list. (9,39) Drafting regulations will require cooperation between the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Justice. (13)

Children are required to attend school only until age 13. This standard makes children between ages 13 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school but are also not legally permitted to work. (13,39,44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Public Service and Human Resource Development (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, identifies child labor violations, and conducts workplace inspections. (2,16,17,22)
Ministry of Gender, Child, and Social Welfare	Coordinates activities on children’s rights and acts as the focal ministry for child protection. (2)
South Sudan’s People’s Defense Forces (SSPDF) Directorate for Child Protection	Prevents the recruitment of children into the army, monitors barracks, identifies child soldiers and assists with their release, investigates allegations of child soldiering, and provides training on children’s rights to child protection officers and members of SSPDF. Headed by a Brigadier General, serves as liaison between SSPDF and the international community. (2)
Ministry of Interior’s South Sudan National Police Services	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2)
Ministry of Justice	Oversees all courts and prosecutes violations, including those related to child labor. (2)

In keeping with its commitment to implement the UN Action Plan to end grave violations against children, a unit on child protection issues was integrated into the army’s 2019 civic education curriculum. (30) Additionally, the SSPDF broke ground on a new UNMISS-funded child protection office at SSPDF headquarters in Bilpam. (45)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Labor Inspectorate that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the inspectorate’s budget.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Ministry of Labor lacked sufficient resources to fulfill its mandate. (13,44) The MOL’s entire 2019/20 budget amounted to $163,000, leaving scant funding for inspections. (13) While the Labor Inspectorate conducted 3-4 daily worksite inspections during the reporting period, a significant increase from the previous year, detected violations were not referred to legal authorities as required by law. (13,38) Although inspectors may issue a compliance notice to violators, regulations do not specify penalties for infractions. Moreover, Labor Inspectorate staff were paid only sporadically, incentivizing some inspectors to pocket undocumented “fines.” (13) There was also a high level of absenteeism among ministry staff, and civil servants in nearly every ministry were not paid for several months, hindering the Labor Inspectorate’s ability to enforce child labor laws. (9,13) Although statistics on the number of people in South Sudan’s labor force are unavailable, it is unlikely that 13 labor inspectors are sufficient to address the scope of the country’s child labor problem. (13,47,48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including failure to prosecute perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

South Sudan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

South Sudan’s justice system faces enormous challenges, such as low capacity, insufficient funding, interference by the government and the SSPDF, insufficient training for law enforcement personnel, and a scarcity of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys. (13,18,51) Research indicates that prosecutors and law enforcement officials are not familiar with legal statutes regarding the worst forms of child labor. (9,18) As a result, police continued to indiscriminately arrest and imprison children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation rather than treating them as victims. (13,18) The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

The United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS) conducted a number of investigations into reports of children in armed groups, but it is unknown how many total investigations were completed. (9) Although both the 2017 Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities and the August 2013 Punitive Order commit the SSPDF to hold its military officers accountable for the recruitment or use of children, the government has neither investigated nor prosecuted officers who allegedly committed such crimes. (15,18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all relevant sectors.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Taskforce on Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons*	Established in December 2019 with support from IOM, objectives include ratification of the Palermo Protocol and enactment of South Sudan’s migration policy, which is currently in draft form. Members of the task force include the Ministry of Justice (co-chair), Ministry of Interior (co-chair), the National Security Service – Internal Security Bureau (NSS-ISB), Ministry of Labor, and the Ministry of Child, Gender, and Social Welfare. (15)
South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC)	Oversees and coordinates all disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration activities with the assistance of UN bodies by convening regular meetings with Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) stakeholders. (27) In 2019, SPLA-IO and South Sudan Opposition Alliance (SSOA) joined the commission, along with parties to Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS). (2) Responsible for the negotiation of the release, screening, and registration of child soldiers; reunification with family when possible; and educational placement or vocational training. (4) In 2019, facilitated DDR ceremonies resulting in the release and reintegration of 580 children. (2) As part of the implementation of the peace agreement, the NDDRC received an additional allocation of $2 million from the government of South Sudan for DDR activities through the National Pre-Transitional Committee (NPTC). (2)
UN Country Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting (CTFMR)	Charged with screening and releasing all children associated with armed groups across the country, the CTFMR is co-chaired by UNICEF and leads child protection awareness and sensitization efforts within SSPDF. (2,15,28) The CTFMR formed a Joint Verification Committee in April 2019, consisting of SSPDF, Pro-Machar SPLA-IO, SSOA, the Taban Deng-allied SSPDF, NDDRC, UNMISS, and UNICEF. (29) The committee conducted child protection training for UNMISS personnel, and mobile units were deployed to remote areas and IDP camps to provide additional monitoring and verification training. Between July and December 2019, CTFMR verified 74 grave violations against 73 children. (2,30) As of February 2020, provided sensitization training to over 5,000 members of armed forces and groups, including government security forces, pro-Machar SPLA-IO forces, and SSOA forces. (31,32) Additionally, UNICEF serves as co-chair of the UN Country Task Force for Monitoring and Reporting (CTFMR), which reports on grave violations affecting children in armed conflict. Under this framework, UNICEF coordinated the release of former child combatants in Unity, Western Equatoria, Central Equatoria, Jonglei, and Western Bahr el Ghazal states, along with the UNMISS Child Protection Unit and NDDRC. (33)
Ceasefire and Transitional Security Arrangements Monitoring and Verification Mechanism (CTSAMVM)	Monitors compliance of R-ARCSS parties through its 12 Monitoring and Verification Teams (MVTs), which are located in conflict-affected regions of South Sudan. MVT units report all violations, including recruitment of child soldiers, to CTSAMVM headquarters in Juba. The mechanism supports NDDRC’s mandate of reintegrating former child soldiers and children associated with armed groups into civilian life. (2,34) In 2019, assisted NDDRC in identifying and securing the release of at least 580 child soldiers. (2)

*Mechanism was established during the reporting period.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Although the government has the South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC) to coordinate efforts to address children in armed conflict, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, as the National Steering Committee on Child Labor has not been active since it was first constituted in 2012. (9,13) It is unclear what proportion of the NDDRC's 2019 budget will be dedicated to demobilizing and reintegrating child soldiers. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation of relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS) (2018)	Replaces all components of the 2015 Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan, including the Joint Action Plan with the UN to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers, and reaffirms commitments made under the 2017 Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities. (35,36) Establishes the structure of a Revitalized Transitional Government of National Unity and outlines actions to be taken by signatories, including prohibiting the recruitment and use of child soldiers by armed forces or militias, and stipulates that all civilian areas, including schools, shall be immediately demilitarized. (35) Although the release of some child soldiers occurred in 2019, the signatories continued to recruit or re-recruit children during the reporting period. (2,14)
General Education Strategic Plan (2017–2022)	Aims to improve access and quality of education by through grants and cash transfers to girls in upper primary and secondary schools, as well as payment of teachers' salaries. The Ministry of Education's Back to Learning program, devised under the strategy, served 1,258,244 children in 2019, and was scheduled to expand into additional states in 2020. (37,38)
Comprehensive Action Plan to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children in South Sudan†	In 2019, all signatories to the R-ARCSS signed the Comprehensive Action Plan to End & Prevent All Grave Violations Against Children. (39) The Action Plan, which applies to all state and non-state groups, came into force under the February 2020 transitional government. Parties to the commitment include the SSPF and Riek Machar's SPLA-IO, which were listed for killing and maiming, abduction of children, and child recruitment and use in armed conflict, as well as the South Sudan Opposition Alliance. (39) It is designed to prevent and mitigate grave violations against children, including the recruitment of child soldiers and attacks on schools. (39) Drafting process was supported by the United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS) and UNICEF, in collaboration with SSPDF. In February 2019, the Defense Minister announced SSPDF would integrate the Action Plan into its Civic Education unit, which it did in January 2020. (40,41)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

South Sudan's education sector is largely donor-subsidized, and sufficient funding was not allocated for the full five-year period of the General Education Strategic Plan. (9,58)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Joint Program for Recovery and Resilience	Joint agreement between donors, USAID, UN agencies, local leaders, and NGOs that aims to re-establish access to basic services, including psycho-social support, education, and economic alternatives for children separated from armed groups. (42-44) The Partnership for Recovery and Resilience (PfRR) was inaugurated in Yambio in 2018, and programs in Torit, Wau, and Aweil were launched during the reporting period. (45) In December 2019, more than 200 members of the PfRR gathered in Juba to review progress and expand resilience and capacity-building throughout South Sudan. By 2020, aims to complete construction of seven primary schools; provide learning and teaching materials to all primary schools in Gbudue State; and ensure 100 percent of children associated with armed groups are demobilized and reintegrated into their communities. (46)

Program	Description
UNICEF and Donor Funded Programs	Programs to improve educational access in areas affected by conflict. Includes: Integrated Essential Emergency Education Services (IEEES), a USAID-funded program that supported children at risk for being recruited into armed groups; and Back to Learning (BTL), a State Ministry of Education, Gender, and Social Welfare-administered, UNICEF-funded program in Yambio and Bentiu which aims to address educational needs in conflict-affected areas and insecure states. BTL reached 1,258,244 children between 2015 and 2019, and the program is set to expand into other states in 2020, with a focus on serving girls and pastoralist communities. (38) IEEES, meanwhile, enrolled 615,840 children out of a target of 729,000 during the reporting period; rehabilitated or established 644 temporary learning spaces; and provided 615,840 children (41 percent girls) with learning materials. The program also trained an additional 5,025 teachers (20 percent female) in teaching methodologies. (31,38) In the Upper Nile region, 365 individuals from Parent Teacher Associations/ School Management Committees, Child Protection Networks, Child Friendly Space facilitators were trained on providing psycho-social skills, life skills, and peace building activities. (47) As of August 2019, UNICEF had trained 4,517 teachers on education-in-emergencies pedagogy. UNICEF also provided early learning, pre-primary, primary or secondary education to 598,518 children, 42 percent of whom were girls. (31) The organization delivered psychosocial support services to 127,000 children. (31)
Dallaire Initiative (2018–2021)	$2.2 million project funded by Romeo Dallaire Child Soldiers Initiative. Aims to train 1,200 South Sudanese soldiers, police, and prison personnel on combating the use of children in armed conflict through behavior change. (50) Research was unable to establish if the project was active during the reporting period.
Alternative Education System	Aims to improve literacy and provide out-of-school populations an alternative to formal education. Includes: the Accelerated Learning Program (ALP) targeting older teens; Community Girls' Schools (CGS) located in closer proximity to rural communities; and the Pastoralist Education Program (PEP) targeting children and adults in pastoral areas. (37)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	U.S. Department of Labor-funded project (2016–2022) implemented by ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. (48) Completed work on a three-country study of forced child labor in conflict zones, due to be published in 2020. (49) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9, 18)

Although South Sudan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering. In addition, the reintegration and rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are insufficient to meet the existing needs. (9,20,61,68)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Sudan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the compulsory education age is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the worst forms of child labor are prohibited for all children under age 18 by law.	2017 – 2019
	Issue, by national law or regulation, a complete list of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure labor regulations specify monetary penalties for all labor infractions, and that specified penalties are high enough to serve as a deterrent.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2016 – 2019
	Provide sufficient human and financial resources to ensure labor inspectors carry out routine inspections, including targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to high-risk sectors and patterns of serious incidents; that detected violations are reported, as required by law; and labor inspectorate staff are paid at regular intervals.	2012 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish the number of criminal investigations conducted, and prosecute all perpetrators of child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Investigate, prosecute, and/or impose penalties on all parties responsible for the recruitment or use of children in armed conflict, and ensure penalties are sufficiently high to deter future offenders.	2013 – 2019
	Establish referral mechanisms between criminal law enforcement agencies and social services providers for victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that prosecutors and law enforcement officials are familiar with the prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, are trained in implementing all laws related to child labor, and do not treat victims of commercial sexual exploitation as offenders.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that the Child Act's minimum age of 18 years for voluntary military recruitment is enforced by ending all recruitment and use of children under age 18 by the South Sudan Peoples' Defense Forces (SSPDF), the Sudan Peoples' Liberation Movement/Army in Opposition (SPLA-IO), or associated militias.	2012 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that policies, such as the Joint Action Plan to Prevent the Use of Child Soldiers, Article 2.1.10 of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in South Sudan, and the General Education Strategic Plan, are adequately funded and fully implemented.	2012 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey, including research to determine the activities carried out by children, to inform policies and social programs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that children complete their primary education by resuming payment of teachers' salaries and subsidizing other school-related costs, and by withdrawing government forces from occupied schools.	2014 – 2019
	Improve access to education by addressing the lack of school infrastructure, including for pastoralist children; lessening the impact of food insecurity; and registering all children at birth.	2012 – 2019
	Increase the scope of social programs to reach more children at risk of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering.	2012 – 2019
	Cooperate with child protection agencies, pursuant to Article 2.1.10 of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in South Sudan, to disarm, immediately release children in armed groups, and transfer them to appropriate social services providers. Ensure that the rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are sufficient.	2014 – 2019

In 2019, Sri Lanka made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government significantly increased the budget for the labor inspectorate and increased the number of labor inspectors. The Sri Lanka Police also took action to investigate four cases involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children. In addition, the government approved the National Child Protection Policy as a measure to reduce child sex tourism. However, children in Sri Lanka engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Sri Lanka's hazardous work list is not comprehensive because it does not include domestic work. In addition, the labor inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties for labor law violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sri Lanka engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sri Lanka.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	0.8 (28,515)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	0.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Child Activity Survey (CAS), 2016. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including raising livestock (5-8)
	Fishing, including deep sea fishing,† processing fish, and selling fish (2,6-10)
Industry	Manufacturing, including textiles and garments, and food processing (6,8,11)
	Mining† and construction† (2,6,8,11,12)
Services	Domestic work (2,5,6,8)
	Vending, in stores and on the streets, transportation, and begging (2,5,6,8,9)
	Work in hotels, restaurants, and offices (6,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,5,13-17)
	Forced labor in domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,5)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (5,11,18,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The 2016 Child Activity Survey's definition of child labor does not align with international standards because children ages 5–11 working less than 15 hours per week and children ages 12–14 working less than 25 hours per week in agriculture are not counted as child laborers. These issues may have led to an underestimation of the population of children in child labor in the Child Activity Survey. (6) The ILO and an NGO documented several cases of debt distress among workers at private, smallholding tea estates, which increased the risk of child labor in the tea sector. (2) Debt distress can be linked to debts that workers owed to the estate for housing and accommodating their families. (20,21) There are reports of children subjected to child trafficking internally, including from tea estates, to perform domestic work in Colombo. In addition, child domestic workers are subjected to sexual, physical, and psychological abuse, non-payment of wages, and restrictions on movement. (1,5) Children, predominantly boys, are also forced into commercial sexual exploitation in tourist areas as part of the sex tourism industry, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3,17) In 2018, the ILO conducted a rapid assessment of the extent of commercial sexual exploitation of children in the coastal areas and found that most of the children were ages 15–17. According to the Sri Lankan Department of Labor, children living in coastal and agricultural areas, mining areas, and firewood-producing areas were vulnerable to child labor. (2)

Sri Lanka

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the government provides free, compulsory education to all schoolchildren, some children in rural areas face barriers to accessing education, including difficulties in traveling to school in some regions and an inadequate number of teachers. (2,5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sri Lanka has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2019, Sri Lanka ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention (C. 29), which requires governments to adopt new measures to prevent all forms of forced labor. (17,22)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Sri Lanka’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including protections for children engaged in domestic work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Sections 7, 9, 13, and 34 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 20A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (23,24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 358A, 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 286A, 360B, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (25)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 288, 288A, 288B, and 360C of the Penal Code (25)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section 2(xviii) of the Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (23,24)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		358(1)(d) of the Penal Code; Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section 2(xviii) of the Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (23-25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 43 of the Education Ordinance; Compulsory Attendance of Children at Schools Regulation No. 1 of 2015 (26,27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 47 of the Education Ordinance (26)

* No conscription (28)

The minimum working age is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (2, 17, 23, 26, 27) The hazardous work list is not comprehensive because it does not include domestic work, in which there is evidence that children are subject to abuse. (1)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor in the Ministry of Skill Development, Employment and Labor Relations	Formerly the Ministry of Labor, Trade Union Relations, and Social Empowerment. Enforces labor law in relation to the employment of children and young persons. (2) Receives public complaints of child labor lodged in national and district-level offices. Receives complaints from other state organizations, including from the National Child Protection Authority. (2) Conducts special investigations in relation to child labor and hazardous labor, and takes legal action as necessary. (2)
Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police	Enforces laws on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. (5,29) Also supervises the NCPA Special Police Investigation Unit, which has approximately 40 police officers who investigate complaints involving children, including complaints of child labor. (2,5,10)
National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) Special Police Investigation Unit	Investigates complaints involving children, including unlawful child labor. (5,30) Along with the Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police, receives complaints on commercial sexual exploitation and the use of children in illicit activities. (2) Has approximately 300 child protection officers based in the districts who are tasked with preventing child exploitation and protecting victims. (2,5,29)
Department of Probation and Child Care Services	Coordinates services for child victims of forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation who have been referred by the police and the court. (5)

Several ministries, departments, and agencies have legal authority for the enforcement of criminal laws against child labor. The National Child Protection Authority (NCPA), the Criminal Investigations Department of the Sri Lankan Police, and the Attorney General's Department are responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws against child trafficking and forced child labor. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the labor inspectorate's lack of authority to assess penalties.

In 2019, the government substantially increased funding for the labor inspectorate, including allocating district offices with at least one vehicle with fuel for inspection purposes. The government employed 679 officers who can engage in child labor inspections. (2) Labor inspectors attached to the Women’s and Children’s Division of the Department of Labor are dedicated to inspecting child labor. The number of labor inspectors is sufficient for the size of Sri Lanka’s workforce, according to ILO’s technical advice and the Sri Lanka Department of Labor. (2) However, reports indicate that the labor inspectorate did not have sufficient staffing to carry out inspections, especially inspections of factories in the northern and eastern provinces. During the reporting period, the Department of Labor received 145 child labor complaints from the NCPA child helpline, of which 119 were investigated. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of information regarding violations found.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

The government did not provide information on number of violations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, or penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report.

NGOs report that investigators did not have adequate facilities or human resources to carry out investigations. Investigators lacked transportation facilities, and the Sri Lankan Police lack facilities to record evidence. (2,5,31)

Although the government publishes some crime statistics, the Sri Lankan Police do not report cases investigated specific to forced child labor, child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, child soldiering, and the use of children in illicit activities. (2,32)

In 2019, four new sex trafficking cases involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children were reported. The Crimes Division of the Sri Lanka Police is investigating the cases. (16) The Department of Labor has also referred eight cases for prosecution stemming from investigations. Seven cases involving child labor crimes were concluded in the courts. (2) Although isolated reports alleged that government officials were complicit in child trafficking at a state-run orphanage, the government did not initiate investigations into these cases during the reporting period. Research also indicates some victims of child trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation may be penalized for prostitution and other offenses rather than treated as victims. (33)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to eliminate child labor, including the implementation of the National Policy on Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka. Chaired by the Secretary of the Ministry of Skills Development, Employer and Labor Relations, includes representatives from key government agencies, employer and workers' organizations, ILO, UNICEF, and NGOs. (2,5,34) During the reporting period, National Steering Committee working groups met regularly and took actions to implement strategies to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Steering Committee met once and approved a national-level awareness program, which includes a poster campaign to schools and a media awareness-raising campaign for the World Day Against Child Labor. (2)
NCPA	Coordinates and monitors activities related to the protection of children, including activities to combat child labor. Consults with relevant government ministries, local governments, employers, and NGOs, and recommends policies and actions to prevent and protect children from abuse and exploitation. (34)
National Anti-Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates inter-agency efforts to address all human trafficking issues, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes representatives from a range of government agencies, including the Ministry of Social Services, Ministry of Women and Child Affairs, Department of Labor, NCPA, Department of Probation and Child Care, Police Criminal Division, and Bureau for the Prevention of Abuse to Women and Children. (35,36) Met monthly during the reporting period to share information and best practices. (16)
Child Development Committees	Coordinate activities and exchange information among child protection officers, police, and labor, education, and health officials at the village, division, and district levels. Function in 25 districts and 313 divisions. (5)

During the reporting period, the ILO completed a study on coordination mechanisms among ministries and departments. The study's findings show greater cooperation at village and divisional levels and includes recommendations to further strengthen coordination among all agencies. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka	Aims to mainstream child labor issues into national development policies, increase the minimum age for employment, promote the implementation of hazardous work regulations, strengthen capacity to enforce child labor laws, and maintain a complaint procedure. (35) This policy was active during the reporting period. (2)
National Child Protection Policy†	Established by NCPA as a measure to reduce child sex tourism in Sri Lanka. (2)
National Strategic Plan to Monitor and Combat Human Trafficking (2015–2019)	Sought to combat human trafficking by raising stakeholder awareness, improving victim protection services, increasing the prosecution of human trafficking cases, and conducting research and data collection. Also sought to improve coordination among the Anti-Trafficking Task Force members. (36) This policy was active during the reporting period. (33)

Policy	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2018–2022)	Details the priorities and outcomes required to make progress toward the goal of decent work for all. Identifies key areas of work for the eradication of child labor by 2022, including operationalizing the child labor free zone model in all districts, expanding the inspection system to cover child labor in the informal sector; raising the minimum age for employment to 16 years, revising regulations on hazardous child labor; improving the complaints and referral mechanisms, and regularly collecting data on child labor. (37) This policy was active during the reporting period. (2)

† The policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (5,38-40)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Skill Development, Employment and Labor Relations and the Department of Labor began implementing the draft Action Plan for the Elimination of Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2022, by assigning activities and responsibilities to the appropriate ministries. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors in which child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Free Zone Model†	Local government initiatives that seek to eliminate child labor through the identification of children engaged in child labor; a rehabilitation program, assistance to families of children at risk of engaging in child labor; and an awareness-raising campaign. Operated by the district secretariats, with assistance from the Department of Labor, and with technical and financial support from the ILO. (2,11) During the reporting period, developed Child Labor Free Zone Model Guidelines. (2)
Let's Protect Children†	Presidential Secretariat program that seeks to monitor child protection policies implemented by the Ministries of Education, Health, and Labor. Aims to ensure child safety and physical and psychosocial development. (10) This program was active during the reporting period. (2)
School Child Protection Committees	Preventive program established by NCPA to empower children to protect themselves from trafficking and child labor. During the reporting period, NCPA established and strengthened the committees in 510 schools across Sri Lanka. (2) In 2019, the program also distributed education equipment for 2,129 needy students across the island to discourage dropping out of school. (2)
'1929' Childline Sri Lanka†	NCPA-funded and operated 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for vulnerable and abused children. Connects children in need of help to direct assistance and rehabilitation services. (41) This program was active during the reporting period and referred child labor cases to the Department of Labor. (2)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking	Ministry of Women and Child Affairs shelter that provides children and female victims of human trafficking with safe shelter and access to medical, psychological, and legal assistance. (35,38) The shelter was operational during the reporting period. (5)

‡ The government had other programs that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2)

Through the USDOL-funded Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor program, which concluded in 2019, the government strengthened District and Divisional Child Development Committees in all 25 districts and 313 divisional areas. Labor inspectors were formally included in the District and Divisional Child Development Committees. (2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sri Lanka (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited to children are comprehensive, including domestic work.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2015 – 2019
	Collect and publish information on labor law enforcement actions, including initial training for new labor inspectors, and on criminal law enforcement actions, including the number of violations, prosecutions, convictions, and on penalties related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
	Provide investigators with additional funding and adequate facilities, including transportation and facilities to record evidence, and human resources to adequately investigate forced labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2011 – 2019
	Provide adequate staffing in the northern and eastern provinces for the labor inspectorate to carry out inspections.	2019
	Ensure sufficient efforts are made to investigate isolated reports of officials allegedly complicit in the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Ensure that victims of child trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation are not punished for their involvement in child labor.	2019
Social Programs	Ensure that the definition of child labor used in national child labor surveys to calculate child labor statistics clearly aligns with international standards.	2017 – 2019
	Eliminate barriers to education, including difficulties with transportation to schools and an inadequate number of teachers.	2012 – 2019
	Institute programs to address the risks of child labor in tea estates and in coastal, agricultural, mining, and firewood-producing areas.	2019

In 2019, Suriname made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and drafted, approved, and implemented the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. The Ministry of Labor also adopted a referral network system developed by the Ministry of Social Affairs in collaboration with UNICEF, which aims to address violations of children's rights by not only removing children from exploitative situations, but by seeking solutions to the causes of their exploitation. In addition, the Trafficking in Persons Working Group launched an extensive awareness-raising campaign, including billboards, radio and television messaging, and the distribution of flyers at entry points throughout the country. However, children in Suriname engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Prohibitions related to the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards. In addition, the compulsory education age does not reach the minimum age for employment, leaving some children vulnerable to labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Suriname engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Suriname. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting crops, applying pesticides,† carrying heavy loads† (4) Fishing, hunting and forestry (7,8)
Industry	Mining, particularly gold mining (1,4,7,9,10) Construction,† including carrying heavy loads† (4,8) Wood processing, including carrying heavy loads†(4)
Services	Street work, including vending (4,8) Domestic work (7,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,7,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Suriname

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Throughout the coastal areas of Suriname, children work in agriculture, whereas in the capital of Paramaribo they primarily engage in street vending. Additionally, children, mostly boys, work at carrying heavy loads in small-scale gold mines in the Southeast region of the country, where they risk exposure to mercury and cyanide, excessive noise, extreme heat, and collapsing sand walls. (1,4,9,12,13) Children have also been reported working in small-scale construction and wood processing companies outside of Paramaribo. (4) Moreover, children, including children from Guyana, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including in informal mining camps in Suriname’s remote interior. (2,7,12,13)

Although Suriname’s net attendance percentage for primary school is 95 percent, it is only 53 percent for secondary school, and research indicates that secondary school attendance in the interior is as low as 21 percent. Children from low-income households, particularly in the interior, face difficulties accessing education due to long distances to schools, transportation costs, and school fees. (1,4,14,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Suriname has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 1 (j–l), 3, and 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act; Article 17 of the Labor Code (16,17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 (k–l) and 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act; Article 1 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth (17,18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2–3 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth; Article 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act (17,18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 15 of the Constitution; Article 334 of the Penal Code (19,20)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 307 and 334 of the Penal Code (20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 293, 303, and 306 of the Penal Code (20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 9 of the Legal Status of Military Personnel Act (21)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Article 39 of the Constitution; Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education (19,22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38–39 of the Constitution (19)

* No conscription (23)

Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education requires children to attend school until they are at least age 12. (22) This leaves children between ages 12 and 16 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are no longer required to attend school but are not yet legally permitted to work.

