In 2019, Ethiopia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government issued a new Labor Proclamation, raising the minimum age for work from 14 to 15 years, and approved the Organizations of Civil Societies Proclamation, replacing a 2009 law that limited the operations of organizations working on child and forced labor issues in Ethiopia. With external support, the government also launched the Effective Approaches in Ending the Worst Forms of Child Labor program to test and measure innovative approaches to address the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Ethiopia continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.

The law in Ethiopia does not include free basic education or a compulsory age for education, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to combat child labor have also not sufficiently targeted sectors with high incidences of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ethiopia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (1-4) According to the results of a 2015 national child labor survey published in 2018, almost 16 million children from the ages of 5 to 17 engaged in child labor. The majority of these children were found in Oromia, Amhara, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' regions. (5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ethiopia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7 to 14	41.5 (10,202,669)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	73.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	30.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		54.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting apples, bananas, coffee, cotton, and khat (5,8-12)
	Herding livestock, including cattle (13)
	Fishing (2,5)
Industry	Mining† gold and quarrying† (5,8,14)
	Construction,† including carrying heavy loads and digging (2,5,8,10,13)
	Repairing motor vehicles and motorcycles (5)
	Producing handicrafts, including pottery and traditional handwoven textiles (2,5,8,15)
Services	Domestic work (5,9,10,16)
	Unpaid household services, including carrying heavy loads of water and firewood (5,8,16)
	Street work, including shoe shining, assisting taxi drivers, vending, portering, and begging (5,8,13,17)

	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There are reports that Ethiopian children voluntarily travel to Amhara, a region bordering a key irregular migration route to Europe, to harvest the sesame. This sector is allegedly linked to overland smuggling networks, with children earning enough to fund passage to Europe via North Africa. (12) Many others journey through Djibouti en route to the Gulf, where they are often intercepted, repatriated, and later routed to a transition center in Addis Ababa. (12,21) Somaliland intercepts between 50 and 100 children a week, many under the age of 13, from Amhara and Oromia on their way to the Middle East. (12,21) Children who begin as voluntary migrants may be forced into prostitution or become victims of forced labor. (19,22) Families continue to play a role in financing and coercing their children to go abroad or to urban areas to look for work. (19,20,22,23) Trusted community members, known as manamasas, recruit and groom vulnerable youth on behalf of local and international human trafficking syndicates. (24) Children are also trafficked from rural areas to Addis Ababa and other regions of the country for forced labor in the weaving industry, street vending, construction, and domestic work. (8,20,22) Girls trafficked to neighboring countries are exploited in commercial sex and domestic servitude. (22) In addition, children in Oromia and Amhara reportedly harvest and sell khat, a stimulant to which they may become addicted due to bodily contact with the plants’ excretions during harvest. (10-12)

Violent ethnic unrest continues to simmer in Oromia, Amhara, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples’ Region, igniting a wave of internally displaced persons (IDPs) during the reporting period. (25) Precise figures are in dispute, although the UN and other humanitarian organizations estimate that between 1.8 and 3.2 million people were displaced in 2019, 66 percent due to conflict. (10,26) More than half of Ethiopia’s IDPs are children. Non-state armed groups recruited and trained children in the western part of Oromia around Wellega, where schools were reportedly damaged or destroyed during the conflict. (10,21) Ethiopia’s out-of-school population is between 1.5 and 3 million, many of whom live in conflict-affected areas. (12,21) Children in rural areas face additional barriers to education, including the distance they must travel to reach school; a lack of sanitation, which especially affects adolescent girls; sexual harassment; the requirement to pay for uniforms and supplies; and a lack of teachers. Somali and Afar regions had the lowest rates of school attendance, with only 38.6 percent of school-age children enrolled in the Somali region and 50.2 percent enrolled in the Afar region. (5) These factors increase children’s risk of entering the workforce at a young age. (9,10,27,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ethiopia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ethiopia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 4.1, 89.1, 89.2, and 89.3 of the Labour Proclamation 1156/2019 (29)

In 2019, the Government of Ethiopia issued a revised Labor Proclamation raising the minimum age for work from 14 to 15, significantly increasing penalties for child labor violations and extending protections to non-contractual workers. (10,29) Nevertheless, not all Ethiopian laws related to child labor are in compliance with international standards. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover traditional weaving, an area of work in which there is evidence that children use dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools, and lift or transport heavy loads. (29,31) Moreover, Article 89.5 of the Labor Proclamation allows children ages 15 to 16 to engage in certain forms of hazardous work following the completion of a government-approved and inspected vocational training course. This contradicts ILO C. 138, which prohibits hazardous work for all children under age 16. (29,34) The Government of Ethiopia notes that, in practice, children begin apprenticeships after the completion of 10th grade, typically at age 16 or 17. (35) The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) is currently revising the accompanying Directive on Prohibited Occupations for Young Workers; research has not determined if this will extend further protections to young workers. (10) In February 2020, the government enacted Proclamation 1178/2020 – A Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Persons, and the law was published in April. (24,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist in MOLSA's authority that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Conducts labor inspections of formal worksites through its regional Bureaus of Labor and Social Affairs. (10) Through its National Referral Mechanism, coordinates victim referral to social services providers. (23)
Ethiopian Federal Police Commission	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (10) Combats child trafficking and assists vulnerable children through its Special Child Protection Units in Addis Ababa and other major cities. (10, 18, 37)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes criminal violations of child labor laws, including through its Special Investigative Unit for Women and Children. (10)
Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child protection laws, including the worst forms of child labor. (1, 38) Maintains rehabilitation centers and coordinates foster families for children rescued from the worst forms of child labor. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MOLSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, labor inspections focused on the floricultural industry where child labor is known to occur; however, data on violations is not aggregated at the national level. (10) The Government of Ethiopia did not publish the number of child labor violations identified as a result of these inspections. (4, 10) Although labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties for violations related to child labor, Ethiopia's new Labor Proclamation significantly increased penalties. First-time violators are fined between $154 to $617 (5,000 and 20,000 birr), with penalties rising to $2,161 (70,000 birr) for third infractions. (29) The government did not provide information on prosecutions or convictions related to child labor. (10)

The labor inspectorate hired 144 labor inspectors in 2019. (10) However, the number of labor inspectors remains insufficient for the size of Ethiopia's workforce, which includes 52.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Ethiopia should employ about 1,321 inspectors. (39,40) In addition, MOLSA and other stakeholders report that a lack of resources and poor coordination among agencies hampered their ability to enforce child labor laws. (4,10) In 2019, 120 inspectors attended national-level trainings, including one session devoted to evaluating progress on combating child labor. (10) MOLSA is also training about 13 labor officers to defend the labor rights of Ethiopians working in the Middle East, including in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, Qatar, and United Arab Emirates. (24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including collecting and publishing enforcement statistics.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Unknown (10)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (10)

Although the Federal Police Commission and the Office of the Attorney General track all investigations, they lack a mechanism to disaggregate data by age and type of crime. (4) The government also continues to focus on transnational human trafficking for the purpose of forced labor, to the detriment of internal human trafficking, including child trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, which is a known problem in Ethiopia. (10,22)

Ethiopian immigration and border patrol authorities refer human trafficking victims to NGO-run shelters, in which victims are given first aid and assistance to return home. Although the centers do not disaggregate data for children, NGOs reported that many of those receiving services were younger than age 18, some of whom may have been returning from the Gulf States. (23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inactivity during the reporting period.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committees	The National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor coordinates activities on the worst forms of child labor. Members include MOLSA, the Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs, and the Ministry of Education. (4,19) The National Steering Committee Against Sexual Exploitation of Women and Children develops action plans and coordinates activities to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (19,38) Research was unable to determine whether either committee was active during the reporting period.
MOLSA National Forum to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Combats the worst forms of child labor at the national level. Biannual meetings convene participants from the Ethiopian Employers' Federation and the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions. (4) Research was unable to determine whether the forum was active during the reporting period.

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling Mechanisms	The National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling Council addresses international exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister, with representatives from five government ministries and regional presidents who meet twice a year. (23,33,41,42) Through its National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants Task Force, meets quarterly and coordinates activities against trafficking in persons and migrant smuggling. (23) Led by the Office of the Attorney General and includes representatives from 31 government stakeholders and international organizations such as IOM, ILO, and UNODC. (10,33) During the reporting period, carried out community awareness raising in rural areas that are vulnerable to human trafficking. The government's efforts are supplemented by the community awareness centers funded by IOM, and by the German Society for International Cooperation's (Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit) Better Migration Management Project, which has built the capacity of Ethiopian NGOs that are combating human trafficking. (24)
National and Regional Task Forces on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Promotes children's rights; chaired by members of the federal government and state ministers and led by the Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs in all nine regional capitals and two city administrations. (38,43) Research was unable to determine if the task force was active during the reporting period.

Limited committee budgets, overlapping mandates, and poor coordination between the committees and agencies hindered coordination efforts to address child labor at a national and regional level. (19,23) In 2019, Ethiopia became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (44) As part of those efforts, MOLSA convened a stakeholders' meeting on December 20, 2019, with Ethiopian government representatives and international NGOs who work on labor issues and the ILO. The purpose of the effort was to coordinate and develop a strategic plan for future activities. (10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, lack of implementation continues to hinder efforts to address child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2020)	Includes guidelines on child labor identification, withdrawal, reintegration, and educational policies. Overseen by the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (4) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2015–2020)	Examines legal and institutional frameworks and responses related to the human trafficking situation in Ethiopia. Aims to provide guiding principles based on international best practices for anti-human trafficking action and the institutional structures and inputs needed to combat human trafficking. (45) In 2019, supported the overhaul of Ethiopia's human trafficking code, culminating in the 2020 passage of Proclamation 909/2019 – A Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Persons. (10,24)
National Education and Children's Policies	The National Children's Policy promotes children's rights and combats child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child labor. It also facilitates access to quality primary and secondary education for out-of-school youth, including in rural areas. (46) National policies related to education aim to improve access to quality education and include the Education Sector Development Program V (2015–2020); the Ethiopian Education Development Roadmap (2018–2030), which aims to implement compulsory education; Education and Training Policy, which prioritizes government support for education through grade 10; the Pastoralist Area Education Strategy, which provides for alternative education in pastoralist communities; and National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, which aims to improve access to vocational education for girls and out-of-school children. (28,47-50) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, or the National Youth Policy. (48-50)
The United Nations Development Assistance Framework (2016–2020)	Promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children. Seeks to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation, and to rehabilitate them. (51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Policy	Description
National Human Rights Action Plan II (2016–2020)	Aims to promote human rights in line with Ethiopia's second Growth and Transformation Plan. Objectives include creation of detailed manuals on crime investigation, improving the ability of civil society organizations to secure local funding, and combating both domestic and international trafficking in persons. (52,53) The plan also covers human rights violations in the private sector and encourages private sector companies to undertake human rights due diligence to prevent child labor, forced labor, and other human rights violations. (52,53) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (38,54-59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including lack of resources to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Projects†	Includes ET Productive Safety Nets Project 4 (PSNP 4) (2014–2020)†, a $2.77 billion project that aims to improve access to social safety nets, including cash and in-kind transfers to orphans and vulnerable children. As of June 2019, 7,997,218 individuals had benefited from the program. The Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Project II (GEQIP-2) (2014–2019) is a $500 million project to improve learning conditions in Ethiopia through curriculum development, textbook assessment, teacher training, and school construction. As of June 2019, 25,934,981 students had benefited from direct interventions to enhance learning. By August, more than 177 million textbooks had been distributed or were under procurement, including 125 million mother-tongue textbooks. A total of 83,309 primary teacher trainees and 24,856 secondary teacher trainees received tertiary and post-graduate training under the program. (62-69) The Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Program for Equity (GEQIP-E) (2017-2022)† is a $300 million program that works with the Ministry of Education to improve education quality and access. (62-65) GEQIP-E worked with the Ministry of Education to create budget lines for school grants and textbooks. (66,67)
UNICEF-Funded Programs	UNICEF-funded programs to improve social safety nets and improve access to education include Child-to-Child and Accelerated School Readiness programs, which extend educational opportunities to internally displaced children, and the Integrated Safety Nets Program (2017–2023). (10,70) UNICEF, the Swedish International Development Agency, and MOLSA are also jointly funding the Urban Productive Safety Net Programme, which aims to improve nutritional and educational outcomes in Amhara and Addis Ababa through cash transfers and linking participants to basic social services. (10,71) In 2019, UNICEF education services reached 1 in 5 vulnerable children in Ethiopia, providing them with early learning, informal and non-formal education services. (72)
World Vision Programs*	Effective Approaches in Ending the Worst Forms of Child Labor (EAPEC) (2019–2022)*, an international program designed to test and measure innovative approaches to reduce the worst forms of child labor, will target approximately 500,000 at-risk youth in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Central African Republic, and Ethiopia, including victims of child commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering, and children engaged in hazardous work. The program's efforts are coordinated by World Vision, with funding by a consortium of NGOs and multilaterals, including UN Global Compact, the Global Compact UK, War Child UK, Thompson Reuters, and the private sector. (12,21,73,74) Additionally, in 2019 the UK's Department for International Development partnered with World Vision to develop a curriculum on forced and child labor detection for mid- to high-level law enforcement officers. (21) World Vision also signed a Memorandum of Understanding with MOLSA to create a National Action Plan to respond to child labor and clarify labor inspection guidelines. (12,21) In addition, World Vision is working directly with Ethiopia's nine regional governments to incorporate child labor issues into their action plans. Finally, World Vision expanded training programs designed to build detection capacity; efforts are concentrated in the south. (12,21)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (75,76)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

In 2019, parliament approved the Organizations of Civil Societies Proclamation, replacing a 2009 law that limited the operations of organizations working on child and forced labor issues in Ethiopia. (77) The 2019 proclamation, which formally repealed the Charities and Societies Proclamation of 2009, dramatically opened up Ethiopia's civic space. (12,21) Although the government participates in and implements several programs to combat child labor, these programs do not sufficiently target sectors with high incidences of child labor, such as agriculture and domestic work. (4) There is also a paucity of rehabilitation and reintegration centers throughout the country for victims of child trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation. (3,19)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ethiopia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age at which children may enter hazardous work following vocational training from age 15 to age 16, in line with ILO C. 138.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, including hazardous tasks in traditional weaving.	2016 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic education and an age up to which education is compulsory that is consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2012 – 2019
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by permitting labor inspectors to assess penalties.	2013 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive initial training, have sufficient resources to conduct inspections in all sectors, and are able to coordinate adequately with other agencies.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that both domestic and transnational child trafficking cases are investigated.	2013 – 2019
	Gather, disaggregate, and publish information on the number of child labor violations found and penalties applied and collected; and the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2009 – 2019
Coordination	Clarify individual mandates for coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor; provide for effective inter-committee communication, coordination, and collaboration; and ensure all committees are funded.	2015 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, and the National Youth Policy.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure existing policies and action plans to address the worst forms of child labor are implemented as intended.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Increase access to education for all children by decreasing the distance to schools in rural areas, hiring additional teachers, constructing sanitation facilities, and eliminating school-related costs.	2010 – 2019
	Develop or expand social protection programs to prevent or withdraw children from all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work, ensuring safeguards are in place to guard against child labor violations.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that social services, such as rehabilitation and reintegration centers, are available throughout the country.	2009 – 2019

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands, in 2019 the government made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Safeguarding Children's Board convened multiple times to discuss issues related to the safety and wellbeing of children. However, the minimum ages for work and for hazardous work do not meet international standards, and the law does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands. (1-3) Data on key indicators on children's work and education in the Falkland Islands are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (1) The Falkland Islands generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. (1) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (1) The following Conventions have been extended to the Falkland Islands. The Falkland Islands has accepted some of them (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the Falkland Islands has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in the Falkland Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Sections 3 and 4A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (4,5)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Section 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (4,5)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Chapter 1, Section 4 of the Constitution Order (6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Part 1, Sections 57–60 of the Sexual Offences Act (7)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Amendment Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (6,8)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Amendment Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (6,8)

* No conscription (9)

The minimum age of 14 for work and the minimum age of 16 for hazardous work are not in compliance with international standards. (3-5) The Government of the Falkland Islands has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, other than industrial undertakings. (4,5) The law does not prohibit forced labor of children. (6)

The law also does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, and offering a child in the production and trafficking of drugs in the Falkland Islands. Although child trafficking has not been identified as a problem, the law does not criminalize trafficking children for labor exploitation. (6,7) Also, the law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor. However, in the Falkland Islands, the UK has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Royal Falkland Islands Police	Enforce laws protecting children against abuses, including sexual abuses. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of the Falkland Islands has established a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Falkland Islands Safeguarding Children's Board	Ensures children's welfare, including protection from sexual abuse. Chaired by the Director of Health and Social Services, members include the Education Department, the Attorney General's Chambers, Social Services, Royal Falkland Islands Police, healthcare professionals, members of the Legislative Assembly, and a representative from the military community. (11) Held meetings in 2019 to discuss the safe recruitment of youth in employment, the country's child sexual exploitation strategy, and training for panel members. (12-14)

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to at least 15 and up to the age to which education is compulsory in all sectors.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18 and that national law determines prohibited work activities for children.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the law protects all children under age 18 from being trafficked for any purpose, including labor exploitation.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Fiji made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government successfully prosecuted a case of domestic child trafficking, resulting in the first conviction of its kind since 2014. The Fiji police also formalized its Human Trafficking Unit and hired seven dedicated officers. In addition, the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations allocated $160,000 to combat child labor, particularly in the sugarcane industry. However, children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. In addition, there are no criminal prohibitions against the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Fiji. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cutting,† loading,† weeding, and spraying chemicals† on sugarcane (1,2,8,9)
	Planting, picking, and using chemicals† on tobacco (1)
	Collecting and splitting coconuts; harvesting rice; planting, harvesting, weeding, and spraying fertilizers on roots (including dalo and yaqona); and planting and harvesting other kinds of fruits and vegetables† (1)
	Pig farming and goat and cattle herding (1)
	Fishing† and deep-sea diving† (1,2,8,9)
Services	Street work, including pushing wheelbarrows for shoppers in markets, vending, washing cars, shining shoes, and begging (1,8-12)
	Domestic work (1,8,9,12)
	Working in garages, in retail shops, or roadside stalls (2,8,9,12)
	Selling fruit (1)
	Collecting bottles† and scrap metal† (1,8,9,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,4,8,9,13-16)
	Forced labor in agriculture, begging, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,17)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (12,18,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the NGO Pacific Dialogue and the ILO stated that they have received reports of children engaging in organized prostitution, including being advertised online. (8,9) Commercial sexual exploitation of children continued to occur in Fiji, particularly by family members, taxi drivers, foreign tourists, businessmen, and crew on foreign fishing vessels. (1,4,13-15,20) Parents sometimes send their children to live with families in cities or near schools to facilitate their continuing education and to perform light household work. Research found that some of these children are vulnerable to involuntary domestic work or are forced to engage in sexual activity in exchange for food, clothing, or shelter. (4,20-23) During the reporting period, there were some media reports of children involved in selling drugs in Fiji. (18,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Fiji has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Fiji's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including identification of light work activities permissible for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 92 of the Employment Relations Promulgation (24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 40 of the Employment Relations (Administration) Regulations; Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (25,26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 6 and 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 20–21 of the Immigration Act; Articles 102–103 and 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (24,27,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 20 of the Immigration Act; Articles 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (24,27,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 225–227 of the Crimes Decree; Article 62A of the Juveniles (Amendment) Act (24,28,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 58 of the Juveniles Act (24,30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (31)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Compulsory Education Order; Compulsory Education Regulations (32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Constitution of Fiji (54)

* No conscription (31)

The Employment Relations Promulgation specifies the conditions under which children ages 13 to 15 may engage in light work, but does not include a list of activities that are permissible. (24,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR)	Lead agency responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor. Investigates places of employment and child labor law violations. (2,8-10) Monitors compliance with the minimum age for employment requirements and the Employment Relations Promulgation. Oversees 14 Divisional Labor Offices responsible for investigating cases of child labor and making appropriate referrals. (10) Coordinates activities at the national, divisional, and district levels through the regional Inter-agency Committees on Child Abuse, including conducting trainings on child labor. Maintains a 24-hour phone line to accept reports of child labor and refers children to social services when appropriate. (2,8,33) With the establishment of a Labor Inspection System on Child Labor, over 200 child labor cases have been investigated since 2011. (36,37)
Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation (MWCPA)	Responsible for women and gender issues, including protecting women and children from abuses. (38)
Employment Relations Tribunal	Adjudicates alleged violations of child labor provisions in the Employment Relations Promulgation. (2,8)
Fiji Police Force	Investigates criminal violations regarding child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. (8) Enforces laws on child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities. Maintains a Human Trafficking Unit (HTU) and provides training to other police units focused on combating human trafficking. (10,20) Collaborates with the Australian Federal Police to combat potential child sex tourism by Australian nationals, who comprise the largest tourist group visiting Fiji. (21) In 2019, the Fiji Police Force formalized its HTU and employed seven officers responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (8,9,33)
Department of Immigration	Responsible for immigration services, refugee services, and efforts to combat human trafficking. Administers and enforces Immigration, Passport, and Citizenship Acts. (8) Coordinates with the Fiji Police Force to investigate cases involving underage victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, which are then tried in the criminal court system. (8)
Departments of Social Welfare and Public Prosecutions	Enforce laws on child trafficking. Operate four homes and provide social services for child trafficking victims. (10)

In 2019, the Fiji Police Force and the Department of Immigration met quarterly to discuss human trafficking issues involving foreign nationals. (9) In addition, MEPIR maintains a database on child labor, which standardizes current and past data in all seven districts in Fiji. (8,9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MEPIR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including that inspections must first seek the business owners' permission before conducting inspections in the informal sector.

In 2019, MEPIR exceeded their goal of conducting 3,000 labor inspections per year and established the reduction of child labor as a strategic priority for the government. (8)

The Child Labor Unit within MEPIR was disbanded, and now all labor inspectors are expected to look for child labor violations during inspections. (8,9) Inspections are conducted in the workers' language, including English, Fijian Hindi, and vernacular Fijian. (2) Unannounced inspections are permitted within the informal sector, but inspectors must first seek the business owners' permission before conducting the inspection. If there is reasonable cause to believe that prior notification of an inspection will prejudice the performance of the inspector's duties, a police officer must accompany the inspector during the inspection. (8,9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (8)	N/A (9)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

MEPIR allocated a budget of $160,000 from June 2018 to June 2019 to conduct 30 investigations, hold 5 training sessions for the sugarcane sector, and conduct outreach campaigns. (9) During the reporting period, subject matter experts conducted 10 lectures for law enforcement officials on human trafficking topics, including the exploitation of child labor. (9) Additionally, the Human Trafficking Unit conducted trafficking-in-persons awareness trainings, including for new police recruits and public prosecutors. (20)

In Fiji, criminal authority agencies, including the Fiji Police Force, can refer child labor cases on a case-by-case basis to the Departments of Social Welfare and Public Prosecution. (2,8,9)

In 2019, an ongoing child labor case involving aggravated sexual servitude and domestic trafficking of children was successfully prosecuted, the first conviction of its kind since 2014. The accused, who was charged with one count of aggravated sexual servitude and three counts of domestic trafficking, was sentenced to 14 years imprisonment for domestic trafficking and sexual servitude of a minor. (9,40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including mechanisms to coordinate activities for commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Agency Network	Chaired by the Ministry of Employment, Productivity and Industrial Relations. (41) Focuses on child labor issues at the district and provincial level. Monitors and reports cases of non-compliance. (42) Comprises inter-agency committees in nine towns in Fiji. This body was active during the reporting period. (42)
Inter-Agency Taskforce on Beggars	Addresses issues concerning children who beg and other exploited children. Enforces zero-tolerance policy on child begging. (11) Ministry of Social Welfare, Women, and Poverty Alleviation and police regularly conduct patrols to identify and assist children. This body was active during the reporting period. (41)
Inter-Agency Committee on Child Abuse	Investigates child labor cases, refers children to school, and monitors the cases when a referral is made to the Department of Social Welfare. (2,3,43) Shares information on child labor cases, including the worst forms of child labor. (8,9) This body was active during the reporting period. (9)
Regional Inter-Agency Committees on Child Abuse	Work on child labor issues. Comprising NGOs, Fiji Police Force, Public Prosecutor's Office, Solicitor General's Office, Department of Social Welfare, MEPIR, Ministry of Health, and Ministry of Education (MOE). (8) This body was inactive during the reporting period. (42)

Although the Government of Fiji has established mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national policy to address child labor and human trafficking.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (46) During the reporting period, UNICEF worked with the Government of Fiji to review its child protection laws and inter-agency guidelines and plan a training for social welfare officers in 2020. (42)
Free Education Grant	Provides 12 years of tuition-free education for children with Fijian citizenship in 904 eligible primary and secondary schools. Also provides bus passes to students, and boats and outboard motors for island communities with staff and students commuting to school. In 2019, $93,000 from MOE paid for the provision of boats and outboard motors to assist students in island maritime and rural areas. (9,42)

In 2019, the Government of Fiji set a goal to accelerate the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (8,9) Although the government has drafted action plans to combat child labor and human trafficking, these have not been approved. (4,8,9,20,22,33,43,44,47,48)

In 2019, Fiji became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, which involves a commitment to accelerate action toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. Fiji held a National Strategic Planning Forum to develop a roadmap to achieve Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which includes stronger national legislation, policies, and compliance mechanisms to protect children from all forms of child labor; data collection; expansion of social programs; and targeted policies to combat the worst forms of child labor. (49)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including addressing the needs of victims of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (51) Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (51) During the reporting period, sponsored trainings for government officials on the rights of children, including trainings on child abuse and child labor. Provided $126,000 to MOE to enhance government capacity to provide child protection services. (41)
Education Assistance Programs†	MOE Food Voucher and Bus Fare Assistance program provides $24 in food vouchers and subsidized bus fares to families with combined annual income of less than $7,382 to offset the cost of education for children attending remote schools. (34,43) MOE Tuition Fee Free Grant program provides subsidized tuition fee free grants for early childhood education centers or students attending preschool. (22) These programs were active in 2019. (41)
Child Protection Program and Allowance‡	MWCPA Child Protection Program raises awareness of, and enacts recommendations from, the UN CRC. (8,9) In 2019, the government allocated $230,000 for child protection programs to raise awareness on the UN CRC. MWCPA Child Protection Allowance assists single mothers, widows, and children. (8) In 2019, the government provided $4 million for the Child Protection Allowance. (9)
Trafficking Victims Rehabilitation Programs†	Safety Net Project funds rehabilitation services for females who are under 18 and victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Receives referrals from various entities, including the Fiji Police. (41) This program was active during the reporting period. (41) Homes of Hope is an NGO program that assists victims of sexual abuse and human trafficking. MWCPA contributed $69,000 during the reporting period. (8,9)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,11,52)