The Constitution guarantees free public education for all citizens, and the September 2014 amendment to the Citizenship and Residency Law granted citizenship to children born in Suriname of foreign-born parents. Sources indicate, however, that a small number of children born in Suriname to foreign parents before September 2014 remain ineligible to receive citizenship and free public education. (1,19,24)

The Penal Code establishes penalties for the production and trafficking of drugs, but it does not appear to specifically prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor. (13) Reports suspected forced labor cases within 45 minutes of identification, including the worst forms of child labor, to the Trafficking in Persons Unit of the Suriname Police Force. (4)
Suriname Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (13) Includes the Youth Affairs Police, who cover law enforcement involving children under age 18 and are jointly responsible for child labor-related crimes. Also includes the Police Trafficking in Persons Unit, which investigates reports and allegations of human trafficking and forced sexual exploitation nationwide, including cases involving children. (4,11)
Prosecutor's Office	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking cases, and enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including targeted inspections in risk-prone sectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (12)	Yes (4)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (12)	Yes (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (12)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (12)	Yes (4)

In 2019, the labor inspectorate reported three child labor violations during two separate inspections. Two minors, ages 13 and 15, were found to be working in hazardous conditions in a wood processing company; a third person, whose age was not determined due to lack of identification papers, was reported during another inspection. (4) In the former case, two fines were issued in the amount of $6,645 per child. The company was given until February 2020 to pay the fine or risk court proceedings. (4) In addition, 17 children were identified engaging in street vending and referred to the Ministry of Social Affairs for assistance. (4)

Labor inspections are mainly conducted near coastal areas. The Ministry of Labor noted that there is an insufficient number of labor inspectors to ensure the enforcement of labor laws in the informal sector, particularly in mining and agricultural areas, fisheries, and the country's interior. (1, 13, 23, 27) All labor inspectors are trained and authorized to enforce child labor laws. (12)

Although the Ministry of Labor does not provide disaggregated funding information, the labor inspectorate did report that its funding is insufficient to adequately cover all sectors in the country, including the formal and informal sectors. In addition, high-risk sectors are not specifically targeted because labor inspectors mainly conduct routine inspections in the formal sectors, which have lower incidences of child labor. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (12)	Yes (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (12)	N/A (4)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (12)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	2 (25)
Number of Violations Found	1 (28)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (28)	0
Number of Convictions	7 (29)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (4)

In 2019, the Ministry of Social Affairs, in collaboration with UNICEF, developed a referral mechanism that aims to address violations of children's rights by not only working toward the removal of children from exploitative situations, but also by seeking solutions to the root causes of their exploitation. (4)

The government did not provide complete data on criminal law enforcement efforts. The number of investigators is insufficient to respond to human trafficking cases, and, according to the Prosecutor's Office, investigations are initiated only as a result of complaints filed and are limited by a lack of resources, especially for travel to the interior of the country. (13,27,30-32) When the Youth Affairs Police find children working on the street, these children are sometimes registered and sent home without referrals to any relevant services. (13,32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Combating Child Labor	Serves as the leading body in drafting child labor policies. (12) Coordinates and monitors efforts to combat child labor, including the execution of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. Also coordinates with the Integrated Child Protection Network to maximize awareness-raising efforts. (4) In 2019, completed the drafting and approval of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and attended a workshop that focused on legislation, awareness raising, planning and activity coordination, and referral systems. (4,25)
Trafficking in Persons Working Group	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts. Provides care to victims of human trafficking through government-supported NGOs. (27) Comprises nine government agencies, including organizations that target the worst forms of child labor. (13) In 2019, launched an extensive awareness-raising campaign, including billboards, radio and television messaging, and the distribution of flyers at entry points throughout the country. (4,11)
Integrated Child Protection Network	Prevents child abuse, neglect, and exploitation, including child labor. (13) Is led by the Ministry of Social Affairs and includes the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Justice and Police, Office of the First Lady, National Assembly, and NGO stakeholders, with support from UNICEF. (13) In 2019, along with the Trafficking in Persons Working Group and National Commission on Combating Child Labor, participated in a workshop that focused on legislation, awareness raising, planning and activity coordination, and referral systems. Through its Technical Commission, which was established in 2018, helped draft the referral system in collaboration with UNICEF. (4,25)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor 2019†	Aims to combat child labor by removing children from child labor and by addressing issues that led children to become involved in child labor, including poverty and lack of educational opportunities. Also addresses the social and education reintegration of these children. (4) Was approved by the Council of Ministers in April 2019. (4)
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Response to Trafficking in Persons (2019)†	Aims to combat and prevent human trafficking, including through the prevention, protection, and reintegration of victims, and the prosecution of perpetrators of trafficking in persons. (33) In 2019, the Ministry of Justice and Police conducted an extensive awareness-raising campaign, trained government stakeholders on the identification of human trafficking, and increased its surveillance activities. (4)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including services for child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child and Youth Hotline†	Government-run hotline that provides confidential advice to children in need, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (31) Receives approximately 80 calls per day. (30) In 2019, continued to provide support to children, referred victims of child labor to Social Affairs, and expanded this support to include school visits. (4,25)
Anti-Trafficking Hotline†	Government-sponsored hotline through which citizens can provide information to the police about human trafficking cases. (31) In 2019, was taken over by the Command Center of the Directorate of National Security to improve response capacity. (4)

Suriname

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Second Basic Education Improvement Program (2015–2040)	$20 million IDB-funded, 25-year loan implemented by the Ministry of Education to develop curriculums and textbooks, provide teacher training, renovate classrooms, build housing for teachers in the interior, and build a center for teacher training and professional development. Aims to benefit 90,000 students and 6,500 teachers. (36,37) In 2019, trained teachers and school leaders on newly developed curriculums. (4)

† Program is funded by the Government of Suriname.

The government continues to support initiatives to eradicate child labor, but existing social programs are inadequate to fully address the problem. In particular, Suriname lacks programs, including shelters, to assist child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, and children who work in mining and agriculture. (13,14,38)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Suriname (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Increase the compulsory education age to at least age 16, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that all children, including children of foreign-born parents, have access to free public education.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure inspectors receive periodic refresher training.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to ensure the enforcement of labor laws, particularly in the mining and agricultural areas, fisheries, and the country's interior.	2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is sufficiently funded to cover labor inspections in both the formal and informal sectors of the labor force.	2018 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on the analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents, such as in fisheries and the interior of the country, particularly in mining and agricultural areas in which child labor is likely to occur.	2015 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal investigations, including the number of violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed.	2019
	Increase the number of investigators responding to human trafficking cases, and allocate sufficient funding to ensure that criminal law enforcement officers have the resources necessary to conduct investigations, particularly in the interior of the country and informal mining areas.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Develop social programs to prevent and eradicate child labor in agriculture and mining and to improve secondary school attendance, particularly in the interior.	2015 – 2019
	Strengthen social services and shelters to assist child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.	2014 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, The United Republic of Tanzania made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Criminal law enforcement officers prosecuted, achieved convictions, and imposed sentences for two cases related to the worst forms of child labor. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Tanzania is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The Mainland government explicitly supports the routine expulsion of pregnant students from public schools, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Tanzania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, quarrying, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain in the legal framework and enforcement of laws related to child labor, including protections for child engagement in illicit activities and domestic work; the lack of authorization for the labor inspectorate to assess penalties; and the likely insufficient number of labor inspectors for the size of Tanzania's labor force.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tanzania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, quarrying, and domestic work. (1-3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,4) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mainland Tanzania.

	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, mining, fishing, commercial trading, quarrying, shining shoes, pushing carts, and working in factories and bars, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7,13,15,29,31)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Tanzania is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Child trafficking is often facilitated by victims’ family members, friends, or intermediaries who promise assistance or employment. (3,30) Girls are often subject to child trafficking, including for domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation; this frequently occurs along the Kenyan border and in tourist, mining, and construction areas, including “megaproject” sites. (3) Impoverished rural children and those orphaned by HIV/AIDS are particularly vulnerable to child trafficking and labor exploitation. (3,32) Child trafficking victims are also exploited for labor on farms, mines and quarries, and on fishing vessels. (3,30) Although most children are victims of domestic human trafficking, children from Burundi and Rwanda are also subject to child trafficking into Tanzania for forced labor. (3,33) According to reports, Burundian refugee children living in Tanzania are increasingly vulnerable to exploitation, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as result of human trafficking, and for work on farms in western Tanzania. (30,34,35)

Children working in mining are exposed to many hazards, such as mercury poisoning and being trapped when tunnels collapse, especially in smaller unlicensed operations. (21,22,36,37) A 2019 report found children grinding and pounding rock for production of gravel in Pemba. The children working at these sites were using dangerous tools and exposed to being hit by rock fragments. (17)

Families are often required to pay for textbooks, uniforms, and school lunches, at costs that are prohibitive for some families. (7,38,39) Schools often lack resources for children with disabilities or learning disorders, which has resulted in many of these students dropping out. (2,40) These barriers can reduce children’s access to school and increase their vulnerability to child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tanzania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tanzania's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Mainland	No
	Zanzibar	Yes		Section 59 of the Education Act (51, 52)

* No conscription (49)

Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar's non-union matters are governed by distinct territorial jurisdictional laws, leaving each territory to determine its own child labor laws. (2,45) The minimum age for work laws in Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar do not meet international standards because they do not extend to all working children, including children engaged in domestic work. (41,43,44) Although Zanzibar has a policy establishing compulsory education through the age of 15, this standard has not been put into law; the Education Act stipulates a compulsory education age of 13, which is below the minimum age for work. (51,52) In the Mainland, there is no free basic education for children as established by law.

Tanzania

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Mainland Tanzania’s hazardous work list for children does not specify weeding and processing as activities that are dangerous agricultural tasks in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea. (12,36,41-44) In addition, Mainland Tanzania does not clearly provide penalties for using children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Zanzibar prohibits the use of children for illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (43,44)

A practice that contributes to children being left out of the formal education system stems from Mainland Tanzania’s Education Act, which allows school officials to conduct medical examinations on students; school administrators apply this law in combination with the Mainland’s Education Regulations, which allow for the expulsion of students for moral offenses, to compel female students to undergo pregnancy tests and expel them if they are pregnant. Pregnant girls excluded from the school system have increased vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (2,50,53-56) Although pregnant girls are more at risk of expulsion, boys who are found to be sexually active are also expelled from school. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the labor ministries of Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
Minister of State in the Prime Minister’s Office for Policy, Parliamentary Affairs, Labor, Employment, Youth, and the Disabled	Mainland	Enforces child labor laws. Assigns area labor officers to each region to respond to reports of child labor violations, issues non-compliance orders, and reports incidents to police and the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. (2) Through its Labor Administration and Inspection Section, provides legal guidance upon request, disseminates information to employers and employees on their rights and obligations, and helps area offices conduct labor inspections. (57)
Ministry of Health, Community Development, Gender, Elderly, and Children	Mainland	Enforces child protection laws and regulations, and health and social welfare policies. Employs officers to monitor child labor at the district and village levels, and reports findings to the President’s Office of Regional Administration and to local governments. (2) Promotes community development, gender equality, and children’s rights by formulating policies, strategies, and guidelines in collaboration with stakeholders. (57)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Mainland	Enforces anti-trafficking laws, including child trafficking, and laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities. (57)
Ministry of Empowerment, Adults, Youth, Women and Children	Zanzibar	Ensures compliance with child protection and child labor laws, including inspections, through its Child Protection Unit. (57) Following a merger with the Ministry of Labor, Economic Empowerment and Cooperatives, investigates child labor cases reported by the police and refers cases to social welfare officers. (58)
Ministry of Health	Zanzibar	Enforces anti-trafficking laws, including cases of child trafficking. (57)
Tanzania Police Force	Mainland and Zanzibar	Investigates cases of child labor and other forms of child endangerment reported to police stations; in some cases, refers cases to labor officers or seeks assistance from social welfare officers and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take legal action. Includes a Human Trafficking desk, and Gender and Children’s desks to handle cases pertaining to children. (2,57,59)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist in the authority of the labor ministries and in the execution of their mandates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available enforcement data.

The Mainland government did not provide information on labor enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (2) Despite regulations in both the Mainland and Zanzibar requiring that one or more labor officers be assigned to each region, research was unable to determine whether this was followed during the reporting period. (7,60) Based on information from past reporting, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Tanzania's workforce, which includes nearly 25 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Tanzania would employ about 622 inspectors. (61,62) In addition, government-wide budgetary issues resulted in a substantial decrease of funding for the Zanzibar labor inspectorate from $28,193 to $7,180, which is insufficient to provide adequate enforcement of labor laws. (2) Although figures on the Mainland labor inspectorate funding remain unavailable, NGOs have noted that labor enforcement efforts could benefit from additional funding and increased numbers of inspections. (57)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

During the reporting period, 218 law enforcement officials participated in U.S. government-supported trainings related to handling of human trafficking cases, including special methods for interviewing child victims of trafficking. (11,30) However, the Mainland government did not provide information for inclusion in this report on its training for criminal law enforcement officers, including trainings for new investigators, trainings on new laws related to the worse forms of child labor, and refresher courses. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inactive coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Related Entity	Role & Description
National Education Task Force on Child Labor	Mainland and Zanzibar	Reviews education sector policies and existing laws, regulations, and strategies related to children's issues, including the National Action Plan. Reviews existing curriculum and programs, identifies gaps, and suggests strategies to resolve barriers to accessing education. (4,63) Research was unable to determine whether the National Education Task Force on Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (2)
Zanzibar Child Labor Steering Committee	Zanzibar	Coordinates various implementing agencies responsible for child labor and provides policy guidance on the Zanzibar National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (57) Chaired by Zanzibar's Ministry of Empowerment, Adults, Youth, Women and Children. (60) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Steering Committee was active during the reporting period. (2)
National Protection Steering Committee	Mainland and Zanzibar	Provides overall policy guidance and coordination at the national and local levels of the National Plan of Action to End Violence Against Women and Children (NPA-VAWC) through the merger of the National Inter-Sectoral Coordination Committee and the Multi-Sector Task Force on Violence Against Children. (58,59) Operates the NPA-VAWC National Protection Technical Committee and Thematic Working Groups at the national level. Merges pre-existing committees at the regional and district levels, focusing on violence prevention and response, including the Child Labor Committees, Gender-Based Violence Committees, District Child Protection Teams, and Most Vulnerable Children Committees. (57,59) Research was unable to determine whether the National Protection Steering Committee was active during the reporting period. (2)
National Anti-Trafficking Committee (ATC) and National Anti-Trafficking Secretariat (ATS)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Promotes, defines, and coordinates policy to prevent human trafficking through engagement with local NGOs. (46,58,64) Chaired by the Ministry of Home Affairs, includes representatives from the Prime Minister's Office for Policy, Parliamentary Affairs, Labor, Employment, Youth, and the Disabled. (60) The ATC met once, contributing to the organization of human trafficking awareness events, including a Day of Dialogue and Commemoration Day in July 2019. (11,30)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Related Entity	Description
National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labour (2018–2022)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Coordinates prevention and responses to the worst forms of child labor at the national level. (65) The government, with the support of the ILO, drafted the National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor in 2018, but did not launch or take measures to operationalize the policy during the reporting period. (2,66)
National Plan of Action to End Violence Against Women and Children in Tanzania (NPA-VAWC) (2017–2022)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Prevents and responds to all forms of violence against women and children through comprehensive multi-sectoral collaboration at all levels and combining eight national action plans. (59) Details responsible agencies to address multiple challenges, including education and poverty reduction. (57) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the NPA-VAWC during the reporting period. (2)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (57,58,69)

Tanzania does not have a law requiring free public education, but it does have an education policy that allows children to attend primary school and lower secondary school without paying tuition fees. (70,71) The Mainland government, however, regulates access to secondary education through the Primary School Leaving Examination. Students who do not pass the exam do not have an opportunity to re-take the exam and must drop out of public school at the end of compulsory education at age 14. (58) Despite the government’s stated intention to phase out the exam by 2021, there is no evidence of government efforts or preparations to do so. (53,58,72) In 2006, Zanzibar adopted and began implementing the Zanzibar Education Policy, which establishes compulsory education through Form 4, which is approximately age 15. (51,73) However, reporting indicates that implementation of this policy has been slow due to limited resources for schools. The government, moreover, has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Zanzibar Education Policy. (51) More than half of children in Zanzibar leave the formal education system below the minimum age for work, leaving them at increased risk for child labor. (66-68)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the scope and implementation of programs in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Tanzania Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer Program, Phase IV (2019–2023)†	Government-funded conditional cash transfer program to provide financial assistance to vulnerable populations, including children. The program is transitioning to begin implementation of Phase IV, running from 2019 to 2023. The first transfer targets 300,000 poor households and is scheduled for July 1, 2020. (7,66)
Promoting Sustainable Practices to Eradicate Child Labor in Tobacco (PROSPER) Umoja (Unity) (2018–2020)	$900,000 extension project of PROSPER Plus, implemented by Winrock International, the Tanzania Association of Women Leaders in Agriculture and the Environment, and the Tabora Development Foundation Trust, with funding from the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation. Aims to bring together public and private sectors to reduce child labor nationwide, focusing in Kaliua, Sikonge, Tabora, and Urambo. (7,57,74) In 2019, 300 children from families of small-scale tobacco farmers in Taboa, Mbeya, Songwe received scholarships through the PROSPER Umoja program. (26)
Eradicating the Worst Forms of Labor in the Eight Mining Wards of the Geita District, Phase 2 (2015–2019)	$2 million EU-funded, 3 year project implemented by Plan International Tanzania to enhance social protection mechanisms to prevent and improve awareness of child labor among children, parents, and mining employers near Chato, Geita, and Nywangwale. (7,75) Cumulative figures report that the project provided awareness-raising messages to 5,500 small-scale unregistered miners and supported the removal of 5,472 children from the worst forms of child labor, reintegrating removed children into schools. (2)
Decent Work Country Program (2017–2021)	ILO-supported program that aims to promote job creation, workers’ rights, social protection, and social dialogue. Outcomes include an improved operational environment for the elimination of child labor and its worst forms. (57,75,76)

Program	Description
Addressing Decent Work Deficits in the Tobacco Sector in Tanzania (2019–2023)*	ILO-funded program that aims to address decent work deficits, including elimination of child labor, under the ILO's multi-country Integrated Strategy to Address Decent Work Deficits in the Tobacco Sector. (2,79) The project is being implemented in Urambo and Tabora through March 2020. (2) The government provides support for the project by coordinating and providing guidance to stakeholders. (11)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Tanzania.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (57)

The scope of government-funded social programs is inadequate in that it does not cover construction, mining and quarrying, domestic service, fishing, and informal sectors in which children engage in child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tanzania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Mainland and Zanzibar	Criminalize the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that minimum age protections apply to all children, including those engaged in domestic work.	2013 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Establish by law a compulsory age for education, which leaves no gap between the age of compulsory education and minimum age for work.	2017 – 2019
	Mainland	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2019
	Mainland	Continue to expand the list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children to ensure that the list includes weeding and processing in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea.	2016 – 2019
	Mainland	Criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in producing and trafficking drugs.	2012 – 2019
	Mainland	Ensure that the law does not prohibit access to education for pregnant girls and sexually active boys.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Mainland and Zanzibar	Authorize the Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar labor inspectorates to assess penalties.	2017 – 2019
	Zanzibar	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, including training new labor inspectors at the beginning of their employment, trainings on laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and refresher courses.	2019
	Mainland	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts.	2011 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that a dedicated labor officer is appointed to each region, and publish this information.	2013 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO's technical advice.	2013 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Provide sufficient funding to ensure adequate enforcement of labor laws.	2013 – 2019
	Zanzibar	Institutionalize training for criminal law enforcement investigators, including by training new investigators, trainings on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and refresher courses.	2019
	Zanzibar	Publish information on penalties imposed for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Mainland	Mainland	Publish information on training for criminal law enforcement officials, including training for new investigators, training on laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and refresher courses.	2012 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that coordinating committees are active and able to carry out their intended mandates.	2018 – 2019

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure the implementation of the National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor and National Plan of Action to End Violence Against Women and Children in Tanzania.	2018 – 2019
	Mainland	Eliminate provisions in the Primary School Leaving Examination that are barriers to education, such as the no re-take policy.	2016 – 2019
	Zanzibar	Incorporate child labor prevention and elimination strategies, and ensure the full implementation of the Zanzibar Education Policy to limit dropouts.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure the implementation of government-funded social programs.	2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by eliminating or defraying prohibitive related costs, such as books, school meals, and uniforms, while ensuring schools have adequate resources for students with disabilities and learning disorders.	2010 – 2019
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Integrate programs that include the construction, mining, quarrying, domestic service, fishing, and informal sectors to address children engaged in child labor.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Thailand made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased its total number of labor inspections by six percent, and it worked to ensure migrant students educated at Migrant Learning Centers receive a government accredited certificate to allow them to pursue additional educational opportunities in Thailand or back in their native countries. The Ministry of Education issued a new regulation that allows non-Thai children to enroll in the formal school system and ensures that these children have access to free education and health services. The government also published the first nationally representative survey of working children in Thailand. Thailand was also the first country in Asia to ratify ILO Convention 188, which came into force in January; Thailand also passed the 2019 Fishery Workers Protection Act and drafted regulations in the high-risk fishing sector. However, children in Thailand are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children, including those under 12, also participate in Muay Thai competitions, an area of hazardous work in which there is evidence of serious head injuries. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it does not meet the international standard for the minimum age for work because the law does not grant protections to children working outside a formal employment relationship. Enforcement of child labor laws remains a challenge due to an insufficient number of inspectors and resources to physically inspect remote workplaces in informal sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Thailand are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in Muay Thai fighting competitions for remuneration. (1-12) Thailand published the Thai language results of the National Working Children Survey of 2018, its first nationally representative survey of working children, conducted according to international standards in coordination with the ILO, which preliminarily found approximately 177,000 children engaged in child labor, of which a subset of 133,000 children are engaged in hazardous work. While the initial results demonstrate progress in the Government of Thailand's work to combat child labor, the CEACR noted the number of children engaged in child labor remains significant. (13,14) An official English translation of the 2018 survey results has not yet been published, and the analysis is awaiting final validation by the ILO. (13,15) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Thailand.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (1,302,267)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	14.4

	Forced labor in the production of garments, in agriculture, and in shrimp and seafood processing (4,33)
	Fishing as a result of human trafficking (4,21,24,37)
	Use in the production and trafficking of drugs, including amphetamines, kratom, and marijuana (4,23,33)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Thai children and children from Burma, Cambodia, and Laos are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Thai massage parlors, bars, karaoke lounges, hotels, and private residences. In addition, children are increasingly being individually lured by predators online through social media and private chat rooms, and being coerced to produce pornography and perform sexual acts. (4,5,30,32,38,39)

Incidents of child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing industry have decreased in recent years, but children, particularly migrants from the Greater Mekong Subregion, continue to engage in hazardous work in this industry. (4,18,40,41) Children engaged in shrimp and seafood processing work late hours cleaning and lifting heavy loads of seafood and experience health problems such as physical injuries and chronic diseases. (20,42) Similarly, children working in agriculture face health risks from lifting heavy loads, risks of injury from operating dangerous machinery and using sharp equipment, exposure to pesticides, sun, and heat, and long hours from very early in the morning until nighttime. (23) Thai and migrant children who accompany their parents working in the construction sector are exposed to child labor at and around construction sites, including performing construction work or working as caretakers for younger children or as housekeepers. (4,28,29,43)

Children, including those under 15, also participate for remuneration—in the form of prize money or wages—in Muay Thai competitions, an area of work in which there is evidence of serious head injuries, including brain hemorrhages and deteriorated nerve fibers around the brain stem. Additionally, research found that betting and illegal gambling on the outcome of children’s matches occurs often during Muay Thai competitions. (2-4,6-12) The Royal Thai Government has begun drafting its Boxing Act Amendment in 2018 in response to the death of a 13-year old boy participating in Muay Thai, but research has been unable to determine the types of changes the draft Boxing Act amendment proposes or what progress was made toward enacting this legislation in 2019. (4,44)

Although Order No. 28/2559 of the National Council for Peace and Order ensures 15 years of free education for all children in Thailand, language barriers cause some children, particularly migrants and ethnic minorities, to struggle to access basic education. (4,33,45) Although children without identity documents or a registered address cannot be denied enrollment in public schools, research found that there is a lack of clarity among school officials regarding the type of documentation non-Thai students need to possess to enroll in school, which may be a barrier to education access. (4,46,47) The government published an Education Ministerial Proclamation and the Guideline on Enrollment of Non-Thai Children to help clarify the rules and regulations pertaining to enrollment of children in school. (15,48,49) In addition, as school applications are only available in Thai, this may be a barrier for migrant and ethnic minority children’s access to education. (4,44)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Thailand has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Thailand's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including not meeting the international standard for the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Chapter 4, Section 44 of the Labor Protection Act; Section 148/1 of the Labor Protection Act (No. 5) (50,51)

Thailand

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Thai Government ratified ILO Convention 188 Work in Fishing Convention—the first country in Asia to do so—which came into force in January 2019 and requires that Thailand abide by international standards for work onboard fishing vessels, including child labor standards. Regulations related to the implementation of the 2019 Fishery Workers Protection Act have not yet been approved. (4,67,68) Further, an amendment to the 2008 Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law that took effect in April, separately criminalizes forced labor, including forced child labor. (59) No cases were filed under the amendment by the end of 2019 as the implementing regulations had not yet been enacted. (4)

The minimum age for work does not comply with international standards because the law does not grant protections to children working outside of employment relationships. In addition, because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, some children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (50,51,66)

The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover professional Muay Thai competitions, an area of work where there is evidence of exposure to serious physical injury. (2,4,6-12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) and criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) of the Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through workplace inspections. (23) Operates Hotline 1509 and staffs 86 labor protection and welfare offices in every province to answer questions about working conditions and receive complaints from the public about child labor. (4,44,68) In 2019, DLPW inspectors identified 43 child labor violations, including employing children under the minimum age for work and minimum age for hazardous work. DLPW call centers also received 453 calls related to possible child labor violations. (4)
Anti-Human Trafficking Units	The Anti-Trafficking in Person Division of the Royal Thai Police (RTP) enforces laws related to forced labor, human trafficking, child pornography, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and operates Hotline 191 to receive complaints on human trafficking and violence against children. (68,69) The Department of Trafficking in Persons Litigation under the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) investigates human trafficking offenses, including cases of labor, sex, and child trafficking, and monitors provincial human trafficking cases to improve the quality of prosecutions. In 2019, the OAG's Department of Trafficking in Persons Litigation collected data on child labor for the Royal Thai Government's (RTG) annual report on the worst forms of child labor. (4,15,43) The Thailand Anti-Trafficking in Persons Taskforce (TATIP) investigates and enforces laws against human trafficking in the sex trade and mainstream industries. TATIP teams comprise police officers, social workers, and selected NGO representatives. (44,70,71) In 2019, the RTP developed a mobile application ("Police I lert u") that will allow individuals to report possible human trafficking violations, including those related to the sexual exploitation of children, to a 24/7 operations center for analysis and on-site investigations. (4,5,15,70,72) The Department of Special Investigation's (DSI) Bureau of Human Trafficking Crime is tasked with enforcing and investigating human trafficking cases. In 2019, DSI's Bureau of Human Trafficking Crime was active and assisted with multiple investigations. (4,43)
Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children Taskforce (TICAC)	Investigates and enforces laws against child trafficking and the online sexual exploitation of children, including the distribution and production of child pornography. (4,5) Comprises police officers, DSI agents, social workers, and selected NGO representatives. In 2019, TICAC investigated 26 cases of internet-facilitated child sex trafficking and co-hosted a seminar on enhancing the effectiveness of anti-sex trafficking education provided to students in schools. (4,15,43,70,72)
Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS)	Enforces child protection laws through close collaboration with the RTP, DSI, DLPW, and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; operates Hotline 1300, which receives human trafficking and child labor complaints. Operates 76 temporary shelters located in every province and 9 long-term shelters for human trafficking victims, including a shelter dedicated solely boys. (4,5,35,52,72) In 2019, MSDHS organized 5 victim identification trainings for 1,000 participants on victim identification, particularly in forced labor, in accordance with the 2019 Amendment of the Anti-TIP Act. (15,70)

Even though the incidence of child labor law violations has decreased in the shrimp and seafood processing sectors, Thailand continues to closely monitor the industry for child labor through 32 Port In-Port Out (PIPO)

Centers and 19 Forward Inspection Points (FIP) along the coasts. These Centers enforce laws related to fishing, forced labor, child labor, and human trafficking. (4,15,19,21,41,43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, the government increased its labor inspectorate budget by more than $70,000. The number of labor inspections also increased in 2019 despite employing fewer inspectors, which the government remarked was a result of using fewer inspectors from agencies outside the MOL. (4) The government also hired 2 additional interpreters to assist labor inspectors, for a total of 126 interpreters. All labor inspectors are authorized to inspect and enforce child labor laws. (4,44) Nonetheless, the number of labor inspectors is likely still insufficient for the size of Thailand's workforce, which includes approximately 38.45 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Thailand would employ about 2,558 labor inspectors. (76,77) More than 94 percent of unannounced child labor inspections targeted high-risk worksites that employed children in the garment, shrimp and seafood processing, poultry and pig farming, services, auto repair, and construction sectors. In 2019, 32 child labor violations were found in high-risk worksites. (4) Inspectors who find a child labor violation must immediately assess a penalty on the employer and refer the case to the Royal Thai Police (RTP). (4) Research found that NGOs have recommended that the Royal Thai Government create a comprehensive standard operating procedure to refer and protect children rescued at night from child labor situations. NGOs suggest this standard operating procedure also include additional compensation for social workers providing care throughout the night. (4)

In 2019, the Command Center for Combating Illegal Fishing (CCCIF) organized a training for 184 new labor inspectors that included preventing child labor in the fishing industry. (4) The National Marine Preservation Act took effect in 2019, which established the Thai Maritime Enforcement Command Center (Thai-MECC) and granted Thai-MECC oversight authority over the CCCIF's PIPO and FIP operations. Thai-MECC has the authority and mandate to enforce Thai labor laws on fishing vessels—including stopping, searching, detaining, and arresting violators on vessels—within Thai waters or those fleeing to international waters. (4,5,15,68,78) The Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) continued to use mobile inspection teams that consisted of labor inspectors, a legal affairs officer, interpreters, and sometimes employees from the Departments of Special Investigation; Employment; and Fisheries. These teams conducted targeted monthly child labor inspections using information shared by NGOs and child protection networks, and they are authorized to file criminal lawsuits when child labor violations are found. (23,45) In 2019, mobile inspection teams found 24 child labor violations, all of which were issued citations. (15) Although the CCCIF and the DLPW have made efforts to actively exchange information with NGOs, it is reported that the CCCIF and the DLPW have not made efforts to reach out to migrant community NGOs or networks to exchange information on high-risk workplaces or provide training on child labor issues. (23,44) The number of labor inspections conducted in agricultural and domestic work was insufficient due to labor inspectors' inability to physically access remote work places and inspector safety. (4,15)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including fully reporting criminal enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from October 1, 2017, to September 30, 2018.