Although Fiji has a program that targets child labor, the scope of this program is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, and children who may be sent to live with other families. (4,9) While NGOs provide limited support services, these are concentrated in the capital city of Suva. (53)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Fiji (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2019
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that penalties are assessed for child labor violations detected.	2019
	Allow unannounced inspections within the informal sector without having to first request permission from the business owner.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to address all of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.	2019
	Ensure that Regional Inter-Agency Committees on Child Abuse are active and fulfill their mandate to combat child labor and abuse.	2018 – 2019

Government Policies	Adopt policies to combat child labor and human trafficking.	2013 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Increase the availability of support services for children vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and involuntary domestic work from living with other families.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Gabon made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government convicted two individuals of child trafficking and successfully extradited from the Republic of Congo a prominent businessman and parliamentarian accused of trafficking children for commercial sexual exploitation. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Gabon is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued a regression in practice that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. The government failed to provide evidence it conducted worksite inspections during the reporting period. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Gabon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. Gabonese law lacks prohibitions against the use of children in illicit activities and the minimum age for work provisions only apply to children in formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age for work. In addition, labor inspectors do not have the authority to assess penalties, and they lack the basic resources necessary to conduct investigations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Gabon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Gabon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (83,073)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (8)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Deuxième Enquête Démographique et de Santé au Gabon (EDSG-II), 2012. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, including the production and sale of smoked fish (10)
Industry	Working in sand quarries† (1-3)
	Working in brick factories (10)
Services	Domestic work (4-7,10)
	Street vending, including windshield cleaning, cleaning market spaces at night, and carrying heavy loads† (1,7,10)
	Garbage scavenging (10)
	Working in restaurants (2,3)
	Working in transportation† and as mechanics (1-3,10)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in markets, restaurants, handicraft shops, sand quarries, farming, animal husbandry, fishing, domestic work, and as mechanics, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,5,11,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,7,11,13,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Gabon is primarily a destination and transit country for victims of child trafficking from other countries in Central and West Africa. (10,13,15-17) Some parents entrust their children to intermediaries who promise education and safe work opportunities; instead, these children are sometimes subjected to child trafficking for labor exploitation. However, there is limited evidence of child trafficking occurring within Gabon. (13,17) While data on child labor have not been collected in Gabon since 2012, there are reports that child victims of forced labor mainly work in the informal sector as street vendors, often selling beauty products and fruits. Boys often work in fishing, microbus transportation, mechanics shops, and cleaning market spaces after hours. (10,13)

Although the Law on General Education guarantees the right to free and compulsory education, in practice students must pay for supplies and school fees, which may be prohibitive. (18) Rural areas also lack schools and teachers, and education beyond primary school is often unavailable. (1,19,20) Reports suggest that some children, especially girls, are sexually abused at school. (2,11,21) In addition, children living in remote areas may not receive birth certificates, which are often required for school enrollment, and children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor. (1,2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Gabon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Gabon’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 177 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Decree on Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (22-24)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 1 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education; Article 344.8 of the Penal Code (18,28,30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 1.18 and 1.19 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education (18,30)

* No conscription (31)

In July 2019, the president signed Gabon’s revised penal code into law, which explicitly included a trafficking in persons offense for the first time. Articles 342-350 of the revised penal code prescribed penalties of up to seven years’ imprisonment and a fine of one million Central African francs (CFA) ($1,730) for trafficking offenses involving adult victims and up to 15 years imprisonment and a fine of up to 100 million CFA ($172,970) for those involving child victims. However, the new anti-trafficking provisions only criminalized some forms of sex trafficking and labor trafficking. (22,26-28) Specifically, the penal code limited the definition of trafficking in persons to crimes involving an “exchange for remuneration or any other advantage or the promise of remuneration or other advantage,” thereby not encompassing all forms of trafficking. (22,26-28)

Article 2 of Decree N° 0651/PR/MTEPS Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment permits children under age 16 to perform light work with parental permission. However, it does not set a minimum age, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, prescribe the number of hours per week for light work, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (24) In addition, although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16, the minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal work relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law. (3,22)

The law does not criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution, or the use, procuring or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. (3,22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Public Function, Labor and Professional Training	Receives, investigates, and addresses child labor complaints through its inspectors. (19) Refers cases of child trafficking to the Ministry of the Interior's Police Force for investigation and the Ministry of Health, Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS) for social services. (1)
Ministry of the Interior's Police Force	Enforces laws, investigates child labor violations, and refers cases to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (10,19) The Ministry of Interior through the police refers cases of child labor to the MSPNS. The shelters for referred children are run by or work in close coordination with MSPNS. (1,13)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws by prosecuting child labor cases. Assists in supporting victims of child trafficking while prosecutors and investigators prepare their cases. (1)
Ministry of Health, Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS)	Provides social services and assistance to vulnerable children, assists in repatriation or resettlement processes for victims of child trafficking, and operates shelters for victims of child trafficking. (1,13) MSPNS can also refer cases to the Ministry of Justice, who may pursue criminal charges. (10,13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Gabon may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. (Table 6)

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

While the government did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding or the number of labor inspectors, research indicates inadequate resources, including an insufficient number of inspectors, may hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country. (3,10,19) In addition, labor inspectors in Gabon are responsible for reconciling labor disputes, which may detract from their primary duty of inspection. (33)

Although inspectors have the authority to propose penalties to the court in accordance with legal guidelines, they do not have the authority to impose penalties. This is the purview of the court. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Gabon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (1)	No (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (34,35)	Unknown (10)
Number of Investigations	0 (1)	1 (10)
Number of Violations Found	50 (19)	28 (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (36)	3 (10)
Number of Convictions	0 (1)	2 (10)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (1)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (10)

In 2019, the Ministry of Justice successfully convicted two individuals for child trafficking and exploitation under Gabon’s 2004 child trafficking law. One defendant received a 10-year sentence, the other 8 years. (10) With the assistance of The International Criminal Police Organization, authorities extradited from the Republic of Congo a prominent businessman and politician accused of trafficking minors for sex. On January 9, 2020, prosecutors charged the defendant with trafficking minors for sex and running a child trafficking ring. (10,37) Police, embassies, and neighbors referred 28 children to social services for allegations related to the worst forms of child labor. All 28 children received services. (10)

Despite these efforts, however, a lack of resources, training, infrequent convening of the Criminal Court, a backlog of cases, and weak coordination among enforcement agencies hampered criminal enforcement efforts. In addition, research indicates that some child trafficking perpetrators falsified documents to make victims appear older than age 18 to avoid punishment under Gabon’s child trafficking laws. (7,13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-ministerial Committee for the Fight Against Child Trafficking (CNSLTE)	Coordinates national efforts against child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. Led by the Ministry of Labor, includes representatives from four other ministries and civil society. (1,19) Removes children from exploitative labor situations, provides social services, and repatriates victims when appropriate. (13,19) Disseminates the National Manual of Procedures for the Care of Child Victims of Trafficking, which establishes a series of procedures to return victims of child trafficking to their country of origin or facilitate their integration into Gabon. (35) Due to changes in the penal code, the CNSLTE became inactive during the reporting period. (10)
National Observatory for Children’s Rights	Coordinates the implementation of the UN CRC, including the promotion of children’s right to education and protection against all forms of exploitation and abuse. Establishes and oversees committees to protect children’s rights in all provinces. (38)
Local Vigilance Committees	Administered by CNSLTE and located in provincial capitals, identify potential cases of child trafficking, intercept victims, and assist children at risk of child trafficking. (39)

Due to changes in the penal code criminalizing all forms of trafficking, the Inter-ministerial Committee for the Fight Against Child Trafficking (CNSLTE) was inactive pending corresponding changes to the 2004 law on child trafficking. Instead, the Ministries of Justice and Interior were charged with coordinating action to enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (10) Research also indicates that the CNSLTE lacked sufficient funding, and members sometimes used their own funds to support trafficking victims. (1,35) The National Observatory for Children’s Rights and Local Vigilance Committees were also inactive during the reporting period. (1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including failure to implement a policy covering all relevant forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Economic Recovery Plan (2017–2019)	Aimed to balance public finances, diversify the economy, and reduce poverty. Included the goals of improving the quality of public education, addressing the teacher deficit, and accelerating the construction of classrooms. (40) This plan was not implemented during the reporting period. (36)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the UNDAF (2018–2022) or the Education Policy (2010–2020). (5,41,42) Research found no evidence of an active policy to address child labor during the reporting period. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters for Children in Need	Shelters that provide social services to victims of child labor and child trafficking. The government provides in-kind support to shelters run by civil society organizations. (1,5,13,16,32) Victims receive medical care, literacy training, and reintegration support. (1) In 2019, provided services to 28 victims of child trafficking and repatriated 13 victims. (10)

Although Gabon has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (1) Research also indicates that shelter space is insufficient to accommodate all victims, and the government decreased funding for shelters and NGOs that provide social services to human trafficking victims and other vulnerable children. (1,5,13,14,39)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Gabon (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections are extended to children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017 – 2019
	Establish criminal prohibitions for child trafficking = even when not done in exchange for remuneration or other advantage	2015 – 2019
	Establish criminal prohibitions for the use, procurement, and offering of children for the production of pornography and pornographic performances, and the use of children in prostitution.	2015 – 2019
	Establish criminal prohibitions for using children in illicit activities, including both producing and trafficking of drugs.	2009 – 2019
	Establish criminal prohibitions for the recruitment of children under age 18 for use in armed conflict by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the legal framework for light work establishes a minimum age no younger than age 13, determines activities that are considered light work, and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2013 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the funding level for the labor inspectorate and number of labor inspectors, and ensure both inspectors and investigators receive adequate funding, training, and resources to carry out inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by having inspectors to assess penalties and conduct routine and unannounced inspections, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors are not tasked with conciliation or arbitration duties, and that they can carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring throughout the country.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections and criminal investigations.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies have sufficient funds to carry out their mandates and that all coordinating bodies are active.	2013 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including in activities such as domestic work and work in transportation.	2015 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing relevant policies.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey or similar research to determine the specific activities carried out by working children to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that children have access to education by eliminating school fees, increasing the number of teachers and schools in rural areas, and ensuring that schools are free from sexual abuse; and make efforts to provide all children with birth registration.	2010 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem and ensure that the government continues to provide adequate support to victims of child labor, including sufficient shelter space for victims.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, The Gambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting year, the government signed the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict. The Government of the Gambia also signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Government of the United Arab Emirates to put in place formal protections for Gambian workers employed in the United Arab Emirates. In addition, the National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons held trainings, some in conjunction with local and international partners, for government officials at border posts, school-aged children, The Gambia Police, travel agencies, airlines, and the Tourism Security Unit, on trafficking in persons issues. However, children in The Gambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Gaps in the law remain, including that children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12, an age below the compulsory education age of 16. Although the government has adopted various policies addressing human trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. In addition, the scope of social programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, as programs do not reach all children working in agriculture and domestic work, or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in The Gambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in The Gambia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS), 2018. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including protecting crops against animals (1,8)
Industry	Working in carpentry, masonry, sewing, plumbing, and in metal welding workshops† (1,3,9) Mining† and quarrying† (3)
Services	Domestic work (1-3) Street work, including begging and vending (1-3,10) Scavenging for scrap metal and jewelry at dump sites (1,11) Working as taxi and bus attendants (1) Working as auto mechanics† (1,3,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,12-15) Forced begging by Koranic teachers (1-4,8) Forced labor in domestic work and street vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Gambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In The Gambia, children are trafficked internally and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and domestic work. Girls and boys from other West African countries are allegedly trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation from their countries into The Gambia. (3,4,16,17) Tourists from Canada, Germany, Great Britain, the Netherlands, and Scandinavia also allegedly subject children to commercial sexual exploitation in brothels and motels in tourist areas, as well as in private homes. (4,17-20) In The Gambia, as well as in neighboring countries such as Senegal, it is a common practice to send boys to receive education from Koranic teachers, or marabouts, who sometimes force Koranic students, or almudus, to beg in the streets for money and food and to conduct street vending. (5,16,19-21)

Article 30 of the Constitution mandates free compulsory education. However, families are sometimes required to buy books and uniforms, contribute to examination fees, and provide direct financial support to the school through a school fund, which families often cannot afford. Absence from school due to unpaid school fees increases children's vulnerability to child labor. (22,23) In addition, inadequate teaching facilities, low numbers of teachers in rural areas, and limited access to clean water in schools create barriers for children to access education. (3,19,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Gambia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

During the reporting period, the government signed the Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. (24)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in The Gambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including that children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12, which is below the compulsory education age of 16.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 43 of the Children's Act (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 44 of the Children's Act; Article 46 of the Labour Act (25,26)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 41 and 47 of the Children's Act (25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 30 and 39 of the Children's Act; Articles 28 and 56 of the Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Tourism Offences Act (25,27,28)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 26–27, 29–32, and 34 of the Children’s Act; Articles 7–9 of the Tourism Offenses Act (25,28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 31 and 36–37 of the Children’s Act (25)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 59 of the Children’s Act (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 31(c) of the Children’s Act (25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Article 18 of the Children’s Act (25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution; Article 18 of the Children’s Act (23,25)

* No conscription (29)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (23,25,30,31)

In The Gambia, children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12, which makes them vulnerable to engaging in child labor and not completing basic education. (25,32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Trade, Industry, Regional Integration and Employment’s Department of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Trade, Industry, and Regional Integration and Employment	Conducts labor inspections and enforces labor laws pertaining to hazardous child labor through its Department of Labor. (3,22)
Department of Social Welfare (DSW)	Combats forced child labor; coordinates the protection of human trafficking victims, and works closely with social welfare officers in police units. (19,20) Operates a 24-hour hotline to address human trafficking. (12,19) Maintains an electronic database that contains information on cases requiring child protection, including those involving labor and human trafficking violations. (12,19,29) Housed under the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. (3)
Children’s Court	Adjudicates on criminal, civil, and care and protection cases involving children and determines guardianship of child abuse victims, including child laborers, referred to the court by DSW. (20,33)
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Investigates suspected cases of human trafficking. Staff include investigators, police, members of the National Intelligence Agency, and five prosecutors. (17,21,34) Gathers evidence for the NAATIP director, who can recommend that the NAATIP prosecutor file charges for human trafficking violations. (21,34)
The Gambia Police Force Child Welfare Unit	Oversees all situations involving children’s welfare. Collaborates with CPA, DSW, NGOs, and other agencies as the designated governmental coordinating body for all child welfare activities in The Gambia. (3,19,35)
Child Protection Alliance (CPA)	Promotes children’s rights and child protection services. Raises awareness about child exploitation. (19) Members include government departments, civil society organizations, UN agencies, NGOs, child and youth organizations, and bilateral institutions. (19) Trains journalists about child sex tourism and government officials on the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. (36,37) Maintains 15 child protection centers across the country to monitor, identify, and report potential cases of child abuse and trafficking in persons. (19,21)
Tourism Security Unit	Prevents unaccompanied children from entering tourist areas and patrols tourist areas for child labor and criminal violations, such as commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. Has a dedicated child protection division comprising immigration, intelligence, police, and drug law enforcement officers. (19,22,38)

The Gambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Local Enforcement Agencies	Monitors neighborhoods for child exploitation with support from DSW. Maintains six Neighborhood Watch Groups established by DSW in urban areas near tourist resorts. (18-21) Serves as volunteer arbiters and mediators for community disputes involving children and other matters through Village Development Committees. (3) Raises awareness and reports cases of labor issues, including child labor, to the authorities through 15 Community Child Protection Committees, in operation throughout the country. (21,29)
The Gambia Tourism Board	Combats commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourist areas. (19) Educates the public about child sex tourism and the consequences for violating the Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children. In collaboration with DSW, maintains a database of individuals suspected of pedophilia or child trafficking. (19,21,39)

Reports indicate that the Neighborhood Watch Groups remain largely inadequate, as they are not empowered to monitor or report cases, are untrained, and only some groups are occasionally active. (5,19) In 2019, research was unable to determine whether members of the 1,500 Village Development Committees were trained on child protection and the worst forms of child labor. (3,21,40)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Trade, Industry, Regional Integration and Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authorization of labor inspectors to enter private homes or farms for inspection of possible labor violations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (21)	Unknown (19)
Number of Labor Inspectors	7 (21)	7 (19)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (21)	Yes (19)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (21)	Yes (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (21)	Yes (19)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of The Gambia's workforce, which includes more than 700,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less-developed economies, The Gambia would employ about 19 labor inspectors. (41,42) Per the law, inspectors are not authorized to inspect private homes or farms in which children may be working in violation of the minimum age for work. (3,21) The government did not provide information for inclusion in this report on its labor inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspections conducted, or the number of inspections conducted at worksites.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including enforcement of penalties.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (21)	Yes (19)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (21)	N/A (19)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (21)	Yes (19)
Number of Investigations	1 (21)	0 (19)
Number of Violations Found	3 (21)	0 (19)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (21)	1 (19)
Number of Convictions	0 (21)	0 (19)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (35)	N/A (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (21)	Yes (19)

Although Articles 39 and 40 of the Children’s Act prohibit human trafficking and slave dealing of children, and although these crimes carry a penalty of life imprisonment, a source indicates that penalties are not fully applied, possibly hindering enforcement and emboldening violators. (29,35) The government’s standard operating procedures for child sex trafficking victims are yet to be implemented and, as a result, the government’s ability to proactively identify and remedy child sex trafficking victims is limited. (5,19,20) Moreover, despite the prevalence of child sex tourism in The Gambia, international law enforcement cooperation to prevent and investigate cases of child sex trafficking is weak. (5,19,20) The government continued prosecution of two Nigerian nationals for commercial sexual exploitation of four Nigerians—one minor and three adults—trafficked to The Gambia. An additional Gambian citizen is under prosecution as well. (17,19,21,29,43)

The IOM held a 3-day training for 27 members of the Tourism Security Unit on identifying trafficking in persons and victim referral to social welfare agencies; this is part of a larger 3-year U.S government-funded project related to efforts to combat trafficking in persons. Tourism accounts for 20 percent of the country’s GDP and is beset with issues of trafficking in persons. (38,43-45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of adequate funding and the inactivity of some coordinating bodies during the reporting period.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates child labor enforcement processes, including prosecutions of the worst forms of child labor. Led by DSW, comprises representatives from UNICEF, Department of Labor, NAATIP, Action Aid, Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education, Gambia Teachers Union, Young People in the Media, and the Inspector General of Police. (3) Research was unable to determine whether the coordinating body was active in 2019.
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP) Task Force	Coordinates, administers, and monitors the implementation of the Trafficking in Persons Action Plan and shares information among law enforcement agencies. (19,45) The Task Force includes NAATIP, Ministry of Justice, Department of Immigration, DSW, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Women’s Bureau, Gambia Radio and Television Services, Center for Street Children, and The Gambia Police Force. (46) In 2019, government funding for NAATIP was $72,000, double that of the prior year. During the reporting period, activities included awareness-raising workshops attended by 150 people at border posts at Farafeni and Kerr Ayeeb, Giboro Seliti, and Omorto. (40,43,44,47) The Task Force, led by NAATIP, also held trainings for school-aged children and The Gambia Police Force on the dangers of trafficking in persons, and a separate training for 30 travel agencies, airlines, and the Tourism Security Unit, in conjunction with several other partners. (43)

The Gambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In spite of an increase in the National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons' budget, reporting indicates that funding is still insufficient for training of officials, thus hindering the agency's ability to conduct investigations on trafficking in persons. (3,4,14,15,18,21,40)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Protection Strategy (2016–2020)	Outlines strategies to improve child protection, including addressing the worst forms of child labor, by increasing awareness and strengthening coordination among government agencies. (48) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy in 2019. (40)
National Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2016–2020)	Organizes governmental efforts to combat human trafficking. (4,21,29,49) In 2019, the government continued efforts to coordinate activities of the policy through the reformation and revitalization of the inter-agency Trafficking in Persons Task Force. (43)
The Gambia and Senegal Trafficking Memorandum of Understanding	Coordinates the two countries' efforts to address human trafficking through meetings, information sharing, improved laws, and prevention, protection, and assistance activities. (21) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy in 2019. (40)
Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry and among tourists. (19,50) In 2019, the Gambia Tourism Board participated in tandem with other partners on a training for 27 Tourism Security Unit personnel on trafficking in persons. (43)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21)

The Government of the Gambia signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Government of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) to put in place formal protections for Gambian workers employed in the UAE. (17) Although the government has adopted various policies addressing human trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Combating Child Sex Tourism Project	CPA project, funded by End Child Prostitution and Trafficking Netherlands, that raises awareness about commercial sexual exploitation of children, the Tourism Offences Act, and the Code of Conduct among Tourism Security Unit personnel, hoteliers, travel agencies, and other tourism stakeholders. (1) Research indicated that the project was active during the reporting year, but research did not determine whether specific activities were undertaken relative to the project. (40)
Street Children Center†	Drop-in centers run by DSW with support from international organizations, foreign NGOs, and local businesses. Provides medical care, food, and counseling to street children, including human trafficking victims and almudus . (19) In 2019, research indicated that this center continued to operate with DSW providing a monetary allocation to the shelter for meals. (4,19)
Conditional Cash Transfers to Islamic Religious Schools (Majaalis)†	Ministry of Education program in partnership with the Institute for Social Reformation, an Islamic NGO based in The Gambia, that gives marabouts food rations and approximately $2 monthly for each student if the marabouts do not force students to beg. (18,21) Provides teachers for English, mathematics, and science subjects to Koranic schools. (1) In 2019, support for the program continued at existing levels with the program reaching 17 schools throughout all regions and encompassing 1,500 children, with activities undertaken related to inspection and payment. (19,40)

† Program is funded by the Government of The Gambia

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (51)

Although The Gambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Programs do not reach all children working in agriculture and domestic work or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work. (21)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in The Gambia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Harmonize provisions of the Children's Act and the labor code that regulate apprenticeships and ensure that children attain at least 14 years of age before beginning workplace apprenticeships.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure neighborhood watch groups are properly trained to monitor and report cases of child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the village development committees receive training on the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding levels and total inspections, including those conducted at worksites.	2012 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing labor laws, including laws related to child labor, to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure the labor inspectorate has authority to conduct inspections on farms and in homes.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure penalties for child trafficking are comprehensively applied to deter violations and government officials are trained in the application of those penalties.	2016 – 2019
	Implement standard operating procedures to provide for proactive child sex trafficking victim identification and access to remedy.	2019
	Strengthen international law enforcement cooperation to prevent and investigate child sex tourism.	2019
Coordination	Ensure that the National Coordination Committee on Child Labor meets regularly and carries out activities to support its mandate.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure the National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons Task Force has sufficient funding to conduct investigations on trafficking in persons.	2012 – 2019
Government Policies	Undertake activities in support of the National Child Protection Strategy and The Gambia and Senegal Trafficking Memorandum of Understanding.	2017 – 2019
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Undertake activities in support of the Combating Child Sex Tourism Project.	2017 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that children can complete compulsory schooling by subsidizing or defraying the cost of books, uniforms, and other fees.	2010 – 2019
	Enhance opportunities for children to access education by providing adequate teaching facilities and clean water, and increasing the number of teachers in rural areas.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Georgia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed and implemented the 2019 Law on Occupational Safety, which grants labor inspectors the ability to enter any business for occupational health and safety reasons without prior notification. In addition, law enforcement agencies increased their efforts to combat child begging by investigating, prosecuting, and convicting individuals who force children to beg and providing services to child victims of forced begging. However, children in Georgia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The labor inspectorate did not conduct inspections in the agriculture sector, and the labor law governing the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because it does not apply to informal work. In addition, the compulsory education age leaves children who are 15 years of age vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work full time.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Georgia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Georgia.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (1,6)
Services	Street work, including begging and vending (1,7,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3) Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Georgia is a source and transit country for child trafficking, especially of girls, to Turkey, China, the United Arab Emirates, and Cyprus. (2,7) Limited evidence indicates that children may perform hazardous activities in construction. (9) Sources report that Roma and Azerbaijani Kurd ethnic minorities and refugee and internally displaced children from Georgia, Armenia, and Moldova are subjected to forced begging in Georgia. (2,3,7,8,10) Estimates suggest that 1,000 to 2,000 children earn a living by begging, primarily caused by poverty or domestic violence. (1,7,8) Many of the child beggars are from Roma communities. (7,8)

Some children from Roma communities lack identity documents and, therefore, have challenges accessing education. (10) This challenge remains despite changes to the Rule on Issuance of Identification and Passport

Georgia

under the Law on Registration of Georgian and Foreign Citizens to ease restrictions on obtaining government identification. However, UNICEF noted that some families continue to destroy identification and other documents in an effort to avoid interaction with state officials. (8,11) In addition, socially vulnerable children, children from impoverished families, and those who live in rural areas have difficulty accessing education. (10-13) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

Lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work that children perform and the sectors in which they work in the breakaway regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia, which are occupied by Russian forces and not under control of the central government. (1,2,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Georgia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Georgia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia (15)

Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 4(4) of the Labor Code of Georgia; Articles 2 and 5 of the Law on Occupational Safety; Resolution 381 Approving the List of Dangerous, Heavy, Harmful, and Hazardous Works (15-17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution of Georgia; Articles 143-i, 143-ii, and 143-iii of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking; Article 55 of the Children's Rights Code (18-21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 143, 143-1, 143-2, 143-3, and 172 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking (19,20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 143(1), 143(2), 143(3), 253, 254 255, 255-1, and 255-2 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Article 56 of the Children's Rights Code (20,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 171 of the Criminal Code of Georgia (20)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 10 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (22)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 9 and 21 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (22)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 410 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Article 59 of the Children's Rights Code (20,21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 2 and 9 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (23)

In 2019, the government passed the Children’s Rights Code, which establishes children’s rights to be protected from harmful activities, such as engaging in hazardous child labor, and forbids forms of exploitation of children, including forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (21)

The labor law governing the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because it does not apply to informal work. (15,24) The compulsory education age leaves children who are 15 years of age vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work full time. Article 4 of the Labor Code specifies conditions under which 14 and 15 year olds may perform light work, and Article 14 prescribes the hours, but the law does not specify the activities in which light work is permissible. (15,24) Article 4 of the Labor Code stipulates that children under the age of 14 are allowed to work only in sport, art, and culture, as well as some advertising activities. (15,24)

Georgia’s laws do not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production or trafficking of drugs. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA) that may hinder effective enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA)	Oversees child welfare issues and pursues enforcement of labor laws. (10) Through the Department of Labor Inspection, enforces occupational safety and health laws, including those related to hazardous child labor, and enforces prohibitions on forced labor and human trafficking. (1) Through the Department of Labor and Employment Policy, revises laws and policies to be in accordance with international standards. (25) Through the Social Services Agency, administers social benefits such as targeted social assistance, health care, and vouchers for day care, and employs social workers who oversee child protection. (1) Receives complaints through the Child Protection and Social Programs sub-department, and refers complaints of child labor violations to law enforcement agencies for investigation. (25)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor and child trafficking. (1) Through District Police Units, collects information on minors in each jurisdiction and visits minors’ families to inform them of their rights. (25) Through the Human Rights Department, ensures prompt responses to human trafficking crimes and suggests recommendations for investigations. (7) Operates a hotline that is available in Georgian, Russian, and English. (7)
Central Criminal Police Department within MoIA	Leads criminal investigations of trafficking in persons, including the trafficking of children, through the Division for Combating Human Trafficking and Illegal Migration. (7) Identifies human traffickers and collates data on traffickers across various agencies through the Information-Analytical Department. (26) Investigates possible human trafficking schemes by deploying teams of two law enforcement officials in Mobile Units to investigate companies offering suspicious work opportunities abroad. (27)
Prosecutor General’s Office	Prosecutes cases of child trafficking. (3) Since 2018, operates as an independent entity separate from the Ministry of Justice. (28)
Joint Child Referral Mechanism	Ensures inter-agency coordination of the enforcement of child labor laws and enumerates the procedures for referring children subject to any form of violence, including labor exploitation, to child protective services. (7,10) Through MoIA, registers cases of child exploitation identified by any government ministry. Through MoLHSA, assesses the child’s condition, provides shelter and rehabilitation services to the child as needed, and monitors the child’s case. (29)

Georgia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, the government adopted the Law on Occupational Safety, which empowers labor inspectors to enter any business for occupational health and safety reasons without prior notification and removes previous requirements that the MoLHSA's Department of Labor Inspection acquire a court order to inspect private businesses. (1,7,16,30) In addition, the government drafted a law on labor inspection that will make the labor inspectorate an independent legal entity and expand its mandate to include oversight of all labor rights, including those related to all forms of child labor. (30) Until this law is approved, however, labor inspectors will remain severely limited in their ability to conduct inspections and assess penalties on labor laws that are not related to occupational safety and health (OSH).

The regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia are not under the control of Georgian central authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Georgia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MoLHSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Beginning on September 1, 2019, the Law on Occupational Safety empowered labor inspectors to conduct OSH inspections on an unannounced basis in all industries and assess penalties for any hazardous child labor violations identified. During the reporting period, MoLHSA conducted 14 unannounced inspections under this authority. (1) The government reported that it targeted planned inspections to the mining and construction sectors, partially in response to a series of public reports on OSH violations and accidents. At least one such accident at a construction site involved a child. (9,30,31) Labor inspectors suspended work at two companies in which children were working in violation of prohibitions against hazardous child labor. (1) Although inspections took place throughout the country and in a range of economic sectors, no inspections were conducted in agriculture. (1)

In 2019, the government significantly increased the budget for the labor inspectorate compared to 2018, although sources note that further funding increases are needed to improve the inspectorate's capacity. (1) The government reported that it approved a twofold budget increase for the labor inspectorate in 2020. (30) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Georgia's workforce, which includes more than 1.9 million workers. (32) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every

20,000 workers in transition economies, Georgia would employ about 100 labor inspectors. (33,34) However, the government has reported that it adopted a decree to increase the number of inspectors to 100 by the end of 2020. (30)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on new labor laws from the ILO, IOM, and the German government's international development agency, GIZ. (1) New inspectors also received training on human trafficking from the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA) and the Georgian Ministry of Justice. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Yes (1)

In 2019, the MoIA investigated one case of child labor exploitation, one case of child prostitution, two potential cases of forced begging, and two cases involving the production of child pornography. (1,3) Investigations in all of the forced begging and child pornography cases concluded during the reporting period and were referred to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution, and are ongoing. The other two investigations initiated in 2019, of child labor exploitation and child prostitution, respectively, are ongoing. (1,3) As a result of these investigations authorities identified 23 child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and 2 victims of forced begging. (1) Law enforcement agencies also identified four additional victims of forced begging based on an investigation initiated in 2018. All of these victims were referred to social services. (1) Authorities convicted two individuals on charges brought against them in 2018 related to their participation in the worst forms of child labor. Each individual received a 10-year prison sentence for forcing children to beg. (1)

Criminal investigators were unable to investigate and prosecute any potential human trafficking cases, including of children, in Abkhazia and South Ossetia because they remain occupied by Russian forces and are outside of central government control. (7,35)

In September, the MoIA increased the number of mobile law enforcement groups from four to six. These mobile groups operate in high-risk areas for human trafficking, and inspected 107 organizations during the reporting period. (3) Between January and October, the Social Services Agency provided services to 355 children in Tbilisi, Rustavi, and Kutaisi, and directed 248 of these children to crisis centers. (1) Criminal investigators, prosecutors, and judges participated in regular trainings and conferences on human trafficking throughout the year, including a Council of Europe conference on online child sexual exploitation and an IOM-facilitated training on child begging. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Agency Commission for the Implementation of the UN CRC	Monitors implementation of the Child Rights chapter of the National Human Rights Action Plan, which is based on provisions of the UN CRC. In 2019, drafted a strategy and action plan to end violence against children in Georgia, and a concept paper and plan to provide services to minors who are victims of violence. (1)
Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council for the Implementation of Measures Against Human Trafficking	Coordinates government efforts against human trafficking, including efforts to protect and rehabilitate victims. (3) Refers child victims to shelters to receive social services. Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprises representatives from state agencies and non-state entities. (3,7) In 2019, convened several meetings of its Working Group on Street Children. (1)
Prosecution Service of Georgia Working Group	Addresses labor trafficking issues under the framework of the Prosecution Service Strategy for 2017–2021. (10,36) Met four times in 2019 to discuss progress implementing the 1-year National Action Plan for 2019 to strengthen responses to labor exploitation. (1)

Reports indicated that in 2019 cooperation between MoLHSA’s Labor Inspectorate and MoIA’s Criminal Police Department increased, and that the Labor Inspectorate contacted MoIA immediately when it found criminal violations. However, the existing cooperation agreement between the Labor Inspectorate and the Criminal Police Department lacks clarity on their specific roles and functions and does not establish a common operating procedure. (7,11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the scope of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Human Rights Action Plan (2018–2020)	Includes a chapter on children’s rights and lays out actions for government commitment toward developing a broad-based approach to fighting violence against children. (10,37) The government continued to implement this plan in 2019. (1)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2019–2020)	Supports the development of policy and the implementation of activities to address human trafficking. Commits the government to protect and effectively integrate street children, through measures such as issuing identify documents and increasing school enrollment. (3,10,38,39) The government continued to implement this plan in 2019. (1,3)
Children’s Rights Code†	Commits the government to establish or implement a range of measures aiming to protect children from violence and hazardous child labor. (1,21)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10,40)

Although the government has established policies to address child begging, child trafficking, child labor in street work, and hazardous child labor, it does not have a policy to address child labor in agriculture.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Improved Compliance with Labor Laws in the Democratic Republic of Georgia	$2 million USDOL-funded grant implemented by ILO to work with the Government of Georgia to improve its ability to enforce labor laws, including child labor laws, and adhere to international labor standards. Key objectives include supporting the establishment of adequate labor law enforcement mechanisms in Georgia through labor inspection and promoting effective tripartite cooperation. (41) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Targeted Social Assistance Program and Child Benefit Program†	Social services agency-administered social assistance programs designed to eliminate poverty, especially child poverty. The Child Benefit Program is intended to halve extreme poverty among children, and covers about a quarter of the most vulnerable families with children. (42) In 2019, provided a variety of services, including shelters for homeless children, support for impoverished families, and daycare for vulnerable children. (1)

Program	Description
Social Rehabilitation and Childcare Program†	Provides assistance to children at high risk of abandonment and children with disabilities; places abandoned children in appropriate care. In 2019, received a budget of $12.37 million. (1)
State Fund for Protection and Assistance of (Statutory) Victims of Human Trafficking‡	MoLHSA program to protect, assist, and rehabilitate human trafficking and domestic violence victims, including minors. (29) Implements the government's Rehabilitation and Reintegration Strategy, which includes operating shelters for victims of human trafficking in Batumi and Tbilisi. (10) In 2019, recognized and provided services to two children who were victims of labor exploitation. (1)
Education-Focused Programs for Vulnerable Children†	Ministry of Education and Science-funded programs that promote the inclusion of vulnerable children in education. (10) Initiatives include a program designed to increase the participation in school by street children, victims of forced begging, and children who are seasonal agricultural workers; a program to increase the number of Georgian language teachers in communities with large ethnic minority populations; and a program to distribute free textbooks to public school students. (10,43) In 2019, the government continued to fund inclusive education and allocated money to develop or renovate the infrastructure of education facilities. (1)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,10,44)

During the reporting period, the government conducted regular awareness-raising campaigns related to trafficking in persons. (3) Although Georgia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially regarding street children. (1,45)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Georgia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those in informal work.	2017 – 2019
	Increase the age up to which education is compulsory to age 16, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that legislation permits the Department of Labor Inspection within the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs to conduct targeted, complaint-based, and unannounced inspections related to all labor laws and empowers inspectors to assess penalties for all violations detected.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that inspections are conducted in all economic sectors in which child labor violations may be present, including agriculture.	2019
	Ensure that the Department of Labor Inspection within the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs has funding to employ a sufficient number of inspectors and that inspectors are capable of performing quality targeted, complaint-based, and unannounced inspections in all sectors and businesses on all labor laws.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to monitor and combat child labor.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Continue to increase coordination between the Department of Labor Inspection within the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs and the Criminal Police Department.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including child labor in agriculture.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including in agriculture, to inform policies and programs.	2018 – 2019
	Make additional efforts to register children from Roma communities and provide them with identity documents, and ensure that these groups can access education.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that socially vulnerable children, children from impoverished families, and children who live in rural areas have access to education.	2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially for street children.	2018 – 2019

In 2019, Ghana made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government committed to use the Trafficking in Persons Information System developed by the International Organization for Migration to improve case tracking and inter-ministerial coordinated responses. However, children in Ghana continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa harvesting, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Prohibitions related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards as the use of children in pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited, and the law also does not prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Additionally, the government has not acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and resource constraints severely limited the government's abilities to adequately enforce labor laws and implement social programs during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ghana engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa harvesting, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ghana.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (927,591)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.9

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Producing cocoa,† including land clearing, using machetes and cutlasses for weeding, collecting cocoa pods with a harvesting hook, breaking cocoa pods, working in the vicinity of pesticide spraying, and carrying heavy loads† of water (1,2,5-10)
	Production of palm oil† and cotton, including weeding, harvesting, and acting as scarecrows (7,11)
	Herding livestock, including cattle,† hunting, and work in slaughterhouses (12,13)
Industry	Fishing,† including for tilapia; preparing bait, nets, and fishing gear; launching, paddling, and draining canoes; diving for fish; casting and pulling fishing nets and untangling them underwater; sorting, picking, cleaning, smoking, transporting, and selling fish; cleaning and repairing nets; and building and repairing boats (2,6,8,11,14-17)
	Quarrying† and small-scale mining,† sometimes for gold, including using mercury, digging in deep pits, crushing rocks by hand, carrying heavy loads,† and operating machinery† (7,8,14,18,19)
	Manufacturing† (7,10)
Services	Construction and bricklaying or carrying brick (2,7,10)
	Domestic work† (5,9,14)

	Street work,† including begging,† small-scale vending, and working at restaurants or bars† (7,18,25)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,9,13,14,26-29)
	Forced labor in begging; agriculture, including cocoa, including herding; fishing, including for tilapia; artisanal gold mining; domestic work; and street work, including vending and carrying heavy loads; sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,13,15,16,29-33)
	Forced ritual servitude for girls known as trokosi , including in domestic work for priests (8,14,26,28,32,34)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The majority of children subject to human trafficking within Ghana are exploited for labor in cocoa, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, gold mining, and fishing. Children as young as age 4 are subjected to forced labor in fishing in the areas around Lake Volta, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (13,16,26,31-33) Children also use sharp tools and are exposed to agro-chemicals while working in the cocoa sector. (1,7) In addition, girls as young as age 13 from rural northern regions of Ghana travel to urban centers to work as kayayei, or female porters, carrying heavy loads on their heads in markets and are particularly vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation. (35)

According to the Constitution and the Education Act, primary education in Ghana is free and compulsory from kindergarten through junior high school. (36,37) However, impoverished families often struggle to pay administrative fees and to purchase school supplies and uniforms. (38) The government said that students are not prevented from enrolling due to a lack of uniform or birth certificate. (39) The dual-track system, introduced in 2018, allows secondary school students, typically between the ages of 13 and 17, to attend school in alternating semesters and take advantage of opportunities such as vocational training when they are not in school. (20,40) However, reports suggest that such opportunities are often not readily available or affordable. As a result, these children are vulnerable to exploitation in child labor during the times when they are not in school. (2,5,8,28,29,41,42) In addition, factors such as a shortage of classrooms, long distance to schools, absence of sanitation facilities, overcrowding in urban areas, sexual harassment of girls in schools, physical violence, verbal abuse, and poor infrastructure, particularly in rural areas, severely limit access to education for many children. (2,5,8,28,42,43) In response, the government has made efforts to increase the accessibility of public education, including by building schools to reduce the distance students must travel, providing school uniforms, lifting birth registration requirements for enrollment, and extending free education through high school. (40,42) The government operates 14 national schools for visually and hearing impaired students. (39,42)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ghana has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ghana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 89 of the Children's Act (44)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 91 of the Children's Act (44)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 25.1.a of the Constitution; Articles 1.1, 1.2, and 2.2 of the Education Act (36,37)

* No conscription (52)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (52)

Ghana's laws do not cover the procuring or offering of children in the production of pornography or the use, procuring, or offering of children for pornographic performances. (2,46, 53)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR)	Enforces child labor laws. (20) Conducts national dialogue on Child Labor Free Zones and a workshop on Child Labor Free Zones to discuss child labor in the cocoa industry. (2)
Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development's District Assemblies	Through labor inspectors, investigates child labor violations, educates employers on compliance with child labor laws, and conducts inspections. (2,53) Through social services subcommittees, enforces child labor provisions in the informal sector. (2,44)
Ministry of the Interior	Through its Ghana Police Service, investigates, arrests, and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor and operates a 24/7 hotline for reporting crimes. (2) Within the Ghana Police Service, the Domestic Violence and Victim Support Unit and Anti-Human Trafficking Unit investigate cases and provide support to victims. (2,30) Through its Ghana Immigration Service, combats human trafficking through Anti-Human Smuggling and Trafficking Units. (2,54,55)

Ghana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice's Office of the Attorney General	Combats child labor by prosecuting child labor and child trafficking crimes. (2) Within the Economic and Organized Crime Office, the Human Trafficking Unit shares responsibility with the Ministry of the Interior's Anti-Human Trafficking Unit for combating human trafficking, confiscating proceeds from human trafficking, and providing ongoing training for law enforcement on prevention measures. (56,57)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection (MOGCSP)	Combats child labor and leads government efforts to combat human trafficking. (2) Through its Department of Social Welfare, operates shelters for vulnerable and abused children, administers juvenile justice, and implements programs to combat child labor. (8,58) Through its Human Trafficking Secretariat, oversees the creation, implementation, and review of human trafficking policies and ensures proper monitoring, evaluation, and data collection. (2) Operates a hotline to facilitate access to social services, including for victims of human trafficking. Through its Community Child Protection Committees/District Child Protection Committees, fields complaints of child labor violations at the community and district levels and reports them to appropriate actors; also participates in the Ghana Child Labor Monitoring System (GCLMS) to monitor, prevent, and withdraw children from the worst forms of child labor as part of the Child and Family Welfare Policy. (25,41)

Although the Office of the Attorney General is responsible for prosecuting child trafficking violations, there was an insufficient number of state attorneys designated to prosecute human trafficking crimes. The majority of cases were handled by the Ghana Police Service (GPS) prosecutors, whose lack of formal legal training impedes their ability to prosecute complex criminal cases. (38,39,62) Research indicates that slow communication, as well as challenges in evidence collection between the Ghana Police Service and Attorney General's office, may have further hampered efforts to prosecute cases of child trafficking. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MELR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority of labor inspectors to assess penalties.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2019 to September 30, 2019.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ghana's workforce, which includes about 12,490,000 workers in both the formal and informal sectors. (2,39,63) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Ghana would employ about 833 inspectors. (63,64) Inadequate resources, including funding, transportation, office space, and office supplies, hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector in which child labor is most common. (2,53) Formal referral mechanisms continued to be hindered by lack of funding, shelter space, and transportation for victims. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, such as financial resource allocation.

During the reporting period, several hundred police officers received training on forced labor, Ghana's anti-Trafficking in Persons laws, and identifying forced labor and child labor. (39) However, research indicates that poor inter-agency coordination and insufficient resources for transportation and victim support resulted in under-reporting of cases and hampered criminal enforcement efforts. (8,26,30,32,62) In addition, members of parliament have attempted to discourage investigations or prosecutions of child trafficking offenses, and high staff turnover limits the government's ability to investigate and prosecute these offenses. (2,55) Although coordination among government officials on human trafficking issues improved during the year, it was uneven across the country and the government relies heavily on NGOs to identify cases of child trafficking. (2,39) Criminal enforcement agencies lack the resources to properly monitor sectors where the worst forms of child labor are known to occur. For example, on Lake Volta, the police do not have boats to patrol for forced child labor in fishing. (29)

However, despite these challenges, the government identified 36 children who were victims of sex trafficking and successfully prosecuted four defendants for crimes related to child trafficking. These cases resulted in two defendants receiving 5-year jail terms and the other two receiving a fine. (2,39)

Four ministries, MELR, the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of the Interior, committed to using the Trafficking in Persons Information System (TIPIS), developed by the IOM. During the reporting period, TIPIS was piloted in three regions to enhance data collection to improve inter-ministerial coordinated responses to cases of trafficking. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSCCL)	Coordinates government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, and oversees implementation of the National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NPA2), which includes implementation of the GCLMS. (2,66,67) Led by MELR's Child Labor Unit (CLU), includes representatives from other ministries, employers' and workers' organizations, and civil society. (2,66,68,69) In 2019, NSCCL organized sensitization programs through school quizzes and media discussions, and held community-level ceremonies along with a national review of GCLMS, and the creation of Child Labor Free Zones. NSCCL met four times in 2019. (2)
Inter-Ministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking MELR's CLU	Aims to prevent Ghanaian migrants from becoming victims of human trafficking. Comprising MELR, MOGCSP, Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of the Interior. This committee was active during the reporting period and continued its ban on recruitment of Ghanaians for domestic work and hospitality jobs in the Middle East. (2,39) Facilitates the development of policies and laws to combat child labor; coordinates interventions to combat child labor, and oversees child protection committees at the district level. (60,66) Provides technical support to ministries, departments and agencies, employers' and workers' organizations, and international agencies such as ILO, IOM, and UNICEF and is responsible for conducting labor inspections in all sectors except the security and intelligence agencies. (2) During the reporting period, CLU wrote a report on the status of child labor in 2018. (2)
Human Trafficking Management Board (HTMB)	Advises the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection on anti-trafficking policy, promotes prevention efforts, facilitates the protection and reintegration of trafficking victims, and administers the Human Trafficking Fund. Met four times in 2019. (39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
NPA2 (2017–2020)	Aims to address gaps identified in the first NPA (2009–2015), improve coordination, and reduce the worst forms of child labor to 10 percent by 2021, with a focus on the fishing, mining, and cocoa sectors. (7,38,67,68) In 2019, provided school uniforms and supplies to needy students, improved access of older children to apprenticeship opportunities, and improved enrollment of vulnerable families in areas with a high prevalence of child labor. Also developed guidelines and protocols for assessing Child Labor Free Zones, trained labor inspectors on conducting inspections in the informal sector, and organized awareness programs for the general public. (7)
National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana (2017–2021)	Aims to improve data collection, enhance victim protection, increase accountability for perpetrators, and conduct prevention and outreach, including an expansion of the Livelihood Empowerment Against Poverty (LEAP) Program. (72) In 2019, the government conducted a mid-way assessment of progress, gaps, and challenges that indicated the importance of continued funding to ensure success. (29) The government also took additional steps to operationalize a shelter for child victims of trafficking, but did not admit and care for child trafficking victims during the reporting period. (39)
Hazardous Child Labor Activity Frameworks	Includes the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework and the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework for the Cocoa Sector. Developed in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations, to identify hazardous activities that should be prohibited for children. (47,70,71) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period.
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint Declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, and the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (73-75) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. (73,74) Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Ghana's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (73-75) USDOL-funded projects and some industry-funded projects carried out activities in support of this policy during the reporting period. (39)
Minerals and Mining Policy of Ghana	Prohibits child labor in mining and stipulates that children who visit mining sites must be supervised. (80) In May 2019, held a 2-day conference discussing formalizing small-scale artisanal mining operations, in which the majority of child labor in mining occurs. (81,82)
Strategy on Anti-Child Labor and Trafficking in Fisheries (2016–2020)	Ministry of Fisheries and Aquaculture Development policy that aims to significantly reduce the incidence of child labor in fisheries by improving child protection systems and increasing prosecution of offenders. (83) With USAID support, 10 coastal District Assemblies in the Central Region received $934,674 to mainstream activities to combat child labor and trafficking activities in their 2018-2021 Medium-Term Development Plans. (39)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (30,76,84)

Although the government made strides in the implementation of its National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana, research indicates that the government relied heavily on NGOs to implement the mandates of this policy. Other areas that required further government attention included provisioning of shelters in more regions and districts, and adequate funding and logistics for rescue operations and victim protection. (29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Industry-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector, improve farmer livelihoods, improve access to education, and combat the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects may be in support of the World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) initiative and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (75) During the reporting period, the Governments of Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire worked with industry to set a floor price for cocoa in order to reduce the demand for child labor. (94,95)
Educational Programs†	Programs that aim to increase access to education. Ministry of Education-funded programs under the Free Compulsory Universal Basic Education aim to increase school attendance and enrollment. (84,102) MOGCSP's Ghana School Feeding Program aims to reduce malnutrition and improve attendance among students; its Capitation Grant Scheme helps defray the cost of basic education for students in public primary schools; and its Ghana Education Service—Girls' Education Unit places girls' education officers at the regional and district levels and mobilizes communities to enroll more girls in school. (99,100,103,104) As of September 2019, 16,000 students were newly enrolled under the Ministry of Education's Right Age Enrollment Campaign, which is active in 19 districts. (29) The Ghana Cocoa Board's Child Education Support Program rehabilitates and builds schools in cocoa-growing areas. (101,102)
MOGCSP Programs†	Programs that aim to support vulnerable children. Includes: the Program to Assist Kayayei , which provides rehabilitation and reintegration support; the temporary program "Get Off the Street," which aims to remove children from the street and reintegrate them into family and educational settings; the Human Trafficking Fund, which aims to provide financial support to victims; and the conditional cash transfer program, which aims to provide monetary support to poor households with orphans and vulnerable children on the condition that these children attend school. (55,58,98-100)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor. These projects include: Adwuma Pa (2018–2022), a $5 million project implemented by CARE; Combating Forced Labor and Labor Trafficking of Adults and Children in Ghana (2017–2021), a $2 million project implemented by Verité; Assessing Progress in Reducing Child Labor in Cocoa-Growing Areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana (2015–2019), a $3 million project implemented by NORC at the University of Chicago; Mobilizing Community Action and Promoting Opportunities for Youth in Ghana's Cocoa-Growing Communities (MOCA) (2015–2019), a $4.5 million project implemented by Winrock International; and the CARING Gold Mining Project (2015-2019), a $5 million project implemented by ILO. (85-88) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to improve child protection measures in partnership with the host government. These projects include: the Child Protection Compact Partnership (2015–2020), a $5 million USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM and local NGO Free the Slaves; Accelerating Care Reform (2016–2020), an $8 million USAID-funded project implemented by the Department of Social Welfare and UNICEF to strengthen the social welfare system; LEAP 1000 (2014–2019), a $12 million USAID-funded project implemented by UNICEF to strengthen the existing LEAP program and fund cash transfers to 6,200 poor households; Sustainable Fisheries Management Project (2014–2020), a $24 million USAID-funded project implemented by CRC/URI; the Complementary Basic Education Program, a $40 million joint contribution between USAID and the United Kingdom's Department for International Development (DFID) to support Ghana's Ministry of Education's efforts to educate and re-integrate out-of-school children into the basic school system; and the Learning Support program, a $37 million USAID-UNICEF funded program which helps increase inclusive education services for special needs children in primary schools. (20,89-93)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (62,103,105,106)

Research indicates a lack of funding as one of the primary obstacles in implementing programs to address child labor. (2,55) In addition, government-run shelters for abused children are few, and the government relies significantly on NGO-run shelters to which they can refer rescued children. (2,32,39) The shelter in Madina, was opened in July 2018, and is intended to serve child victims of trafficking, remains un-operational. (39) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection program "Get Off the Street" program was underfunded. (2)