In 2019, the RTP investigated 100, and public prosecutors issued indictments in 71 cases against 66 alleged suspects for violations involving the worst forms of child labor. The RTP Anti-Trafficking in Person Division found 111 victims of child trafficking for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation and production of child pornography, and an additional 141 individuals were prosecuted for other child labor-related crimes. (4,15,68) The Department of Juvenile Observations and Protection reported 2,314 cases of children involved in the narcotic production and trade. (4,68) During the reporting period, 343 RTP police investigators were trained on polices and laws and criminal investigative and prosecutorial techniques related to the worst forms of child labor. The Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children Taskforce and the Thailand Anti-Trafficking in Persons Taskforce collaborated closely with international law enforcement agencies and NGOs, including the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, to identify and arrest suspects engaged in online child commercial sexual exploitation. (4,44,43)

Research indicates that there is a lack of understanding of the use of male children in commercial sexual exploitation among some provincial government and court officials due to the preconceived notion that boys are stronger than girls and should be able to defend themselves against perpetrators. In addition, there is no training provided to officials specifically covering victim assistance for boys. (15) Research found that some law enforcement officials may underreport human trafficking incidences for fear that reporting them would demonstrate law enforcement deficiencies. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates the implementation of child labor policies, facilitates cooperation among relevant ministries, and reports annually to the Thai Cabinet on child labor issues. Chaired by the MOL, with representation from other government agencies, employer and worker associations, and civil society groups. (77) Oversees a subcommittee responsible for monitoring the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (33,79) In 2019, the committee met to restructure its subcommittees' monitoring efforts to eliminate the use of child labor from the production of four goods (garments, pornography, shrimp, and sugarcane) on USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor . (4)
National and Provincial Committees on Child Protection	Coordinate with government agencies and private sector representatives to monitor and protect children's social welfare and safety, including monitoring public and private workplaces for child labor violations. (52) Led by the MSDHS with participation from the DLPW and the ministries of Education and Public Health. (43) In 2019, the committees reviewed current guidelines used to monitor the rights of the child and violations of children's rights. They also developed new guidelines to enhance current monitoring and child protection practices at the local provincial and village levels. (4)
Fishing Regulatory Units	The National Policy Committee on Anti-Trafficking in Persons and Illegal, Unreported, and Unregulated Fishing coordinates anti-trafficking in persons policies and activities and oversees five subcommittees, including the Subcommittee on Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Migrant Workers. Chaired by the MOL. (33) The Provincial Coordination Center for Sea Fishery Workers (operated jointly by the MOL, Marine Police, Provincial Administration, and Fishers' Association) compiles registration records and information on work permits for migrants working on fishing vessels, and works with vessel owners to ensure that undocumented migrant workers are registered. Also monitors and coordinates inspections of working conditions on fishing vessels, provides trainings on labor protection, receives human trafficking complaints, and coordinates with other agencies to provide assistance, remedy, and rehabilitation services for victims. (15,69) The Thai Maritime Enforcement Command Center (Thai-MECC), which is replacing the Command Center for Combating Illegal Fishing, oversees government efforts to combat illegal fishing and human trafficking in the fishing industry, including searching, investigating, and arresting vessel operators who are suspected of using illegal labor onboard; the Department of Fisheries operates 32 Port In-Port Out (PIPO) Centers and 19 Forward Inspection Points (FIP) in every coastal province. (15,68,69,78) Carries out inspections in the fishing industry. (78,80) PIPO Centers enforce laws related to fishing and labor, including child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking, through inspections at ports and at sea. PIPO Centers are staffed by officers from the Department of Fisheries, Marine Department, DLPW, Department of Employment, and interpreters. (15,44) In 2019, PIPO Centers inspected 72,939 fishing vessels for child labor violations. DLPW also provided training to 60 fishing industry workers on Thai labor standards. (4)
Division of Anti-Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates anti-trafficking activities, including those involving forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. Monitors 76 Provincial Operation Centers for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking. (33,69) Acts as the secretariat for both the Anti-trafficking in Persons Committee and the Coordinating and Monitoring of Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee. Operates under the MSDHS. (5,33) This division was active in 2019. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor Phase II (2015–2020)	Seeks to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Thailand in accordance with international labor standards. Focuses on (a) preventing the worst forms of child labor, (b) rescuing and protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, (c) developing and enforcing relevant laws, (d) enhancing inter-agency cooperation, and (e) developing management and monitoring systems. (79) In 2019, held training workshops to enhance care and protection quality provided to child labor victims. It also assisted with the development of the 2019 Fishery Workers Protection Act, including enhancing laws and implementation regulations in the fishing industry. (4)
Cyber Tipline Remote Access Policy	Seeks to combat the online sexual exploitation of children in Thailand by partnering with the U.S. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Supports TICAC by permitting the RTP to request warrants to search the residences and electronic equipment of individuals for child pornography and initiate criminal prosecution. (80-83) In 2019, 2 seminars trained 146 participants from TICAC, TATIP, NGOs, and social workers on improving victim-centric and forensic interview techniques regarding investigating and prosecuting commercial sexual exploitation of children online. (4)
National Strategic Plan (2018–2037)†	Aims to improve education access, particularly for vulnerable and poor children in remote areas, by increasing transportation to school, reforming the school subsidy program for poor families, and providing scholarships for children who stay in school. (4,84)

† Policy was approved during the reporting year.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (23,85,86)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address child labor in high-risk sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government Welfare Protection Centers for Victims of Trafficking†	Operates nine long-term human trafficking shelters that offer medical care, psychosocial services, education, and life skills education. (87,88) In 2019, Save the Children and the Thailand Association of Social Workers provided training for shelter staff and case managers on how to provide support to child trafficking victims and decrease their risk of being re-victimized during the judicial processes. (5)
Combating Unacceptable Forms of Work in the Thai Fishing and Seafood Industry (2016–2019)	3.5 year, EU- and ILO-funded Ship to Shore Rights project implemented by ILO, the government of Thailand, and other stakeholders to prevent and reduce forced labor and child labor in the Thai fishing and seafood processing sectors, including by withdrawing children engaged in the worst forms of child labor and enhancing their access to support services. (89,90) In 2019, a joint training between the ILO and the MOL taught 180 newly recruited labor inspectors about child labor and child protection laws. (68)
Migrant Learning Centers (MLCs)†	NGO and government-operated centers that provide basic education, life skill training, and vocational training to children in migrant communities along Thailand's borders. In 2019, the Ministry of Education partnered with UNICEF and NGOs to improve MLC standards and provide government accreditation certificates to MLC students, which will help them continue their education in Thailand or pursue education opportunities in their native countries. (4,44,69)
Child Advocacy Centers (CAC)†	Provide social, legal, and repatriation services to children who are survivors or vulnerable to human trafficking, including children trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. (35,92) In 2019, all five CACs were operational and provided services for 104 child survivors in 80 investigations. (5)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in Thailand that aim to eliminate child labor in its worst forms by improving the capacity of the national government in its criminal investigations and carrying out child labor research. These projects include From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (2015–2019), a global project implemented by ILO to support global and national efforts to combat the forced labor of adults and children under the 2014 ILO Protocol and supporting Recommendation to ILO C.29 on Forced Labor. (93) In 2019, USDOL continued to fund ILO technical support for the questionnaire and survey design, as well as the analysis, of the National Working Child Survey 2018 . (15,33,94) The second project is Attaining Lasting Change for Better Enforcement of Labor and Criminal Law to Address Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking (ATLAS)*, implemented by Winrock International. (4,95) For additional information, please see the USDOL website.

* Project was launched during the reporting year.

† Program is funded by the Government of Thailand.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (44,68,79,91,92,96)

The lack of available research and data on the prevalence of child labor in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction, makes it difficult for the Government of Thailand to design appropriate programs to address these issues. Migrant children are not eligible for Equal Education Fund—scholarships to support disadvantaged children's access to education—distributions, which increases their vulnerability to labor exploitation. (4,44,68) While access to education for migrant children has increased, some Migrant Learning Centers (MLCs) lack accreditation. (4,43,85) In 2019, the Ministry of Health launched the Health Service System Development to Rescue and Protect Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor training program. This training program helps educate public health workers to identify and refer child labor victims to the appropriate authorities and rehabilitation services. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Thailand (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to children working outside of employment relationships.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including paid participation in Muay Thai , in which there is evidence that children are exposed to physical dangers.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor to meet the ILO's technical guidance.	2015 – 2019
	Collect and publish comprehensive data on the number of investigations conducted and convictions for all crimes related to child labor, including the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure provincial government and court officials are provided adequate training on human trafficking issues—specifically in cases of male children in commercial sexual exploitation—to afford boys the same protections as girls.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure law enforcement officials report all human trafficking incidences.	2019
	Ensure labor inspectors are provided training necessary to conduct inspections at remote informal sector workplaces.	2019
Social Programs	Improve access to education, especially for ethnic minority and migrant children, including by clarifying to school officials, either under the Ministry of Education or local governments, the necessary documents non-Thai students need to submit for enrollment, raising awareness of migrant children's right to education, and addressing language barriers for non-Thai speaking students, including on public school applications.	2012 – 2019
	Conduct research and data prevalence surveys to ensure that there are sufficient social programs to address child labor in the agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction sectors.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that there are sufficient social programs to assist children from vulnerable groups, such as migrant children, who are at high risk of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure migrant learning centers are accredited.	2018 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Timor-Leste made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In October, the government released an analytical report on the findings of its 2016 National Child Labor Survey in conjunction with the Mini Labor Force Survey. Additionally, the government funded the Vulnerable Persons Unit to help support children who were victims of child labor and human trafficking. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Timor-Leste is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement due to a regression in practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. While no law or policy prohibits pregnant girls from attending school, reports during the reporting period indicate that orders from school principals forced girls to leave school when they became pregnant, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Timor-Leste engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In addition, Timor-Leste's Penal Code and Labor Code only protect children under the age of 17, leaving children age 17 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Timor-Leste engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Timor-Leste.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	19.9 (26,268)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	69.7
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including cultivating and processing coffee† and growing vegetables and other crops (1,2,5) Fishing,† including work on boats and repairing nets (1,2,6,7)
Industry	Construction,† including brickmaking (1) Operating weaving and knitting machines (5,8)
Services	Domestic work† (1,2,9,10) Street work, including vending, begging, and scavenging (1,7,11) Shopkeeping and selling goods in markets (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7,10,12,13) Domestic and agricultural work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Timor-Leste

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In October 2019, the government released its first-ever Timor-Leste National Child Labor Survey 2016 Analytical Report in conjunction with the Mini Labor Force Survey, aligning with the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development under Goal 8.7, which calls for the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms. Data from the Child Labor Survey, covering 1,755 households in all 13 municipalities, found that 55.5 percent of children in child labor are involved in hazardous work; key findings such as this will be used for future development of relevant policies and programs in the country. (6,7,9,15-18)

In Timor-Leste, some children are trafficked from rural areas to the capital city, Dili, and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, or forced labor in the fishing industry. (2,7,10,14,19) Research indicates that data on human trafficking vary across government institutions and are not centralized in a clearinghouse for stakeholder agencies to access, making it difficult to accurately assess the human trafficking issues on the ground. (10,14) Other children are trafficked transnationally, including to Indonesia. (2,10,20) Although data are limited, it is anecdotally reported that children are sometimes directed to work on family farms against their wishes to supplement family incomes. (7,10,14,21)

The law requires 9 years of compulsory education; however, in practice, children must pay additional fees to attend school. Commonly required fees include school uniforms and supplies, which can hinder access to education, particularly for children from poor and rural areas. (6,7,22) In addition, the lack of sanitation facilities at schools can result in girls dropping out of school upon reaching puberty. (7,23)

Although there is no government policy prohibiting girls from attending school while pregnant, research indicates that some school principals force girls to leave school when they become pregnant. As a result, some pregnant students may also attempt to transfer schools, but they face additional difficulty obtaining transfer documentation, which is at the discretion of school principals. (7,23-25) This practice may make pregnant girls more vulnerable to involvement in child labor, including its worst forms. The Ministry of Education has drafted a policy to encourage girls to return to school after giving birth, but this policy has remained in draft status for several years, and there is no policy on providing education for girls during their pregnancy. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 68 of the Labour Code (26)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	17	Article 67 of the Labour Code (26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18 (27)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 155, 162–163, and 166 of the Penal Code; Articles 8 and 67 of the Labour Code (26,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 81 of the Immigration and Asylum Act; Articles 162–164 and 166 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code; Article 18 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking (26,28-30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 155 and 174–176 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code (26,28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 155 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code (26,28)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on Military Service (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 14 of the Law on Military Service (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 125 of the Penal Code (28)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 59 of the Constitution of the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste; Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (32,33)

Research indicates that various sections of the Penal Code only criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, production of pornography, and for pornographic performances when the child victim is younger than 17 years of age. Research also shows that the Labor Code only protects minors younger than 17 in its prohibitions on the use of child labor in hazardous work. (22,23,26,28,34)

The minimum age of 17 for hazardous work is not in compliance with international standards because Timor-Leste fails to ensure that children receive adequate training, in accordance with international standards where the minimum age identified is below 18. (22,26,28) Although Timor-Leste has adopted the List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18, it is uncertain how this law will interact with the Labor Code which only considers those under age 17 as children. (2,22,27,35) Lastly, although the Labor Code specifies the conditions and number of hours permitted for light work for children ages 13 to 15, it does not specify which activities qualify as light work. (26)

The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOE)	Receives child labor complaints, and passes complaints to the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL) for further investigation. (6) Enforces laws related to child labor. Administers the General Labor Inspectorate Directorate, which is responsible for investigating incidents of forced labor. (6)
PNTL	Enforces criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Includes: the Vulnerable Persons Unit (VPU), the immigration police, and the border police. (6)
Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion	Receives referrals from agencies, including SEPFPOE, that are responsible for conducting child labor investigations and providing child victims with appropriate support services. (24) Maintains at least 1 technical officer in each of the country's 13 districts and 2 child protection officers in each of the 65 subdistricts, all trained to follow the government's standard operating procedures for identifying and referring victims to service providers. (10,37,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of SEPFPOE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Although Timor-Leste does meet the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 labor inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, SEPFPOE reported that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to conduct the required labor inspections. (6,7,23) SEPFPOE stated its intention to hire additional labor inspectors in 2020. During the reporting period, the government did not provide enough funds to SEPFPOE to allow for staff training during the year. (7)

Research found that there are insufficient child labor enforcement protections for children working on family farms or in domestic work, because SEPFPOE investigators are only empowered to inspect formal workplaces. (2,7) SEPFPOE also had limited capacity to conduct inspections in Timor-Leste's rural areas, where child labor in the agriculture sector is prevalent, due to a lack of available transportation, including funds to pay for fuel for government vehicles. (6,7,9,40)

The government did not provide information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites for inclusion in this report.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (6)	N/A (7)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (6)	No (7,25)
Number of Investigations	0 (6)	0 (7)
Number of Violations Found	0 (6)	0 (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (6)	0 (7)
Number of Convictions	0 (6)	0 (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6,21)	No (24)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (7)

The Vulnerable Persons Unit (VPU) of the PNTL had a staff of 97 investigators charged with the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7,10,14,24,38)

All new PNTL officer recruits continued to receive training on how to identify human trafficking victims as a part of their standard onboarding curriculum, which teaches officers how human trafficking differs from smuggling and immigration violations, and includes a summary of the Law on Preventing and Combatting Human Trafficking. (10) However, this training was not specific to child trafficking issues. (7,9,24,38) The curriculum for new and existing members of the judiciary includes trainings on human trafficking that teach steps that criminal prosecutors can use to develop new trafficking investigations and prosecutions. These include methods for handling evidence and questions prosecutors can ask of witnesses and victims to more clearly delineate whether a case is trafficking-related, thus increasing chances of conviction. (10,14,41)

In 2019, the VPU received $8,088 to support women who were victims of domestic violence, as well as children who were victims of child labor and human trafficking. (7) The VPU lacked sufficient funding to carry out investigations, including an insufficient number of vehicles. (7,42)

During the reporting period, the case against a Liquica District Administrator for allegedly raping a 15-year-old trafficking victim in 2018 remained under investigation. (10,14) There are only 33 judges to handle the criminal and civil caseload of the entire country, and as a result, cases can exist without a court date for long periods of time. (10) In addition, potential human trafficking cases are often misclassified due to a lack of evidence confirming trafficking. (10,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including continued delays in establishing the Anti-Human Trafficking Commission.

Timor-Leste

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission Against Child Labor (CNTI)	Facilitates information sharing on child labor issues among government agencies and serves as the coordinating mechanism for filing and responding to child labor complaints. (40) Develops child labor policies, raises awareness, and contributes to efforts to ratify and implement international conventions related to child protection. Develops the national plan against child labor. (24) Disseminates formal systematic information on the normative and technical framework applicable to child labor. Elaborates, approves, and periodically reviews the hazardous work list of jobs prohibited to children under age 18. (24) Chaired by SEPFPOE. (7,40,43) Other members include PNTL, the Timorese Labor Union Confederation, the youth empowerment NGO Forum Tau Matan, the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, the Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Justice, and the Coordinating Ministry for Economic Affairs. (7) Met semi-regularly during the reporting period. SEPFPOE's 3-year term as the Technical Secretariat concluded in 2019. (7)
Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group	Coordinates the government's efforts to combat human trafficking, develops and implements the National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking, and promotes the development of comprehensive anti-trafficking legislation. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice, and includes the participation of the Prime Minister's office. (9,10,14) Met six times during the reporting period and continued to spread awareness about the threat of trafficking in persons. In coordination with the IOM, published the Timor-Leste Migration Governance Indicators, which summarize well-developed and underdeveloped areas of migration governance in Timor-Leste. (24,44) Continued to advocate the establishment of the Anti-Trafficking Commission as mandated in the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking. (10) Developed a government-wide standard operating procedure on victim identification composed of 25 questions to determine whether a case is human trafficking, which is awaiting formal approval for use from the Ministry of Justice. (10,41)
Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion (MSSI)—National Commission for Children's Rights	Overseen by MSSI. Responsible for conducting awareness-raising campaigns related to child labor. (7) Works to ensure the well-being and healthy development of children. (24) Body was active during the reporting period. (25)
Provedor for Human Rights and Justice	Assumes responsibility for sharing information related to child labor to CNTI, SEPFPOE, and PNTL. (7) Members include SEPFPOE, PNTL, the National Commission for Children's Rights, MSSI, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of State and Administration. (24) During the reporting period, drafted legislation to provide protections to people with disabilities, including children. Monitored and promoted access to education and children's rights in the justice system. (25)

The Government of Timor-Leste drafted implementation plans to replace the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group with an Anti-Human Trafficking Commission. The government has not yet established the new Anti-Human Trafficking Commission, which will have oversight on the Law on Preventing and Combatting Human Trafficking. (9,10,14,39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Timor-Leste Project for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Aims to strengthen implementation of ILO C. 182 by establishing the Child Labor Commission Working Group, developing a hazardous work list, and creating a national action plan against child labor. Launched in 2009 in partnership with ILO and the Government of Brazil. (40) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (24)
Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011–2030)	Provides short-term and long-term plans for the nation's development, including the eradication of the worst forms of child labor, poverty alleviation, and implementation of social transfer programs. Specifies commitments to improve the educational system over the next 20 years. (45) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (25)

Although the National Action Plan Against Child Labor, which aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Timor-Leste by 2025 and all forms of child labor by 2030, was finalized in 2016, the Council of Ministers has yet to approve it. (2,7,17,39,43,48) However, key stakeholders, such as community based organizations, NGOs, and donor nations, have begun to implement the plan. (7,39)

Although the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group drafted an extension to the National Action Plan Combating Human Trafficking that ended in 2018, the Council of Ministers has not yet approved it. (10,14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Education and Outreach Program†	SEPFPOPE and CNTI education and awareness-raising program, located in five primary schools in Dili that target children who are at risk for involvement in child labor. (40) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken relative to the project.
Services for Street Children‡	Government-funded safe house and support services for street children provided by the Youth Communication Forum. (49) Program was active during the reporting period. (24)
Mother's Purse (Bolsa Mãe)‡	Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion program that provides an annual cash subsidy of $60 to $180 to poor families with a female head of household. Aims to improve the well-being of children by conditioning the subsidy on children's school attendance and regular medical visits. (40,50) Program was active during the reporting period. (24)
Casa Vida‡	Joint program between the Timor-Leste Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion and the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade's Nabilian Program and Shelter Initiative. Provides shelter, health assistance, and psychological counseling to minor victims, including victims of child labor and its worst forms. (9) Provides specialized assistance for girls up to age 18 who have escaped situations of sexual violence. (24) Receives referrals from civil society organizations as well as PNTL/VPU. (51) Program was active during the reporting period. (24)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAPI6)*	USDOL-funded global project implemented by ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. (52) During the reporting period, provided support for finalization and launch of the national child labor survey. (18) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Timor-Leste.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (53-57)

Although the government has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has developed programs to assist children working in agriculture and on family farms, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Timor-Leste (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that children receive adequate training specific to the type of work they are undertaking, and ensure that their health, safety, and morals are protected in accordance with international minimum age standards for hazardous work.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law protects children between the ages of 17 and 18 from engagement in all the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the List of Hazardous Occupations and Activities Prohibited for Children are harmonized with the Labor Code and Penal Code.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities in which light work may be undertaken.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish labor law enforcement information, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that labor and criminal law enforcement agencies receive sufficient funding to carry out inspections and investigations, especially in rural areas of Timor-Leste, including funding for vehicles and fuel.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy is staffed with the appropriate number of labor inspectors to conduct the targeted number of labor inspections.	2018 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy has the legal authority to inspect in the informal sector.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that labor and criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient training so they are able to correctly identify and classify violations related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal and civil cases are tried in a timely manner and that cases of human trafficking are properly classified.	2019
Coordination	Ensure the establishment of the Anti-Human Trafficking Commission.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy to combat child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Adopt a national policy to combat human trafficking.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Create a centralized database to capture human trafficking data that is accessible to all relevant government stakeholders.	2019
	Improve access to education by eliminating school related fees, and by providing safe and healthy sanitation facilities, especially for girls.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that pregnant girls have access to education, including transfer documents.	2019
	Ensure that social programs are fully implemented, including the Child Labor Education and Outreach Program.	2018 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor and the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Togo made a minimal advancement in its efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed a tripartite agreement with the Governments of Benin and Burkina Faso to increase cooperation on efforts to combat child trafficking. However, children in Togo engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. The government has not devoted sufficient resources to combat child labor, and labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties for child labor violations. Coordinating bodies to combat child labor were not active during the reporting period, and the government does not collect and publish data related to its efforts to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Togo engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Togo.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	29.6 (2,131,395)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	86.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (8)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2013–2014. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/ Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, including spraying pesticides (5,10)
	Production of charcoal† (10)
Industry	Working in quarries and sand mines, including excavating, crushing rocks, sifting gravel, and carrying heavy loads† (1,6,10-12)
	Working in tailoring (10)
	Construction (6,10,13)
Services	Domestic work† (1,2,4,5,10,12,13)
	Carrying heavy loads,† and small-scale vending in markets (9,10,14)
	Work as motorcycle repairmen (6,10,15,16)
	Garbage scavenging (6,10,15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (10,14,15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,7,10,12,17)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including in coffee, cocoa, and cotton; domestic work; quarries; and markets, including carrying heavy loads; each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,14,17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Togo is a source and transit country for victims of human trafficking to neighboring countries, primarily for domestic work, work in agriculture, and commercial sexual exploitation. (2,4,18,19) Parents may be complicit in child trafficking as a result of confiage, which involves sending a child to a relative or friend to attend school in a larger town or city, a practice that may place children at risk of exploitation as a result of internal human trafficking. (3,7,10,13,19,20)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although education is free and compulsory by law, parents must pay for associate fees, uniforms, and school supplies, which makes education prohibitively expensive for many families. (21-24) Research found that long distances to schools, as well as physical and sexual abuse in schools, also posed barriers to education for some children. (7,21,23-27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Togo has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 150 of the Labor Code; Article 262 of the Children's Code; Article 881.1a of the Penal Code (28-30)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution (34)

* No conscription (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Administrative Reform (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Administrative Reform (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including child labor laws. (13,24) Through its Unit to Combat Child Labor (CNLTE), withdraws children from child labor situations, raises awareness, and collects data. (35)
Ministry of Justice and Government Relations	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and prosecutes violators. (35)
Ministry of Social Action, Promotion of Women and Literacy (MASPFA), Director General for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of child labor issues, enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor, provides technical assistance, and leads government efforts to combat human trafficking. (13,16,36) Supports a network of 42 foster families in 4 regional capitals. (37) Operates the Allo 1011 hotline for reporting child abuse, including child trafficking. (13,17,37,38) In 2019, Allo 1011 received 13,769 calls, 187 of which were related to child trafficking or economic exploitation. (10)
Ministry of Security's Division of Drugs, Morals, and Pimping	Investigates crimes involving child victims, including child trafficking. Operates as part of the National Police in all five regions of Togo. (39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$77,193 (35)	$71,851 (10)
Number of Labor Inspectors	131 (35)	128 (10)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	No (28)	No (10)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (37)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	N/A (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	Yes (10)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	385 (35)	Unknown (10)
Number Conducted at Worksite	385 (35)	Unknown (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (35)	716 (40)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown(35)	Unknown (10)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (35)	Yes (10)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (10)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (35)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (37)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (37)	Yes (10)

In addition to the 128 labor inspectors, MOL employs 60 tax and health inspectors who may report labor infractions, but none of these inspectors are authorized to assess penalties. (10) MOL lacks sufficient resources for transportation, which may hinder its ability to conduct investigations. (10,24) In addition, the Labor Code makes labor inspectors responsible for reconciliation and arbitration in collective disputes, which may detract from their primary duties of conducting inspections and enforcing the Labor Code. (28,41) Togo allocated fewer resources to labor enforcement than the previous year. (10) Routine inspections were conducted, however the majority of child labor occurs in the informal sector, where inspectors are legally allowed to inspect, but rarely do. (10,28)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (37)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (35)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (20)	Unknown (10)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Number of Violations Found	118 (20)	Unknown (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (35)	Unknown (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (37)	Yes (10)

Investigators lacked the resources to adequately enforce the law. Research also indicates that poor record keeping, a shortage of physical copies of existing child labor laws throughout the country, and high investigator turnover result in gaps in knowledge and enforcement capacity. (10) Cases involving child trafficking may be settled outside of court due to difficulties gathering evidence. Additionally, judges may be reluctant to impose fines or prison sentences in cases in which parents are involved due to a fear of perpetuating the poverty that originally led them to violate child trafficking laws. (14)

The Ministry of Labor confirmed that they did not send any cases to the Ministry of Justice to investigate in 2019. This is why there are no investigations or convictions. (40) The Ministry of Labor settles cases with mediation rather than bringing criminal charges, and in 2019 all cases were resolved by mediation. (40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding constraints.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinating government body for child labor issues. Comprises representatives from 17 ministries and NGOs; the Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Administrative Reform's Unit to Combat Child Labor serves as the permanent secretariat. (10) Operates at the community level. (10,15)
Local Vigilance Committees (LVCs)	Aim to address the worst forms of child labor, and are overseen by the National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and composed of local government officials and community members. During the reporting period, LVCs rescued trafficked children and attempted to detain alleged traffickers and bring them to the authorities. (10)

The Government of Togo does not reliably disburse the allocated budget for the National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, limiting its ability to combat child labor and support data collection efforts. (10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy of Social Protection	MASPFA policy that aims to improve social safety nets, strengthen mechanisms to combat the exploitation of children, and promote systematic birth registration. (42) During the reporting period MASPFA evaluated the effectiveness of previous National Action Plan Against Child Labor. (40)
Multilateral Agreements to Combat Child Trafficking†	In December 2019, the Governments of Togo, Benin, and Burkina Faso signed a trilateral agreement to combat child trafficking. (10,43)
National Development Plan (2018–2022)	Aims to improve economic growth, structurally transform the Togolese economy, and strengthen social protection and inclusion measures, including the implementation of a national biometric identification system. (10,44) During the reporting period, the government created a technical committee to reorganize the registry office to ensure that all births are recorded. (20)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (26,45)

Research was unable to determine whether all policies were implemented during the reporting period. (10) A National Plan of Action Against Child Labor is undergoing technical validation, but has yet to be adopted. (23,46) The Ministry of Social Action, Promotion of Women and Literacy's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Cell is working on a draft national action plan to combat human trafficking, and the Council of Ministers is reviewing a draft decree to create a coordinating body that would oversee its implementation. (20) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Plan (2010–2020). (47) Although the Government of Togo has adopted a policy addressing child trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Development Plan (2018–2023)	During the reporting period, the government continued the implementation of the 5-year plan with a social development pillar that expands child related programs, including increasing school enrollment, providing additional food and drug supplies to orphaned and vulnerable children, and expanding immunization coverage. Continues to offer shelters for vulnerable children, including those referred by Allo 1011 . (10)
World Bank-Funded Programs	World Bank programs that aim to combat child labor by improving social safety nets for vulnerable families and increasing access to education. These projects include the Education and Institutional Strengthening Project 2 (2015–2019), a $27.8 million project that aimed to revise course textbooks for grades one through three, provide teacher training, identify recipients of school grants, and select 80 sites for promoting girls' education. This project closed in September 2019 with noted success, fulfilling five of its six objectives. The Safety Nets and Basic Services Project (2017–2020), a $29 million project implemented by MASPFA and the Ministry of Grassroots Development, aims to provide social safety nets to poor communities. (10,16,49-53) Research was unable to determine whether the Social Safety Nets was active during the period.
Forum of Traditional and Religious Chiefs of Togo on the Harmful Social and Cultural Practices that Affect Children†	MASPFA-funded program that aims to eliminate traditional practices that may contribute to child trafficking by educating local leaders on child labor issues and the importance of education. (35) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Togo

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (24,37,49)

Social programs focus on alleviating poverty and promoting education rather than targeting specific sectors of child labor, such as domestic work. The government relies heavily on NGOs and international organizations for the implementation of social programs. (10,54) A shortage of funds may hinder program implementation. (10) As a result, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work. (10)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Togo (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing the inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2019
	Publish information about the number and type of inspections conducted, as well as the number of child labor penalties that were imposed and collected.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors have the time and resources to carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring of labor laws throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2009 – 2019
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations conducted, criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal investigators have sufficient financial and physical resources to adequately enforce criminal laws against child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal labor law enforcement officials receive refresher courses and that all regional offices have copies of relevant laws related to child labor.	2009 – 2019
	Enforce legal penalties for criminal violations, such as child trafficking.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Provide coordinating bodies with sufficient resources to implement their mandates to combat child labor.	2009 – 2016; 2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure child labor is integrated into all relevant policies.	2016 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.	2013 – 2019
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a National Action Plan.	2019
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees; ensuring that schools are free from sexual and physical violence; and increasing the number of schools.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that all social programs are implemented and that data is published on their activities.	2019
	Ensure that social protection programs to combat child labor receive adequate funding, are sufficient to address the scope of the problem in all relevant sectors.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs focus on targeting specific sectors of child labor in addition to alleviating poverty and promoting education.	2019

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau, and in 2019, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor, as the law does not criminally prohibit forced labor and child trafficking. In addition, Tokelau has not established a minimum age for work and does not prohibit hazardous occupations for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau.

Although education in Tokelau is free, some children struggle to access reliable transportation to attend school. (1,2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tokelau is a territory of New Zealand; however, New Zealand statutory law does not apply to Tokelau unless it is expressly extended to Tokelau. (3) International treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau. New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau. (2,3) None of the key international child labor conventions ratified by New Zealand have been made applicable to Tokelau, including ILO Convention 138, Minimum Age of Work; ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor; the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC); the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table I). However, gaps exist in Tokelau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table I. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 63(1) of the Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidence Rules Act (5,6)
Free Public Education	Yes		Part 1, Section 3 of the Government of New Zealand's Education Act (7)

* No conscription (8)

† No standing military (1)

NO ADVANCEMENT

New Zealand is responsible for the defense of Tokelau at the territory's request and consultation. (4,9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
National Assembly (General Fono)	Hears cases related to child welfare concerns, including child labor; if local village leaders are unable to resolve the case at the local level. (2)
New Zealand Ombudsmen	Addresses and, if necessary, investigates citizens' complaints against a government office, including complaints related to child labor, child health, safety, and education. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Tokelau has established a policy related to child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (10) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Table 4. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a minimum age for work that meets international standards and conforms to the compulsory education age.	2016 – 2019
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2016 – 2019
	Establish laws that criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage, the sale and trafficking of children, and slavery.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit the trafficking of children domestically and internationally for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and do not require the use of force to be established for the crime of trafficking.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy.	2019
Social Programs	Establish a reliable transportation program to ensure that children are able to attend school.	2018 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Tonga made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Education continued its program to increase access to education for children with disabilities. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Tonga is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Research indicates there are no labor inspectors and there is no legal authority to conduct labor inspections. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in farming and fishing. Gaps in the legal framework also remain; the country has no laws specifying a minimum age for work or defining hazardous forms of work for children under age 18, leaving children unprotected from labor exploitation. In addition, the government has not integrated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into a policy or program to address child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tonga engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in farming and fishing. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tonga. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Subsistence farming, fishing (1,4,5)
Services	Vending (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (4-8)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4-6,8) Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (4,9,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government of Tonga has not published data on child labor. The Ministry of Trade and Economic Development (MTED) (formerly the Ministry of Commerce, Consumer, Innovation, Trade, and Labor) labor study, which was conducted from December 2012–January 2013 and resulted in an internal “Report of a Spot Survey on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Tonga,” has yet to be published. (4,5,11)

Tonga

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

There was evidence indicating that the growing methamphetamine epidemic has resulted in drug dealers starting to recruit school-aged children to assist with drug deliveries, while also getting them addicted to the drug. (4,9,10) There have been media reports of children as young as age 13 being arrested for possession of drugs for the purposes of distribution. (5)

Many school buildings remain inaccessible to students with physical disabilities, resulting in the attendance rates of children with disabilities, at all educational levels, to be lower than children without disabilities. (4,5,12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tonga has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tonga's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Government of Tonga noted that it was in the process of ratifying ILO C. 138. Consultations were underway in 2019, but progress was derailed by the formation of a new government following the death of the prime minister in September 2019. (4,5)

The MTED has not passed the revised Employment Relations Bill, which would establish a minimum age for non-hazardous and hazardous work and would prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, the Parliament has not determined the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (1,4,5,11,17,18) Once the bill is passed, the labor inspectorate will also be given legal authority to conduct labor inspections. (11,18)

The Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act is insufficient to meet the international standard for the prohibition of child trafficking because it does not specifically prohibit the domestic trafficking of children. (6,13,19)

The Criminal Offenses Act prohibits the procurement and use of women and girls under age 21 for “unlawful carnal connection[s];” it is not clear if that prohibition encompasses child prostitution for children over the age of 16. It also does not criminalize the procurement or use of boys in commercial sexual exploitation. (14,20,25) In addition, the Act does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use, procurement, or offering of children under age 14 in the production of pornography and the use, procurement, or offering of children of any age in live pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (14,20,21) The Act does not specifically prohibit using children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the Defense Services Act does not prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (15)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, there is a policy that sufficiently provides for free basic education to all children between the ages of 6 and 14. (4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of labor inspectors and labor inspections at the national level in Tonga may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Trade and Economic Development (MTED)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor and the worst forms of child labor, through business license inspectors and a chief labor inspector. The position of Chief Labor Inspector is currently vacant. (1,4,18)
Tonga Police, Transnational Crime Unit, and Domestic Violence Unit	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1) With NGOs, handle and coordinate cases related to women and children. (4)
Ministry of Internal Affairs, Immigration Department	Collaborates with Tonga Police and MTED on the enforcement of criminal laws in cases in which foreign nationals are involved in the worst forms of child labor. (1,4)

There is no labor inspectorate and no legal authority to conduct labor inspections in Tonga. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the absence of labor inspectors and labor inspections at the national level in Tonga may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Inadequate resources, including a lack of funding to hire and train the labor inspectors needed to target sectors in which child labor is present, hamper the government’s capacity to enforce child labor laws in Tonga. (1,21) Child labor inspections are complaint-driven, with police called in for suspected cases of child labor. In addition, the government has yet to establish an adequate referral mechanism among the labor authorities, the police, and social welfare services. (4,5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Tonga took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (18)	No (5)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (5) The Tonga Police coordinate with NGOs to handle labor abuse cases relating to women and children. In addition, government maintains and operates a 24-hour hotline for emergency assistance, which is available to victims of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. (22) However, no formal referral mechanism exists. (4,5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (23) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

The Tonga Strategic Development Plan Nine indirectly addresses the root causes of child labor as it seeks to improve economic opportunities in the country, including those for youth. In addition, the Tonga Education Policy Framework, supported by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand through 2019, focuses on improving school quality, achieving universal basic education, and improving management within the Ministry of Education, thereby having a positive impact by reducing child labor through universal education. (4,5) Although the Government of Tonga has adopted the Tonga Strategic Development Plan Nine and the Tonga Education Policy Framework, strategies to prevent and eliminate child labor have not been integrated into those plans.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (24) Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (24) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education and Training continued its program to bring children with disabilities into primary schools. (5) Although the Government of Tonga has implemented a program that addresses the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children in commercial sexual exploitation, agriculture, and fishing.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tonga (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2017 – 2019
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2017 – 2019
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol.	2017 – 2019
	Establish labor regulations that include a minimum age of 15 for employment and a minimum age of 18 for hazardous work, in accordance with international standards.	2009 – 2019
	Create and publish a list of hazardous occupations and activities that are prohibited for children.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that laws specifically prohibit domestic human trafficking of children.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation for both girls and boys under the age of 18.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under the age of 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Hire and train labor inspectors to conduct workplace inspections and enforce child labor laws, including the position of Chief Labor Inspector.	2016 – 2019
	Establish and fund a labor inspectorate with the authority to conduct labor inspections, including routine inspections rather than performing inspections solely based on complaints received, and assess penalties for child labor violations.	2019
	Provide labor authorities and criminal investigators with the training and resources necessary to enforce laws prohibiting child labor, including laws related to the worst forms of child labor and refresher courses.	2013 – 2019
	Establish formal referral mechanisms among the labor authorities, the police, and social welfare services to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement activities, efforts, and relevant data.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including its worst forms, to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Update all school buildings to ensure accessibility for students with disabilities.	2018 – 2019
	Implement social programs to address all forms of child labor, including its worst forms.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Tunisia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted a bill regulating the work of private recruitment agencies that send Tunisians to work abroad, creating new positions to monitor the activities of these agencies and note any fraud committed. It also published a new hazardous work list. In addition, it investigated allegations of child trafficking—including forced labor—at the Koranic association in Regueb, subsequently shutting down 11 other associations operating unauthorized Koranic schools in 6 different governorates. However, children in Tunisia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in scavenging for garbage and in street work. The law’s minimum age protections cannot be enforced with respect to children who are engaged in work in the informal sector on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order to access the property. The government also failed to provide data on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tunisia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in scavenging for garbage and in street work. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Tunisia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.0 (50,364)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	2.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2011–2012. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming (2,8-12)
	Fishing (2)
	Animal husbandry (2)
	Forestry (2)
Industry	Construction (2,3,12)
Services	Domestic work (2,3,5,10,13)
	Street work, including shining shoes, begging, vending, auto washing and repairing, and scavenging garbage† (2,8,11,14,15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,9,15-21)
	Use in illicit activities, including stealing, smuggling, and drug trafficking (3,9,11,12,14-17,20,21)
	Forced labor in domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4,9,11,15,22,23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Tunisia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Migrants and child migrants from Sub-Saharan countries, fleeing unrest in neighboring countries, and young girls from Tunisia’s northwest and other interior regions are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (4,15-17,23) A 2017 National Child Labor Survey indicated that 7.9 percent of all children are engaged in child labor, with 63.2 percent of those involved in hazardous work. The northwest region—consisting of the governorates of Béja, Jendouba, Kef, and Siliana—noted the highest incidence of child labor at 27.7 percent. (2) Figures from the report indicated that children work below the country’s minimum age of employment with 48.8 percent in agriculture and fishing, 20.2 percent in commerce, 10.9 percent in manufacturing, 6.4 percent in domestic labor, and 4.7 percent in construction. (2,3) The government has not yet made the full dataset from the survey publicly available or allowed other government agencies to access it, leaving the nature and causes of children’s involvement in specific forms of child labor unknown.

Students face barriers to education, especially in rural areas, due to inadequate transportation and household poverty. (3,8,9,11,13) It is estimated that approximately 100,000 students, including a disproportionate number of girls, drop out each year, some because of physical violence in schools. (10,11,24-26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tunisia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 53 of the Labor Code (27)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the National Service Law (34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 2(5) of the Law on the Prevention and the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons; Articles 3 and 18 of the Child Protection Code (31,32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 1 of the Law on Education (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38 and 46 of the Constitution; Law on Education (35,36)

The Ministry of Vocational Training and Employment drafted a bill related to job placement efforts for Tunisians abroad by private employment agencies. The draft law provides for the creation of a new body of inspectors, whose task will be to monitor the activities of and note any fraud committed by these private employment agencies. (20) In 2019, Tunisia became the 45th state to accede to the Council of Europe's Convention on the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, with the Convention entering into force February 1, 2020. (20,37)

The list of hazardous work first adopted in 2000 and revised in 2019 was published in the official register in April 2020, thereby bringing it into effect. (29) Article 1 of the new hazardous work list prevents the employment of children in street work, specifically the itinerant sale of items in public streets, on beaches, and in public transport. (3,29,38-40) However, the government acknowledges, as evident from the high rates of recidivism, that the fines and penalties for child labor law violations are not dissuasive. (41)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA)	Conducts labor inspections and assesses fines and penalties for infractions. (9,27) Employs social workers and medical inspectors to assist in addressing issues of child labor. (3) Collaborates with the Ministry of Education (MOE) and the Ministry of Health (MOH) to identify and provide support to children vulnerable to child labor. (9,11,18) Monitors the implementation of labor legislation, inspects violations, and initiates prosecutions through the General Directorate of Labor Inspection. (21) Inspects cases of children working under the age of 18, provides medical testing for children, and provides individual authorizations to enable children to appear in public concerts or participate as actors or supporting actors in ads or movies through the General Administration for Medicine and Safety Inspection. (21) Implements social and orientation programs in the field through the General Administration for Social Development. (21)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Childhood (MWFC)	Gathers evidence and conducts investigations on child welfare cases; conducts needs assessments and intervention plans. Acts as judicial police in cases of imminent danger to children through its Delegates for the Protection of Children. (11,32)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Investigates reports of the worst forms of child labor as a criminal violation, including complaints that are outside of the labor inspectorate's mandate and complaints in the informal sector. (14) Through its Child Protection Service in the National Police, addresses the commercial sexual exploitation of children and coordinates with MSA and MWFC regarding violations. (9,11,42) Through its Judicial Police, coordinates with MSA to refer cases of at-risk youth. (9,43-45)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts and the criminal enforcement of child labor laws. (18)
Ministry of Education (MOE)	Alerts parents and authorities to truancy in an effort to ensure children attend required schooling. (3)

In 2019, Tunisia became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating commitments towards achieving Sustainable Development Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, human trafficking, and child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (46) The Government of Tunisia created an action plan, which includes the goal, among others, of establishing a database to collect and share data among various public agencies that intervene on issues of child labor. (46)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to conduct inspections and enforce minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order to access the property.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January to October 2019.

Labor law enforcement mechanisms do not exist to enforce the minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order. (3,9,11) The government noted that the budget for staffing and logistics, such as fuel and transportation, were inadequate to carry out inspections, especially in remote areas of the country. Ministry officials noted that the labor inspectorate lacked resources to monitor the informal economy, estimated to constitute 38 percent of the country's GDP, and employ 54 percent of the country's total workforce. (3,9,11,12,26,49)

Over the course of the first 6 months of 2019, the MSA intervened in 45 cases of child exploitation, providing assistance to victims. (20) The government did not provide information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected. (21,48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publication of criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (39)	Unknown

During 2019, UNODC trained 40 judges, 13 investigating magistrates, 13 public prosecutors, and 12 police officers. (20) IOM assisted in training 83 officials from MSA on trafficking in persons crimes, detection techniques, and victim protection. There were also various workshops for 36 officials from the MSA on care for survivors of trafficking and listening techniques. (20) The MSA conducted training for 25 labor inspectors and 24 social workers on specialized points of contact for child trafficking victims. (5) The Ministry of Justice reported on the ongoing prosecution of a number of cases with 34 related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (21) However, the government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Following a Ministry of the Interior (MOI) investigation of allegations of child trafficking—including forced labor—at the Koranic association in Regueb in 2019, Tunisian authorities shut down 11 other associations operating unauthorized Koranic schools in 6 different governorates. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Leadership Committee to Combat Child Labor (PAN-TN)	Coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Led by MSA, includes membership of 11 other ministries and 3 unions, with support from ILO. (14,50,51) In 2019, research was unable to determine whether additional efforts were undertaken related to the prior year's draft bylaw to create a Fight Against Child Labor Unit and an accompanying Operational Strategic Plan within MSA, requiring the Minister's approval. Moreover, research was unable to determine whether efforts were undertaken to coordinate actors on these issues, participate in studies, analyze information, publish and collect data, and prepare and implement work plans and national reports. Nevertheless, the Leadership Committee continued to meet and play an active role in planning and coordinating activities. (3,52)
National Authority on Trafficking in Persons (Instance Nationale de Lutte Contre la Traite des Personnes)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts and raises awareness of human trafficking issues. Includes membership of 12 ministries, 2 members of civil society, a media representative, and a member of the National Commission of Human Rights. (18,44,53-55) In 2019, the National Authority conducted a number of trainings for government officials and enforcement officials on the issues of trafficking in persons. (20) During the reporting period, the National Authority took a number of steps to activate and enhance international and judicial cooperation in trafficking in persons through leadership within policy networks and hosting visiting delegations and exchanges with other countries in Sub-Saharan Africa. (48)

In 2019, the government established an ad-hoc committee to review proposed and existing laws related to child exploitation. (20)

During the reporting period, the government established two participatory work teams in Jendouba and Sfax comprising child protection representatives, doctors, labor inspectors, and social workers, representatives of the MOI, and social parties. Teams are under the supervision of the Regional Director of Social Affairs. The team in Sfax focuses on child labor in the service sector, whereas the team in Jendouba focuses on child labor in agriculture. (21)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Labor National Action Plan (PAN-TN) (2015–2020)	Aims to raise awareness, build the capacity of stakeholders, encourage action from NGOs and the public, improve policies, and promote the implementation of existing laws and policies. (14,42,50,56) In 2019, PAN-TN continued to operate, with the Leadership Committee meeting and continuing work on training and development documents. (52)
National Strategy for the Combat of Trafficking in Persons (2018–2023)	Aims to establish a global evidence-based approach to address trafficking in persons by coordinating national and international actors. (4,15) In 2019, the Government of Tunisia continued to implement its National Strategy and coordinated with civil society organizations and the IOM to raise awareness about the National Strategy and trafficking in persons in general. (48)
UNICEF Country Program Document (2015–2019)	Aimed to improve quality of education, decrease dropout rates, increase access to early education, teach life skills to adolescents, and improve access to information that protects children against violence and economic exploitation. (57) In 2019, research indicated project activities continued. (48)

The National Authority on Trafficking in Persons and IOM organized an event in June 2019, with 11 other civil society organizations to discuss trafficking in persons and to publicize the 2018–2023 National Strategy for the Combat of Trafficking in Persons. Other partner organizations of the National Authority also conducted awareness campaigns throughout the reporting period, including Avocats sans Frontières (Lawyers without Borders), Terre d’Asile, and the Amal Association. (48) As part of the implementation of the national strategy, the National Agency for Employment and Independent Work (ANETI) raised awareness among job seekers through its online platform and during job consultations. ANETI also advised job seekers to avoid communicating with unauthorized placement agencies, as these may provide fake employment contracts. (48)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in Tunisia aim to conduct research on child labor and strengthen Tunisia’s ability to implement its Child Labor National Action Plan, a multi-stakeholder effort involving government, business, and civil society. These projects include PROTECTE (2016–2021), $3 million project implemented by ILO; and Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP), $7 million project implemented in at least 10 countries by ILO. (9,14,52,58,59) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Support Efforts to Combat Human Trafficking (2014–2022)	USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM to carry out anti-human trafficking activities in collaboration with MOJ, MOI, MSA, and MWFC. Includes three objectives: (1) build the capacity of relevant institutions and agencies to identify and assist victims of human trafficking based on their individual needs; (2) strengthen cross-sector cooperation and the sharing of information through the implementation of a national referral mechanism; and (3) conduct an awareness-raising campaign to keep children in school and discourage illegal migration that could lead to human trafficking. (42) In 2019, IOM continued to implement program activities, including its support of the government’s efforts to implement the National Strategy for the Combat of Trafficking in Persons. (48)
American Bar Association Rule of Law Initiative	USDOS-funded project to assist the Government of Tunisia’s National Authority to Combat Trafficking in Persons and enhance capacity of legal actors to prosecute, investigate, and adjudicate human trafficking cases in a victim-centered manner, which began activities in 2018. (55) In 2019, research indicated that project activities continued. (48)
Shelters and Services for Victims of Human Trafficking†	The Government of Tunisia operates shelters to serve victims of human trafficking, predominantly children, which provide lodging, food, clothing, psychological services, legal aid through a network of pro bono lawyers, and free medical care in collaboration with MOH. Adults and unaccompanied children are placed in dedicated centers to receive schooling. (16,45,60–62) In 2019, these shelters operated and continued to provide services. (5)
Centers to Provide Aid to Victims of Child Labor†	The government maintains 79 youth centers that can serve up to 6,000 children engaged in child labor or vulnerable to child labor. (42,63) In 2019, these centers operated and continued to provide services. (48)

Program	Description
Programs to Reduce School Dropout Rates†	MOE-funded School Dropout Prevention Program maintains about 2,300 social protection units in schools and mobile units in rural areas to monitor students and prevent school dropout. (63) The Ministry of Vocational Training and Employment continued to operate a project to incorporate students who have dropped out into vocational training programs. (21)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (44,60)

Although Tunisia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in agriculture and fishing, commerce, manufacturing, domestic labor, and construction. (14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tunisia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Provide adequate resources, including fuel and transportation, for the labor inspectorate to conduct additional inspections, particularly in remote areas and in the informal economy.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that mechanisms exist to enforce the minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order.	2014 – 2019
	Collect and publish information related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2019
	Collect and publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2019
	Increase penalties for those who employ children in violation of child labor law protections to reduce recidivism.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Publish the microdata of the 2017 National Child Labor Survey so that they can be used to inform programming and policies.	2017 – 2019
	Address barriers to education, especially for girls in rural areas, such as unreliable transportation, household poverty, and physical violence.	2015 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including in agriculture, fishing, commerce, manufacturing, domestic labor, and construction.	2015 – 2019

In 2019, Tuvalu made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government ratified ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor and conducted a baseline survey to map and assess its child protection system. Tuvalu also significantly increased the budget for its labor inspectorate during the reporting period. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Tuvalu engage in child labor in fishing and domestic work. The government has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, Tuvalu lacks data to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Tuvalu engage in child labor in fishing and domestic work. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tuvalu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (4)

Source for all other data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, activities unknown (1,3,6)
Services	Domestic work (3,6)

Tuvalu lacks data to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in the country. (3,6,7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tuvalu has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

Tuvalu

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government ratified ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor, in June 2019. The government is also in the process of ratifying the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. (3)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tuvalu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 42 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (6,8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 44 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (6,8)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 46 and 48 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Articles 244 and 249 of the Penal Code; Article 69 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Article 18 of the Constitution of Tuvalu (6,8-11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 68 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Articles 136 and 244 of the Penal Code (9,11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Articles 136–143, and 166 of the Penal Code (6,8,9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Articles 141–142 of the Penal Code (6,8,9)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (8)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Education Order (12)
Free Public Education	No		Free Education Policy (6)

† No standing military (13)