Ghana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the government has worked closely with industry, NGOs, and international organizations to implement child labor programs in cocoa, fishing, and mining, the magnitude of these programs remains insufficient to address the scope of the problem. (52)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ghana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, including the procuring or offering of children in the production of pornography or the use, procuring, or offering of children for pornographic performances.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in all illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that prosecutors who have received sufficient legal training oversee and lead the prosecution of cases involving the worst forms of child labor and that an adequate number of state attorneys are available to prosecute cases.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that government officials do not intervene in criminal investigations and that these cases are prosecuted according to the law.	2015 – 2019
	Publish information on the amount of funding allocated to the labor inspectorate and ensure that inspectorates have adequate resources, including office space, transportation, and supplies to adequately carry out their mandate throughout the country.	2009 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties for labor violations.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure labor inspectors receive adequate training, including initial training for new inspectors.	2014 – 2019
	Publish data on the number of penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations identified.	2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2010 – 2019
	Strengthen and fully fund the mechanism to track cases of child labor for referral between law enforcement and social services providers.	2019
	Improve communication and coordination among criminal enforcement agencies to prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor and provide adequate victim support.	2015 – 2019
	Government Policies	Ensure that government policies are active, adequately funded, and publish information on their activities.
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees, increasing the number of classrooms, improving access to schools, providing sanitation facilities, and prohibiting sexual harassment in schools.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that opportunities such as vocational training are available to secondary school students enrolled in the dual-track system.	2019
	Ensure that social programs are active and receive sufficient funding to carry out their objectives.	2014 – 2019
	Expand the availability of government-supported shelter services for child victims and ensure that all shelters are operational.	2016 – 2019
	Create, replicate, and expand effective models for addressing exploitative child labor in the cocoa, fishing, and mining sectors.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Grenada made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada, no study of child labor has been done to confirm this. The government's ability to prevent children from becoming engaged in the worst forms of child labor is limited because existing laws do not comprehensively prohibit child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. In addition, there is no explicit prohibition against children's involvement in hazardous work and illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada. (1,2) According to the Education Act, public education is free and all children are required to attend school until age 16. (3) However, pregnant and adolescent mothers are removed from the formal education system and placed into a different education system, where they may also face barriers. (4,5) According to the most recently available data, the primary completion rate for Grenada was 123.0 percent in 2018. (6)

Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Grenada has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Grenada's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 32 of the Employment Act (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 25 of the Employment Act; Article 4 of the Constitution; Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (7-9)

NO ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 137 and 188 of the Criminal Code; Article 12 of the Electronic Crimes Bill; Article 10 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (9-11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 15 of the Education Act (3)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 15 and 16 of the Education Act (3)

† No standing military (12)

Grenada’s minimum age for work does not meet international standards because Article 32 of the Employment Act allows holiday employment for children under age 16 without specifying the minimum age, types of work, or number of hours permitted for such work. (7,13) The Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act does not sufficiently prohibit the trafficking of children, despite establishing heightened penalties for traffickers of children, because it requires the use of force, threats, abuse of power, or other forms of coercion to classify an act as human trafficking. (9) The Criminal Code, Electronic Crimes Bill, and Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act do not comprehensively prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of all children. (9-11) The government also has not established laws that prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor through its Labor Commission, which generates a list of workplaces to inspect and employs labor officers who make unannounced visits to all workplaces on the list. (1,2)
Royal Grenada Police Force	Investigates crimes and enforces laws related to child labor. Helps the Child Protection Agency and the Ministry of Social Development and Housing provide emergency services to children. (1,2)
Ministry of Legal Affairs	Prosecutes criminal cases of child abuse in consultation with the Child Protection Agency. (1,2)
Child Protection Agency	Enforces laws related to child labor by receiving and investigating reports of child abuse. Provides social and protective services to abused children, including by requesting court emergency protection orders. (14-17)
Ministry of Social Development and Housing	Oversees the Child Abuse Hotline and investigates reports of child abuse. Refers child abuse cases to the Child Protection Agency and criminal cases to the police. (16,17) Enforces laws related to school attendance and provides programs to support school attendance. (17,18)
Ministry of Education	Enforces laws related to school attendance through employment of truancy officers. Combats student absenteeism by monitoring students’ attendance and facilitating students’ access to school transportation and meals. (13,18,19)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to combat child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 4. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government employs six inspectors, two of whom have responsibility for inspections on child labor as part of their portfolios. (1,2) If inspectors find a violation, they must inform the Royal Grenadian Police Force (RGPF), which then conducts a criminal investigation. If the RGPF finds sufficient evidence of a violation, the RGPF may submit findings for possible prosecution by the public prosecutor's office. (1,2) The Labor Commission determines which inspections to conduct by generating a list of workplaces to inspect; labor officers then make unannounced visits to all workplaces on the list. In 2019, inspectors from the Ministry of Labor enforced the minimum age provision in the formal sector through periodic checks. However, enforcement in the informal sector was insufficient, particularly for family farms. It is unclear how many child labor inspections were conducted. (1,2) The government has not created or implemented a specific mechanism for filing and responding to complaints about child labor. Due to limited resources, labor inspection and enforcement is not a top priority for the Government of Grenada. (1,2) The government did not provide complete data on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to combat child labor. Gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 5. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, adolescent mothers and girls are removed from the formal education system and placed into a different education system, where they may also face barriers. (5,17,20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, research found no evidence of current research on the worst forms of child labor in Grenada. (1,2)

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Grenada (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish the minimum age for hazardous work at age 18 and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2009 – 2019
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including drug production.	2011 – 2019
	Establish minimum age requirements of at least age 13 for holiday employment and define the activities, conditions, and number of hours permissible for such work.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law establishes sanctions for all perpetrators of child trafficking, including in cases that do not show force, threats, or coercion.	2015 – 2019
	Enact legislation prohibiting the use, procuring, or offering of a child for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Provide sufficient funding and resources to allow agencies responsible for the enforcement of labor laws to fulfill their mission, including in the informal sector.	2015 – 2019
	Publish labor and criminal law enforcement data, including the following: information on the number and type of labor inspections; information on criminal inspectors' training; and the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions in criminal law enforcement of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Publish data on labor inspectorate funding.	2018 -- 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors conduct labor inspections.	2018 -- 2019
	Create and implement a complaint mechanism specifically for filing and responding to complaints on child labor.	2018 -- 2019
Government Policies	Adopt and implement a policy to address the reintegration of pregnant girls and adolescent mothers in mainstream education.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including the worst forms of child labor, to inform policies and programs.	2009 – 2019

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Guatemala made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government introduced new protections for adolescent workers to ensure that they do not participate in the worst forms of child labor. Guatemala also adopted the new Model for Comprehensive Care for Children and Adolescents, a multi-agency mechanism designed to provide care for child trafficking victims. In addition, government agencies began implementing the Child Labor Risk Identification Model, which is designed to identify child labor vulnerabilities and develop strategies in response. Furthermore, Guatemala developed a monitoring and evaluation tool in anticipation of a new national action plan to combat child labor and launched the next phase of its Blue Heart campaign to raise awareness about human trafficking. However, children in Guatemala are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, such as in the production of coffee. The lack of a sufficient number of labor inspectors and resources limited the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare's ability to combat the worst forms of child labor. In addition, existing social programs are insufficient to reach all children engaged in exploitative labor and, in particular, do not target children engaged in domestic work or agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guatemala are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, such as in the production of coffee. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guatemala.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Indigenous children account for more than half of child laborers in Guatemala, and children in rural areas are more likely to work than children in urban areas. Most of these children are engaged in agricultural activity. (25,32,33) In agriculture, working conditions for children involve using machetes and other dangerous tools, including the cultivation of sugar. (16,34) Children as young as age 5 work in coffee fields picking and carrying heavy loads of coffee beans and mixing and applying pesticides. (35-37) In 2019, a 9-year old child died on a coffee plantation in Baja Verapaz, though reports were conflicting as to the cause of death. (38) Recently corroborated reports indicate that children are often sent into the cities by their parents to work as street performers or beggars. Some of these children are sold to criminal organizations, work very long hours, and are at times forced to wear toxic paint to attract more attention. (25,39)

Children, both Guatemalan-born and from other countries, are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including in sex tourism. (22,30) Girls, LGBTI persons, and indigenous Guatemalans are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (30) Children are exploited for forced labor in Guatemala, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (22) Children are also forced to engage in street begging and vending in Guatemala City and along the border with Mexico. (31) Traffickers are increasingly using social media to recruit children. (29) Multiple sources indicate that children are recruited into gangs to serve as lookouts, couriers, and drug dealers, or to commit extortion. Criminal organizations, including gangs, also exploit girls in sex trafficking. (1,22,25)

Significant barriers to accessing education exist in Guatemala, particularly for girls, indigenous children, and children in rural areas. (1,16) Education is free in Guatemala, although only through grade 6, and there is an insufficient number of primary and secondary schools. (25,40) A lack of teachers, transportation, and sanitary facilities at public schools, and fees charged at private schools, all create barriers to education. (1,25) Over 70 percent of secondary schools are private, requiring families to pay school fees, transportation costs, and for supplies and lodging. (25)

Reports conclude that there is a high degree of illiteracy among girls. (5,41,42) Due to the heightened security risks for girls traveling alone and cultural norms that prioritize boys’ education over that of girls, girls in rural areas have lower enrollment rates in secondary school than boys. (25,26) Indigenous children in general have lower enrollment rates compared to other children. (5) There are not enough qualified teachers to provide instruction in the predominant native languages and classroom materials available in these languages are insufficient. (16,42,43) Furthermore, the education system is unable to address the needs of students with disabilities. (1,25,26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guatemala has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS) approved Ministerial Agreement Number 260-2019, “Procedure for the effective application of Convention 138 of the International Labor Organization, regarding the Convention on the Minimum Age for Admission of Employment,” which sets forth procedures for protecting adolescents between 15 and 18 years of age and ensuring that they do not participate in the worst forms of child labor. The agreement also establishes procedures for protecting adolescent workers and for improving coordination between MTPS’s Unit for the Protection of Working Adolescents and the General Labor Inspectorate (UPAT). (46,61) However, the agreement does not explicitly cover children 14 years of age, who are allowed to work under Guatemala’s Labor Code (or children under 14 who are allowed to work in exceptional circumstances). Therefore, it is unclear if this mechanism effectively raises the minimum age to 15.

Although Articles 32 and 150 of the Labor Code allow MTPS to authorize children under age 14 to work under exceptional circumstances—including if MTPS determines that children must work to support their family due to poverty—the law does not define the total number of hours, kinds of tasks, or age range applicable for this exception, which is inconsistent with international standards on light work. (44) MTPS indicated that no such exceptions have been granted since 2016. (1,62)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MTPS that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare’s (MTPS) Inspection Division	Enforces child labor laws, including prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, by inspecting businesses and responding to child labor complaints. (2,25) Refers children found in child labor to government social services and refers complaints to the MTPS Adolescent Workers Protection Unit. (63-65) Refers cases of worst forms of child labor to the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET) and unresolved cases to labor courts for review and sanctions, as appropriate. (2)
National Civil Police	Investigates cases of child trafficking through the Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor Unit located within the Special Investigation Police, and operate a hotline to receive reports of suspected child trafficking cases. Also conduct welfare inspections in child labor cases and refer cases to civil court. (15,25)
Public Ministry, Special Prosecutor’s Office	Receives case referrals involving the worst forms of child labor from labor inspectors. Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor through the Special Prosecutor’s Office Against Human Trafficking. (2)
Solicitor General’s Office	Receives complaints regarding the exploitation of children. Initiates legal proceedings, refers cases to the National Civil Police, and ensures the legal representation of children whose rights have been violated. (25)
Secretariat of Social Well-Being	Establishes procedural guidelines for government agencies and NGOs responsible for the protection and care of child and adolescent victims of commercial sexual exploitation via the Protocol for Identifying and Assisting Child and Adolescent Victims of Commercial Sexual Exploitation. Administrative unit under the Executive branch charged with formulating, coordinating, and executing public policies related to the protection of children and adolescents. (66,67)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MTPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation and inspection planning.

In 2019, the General Labor Inspectorate conducted 2,580 child labor-specific inspections, an increase from 2018, all at worksites. The inspections were targeted at sectors in which children are most vulnerable to exploitative labor, such as in agriculture, construction, street work, and other informal work. (25) In addition, from December 9 through December 13, 2019, the inspectorate cooperated with UPAT to carry out planned inspections targeting the worst forms of child labor in the manufacturing and handling of explosive and pyrotechnic substances. (25) MTPS removed 14 children from child labor as a result of inspections, while the Public Ministry's (MP) unit against trafficking in persons reported removing 40 children from child labor who were all referred to the Solicitor General's Office for social services. (25)

All of Guatemala's inspectors received training during the reporting period, including in the enforcement of laws related to child labor and the worst forms of child labor. Eleven new inspectors hired in 2019 began initial training in December and 60 inspectors participated in an Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights training titled "International Standards on Human and Labor Rights: Trafficking in Persons for Purposes of Labor Exploitation and Other Contemporary Forms of Slavery." (25) Sixty inspectors also took part in a mediation techniques training offered by the U.S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, with select inspectors receiving follow-up "train the trainer" courses. (25)

Guatemala's General Labor Inspectorate received less funding in 2019 compared to 2018 and MTPS has indicated that the funding level was insufficient to cover the inspectorate's needs, particularly for transportation, fuel, and per diem costs. (25) Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Guatemala's workforce, which includes more than 4.6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing countries, Guatemala would employ about 308 labor inspectors. (71,72)

Although laws governing the minimum age for work and hazardous work apply in both the formal and informal sectors, labor inspectors rarely inspect informal workplaces in which child labor violations are most likely to occur. (1,2,25,26) Some reports question the quality of inspections for child labor violations, particularly the scope and coverage across industries. (15,16) Civil society organizations state that, during worksite inspections, labor inspectors often meet only with business owners or supervisors and bypass conducting worker interviews. (8,39) Civil society organizations also report that labor inspectors are not appropriately trained to perform inspections for child labor. (1,11,13)

The government has created a mechanism for filing complaints regarding child labor, but reports state that the mechanism is not efficient in responding to those complaints. (1,25,26) Furthermore, while Guatemala has established a referral mechanism between responsible agencies in cases of child labor, coordination between these agencies remains a challenge and requires the intervention of NGOs or international missions. (25) In 2017, the General Labor Inspectorate regained the authority to impose penalties for labor law violations, and it began implementing this authority in 2018, including for child labor law violations. While MTPS reported it issued 1,374 fines to non-compliant companies between 2018 through the end of 2019 for all violations, information regarding how much was collected in penalties in 2019 for child labor violations was still not available during the reporting period. (25)

Guatemala

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Civil Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (1)	N/A (25)

In 2019, Guatemala's Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET) rescued 154 child and adolescent victims of human trafficking. Of these cases, 48 involved commercial sexual exploitation of children as a result of human trafficking. (25) The total number of child labor violations found during the reporting period was unknown, however.

The Attorney General's Office reported 13 convictions in 2019 related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including for use in pornographic performances and for online sexual exploitation. Individuals convicted in 2019 for trafficking in persons crimes received non-commutable prison sentences between 8 to 14 years and fines of $38,960. (25) Notably, eight prison guards were convicted in February 2019 for their role in facilitating the trafficking of a girl aged 17, and were sentenced to 3 years in prison, while two other individuals were charged with human trafficking and have cases pending. (22) The government reported 221 investigations but did not clearly indicate which of these involved minors in labor exploitation. Thus, the total number of investigations involving the worst forms of child labor is unknown. (25)

Guatemala made efforts to increase anti-trafficking resources and capacity outside of Guatemala City, and the MP began making social workers and psychologists available to human trafficking victims to serve as liaisons as victims navigated proceedings and sought medical care. (22) The MP established two new Special First Instance criminal courts in Quetzaltenango and Guatemala City specialized in prosecuting trafficking in persons and trafficking in persons-related crimes. (31) In 2019, criminal law enforcement investigators received training on issues related to forced labor and labor exploitation, including child labor. (25) However, the Attorney General's Office noted that training was insufficient regarding laws against sexual violence, exploitation, and trafficking in persons, particularly in relation to the recruitment of minors by organized criminal organizations. (25)

The government has established specialized courts to hear cases of human trafficking of adults and children and gender-based violence. Despite this, judges are often unable to schedule hearings and trials in a timely manner and often lack sufficient training to properly identify trafficking in persons cases. (31,39) However, during the reporting period, the MP and the Judiciary developed the Model for Comprehensive Care for Children and Adolescents, a cooperative initiative that brings 11 government institutions under one mechanism to provide specialized, 24/7 care to child victims of trafficking during the investigative process. The model is also designed to significantly reduce case processing times. (31)

Although SVET is the primary institution charged with raising awareness on human trafficking, it has no authority to bring cases to the justice system and a small budget that limits its reach beyond urban areas. (31) Local NGO reports indicate that training is insufficient outside the capital. (1,26) Law enforcement agencies also lack sufficient vehicles, fuel, and criminal investigators, particularly outside Guatemala City. (16,73) MTPS has noted that resources are still insufficient to carry out complex criminal investigations. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination between agencies and civil society.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Specific Cabinet on Social Development (GEDS in its Spanish initials)*	Coordinates, articulates, and manages policies related to development, social protection, and violence prevention for vulnerable populations such as children, women, indigenous populations, the elderly, individuals with disabilities, and people from rural areas. Created in 2019 through Government Agreement 11-2019, which transferred the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAPETI) to GEDS. (25) Established via Agreement 2-2019 the thematic working group “Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor,” which assumes CONAPETI’s duties of coordinating government policies and efforts to combat child labor. (25) The working group began the implementation process of the Child Labor Risk Identification Model, a tool to design and implement preventative strategies at the local level based on prior identification of child labor vulnerabilities. The tool is being implemented with support from ILO and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean. (25)
Departmental Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor (CODEPETIS)	Coordinate government efforts to combat child labor at the departmental or regional level. Comprising department-level representatives of CONAPETI member agencies and NGO and business representatives. (2,15) As part of the CONAPETI restructuring, the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in 2019 voted to continue the work of the CODEPETIS. In Quetzaltenango and San Marcos, comprehensive care centers were established to remove child and adolescent laborers from exploitative child labor situations. (25)
Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET)	Coordinates all government efforts against human trafficking, including for commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor, by responding to cases and providing support for victims. Operates shelters to serve minor victims of human trafficking and a hotline to file child sex tourism complaints. Led by the Vice President’s Office. (74) In 2019, coordinated with the Ministry of Interior and MTPS to train National Civil Police staff on “Prevention and Fighting of Exploitation and Trafficking in Persons as one of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.” (25) During the reporting period, developed a mobile app to provide emergency attention to trafficking in persons victims and created a virtual reality video game designed to teach children and adolescents about the dangers of trafficking in persons. (31)
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking-in-Persons	Develops and manages initiatives to combat human trafficking. Relunched by SVET in 2016, co-chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and includes 28 government and civil society institutions. (31) During the reporting period, under SVET’s lead, developed the National Database of Trafficking in Persons Victims, creating the first detailed Trafficking in Persons victim information system in Central America. (31)
National Platform for the Prevention and Protection of Children and Adolescents against Sexual Exploitation in Travel and Tourism	Targets sexual exploitation of children and adolescents in the travel and tourism sector. (21) Oversees the Code of Conduct Against Sex Tourism, a mandatory code for trade group membership that forbids providing services to customers believed to be engaging in commercial sexual exploitation of children. Presided over by SVET and includes 10 government, private sector, and civil society institutions. (21) Held its inaugural yearly meeting in January of 2019 to review successes from 2018 and to establish an operating plan for 2019. (75) In October, partnered with the Guatemalan Airline Association to train airline industry professionals on detecting cases of exploitation in travel and tourism. (76)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other mechanisms that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (48,68)

Guatemala

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, SVET established the Inter-Agency Commission for Information Technology and Communication via Secretarial Agreement 66-2019. The commission, which is tasked with preventing the violence and sexual exploitation of children and adolescents through trafficking in persons crimes that utilize technology, will serve as a forum for consultation, coordination, policy development, consensus building, and action planning among 11 government institutions. (31,77)

Despite improvements in inter-agency coordination to address human trafficking, there continues to be a lack of effective coordination among other government institutions and civil society actors who provide services and protection to victims of child labor. (4,15,78) Some civil society organizations have indicated that despite being members of the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking in Persons, the commission is not fully inclusive of civil society perspectives and that they participate primarily as observers on the commission. (31) Furthermore, although it plays a significant role in combating human trafficking in Guatemala, reporting suggests that SVET lacks political support from other parts of the government. (31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including the implementation of several policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2020)	Aims to prevent and eradicate child labor by addressing poverty; guaranteeing rights to health for children and adolescents; guaranteeing access to education, especially for children in or at risk of child labor; coordinating and enforcing child labor laws; raising awareness regarding risks and consequences of child labor; and implementing a system to monitor and evaluate child labor. (19,78-81) In anticipation of the effective end of the Roadmap in 2020, MTPS and the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, in cooperation with the ILO, developed a tool to enable the monitoring and evaluation of the roadmap. (25)
Protocol for Providing Comprehensive Health Care to Children and Adolescents in the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Requires public health workers to enter information into a database about any child whose injuries may have been labor related. Implemented by the Ministry of Public Health and Social Assistance. (82-84) Research did not reveal whether any actions were taken under this policy in 2019.
Protocol for Identifying and Assisting Child and Adolescent Victims of Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Establishes procedural guidelines for government agencies and NGOs responsible for the protection and care of child and adolescent victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Overseen by the Secretariat of Social Welfare and Departmental Social Welfare Offices and implemented by SVET. (2,66) Research did not reveal whether any actions were taken under this policy in 2019.
Inter-Institutional Protocol for the Protection and Attention of Victims of Human Trafficking	Provides instruction on how to process sex crimes, including commercial sexual exploitation of children, and how to assist prospective victims of trafficking in persons. (21,48,84) Research did not reveal whether any actions were taken under this policy in 2019.
Public Policy on Human Trafficking and the Comprehensive Protection of Victims (2014–2024)	Aims to guarantee protection for and comprehensive attention to human trafficking victims, and promote prevention, detection, prosecution, and sanction of this crime. (85) Includes a National Plan of Strategic Action that directs the government's actions on preventing and combating human trafficking. (15,30,86) The government noted that as part of the policy, since 2016 officials have identified 232 victims and provided services to 750 individuals, and brought charges against 508 individuals and sentenced 113 of them. During the reporting period, the government further implemented the policy by launching the second phase of the Corazon Azul (Blue Heart) public awareness campaign. (31,87)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Ministry of Development Social Poverty Reducing Programs†	Conditional Cash Transfer for Education and Health Program (Mi Bono Seguro) provides cash assistance to families with school-age children, conditioned on children's school attendance. (26,65,88) Food Assistance Program (Mi Bolsa Segura) provides food assistance to poor families, with the requirement that their children attend school. (26,65) Young Protagonists (Jóvenes Protagonistas) provides at-risk adolescents with training and formative activities outside school hours. (26,88) My Secure Dining Hall (Mi Comedor Seguro) provides access to food to people in situations of poverty, crisis, and emergency, including children. (89) My First Employment (Mi Primer Empleo) places working-age youth in apprenticeship programs and grants them on-the-job training and a monthly stipend. (26,88) My Middle School Scholarship (Mi Beca Educación Media), for children between ages 11 and 24, and My College Scholarship (Mi Beca Educación Superior), for children between ages 16 and 28, promote access to school and college through cash assistance to children who are in situations of poverty and extreme poverty in rural and urban areas. (89) In 2019, the Ministry of Development modified its direct assistance programs to increase payments to certain families and to prioritize certain departments. The Ministry also renamed the programs as Mi Bono Social , Mi Comedor Social , Mi Bolsa Social , and Mi Beca Social . (90,91)
Committed to First (Comprometidos con Primero) Program (2017–2019)	Seeks to decrease school dropout rates and increase enrollment and advancement to the next grade at a national level. (26,92) Goals include generating conditions to achieve competency in reading and writing, providing teacher training, conducting diagnostic evaluations, and supplying educational materials and pedagogical support. (92,93) Aims to serve 35,000 first grade students. (93) Relaunched in 2019 through Ministerial Accord 2669-2019 with a focus on improving indicators of success and conditions for learning for first graders. (94)
I Don't Allow Sexual Exploitation of Children in Tourism†	SVET-administered national campaign against the commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourism. (3) SVET launched the campaigns "Be Careful with Grooming" to prevent online grooming for sexual abuse of children and adolescents between ages 10 and 15, and "Protecting Our Greatest Treasure" to create awareness of sexual exploitation of children in tourism and travel activities. (29,82) Research could not identify actions undertaken during the reporting period to carry out this program.
Human Trafficking Awareness Campaigns*	SVET and Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman (PDH) campaigns that aim to educate the public about trafficking in person issues. (31) As part of World Day Against Trafficking in Persons in 2019, SVET launched the second phase of its Corazon Azul (Blue Heart) campaign, which raises awareness about human trafficking and coordinates government and social responses to trafficking in persons crimes. (31) PDH meanwhile held 46 trafficking in persons-related training sessions for a variety of audiences in 2019, including for professionals and potential victims of human trafficking, as part of its public awareness campaign. (31)
Business Network for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Guatemala (Red Empresarial)	Program that aims to promote prevention and eradication of child labor. Created in 2015, members include the Ministries of Education and Agriculture, MTPS, CONAPETI, ILO, UNICEF, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization, and representatives from the private sector. (17,95 -98) The network continued to implement a variety of health, nutrition, education, and awareness programs in a variety of agricultural sectors. The Agricultural Chamber of Commerce meanwhile coordinated with the ILO during the reporting period to update the Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in the Private Sector. (99)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (21, 100-102)

Preliminary data from the Finance Ministry indicates that social program funding in 2019 fell by 6.8 percent compared to 2018. (25) Civil society organizations indicate that social programs are inadequately funded, are susceptible to local political influences, and fail to reach the rural interior of the country outside urban areas. (1,25) Although the government has implemented programs to assist children and families, research found no evidence of government programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in hazardous work, including those in agriculture and domestic service. (4) Reporting also indicates that SVET and PDH fail to regularly monitor the effectiveness of awareness campaigns beyond tracking the number of individuals reached. (31)