During the reporting period, the Department of Labor, along with the ILO, conducted consultations on ratifying international labor conventions and implementing its international commitments with the government and NGO stakeholders. (3) Additionally, the government undertook consultations on the draft Child Protection and Welfare Bill, with support from UNICEF. This will be the first law in Tuvalu to make comprehensive provisions for issues related to the rights, protection, and welfare of children. (3)

The Government of Tuvalu has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children; previous provisions only applied to a male person under the age of 18 in the industrial, mining, and fishing sectors. (2,8,14)

Although child trafficking is prohibited in Tuvalu, the law prescribes a harsher punishment for individuals involved in the trafficking of adults than for those involved in the trafficking of children. (11)

Research did not find any laws in Tuvalu that provide free basic education; however, there is a policy that provides for free basic education. (2,3,6,15-17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (15)
Tuvalu Police Force	Investigates and enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,6,15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of information on labor law enforcement.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$43,000 (3)	$62,000 (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	4 (6)	4 (3)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (3)

In 2019, the Government of Tuvalu increased its funding for the labor inspectorate from $43,000 in 2018 to $62,000. While there is no breakdown information available of the allocation to the labor inspectorate, Tuvalu's small population and the concentration of child labor occurring in its capital, Funafuti, suggests that the financial resource allocation appeared to be adequate in addressing child labor in Tuvalu. (3)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement, including ability to assess penalties, initial training for new labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted, and the number of unannounced inspections. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (6)	Unknown (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee on the Convention on the Rights of the Child	Coordinates child protection issues and implements the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Led by the Ministry of Education, and includes the Police and Ministries of Labor and Social Welfare. (3) Maintains a Child Protection Desk to support and coordinate the implementation of child protection efforts, and ensures coherence of child protection intervention efforts. (3,6,17,18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (20)
Tuvalu Human Rights National Action Plan (2016–2020)	Consolidates the government’s human rights coordination and delivery of services, including implementation of the UN CRC. (19) This policy was active during the reporting period. (17)
Child Protection Work Plan	Includes the drafting of a Child Protection Bill and a Child Protection in Schools Policy, with implementation plans and cost estimates. Involves public relations activities, such as awareness raising and advocacy. (21) During the reporting period, the government continued to engage researchers to undertake child protection baseline research as part of its 2017 Child Protection Work Plan. The research is expected to determine the prevalence and causes of child protection issues. (3)
Free Education Policy	Provides free primary education for all children in Tuvalu. (6) This policy was active during the reporting period. (3)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,22)

During the reporting period, the government coordinated with UNICEF for technical assistance in social welfare policy to assist the Ministry of Home Affairs and Rural Development to implement the Child Protection Policy and Plan. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the lack of programs addressing child labor in the fishing sector.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (23) Prioritizes children’s rights, including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (23) During the reporting period, the Office of the Attorney General and Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports, with support from UNICEF Pacific, began implementing various child protection interventions that align with the 2018–2022 UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program. (3,6) Also in 2019, consultants were hired to conduct child protection baseline research. (17)

‡ The government had other programs that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,17,18,26)

During the reporting period, the government conducted a child protection baseline survey to provide a comprehensive child protection system map and assessment, with support from UNICEF. (3) Research found no evidence of programs that specifically address child labor in the fishing sector.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tuvalu (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict, UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Palermo Protocol.	2013 – 2019
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for all children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2019
	Ensure that the law prescribes a harsher punishment for individuals involved in the trafficking of children than for those involved in the trafficking of adults.	2019
Enforcement	Publish information about the training system for investigators.	2017 – 2019
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including ability to assess penalties, initial training for new labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted, and the number of unannounced inspections.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2010 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor in the fishing sector.	2009 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Uganda made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted a new National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor, and the Anti-Human Trafficking National Task Force published updated regulations to prevent trafficking in persons and drafted a new national action plan against human trafficking. In addition, the government approved funding to increase services to street children working in Kampala. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Uganda is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it implemented a regression in practice that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. The government failed to take active measures to prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials, including police and immigration officers, who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. Despite public acknowledgement by the Speaker of Parliament of official complicity in child trafficking, no government officials have been held accountable for their role in facilitating child trafficking. Children in Uganda engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. The lack of a centralized supervisory authority, and inadequate funding, training, and resources, hampered the capacity of law enforcement agencies to conduct child labor inspections and investigations. Gaps in the legal framework persist, including insufficient laws regulating the minimum age for employment and hazardous work. In addition, existing programs are inadequate to address child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uganda engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. (4-7) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Uganda.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The results from the last National Labour Force Survey, published in 2018, show that an estimated 2,057,000 children are in child labor, which is a slight increase from the previous 2011/2012 survey. (34) Children in Uganda, including boys and girls, are vulnerable to human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (2) While child victims of human trafficking in Uganda have typically been trafficked internally from rural to urban areas, recent media reports highlighted the trafficking of children to countries such as Kenya and Somalia, some of whom were rumored in unverified media reports to have ended up in the hands of the terrorist group Al-Shabaab. (35,36) Some children were also trafficked as far as the Middle East and South Central Asia. (37) Children from rural areas, especially the Karamoja region, are vulnerable to human trafficking, and at times willingly migrate to Kampala and other urban centers, where they engage in begging, street vending, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,2,28) NGO and media reports have indicated that children from Karamoja are sold in open-air markets or through intermediaries and forced into domestic work, begging, herding, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,38,39) Networks of traffickers run by “elders” force children into street begging and, for girls, into commercial sexual exploitation. These children are often physically abused for failing to meet quotas. (2) Children from neighboring countries are exploited in forced agricultural labor and commercial sexual exploitation in Uganda. (2)

Although the law provides for free compulsory education, the costs of school supplies, uniforms, and other materials often prohibit children from attending school. (3,4,7,40-42) Research also found that children experience physical and sexual abuse at school by teachers and classmates. (33,41) Furthermore, a lack of teachers and school infrastructure, and poor transportation in remote rural areas, have created barriers to children’s access to education. (3,17,43) Although laws on free compulsory education apply equally to refugee children, a UNHCR report from 2018 notes that 149,806 refugee children are either not enrolled in or not attending school. Girls, especially those in refugee camps, are at particular risk of being out of school and vulnerable to exploitation due to pressure to undertake domestic duties, gender-based violence, and harassment. (37,44,45) In addition to the same obstacles faced by Ugandan children, refugee children may face discrimination from fellow pupils and teachers due to their refugee status, and they may also experience language barriers. (46) For a number of refugee settlements, such as Nakivale, schools are often located far from where refugees live and are inadequately equipped to meet the needs of the large student population. (47)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uganda has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Uganda's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act (48)

Compulsory Education Age	No	13‡	Sections and 10(3)(a) of the Education Act (40)
Free Public Education	No		Section 10(3)(a) of the Education Act (40)

* No conscription (54)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (40)

In 2018, the government began a process to harmonize the country's legal provisions and bring the allowable minimum age for work in line with international standards. (17) The process will require approval from the cabinet, parliament, and the president before enactment and was expected to conclude in 2019. However, the finalization is now expected in 2020. (3)

Uganda's Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act complies with international standards on prohibiting child trafficking. However, the Children (Amendment) Act of 2016 conflicts with the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act in that it defines child trafficking as requiring force, fraud, or coercion. (48,51)

The law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working without a formal employment relationship, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work. (49) Although Uganda has a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children under age 18, Section 8 of the Employment of Children Regulations permits a commissioner to allow children age 12 and older enrolled in an educational training or apprenticeship program to engage in hazardous work, in violation of international standards. (50)

Children in Uganda are required to attend school only up to age 13. This standard makes children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school, but are not legally permitted to work. (40) Finally, although Uganda has adopted policies to extend universal education through secondary level, by law free education is limited to the primary level. (40, 86)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD)	Sets labor inspection priorities and inspection guidelines. (43,55) Includes the Industrial Court, which judges labor dispute cases that are referred by labor officers. (11) Operates the Uganda Child Helpline known as Sauti . (56)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. The Uganda Police Force's Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) investigates forced labor cases, the Special Investigations Division and the Anti-Human Trafficking Desk investigate cases related to human trafficking and the use of children in illicit activities, and the Sexual Offenses Desk investigates commercial sexual exploitation. (11)
Ministry of Local Government	Oversees district labor officers who refer cases to the Industrial Court. (11) Deploys community development officers at the district level when district labor officers are not available. (29)
Directorate of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor that are referred by the Uganda Police Force. (57)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MGLSD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the ability to assess penalties.

In 2019, the government held three child labor-specific inspections in gold mining areas as part of World Day Against Child Labor. The government provided initial training for new inspectors during the reporting period, while existing inspectors received training at two stakeholder engagements held in February and August of 2019. (3) However, research indicates that the training was not sufficient because labor inspectors still lacked the expertise to follow through on child labor cases. Labor unions meanwhile noted that the number of inspections was insufficient and that inspections were only carried out when complaints were received. (3) Labor inspectors in Uganda have the authority to inspect private farms and residences, but the MGLSD noted that inspectors rarely exercise this authority despite the prevalence of child domestic labor in the country. (3)

Uganda is signatory to ILO Convention 81 that requires labor inspection to be placed under the supervision and control of a central authority. (58,59) Research found, however, that coordination among the various agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement remains a challenge because labor officers are under district government authority, rather than of the MGLSD. (60,61) For example, although under the Employment Act labor officers are required to submit monthly reports, in practice the MGLSD does not receive labor reports from districts. (55) In addition, due to budgetary limitations and a lack of child labor prioritization at the district level, the majority of districts in Uganda did not have labor officers and did not have sufficient funds to carry out inspections. (3,43) Research also found that follow-up inspections rarely happen due to insufficient funding at the district level. (55) Given the lack of resources for inspections, local civil society organizations often train labor inspectors and even assist them in conducting inspections. (17,30)

Research found that child labor cases rarely reach the Industrial Court because of poor monitoring and the court's limited access to communities outside of urban centers, where child labor is most likely to occur. (59) Finally, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Uganda's workforce, which includes more than 15 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Uganda would employ about 400 inspectors. (62-65)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

In October 2019, Uganda’s Parliamentary Speaker acknowledged that immigration officials are complicit and involved in human trafficking, including the trafficking of children. (35) Research has also found that some police are allegedly complicit in the commercial sexual exploitation of child refugees. Meanwhile, other high-level government officials own or are associated with labor recruitment companies and networks of traffickers run by “elders” that engage in child trafficking. (2,35,63) The involvement of government officials in trafficking networks has significantly impeded operations against the worst forms of child labor. (2) Uganda’s State House Anti-Corruption Unit, which works on human trafficking issues on an ad hoc basis, has initiated some investigations related to official complicity in human trafficking, but has not made any of these reports public, nor has it arrested any government officials. (35) Although complicity in trafficking in persons by officials has long been a concern in Uganda, the government has made very limited efforts to investigate such allegations and failed to initiate any prosecutions or achieve any convictions of complicit government officials. (2)

Reports have also indicated that investigators rarely follow up on domestic child labor claims. When child domestic workers complain to their employers for not being paid, the employers report the children to the police for theft and police subsequently treat them as criminals rather than as victims who have not been paid for their work. (3)

Research found that street children, including potential human trafficking victims and child laborers, have faced conflict with local authorities and are sometimes detained and beaten by police. (2,39,64,66) According to the government, police officers identify and refer street children to probation officers and civil society organizations to place children in homes and shelters and do not keep them in detention facilities; however, some children may have been housed in juvenile rehabilitation centers because shelters are frequently full. Police intermittently rounded up street children, housed them in children’s homes and shelters for several days while social workers completed background checks and family tracing, and then returned them to their families. (67,68)

In December 2019, Ugandan authorities prevented 96 teenage girls from being trafficked to Kenya. In January of 2020, Ugandan and Kenyan authorities cooperated to investigate the trafficking of another group of 96 Karamajong teenage girls who were identified in Nairobi and placed in the care of the Ugandan Ministry for Gender, Labour and Social Development for family reunification. (35,37,69,70)

Research indicates there is not a sufficient number of criminal law enforcement officials responsible for investigating child labor. (11) The Uganda Police Force’s Child and Family Protection Unit also noted that none of its investigators received training in child labor issues in 2019, though the Kampala Capital City Authority indicated it provided training for its own officers and for officers in other Ugandan agencies on conducting rescues of street children. (3) Training is insufficient, in part due to regular staff turnover and transfers. Some criminal law enforcement officials were not aware of key human trafficking laws, and some officers misclassified cases, conducted insufficient investigations, or encouraged victims to accept payment from their traffickers to settle cases. (2,30,35)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues and implements the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor. Led by MGLSD, includes members from several ministries, CFPU, trade unions, development organizations, civil society, and media agencies. (17) Met quarterly in 2019 and coordinated World Day Against Child Labor activities in Busia district. (3)
Uganda Parliament Forum for Children (UPFC)	Multi-partisan body of Members of Parliament focused on issues affecting Ugandan children, particularly those in vulnerable situations, including street children. In 2019, the UPFC conducted a fact-finding mission to eastern Uganda to investigate reports of children sold at a local market. (3)
Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce	Coordinates government efforts on human trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Internal Affairs, includes 30 members from government agencies and civil society. (69) Met eight times in 2019. In collaboration with the Coordination Office for Prevention of Trafficking in Persons, the Taskforce published the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Regulations in 2019, and worked to finalize the National Referral Guidelines and national action plan. (3) The Taskforce also organized the World Day Against Trafficking in Persons event in conjunction with local NGOs and held on July 30th, which was the first time Uganda had marked the day. (3)
National Child Protection Working Group	Monitors the quality of services provided to orphans and vulnerable children. Led by MGLSD, includes members from five government agencies and civil society organizations. (11) Members met quarterly in 2019 to share respective activities over the course of the reporting period. (3)
National Children's Authority	Works to ensure that member organizations integrate child labor concerns into their policies and budgets. Members include 10 government agencies. (11) The National Children's Authority was inactive during the reporting period due to a lack of funding, according to MGLSD. (3)

The Stop Child Labor Partners Forum, which was created to coordinate, monitor and evaluate child labor-related programs and policies in Uganda, met one time in 2019; the MGLSD noted that additional meetings were not possible due to a lack of funding. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor 2017/2018–2021/2022†	Aims to reduce child labor in Uganda by 4 percent by 2022 through strengthening governmental frameworks on child labor, increasing coordination, expanding access to social services for children, enhancing research and advocacy, and improving the Monitoring and Evaluation System for the elimination of child labor. The government approved the plan in February 2019 and it was officially launched in April 2019. (3,71,72)
National Social Protection Policy	Aims to reduce poverty and socioeconomic inequalities for inclusive development by targeting vulnerable people, including child laborers. (74) In November 2019, the Kampala Capital City Authority, in collaboration with UNICEF, launched “Girls Empowering Girls,” an urban social protection program for 1,500 adolescent girls in Kampala. (3)
National Strategy for Girls' Education in Uganda (2015–2019)	Promoted girls' education and identified child labor, particularly domestic work, as a key barrier to girls' access to education. (70) The policy ended in 2019. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education began drafting a new plan for 2020–2025 that is expected to be completed in 2020. (3)
National Multi-Sectoral Coordination Framework for Adolescent Girls (2017/2018–2021/2022)	Coordinates government, civil society, and community efforts to provide services and programs that focus on issues affecting adolescent girls ages 10 to 19, including exploitation in domestic work and gender-based violence in schools. (17,75) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Multi-Sectoral Coordination Framework for Adolescent Girls during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (76,77)

Uganda launched a new National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, but because of the decentralized nature of inspections in Uganda, some districts have developed their own labor action plans that do not always reflect MGLSD priorities. (59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Combating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (2013–2021)	Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation (ECLT)-funded program implemented by ILO that improves the capacity of the government and social partners to develop and implement policies to combat child labor in agriculture. (71,78) The ECLT indicated during the reporting period that it had prevented or withdrawn 2,800 children from engaging in child labor and reached 3,400 households through livelihood and literacy programs. (3)
Uganda Child Helpline (Sauti)†	Funded primarily by UNICEF with in-kind contributions from MGLSD, comprises District Action Centers (DACs) and a physical call center located in Wakiso that screens all calls on reported cases of child abuse. Caseworkers at DACs follow up directly on cases of child abuse, including child labor and exploitation, assigned to them by the National Call Center and liaise with local authorities to address the reported incidents. (56) In 2019, reported receiving 71 calls related to child labor, including 2 involving commercial sexual exploitation of children, and 42 child trafficking cases. The Helpline coordinated with law enforcement and local authorities to initiate investigations into cases. (3,35)
Realizing Livelihood Improvement Through Savings and Education 2019–2021*‡	NGO-implemented program in partnership with the government that focuses on addressing child labor issues in tobacco-growing regions. (33,79) The project was relaunched during the reporting period to cover more areas in the Hoima and Kikube districts. (79) ECLT, through its implementing partners Uganda Women's Effort to Save Orphans and the Uganda ECLT Affiliate Office, worked with 12 schools, with an average of 400 children per school, in 2019. The program trained teachers, held community meetings to discuss child labor, and dispersed learning materials and sanitary products. (3)
Back Home Campaign for Karamoja Children‡	Government program that rescues Karamoja street children working in Kampala and places them in newly completed rehabilitation centers in Wakiso and Moroto districts before reuniting them with their families. (17,80) In 2019, the Ugandan cabinet approved approximately $1.5 million in funding as part of a strategic action plan that aims to expand efforts to remove street children working in Kampala and provide services. (81)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Uganda.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (82-84)

Although Uganda has implemented programs that address child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation. For example, the government lacks its own facilities to house child victims of labor exploitation or human trafficking, and must instead rely on local community services organizations. (3) Furthermore, the MGLSD has noted that programs are concentrated in specific districts and thus do not cover child labor issues throughout the country. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uganda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that all children are protected by the minimum age law, including children who do not work under a formal employment relationship.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that only minors age 16 and older who have received adequate, specific instruction or vocational training are permitted to perform hazardous work, and that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected.	2017 – 2019
	Align the definition of child trafficking in the Children (Amendment) Act with international standards by ensuring that force, fraud, or coercion are not required elements in child trafficking cases.	2019
	Ensure that the law requires free, compulsory education up to age 16 so that it is commensurate with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding, number of labor inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of child labor penalties imposed, and number of penalties collected.	2013 – 2019
	Enhance the authority of the labor inspectorate by enabling it to assess penalties and ensure the inspectorate is utilizing its existing authorities to inspect private farms and homes and to conduct sufficient routine and unannounced inspections.	2017 – 2019
	Provide sufficient training to labor inspectors, initial training to new criminal investigators, and refresher training to existing investigators, to ensure officials understand and are able to identify, categorize, and investigate child labor cases.	2019
	Ensure coordination between the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development and the Ministry of Local Government so that labor dispute cases are referred to the Industrial Court.	2015 – 2019
	Provide the labor inspectorate with sufficient funding and resources at the district level to ensure inspectors are present in all districts and are able to carry out their duties.	2013 – 2019
	Improve coordination between national and district level child labor enforcement bodies to ensure that relevant data is shared, child labor inspections are prioritized across the country, and funding for labor inspectorate operations is adequate in all districts.	2019
	Ensure that child labor cases reach the Industrial Court and that penalties are assessed by addressing monitoring issues, combating corruption, and improving the court's reach outside of urban centers.	2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and increase the number of personnel responsible for investigating criminal violations of laws related to child labor.	2009 – 2019
	Publish disaggregated data on prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, number of investigations, and number of violations for the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Investigate, prosecute, and where appropriate, convict and sentence government officials for their role in the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2019
Coordination	Strengthen mechanisms for following up on child labor claims and referring street children, including potential human trafficking victims, to social services providers, and prevent these children from being detained by police.	2015 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms are active and sufficiently funded to be able to operate and carry out their mandates.	2019
	Ensure that district labor action plans reflect the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development's priorities.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that existing policies addressing child labor are implemented as intended.	2018 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by eliminating costs for supplies, uniforms and materials; addressing physical and sexual violence; and ensuring sufficient teachers, infrastructure and transportation in rural areas.	2012 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to ensure that refugee children have equal access to educational opportunities by addressing gender-based violence, harassment, and refugee discrimination; accommodating the language needs of refugee students; and ensuring that there are well-equipped schools accessible to refugee settlements.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure the availability of shelters for victims of child labor, including child trafficking victims.	2017 – 2019
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation, in all areas of the country.	2009 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Ukraine made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted the Resolution on the Social Protection of Children and Urgent Measures to Protect the Rights of the Child, which includes a provision to address the participation of children in armed conflict. The government also cooperated with municipal leaders and international organizations to conduct mine safety education programs for children and provide security guarantees for demining activities near educational facilities. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Ukraine is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it implemented a regression in law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In August 2019, the government issued Cabinet of Ministers Decree No. 823, which requires that businesses receive notification at least 5 working days in advance of an onsite labor inspection; this decree prevents Ukraine’s State Labor Inspectorate from conducting unannounced inspections. Children in Ukraine engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of pornography. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. The government collected few of the financial penalties imposed for child labor violations and lacked social programs designed to assist children engaged in hazardous work in mining. Children living in Russian-controlled areas in the east of the country are increasingly vulnerable to exploitation, and the Government of Ukraine does not have capacity to address the worst forms of child labor in these areas due to the ongoing conflict.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ukraine engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of pornography. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-6) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Ukraine.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.7 (385,204)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.6

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,14)
	Use in the production of pornography (1,3-6)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3,15,16)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,11,14,17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2019, the conflict with Russia-led forces in the east of the country continued. The conflict limited the government’s financial and institutional capacity to address the worst forms of child labor throughout Ukraine, especially in the areas of Donetsk and Luhansk under the control of Russia-led forces. (3) Russian aggression in eastern Ukraine has created more than 1.4 million IDPs currently registered, including more than 190,000 children. (18,19) IDP children, particularly those who are unaccompanied, are especially vulnerable to exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. (20)

Children from Ukraine are trafficked both internationally and domestically for commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. (4,14) Children with disabilities and homeless, orphaned, and poor children, especially those living in state-run institutions, are at high risk of being trafficked. (1,14,20) Children in institutions are also vulnerable to exploitation in child labor in agriculture, markets, and construction. (4,12) Ukraine is a transit and destination country for refugees from Afghanistan, the Russian Federation, Bangladesh, Syria, and Iraq. Refugee children lack access to state-run children’s shelters, face challenges receiving birth registration, and experience heightened vulnerability to child trafficking. (20,21)

During the reporting period, Russian-backed groups continued to recruit children to take part in armed combat. (3,15,16) Children were trained in weapons use and organized into reserve militia battalions at militant-run camps and school programs located in territory controlled by Russian-backed groups. The government was unable to enforce national prohibitions against the use of children in armed conflict in these areas. (3,15,16)

Children in areas of Donetsk and Luhansk face challenges being registered at birth, which can prevent them from receiving Ukrainian identity documents. This, in turn, limits their ability to enroll in school and puts them at risk of statelessness. (22) Although a judicial procedure exists to provide children born in the areas of Donetsk and Luhansk under the control of Russia-led forces with Ukrainian birth certificates, fewer than half of the children born in these areas are estimated to have obtained a birth certificate issued by the Government of Ukraine. Additionally, while a law adopted in 2018 provides for any civil registry office to issue a Ukrainian birth registration on the basis of a birth certificate issued in the areas of Donetsk and Luhansk under the control of Russia-led forces, the government has yet to establish a procedure to ensure implementation of this provision. (23) In addition, up to a third of children from Roma communities also lack birth registration, impeding their access to education. (20)

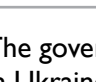

In recent years, positioning of armed forces, shelling, and mines within one kilometer of educational facilities near the line of contact between Ukrainian government and Russia-led forces has hindered children’s access to education. During the reporting period, the Government of Ukraine cooperated with municipal leaders and international organizations, including the OSCE Special Monitoring Mission, to conduct mine safety education programs for children and provide security guarantees for demining activities near educational facilities in some areas of Donetsk and Luhansk. (24) However, limited access has impeded similar efforts in areas under the control of Russia-led forces. As a result, children living near the line of contact remain limited in their ability to access education due to the risk from active hostilities and unexploded ordnance. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ukraine has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 188 of the Labor Code; Article 150 of the Criminal Code; and Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (25-27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 190 of the Labor Code; Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (26,27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Order of the Ministry of Health No. 46 on the approval of the list of heavy work and work with dangerous and harmful working conditions, in which the employment of minors is prohibited; Article 150-1 of the Criminal Code (25,28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 43 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 1 of the Law on Employment; and Articles 149 and 172–173 of the Criminal Code (25,29,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code; Article 32 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (25,27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 301–303 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood; Law on Amendments to Certain Legislative Acts of Ukraine on Combating the Distribution of Child Pornography; and Articles 1 and 6–7 of the Law on the Protection of Public Morality (25,27,31,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 304 and 307 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (25,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Articles 15 and 20 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service (33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 15 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service; Decree No. 447 on Measures to Improve the Defense Capabilities of the State (33,34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 30 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Articles 3, 12, and 20 of the Law on General Secondary Education (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 53 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 2 of the Law on General Secondary Education (29,35)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (35)

Ukraine

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (25-27,35) Furthermore, the Order of the Ministry of Health Number 46 permits children to engage in hazardous work at age 14 as part of a vocational training program for four hours a day, with safety standards in place, which is not in compliance with international standards. (36, 57)

Articles 302 and 303 of the Criminal Code of Ukraine criminalize involvement of a minor in prostitution and pimping involving minors. However, no law criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the State Labor Service that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Labor Service (SLS) within the Ministry of Economic Development, Trade and Agriculture (MEDTA)	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor, by conducting inspections. In December 2019, SLS was transferred from the Ministry of Social Policy to the Ministry of Economic Development, Trade and Agriculture. (3)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. Through the National Police and Prosecutor General's Office, investigates and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (3)
Security Service of Ukraine (SBU)	Tracks recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. (3)
Office of the Ombudsman for Children's Rights	Monitors protection of the rights of children and fulfillment of international obligations to protect children's rights, including by preventing child labor. Coordinates the development of laws on child protection.(37) Informs the public about children's rights.(37)
National Referral Mechanism (NRM)	Identifies victims of human trafficking, including children, and refers victims to appropriate government agencies for assistance and services. Implemented by the Ministry of Social Policy in its capacity as the National Coordinator for Counter-Trafficking Policy. (4)

In May 2019, an appellate court overturned Cabinet of Ministers Decree No. 295, which had placed limitations on the State Labor Service's (SLS) authority to conduct unannounced inspections. (38-40) Under Decree No. 295, inspectors could only conduct unannounced inspections to detect informal employment, and could only forego notifying businesses about the inspection if they believed that such notice would be detrimental to detecting informal employment. (39) After Decree No. 295 was overturned, labor inspection was governed by Act No. 877, which regulates state inspections of businesses in general and, as such, does not establish specific guidelines for labor inspections. However, provisions in Act No. 877 permit only unannounced inspections of private businesses in response to complaints or to a workplace accident, or one of several other very limited circumstances. (38,40,41)

In August 2019, the government issued Cabinet of Ministers Decree No. 823, which outlined procedural rules specifically for labor inspections conducted by the SLS. These procedural rules clarified labor inspectors' authority to conduct inspections, including site visits, both proactively and in response to complaints. (42) However, Decree No. 823 also requires that businesses are notified at least 5 working days in advance of an onsite inspection. (42,43) This restriction on unannounced labor inspections limited the government's ability to detect child labor during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SLS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the ability of labor inspectors to conduct unannounced inspections.