Conditions in government-run children's shelters are not adequate, and the government has not ensured the protection and safety of children under its care. (31,41) In addition, the environment for the implementation of social programs that address child labor remains unsafe, and the government has done little to investigate or prevent further instances of threats, intimidation, and violence—such as the murders of individuals working on social programs, including NGO officials, human rights workers, judges, and labor activists. VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guatemala (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Eliminate the exception allowing some children under age 14 to work, or establish a light work framework for children ages 12 to 14 outlining restrictions on working conditions, type of work, and number of hours of work.	2010 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Clarify whether Ministerial Agreement 260-2019 raises the minimum working age to 15.	2019
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2019
	Collect and report data on the total amount in fines collected in relation to child labor violations.	2019
	Provide sufficient funding and resources to the labor inspectorate to ensure operational needs are met.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal investigators have sufficient resources and staff to conduct quality criminal investigations in all geographical areas of the country.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that inspectors carry out inspections in the informal sector, an area in which child labor is known to occur.	2018 – 2019
	Improve the quality of inspections by ensuring that inspectors receive effective training, meet with all relevant parties, including workers, and dedicate the necessary time to carry out more comprehensive inspections.	2017 – 2019
	Dedicate more staff and train criminal law enforcement officials, particularly those outside the capital, on laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019
	Disaggregate enforcement data to identify child-labor related investigations and report on the number of violations for the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that hearings and trials addressing human trafficking and gender-based violence in specialized courts are scheduled in a timely manner and that judges are trained in trafficking in persons concepts.	2016 – 2019
	Improve effectiveness of child labor complaint and referral mechanisms to ensure timely responses to complaints.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Strengthen coordination efforts to institutionalize relationships between civil society representatives and government agencies that provide services to victims of child labor, for example by fully incorporating civil society participation in the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons has the resources, authority, and political support necessary to combat human trafficking countrywide.	2019
Government Policies	Undertake activities to implement the key policies related to child labor.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education for all children, including girls and indigenous children, children with disabilities, and children living in rural areas, by recruiting and training more qualified teachers, providing instruction in indigenous languages, building additional schools with appropriate facilities, and removing school fees and transportation costs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs are implemented, well funded, able to carry out their objectives, reach populations outside urban centers, and report on yearly activities.	2018 – 2019
	Regularly monitor the effectiveness and impact of social programs such as awareness campaigns beyond number of citizens reached.	2017 – 2019
	Initiate social programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work, and for children who perform other types of hazardous work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure high standards of safety and care for children in government-run shelters.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure the safety of NGO officials, human rights workers, judges, and labor activists to facilitate a secure environment for the implementation of social programs that address and prevent child labor.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Guinea made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Assembly adopted a revised Child Code that must be enacted by the President, which includes a more specific list of hazardous child labor activities and more severe penalties for violations related to child labor. However, children in Guinea engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. The government lacks a coordinating mechanism and national policy to address all relevant worst forms of child labor. Laws related to the minimum age for work do not meet international standards because they do not include children working outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed. In addition, the government does not implement sufficient social programs to address the extent of the child labor problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guinea engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (2-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	54.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		59.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2016. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming and carrying heavy loads† in the production of cashews, cocoa, coffee, and rubber (5,8-13)
	Herding livestock (8,9)
	Fishing, including capturing and processing fish (8-10,14-16)
Industry	Mining† granite, gold, and diamonds (1,3,8-10,12)
	Manufacturing, activities unknown (9)
	Construction,† including carrying materials and the fabrication of construction materials, such as bricks (4,9,17,18)
Services	Street work, including as market vendors, beggars, petty traders, shoe shiners, and porters in the transportation sector (3,4,8-10,15,19-21)
	Working in restaurants and informal cottage industries, including as waitresses (8,9)
	Domestic work (3,8,10,12,14,16,22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor as market vendors and in domestic work, mining, herding, fishing, and farming, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8-10)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,20,22)
	Forced begging by Koranic teachers (8,10,22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guinea

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Children in Guinea are subjected domestically and abroad for forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and domestic servitude. Some Guinean boys are subjected to forced labor in gold and diamond mining, including in Senegal and Mali, while Guinean girls are involved in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in various West African and Middle Eastern countries. (8-25)

Boys placed in the care of Koranic schools in Guinea are sometimes forced by their teachers to beg on the street or to work in fields, and must then surrender the money they have earned to their teachers. (8,10,11,24) In addition, through the system of confiage, parents who are unable to care for their children send them to relatives or strangers who are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling to the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some of these children receive care and an education, while many become domestic workers and are victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (10,15,23)

The Government of Guinea guarantees free compulsory primary education, but many children do not attend school. Birth registration is required to attend school in Guinea, and some Guinean children lack identity documents, which may affect their access to education. (26) In addition, the lack of school infra-structure, cost of school fees and supplies, shortage of teachers, and reported school violence impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (2,3,10,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 137.5 of the Labor Code; Article 412 of the Child Code (27,28)

In December 2019, the revised Child Code was adopted by the National Assembly and is now awaiting enactment by the President. Furthermore, the revised Child Code provides additional definitions and associated fines for violations of child trafficking. (5,34,35) Guinean law prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children; however, these prohibitions do not cover agriculture. Children working in this sector may be exposed to unhealthy environments, including hazardous substances and dangerous equipment. (9,10,17,28,36)

Guinean law allows children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform light work in the domestic work and agriculture sectors. (17,27,37) The light work framework does not meet international standards as it applies to children under the age of 13. Additionally, the law does not prescribe the number of hours per week permitted for light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be done as defined by international standards on child labor. The Labor Code imposes only a minimum age for children employed by employers and does not address situations in which children work on their own account, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (26,28,37-39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor, through its labor inspectorate. (15,36,40) Oversees the Child Labor Monitoring and Surveillance System, which aims to identify and remove children from exploitative labor conditions. (41)
Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals (OPROGEM) Special Police Unit	Investigates cases related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor. (4,8,15,20,33) Formulates, plans, and monitors all activities, programs, and policy measures for safeguarding vulnerable population groups and protecting morality. (16) There is one OPROGEM representative in each of the 33 central police stations of the country who specializes in issues related to the trafficking of women and children. (35)
Ministry for Social Action, Promotion of Women and Children (MASPFE)	Provides protection and social services for victims of child labor and human trafficking. (10,15)
Ministry of Justice	Monitors cases of children referred to social services centers through its National Directorate of Supervised Education and Youth Protection. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including allocation of financial and other resources.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2019 to November 30, 2019.

During 2019, the government employed 189 individuals as part of its labor inspectorate and conducted 376 inspections, 11 of which focused exclusively on child labor. Many of the inspections conducted during the reporting period took place in mining areas, specifically Boke, Boffa, Sigui, and Dubreka. (4,34) During the reporting period, the ILO funded a 3-day refresher training for the labor inspectorate that focused on social dialogue and the status of the labor administration system. (5,34) The Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals (OPROGEM) noted that 29 cases of child labor were identified, 14 of which were referred to the Ministry of Justice. (35) The labor inspectorate does not have a dedicated budget and maintains only a single vehicle, with a portion of each inspector's salary used to cover fuel costs for inspection trips, restricting its ability to conduct labor inspections. (4,22,26,34)

The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including with the allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Research indicated that the OPROGEM Special Police Unit was understaffed, underfunded, and without sufficient office supplies, transportation, or fuel to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,15,33,42) The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and imposed penalties for violations for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including ensuring that coordinating bodies are provided budgets in line with their responsibilities.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices (CNLTPPA)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts, including for children. Led by MASPFE, includes representatives from OPROGEM, MOL, and other ministries. (8,10,20,24) In 2019, the CNLTPPA organized training sessions in Conakry, Mamou, Kankan, and N'zerekore. (35)
Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child (CGSDE)	Implements, coordinates, and monitors government efforts on child protection. Led by MASPFE. (20,33,43) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken by CGSDE during the reporting period.

Limited budgets for the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices (CNLTPPA) and the Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child affect their ability to operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (2,15,33,42,44) Although the government has established a coordination mechanism on human trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate the government's efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Development Plan (2016–2020)	Seeks to promote sustainable development and social equality. Overseen by the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation and supported by the World Bank. (45,46) Includes activities to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children, human trafficking, and child labor. (45) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Development Plan during the reporting period.

Guinea's National Plan of Action to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons expired in 2019, yet CNLTPPA is developing a new 5-year action plan in 2020. (35) Research, however, found no evidence of a generalized child labor policy. (4,16,34,38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2016–2019)	Sought to develop a National Action Plan for the elimination of child labor, including all its worst forms. Overseen by MOL and supported by ILO. (47) In 2019, research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken to implement the program.
World Bank Country Program	World Bank projects in Guinea that aim to increase access to quality basic education and youth employment, improve school infrastructure, and strengthen safety nets for vulnerable populations, especially those affected by the Ebola virus disease outbreak. (48-51) In 2019, research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken to implement this program.

Research found that the scope of programs implemented by the Government of Guinea is insufficient for the extent of the problem, including addressing children engaged in agriculture, domestic work, forced begging, mining, and street work. (41)

Reports indicate that social services available are not effective to meet the needs of the victims, and, as a result, the government relied on NGOs to provide shelter and other basic services to victims. Moreover, financial shortfalls still constrain services. (4,8,15,22,24,33,42)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guinea (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including agriculture.	2014 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for light work to 13 to comply with international standards; ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken and the number of hours that are permitted for children engaged in light work.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed.	2009 – 2019
	Establish by law free basic education and an age up to which education is compulsory that is consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2019
Enforcement	Provide consistent initial training and refresher training for labor law enforcement officials and initial training for criminal law enforcement officials along with increased resources to effectively enforce child labor laws.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites and the numbers of violations, prosecutions, convictions, and imposed penalties related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2011 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry for Social Action, Promotion of Women and Children to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor.	2016 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child receive adequate funding to fulfill their missions.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child is active and undertake activities.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
	Undertake activities in support of the National Development Plan.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by assisting unregistered children to obtain birth and identity documentation that entitles them to attend school; improve school infrastructure and increase teacher availability; remove school-related fees; and ensure the safety of children in schools.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that social services are properly funded and adequately meet the needs of victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2019
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture, domestic work, forced begging, mining, and street work.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Guinea-Bissau made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The National Institute for Women and Children and the National Guard for Migration Services conducted human trafficking trainings for law enforcement officials, including on a national referral mechanism, assistance to victims, and data management. The government also approved the National Action Plan to Eliminate and Combat Trafficking in Persons, which aims to strengthen legislation and promote coordination among relevant government agencies. However, children in Guinea-Bissau engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. In addition, the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards, because the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children without a work contract. Law enforcement officials do not receive sufficient training and resources to adequately conduct inspections and prosecute cases of child labor, and social programs do not fully address the extent of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guinea-Bissau engage in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1,3-5) According to a national child labor survey, more than 169,200 children ages 5 to 17 work; 85 percent of these children work in agriculture. (5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea-Bissau.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	57.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	48.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cashews (1,4,5,8)
	Fishing, activities unknown (1,4,5)
Services	Domestic work (1,5,9,10)
	Street work, including car washing, shoe shining, and vending (1,3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,9,11)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, and street work, including begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,9-11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Guinea-Bissau, organized networks of human traffickers affiliated with Koranic schools force boys to beg within the country and in The Gambia, Guinea, Mali, and Senegal. Although many Koranic school teachers provide religious education as traditionally intended, some force the students, known as talibés, to beg on the streets for money and food. (1-3,10) Most talibés originate from the areas of Bafatá and Gabú in the eastern region of the country. (1-3,12)

Guinea-Bissau

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Bissau-Guinean boys are forced to work in street vending domestically; they also are trafficked to Senegal for forced labor in agriculture, mining, and street vending. Boys from Guinea-Bissau and boys from neighboring countries are forced to beg and harvest cashews domestically. (1,3,8,10,11) Girls are subjected to forced labor in street vending and domestic work in Guinea-Bissau and Senegal. Girls also are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, including in sex tourism, in the Bijagós Archipelago of Guinea-Bissau, on mainland Guinea-Bissau in bars and hotels, and in Senegal. (1,3,9,11)

Barriers to education for children include lack of schools, poor infrastructure, long distances, and a lack of trained teachers, particularly in rural areas. Reports indicate that only one in three children have access to primary education in Guinea-Bissau. (1,10,13) Although the Ministry of Public Education continued to raise awareness of the need to enroll and keep children in school, most children did not attend school during the reporting period due to continuous strikes by teachers over unpaid salaries. (1,2,10,13)

Political instability may have affected the government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor. (1,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea-Bissau has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea-Bissau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 146 of the General Labor Law (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 148 of the General Labor Law (15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 148 of the General Labor Law (15)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 4, and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking (17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 3–5 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; Articles 134 and 136 of the Penal Code (16,17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 3 and 7 of the Decree on Narcotic Substances (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 31 of Law No. 4/99 (19)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of Law No. 4/99 (19)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 12–13 of the Education System Law (20)
Free Public Education	No		Article 12 (2) of the Education System Law (20)

The minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working without a work contract. (15,21) Moreover, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (15,21)

The Education System Law states that basic education is compulsory and lasts 9 years; however, it only makes basic education free through grade six, leaving children in grades seven through nine without access to free basic education. (20) In addition, because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (15,20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Public Administration	Enforces child labor legislation in collaboration with the ministries of the Interior and Justice, and the National Institute for Women and Children (IMC). (1)
Ministry of the Interior's Public Order Police and National Guard	Combat child labor through the prevention of child trafficking. (1)
Judicial Police's Women and Children Brigade	Investigates the worst forms of child labor and refers cases to the IMC and NGOs. Comprising eight officers. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including complaint and referral mechanisms.

In November 2019, labor inspectors received training during a 3-day workshop that included capacity building and the analysis of labor laws. (1,23) Reports indicate that not only is the number of labor inspectors not sufficient to target the scope of the problem in the country, but limited resources, such as 1 vehicle shared among 28 inspectors with no budget for fuel, severely hinders the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration's abilities to enforce child labor laws. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

‡ Data are from January 2018 to August 2018.

In 2019, the National Institute for Women and Children (IMC) and the National Guard for Migration Services conducted trafficking in persons training for law enforcement officials. The UN and other bilateral donors funded the training, which covered a national referral mechanism, victim assistance and communication, and data management. (1) The IMC also identified 105 children engaged in forced begging as a result of human trafficking, and in partnership with NGO stakeholders, assisted these children with reintegration, medical assistance, and shelter placement. (14) However, the government reported that training resources for criminal law enforcement officials were insufficient, and reports indicate that due to the lack of an operating budget, criminal investigators are hindered from investigating cases outside the capital of Bissau, including Gabú and Bafatá, where child labor is known to occur. (1,2,8,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Commission to Fight Child Labor	Coordinates the government's efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. Established in 2010. (22) In 2019, met semi-regularly. (14)
National Committee to Prevent and Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. Led by IMC. (22,25) In 2019, collaborated in the drafting of the National Action Plan to Eliminate and Combat Trafficking in Persons. (26)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Institute for Women and Children (IMC)	Coordinates with NGOs and other partner organizations to rehabilitate and reintegrate child victims of exploitation. (1) In 2019, organized a conference to discuss and validate the National Action Plan to Eliminate and Combat Trafficking in Persons, which was attended by the Anti-Trafficking Coordination Committee, including National Guard, Judicial Police, Labor Inspectorate General, Public Prosecutor, Ministry of Tourism, NGOs, and religious leaders. (14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (2018–2030)	Guides the government's policies for combating violence toward children, including child labor. (27) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism	Seeks to raise awareness on commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking in Guinea-Bissau, particularly in the Bijagós Archipelago. (28) In 2019, the policy was implemented by the Ministry of Tourism and IMC, within the regions of Bubaque, São Domingos, and Bissau. (14)
UN Country Partnership Framework (2016–2020)	Aims to assist in promoting free and universal birth registration, and enforcing human trafficking and child labor provisions. (29) Since 2016, helped IMC reintegrate 132 talibés with their families; and provided access to shelter, schools, and psychological and medical assistance. (30)
National Action Plan to Eliminate and Combat Trafficking in Persons†	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by strengthening legislation, coordinating actions and initiatives among government agencies, promoting the coordination and collaboration of relevant stakeholders, and improving protective services and assistance to victims. Led by IMC with collaboration from national and international NGOs and relevant government entities. (26)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2016–2020)	UNICEF-funded program, in collaboration with the government, that aims to prevent and combat child trafficking through education, social protection mechanisms, and capacity building for law enforcement officials. (31)
Friends of the Child Shelters (Associação dos Amigos da Crianças)†	Donor-funded program, with government support, implemented by an NGO that provides social services to vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (32,33) In 2019, provided services to seven child victims of forced labor on cashew plantations. (1) In addition, provided identification and reintegration services to 127 child victims of exploitation. (14)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (34)

During the reporting period, local vigilance committees in Gabú and Bafatá conducted awareness-raising activities, which resulted in a decrease of trafficking in persons activities throughout official border checkpoints. (14) Reports suggest, however, that the government has not conducted any national public awareness-raising campaigns on human trafficking, including child trafficking. (35)

Reports indicate that services provided by shelters do not meet international standards due to funding constraints. (32) In addition, although Guinea-Bissau has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guinea-Bissau (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure the minimum age for work applies to all children, including children without a work contract.	2015 – 2019
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that all 9 years of basic education are free.	2015 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that the number of law enforcement officials is sufficient to address the scope of the problem, and that both law and criminal enforcement officials receive adequate training and resources to inspect, investigate, and prosecute cases of child labor throughout the country, including in Bafatá and Gabú, where child labor is known to occur.	2009 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating routine inspections and targeting inspections based on the analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2016 – 2019
	Establish a mechanism to receive child labor complaints.	2016 – 2019
	Establish referral mechanisms to ensure that children found during labor inspections and criminal investigations are referred to social services providers.	2016 – 2019
	Publish labor and criminal enforcement data, including information on labor inspectorate funding, the number of violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions secured, and penalties imposed.	2009 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents is implemented.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including in rural areas, by increasing school infrastructure, increasing teacher availability and capability, and providing transportation.	2019
	Significantly increase efforts to raise national awareness of human trafficking, including child trafficking.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that facilities, including shelters, have adequate resources to assist victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Guyana made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted and began implementation of the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor and launched an updated Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action, which establishes mechanisms to address human trafficking, including child trafficking. In addition, the government drafted a revised Combating Trafficking in Persons Bill, which would increase the legislative protection for victims, including children. However, children in Guyana are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Law enforcement agencies have insufficient financial and human resources to enforce laws related to child labor, including its worst forms, and existing laws do not fully prohibit using children in certain forms of child labor. Moreover, the government does not have targeted social programs to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guyana engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-7) The 2014 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 indicated that children living in Guyana's interior are more likely than other children to be engaged in child labor, with 37 percent of children ages 5 to 17 living in the interior engaged in child labor. The survey also indicated that 41 percent of children living in Amerindian households engage in child labor, with 34 percent of these children engaged in hazardous work. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guyana.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	20.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.4

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2014. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including the production of cabbage, cherries, limes, rice, squash, sugarcane, and charcoal (1,6-14)
	Forestry, including logging,† preservation of lumber, and work in sawmills† (1,3,8,10,14)
	Raising animals, including chickens (8)
	Fishing,† activities unknown (1,8,15)
Industry	Construction,† activities unknown (8,14,15)
	Mining,† including gold mining and bauxite mining (3,8,10,14)
Services	Domestic work (1,6,8)
	Welding† and working in scrap iron yards (1,6,8)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Working in stores, bars, and restaurants (1,6,8,16)
	Street work, including selling fruit, washing cars, and begging (1,6,8,11,12,17)
	Cleaning boats and ferries, and helping load luggage and goods (8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,7,8,10-12,14,15,18)
	Use in illicit activities, including planting marijuana and smuggling drugs, weapons, and goods (6,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Guyana, including girls as young as age 12, are involved in commercial sexual exploitation in Georgetown and in the country’s interior. There are reports of young girls in mining communities being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (1,6-9) Children are engaged in informal, small-scale mining in which they wash gold, operate dangerous machinery, and are exposed to hazardous chemicals. (8,9)

Children in Guyana’s interior and rural areas have limited access to education due to poor infrastructure, long distances to schools, transportation costs, and a shortage of qualified teachers. This leads to decreasing enrollment and high dropout rates among students, particularly in secondary school. (6,8,9,19,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guyana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guyana’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Guyanese law does not criminally prohibit forced labor. (25, 26) Guyanese law does not sufficiently prohibit all commercial sexual exploitation of children as it does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution or pornographic performances or production of pornography. The law does, however, adequately prohibit the procuring and offering of children in prostitution and pornography, as Guyana's Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act prohibits the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harboring, or receipt of a child for the purpose of exploitation, which in turn includes prostitution and child pornography. (9,26,30) Although Article 50(1) of the Protection of Children Act prohibits selling or giving drugs to children, the law does not specifically prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. (18,27) During the reporting year, Guyana acceded to the 1996 Hague Convention on Jurisdiction, Applicable Law, Recognition, Enforcement and Co-operation in Respect of Parental Responsibility and Measures for the Protection of Children (the Child Protection Convention) and the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. (1,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Social Protection that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Protection	Monitors and enforces child labor laws in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, Forestry Commission, Geology and Mines Commission, National Insurance Scheme, and Guyana Police Force. The Chief Labor Officer handles special investigations stemming from child labor complaints and oversees routine labor inspections. (9) Includes a Trafficking in Persons Unit and the Childcare and Protection Agency, to which children identified during labor inspections are referred. (9) Reported six new investigations of child labor during the reporting period, two of which were for commercial sexual exploitation of a child. (1)
Guyana Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Works in consultation with the Director of Public Prosecutions, Ministry of Public Security, Ministry of Social Protection, Ministry of Education, and Ministry of Indigenous Peoples' Affairs, depending on the circumstances of each case. (9)
Ministry of Public Security	Leads enforcement of human trafficking laws. Chairs the Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons. (9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Social Protection that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, the government conducted routine inspections that targeted high-risk sectors, including agriculture and mining, while no targeted inspections were conducted in 2018. (1) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Guyana's workforce, which includes more than 313,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Guyana would employ roughly 21 inspectors. (32,33) In 2019, the number of labor inspectors decreased to 14. The government recognizes that the number of inspectors is not sufficient to adequately monitor Guyana's workforce, including in the interior where child labor is most prevalent. (1,8,9,14) Furthermore, inspectors have insufficient resources to conduct inspections in remote areas, including transportation and accommodation. (9)

The government has acknowledged challenges in monitoring and enforcing the provisions established in Articles 41 and 46 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which aim to protect children from work that may harm their physical health or emotional development. (34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

The government has acknowledged that there is an insufficient number of staff members in the Ministry of Social Protection's Trafficking in Persons Unit. (13,36) In addition, with only 33 justices and magistrates, the courts have a backlog of cases and more than a 2-year waiting period on all legal matters. (17,37) In 2019, the Director of Public Prosecutions prosecuted nine persons suspected of human trafficking. Of these, six prosecutions were initiated during the previous reporting period. (2) The government convicted one person for human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of a child during the reporting period. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Reports on the nature and magnitude of human trafficking in Guyana and documents the government's response. Carries out public education campaigns and promotes prevention measures. (1,9) Combats commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities. Members include participants from 16 government ministries. (1,17,38) Chaired by the Minister of Public Security. Participating member agencies include: the Ministries of Amerindian Affairs, Natural Resources and Environment, Education, Legal Affairs, and Foreign Affairs. (1,17,39) In 2019, drafted and began implementing the Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action. Also led a number of successful raids at suspected human trafficking sites; conducted awareness and sensitization campaigns across Guyana; trained law enforcement officers, social workers, and prosecutors in victim-centered investigations and prosecutions; and drafted a revised Combating Trafficking in Persons Bill, which would increase legislative protection for victims, including children. (1,2)
National Tripartite Committee	Addresses national labor legislation and policy. Includes representatives from government agencies, labor unions, and employers, including the Ministry of Social Protection, Consultative Association of Guyanese Industries, Guyana Trades Union Congress, and the Federation of Independent Trade Unions of Guyana. (17,40,41) Research was unable to determine whether the National Tripartite Committee was active during the reporting period.
Commission on the Rights of the Child	Protects and promotes children's rights in accordance with the UN CRC, which includes addressing the worst forms of child labor. Reported to be active in 2019, but did not finalize its new strategic plan. (1)

Although the government has established the Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate efforts to combat other worst forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Education Policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy Toward the Elimination of Child Labor (2018–2025)	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor in all its forms by 2025 by reconciling gaps and inconsistencies between existing national policies and ratified international conventions. Establishes a national framework to coordinate, enforce, monitor, and evaluate all efforts to combat child labor, and increases protections for vulnerable indigenous children in the hinterland. (42) Approved in April 2019. (1,43)

Policy	Description
Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2019–2020)†	Seeks to prevent and raise awareness about human trafficking, provide direct assistance to victims, improve law enforcement's capacity to identify and respond to human trafficking, and strengthen interagency coordination and referral mechanisms. (1,44) Establishes mechanisms to protect victims of all forms of human trafficking, prevent trafficking in persons, and prosecute human traffickers. Provides for the review and amendment of the Combating Trafficking in Persons Act. (2)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (45)

The National Education Policy does not include child labor elimination and prevention strategies. The Commission on the Rights of the Child began drafting a new strategic plan to replace the previous 5-Year Strategic Plan; however, research was unable to determine whether the new strategy includes child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (9,34,45) In 2019, the government drafted a National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2019–2025). (1)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Guyana Decent Work Country Program (2017–2021)†	Aims to improve working conditions and increase respect for international standards, social protection, economic opportunities, and social dialogue. Includes plans to conduct research and raise awareness on child labor, develop a national child labor policy, and establish coordination mechanisms to prevent and respond to child labor and forced labor. (46) During the reporting period, the government began the implementation of its Decent Work Country Program. (1) However, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Guyana Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.
Shelter for Domestic Violence Victims†	Government-funded, NGO-run shelter that houses victims of domestic violence and human trafficking, including children. Provides services, including psychological counseling and practical skills training. (9) Accommodates teenage girls under age 16 who are placed at the shelter at the request of the government's Childcare and Protection Agency. (9) Receives $50,000 annually from the government, and continued to receive funding during the reporting period. (1,48)
Government-Funded School Programs†	School Meals and Uniforms provides hot meals to 16,000 students at schools in the interior and transportation for students in several remote areas. All students in government-run schools, from nursery to secondary school, receive vouchers to purchase school uniforms, shoes, and backpacks. (17) Active in 2019. (1,9) The 5Bs Program provides boats, buses, bicycles, books, and breakfast to school children to improve access to education. (1,14,20,49)
Child Advocacy Centers	Funded by private sector donations and UNICEF, and implemented by the Ministry of Social Protection and NGOs to provide services for abused children. (50) The Ministry of Social Protection's Childcare and Protection Agency oversees the centers and makes referrals. (50) During the reporting period, the government increased the number of Child Advocacy Centers to seven, and the centers were functioning during the reporting period. (1)
Board of Industrial Training†	Government-funded program that aims to deter early school dropouts by providing job skills to at-risk youth between ages 15 and 17 who may not otherwise be able to complete their formal education. (9) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Board of Industrial Training during the reporting period.

The scope of government programs targeting the worst forms of child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including child labor in the mining industry and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (14,48)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guyana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits forced labor.	2019
	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits all commercial sexual exploitation of children by prohibiting the use of children in pornography and prostitution, including in prostitution outside establishments.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits the use of children for illicit activities by prohibiting the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production or trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors trained and responsible for providing enforcement of child labor laws to ensure that a sufficient number of inspectors are available to carry out labor inspections.	2015 – 2019
	Publish information on the Labor Inspectorate's funding, as well as other labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts.	2015 – 2019
	Authorize the Labor Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate receives sufficient resources to monitor the interior, where child labor is most prevalent, and in other remote areas.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure the appropriate application of Articles 41 and 46 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act to protect children from work that may harm their physical health or emotional development.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the Ministry of Social Protection's Trafficking in Persons Unit is sufficiently staffed to carry out its mandate.	2018 – 2019
	Dedicate more resources, including judicial personnel, to address the backlog of cases and ensure that cases are concluded in a timely manner, including cases related to the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including all of its worst forms.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Tripartite Committee engages in regular meetings and coordination efforts.	2014 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the newly drafted 5-Year Strategic Plan on the Rights of the Child and the National Education Policy.	2010 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that children are not prevented from attending school because of transportation costs and lack of infrastructure.	2014 – 2019
	Increase the number of qualified teachers, particularly in rural and interior areas.	2015 – 2019
	Develop new initiatives and expand existing programs to reach all children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including programs addressing child labor in the mining industry and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Guyana Decent Work Country Program and the Board of Industrial Training.	2018 – 2019

In 2019, Haiti made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor made updates to the draft hazardous work list and draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. However, children in Haiti perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and domestic work. Children are placed in orphanages where some are subsequently used for domestic work. Minimum age protections apply only to children with a formal employment contract, which does not comply with international standards requiring all children to be protected. In addition, Haiti lacks a clear, easily applicable minimum age for domestic work and a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. Also, labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties and social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Haiti perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and domestic work. (1-6) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Haiti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	34.4 (815,993)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	34.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary Completion Rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting sugarcane, collecting cut sugarcane, grinding sugarcane, and clearing land for sugarcane production (1)
	Raising livestock (2,9)
	Capturing and processing fish (1,3,9,10)
Industry	Construction, including transport of construction materials such as sand and rocks (1,3,4,10)
	Producing metal crafts (11)
Services	Domestic work (5,12,13)
	Transporting and selling alcohol† and tobacco (3,9)
	Street work, including vending, begging, shining shoes, washing cars; and carrying water, firewood, goods, and luggage in public markets and bus stations (2-4,6,10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, street vending, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-6,15,16)
	Use in illicit activities, including by criminal groups in drug trafficking (9,17)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,10,18,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Haiti

A 2015 study found that there were approximately 286,000 child domestic workers in Haiti, 207,000 of whom were lagging behind in school or had significantly lower school enrollment rates. (6,10,13,20) Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to residential care centers or to relatives or strangers who are expected to provide the children with food, shelter, and schooling in exchange for household work. In practice, some of these children receive care and access to education, while many others become victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (4,5,12,21)

In addition, Haiti has over 750 orphanages that house over 25,000 children who may be vulnerable to human trafficking and child labor in lieu of attending school. (20) According to a Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR) study, the majority of Haiti's orphanages fail to comply with government standards for care. There is evidence that some children in orphanages engage in child labor for domestic work and are prevented from attending school. (20,22-25) In the last 5 years, the government has closed 160 unaccredited orphanages, and is focusing instead on promoting child fostering to prevent child labor in institutions. (20,22-25)

Haitian children are victims of human trafficking internally and externally, primarily to the Dominican Republic, other Caribbean countries, South America, and the United States. NGOs have reported that children illegally crossing the Haiti-Dominican Republic border are often accompanied by adults paid to act as the children's parents or guardians until they reach the Dominican Republic. (3,10,14,26) Some of these children are re-united with relatives in the Dominican Republic, while others engage in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, agriculture, street vending, and begging. (3,6,10,27)

In 2019, the Government of the Dominican Republic continued involuntarily repatriating individuals with irregular migration status to Haiti, pursuant to Dominican law. (28,29) Some of these individuals, including children, are Dominican-born persons of Haitian descent. (30) Some of these repatriated children were residing in Haiti in camps near the Dominican Republic border, where schools and other basic services are not available. In addition, these children may not speak French or Haitian Creole, the languages of instruction in public Haitian schools. (4,16,31,32) These children, including those who have been deported to Haiti or who left voluntarily, are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,32)

The Constitution of Haiti provides free and compulsory primary education. (33-35) However, public schools often charge fees for textbooks, uniforms, and school materials. Because private schools represent approximately 90 percent of existing schools, most Haitian children are enrolled in private schools that charge tuition and other fees, which make education prohibitive to many families. (2-4,36,37) In addition, many children in Haiti are not registered at birth, and unregistered children are not able to access social assistance services and educational programs provided by the government. (9)

Other children, especially in rural areas, do not attend school due to the lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers. Out-of-school children are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (2,4,16) In addition, the Ministry of Education recommends that a child be between ages 11 and 13 when transitioning to secondary school. Overage children must integrate into a special group that attends school during the evening. (33,34,38) However, research did not find evidence that schools provide instruction during the evening for special groups. (39)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Haiti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Haiti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 340 of the Labor Code; Article 10 of the Law Organizing and Regulating Labor (40,41)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 333-334 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children (Act of 2003) (40,42)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 333–336 of the Labor Code (40)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 4 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (40,42)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Article 1.1.1 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (42,43)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Articles 279–281 of the Penal Code; Article 1.1.17 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (38,42,43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 72 of the Law on the Control and Suppression of Illicit Drug Trafficking; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (42,44)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 268 of the Constitution (33)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 70 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (38,42)
Compulsory Education Age	No	15	Article 23 of the Decree on the Reorganization of the Haitian Education System (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 32.1 and 33 of the Constitution (33)

The Labor Code, which supplies the penalty for violations of the minimum age for work, applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (2,39,40) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is 16, children age 15 are vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but also are not yet legally permitted to work. (35,40)

In addition, it is unclear whether there is a minimum age for domestic work because the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children of 2003 (Act of 2003) annulled Chapter 9 of the Labor Code, which set a minimum age for domestic work at age 12. (2,39,40,42)

Haiti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The Labor Code prohibits children under age 18 from working in establishments that sell alcohol and from working at night in industrial enterprises. (41) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover agriculture, an area of work in which children are exposed to hazardous substances and agents and to temperatures that can damage their health. (3,17,18,44-47) In 2019, Haiti’s National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor updated the draft hazardous work list to include agriculture and livestock, mines and quarries, construction, transportation, and domestic work, but the draft list remains unapproved by Parliament for the fifth consecutive year. Research indicates the list will be officially published once a government is ratified. (9,45) However, Haiti has been without a ratified government since March 2019. (9)

Laws related to forced labor are not sufficient, as forced labor is not criminally prohibited. The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for forced labor, including recruitment, transportation, and accommodation for that purpose, but does not independently criminalize forced labor. (43) Research could not find evidence of any other legal provision criminally prohibiting forced labor.

Although Haiti’s Constitution establishes the age for compulsory military recruitment at age 18, and sources suggest recruitment materials set the minimum age for voluntary recruitment at age 18, research could not find evidence of a law that establishes the age for voluntary military recruitment. (9,48,49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST)	Enforces laws related to child labor by receiving complaints, conducting investigations, and referring cases to juvenile courts. (41,50) MAST’s Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR) agents perform child protection inspections and are responsible for accrediting residential care centers. Develops and implements programs to raise awareness of child labor and provide social services to child victims of labor exploitation. (5,10,50)
Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM)	Investigates crimes of the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. Submits investigations to judicial authorities for criminal prosecutions and refers child victims to IBESR. (5) Housed under the Haitian National Police, the BPM maintains 24 offices around the country, including 4 offices along the Haiti-Dominican Republic border. (10,17)
POLIFRONT	Enforces Haiti’s Customs Code and investigates transnational crimes, including child trafficking. Cooperates with the Dominican Republic Border Police. (51,52) The POLIFRONT operates at the border crossings of Ouanaminthe and Anse-a-Pitres, and reportedly plans to have a permanent presence in Malpasse and Belladere (the other two official border crossing points) by 2021. (17,51,53-55)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps in MAST’s authority, including lack of authority to assess penalties, may hinder adequate labor law enforcement.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, MAST allocated $624,500 to the Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR), which employed 103 agents throughout Haiti, in line with the budget and staff for 2018. UNICEF also supported staff salaries and costs of other services. (9,17,45) These agents included 48 child protection agents and approximately 20 social workers to handle child protection cases, including those involving child labor. (9,10,17,45) However, research indicates that the lack of sufficient resources, such as means of transportation, fuel, and appropriately equipped workplaces, hampered MAST's enforcement efforts, including IBESR's capacity to enforce child labor laws by conducting an adequate number of labor inspections. (3,9,17,57,58)

IBESR also manages the "1-3-3" hotline that receives complaints about situations requiring child protection. (10,14,59) However, the hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, leaving rural areas without a mechanism to receive child labor complaints. (16) The number of calls related to child labor received during 2019 is unknown.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (17)	Yes (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (17)	N/A

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (17)	1 (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (9)

In 2019, the Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM) investigated 744 cases of child trafficking, forced child labor, use of children in illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and reported 284 violations. In addition, the BPM reported that 33 defendants were prosecuted by the judicial system for forced labor of minors. (9) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that the BPM's number of agents is inadequate and lack of training, equipment, transportation, and funding hampers its ability to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,10,14,53,60)

Haiti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, the POLIFRONT arrested 51 individuals in connection with 34 suspected cases of human trafficking, and has identified over 120 potential victims of human trafficking since its initial deployment in January 2018. One individual was convicted of human trafficking, and was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment and fined $1,000. (55)

An informal referral mechanism between BPM, IBESR, and NGOs is in place to provide reintegration services to victims of the worst forms of child labor. (9,10,14) BPM also manages the “1-8-8” hotline that receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (9,61) However, like the IBESR “1-3-3” hotline, the “1-8-8” hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, which makes reporting cases involving the worst forms of child labor more difficult in rural areas. (10,20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to combat child labor in Haiti. Chaired by MAST, includes representatives from IBESR, BPM, and local and international organizations. (62) During the reporting period, the National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor met and made updates to the draft hazardous work list and the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (9)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP)	Coordinates actions against human trafficking and provides protection and rehabilitation services to victims. Chaired by IBESR, includes representatives from MAST, BPM, and other ministries. (20,43,63) During the reporting period, the CNLTP helped to organize trafficking in persons trainings for journalists, immigration officials, and representatives from the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman. In July 2019, members of the CNLTP and the USAID-funded Project BEST visited the Northeast Department on a fact-finding mission to learn about existing anti-trafficking efforts in the region and identify potential partners. (55) During the reporting period, CNLTP also collaborated with Project BEST to train 19 immigration officials on the profile of traffickers and potential victims. (55)
Child Protection Working Group	Implements, coordinates, and monitors efforts on child protection, including protection for child domestic workers. Chaired by IBESR, comprises non-governmental stakeholders and officials from various ministries. (64) Holds regular meetings between enforcement agencies (IBESR, BPM, and MAST) with the participation and technical support of UNICEF and other child protection partners. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Protection Policy (2016–2020)	Aims to protect children from abuse, violence, and labor exploitation, and promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children, with a focus on domestic workers. Led by IBESR and supported by international donors. (65,66) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Protection Policy during the reporting period.
National Strategic Development Plan (2014–2019)	Highlighted the need to prohibit child labor to ensure sustained and equitable economic growth. Overseen by the Ministry of Planning and External Cooperation and the Ministry of Economy and Finance. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Strategic Development Plan during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government resumed activities under the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (17,46,71)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Protecting the Working Conditions of People/ Proteje Kondisyon Travay Moun (2013–2019)	$9.99 million USDOL-funded project implemented by Catholic Relief Services to provide services to households and children engaged in or at risk of engaging in child labor or other exploitative working conditions in agriculture. Concluded in March 2019. (72,73) The project reached roughly 7,343 children with educational services and 4,946 households to improve their livelihoods. In addition, the project supported the capacity of the Haitian Civil Registrar system to legally document more than 3,100 individuals. (74,75) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Government Child Shelter, Census, and National Child Protection Database†	Government program to support child protection. Through IBESR, implements the government's regulatory framework for residential care centers, such as orphanages and shelters, collects information on vulnerable children, and tracks them through the National Child Protection Database. (80) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Special Program of Free Education (PROSGATE)‡	Replaced the National Free Education Program. (81,82) Aims to increase poor children's access to education. Includes school grants intended to eliminate school fees and for accelerated learning programs for students who are lagging in school. (83) In 2019, PROSGATE disbursed 16 million and 540,000 Gourdes in the departments of South, Southeast and Nippes to support school budgets. (84)
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2021)	$24 million UNICEF-funded program supporting the government's efforts to improve education, health, social inclusion, and protection for children in Haiti. In 2019, provided 37,346 children with school supplies. (80,85-90)
Providing an Education of Quality in Haiti (2016–2022)	$30 million World Bank-implemented program that aims to strengthen public management of the education sector, improve learning conditions, and increase enrollment of students in selected public and non-public primary schools. (91,92) As of June 2019, provided community education grants to 8,546 primary school students. (93)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (79,94)

Despite IBESR's efforts to collect information for the National Child Protection Database, it does not fully capture all relevant information, including the number of displaced street children and children engaged in domestic work. Although Haiti has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking. (10,95)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Haiti (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections apply to all children, including those without formal employment contracts.	2014 – 2019
	Clarify the minimum age for work, including for domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities, and ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include work in hazardous agricultural environments.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure the law criminally prohibits forced labor.	2019
	Ensure that the law establishes a minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military, at age 18 or at age 16, with safeguards for voluntariness.	2018 – 2019
	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age for work.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspectors and whether labor inspectors received adequate training, the number and type of labor inspections, and violations and penalties related to child labor.	2013 – 2019
	Authorize the inspectorate to assess penalties.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the number of labor and criminal law enforcement agents, and training and resources for labor and criminal law enforcement agencies, are sufficient to adequately enforce laws related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2019
	Establish penalties that are sufficient to serve as a deterrent for employing children in contravention of the Labor Code.	2009 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Expand the hotlines operated by the Brigade for the Protection of Minors and the Institute of Social Welfare and Research to facilitate reporting of child exploitation cases in areas beyond Port-au-Prince, including in rural areas; publish information on the number of hotline calls related to child labor.	2013 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that policies to prevent or combat child labor are implemented, including the National Child Protection Policy and the National Strategic Development Plan.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by removing school-related fees in public schools; increase the number of schools and teachers, especially in rural areas and camps near the border with the Dominican Republic; ensure that public schools address language barriers; meet the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including recent arrivals from the Dominican Republic, unregistered children, and child domestic workers; and ensure that children who start their education late or repeat grades are allowed to transition to secondary school.	2009 – 2019
	Expand the National Child Protection Database, including by identifying displaced street children and children in domestic work.	2010 – 2019
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that all social programs are active and implemented, including the Government Child Shelter, Census, and National Child Protection Database.	2019

In 2019, Honduras made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government established reciprocal referral mechanisms to ensure child laborers and victims of child-related crimes receive access to social services. It also began implementing its new National Labor Inspection Strategy, which includes monitoring and evaluation of child labor-specific inspections and identifies child labor as an enforcement priority.

Furthermore, government agencies coordinated to conduct multiple joint operations targeting child labor in San Pedro Sula and Cortes.

However, children in Honduras engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in illicit activities, including selling and trafficking drugs. Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee and melons. Labor and criminal law enforcement agencies lacked financial and human resources and the government did not adequately report comprehensive data related to its criminal law enforcement efforts. In addition, the government's social programs that address child labor in agriculture have not addressed the problem nationwide, and the government lacks social programs to eliminate child labor in other sectors, including fishing, mining, and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Honduras engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in illicit activities, including selling and trafficking drugs. Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee and melons. (1-5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Honduras.

	Forced labor in fishing, mining, construction, and in the service industry (5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Honduras are subject to commercial sexual exploitation by family members and friends. (4,5) Children are also forced to work as street vendors and domestic servants. Gangs force children to commit extortion and murder, engage in prostitution, transport weapons, traffic drugs, and serve as lookouts. (4,5) In addition, Honduras is a destination country for child sex tourists from the United States and Canada. (5)

In 2019, Honduras’ National Institute of Statistics published updated data on child labor which showed that 364,765 children between the ages of 5 and 17 were working in 2019, with 67 percent working in rural areas and over half engaged in labor in agriculture. (4) Reports indicate that children from indigenous and African-descendant groups are particularly vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (1,32,35,38) Boys from the Miskito Afro-descendant community are vulnerable to forced labor in fishing, mining, construction, hospitality, and in the service sector. (5) Children who lack economic and educational opportunities are the most vulnerable to child labor and are among the most likely to migrate to other countries. Once en route, migrant children are vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (32,33,39)

In Honduras, access to education is often limited, and some reports indicate that 220,000 to 1.5 million children around the country lack access to education. More than 75 percent of these children live in rural areas, where the lack of funding for schools, and in many cases lack of secondary schools, remains a problem. (1,36) Furthermore, some families are unable to afford costs such as uniforms, school fees, and transportation. (4) Violence originating from gang activity also presents barriers to access for both children and educators. (1,4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Honduras has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Honduras' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work compared to the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* No conscription (41)

Honduras' new Penal Code, which would have broadened, and in some cases lowered, some penalties for a range of crimes including human trafficking, did not take effect as anticipated in 2019 due to objections from international organizations and local NGOs. Critics argued that penalties in the law for official corruption were weak relative to other crimes and that certain measures limited the freedom of the press. (49-51)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor and Social Security (STSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of Labor and Social Security (STSS)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces child labor laws through the General Directorate of Labor Inspections, which was created by the 2017 labor inspection law. (4,52,53)
Public Ministry's Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children (OSPC)	Prosecutes crimes with child victims, including crimes related to child trafficking, forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Coordinates with the National Police to investigate crimes and protect victims. (4,26,54)
Public Ministry's Technical Agency for Criminal Investigations	Investigates and provides technical support for criminal prosecutions conducted by the Public Ministry, including by OSPC, such as those related to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child pornography. (4,18,22,26)
Public Ministry's Unit Against Trafficking in Persons, Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Illicit Traffic in Persons (UTESCTP)	Established in 2018 under the Attorney General's office, coordinates with domestic and international law enforcement agencies to carry out anti-trafficking in persons operations and prosecutions. Manages a hotline to register trafficking in persons complaints. (5,55)
Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF)	Formulates, coordinates, and implements national plans concerning children and their families; monitors children's rights, including by investigating complaints of child labor and ensuring that victims receive government services; and coordinates state efforts with civil society institutions to protect children. Overseen by the Secretariat of Development and Social Inclusion. (4,22,56-58)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the STSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of human resources.

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (1)	Yes (55)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (1)	Yes (4)

In 2019, Honduras established a reciprocal referral mechanism, which directs authorities and specialists in the country responsible for responding to child labor situations to refer children to various government-sponsored social programs. The government also published implementing regulations in support of the 2017 labor inspection law, which created the General Directorate for Labor Inspections (DGIT) under STSS and significantly increased penalties for labor violations. (4,53,61)

During the reporting period, DGIT conducted 32 routine, child labor-specific inspections nationwide. Meanwhile, the National Commission for Human Rights coordinated with the Sub-Commission on the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor to inspect 10 companies in the city of La Ceiba, and encountered three cases of children involved in hazardous work. (62) STSS and civil society partners have all indicated that the number of inspections conducted is insufficient to address the scope of labor violations in the country, including child labor violations. (1,4,36,63) In particular, reports indicate that the STSS conducts most inspections in the urban areas of Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula, while rural areas and indigenous communities, in which hazardous activities in agriculture and fishing or diving are concentrated, have had insufficient inspections to address the scope of the problem. (64) In 2019, no inspections were conducted in the informal sector, in which child labor is often encountered in Honduras. (4)

Labor union confederations, employer organizations, and human rights organizations have indicated that the level of funding and resources for DGIT is insufficient to enforce child labor laws nationwide. (1,36) In 2019, inspectors did not have sufficient funds to cover the supplies and transportation necessary to conduct inspections. (4) Furthermore, reports indicate that the Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF) lacks sufficient resources to adequately carry out its mandates. (22,26,36)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Honduras' workforce, which includes over 3.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Honduras would employ about 249 labor inspectors. (65,66) The STSS noted that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. (4) Furthermore, while inspectors received training in 2019 on child labor issues, STSS indicated that more training is needed. (4,62)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of financial resources.

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	Yes (55)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (1)	Yes (4)

In 2019, DINAF and the Unit Against Trafficking in Persons, Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Illicit Traffic in Persons (UTESCTP) coordinated with the Public Ministry's Women and Children's Unit to investigate cases related to human trafficking, child pornography, and other worst forms of child labor. (4) DINAF housed 23 children and adolescent victims of trafficking in persons in specialized protection centers in 2019. (55)

During the reporting period, a local NGO that cooperates with the government identified 277 child victims of human trafficking, including victims of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. Honduras' Immediate Response Team of the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Sexual, Commercial, and Trafficking Exploitation (CICESCT) rescued 23 minors from sexual trafficking, forced servitude, and other exploitative crimes. (4) Two individuals were prosecuted during the reporting period for the commercial sexual exploitation of a girl age 17. One of the individuals was sentenced to 11 years in prison and fined $48,000 and the other is awaiting trial. (55) In 2019, the Supreme Court of Justice convicted four individuals on child pornography charges. (55) The National Police, meanwhile, executed 12 operations as part of its Odysseus campaign targeting organized criminal groups, trafficking in persons, and other crimes. The operations resulted in 32 arrests and the rescue of 41 minors from criminal organizations. (55) The total number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor in 2019 was unknown because the government did not provide disaggregated data for inclusion in this report. It also did not provide information on initial training for criminal investigators.

In 2019, CICESCT trained approximately 36,200 people on trafficking in persons prevention, victim identification, risks, and providing adequate protection to victims. The training sessions were conducted throughout the country for government employees, lawyers, judges, prosecutors, law enforcement agents, tourism professionals, and civil society. (55) CICESCT also trained 440 tourism professionals on the risks of child sex tourism and convened 32 government and civil society organizations during the reporting period to coordinate responses to human trafficking crimes. (55)

Reports indicate that the level of funding and resources available to criminal law enforcement agencies is insufficient to meet agency needs. (58) For example, CICESCT indicated that it has only five staff members on the Immediate Response Team and limited resources inhibits its ability to respond to human trafficking cases countrywide. Similarly, the Public Ministry was also understaffed and lacked sufficient resources to investigate and prosecute human trafficking crimes. (55)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts on child labor issues. Chaired by STSS and includes officials from eight government ministries, DINAF, the Supreme Court, and other government entities. (52,67,68) Oversees regional sub-commissions, led by STSS and DINAF officials, which implement national efforts at the local level. (52,67,68) During the reporting period, STSS continued to carry out joint actions with partners under the commission, including joint operations ODISEO VI and Abeono , both aimed at targeting child labor in high-risk neighborhoods in San Pedro Sula and Cortes. (4) The committee convened twice during the reporting period. (62)
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Sexual, Commercial, and Trafficking Exploitation (CICESCT)	Prevents, tends to the victims of, and prosecutes crimes of sexual exploitation and trafficking in persons. Comprising representatives from 35 organizations, including several government ministries, NGOs, and private companies. (69) Oversees 19 local CICESCT committees and implements the Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking. (35) During the reporting period, referred 20 child victims of exploitation to DINAF to receive services such as protection, food, health care, and psychological support. (4) In 2019, launched a website to provide the public with information on trafficking in persons. (56) Also in 2019, joined the United Nation's Blue Heart Campaign against Trafficking in Persons. (55,70)
Migration Task Force	Convenes several government ministries to collaborate on addressing irregular migration, including combating the risks associated with trafficking in persons. Initiated in 2018 and chaired by Honduras' First Lady Ana Garcia de Hernandez. (3) In 2019, First Lady Garcia de Hernandez met with U.S. officials to highlight the task force's work, including focusing on the reintegration of returned child migrants. (71,72)
Secretariat of Social Development and Inclusion (SEDIS)	Coordinates social protection policies and the provision of services to vulnerable populations. (73) SEDIS reported that in 2019, it provided services to 2 million Hondurans through various assistance programs. (74)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for the Eradication of Child Labor in Honduras	Aims to eradicate all forms of child labor by 2020 and improve the government's response to child labor issues. Works at the national, regional, and sub-regional levels and addresses poverty, health education, and social development. (75) Implemented by STSS. (22) World Vision and the National Commission for Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor collaborated to develop a new country prevention strategy (2021–2025). (4)
Strategic Plan to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor (2016–2020)	Identifies lines of action for preventing and eliminating child labor, including by increasing child labor law enforcement, strengthening engagement with the private sector, developing procedures for inter-agency coordination, and developing social programs to support children removed from child labor. (68) Implemented by STSS and other executive and judicial branch agencies, and employers', workers', and other civil society organizations. (68) Includes the United States–Honduras Labor Rights Monitoring and Action Plan, which aims to improve the enforcement of labor laws, including laws related to child labor, by implementing legal and policy reforms, strengthening STSS, enhancing enforcement activities, and increasing outreach efforts. (76) As part of the Strategic Plan, in 2019 Honduras began implementing its National Labor Inspection Strategy in cooperation with ILO and the U.S. Department of Labor. (4,77)
Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking in Honduras (2016–2022)	Establishes national priorities to combat commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking in four principal areas: (1) prevention and awareness; (2) investigation, prosecution, and punishment of violations; (3) detection, assistance, and protection of victims; and (4) coordination and cooperation. (78) During the reporting period, STSS participated in the Latin American and Caribbean Free of Child Labor Regional Initiative, an effort to strengthen coordination in the elimination of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. (4)
National Labor Inspection Strategy †	Aims to adopt a results-driven focus to the overhaul of Honduras' labor inspection processes. Highlights child labor inspections as a priority for targeting and evaluation, and identifies other groups vulnerable to labor exploitation, such as indigenous and rural communities. It was finalized in December of 2018 and implemented in 2019. (77)
U.S.–Honduras Labor Rights Monitoring and Action Plan	Aims to improve the enforcement of labor laws, including laws related to child labor, by implementing legal and policy reforms, strengthening the STSS, enhancing enforcement activities, and increasing outreach efforts. (76) In 2019, Honduras established a reciprocal referral mechanism as part of the plan. (4) The action plan was extended through 2019 and extended again for an undetermined period into 2020. (82)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (79–81,83–87)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Better Life Voucher (Bono Vida Mejor) †	Conditional cash transfer program that aims to reduce poverty by providing financial assistance to households after parents ensure their children participate in health, education, nutrition, and other programs. (39,88) The Honduran government announced that it succeeded in distributing approximately $20 million in cash transfers during the reporting period. (89)
Program to Combat Child Forced Begging †	DINAF program that identifies and rescues children who are subjected to forced begging and raises awareness of child forced begging through media. (64,90) DINAF indicated during the reporting period that it had initiated a collaborative program with UNICEF to begin formally registering children who receive comprehensive care to obtain better statistics on the number of street children in Honduras. (90)
Program for the Reintegration of Returned Unaccompanied Migrant Children †	Government program that assists unaccompanied migrant children who have been returned to Honduras. Implemented by the National Institute for Migration, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, DINAF, SEDIS, and the National Center for Social Sector Information. (91) In 2019, Honduras hosted the regional summit of experts on the Return and Adequate and Comprehensive Reintegration of Child and Adolescent Migrants in Northern Central America, Mexico, and the United States. Honduras was chosen as the host because of its work on the issue through its return and reintegration program. (92)
Program to Prevent Sex Tourism Involving Children and Adolescents †	Government program that aims to raise awareness and provide training on sex tourism for the tourism industry. Implemented by the Honduran Tourist Board, the Ministry of Tourism, and the Honduras Tourism Institute. (93) In 2019, Honduras hosted local and regional government ministries, law enforcement personnel, and tourism industry representatives in Roatan for a day-long training on the Prevention of Child and Adolescent Sexual Exploitation in Tourism. (94)