† Data are from January to November 2019.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ukraine's workforce, which includes over 17.99 million workers. (46) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Ukraine would employ about 900 labor inspectors. (47,48) In 2019, the State Labor Inspection Service conducted some unannounced inspections prior to the entry into force of Decree no. 823, which restricted unannounced worksite inspections. (45) Labor inspectors conducted 3,067 child labor-related inspections and detected 146 child labor violations involving 140 children working in the service sectors, heavy industry, and agriculture. The majority of violations were cases of illegal informal work (75 cases) and children working without contracts permitting the employment of minors (47 cases). (3) Inspectors also identified two children working at night and three working hours in excess of that permitted for minors. The SLS referred 16 cases to criminal law enforcement agencies for investigation. (3) Although the SLS imposed a total of approximately $220,000 in financial penalties, it collected only $480 of that sum during the reporting period. The SLS is not authorized to compel payment of delinquent fines without a court proceeding, which can delay the collection of penalties. (3)

During the reporting period, the ILO conducted multiple trainings for labor inspectors across Ukraine. (3) However, sources note that training for labor inspectors on child trafficking may be inadequate, especially outside of Kyiv. (20) In addition to the 727 labor inspectors working at the SLS, regional governments employ 531 labor inspectors. Although these local inspectors are certified by the SLS, their training may be inadequate and inconsistent with the training given to inspectors employed directly by the SLS. (43) Although the funding allocated to the SLS in Ukraine's 2019 state budget increased compared to 2018, NGOs assessed the funding as insufficient. NGOs also expressed concern that the number of labor inspectors was inadequate. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the authority of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including authority for investigators to enter businesses.

† Data are from January to September 2019.

‡ Data are from January to November 2019.

Between January and September 2019, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) identified eight criminal violations for the worst forms of child labor. Information regarding the number of investigations initiated related to child labor was not available for inclusion in this report. In addition, the Prosecutor General’s Office (PGO) reported 33 cases referred for prosecution between January and November related to the worst forms of child labor, including 12 cases of criminal exploitation of child labor, 6 cases of forced begging, 5 cases of the use of children for the production of pornography, and 10 cases of child trafficking. (3) The outcome of these cases is unknown, as the PGO does not specifically track convictions in cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (3)

The Ministry of Social Policy provided services to 13 children who were victims of child trafficking, including 3 boys subjected to labor trafficking in Ukraine and 10 Ukrainian girls who were subjected to sexual exploitation in Ukraine and abroad. (4) IOM provided services to six Ukrainian children, three of whom were victims of commercial sexual exploitation, one of whom was a victim of forced begging, and two of whom were victims of labor exploitation. (3)

MOIA reported that all new investigators receive specialized training on how to handle cases and investigations involving minors. During the reporting period, MOIA investigators received training on child labor as part of the government’s National Action Plan for Countering Human Trafficking. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council	Led by the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP), which serves as the National Coordinator for Counter-Trafficking Policy, and includes more than 20 government entities, and representatives from regional governments, NGOs, and international organizations. In 2019, the Council’s policy working group met bimonthly, and MSP working groups for the identification of victims of human trafficking met 75 times. (4)

Although Ukraine has established the Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council to coordinate efforts to address child trafficking, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including in mining and agriculture.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Countering Human Trafficking (2016–2020)	Guides the work of the National Coordinator on Countering Human Trafficking, located under MSP, through specific actions and timetables for preventing, protecting against, and prosecuting human trafficking crimes. (49,51) In 2019, social workers received training on child labor as part of this National Action Plan. (3)
National Action Plan for Implementation of UN CRC (2017–2021)	Identifies priorities in the area of child protection, including improving measures to address the worst forms of child labor and increasing coordination between government agencies and NGOs. (9,10,52,53) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Resolution on the Social Protection of Children and Urgent Measures to Protect the Rights of the Child†	Directs the government to develop additional programs and social services to protect children against abuse, including the worst forms of child labor. Includes a provision on measures that specifically address the participation of children in armed conflict. (3,54)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Ukraine has adopted the National Action Plan for Countering Human Trafficking, the National Action Plan for Implementation of UN CRC, and the Resolution on the Social Protection of Children, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor in mining. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children†	Serve children in need, including child victims of trafficking, through 82 centers, which include 8 shelters. Children are provided with individual assistance programs that involve social, psychological, pedagogical, medical, legal, and other types of assistance. (4,20) These centers continued to provide services in 2019. (4) Government officials report that there is a lack of resources and specialized personnel to serve child victims of sexual exploitation through these centers. (20)
Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children†	Administered in coordination with municipal authorities to provide social services for vulnerable children and families, including victims of human trafficking. These centers were active during the reporting period. (51,55)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ukraine.

The Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children have historically experienced a large turnover of staff due to an excessive workload and low pay. (56) Although the Government of Ukraine has implemented programs to assist child victims of trafficking, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children in other forms of child labor, including hazardous work in mining.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ukraine (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Prohibit all children under age 16 from working in hazardous occupations during vocational training.	2011 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2019
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspection system by removing restrictions on labor inspectors' authority to conduct unannounced onsite inspections, both proactively and in response to complaints.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2019

Ukraine

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Authorize the State Labor Service to enforce collection of delinquent penalties to ensure that all penalties imposed are collected.	2019
	Ensure that all labor inspectors, including those working outside the capital, receive training on child trafficking.	2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors employed by regional governments receive adequate training that is consistent with that provided to labor inspectors employed by the State Labor Service.	2019
	Increase the personnel and funding for the State Labor Service to ensure the labor inspectorate has adequate capacity to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2019
	Track and publish data on the number of investigations, convictions, and penalties imposed for criminal violations of child labor laws.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor.	2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor in mining.	2018 – 2019
	Implement all policies addressing child labor, including the National Action Plan for Implementation of UN CRC.	2019
Social Programs	Conduct research to gather comprehensive data on child labor, including the activities carried out by children working in farming, raising animals, and construction, to inform policies and programs.	2019
	Ensure refugee children are allowed to receive services at state-run children's shelters and can be registered at birth.	2019
	Establish a procedure to implement the law empowering any civil registry office to issue a Ukrainian birth registration on the basis of a birth certificate issued in areas of Donetsk and Luhansk under the control of Russia-led forces.	2019
	Develop programs to ensure that Roma children are registered at birth and are able to access education.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure there are sufficient resources for Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children for child victims of human trafficking.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Uzbekistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government took active measures to prevent the use of child labor in the cotton harvest, including by introducing criminal penalties for repeat violations of hazardous work prohibitions, doubling the number of labor inspectors, and conducting extensive awareness-raising on child labor laws and penalties for violations. The government also established a new National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor and adopted a new roadmap to combat trafficking in persons and forced labor. However, children in Uzbekistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas, laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards. Uzbekistan also has not carried out a national child labor survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in sectors other than cotton production.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uzbekistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Uzbekistan has not carried out a national child labor survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in sectors other than cotton production. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uzbekistan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.3 (244,095)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	5.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.0

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating silk cocoons; preparing land for crop planting (6,7)
Services	Street work, including vending, car washing, and begging (8-10)
	Collecting scrap metal (6,8)
	Public works, including refurbishing school grounds and facilities (3,6,11)
	Vending in markets (7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,8)
	Forced labor in cultivating silk cocoons (1,6,12,13)
	Forced labor in construction, non-cotton agriculture, and cleaning parks, streets, and buildings (1,6)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Traffickers exploit Uzbek children in sex trafficking transnationally, and also internally in brothels, clubs, and private residences. Children in institutions are also vulnerable to sex trafficking. (1,14)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although a quota system governed cotton production in some areas of Uzbekistan in 2019, the Government of Uzbekistan announced in February 2020 that it had abolished quotas for cotton production, effective as of the 2020 harvest. (15) Under the quota system, regional and local officials were held responsible for mobilizing sufficient labor to meet production targets assigned to farmers. (16,17) Harvest monitoring reports found that the ban on child labor in the 2019 cotton harvest was generally upheld. ILO harvest monitoring found children present on 43 out of 290 fields visited. (18,19) In 18 cases, children were identified in the field, but were not involved in any work-related activities, while in 25 cases monitors observed or suspected that the children present were helping with cotton harvesting. Observers noted that some pickers who could not access childcare brought their young children to the fields while the parents picked. (18) Families also sometimes brought older children to assist in the harvest to earn extra income for the family. In both types of cases, ILO observers held explanatory conversations with parents and asked them to remove children from the fields. (18) During the 2019 harvest, the government identified four instances of children present in the fields for limited periods of time. (3,11)

Children in Uzbekistan sometimes participate in public works projects, including refurbishing school grounds and facilities. (3,6) Limited evidence suggests that in isolated cases, school officials may compel students to assist in harvesting silk cocoons, sometimes characterizing the work as traditional communal labor (khashar). (6,12,13) Although there is free public education in Uzbekistan, schools may charge informal fees, which can render education inaccessible to children from low-income families. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uzbekistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2019, the government ratified ILO C. 81, Labor Inspection; ILO C. 129, Labor Inspection (Agriculture); and ILO P029, Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention. (11)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Uzbekistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 77 of the Labour Code; Article 20 of the Law on the Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Article 49-1 of the Administrative Code (20-23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 241 and 245 of the Labour Code (22)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Decree on Adoption of the List of Occupations with Unfavorable Working Conditions to Which It Is Forbidden to Employ Persons Under Eighteen Years of Age; Decree on Approval of Provision on Requirements on Prohibition of Use of Minors' Labor (24,25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 37 of the Constitution; Article 7 of the Labour Code; Article 51 of the Administrative Code; Articles 135 and 148(2) of the Criminal Code (22,23,26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 14 of the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Article 135 of the Criminal Code (21,27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 130–131 and 135 of the Criminal Code (27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 10 of the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Articles 127, 270, 273, and 276 of the Criminal Code (21,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24 of the Law on Universal Military Service (28)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 4 and 46 of the Law on Universal Military Service (28)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Article 3 of the Law on Education (29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the Law on Education; Article 41 of the Constitution(26,29)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (29)

Articles 131 and 135 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan criminalize pimping, procuring, involving, or inducing children into prostitution, and criminalize the actions of those who profit from prostitution involving children. (27) However, no law criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (27) In addition, although Uzbekistan has policies at the national level prohibiting all Uzbek citizens, including children, from joining non-state armed groups, the recruitment of children by such groups is not explicitly punishable by law. (11)

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (20-23,29)

In 2019, the upper and lower chambers of Uzbekistan's parliament adopted amendments to the Administrative Code that increased penalties for violation of child labor laws, and amendments to the Criminal Code that established criminal penalties for repeat violations of laws prohibiting hazardous child labor. (27,30) Parliament also adopted additional amendments to the Criminal Code that introduced criminal penalties for forced labor violations, including official complicity in forced labor. These amendments were approved by the president in January 2020 and entered into force three months later. (3,11,18,27,30-32) However, although Article 148(2) of the Criminal Code now establishes criminal penalties for forced labor violations, these only apply to repeat offenders; administrative fines are applied in the first instance. (27) The government also drafted a new law on combating trafficking in persons. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MOELR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MOELR)	Conducts labor inspections, including inspections for compliance with child labor laws. (3,8) Leads the National Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor. (34,35)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Investigates crimes related to child trafficking, which may then be prosecuted by the Prosecutor General's Office. (3,8) Leads the National Sub-Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons. (34,35)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecutes criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation. (8)
Youth Union	Monitors school attendance to ensure that students do not miss class during the cotton harvest. (9) Participates in mobile monitoring groups to monitor violations of labor laws during the annual cotton harvest. (36)
Women's Committee of Uzbekistan	Participates in mobile monitoring units to monitor violations of labor laws during the annual cotton harvest. (36)
Human Trafficking Hotlines	Receive reports of incidents of human trafficking and refer reports to the relevant agencies. The MOIA-led National Sub-Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons administers one hotline, and an NGO maintains a second foreign donor-funded hotline. (1)
Feedback Mechanisms	Receive complaints on the violation of workers' rights and labor laws. MOELR can receive complaints through a telephone hotline with a short, easy-to-remember number; a web portal; and a Telegram messenger bot. (37) Reports indicate that only the Telegram bot is anonymous. Hotline callers are required to provide personal information to register a complaint, which may limit public confidence in this mechanism. (19) Labor inspectors are required to investigate all complaints submitted to MOELR within 7 days. In 2019, ILO was given real-time access to this feedback mechanism during the cotton harvest season to monitor the efficacy of the government's response. (14,37) The Federation of Trade Unions also continued to operate its own independent feedback mechanism, accessible online or over the phone, and a legal clinic that assists workers in remediating issues. (14,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOELR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

In 2019, the number of labor inspectors at the MOELR doubled, from 200 to 400. (3,43) Despite this, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Uzbekistan's workforce, which includes more than 17.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitioning economies, Uzbekistan would employ about 890 inspectors. (44-46) During the reporting period, the government instituted standards under which new labor inspectors receive a 2-week mandatory introductory training course on Uzbek labor law, and all inspectors must take additional training on labor laws and undergo a re-certification process every 3 years. (11,43,47) In addition, in August 2019, labor inspectors received specialized training on detecting forced labor and addressing forced labor cases ahead of the annual autumn cotton harvest. (3,36)

During the reporting period, the government enhanced penalties for violations of labor laws. Fines for forced labor violations increased tenfold, with additional increases in fines for forced labor violations involving minors. (30,36) Labor inspectors identified 21 child labor violations, all of which involved children working in refurbishment of school grounds and facilities. The government imposed fines for all 21 of these cases, collectively totaling approximately $5,160 (49,300,000 UZS). (11)

The government authorized unscheduled inspections of public-sector enterprises in all sectors. While inspectors also have some authority to conduct unscheduled short-term inspections of private-sector worksites, reports suggest inspectors only do so in response to complaints or requests from the tax service. (3,11,48) Research was unable to determine how many of the inspections MOELR staff conducted during the reporting period were unannounced, or whether unannounced, self-initiated inspections occurred in all sectors. The government made active efforts to both respond to complaints and proactively monitor organizations and populations that have historically been at high risk for forced labor in the cotton harvest. MOELR increased routine inspections of public-sector organizations, at which workers were historically forced to participate in the cotton harvest. (14,43) The government reported that during the cotton harvest season, MOELR responded to approximately 1,200 complaints and conducted oversight of 3,000 organizations and farms involved in the harvest. (49) Due to these efforts, 259 government officials, heads of organizations, and managers were punished for forced labor violations during the 2019 cotton harvest, including 3 regional and municipal hokims (mayors) and 15 deputy hokims (deputy mayors). (18,50,51) The government also penalized 56 individuals for failure to provide cotton pickers with adequate working conditions. (11) The government and the Federation of Trade Unions established four mobile monitoring groups to monitor the cotton harvest. These groups, managed by the Federation of Trade Unions, conducted a minimum of three unannounced site visits per day based on random GPS coordinates. (3,36) Each mobile monitoring group consisted of a trade union representative, an employers' organization representative, and a Women's Committee and Youth Organization representative. The individuals representing these entities within each mobile monitoring group rotated on a regular basis. (36)

In the 2019 cotton harvest, MOELR piloted a new initiative in the Syrdarya region to create temporary camps to house cotton pickers. The pilot facilities had a capacity of 400 pickers and provided heated living quarters, meals, access to showers and toilets, and medical care. (14,17,36) Independent harvest monitors and a majority of cotton pickers reported improvements in working conditions in the 2019 harvest compared to 2018. (18)

During the reporting period, MOELR, in coordination with the National Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor, established an outreach plan to raise awareness specifically about its feedback mechanism. In addition, it distributed tens of thousands of brochures devoted to educating the public on prohibitions against forced labor and resources for victims. (43) MOELR also tracked its efforts to respond to complaints, and reported taking action in response to over 90 percent of complaints submitted between January and September 2019. (43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, only limited information on the activities of criminal law enforcement authorities was available.

† Data are from January – August 2019.

In 2019, the government reported that 33 children received services as victims of human trafficking, but research was unable to determine further details about the cases involving these victims. (3) Law enforcement investigated two cases of commercial sexual exploitation, each involving one victim. Both of these cases were referred for prosecution. (2,11,51) One of these cases resulted in a conviction of 3 years of imprisonment. (52)

During the reporting period, judges received training from OSCE on handling human trafficking and forced labor cases. In addition, law enforcement investigators, prosecutors, and judges received training from civil society organizations on best practices for addressing forced labor and human trafficking cases and identifying and assisting victims. (38) Criminal investigators participated in training courses on trafficking in persons designed by senior Ministry of Internal Affairs staff and anti-trafficking NGO Istiqbolli Avlod. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination with civil society organizations.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor (National Commission)*	Coordinates state and local entities' efforts to combat trafficking in persons and forced labor; analyzes and monitors efficacy of government programs to address trafficking in persons and forced labor; organizes international cooperation on combating human trafficking and forced labor; and provides legal and policy recommendations for improvement of government efforts in these areas. (34,35) Chaired by the National Rapporteur on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor. (34) Comprises the two sub-commissions on combating human trafficking and on forced labor, respectively. The Minister of Internal Affairs heads the Sub-Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and the Minister of Labor heads the Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor. (3,34,35) In 2019, the National Commission drafted and adopted a roadmap to combat trafficking in persons and forced labor, and roadmaps for the cotton harvest, a national plan for work with international organizations, and a media plan. (14,53,54)
National Rapporteur on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor (National Rapporteur)*	Chairs the National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor. Reports annually to the President on trafficking in persons and forced labor issues, government efforts to punish perpetrators, and services for victims of human trafficking and forced labor crimes. (34,35) Conducts public awareness-raising activities related to human trafficking and forced labor. (35) In 2019, the National Rapporteur convened the National Commission monthly. (38)
Local Commissions for Combating Human Trafficking and Forced Labor (Local Commissions)*	Ensure timely and rigorous implementation of all laws and regulations, including those issued by the National Commission, related to trafficking in persons and forced labor. (30) Local Commissions mirror the structure of the National Commission, with sub-commissions on trafficking in persons and on forced labor, respectively. Local Commissions are chaired by the regional hokim (governor) and provide monthly reports to the National Commission. (14,30) Sources indicated that in 2019, in at least one region, the Local Commission met regularly every 2 weeks. (14)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government overhauled its system for coordinating efforts to combat human trafficking and forced labor. A July 30, 2019 presidential decree established the new National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor and the new office of the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor. (34) In November, the National Commission promulgated an ambitious national roadmap to combat trafficking in persons and forced labor that incorporated suggestions from the international community and civil society activists. (3,53,55)

During the reporting period, MOELR met with human rights activists in Tashkent, and a government delegation met in Washington with civil society stakeholders from the Cotton Campaign. (43,55) Government officials and civil society stakeholders from the Cotton Campaign also met in early 2020 in Tashkent to discuss labor conditions in the 2019 cotton harvest. (56)

There were no reports of reprisals against individuals for monitoring labor conditions during the 2019 harvest. (18) However, at the end of the reporting period and during the first weeks of 2020, the labor and human rights NGO “Chiroq” in Karakalpakstan was denied official registration, allegedly for three grammatical errors in its registration application, and its founding members were reportedly harassed and intimidated by regional security forces. (57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation of cotton clusters.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Memorandum of Understanding Between the ILO and the Republic of Uzbekistan (2014–2020)	Establishes terms of agreement between ILO and the government on cooperation to implement the Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan. (58) In 2019, the Government of Uzbekistan and ILO continued to work together under this agreement. (36)
Senate Resolution on Measures to Ensure Guaranteed Labor Rights to the Citizens of Uzbekistan	Establishes a plan to harmonize national legislation with the requirements of ILO conventions, including through developing relevant organizational structures and national programs, strengthening state and civil society capacity to guarantee the provision of labor rights, and carrying out an information campaign to inform citizens of their rights. (59) In 2019, the government further increased the minimum wage for cotton pickers over 2018 levels to attract voluntary participation in the annual cotton harvest. (3,30,36)
Plan of Immediate Measures in the Area of Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor (“Roadmap”) (2019–2020)†	Establishes a plan for updating legislation on trafficking in persons and forced labor, building government capacity to combat trafficking in persons and forced labor, enhancing transparency of conditions in the annual cotton harvest, raising awareness on human trafficking and forced labor issues, and reforming the agriculture and textile industries. (53)
Strategy for the Development of Agriculture in the Republic of Uzbekistan (2020–2030)†	Calls for a reduction of the state’s involvement in agriculture and enhances farmers’ autonomy over what crops to grow. (30) Includes a specific action item to end state intervention in agriculture, including cotton production, by 2023. (60)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government continued to implement policies aimed at attracting a greater number of voluntary workers to assist with the cotton harvest. These included raising wages for cotton pickers, raising the price offered to farmers for cotton, and continuing to transition to a system of private business partnerships called “clusters” along the cotton value chain (from farm to finished products). (3,18,30,43) Under the cluster model, land concessions are provided by the government to cotton sector enterprises. In some cases, these clusters farm cotton directly, and in others, they enter into contracts with local cotton farmers. (14,43,62) Reports indicate that in some regions or districts, only one cluster has been given a land concession, essentially providing that cluster with a monopoly on entering into cotton production contracts with farmers. Some clusters may also have close ties to local administrators. (19,62-64) In such cases, there is limited evidence that farmers may be pressured into entering contracts that have poor terms, such as a low purchase price for cotton or a high price for inputs like seeds and fertilizer. There have also been allegations of clusters that never pay farmers for delivered crops. (63,64) Observers have noted that these practices can mimic the pressures on farmers and

Uzbekistan

officials that historically created high risks for forced labor under the quota system. (19) Some clusters are investing in mechanical harvesting equipment and methods, which reduce the need for manual labor during the harvest. (43) However, in cases in which clusters still need to hire seasonal labor, they can work with MOELR-run Population Employment Facilitation Centers to advertise vacancies and recruit workers. (37) Limited reports suggest that during the 2019 harvest, local officials may have forcibly mobilized pickers to work on cluster-run or cluster-affiliated farms. (65)

During the reporting period, the government adopted a new strategy for agricultural development that includes an action item to end the state's practical involvement in crop production by 2023. Officials clarified that this would include an end to cotton production quotas. (14,60) In early March 2020, President Mirziyoyev signed a decree formally ending the practice of imposing state production plans in the cotton sector. Under these plans in previous harvests, local and regional officials were held responsible for meeting production targets, which observers reported was a root cause of forced labor and increased the risk of child labor. (18,66-68)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Efforts to Prevent Child and Forced Labor in the Cotton Harvest†	Include initiatives to raise awareness about the prohibition of child and forced labor in the cotton harvest. (43,59) In the first 9 months of 2019, as part of these efforts, the State Labor Inspectorate under MOELR conducted 7,181 awareness-raising events with workers and employers about the elimination of forced labor, ILO conventions, and penalties for violating labor laws. In total, 136,596 participants attended these events. (43)
National Rehabilitation Center†	MOELR-operated shelter that provides human trafficking victims with emergency medical and social services and assists in social rehabilitation. (3,8,59) In 2019, this center provided services to 220 victims. (51)
MOELR Fund for Community Works†	Offers the unemployed opportunities for paid public works, including seasonal agricultural work. Matches job seekers with labor needs in the cotton harvest to reduce the risk of forced labor. (3,42,70) The government continued to operate this program in 2019 to attract workers to areas of Uzbekistan in which there were insufficient local populations to meet cotton harvest quotas. (3,8,39)
Support for the Implementation of the Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan (2014–2019)	$6 million USDOL-funded project awarded to ILO to enhance the capacity of the government and workers' and employers' representatives to prevent and reduce child and forced labor and promote decent work in Uzbekistan. (36,71,72) During the reporting period, the project trained fair recruitment working groups in pilot districts on collective bargaining for remuneration and working conditions. (36) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Uzbekistan.

In 2019, the government established 197 new regional centers across the country for rehabilitation of human trafficking victims, including child victims. (51)

Although there are programs to address child labor in the cotton sector, research did not find evidence of programs designed to address child labor in other sectors, such as public works and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uzbekistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2015 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Establish criminal penalties for forced labor violations in the first instance.	2019
	Continue to increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that complaints of labor abuse in the cotton harvest can be registered anonymously over the phone.	2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors conduct self-initiated unannounced inspections in all sectors, even if no complaint has been filed.	2018 – 2019
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts related to all forms of child labor, including child victims of human trafficking.	2011 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that local NGOs monitoring child labor, forced labor, and other labor rights issues are able to register, and sanction officials who harass or intimidate labor rights activists.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Monitor implementation of the new cluster system to ensure farmers are not coerced to enter into contracts with certain clusters or produce cotton under terms that create high risk for exploitative labor.	2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that schools do not charge informal fees to students or their families.	2019
	Expand programs to address the worst forms of child labor in sectors other than cotton harvesting.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Vanuatu made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, Vanuatu acceded to ILO C. 138, setting the minimum age for work at 14. Although research is limited, children in Vanuatu engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in forestry. Vanuatu's minimum age for hazardous work of age 15 is too low to comply with international standards. Vanuatu also lacks a referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social service providers. In addition, the Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information for this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Vanuatu engage in dangerous tasks in forestry. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Vanuatu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (2) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Forestry, including logging (1,4)
Services	Street vending, including selling newspapers (1,4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Vanuatu lacks data to determine the nature and prevalence of child labor in the country. (1,4) Children living in remote areas face difficulties accessing education, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (7) Families sometimes send children to live with relatives in nearby towns or cities, and these children are subjected to forced labor as domestic workers. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Vanuatu has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

In 2019, Vanuatu acceded to ILO C. 138 setting the minimum age for work at 14 and bringing it into compliance with international standards. The convention will come into force in 2020. (8,9)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Vanuatu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 38 of the Employment Act (8)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 7 and 78(2) of the Employment Act; Section 102 of the Penal Code; Organized Crime Act (8,10,11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 35 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 101B-D of the Penal Code (10)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 35 of the Penal Code (10)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (12)

Vanuatu's hazardous work prohibitions do not comply with international standards that require all children under age 18 to be protected from work that could jeopardize their health and safety, and Vanuatu has yet to determine by law the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (7,8,13,14) In addition, the Employment Act permits children ages 12 and 13 to work in light agricultural work and domestic work, but it does not specify the activities or hours per week that are allowed. (8,15) The Penal Code does not include heightened penalties for inciting children to engage in illicit activities, including drug production and drug trafficking. (10) Although the government acknowledges these gaps and is developing a Child Protection Bill, research was unable to determine the status of the bill. (4,16)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, the Primary Education School Fee Grant Policy sometimes provides free basic education in government-owned schools for children in grades one to six. The policy was active in 2019, but parents still needed to pay school fees to ensure that their children had access to education, which could leave some children unable to access education vulnerable to child labor. (6,17,18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Justice and Community Services that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Enforces provisions set forth in the Employment Act, including child labor laws. (1)
Ministry of Justice and Community Services	Supports agencies that review laws, draft new laws, and implement relevant UN Conventions. (17) The Child Desk strengthens national planning, integrates international goals (e.g., UN Convention on the Rights of the Child), develops a system of protection for children, and supports community efforts to prevent child abuse. (1,17)
Vanuatu Police Force	Enforces all criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and collaborates with the Vanuatu Tourism Office to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children. Prosecutes child labor cases. (1,6)
National Intelligence Unit*	Operates under the Vanuatu Police Force. Is the designated lead and enforces Vanuatu’s trafficking in persons laws, including possible commercial sexual exploitation of children as a result of human trafficking. (5)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

The Child Desk does not have adequate financial and human resources to develop and integrate national planning initiatives into child protection policies. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

The Government of Vanuatu did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Vanuatu’s referral mechanism lacks inter-agency referral and coordination protocols to connect enforcement authorities—including the Department of Labor and the Vanuatu Police Force—to social welfare services. (1,4,5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (19)	Unknown (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (19)	No (1)

The Vanuatu Police Force employed 50 investigators that enforce the criminal law, including laws on the worst forms of child labor. (6) The Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Although the police have established standard operating procedures to attend to child victims, there is no formal referral mechanism between the police and social services. (1,4) Most cases of child labor are dealt with by Kastom (an informal method individuals use to settle disputes), and although anyone can report a crime, research found that police are more likely to investigate if the victims themselves report their allegations. After a case is reported by the victim, the police are mandated to investigate the allegations and bring evidence to the public prosecutor for trial. (18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Children Protection Working Group	Serves as the primary forum for exchanging information on child protection and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Chaired by the Director General of the Ministry of Justice and Community Services and comprises representatives from the government, UN agencies, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (1,20-23) Research was unable to determine whether the National Children Protection Working Group was active during the reporting period.
Kastom (custom)	Serves as the primary informal method to handle child protection issues in Vanuatu. Comprises informal service providers, including religious leaders, women's groups, and NGOs, to whom children are referred through Kastom for services. (1,4) Although there are no formal reports generated from this service being used during the reporting period, it may have been used in rural areas. (24)

Although the government has established a National Child Protection Working Group to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children, research found no evidence that there is a coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor. (20) Although Kastom is a common mechanism used to address child protection issues, research found that there is a lack of established inter-agency protocols and procedures between Kastom and governmental offices—including the Vanuatu Police Force—to sufficiently coordinate and ensure that child protection services are provided. (1,4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including in implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children Protection Policy (2016–2026)	Aims to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. Provides children with equitable access to services to support reintegration and recovery when needed. (6,20,22)

Policy	Description
Child Safeguarding Policy (2017–2020)	Provides guidelines for protecting children from abuse, including child labor, violence, sexual abuse, neglect, and exploitation. Maintains a presence in capacity building, emergency preparedness and response, and coordination of services related to child protection. (1,25)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (27)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (26)

Research was unable to determine whether any policies were active during the reporting period. The National Children Protection Policy does not have a dedicated budget, and the offices responsible for its implementation suffer from a lack of human and financial resources. (4,19)

There is no register of civil society organizations tasked with protecting children, and social services providers are not required to be registered with the state. Furthermore, there are no standards or requirements that child protection agents or social services providers must follow when addressing children's issues. (1,4,22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including sufficient funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Education School Fee Grant†	Funded by the Government of Vanuatu's Ministry of Education; provides funding directly to primary schools to manage. Funds are disbursed to students in Years 1 through 6 to offset education costs. (28) While active in 2019, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Education School Fee Grant program during the reporting period or whether this program was funded.