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor through direct services to Honduran youth, capacity building with the Honduran government, and technical assistance to businesses. These projects include: $2 million Addressing Child Labor and Forced Labor in the Coffee Supply Chain in Honduras (2017–2020); $16.5 million Youth Pathways Central America (2015–2020); and $8.7 million Bright Futures (2014–2019). During the reporting period, Bright Futures established 87 Child Labor Prevention Committees in various municipalities to work at a local level to monitor and prevent child labor abuses. (4) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (67)

Although the Government of Honduras funds or participates in social programs to address child labor, research did not identify programs that specifically target children working in sectors, such as fishing, mining, and domestic work, or that address the illegal recruitment of children into gang-related activities. In addition, social programs that address child labor in agriculture do not appear to be sufficient to address the scope of the problem nationwide.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Honduras (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum working age of 14 to conform to the compulsory education age of 17.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that labor and criminal law enforcement agencies have sufficient funding and resources to carry out their mandates nationwide.	2010 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO's technical advice.	2010 – 2019
	Carry out labor inspections in areas in which child labor is prevalent, such as rural areas, the informal sector, and indigenous communities in which children engage in agriculture and fishing or diving.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that all labor inspectors receive adequate training on child labor issues.	2014 – 2019
	Provide complete information on labor law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, such as the number of worksite inspections conducted and number of child labor violations identified.	2019
	Provide complete information on criminal efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, such as training for new investigators, total number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and number of convictions obtained.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Increase access to education by increasing funding to schools, building more schools, particularly in rural areas, enhancing efforts to protect students from gang recruitment and violence, and removing barriers such as school fees and costs for uniforms, and transportation.	2014 – 2019
	Expand social programs that address child labor in agriculture and create programs to assist children engaged in child labor in fishing, mining, domestic service, and illicit gang activity.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure social programs reach the children who are most vulnerable to child labor, including children of African descent and indigenous children.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, India made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government began digitizing the records of shelter homes throughout the country; shut down 539 illegal shelter homes in Maharashtra, Jharkand, Karnataka, Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh; and convicted a Bihar shelter owner and 18 others of sex trafficking 44 girls from a shelter. In addition, the National Child Labor Project Scheme rescued from child labor and rehabilitated 66,169 children in 2018–2019, up from 47,635 during 2017–2018. The government enacted the Protection Of Children From Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act, which includes new penalties for perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, and approved a Memorandum of Understanding with the Government of Burma on enhancing bilateral cooperation for the prevention of trafficking in persons. Furthermore, the Tamil Nadu State Government issued standard operating procedures to support efforts to eradicate the bonded labor system in the state by 2021. However, children in India engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor producing garments and quarrying stones. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of thread and yarn. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, 1,300 of India’s approximately 9,000 government-run, government-funded shelters that house children continued to lack official registration from the government, allowing them to operate with little or no oversight and putting children at risk for exploitation, including commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, despite the identification of grievous abuses – including child trafficking of residents – found in over 100 government-funded and/or government-run shelters in Bihar state in 2018 and additional instances identified in other states in 2019, the government only prosecuted and convicted individuals in one of these cases in 2019. Hazardous work prohibitions do not include all occupations in which children work for long periods of time in unsafe and unhealthy environments, and penalties for employing children are insufficient to deter violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in India engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor producing garments and quarrying stones. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of thread and yarn. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in India.

Sector/ Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including producing hybrid cottonseed and hybrid vegetable seeds, cultivating cotton and rice, and harvesting sugarcane, tobacco, and tea (5-16) Processing cashew nuts and seafood (17-20)
Industry	Manufacturing garments, weaving silk fabric and carpets, producing raw silk thread (sericulture), spinning cotton thread and yarn, and embellishing textiles with silver and gold (zari) (16,21-26) Manufacturing glass bangles,† imitation jewelry, locks,† and brassware,† and polishing gems (16,27-33) Rolling cigarettes (bidis)† and manufacturing incense sticks (agarbatti),† fireworks,† and matches† (16,34,35) Manufacturing footwear and bags, producing leather goods and/or accessories,† and stitching soccer balls (16,36-39) Producing bricks,† quarrying and breaking sandstone† and granite,† and mining and collecting mica† and coal† (2,16,40-48)
Services	Domestic work (16,49-51) Working in hotels, food service, and tourism services (16,48,52-55) Street work, including scavenging, sorting garbage, and selling trinkets (16,48,56,57)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in agriculture, including producing hybrid cottonseed and harvesting sugarcane, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (48,58,59) Forced labor in producing bricks, quarrying stones, and in rice mills (2,48,60-65) Forced labor in producing garments and carpets, spinning cotton thread and yarn, and embroidering silver and gold into textiles (zari) (1,23,25,48,66,67) Forced labor in producing bangles, imitation jewelry, leather goods, plastic goods, footwear, and bags (30,32,33,68-72) Forced labor in domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (49,57,59,73-75) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (16,48,59,76) Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (59,77) Use in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including the use of children to commit theft, traffic other children, and recruit other children for commercial sexual exploitation (16,59,78-80)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Within India, children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and for forced labor in domestic service. (57,59) Apprehending child traffickers has become more challenging for law enforcement because traffickers are utilizing technology to reach customers and receive electronic payment, eliminating the need to be centrally located in brothels. (57) Children are also forced to work as bonded laborers in brick kilns and stone quarries to pay off family debts owed to moneylenders and employers. (2,48,57) Children from India’s rural areas migrate or are trafficked for employment in industries such as spinning mills and cottonseed production in which they are forced to work in hazardous environments for little or no pay. (48,58)

Non-state armed groups reportedly force children to serve as spies, couriers, and soldiers in the states of Bihar, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand, and Maharashtra, and as soldiers in Jammu and Kashmir. (59,77,81,82) Maoist groups sometimes used children as human shields in confrontations with security forces. (59,81,83) In addition, some female child soldiers reported that commanders of these non-state armed groups recruited and used them in part for sexual exploitation, including practices indicative of sexual slavery. (59,81) Unverified reports from the UN indicated that national security forces used children as informants and spies. (59,81, 161)

Child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking are more likely to be from marginalized groups, such as low-caste Hindus, members of tribal communities, and religious minorities. (48,57,84,85) Children from marginalized groups also face barriers to accessing education. Teachers sometimes subject these children to discrimination and harassment. (81,86) In addition, the lack of well-trained teachers, schools, separate washrooms for girls, inadequate infrastructure, and transportation options creates barriers and limits access to education. Refugees who are not granted visas or provided identity cards by the UNHCR often are not able to access education services. (48) However, children up to the age of 14, rescued from child labor, have the ability to attend school, including the option to take vocational trainings. (57)

The Government of India does not collect or publish data specifically on exploitative child labor, nor does it make available the raw data from the national census. (48)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

India has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in India's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In August 2019, Parliament passed amendments to the Protection Of Children From Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act, 2019 (POCSO) which includes new penalties allowing the death penalty in particular cases, including those involving the gang rape or rape of a child below the age of 12. (57,81,162,164) In addition, in 2018 the Code of Criminal Procedure was amended to require investigations for the rape of a child to be completed within two months. (57,96,162)

The Trafficking of Persons (Prevention, Protection and Rehabilitation) Bill, which was drafted in 2018, seeks to criminalize and enhance penalties for aggravated forms of trafficking, including trafficking for the purposes of forced labor, bonded labor, and begging. (99) However, the draft legislation has to be approved by both houses of parliament and then approved by the President of India to become law; no progress was made toward enacting the bill in 2019. (100,101)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (87,97) Despite evidence that children work for long periods in unsafe and unhealthy environments in spinning mills, garment production, and carpet making, children ages 14 to 18 are not prohibited from working in occupations related to these sectors. (16,21,22,81,88) Lastly, while sources report that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into India's Armed Forces is age 16 and that individuals must be age 18 to be deployed, research could not pinpoint where this criteria resides in Indian law or regulation. (102,103)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of state government labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Government Labor Inspectorates	Conduct labor inspections, including inspections for child labor. Enforce child labor laws, including assessing penalties for violations found during inspections. (100) Refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (91)
State and Local Police	Enforce laws pertaining to child labor and human trafficking. (102) Submit information to District Magistrates to determine if a case should be prosecuted in District Court. (104) Refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (91)
Ministry of Home Affairs – Anti-Trafficking Operations Division – State and District-Level Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTUs)	Report to district police chiefs. (57) Investigate cases of domestic and international human trafficking. (57,102) Established in approximately 350 local police jurisdictions throughout India, but many AHTUs lack sufficient funding, human resources, and infrastructure - including vehicles and computers - needed to adequately perform their work. (57,96) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Home Affairs delegated $131,000 for establishing AHTUs in the 62 districts of the country without them. (101) In August, operationalized a Cyber Crime Reporting Portal - overseen by the Ministry of Home Affairs - to enable online reporting of complaints, including those related to child pornography and online solicitation of children. (57,96)
Central Bureau of Investigation – Anti-Human Trafficking Unit and Criminal Investigation Department (CID)	Investigates and prosecutes cases involving the kidnapping and trafficking of women and children by professional gangs operating across multiple states. Takes on cases by request of, or in agreement with, state governments. (105) During the reporting period, 250 officers attended a first of its kind training on recognizing precursors and indicators of human trafficking through the misuse of U.S. and Schengen travel documents. (57) The Criminal Investigation Department (CID) (also referred to as “Crime Branch”) is a unit of the police force in each state. There are 36 CIDs across India. (96) Manages the 24-hour Helpline No. 011 for reporting cases of “Illegal Human Trafficking Especially Trafficking of Children & Women.” (57,106)
National Investigation Agency (NIA)	Investigates terror-related cases. (48) Mandate expanded by the central government in 2019 to investigate and prosecute trafficking in persons cases that have multiple state or international ramifications. (48,57,96,107)
Child Welfare Committees	Refer children in need of care and protection to welfare services providers under the Integrated Child Protection Scheme, including children involved in hazardous work, begging, human trafficking, and those living on the streets. (57,91) 710 committees exist across the 660 districts in India. (75)
Vigilance Committees	Rescue, release, and rehabilitate bonded laborers and family members. Assembled at the district and sub-division levels by the District Magistrate. (89)

In July 2019, the government passed the National Investigation Agency (Amendment) Act, which expanded the National Investigation Agency's (NIA) mandate to allow for the investigation of human trafficking cases. (48,57,101,107) Egregious cases of human trafficking that have trans-state or international border ramifications will now be transferred from state authorities to the NIA and can be tried in special courts constituted for this purpose. (48,57) As a result, in September 2019, the NIA began investigating cases in Hyderabad, West Bengal, Jharkhand, and Bangladesh, which resulted in the disruption of several interstate and cross-border human trafficking rings, including the arrest and prosecution of multiple suspected traffickers. (96)

The enforcement of labor laws is overseen by state government labor ministries, while criminal law enforcement is overseen by the state police. Labor law enforcement officers typically coordinate with the state police on cases through the Office of the District Magistrate. (48)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in India took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the state government labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including training for labor inspectors.

The Constitution of India gives state governments primary responsibility for the enforcement of labor laws. (100) Although the central government seeks to collect data on national and state actions to address child labor violations, the Government of India did not provide information on the number of violations for which financial or other penalties were imposed and collected. Yet, in an answer to a Parliamentary question, the MOLE stated that 2,451,390 rupees (approximately $35,000) had been collected by all state governments in fines imposed on child labor violators during the reporting period; the number of cases that yielded these penalties is unknown. (48,96) Penalties available under the law include imprisonment for a minimum of 6 months up to 2 years and/or fines ranging from $300 to $700. (48,110-113) However, current laws are insufficient to deter employers from hiring children because imprisonment is rare and maximum fines are infrequently levied. (87)

The government neither releases data on the labor inspectorate budget nor the number of labor inspectors, but reports that it has a sufficient number of inspectors and that inspectors have sufficient office facilities,

India

transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out inspections. (48,114) However, ILO and NGOs reports indicate that training for labor inspectors is inadequate, that the number of labor inspections carried out is insufficient given the size and population of the country, and the response time to complaints is too long. (48,96,114)

State government labor inspectors plan and conduct labor inspections, which are generally targeted at specific sectors or geographical areas known to involve child labor. Although labor inspectors are permitted to conduct unannounced inspections, due to social and cultural barriers, inspections of private homes and farms are done only on receipt of a complaint. (48) In addition, The Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions Code, 2019, which was introduced by the Lower House of Parliament in July 2019, remains pending in the Upper House of Parliament. (96,114, 163)

During the reporting period, authorities in some states acted to identify child bonded labor victims, but penalties assessed were insufficient to deter violations and criminal prosecutions were rarely initiated. Authorities in Rajasthan state rescued and released 77 child bonded laborers, but only filed one First Information Report (FIR). (96,115) While Telangana authorities identified more than 2,499 bonded labor victims through its annual child labor identification drive, and levied fines against 431 offenders totaling INR 1.87 million ($26,338), it only registered criminal cases against seven suspects. The National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) ordered law enforcement and district officials to provide release certificates to bonded labor victims, but did not enforce a penalty for non-compliance. (96,115) Research indicates that while the NHRC was often effective in securing release certificates, it required significant time and persistent follow-up from NGOs in order to do so. (96,115)

The V.V. Giri National Labor Institute, an autonomous body of MOLE, conducted six training programs in 2019, with participants from state labor departments, local village-level elected representatives, state and federal government police officials, trade union leaders, and civil society representatives. These trainings focused on proper interpretation of the Child Labor Act, how to identify and rescue child laborers, and the roles of stakeholders and government agencies in the rescue and rehabilitation of child laborers. (96,101)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in India took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of data on state government efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict crimes involving child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (100)	Yes (96)

Number of Investigations	Unknown (100)	Unknown (48)
Number of Violations Found	942 (113)	Unknown (48)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1,168 (48)	Unknown (48)
Number of Convictions	690 (48)	Unknown (48)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (100)	Yes (96)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (100)	Yes (48)

Police officers have limited access to training opportunities on laws related to the worst forms of child labor and access to trainings varies from state to state. Some NGOs claim the training is inadequate. (48)

State governments have primary responsibility for criminal law enforcement. (110,116) In July 2019 in Hyderabad, India's Vice President released and distributed 300 copies of the "Training Manual on Home Management for Homes Meant for Sex Trafficked Victims" to state governments in Telangana, Andhra Pradesh, Odisha, and Jharkhand for use by shelter homes in these states. Sources report changes in caregivers' perceptions since the release of the manual, from seeing victims as being custodial responsibilities to viewing them with more compassion and empathy. (57,96,116) A total of 87 government officials in all four states, as well as staff from one shelter home in each of the four states, received training using this manual from the Ministry of Women and Child Development. (96,116) The special Protection Of Children From Sexual Offences Act Courts are designated to hear POCSO cases related to trafficking of minors for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation, and according to information presented by the Minister for Law and Justice, there were 240,000 pending POCSO cases in the country as of December 31, 2019. (57,116)

During the reporting period, police and child protection officers in some states successfully conducted raids and other law enforcement actions to rescue children from hazardous child labor and forced labor, with large numbers of children withdrawn in Gujarat, Telangana, and Delhi states. (81,101,108) In addition, some officials suspected of child sex trafficking were arrested during the reporting period, including in Bihar and Maharashtra states. (96) In addition, in June 2019, four police officers were convicted for the 2018 gang rape and murder of a girl in Jammu and Kashmir, with one police officer given a life sentence in jail and the remaining three police officers given 5-year jail sentences. (81,96)

Despite these positive efforts, there were credible allegations during the reporting period of government officials and police officers accepting bribes from traffickers in return for protection from prosecution, as well as unconfirmed allegations of leaks from police to sites where investigations would be occurring, allowing enough notice for suspected traffickers to escape. Tamil Nadu state authorities, for example, acknowledged that some local politicians benefited with impunity from child sex trafficking and forced begging rings. (57,96) In the Delhi capital region, while the Delhi Commission for Women (DCW) identified multiple cases of child sex trafficking in unregistered spas in 2019, in some cases police reportedly did not file the required FIRs following arrests. (96,115) In one such case, the DWC summoned local police to explain its delay to file an FIR against the suspects. (115)

In late 2019 and early 2020, the National Crime Records Bureau, which collects law enforcement data from state governments regarding criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor, released a report containing data from 2017 and 2018. (57,101,117,118) The report indicates that Rajasthan state had the highest identification of child trafficking, with 886 cases, followed by West Bengal with 450 cases. (117) In addition, the Bihar government reportedly rescued 395 children from traffickers in 2017, 366 of whom were engaged in forced child labor. The Bihar Police also registered 121 alleged cases against traffickers in 2017, but failed to file any charges against the suspects and achieved no convictions. (117) In addition, the data show an overall decrease of 38 percent in the number of victims of human trafficking identified in 2017 and 2018 compared to 2016 data. (57,101) Data also report a 30 percent increase in sexual abuse of young women in shelter homes in 2018 compared with the previous year. (57)

Efforts to combat bonded labor are hampered by a lack of awareness among workers that they are being exploited and employers who may be ignorant to the crimes they are committing. (51,57,76,116,119) Perpetrators of bonded labor must be convicted before freed laborers are able to receive a release certificate that is required for obtaining compensation under the Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborer or other welfare schemes, which provide access to cash rehabilitation awards, subsidized housing, and free healthcare and education to children. (57,76,81,96,119) The Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi has issued standard operating procedures for the immediate release of financial assistance to adults and children rescued from bonded labor. However, some other state governments lack similar procedures, sometimes failed to recognize bonded labor cases, and often did not issue release certificates or provide more than the initial financial assistance to bonded labor victims. (57,81,101,112,120,121) In addition, an absence of fast-track courts to handle bonded labor cases and low conviction rates make it difficult for victims to receive benefits, including cash rehabilitation awards ranging from $1,300-3,900. (57,76,96,119) Delays in distributing financial assistance reportedly contributed to the re-victimization of bonded laborers, including children. (59,122)

Out of approximately 9,000 government-run, government-funded shelters for vulnerable individuals, including children, roughly 1,300 were not officially registered with the government. State-level Social Welfare Departments (SWDs) responsible for issuing operating licenses were slow to do so, which allowed shelters to operate with little or no oversight. (59,81,116) According to local NGOs, in some states where SWDs were not issuing licenses, unscrupulous entities took advantage of the situation and operated shelters illegally without a license. In other instances, shelter owners received grant funding from the government using their old licenses, while in the process of applying for a new license as stipulated in the amended Juvenile Justice Act. (96) In several instances, despite allegations of abuse, some shelters continued operating due to political connections. (59,81,96) During the reporting period, a continued lack of oversight and failure to investigate suspected trafficking crimes created an atmosphere of impunity for shelter home employees and government officials in government-run, government-funded shelter homes across the country. (57,59,96,115) Children residing in shelter homes were sometimes subject to child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in domestic work. (57,115) In addition, unsafe conditions and forcible detention in these shelter homes prompted some commercial sexual exploitation victims—including children—to run away from the facilities. (57,59)

As of March 2019, police had documented at least 156 children, including victims of commercial sexual exploitation, missing from 6 shelters across the country. (59,81,116) At least one shelter owner reportedly sold residents for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation, and an NGO in Andhra Pradesh operating two government-funded child care institutions (CCIs) forced children in their care into commercial sexual exploitation and domestic labor. (57,59,81,115) After repeated recommendations by the Child Welfare Committee, officials closed the CCIs and moved the children to government-run shelters. However, the criminal investigations into the abuse at these CCIs were dropped because police failed to file the charge sheets within the required timeframe. (57,115) In 2018, two police superintendents in Uttar Pradesh allegedly sent more than 405 children to a government-funded shelter home in violation of the district government's orders; the destination shelter was accused of drugging and forcing 23 children into trafficking for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) conducted investigations into both of these allegations, and filed two FIRs in this case during the reporting period. (51,96,115,161)

A 2018 report commissioned by the Bihar state government noted abuse “varying in forms and degrees of intensity,” was reported to be prevalent in almost all 110 government-run, government-funded women and childcare institutions surveyed, and the report also noted “grave concerns” in 17 institutions that required immediate attention. (96) The CBI filed First Information Reports (FIRs)—written documents detailing complaints lodged with the police—against some of the Bihar state-funded shelter homes in which the TISS report had noted abuse, including charges such as “causing death by negligence.” (81,115) The Bihar state government took over the management of all NGO-run, government-funded shelters in the state. (57) The CBI also completed investigations into all 17 shelters flagged for immediate attention. (81,115) Of the 17 investigations, the CBI filed charges against 13 shelter homes and successfully prosecuted one case. The CBI filed an additional 19 FIRs against some of the other 94 Bihar state-funded shelter homes in which the audit had noted abuse, including for charges such as “causing death by negligence.” (96) On January 20, 2020, Brajesh Thakur, owner of the Muzaffarpur shelter and former legislator, was convicted along with 18 others of abuses under the POCSO Act and the Juvenile Justice Act for victimizing 44 girls between the ages of 7 and 17 for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation; the trial's venue was moved to New Delhi to ensure accountability. (96,115,123,124) Of the 18 convicted individuals, 12 were sentenced to life in prison, including Thakur, a former chairperson of the Child Welfare Committee, a current member of the Child Welfare Committee, and a District Child Protection Officer. (57,115,125) Although the CBI recommended filing additional cases against 70 central government and Bihar state government officials responsible for management and oversight of the homes, the local government did not act upon these recommendations. (57,123)

Despite the aforementioned notable convictions, there were reports of inconsistencies in the investigation of the Muzaffarpur case, as well as allegations that the government shielded higher-level officials from prosecution. (123,115,126,127) Reporting found evidence that enforcement officials instructed CBI investigators to make errors on the official Muzaffarpur investigation report. (51) In addition, research indicates the CBI failed to investigate high-level officials allegedly involved in child trafficking, including politicians whom victims had repeatedly identified as sex traffickers to social services officials. (115)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Task Force to Implement the Child Labor Act	Coordinates the oversight mechanism to ensure the effective implementation of the Child and Adolescent Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act. Led by the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) and consists of 12 officials from the federal and state governments. (128) Convened two meetings during the reporting period. (48)
Central Advisory Board on Child and Adolescent Labor	Convenes board members to review the implementation of existing legislation and programs related to child labor and proposes new welfare measures for child labor. Chaired by MOLE and consists of 45 board members, including government officials and NGO representatives. (129) Met twice during the reporting period. (48)
National Commission for the Protection of Child Rights	Ensures that all laws, policies, programs, and administrative mechanisms are in accordance with the constitutional protections for children and the UN CRC. Inquires about child rights violations and failures to properly implement laws relating to child protection. (130) State Commissions for Protection of Child Rights have also been established in all 29 states and in 6 territories, including Delhi. (131) In 2018–2019, received 26 complaints regarding abuse, including sexual exploitation of children in child care institutions (CCIs) and shelter homes from April 1, 2018–March 31, 2019, as compared to eight complaints in 2017–2018. Referred these cases to police or other relevant government entities. (57,96) In addition, registered several cases of children running away from CCIs in 2019, including government-run shelters, with some alleging abuse at the hands of caretakers, including sexual abuse. (57,96)
National Human Rights Commission	Monitors implementation of the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. Monitors state governments' actions to identify, release, and rehabilitate bonded laborers through quarterly submissions and exploratory and investigative missions. (132,133) During the reporting period, organized a one-day workshop on "Elimination of Bonded Labor System including Child Labor, Inter-State Migrant Workers and Human Trafficking" in Mizoram. Participants included senior officers from the Government of India and the Government of Mizoram. (57)
Platform for Effective Enforcement for No Child Labor Portal	MOLE-operated online portal that allows government officials, NGOs, and law enforcement to share information and coordinate on child labor cases at the national, state, and local levels in an attempt to improve enforcement of child labor laws and the implementation of the National Child Labor Project (NCLP) scheme. (134) Allows citizens to lodge child labor complaints. (48) Rescued child laborers are put through a rehabilitation program that includes formal education and vocational skills training. Those eligible are mainstreamed into formal education. (96) Since launching in 2017, 165,770 child laborers have been identified, and 73,130 children mainstreamed through Special Training Centers (STCs) vis-à-vis the NCLP; 72,036 children remain in STCs. (48) STCs are located across the country and provide a stipend to children, free meals, vocational training, and bridge education for eligible children. Length of stay ranges from 6 to 18 months. (96)