† Program is funded by the Government of Vanuatu

Research was unable to determine whether the Vanuatu Education School Fee Grant program contained child labor elimination policies or efforts.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Vanuatu (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18.	2016 – 2019
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law protects children ages 12 and 13 employed in light agricultural work by specifying the activities and hours per week that are allowed.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law specifically prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminalizes the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Establish a law providing free basic public education.	2016 – 2019
	Establish by law an age up to which education is compulsory that extends to the minimum age for work.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2012 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by ensuring the ability to assess penalties and initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2016 – 2019

For the 2019 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Wallis and Futuna's efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the country has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Wallis and Futuna. (1) Wallis and Futuna has a population of 15,854 inhabitants. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Wallis and Futuna is a French overseas collectivity, and, as such, cannot ratify international conventions. However, France's ratification of such conventions applies to Wallis and Futuna. (1,3) France has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

French law applies in Wallis and Futuna. (1,3) The Government of France has established laws and regulations related to child labor, which are in line with relevant international standards (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 118 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 115 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article R234-6 of the Labor Code; Decree No. 2013-915, Relative to Work That is Prohibited and Regulated for Young People Less Than 18 Years (5,6)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 212-1, 224-1, 225-4-1, 225-14-1, 225-14-2, and 711-1 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4,7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 225-4-1 to 225-4-9 and 711-1 of the Penal Code (7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 225-5 to 12 and 711-1 of the Penal Code (7)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 222-35, 227-15 to 227-28-3, and 711-1 of the Penal Code (7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of France has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3). Wallis and Futuna has one labor inspector to enforce these laws and regulations.

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Service of Labor and Social Laws Inspectorate	Enforces French labor law and mediates in labor conflicts within Wallis and Futuna, falling under the joint authority of the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Overseas Territories. (1)
Defender of Rights	Promotes children's rights, including through the prohibition of child labor. (10)
French National Police	Oversees the health and safety of children. (10)

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor in Wallis and Futuna.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, the Palestinian Authority made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of the West Bank under its control. It cooperated with the United Nations Children’s Fund and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to provide educational services to 325,000 students and psychosocial support to over 97,000 children. However, children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in construction and illicit activities. Children also engage in child labor in street vending. The Palestinian Authority’s legal framework does not criminally prohibit all elements of child trafficking, and labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties. In addition, Palestinian Authority programs to prevent or eliminate child labor are insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip engage in the worst forms of child labor, including use in illicit activities including smuggling drugs and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,16,25) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization’s analysis, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating asparagus, dates, eggplants, grapes, marijuana, olives, onions, sweet peppers, and tomatoes (5-13)
	Fishing,† including working on fishing boats and repairing nets (1,8,14,15)
Industry	Construction,† including demolishing buildings and collecting rubble and gravel for construction purposes (1,2,8,10,13,17,18)
	Manufacturing, including working in pottery workshops (1,2,9)
	Working in factories (8,19)
	Mining and quarrying (9,20)
Services	Street vending, portering, and cleaning cars (1,2,8,10,17,19,21)
	Begging (8,10,19)
	Working in auto body shops and metal workshops (2,19)
	Working in shops, hotels, restaurants, and bakeries (1,9,13,15)
	Domestic work (1,8,18)
	Transporting goods (8)
	Collecting scrap metal, cement bricks, and solid waste† (6,8,16)
Scavenging garbage, steel, and gravel at trash pits (13,15,18,21,22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including smuggling drugs and food (1,23)
	Begging as a result of human trafficking (16,24)
	Commercial sexual exploitation (16,25)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are vulnerable to child labor in the agricultural sector, partly because the Palestinian Authority (PA) does not have jurisdiction or the resources to enforce laws in Area C’s agricultural fields and Israeli settlements in the West Bank. (1,6,7,23) West Bank Palestinian girls are vulnerable to being exploited for sex and labor in

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Israel after family members force them into marriages with older men; these girls experience physical and sexual abuse, threats of violence, and restricted movement. (25)

In the Gaza Strip, most schools operate on a split schedule, offering only four hours of instruction per day. (8,26-28) Overcrowded classrooms, violence in schools, and damaged schools susceptible to disruption due to weather contribute to children dropping out. (1,8,13,27,28) In the West Bank, school closures, demolition and military raids of schools, delays and harassment at checkpoints, and settler violence directed at students and schools prevent children from attending school. (29,30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The PA has Non-Member Observer status at the UN. In April 2014, PA officials presented to UN officials letters of accession to 15 UN treaties, including the UN CRC and its Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. In December 2017, PA officials acceded to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The penal code applicable to the West Bank is Jordanian Law No. 16 of 1960 (Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank). The penal code applicable to Gaza is Penal Code No. 74 of 1936, which was enacted during the British Mandate (Penal Code for Gaza). (31) The PA has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 93 of the Labor Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 14 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (32,33)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 95 of the Labor Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (33)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 1 of Minister of Labor's Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (34)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 1 of Minister of Labor's Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 1 of Minister of Labor's Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 306 and 310 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Articles 167 and 172(5) of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (32,35,36)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 27 and 44 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 389 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Article 193 of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (32,35,36)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes†	18	Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 3 and 18 of the Palestinian Education Act for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 37 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (32,37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 3 and 15 of the Palestinian Education Act for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; (37)

* No conscription in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (23)

† No standing military in the West Bank (23)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

Although human trafficking and forced labor are on the hazardous work list, the law does not criminally prohibit child trafficking or forced labor in accordance with international standards. (33,34) In addition, laws criminalizing commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because they do not criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of all male and female children for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances. (32,35,36) Further, there are no criminal penalties for recruiting children into non-state armed groups. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL), General Administration of Labor Inspection and Protection	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (10,38)
Ministry of Social Development (MOSD), Child Protection Department	Ensures compliance with the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, which prohibits the worst forms of child labor and establishes the minimum age for work. (10)
Police Bureau for the Protection of the Family and Adolescents	Investigates violations of laws, including the commercial sexual exploitation and economic exploitation of children. Coordinates with MOSD to monitor cases of child labor and economic exploitation. (10)
Office of the Public Prosecutor for Children	Investigates and prosecutes cases of child exploitation, including child labor. (10)

In the West Bank, under the terms of the Oslo-era agreements between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli Government, the PA has civil law jurisdiction in the areas of the West Bank designated Area A and Area B, which represent approximately 39 percent of the West Bank's land area and contain approximately 94 percent of the Palestinian population. The Israeli Government has full administrative and security control over the city of Jerusalem and Area C; the latter represents 61 percent of the West Bank's land area and approximately 6 percent of the Palestinian population and the vast majority of the West Bank's agricultural areas. (39-42)

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although PA laws ostensibly apply to both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the PA has no means to enforce compliance in Area C of the West Bank and limited means in the Gaza Strip, in which Hamas exercises de facto control and does not enforce PA laws and regulations. (40,42,43)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In previous years, the MOL reported that it was unable to inspect as many businesses per year as required by the Labor Law, due to insufficient funding. (1,16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A

Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (16)	Yes (10)

PA officials previously stated that insufficient resources hampered their capacity to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOSD Child Protection Networks	Monitor cases of child labor, ensuring that the MOL's services are provided to withdraw children from child labor. Include eight technical committees throughout the West Bank to provide psychological and social support to children and caregivers. (10) Coordinate with the Ministry of Education on cases of school drop-outs and child labor. Work with MOSD's 13 Youth Social Rehabilitation Centers that provide children who have dropped out of school with social, education, vocational, and cultural training. (10) Comprising the MOSD, MOL, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Interior, and other Palestinian Authority and non-governmental organizations. (45) Research was unable to determine which activities were conducted during the reporting period.

The National Committee on Child Labor, which intended to create a national policy on child labor and was led by the MOL, does not function based on available information. (46)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the PA has established policies to address child labor.

The PA's National Policy Agenda (2017–2022) aims to alleviate poverty through social programs for vulnerable groups and job creation programs for women and youth, improve primary and secondary school curricula, ensure equal access to education for marginalized areas, and ensure that technical and vocational training is aligned with labor market needs. (47) However, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the PA funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MOL's Vocational Centers†	PA program in the West Bank, consisting of 13 employment offices and 9 vocational centers operated by the MOL, for children over the age of 15 to enroll in vocational training courses. The MOL also provides financial assistance to families, ensuring that children return to school and no longer engage in child labor. (10) Research was unable to determine what steps were taken in 2019 to implement this program.
UN Education Programs	UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) programs provide educational support for children and youth in refugee camps, and microfinance and other forms of support to families in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. (48) In the 2018–2019 academic year, UNRWA provided education to over 46,000 students, and vocational training for 1,000 students in the West Bank and approximately 279,000 students in Gaza. (49,50) In 2019, UNICEF provided psychosocial care to 2,600 children; provided safe accompaniment to school for 6,400 children; held a summer camp in Gaza, providing over 95,000 children with psychological counselling, protection services, and recreational activities; and provided remedial education programs to nearly 10,000 children at risk of dropping out of school. (51)

† Program is funded by the PA.

Although there are programs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in construction, street work, illicit activities, and agriculture.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the West Bank (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits of child trafficking, including both domestic and international human trafficking, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2019
	Establish laws that criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage and slavery.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the use, procurement, and offering of children for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation are criminally prohibited.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that child labor laws are enforced in the Gaza Strip.	2010 – 2019
	Publish information on the labor and criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including the amount of funding, the number of labor inspectors, the number and type of inspections, the training provided to inspectors and investigators, the number of child labor violations, and penalties issued and collected, and the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions.	2010 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2019
	Provide further resources and staff to the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Social Affairs to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations.	2010 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that Child Protection Networks are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Policy Agenda and ensure that it is implemented.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Expand programs to improve access to education; for example, ensure that children are not subject to violence, schools are weather-proof, and delays at checkpoints are not prohibitive.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that Ministry of Labor's social programs are implemented including vocational centers.	2017 – 2019
	Expand programs to further address child labor, specifically in construction, street work, illicit activities, and agriculture.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Morocco made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Kingdom of Morocco claims the territory of Western Sahara and administers the area that it controls by the same constitution, laws, and structures as in internationally-recognized Morocco, including laws that deal with child labor. The government adopted Law 51.17, which requires the government to enact compulsory education for children between the ages of 4 and 16 by 2025 and significantly increased the number of prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Western Sahara engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work. Children also engage in child labor in producing artisanal handicrafts. Laws related to the minimum age for work and the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards and the scope of government programs that target child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Western Sahara engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Commercial sexual exploitation of migrant girls occurs and is reportedly more prevalent in fishing villages and on fishing boats. (1,2) Children, particularly in rural areas, are vulnerable to child labor due to educational barriers similar to those faced in other locations in Morocco, such as insufficient facilities, lack of reliable and safe transportation, and unqualified teachers. (1-3) In general, research has not been conducted to determine the prevalence of child labor in Western Sahara, nor has research found the levels of education among children who are engaged in child labor in Western Sahara. Data on key indicators of children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Moroccan-controlled portion of the territory of Western Sahara is subject to the same laws as internationally recognized Morocco. (2,5) The Popular Front for the Liberation of the Saguia el-Hamra and Río de Oro (Polisario Front), an organization that seeks the territory's independence, controls the remaining territory; information on the laws applicable in the remaining portion of the territory is unavailable. (1,2,6-8) Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, which the Government of Morocco extends to the areas in Western Sahara that it controls (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Morocco has established laws and regulations related to child labor that extend to Western Sahara (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Morocco's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 143 of the Labor Code (9)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 147 and 181 of the Labor Code (9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List, Decree No. 2-10-183; Article 181 of the Labor Code (9,10)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 10 and 12 of the Labor Code; Article 467-2 of the Penal Code (9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 448.1, and 448.4-448.5 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 503-2 of the Penal Code (12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 4 of Royal Decree of 9 June 1966 (13)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 4 of Law No. 44-18 (14)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (15)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (15)

The government adopted Law 51.17, which requires the government to enact compulsory education for children between the ages of 4 and 16 by 2025. (16,17)

Despite regulations to inform agencies on implementing the Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers in 2016, there remain enforcement issues, such as the inability of labor inspectors to inspect closed private residences, in which many domestic workers are employed. (22,34) In addition, the law does not provide explicit protections for self-employed children, those who work in the traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with fewer than five employees, or those who work on private farms or in residences. Despite assurances from the Government of Morocco that inspectors could inspect in the case of any established labor relationship, often verified through witnesses in the absence of contracts, there is an absence of explicit legal protections that conform to international standards, which require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (6,9,18,21)

In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not fully cover sectors in which child labor is known to occur, specifically in domestic work (10) Moroccan law does not define using, procuring, or offering children for the production or trafficking of drugs as a separate crime. (5,22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3). Information about labor law and criminal law enforcement in Western Sahara is unavailable. The government does not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts in Western Sahara.

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Vocational Integration	Enforces child labor laws and oversees programs on child labor through its child labor task force. (19,22-24) Provides occupational health and safety services, administers social security, and organizes labor inspections and employment services through nationwide satellite offices. (24)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces prohibitions on human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code, through the General Directorate of National Security. (2,19,23)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children and processes cases involving women and children within the court system through the Child Labor Units. (1,2,23)
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family, and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Ensures the continuity of child protection and child labor elimination efforts and expands children's access to education. (25) Implements the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children. (19,26) Supports 142 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence. (22)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation	Coordinates efforts to reduce migrant vulnerability to child labor through its Delegate Ministry in Charge of Moroccans Living Abroad and Migration Affairs. Promotes migrant children's access to public education facilities in addition to other social services and assistance. (1,16,24,27)
Ministry of National Education, Vocational Training, Higher Education, and Scientific Research	Provides education and job training to former child workers, including former child domestic workers and migrant youth. (16,19,22)

Following the passage of the Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers in 2016, the law entered into force on October 2, 2018. However, despite regulations to inform agencies on implementing the law, there remains enforcement issues, such as the inability of labor inspectors to inspect closed private residences, where many domestic workers are employed. (2,5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood	Ensures inter-sectoral coordination and monitoring of the implementation of international conventions on children's issues through a committee of 25 government bodies, chaired by the Head of the Government of Morocco. Establishes strategies and mechanisms to implement national policies and plans in the area of child protection and in coordination efforts managed primarily at the local and regional levels. (22,28) Met regularly in 2019. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco (PPIPEM)	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to the exploitation of children, among other issues. (19,24,26,28) Stakeholders in PPIPEM confirmed that formal meetings for review and discussion of progress related to the policy were held during the reporting period. (18) On December 18, 2019, MSWFSD launched an integrated territorial child protection systems pilot-program in 8 provinces. These programs - part of the Integrated Public Child Protection Policy - established provincial child protection committees and child protection support centers at the provincial level. (16)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which extended to Western Sahara (Table 6). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Taysir Conditional Cash Transfer Program†	MSWFSD program that provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria, aiming to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates, particularly in rural areas. There were 832,500 project participants in 2015–2016 and 509,475 in 2016–2017. (2,6,24,26,30-32) In 2019, the program provided assistance to 2,087,000 students from low-income families (16)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

‡ The Government of Morocco had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,5,24,30,31)

In 2019, the Government of Morocco continued a regularization campaign to provide legal status and documentation to foreign migrants. (16) Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including with regard to children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (1,5,24)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Western Sahara (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children who are self-employed, work for artisan and handicraft businesses with fewer than five employees, or work on private farms and in residences.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution	2019
	Prohibit by law all types of types of hazardous work that may harm children's health, safety, and morals, including domestic work.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit children from being used, procured for, or offered in illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive study of children's work activities to inform policies and practices to determine whether they are engaged in or at risk of becoming involved in child labor, and determine the number of child laborers and their education levels.	2013 – 2019
	Remove barriers to education, such as insufficient facilities, lack of reliable and safe transportation, and unqualified teachers, particularly in rural areas.	2015 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Yemen made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Republic of Yemen Government progressed in its implementation of the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces by appointing 90 child protection focal points within the Yemeni armed forces and training 40 of them to identify children within their ranks. In addition, the government released 25 children conscripted by Houthi forces and subsequently captured to the Marib interim care center for rehabilitation. Despite these initiatives to address child labor, Yemen is receiving this assessment because it continued to implement practices that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. There is evidence of recruitment and use of children in hostilities by state armed forces in contravention of Yemeni law and despite government efforts to counter child soldier recruitment. Furthermore, the government failed to make efforts to address discrimination in schools against children from the Muhamasheen community, leading to their increased vulnerability to child labor. Children in Yemen engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and armed conflict, including by Houthi insurgent forces and other armed groups. Children also engage in child labor in fishing. Research found no evidence of a policy on worst forms of child labor outside of soldiering, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Yemen engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and armed conflict, including by Houthi insurgent forces and other armed groups. (1,2) Children also engage in child labor in fishing. (3-5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Yemen.

Services	Street work, including selling items, and begging (4,10,13-17)
	Working in auto repair and mechanic shops† and car washes (5,8,10)
	Domestic work† (4,9)
	Selling goods in stores and transporting them (4,10)
	Working in bakeries, and in transportation as fare collectors on taxis (10)
	Voluntarily recruited children used in hostilities by state armed groups (18-22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,23-26)
	Use in illicit activities, including in trafficking of drugs (3,27-29)
	Domestic work, begging, and working in small shops, each as a result of human trafficking (24,27)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (2,3,18,20,23,30)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2019, Yemen’s protracted civil war resulted in the world’s worst humanitarian crisis, according to UN reporting. (31,32) The Republic of Yemen Government has lost control to Houthi forces of the northern region of the country, where most of the population resides. (33) As of July 2019, over 24 million Yemenis were in need of humanitarian assistance, including 12.3 million children. (32) Approximately 1.7 million Yemeni children were internally displaced and 4.7 million children were in need of educational assistance. (32) Yemen was also home to approximately 277,000 refugees and asylum seekers, mostly from Somalia and Ethiopia. Approximately 20 percent of these refugees were children. (34) Vulnerable populations, including IDPs and refugees, were at increased risk of child labor and human trafficking. (35,36)

Armed conflict in Yemen intensified in 2019, and security and access restrictions constrained further international observers’ ability to fully monitor grave violations, including the recruitment and use of children. Armed groups, including the Houthis and pro-Coalition militias, recruited for and used child soldiers in armed combat in 2019. (23,29,30,32,37) In addition, the Yemeni Armed Forces recruited and used children, typically ages 15 to 17, for these same purposes, in contravention of Yemeni law. (18,20) The government’s failure to institute effective mechanisms for age verification continued to be a factor in the continuation of this problem. According to UN reporting, the Houthis/Ansar Allah recruited and used 686 children in 2019, the Yemeni Armed Forces recruited and used 136 children, and other armed groups recruited and used an additional 67 children. Nineteen percent of these children were below the age of 15. (22)

There is evidence of chattel slavery, as children are owned, sold, and inherited as property, particularly in Al Hajjah, Al Hudaydah, and Al Mahwit governorates. (38,39) Yemeni children, mostly boys who migrate to Sana’a, Aden, and Saudi Arabia, are engaged in forced labor for domestic work, begging, or work in small shops. (27,38) Moreover, research indicates that commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking have increased over the past several years. (24) Girls are subjected to human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation within Yemen in hotels and clubs located in Aden, Sana’a, Ta’iz, and other cities. (27,38)

In Yemen, children faced significant barriers to access to education, including in areas under government control. Across the country, there were 2,500 schools that were out of use, some partially or totally destroyed because of armed conflict, and some used as shelters. (40-42) The armed conflict, attacks on schools, and displacement are additional barriers to education. According to UNICEF, more than 2 million children were unable to attend school. (43) Many families could not afford transportation costs to schools. (44) Teachers have not received salaries from the government over the past 2 years, disrupting the education of 3.7 million children. (43) The Republic of Yemen Government stated that Houthi forces have changed the school curricula in areas under their control to teach children about their ideology and have children attend militia events. (45)

Among the Muhamasheen (“marginalized”) minority group, generally of African origin, illiteracy rates are high, and child labor in the form of begging is prevalent. This community also suffers from general poverty and severe societal discrimination, including in distribution of humanitarian aid. (13,27,46-48) They also make up a large proportion of people living as IDPs. (42,47) Many Muhamasheen children do not have birth certificates, which are required for enrollment in schools. They face harassment, bullying, and violence at school, are dismissed from school, or are asked to clean the bathrooms, leading some to drop out. (46-48) Muhamasheen boys are vulnerable to sexual violence by armed actors, particularly while they engage in child labor, even if they are not directly involved in armed conflict. (46) Research did not uncover any government efforts to address discrimination.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Yemen has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Yemen's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including laws prohibiting child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 5 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 7 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 7–8 and 15 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 6(b) and 26 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Article 248 of the Penal Code (49,50)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 26 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 147 and 163 of the Child Rights Law; Article 279 of the Penal Code; Article 25 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49-51)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 24 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Articles 148 and 162 of the Child Rights Law (49,51)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 149 of the Child Rights Law (51)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 6(b) of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (49)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 18 of the General Education Law (52)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 87 of the Child Rights Law (51)

* No conscription (53)

‡ Age calculated based on available information

While Article 248 of the Penal Code criminalizes buying, selling, and dealing in human beings, the legal framework does not appear to prohibit forced labor. (50)

Yemen

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The legal framework does not adequately prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child in pornography and pornographic performances, or using a child in prostitution. (49-51)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to combat child labor.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's Child Labor Unit	Enforces child labor laws, conducts inspections, informs the Ministry of the Interior of any violations, and refers children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (5)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces child labor laws. Police departments within the Ministry of the Interior handle human trafficking investigations. (5)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws; prosecutes and adjudicates child labor cases. (5)
Ministry of Human Rights, Ministry of Legal Affairs, Parliament, and the Social Fund for Development	Maintain supporting roles in combating child trafficking. (5)

The Republic of Yemen Government had limited operational control over its ministries and remained unable to enforce regulations. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of complaint mechanisms.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown (3)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Unknown (3)

In 2019, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor conducted labor inspections and noted several child labor violations; however, inspections remained suspended in conflict-affected areas and the Ministry's capacity in areas it controls is extremely limited. (3) Moreover, specific child labor inspection programs remain suspended. (3) Based on available information, in 2019, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor removed an unknown number of children who engaged in street work from the streets. No further information is available. (10)

The Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor does not have the authority to enforce child labor laws in casual employment, farming, and domestic work and lacks a referral mechanism for child labor complaints. (3,54)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to combat child labor. (3)

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	No (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	No (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Yes (3)

The government was unable to investigate, prosecute, or convict government officials allegedly complicit in human trafficking offenses, including the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Republic of Yemen Government's Armed Forces. (55)

In 2019, the Republic of Yemen Government did not take any proactive steps to investigate or prosecute the practice of chattel slavery. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues in Yemen. Comprises representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor, other state agencies, the ILO, and local NGOs. (5) Research was unable to determine whether the National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
National Network for Child Protection	Implements training programs and media awareness campaigns, and advocates for progress on children's issues. (5) Research was unable to determine whether the National Network for Child Protection was active during the reporting period.
Joint Technical Committee to Prevent Recruitment of Children in the Yemeni Armed Forces	Implements and monitors the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces. (55) In 2019, the Joint Committee supported the implementation of the Action Plan. (30)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces	Ensures that national laws comply with international standards, prohibits the recruitment and use of children in armed forces, investigates allegations of violations, and facilitates UN access to monitor compliance. (22) In 2019, the government appointed 90 child protection focal points within the Yemeni armed forces, 40 of whom were trained to identify associated children. (56) In addition, 20 officers from the National Army and other security units received training on the risks of child recruitment in June 2019. Progress stalled in August 2019, with tensions erupting between the government and the Southern Transitional Council. (30,56)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (57,58)

Although the Republic of Yemen Government has adopted the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking. (2) In 2019, the government drafted a National Plan to Reduce Child Labor; however, the plan was pending approval at the end of the reporting period. The government emphasized that it could not implement the plan without donor support. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of services to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Educational Activities	UNICEF-funded programs conducted in cooperation with the Republic of Yemen Government that provide educational support activities and services. (59) In 2019, UNICEF paid incentives to 127,400 teachers, who have not been paid in over 2 years, to cover transportation and other basic expenses. (43) UNICEF and its partners also rehabilitated 13 schools and hygiene facilities in another 37. UNICEF supported the construction of 33 semi-permanent schools for internally displaced children, and provided psychosocial support training for over 1,200 teachers. (32) Over 15,000 children received school bags and essential supplies. (32)

In 2019, the Government of Saudi Arabia, which backs the internationally recognized Republic of Yemen Government, operated at least one rehabilitation center in Marib, a city that is currently under the control of the Republic of Yemen Government, through which former child soldiers are reunited with their families and provided rehabilitation. (20,61,62) During the reporting period, 25 children conscripted by Houthi forces and subsequently captured by Coalition forces were released to the center for rehabilitation. The center also trained its staff on the dangers of child soldier recruitment and how to prevent its occurrence. (56)

Although the Republic of Yemen Government participates in programs that address child labor and access to education, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation, child soldiering, and fishing.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Yemen (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that forced labor is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that trafficking of children, including recruitment, harboring, transportation, transfer, and receipt, for purposes of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation, is criminalized.	2015 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law is sufficiently comprehensive to prohibit using a child for prostitution and using, procuring and offering a child for pornography and pornographic performances.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Enforce laws prohibiting children under age 18 from joining Yemeni Armed Forces, including by implementing effective screening and age verification measures, and remove children under age 18 in the Yemeni Armed Forces and pro-government militias from engaging in combat.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has the capacity to enforce labor laws, including reestablishing a mechanism to receive child labor complaints.	2015 – 2019
	Proactively identify, investigate, and remedy cases of chattel slavery.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors have proper funding and training to conduct inspections.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that authorities enforce minimum age protections in all sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are prevalent, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies enforce child labor laws and publish information on enforcement activities.	2015 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.	2009 – 2019
Social Programs	Expand programs to improve children's equal access to education, particularly for child survivors of chattel slavery and child Muhamasheen .	2013 – 2019
	Institute a rehabilitation and reintegration program for children engaged in armed conflict and children involved in other worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and fishing.	2011 – 2019

In 2019, Zambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased the number of prosecutions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor and expanded the powers of the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor violations. The government also established a new National Coordinating Committee for Children to enhance responses on child protection issues, including child trafficking, sexual exploitation of children, and child labor. However, children in Zambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The Education Act does not specify a compulsory education age, and human trafficking laws are discordant with international standards because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to establish the crime of child trafficking. In addition, labor inspectors lack sufficient financial and human resources to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Children also engage in work in agriculture. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zambia.

	Forced labor in agriculture, herding, construction, domestic work, mining, and textile production, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Zambia is most prevalent in the agricultural sector and includes forced labor, sometimes resulting from human trafficking. (1,2,13) Children are primarily trafficked from rural areas in Zambia for domestic work in cities or forced labor on farms. (1,11) Sources reported the exploitation of children for cattle herding, which sometimes involves parents repaying debts by sending children, particularly young boys, to work as cattle herders for the people to whom they are indebted. (2) Orphans and street children are particularly vulnerable to child trafficking. (1,14) In addition, children from neighboring countries are also exploited for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation in Zambia, as a result of human trafficking. (1)

Illegal mining syndicates in the Copperbelt province called jerabo gangs employ children for mining activities, including forcing children to load trucks with stolen copper ore. (1,15) In January 2019, three children, ages 11, 13, and 15, were killed during an accident at a manganese mine in which they were working. (16,17) Commercial sexual exploitation of children is common, particularly along Zambia’s borders and transit corridors. (1,12) The government has conducted regular Labor Force Surveys and published the results in 2011, 2014, and 2016, but these surveys did not include child labor data. The government included a child labor module in its 2018 Labor Force Survey, but these results are not yet available to the public. (18-20)

Long distances to schools, particularly in rural areas, and costs of uniforms and materials are barriers to education. (2,21-23) The inability to access birth certificates and the prevalence of the early marriage of girls increase the vulnerability of children to child labor; children without birth certificates are not able to enroll in school, and once girls marry, they are removed from school and sometimes required to work outside the household. (14,23-25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Zambia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including an undefined age range for compulsory education and lack of a list of activities considered to be light work, as required by Zambian law.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Constitution; Articles 16 and 81 of the Employment Code Act (26,27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	19	Article 83 of the Employment Code Act (27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 14 and 24 of the Constitution; Articles 143 and 263 of the Penal Code; Article 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2008; Section 8 of the Employment Code Act (26,27-29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 17 of Amendment to the Constitution; Article 143 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 3 (1-4) of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2008; Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act (26,27,28,29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 144 of the Penal Code; Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act (27,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act (27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 14 of the Defence Act (30)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2008 (28)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Article 16 of the Education Act of 2011 (31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 15 of the Education Act of 2011 (31)

* No conscription (31)

In 2019, the Government enacted the Employment Code Act, which replaced multiple labor laws, including the Employment Act and the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act. The new law maintains 15 as the minimum age of employment, reaffirms prohibitions against the worst forms of child labor, and strengthens the authority of the labor inspectorate. (2,27,32) Previous regulations identifying hazardous work activities, however, are likely no longer operational because they drew their authority from the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act, which the Employment Code Act repealed. (27)

The law establishes a light work framework for employment of children between ages 13 and 15, but has not identified permitted light work activities. (27,33) In addition, human trafficking provisions remain discordant with international standards because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to establish a crime of child trafficking. (28)

The Education Act requires that the government provide free education up to the seventh grade and stipulates that education is compulsory for children of “school-going age.” The Act, however, does not set a specific age or define “school-going age,” which may allow children to leave school before they are legally able to work and thereby increase their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (31,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Implements, enforces, and regulates child labor laws. (19,34) Advises other government agencies on child labor issues and coordinates government efforts to combat child labor through its Child Labor Unit (CLU). (6,19) The CLU, which falls under the labor inspectorate, carries out inspections related to child labor. (35)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforces criminal laws against human trafficking, child commercial exploitation, use of children as soldiers, and use of children in illegal activities. (23)
Zambia Police Service	Collaborates with the Ministry of Justice to investigate and prosecute child labor cases. (23) Handles the enforcement of laws against human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities through its Victim Support Unit. (2,36) Through its Child Protection Unit, works with immigration officials and local officials to respond to child trafficking, enforce child labor laws, and remove vulnerable children from the streets, placing them into families, foster homes, or in safe homes. (2)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal law enforcement cases related to the worst forms of child labor through its Office of the Prosecutor. (2,37)
Ministry of Community Development and Social Services	Provides social services to victims of human trafficking or sexual abuse. Operates one government shelter in Luapula province and oversees two NGO shelters. (1,11,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSS that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including human and financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	1,533 (23)	615 (2)
Number Conducted at Worksite	1,533 (23)	615 (2)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	511 (23)	Unknown (2)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (19)	Unknown (2)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (23)	Unknown (2)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (23)	Yes (2)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (23)	Yes (2)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (23)	Yes (2)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (23)	Yes (2)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (23)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (23)	Yes (2)

A referral mechanism exists through District Child Labor Committees that allows labor officers to refer cases to NGOs. (23) In 2019, the Child Labor Unit (CLU) within the labor inspectorate had an operational budget of $10,000; this funding, however, was inadequate to enforce laws related to child labor. (2,39) As a result, the CLU was not able to conduct all of its planned child labor inspections. (2) The MLSS has stated that inadequate resources, including an insufficient budget, limited office space, inadequate training, and a lack of transportation and fuel have prevented it from adequately conducting inspections countrywide. (2,6,40) Although the government increased the size of its labor inspectorate to 160 inspectors during the reporting period, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Zambia's workforce, which includes approximately 6.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Zambia would employ about 172 inspectors. (41,42)

The MLSS conducts labor inspections in registered private institutions only; it does not conduct inspections allowed by law in unregistered institutions in which child labor is more likely to be found. (43) The government did not provide information on the number of child labor violations and whether it imposed and collected penalties for inclusion in this report. (2)

In 2019, Zambia updated its labor code, which strengthened labor inspectors' authority to access facilities and documents during labor inspections and gave inspectors authority to assess penalties for labor code violations, including child labor. (2,27) The IOM launched a program with MLSS to strengthen the capacity of labor inspectors to identify and protect victims of human trafficking for child labor purposes. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (44)	No (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (44)	No (2)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (44)	No (2)
Number of Investigations	38 (44)	5 (11)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (23)	10 (11)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (44)	6 (11)
Number of Convictions	5 (44)	1 (11)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (44)	Yes (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (44)	Yes (2)

The government reported five investigations, involving at least 10 victims, and six prosecutions and one conviction, each related to child trafficking; however, information about other investigations related to other worst forms of child labor was not available. (11) In 2019, the Child Protection Unit of the Zambia Police Service handled 36 cases related to child labor, providing victim counseling and sensitization, but research could not determine the number of cases that resulted in law enforcement investigations and prosecutions. (2)

Government agencies do not have sufficient financial and human resources to address human trafficking, nor do they have consistent procedures to screen and identify human trafficking victims. (11)

In 2019, the government provided training related to trafficking in persons for 2,500 law enforcement officials and 26 magistrates, which included guidance on identifying, responding to, and coordinating with appropriate government agencies that work with victims of child trafficking. (45) The government also partnered with the IOM to train 20 staffers working for an NGO-funded and operated call center to which people can report information related to human trafficking. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSCCL)	Advises and oversees child labor matters, including implementation of hazardous work regulations. Chaired by the MLSS and comprises government representatives, employers, trade unions, and civil society members. (2,23,46) The government is currently reconstituting the committee to increase its effectiveness, but the NSCCL did not engage in activities in 2019. (2)
District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs)	Responds to child labor complaints at the district level, file complaints to MLSS, and serve as the main referral mechanism for social welfare services in collaboration with the CLU of the MLSS. Comprises the Zambia Police Service; MLSS; the Ministry of Community Development, Mother, and Child Health; and civil society stakeholders. (2) Coordinates with Community Child Labor Committees, which operate at the community level to raise awareness and refer complaints to DCLCs. DCLCs were active at the local level in 2019. (2)
National Coordinating Committee for Children*	Coordinates the implementation of the National Child Policy and government responses to child protection issues, including child trafficking, sexual exploitation of children, and child labor. Led by the Ministry of Youth, Sport and Child Development in coordination with DCLCs that operate in selected districts. (2)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Anti-Human Trafficking	Leads efforts to address human trafficking. (44) Chaired by the Ministry of Home Affairs and includes representation from MLSS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Community Development and Social Services, the Ministry of Local Government, the Ministry of Youth, Sport and Child Development, the Zambia Police Service, the Department of Immigration, the IOM, and a number of NGOs. (2) The Inter-Ministerial Committee on Anti-Human Trafficking did not meet regularly during the reporting period. (11)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Overlapping responsibilities and communication lapses among government agencies may hinder coordination and their ability to implement their mandates related to the worst forms of child labor. (6, 11, 48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of implementation of policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Outlines objectives for prevention and elimination of child labor and designates responsible agencies to address child labor issues. (23,49) In 2019, the government held several meetings to revise the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor under the National Child Labor Policy. (50)
7th National Development Plan (2017–2021)	Outlines Zambia's strategy to promote inclusive economic growth and national development to support Zambia's long-term goal of becoming a "middle income" country, including through the elimination of child labor, by 2030. Seeks to improve access to quality education and reduce poverty by 20 percent by 2021. (51) During the reporting period, the government implemented the 2019 Employment Code, adopted an updated National Employment and Labour Market Policy, and conducted the 2019 Labour Force Survey. (50)
National Youth Policy	Outlines Zambia's strategies to ensure that social programs benefit vulnerable youth, including victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (52) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Youth Policy during the reporting period. (2)
UN's Sustainable Development Partnership Framework (2016–2021)	$806 million framework that builds upon the previous UNDAF but with a stronger emphasis on partnership. Aims to prevent the worst forms of child labor and protect children. (53) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Sustainable Development Partnership Framework during the reporting period. (2)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,47,54,56)

The government drafted the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2018–2022), which will guide the implementation of the National Child Labor Policy. The draft action plan is under review by key stakeholders across the country, though the government has not yet approved the policy. (57)

The government adopted an updated National Employment and Labour Market Policy in 2019, which outlines objectives for promoting decent work in Zambia, but the policy does not incorporate strategies for prevention and elimination of child labor. (58) Also, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Policy. (59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Cash Transfer Program†	Government program to provide funds to families and increase school enrollment. (23,60) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Social Cash Transfer Program during the reporting period. (2)
EMPOWER: Increasing Economic and Social Empowerment for Adolescent Girls and Vulnerable Women in Zambia (2016–2020)	$5 million, 4-year, USDOL-funded project implemented by Winrock International to address child labor. (61) To date, more than 1,400 adolescent girls have participated in training courses on rural entrepreneurship and leadership life skills. (62) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Achieving Reduction of Child Labor in Support of Education (ARISE)	Japan Tobacco International and Winrock International joint-initiative that seeks to combat the worst forms of child labor in tobacco-growing communities in Brazil, Malawi, Tanzania, and Zambia. (21,63) In 2019, the project targeted 30 district communities in Nkeyema District in western Zambia, emphasizing community empowerment through Child Labor Committees. (37)
USAID-Funded Projects	USAID-funded projects to increase protections for vulnerable children. Includes DREAMS, a U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief/USAID project, which supports vulnerable adolescent girls and young women (AGYW) through access to health services, including support for HIV prevention and treatment, family planning, and care for survivors of gender-based violence, as well as economic empowerment activities to promote access to a basic income. (50,64,65) Also includes, Service Efficiency and Effectiveness for Vulnerable Children and Adolescents (SEEVCA), a USAID and UNICEF joint initiative to improve protection services for children and adolescents, including children vulnerable to child labor. (66) During the reporting period, SCEEVA programs worked to develop a standardized, government-led case management system. (50)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,69)

The ILO Integrated Strategy on Tobacco, adopted in 2019, outlines a multi-country framework to address decent work deficits, including the elimination of child labor in tobacco-growing areas of participating countries. (70) As part of implementing the framework, the MLSS, Zambian Federation of Employers, and the Zambia Congress of Trade Unions launched a one-year project in tobacco-growing regions of Kaoma and Nyeyema Districts. (2) The Ministry of Community Development and Social Services, in collaboration with IOM, also provided reintegration support to children who were trafficked for labor exploitation. Reintegration support included supporting children in returning to school, including prioritized assistance with school fees through existing social assistance programs, and providing economic start-up guidance and kits for affected families. (2)

Although Zambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, particularly regarding child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zambia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2018 – 2019
	Determine and codify the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.	2020
	Determine through statutory instrument the “school-going age” for compulsory education, in line with the minimum age for work.	2012 – 2019
	Determine list of light work activities for children ages 13 to 15.	2018 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion for an act to be considered child trafficking.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors receive adequate training and resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2010 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that inspections cover all areas in which children work, including registered and unregistered businesses.	2010 – 2019
	Publish labor law enforcement information on child labor violations found and whether penalties were assessed and collected.	2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement investigators receive training on laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Develop and implement consistent procedures to screen and identify human trafficking victims.	2018 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor investigations.	2014 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating committees, including the National Steering Committee on Child Labor and the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Anti-Human Trafficking, are active and able to carry out their intended mandates.	2019
	Improve lines of communication and clarify responsibilities among agencies to improve effectiveness and referrals to social services.	2011 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure implementation of key national policies, including the National Youth Policy and the UN's Sustainable Development Partnership Framework.	2019
	Finalize and begin implementation of the National Action Plan for Child Labor.	2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Policy and the National Employment and Labor Market Policy.	2013 – 2019
Social Programs	Publish child labor data, including the results of the child labor module of the Labor Force Survey, to inform policies and programs.	2011 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children by reducing distances children must travel to reach school, eliminating auxiliary school fees, increasing birth certificate registration, and taking measures to ensure that young married girls are able to continue their education.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure the implementation of government-funded social programs, including the Social Cash Transfer Program.	2019
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem in all relevant sectors, including agriculture, mining, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2011 – 2019

In 2019, Zimbabwe made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved an updated Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action for 2019–2021, and with support from UNICEF, published new data on the prevalence of child labor in Zimbabwe. In addition, the government initiated prosecutions related to trafficking of children. However, children engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, mining, and tobacco production, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the harvesting of sugar cane. Law enforcement agencies lack resources to enforce child labor laws. In addition, gaps remain in the country's legal framework against child labor, including the lack of free basic education, which increases children's vulnerability to child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zimbabwe engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, mining, and tobacco production, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the harvesting of sugar cane. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zimbabwe. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	40.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	42.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from UNICEF, Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of tea, cotton, tobacco, corn, and sugarcane (1,8-12)
	Fishing, including casting nets, hauling fish loads, and sorting fish (10,13,14)
	Work in forestry, such as dragging logs from felling sites and loading logs for transport (14,15)
	Cattle herding (11,12)
Industry	Mining and panning of gold and chrome, using dangerous chemicals such as cyanide and mercury, and extracting material from underground passages and quarries† (11,16-18)
Services	Street work, including vending and begging (10,16,19-22)
	Domestic work (5,10,15,16,23)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (23)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4,11,23,24)
	Forced labor in agriculture, mining for the production of gold and chrome, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Zimbabwe

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Deteriorating economic conditions, cholera outbreaks, drought, and food shortages likely make children more vulnerable to child labor. (11,25-28) Zimbabwean children living in border towns are trafficked to South Africa, Mozambique, and Zambia, where they become victims of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in domestic work. (5) Some families recruit rural children, especially orphans, to work in cities, often with promises of education or adoption. Such children are subject to domestic service or forced to work in mining, drug smuggling, or other illegal activities. (5,29) Girls under the age of 18 are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly along major transit corridors, due to a combination of factors, including poverty, the breakdown of the family unit, gender-based violence, and sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (3,5,11,23,30)

Children ages 12 to 17 work on tobacco farms, performing activities such as planting, weeding, harvesting, and grading tobacco, tasks which often expose them to toxic chemicals and effects of nicotine from handling tobacco leaves. (9,31) Children also work on sugar plantations in the southeastern part of the country, using dangerous tools and working in hot conditions. (12,32) In 2019, the government, with support from the UNICEF Child Protection Fund, completed and published a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, which included data on the percentage and geographic distribution of child labor in Zimbabwe. (33,34) The government also completed an updated labor force and child labor survey in 2019, but results have not been published. (11)

Beginning in grade seven, children are required to show birth registration to sit for exams; however, many children, especially those in rural areas, are not registered at birth due to a lack of awareness of birth registration requirements and poverty. As a result, children may drop out of school, making them more vulnerable to child labor. (10,11,35-37) In addition, prohibitively expensive school fees may limit access to education, and children with disabilities may experience greater abuse, violence, stigma, and exclusion. (11,35,38)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 9 of the Labor Relations Amendment Act; Section 10A(1) of the Children's Act (39,40, 41)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 9 of the Labor Relations Amendment Act and Section 10A(4) the Children's Act (39,41)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 3(1) of Labour Relations (Employment of Children and Young Persons) Regulations and Section 2 and 10A(4) of the Children's Act (41,42)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 54–55 of the Constitution; Section 6 of the Labor Relations Amendment Act (39,43)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (44)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 61, 83, 86 and 87 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 8(2)a of the Children's Act; Section 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (41,44,45)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 156 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 10 of the Children's Act (41,45)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Sections 5, 9, and 10 of the National Service Act (46)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Section 9 of the National Service Act (46)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Section 5 of the Education Act (47)
Free Public Education	No

‡ Age calculated based on available information (48)

The Cabinet approved an amendment to the Education Act in February 2019, which would establish state-funded education up to grade seven. The bill is under debate within Parliament (11,49,50) Currently, Zimbabwean law does not mandate free basic education for children. (11,51,52) This standard makes children ages 12 to 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school and are not legally permitted to work. (48) In addition, laws do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, as they do not criminally prohibit the use of children in the production of pornography or for pornographic performances. (45,53,54)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLSW) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLSW)	Enforces labor and anti-human trafficking laws and investigates labor-related complaints, including complaints involving child labor. (11) Also conducts industry and sectoral-based labor inspections through appointed agents of national employment councils, which consist of representation from both employers' associations and trade unions. (55,56) Provides child protection services, including investigating, intervening in, and reporting on child abuse cases through its Department for Child Welfare. (29)
Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP)	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor in conjunction with the MPSLSW and the Ministry of Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs. (11) Address issues related to child labor and human trafficking through victim-friendly units in every district. Conduct transnational human trafficking investigations through an anti-trafficking desk at Zimbabwe's INTERPOL office. (29)
Ministry of Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs	Oversees all courts, including labor courts. Addresses human trafficking and child victim cases through victim-friendly courts. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to combat child labor.

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (11) Local sources estimate that the labor inspectorate staffs 100-120 inspectors, which is likely insufficient for the size of Zimbabwe's workforce, which includes approximately 7.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Zimbabwe would employ about 527 labor inspectors. (11,58) The limited number of staff may hinder the inspectorate's ability to adequately monitor the agricultural sector, a sector in which children are engaged in child labor, particularly during peak harvest seasons. Furthermore, labor inspectors also oversee arbitration and conciliation, which strains their ability to conduct onsite investigations to combat child labor. (55) Research indicates that the government also lacks sufficient resources, mainly financial, to investigate child labor law violations. (11,59)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MPSLSW that may hinder adequate criminal and labor law enforcement, including the publication of enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown(29)	Unknown (11)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (29)	Unknown (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (11)

The government did not provide information related to its training of new criminal law enforcement investigators, or the number of convictions related to child labor and whether penalties were imposed. (11) In 2019, law enforcement officials arrested four people in a trafficking case that included child victims. The individuals are currently awaiting trial. (23) The government, in collaboration with the IOM, launched a new referral system to strengthen protections for vulnerable migrants, which included standard operating procedures to guide officials in identifying, referring, and assisting victims of human trafficking. (23,60) In addition, 264 investigators participated in training on trafficking-in-persons-related legislation, prosecution, and victim protection measures. (23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy of coordination activities.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Addresses the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MPSSLW and includes the Ministries of Health and Child Care; Primary and Secondary Education; and Youth Development, Indigenization, and Empowerment. (61) Also includes international organizations and civil society groups, such as workers' and employers' organizations. (61) The National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor did not meet in 2019. (11)
Ministry-Level Committee on Children's Issues	Coordinates government ministries' efforts related to children's issues, including child labor. Includes the MPSSLW and the Ministries of Education; Women's Affairs; and Youth Development, Indigenization, and Empowerment. (11,19,61) Includes Child Protection Committees, which operate at the village, ward, district, provincial, and national levels, to discuss issues affecting children, including child labor. (62) Research could not determine whether the Ministry-Level Committee on Children's Issues met in 2019. (11)
Anti-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Committee (ATIMC)	Coordinates actions to combat human trafficking, including the implementation of the Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action (NAPLAC). (16,23) In 2019, the ATIMC worked with the IOM to conduct capacity building trainings on provision of direct services to human trafficking victims. (23)
National Task Force on Street Children	Outlines strategies to combat child labor, including feeding street children at drop-in centers, reuniting children with their families, and offering counseling sessions. Chaired by the MPSSLW and includes NGOs that work on street children's issues. (61) Also includes the Ministry of Home Affairs, represented by the ZRP. (62) Research could not determine whether the National Task Force on Street Children had met in 2019. (11)
Child Protection Committees	Operate at the village, ward, district, provincial levels to discuss issues affecting children, including child labor. (11) Representatives include ministries, civil society, local volunteers, and teachers. Report to the ministry-level Committee on Children's Issues. (62) Child Protection Committees were active in 2019, but individual committees' performance was not uniform throughout the country; NGOs filled gaps in services, particularly in rural areas. (11)

Government information on the efforts by coordinating bodies to address child labor is limited. In addition, a lack of resources hindered coordinating bodies, including the National Task Force on Street Children and Child Protection Committees, from carrying out their mandates. (11,63)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation of key policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Strengthens understanding of child labor issues and creates an entity to coordinate responses to the findings. Consists of three focus areas: education assistance, poverty assistance through a cash transfer scheme, and health assistance. Research indicates the government took no actions during the reporting period to implement this policy. (11)
Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action (NAPLAC) (2019–2021)†	Replaces 2016–2018 NAPLAC. Aims to implement the Palermo Protocol through the development of strategies to combat human trafficking, with emphasis on prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnership. (23,64)
Zimbabwe UN Development Assistance Framework (2016–2020)	Integrates child labor prevention strategies in the Education for All campaign headed by the UN. Promotes gender equality and reduction of HIV/AIDS prevalence, and allocates social resources to address child labor. (65) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period. (11)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (27)

Zimbabwe

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the government approved a new Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action in 2019, it has yet to launch the policy. (23,64)

The National Social Protection Framework (NSPF) aims to provide strategies that address poverty and labor market interventions, among others, although the policy does not include child labor prevention and elimination measures. Furthermore, there is no indication that the government made efforts to operationalize the NSPF in 2019. (11,27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Harmonized Social Cash Transfer (HSCT)† (2012–2019)	Government-funded unconditional cash transfer program to assist labor-constrained and food-insecure households to avert risk-coping strategies, such as child labor. (11,66) In 2018, the government allocated $11 million to the HSCT program. (27) The program was set to expire mid-2019, but continued to provide services throughout the entire year. (11)
Basic Education Assistance Module†	Government program, with support by the UK Department of International Development (DFID), that provides basic financial assistance to families for education costs, such as tuition and examination fees. Aims to keep children in school and to enroll children who lack access to school because of economic hardship. (11) In 2019, the program dispersed $8 million and provided school fees assistance to 415,000 orphans and other vulnerable children. For 2020, the government allocated $26 million for the program, an increase from previous years, however, severe inflation significantly offset these increases, resulting in a total budget of approximately $9 million for the program. (11,27,67)
Mobile Birth Registration Program†	Government mobile birth registration program, implemented by the Registrar General's office and some local governments, to ensure that citizens receive identity documents, including birth certificates. (36,68) Every district in the country has mobile teams to support this program. (29) The government continued to implement the Mobile Birth Registration Program during the reporting period. (36)
National Action Plan for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (2016–2020)	UNICEF Child Protection Fund (CPF) program, supported by DFID, that focuses on equity and access to quality education for children and provides child protection services. Provides cash assistance for families to keep children in school. (27,69,70) In 2019, CPF conducted and published the results of a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey on child protection. (11)
Donor-Funded Programs	International donor-funded programs that aim to increase protections for vulnerable children. Includes DREAMS, a PEPFAR/USAID project that aims to reduce rates of HIV among adolescent girls and young women, including girls vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation; the Zimbabwe Accountability and Artisanal Mining Program, a German state-owned, DFID bank-funded project that improves occupational safety and health standards in artisanal and small-scale gold mining and raises awareness of child labor among informal gold miners; and the Zimbabwe Education Development Fund Phase II (2012–2019), a DFID bank-funded initiative implemented by UNICEF that promotes equitable and quality education. (71-73)

† Program is funded by the Government of Zimbabwe.

Although Zimbabwe has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially child labor in agriculture, mining, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zimbabwe (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Establish free basic education for children through age 16.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information about the government's labor law enforcement efforts.	2016 – 2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient financial and human resources to address labor violations and enforce minimum age protections in all sectors, including agriculture.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information on the government's criminal law enforcement efforts, including trainings for new investigators, convictions, and whether penalties were assessed for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that child labor coordinating committees are active and receive sufficient resources to carry out their intended mandates.	2016 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor prevention and elimination measures in relevant policies, such as the National Social Protection Framework.	2017 – 2019
	Implement national policies, including National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, the UN Development Assistance Framework, and the National Social Protection Framework.	2010 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that children are registered at birth to facilitate their entrance into secondary school.	2014 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children by eliminating or defraying school fees and ensuring children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2019
	Expand existing social programs to address child labor, especially child labor in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, and mining.	2010 – 2019

WHAT CAN

YOU

DO TO HELP ADDRESS
CHILD LABOR AND FORCED LABOR?

ASK QUESTIONS.

- Could some of the goods I buy be made by child labor or forced labor?
- Do workers have a voice to speak out against labor abuses?
- What are companies doing to end child labor and forced labor in global supply chains?
- What are governments doing to combat child labor and forced labor?

TAKE ACTION.

- Empower yourself with knowledge and download USDOL's Sweat & Toil and Comply Chain apps.
- Make your voice heard by spreading the word among friends, family, and the companies you buy from and invest in.
- Show your support for organizations that are working to end these abuses.

DEMAND CHANGE.

ADVOCATE FOR A WORLD IN WHICH:

- Workers everywhere can raise their voices against child labor, forced labor, and other abuses.
- Companies make serious commitments to ensure that global supply chains are free of products made by child labor and forced labor, especially those on USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor.
- Your investments have a positive social impact by promoting responsible labor practices.
- Governments work vigorously to adopt the country-specific suggested actions in USDOL's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.