On November 27, 2019 the federal Cabinet approved a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) signed between India and Myanmar on enhancing bilateral cooperation for the prevention of trafficking in persons. The agreement will increase bilateral cooperation on issues of prevention, rescue, recovery, and repatriation related to human trafficking. (57,119,135) The MOU will allow for: further strengthening of investigations, prosecutions, and immigration and border control; development and implementation of anti-trafficking in persons strategies with relevant government ministries; the creation of a working group and a task force to help build the capacities of both governments to combat trafficking in persons; development and sharing of a database on traffickers and victims of trafficking in a safe and confidential manner; and formulation of Standard Operating Procedures for Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation and Integration of the victims of trafficking. (57,119,135)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In addition, at the 48th Annual Director General-level talks in June 2019, the Indian and Bangladeshi border guard forces discussed issues surrounding cross-border human trafficking in order to create a joint strategy to address the problem. The formal strategy has not yet been created. (57,96)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of state action plans for the elimination of child labor for all state governments.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Child Labor	Describes actions for combating hazardous labor for children, including implementing legislation and providing direct assistance to children. (136) During the reporting period, implemented through programs operated by MOLE and the Ministry of Women and Child Development (MWCD), including the National Child Labor Project Scheme, Grants in Aid, the Integrated Child Development Scheme, the National Children’s Fund, and the National Creche Scheme. (48,96,137,138)
National Plan of Action for Children	Identifies priority actions for achieving the objectives set out in the National Policy for Children (NPC). (48,139,140) Aims to establish bridge courses and age-appropriate classes for children rescued from child labor and child trafficking to meet the NPC objective to ensure that all out-of-school children have access to education. In addition, seeks to develop community-based prevention, rescue, rehabilitation, and reintegration mechanisms, and strengthen institutional mechanisms to address the worst forms of child labor to meet the NPC objective that all children are protected from exploitation. (139,140) During the reporting period, implemented through programs operated by MOLE and MWCD, including the Integrated Child Development Scheme, the National Children’s Fund, and the National Creche Scheme. (48,96,137,138)
State Action Plans on Child Labor	Details state governments’ activities and programs to eliminate child labor. Child labor action plans are in place in only 11 states: Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Delhi, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Meghalaya, Orissa, Punjab, Tamil Nadu, and Uttar Pradesh. (100,101,141-148) Research was unable to determine actions taken to implement these policies during the reporting period. (161)

The Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi’s “Policy on Rehabilitation and Combating Trafficking of Women and Children,” which would establish a rehabilitation fund for women and children who were trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and establish state- and district-level coordination committees to undertake prevention and rehabilitation activities, remains pending in draft form. (101,112,149)

On August 21, 2019, the Tamil Nadu State Government issued a Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) to support efforts to eradicate the bonded labor system in the state by 2021. The SOP contains guidelines to facilitate the implementation of the “Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act (1976)” and the “Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborers (2016).” (57,150) No other Indian states have similar SOPs to address bonded labor. (116)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including in the oversight of government-run, government-funded, and privately-run shelter homes that provide assistance to victims of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme†	MOLE program that operates at the district level to identify working children, withdraw them from hazardous work, and provide them with education and vocational training. (16,137) Sets up and administers NCLP schools, mainstreams children into formal education, and provides them with stipends, meals, and health checkups. (137) Comprises approximately 3,000 NCLP STCs that accommodate approximately 120,000 children. (137) Between April 1, 2018 and March 31, 2019, the program rehabilitated 66,169 children who were rescued from child labor compared to 47,635 children rescued in 2017–2018. (48,57)

Program	Description
Ministry of Women and Child Development Programs - Integrated Child Protection Scheme (ICPS)†, Childline‡, TrackChild and Khoya-Paya†	Integrated Child Protection Scheme (ICPS) provides children in need of protection—including children withdrawn from hazardous work, forced labor, and human trafficking—with food and accommodation in government-run shelter homes and non-institutional care in foster homes and adoptive families. (48,57,138) Provides rehabilitation and reintegration services to rescued children. (138) Through the Welfare of Working Children in Need of Care and Protection program, provides non-formal education and vocational training to street children and working children living in urban areas not covered by NCLP schemes. (138) This program was active during the reporting period and supported approximately 75,000 children from April 1, 2019-January 1, 2020, including trafficked children, in approximately 2,000 CCIs. (48,57,96) Childline is a 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for children in distress. (57,81,138,151) Includes Childline India Foundation-operated telephone service in cities across India, which connects children in need of assistance with hospitals, child welfare committees, shelter homes, and police; 60-70 percent of received calls result in the rescue of a child. (57,96,138,151) From April 1, 2019-January 28, 2020, assisted in over 285,000 cases of children in need, including trafficking in person cases. (48,57) TrackChild is an online portal that tracks missing children and facilitates information sharing about missing and vulnerable children among stakeholders, including child protection units, police stations, and Child Welfare Committees. (48,138,152) TrackChild's Khoya-Paya (Lost and Found) website allows parents and the public to report and search for missing children. Program was active during the reporting period. (48,96)
Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborers, 2016†	MOLE program that rescues and rehabilitates adult and child bonded laborers. (48,137) Provides rescued bonded laborers with financial assistance and social protection services. (137) Supports funding of surveys at the district level on the prevalence of bonded labor and the rehabilitation of bonded laborers identified through the surveys. According to the 2019 MOLE Annual Report, covering data collected from 2017–2018, state governments received $877,765 for the rehabilitation of 6,413 bonded laborers. (153) Between April 1, 2018 and February 1, 2019, 2,276 bonded laborers were rescued and rehabilitated in various states. (48)
Anti-Human Trafficking Activities†	MWCD-operated anti-human trafficking activities, in collaboration with NGOs and state governments. (154) Supports projects to help reintegrate, rehabilitate, and repatriate human trafficking victims, including children, through the Ujjawala and Swadhar Greh schemes. (154) Ujjawala is a comprehensive scheme launched in 2007. Combats trafficking in persons of women and children, including for commercial sexual exploitation. (154) In addition, facilitates the rescue of victims, places them in safe custody, provides rehabilitation services, facilitates reintegration of victims, and facilitates repatriation of foreign victims. (154) The Swadhar Greh scheme provides temporary residential accommodations and services, including vocational training, legal aid, and rehabilitative counseling services to women and girls rescued from human trafficking, including commercial sexual exploitation. (57,154) During the reporting period, both programs were active and provided sensitization workshops, awareness generation through print and audio media, medical care, professional counseling, legal aid, vocational training, and returned victims to their families. (96)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. (155) In June 2019, organized a joint program with MOLE to mark the World Day Against Child Labor. In addition, ILO staff, including the MAPI6 National Project Manager, met with MOLE's Joint Secretary in charge of child labor to provide a briefing on the joint program and to understand the view of the Government of India. (156) For additional information, please see the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (157)

After a 2018 TISS report uncovered ongoing issues in Bihar's shelters, Delhi's state government requested the DWC conduct an independent audit of Delhi's shelters. TISS conducted this audit in 2019, which revealed that 47 of 83 shelter homes in Delhi state were operating with a valid license and that facilities were short-staffed, potentially allowing for the mistreatment of children to go unnoticed or underreported. (57,96) The Delhi audit also reported "grievous sexual and physical abuse" in at least 14 shelters, prompting the Delhi government to remove children from one of these shelters and file a FIR against the shelter owners. Delhi authorities reported no other cases of criminal negligence and did not report initiating criminal investigations into the operations of any other shelters. (96,115)

Authorities in several other states, including Andhra Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Telangana, Jharkhand, and Odisha also ordered audits of their shelters, some of which uncovered significant problems; however, no criminal investigations were initiated in these states as a result of these audits. (57,115,158,159) Despite encouragement by the Supreme Court, none of the other 29 states reported conducting, funding, or approving independent audits. (51,59,96,115,160) As a result of these findings, Child Welfare Committees (CWCs) across the country have been working to digitize records in all shelter homes in a centralized system, so officials can monitor the number of residents in real time. As a part of this digitization of records, there will be an option within the system to note how the shelter is functioning, which will assist officials in monitoring shelter homes for potential exploitation. (96) Additionally, CWCs in most states have begun to schedule and implement regular monitoring visits of shelters, and District Inspection Committees – wherever they did not previously exist – have been established to meet regularly and assist in the monitoring of shelter homes. (57,96,116) According to local media reports, by the end of December 2019, the Government of India shut down 539 illegal shelter homes in Maharashtra, Jharkand, Karnataka, Uttar Pradesh, and Madhya Pradesh that were found to not be in compliance with requisite standards. (57,96) Children residing in the shelter homes that were shut down, were relocated to other functioning shelter homes. (96)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in India (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 are comprehensive, especially in the sectors in which children work in unsafe and unhealthy conditions for long periods of time, such as in spinning mills, garment production, carpet making, and domestic work.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Publish the legal instrument that establishes the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into India's armed forces.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that Anti-Human Trafficking Units have sufficient funding and human resources to adequately perform their work.	2019
	Collect and publish national-level data on labor law enforcement, including the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspectors, the number and type of inspections conducted, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2014 – 2019
	Create meaningful penalties for employment of children in prohibited child labor to ensure that penalties adequately deter violations.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure adequate training for labor and criminal law inspectors, that an adequate number of labor inspections are conducted, and that the complaint mechanism response time is efficient.	2019
	Ensure that labor inspections are regularly conducted in all sectors in which child labor occurs.	2019
	Collect and publish national-level data from all state governments on the number of criminal investigations, the number of violations found, the number of prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that public officials who facilitate or participate in the worst forms of child labor are held accountable, including officials who accept bribes in exchange for protection from the law.	2018 – 2019
	Fully implement the standard operating procedures that provide financial assistance to victims, including children, rescued from bonded labor, and ensure that bonded labor cases are fast-tracked to ensure that victims receive financial assistance in a timely manner.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that state governments are issuing release certificates and financial assistance to victims, including children, rescued from bonded labor.	2018 – 2019
	Investigate suspected abuses and misconduct at government-run, government-funded shelter homes, and prioritize the official registration of all government-run, government-funded shelters to ensure government oversight.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that shelter homes are free of abuses, including forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and are fully staffed to support victims.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure the remaining 29 state governments conduct audits of all government run, government-funded shelters as mandated by the Supreme Court.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Work with state governments that do not currently have state action plans for the elimination of child labor to establish such plans.	2011 – 2019
	Publish information about activities that were undertaken to implement the state action plans during the reporting period.	2018 – 2019
	Approve and implement a national policy to combat trafficking in persons and support victims.	2019
Social Programs	Cease using children as informants and spies by national security forces.	2019
	Penalize education officials who engage in discrimination and harassment of children, and reduce barriers to education, in particular for refugee children and children from marginalized communities, by providing sufficient training for teachers, providing separate washrooms for girls, and increasing the number of available schools, especially in rural areas in which inadequate infrastructure and transportation options limit access to education.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure collection, findings, and publication of data on exploitative child labor are made available to the public, including findings from district-level bonded labor surveys and raw data from the national census.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Indonesia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government published the Indonesian Children Profile report, which provides the most recent government source of publicly available child labor data. The government also substantially increased its labor inspectorate funding from $10.2 million in 2018 to $16.7 million in 2019, with specific funds allocated to enforcing child labor regulations.

In addition, the Indonesian National Police investigated cases of child trafficking involving 28 child victims. However, children in Indonesia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in plantation agriculture, including in palm oil and tobacco production. The Ministry of Manpower continued to lack the financial resources and personnel necessary to fully enforce child labor laws throughout the country. In addition, the government did not publish criminal enforcement information on the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions for crimes relating to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Indonesia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in plantation agriculture, including in palm oil and tobacco production. (I-9) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Indonesia. Although the government has not historically published data on child labor, during the reporting year, the Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection published the 2019 Indonesian Children Profile report with data on child laborers between ages 10 and 17. (10) However, data are still missing for child laborers ages 5 through 10.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	3.7 (816,363)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	2.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.3

	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,10,19,31-33)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, mostly girls, are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation abroad, primarily in Malaysia, Taiwan, and the Middle East; within the country, children are also subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Batam, Jakarta, Bali, Bandung, Bogor, Surabaya, and Medan. (2,7,10,32,34) Children also work as horse jockeys and face a number of health and safety hazards, including risk of bone injuries and fatal falls. In addition to safety concerns, participation in horse racing may impact school attendance. (26-28)

Children working in tobacco farming—especially in the provinces of East Java, Central Java, and West Nusa Tenggara—are exposed to pesticides, work long hours, and work in extreme heat. (2,3,8,10,35,36) Children working on agricultural plantations, including palm oil, coffee, and rubber plantations, collect fallen palm fruitlets and plants, and spray toxic herbicides. (2,4,9,37,38) Children are often recruited by family members to help adult palm oil laborers meet harvest quotas, which sometimes results in children working long hours into the night or dropping out of school. (14,39,40)

Although the Act on National Education System mandates free education, research indicates that schools impose additional fees on students to cover school activities and educational items. These added expenses may hinder students’ ability to attend school. (2) Refugee children, as well as Indonesian children without proper birth documentation, face a barrier to accessing education because the government requires children to possess a government-sponsored student identification number to sit for exams and obtain a school completion certificate. During the reporting period, the government continued to implement an online application system to process birth certificates for its citizens inside and outside Indonesia. (10,13,41) The online application system helps Indonesian children obtain birth documentation more quickly so they can attend school. Also in 2019, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Education and Culture established a total of 313 Community Learning Centers near the Indonesia-Malaysia border state of Sarawak, and in Sabah, Malaysia, to increase access to education for children of palm oil migrant laborers. (10,19) The government deployed teachers and community members to provide approximately 12,470 elementary students, 3,800 secondary school students, and 1,660 high school students with non-formal education equivalent to the regular elementary, secondary, and high school levels. (42)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Indonesia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Indonesia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 69 of the Manpower Act; Law on the Ratification of ILO C. 138 (43,44)

Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Annex F of Ministerial Decree No. 235; Jobs that Jeopardize the Health, Safety, or Morals of Children (45)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 74 of the Manpower Act; Articles 1–6 and 17 of the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons; Article 83 of the Law on Child Protection (44,46,47)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 83 of the Law on Child Protection; Articles 1–6 and 17 of the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons (46,47)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 74 of the Manpower Act; Articles 81–82 of the Law on Child Protection; Article 297 of the Penal Code; Section 3 of the Law on the Ratification of the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography; Articles 4–12 and 37 of Law on Anti-Pornography (48,44,47-50)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 74 of the Manpower Act; Articles 67, 78, and 89 of the Law on Child Protection (44,47)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes		Article 28 of Law No. 34/2004 on the Indonesian National Armed Forces (51)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 28 of Law No. 34/2004 on the Indonesian National Armed Forces (51)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3(d) of Law No. 9/2012 on Ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (52)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 48 of the Law on Child Protection; Articles 6 and 34 of the Act on the National Education System (47,53)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 34 of the Act on the National Education System (53)

The legislature has yet to pass the draft Domestic Workers Protection Law. This bill outlines the circumstances under which children ages 15 through 17 can perform non-hazardous domestic work, including requiring parental permission to execute the employment contract and prohibiting work at night. (20,31,42,54-57) Indonesia's prohibitions against child trafficking are inconsistent with international law because the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons requires a demonstration of threats, the use of force, or coercion

Indonesia

to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (32,46,47) However, it is reported that judicial officials at the national and provincial level continued to assert that the law implicitly established that force, fraud, or coercion were not required to constitute child sex trafficking and that this therefore was not a barrier in successfully prosecuting and obtaining convictions in child sex trafficking cases. (58) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover horse jockeying, a type of work in which there is evidence that Indonesian children are exposed to physical dangers. (45)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Manpower (MOM) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower, Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision and Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers	Provides information to employers on child labor laws and regulations, and works with law enforcement officials to prosecute child labor violators. (59) Refers children found during inspections to the local Women's Empowerment and Family Planning Body or to the Integrated Service Center for Empowering Women and Children for appropriate social services. In the case of the Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers, receives complaints of child labor by telephone, fax, or e-mail. (13)
National Police, including Women and Children's Service Unit	Conducts inspections and raids, and makes arrests in response to crimes, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (10)
Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection (MoWECP)	Coordinates the provision of social services to children, including those involved in child labor. In cooperation with the Ministry of Communications, operates a Children's Helpline in 20 provinces to receive complaints regarding child protection. (13,42)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOM that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Despite increasing its labor inspectorate funding in 2019, the government noted that there are still insufficient funds to cover office infrastructure, transportation, and fuel for vehicles, which hampered labor inspectors' ability to carry out inspections. (10) Inspectors have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections in the formal sector; however, they lack authority to inspect private farms and homes, in which child labor often occurs. (3,13) Despite this prohibition, the Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection responds to reports of child labor in the informal sector. (15)

MOM officials disclosed that there are insufficient inspectors to cover the entire country, and MOM continued to employ and rely on community-based monitors and neighborhood chiefs to report incidences of children engaged in domestic work. (13) In 2019, MOM employed 1,574 labor inspectors, down from 1,619 labor inspectors in 2018. According to MOM, the number of labor inspectors decreased due to the shift in authority from regencies/cities to provinces, and some inspectors were unwilling to relocate and resigned. (10) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Indonesia's workforce, which includes approximately 126 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in less developed economies, Indonesia would employ about 8,407 labor inspectors. (13,60,61) MOM trained 120 new labor inspectors and investigators on child labor, hazardous child labor, and worst forms of child labor law enforcement, and provided refresher training to 120 currently employed labor inspectors. Despite institutionalized refresher training provided during the reporting period, government officials noted that the amount of refresher training was insufficient, given the total number of labor inspectors. (10,42)

During the reporting period, MOM found one case that involved a child labor violation. As of early 2020, the case is undergoing a court process. (10) ILO and MOM officials suspect that additional child labor violations occur, but the government's inability to conduct inspections in the informal sector and an insufficient number of inspectors prevent identification of all child labor violations. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (13)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (13)	Yes (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (13)	Yes (58)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (13)	Unknown (10)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (13)	Unknown (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (13)	Unknown (10)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (13)	Unknown (10)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (38)	Unknown (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	Yes (10)

In 2019, the Indonesian National Police investigated 28 child trafficking cases and recorded 530 cases of pornography and cybercrime involving children. However, government data on criminal law enforcement efforts specific to child labor, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions, are not available. The government has a system to aggregate this information, but it has encountered challenges in classifying child labor cases, including developing case tags to accurately represent and aggregate comprehensive child labor data. (10,13,38) Although criminal law enforcement personnel received training on human trafficking laws that covered children, research found training on current child labor-specific regulations to be insufficient. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding for child labor committees.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Provincial-Level and District-Level Regional Action Committees	Coordinate and monitor policy and program efforts and develop action plans to eliminate the worst forms of child labor at the local level. (62) Indonesia has provincial-level task forces in 32 provinces and 194 district-level committees. In 2019, these action committees were active and continued developing, coordinating, and monitoring action plans at the local level. (10)
National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts across 21 ministries and government agencies, including efforts to combat child trafficking. (61) Chaired by the Coordinating Ministry of Human Development and Culture, with task force meetings organized by MoWECP. (10,60) Provides vocational training and scholarships to school-aged children to reduce susceptibility to human trafficking. (63) In 2019, MoWECP expanded the Community Watch groups, a collaboration among local governments, NGOs, community figures, and village stakeholders, with 502 villages in 31 provinces to combat human trafficking at the local level. (10) In addition, the National Task Force required anti-trafficking initiatives be a significant element of the 2019 National Development Plan requiring local governments to prioritize protections for women and children victims of violence, including victims of child trafficking and child labor. (58)
Provincial and District Task Forces for the Prevention and Handling of Human Trafficking	Coordinate prevention and anti-trafficking efforts at the local level. (63) Commonly chaired by the local Integrated Service Center for Women and Children or the local Office of Social Affairs. Operate in 32 provinces and 191 out of 438 districts. (32,34)
Sub-Task Force on the Prevention of Child Participation in Trafficking in Persons	Organizes regular coordination meetings, provides technical trainings on human trafficking for government officials, and produces publications on the prevention of trafficking in persons. (13) Chaired by the Ministry of Education and Culture. (10,61) In 2019, 150 education officials for junior and senior high schools, as well as vocational schools, attended a workshop on preventing trafficking in persons in the Malaka Regency, East Nusa Tenggara. (10)
Indonesian Child Protection Commission (KPAI)	Monitors the implementation of the Child Protection Law and child protection policies and provides recommendations on the child protection framework to the President of Indonesia. (47,64) From January to November 2019, KPAI reported 198 cases of child sexual exploitation: 40 cases of human trafficking, 48 cases of child labor, 53 cases of commercial sexual exploitation, and 57 cases of child prostitution. KPAI also recorded 530 cases of pornography and cybercrime involving children in 2019. (10,19)

The National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons previously noted that some Provincial and District Task Forces lack sufficient funding and fail to incorporate its recommendations into their plans of action to adequately guide efforts to eliminate the trafficking of women and children. (20,58,65)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action (NPA) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022)	Provides a policy framework for the elimination of child labor. Specific activities include improving data collection on the worst forms of child labor; increasing awareness-raising and advocacy efforts, and formulating regulations and policies to prohibit the worst forms of child labor. (66,67) In 2019, the government disseminated “Norms for the NPA” to businesses, agencies, NGOs, and village authorities in three regions: Central Kalimantan, Riau Island, and West Sumatra. (10)
National Action Plan on Preventing Trafficking in Persons (2015–2019)	Guided the work of the National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons. Aimed to improve health and social rehabilitation services, as well as repatriation and social reintegration services, for human trafficking victims; update anti-human trafficking regulations; and strengthen the investigation of human trafficking cases and the prosecution of perpetrators. (68) Enhanced coordination among task force members and between national and international stakeholders. (68) The Task Force, led by the Coordinating Ministry of Human Development and Culture, is currently working on the 2020–2024 National Action Plan. (42)

Policy	Description
Roadmap Toward a Child Labor-Free Indonesia in 2022 (2014–2022)	Supports implementation of the NPA for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Aims to mainstream the elimination of the worst forms of child labor into relevant national policies; strengthen coordination between stakeholders at the national, provincial, and district levels; and enhance the capacity of stakeholders to eradicate child labor. (61,69) In 2019, the government assisted 41 companies in implementing norms for the elimination of child labor, encouraged businesses to eliminate child labor by using Corporate Social Responsibility funds, and encouraged local governments to allocate a portion of their budget toward eliminating child labor. (10)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including education-related fees for children in school.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects aim to build government capacity to address child labor by improving occupational safety and health for young workers, strengthening legal protections and social services delivery for child domestic workers, and improving child labor and forced labor data collection and research methodology. Include Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers: Safe and Healthy Youth (2014–2019), an $11.5 million project implemented by ILO with Indonesia as one of the countries. (70) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Child Trafficking Services‡	Ministry of Social Affairs and other government agency programs that provide social rehabilitation and shelter services for child victims of trafficking. (71) In 2019, the government allocated $4,338,235 to the Directorate of Indonesian Nationals and Indonesian Legal Entities Protection in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to implement programs related to trafficking in persons, including maintenance on shelters. (42)
Cash Transfer Programs‡	Provide conditional cash transfers to help with formal and informal education opportunities and health expenses for vulnerable groups, including street children, abandoned children and infants, children facing criminal charges, children with disabilities, the poorest families, and child laborers who dropped out of school. Includes Smart Indonesia Program (KIP), a card that provides educational grants to all school-aged children whose families have a Family Welfare card or meet eligibility criteria covering both formal and informal education; Child Social Welfare Program (Program Kesejahteraan Sosial Anak), which provides conditional cash transfers to children; and Family Welfare Card (Kartu Keluarga Sejahtera), which provides a bank account and consolidates all financial assistance programs, including children's education and health funds, for low-income families. (10,13) In 2019, the government provided KIP cards to 20.1 million students from poor families, allocated $497,000 to 5,000 street and abandoned children under age 18 through cash transfers, and extended the previous Cash Transfers for Poor Students program by replacing it with KIP and extending coverage to 20.3 million children and including coverage for children in both the formal and informal education systems. (10)
Education Programs‡	Block Grants for Schools (Bantuan Operasional Sekolah) grant program compensates schools for the loss of income from waiving school fees for poor and vulnerable children in primary, junior secondary, and senior high schools. (13,40) Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program improves access to quality public education by limiting the distance of primary and junior secondary schools from children's households, specifying minimum teacher-student ratios, and identifying minimum teacher education qualifications. (72,73) Community Learning Centers provide education for children of palm oil workers. (34,42,74) Reducing Child Labor to Support the Family Hope Program provides special education services to prepare children who dropped out of school to work so they can return to school and aims to reduce child labor among targeted households. (10,13) In 2019, the program assisted 10,964 families in 72 districts and cities in 14 provinces across Indonesia. Also in 2019, through the Family Hope Program, the government removed 18,000 children from child labor, bringing the total number of children removed from child labor between 2008 and 2019 to 134,064; all children were subsequently enrolled in school. (10)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Indonesia (Table 11).

Indonesia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that threats, the use of force, or coercion does not need to be established for the crime of child trafficking.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including jockeying in horse racing, in which there is evidence that children are exposed to physical dangers.	2019
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectorate funding is sufficient to cover infrastructure, transportation, and fuel requirements to enable labor inspectors to carry out inspections.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure labor inspectors have authority to inspect the informal sector, including private farms and homes, for child labor violations.	2018 – 2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2010 – 2019
	Publish criminal law enforcement information, including the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions for crimes relating to child labor, including its worst forms.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that all criminal law enforcement personnel receive training on child labor regulations.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Sufficiently fund Provincial and District Task Forces and require them to incorporate the recommendations of the National Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons into their plans of action on the elimination of trafficking of women and children.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on child laborers ages 5 through 10.	2019
	Conduct research to determine the types of activities carried out by children, including in construction and street work sectors, to inform social policies and programs.	2014 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, including removing school-related fees and ensuring that all children are able to obtain a government-issued student identification number so they can attend school.	2016 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Iraq made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Kurdistan Regional Government established an Inter-ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons to oversee implementation of its Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law. However, Iraq is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Iraqi and Kurdistan Regional Government authorities continued to inappropriately detain and prosecute without legal representation children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use—including using abusive interrogation techniques and torture to gain children’s confessions instead of screening these children as potential victims of the worst forms of child labor. In addition, NGOs reported that in 2019, some militia groups affiliated with the Popular Mobilization Forces, including Iranian-backed groups, recruited boys younger than age 18 to fight in Syria and Yemen. While these forces operated under the umbrella of the Popular Mobilization Forces—which was legally incorporated into the Iraqi defense forces in 2016—they generally remained outside of the command and control of the Iraqi government. Children in Iraq engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and in commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government did not provide information on its labor or criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. The government also continues to lack programs that focus on assisting children involved in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Iraq engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Household surveys, such as the 2018 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS) in Iraq, are not designed to capture the labor performed by IDPs living in camps and, therefore, the 2018 MICS survey does not capture children in this population involved in child labor. Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Iraq. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of dairy products (4,8-10)
	Herding livestock (10)
	Fishing, activities unknown (4,8)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Construction (9,10)
	Working in carpentry workshops (10,11)
	Making bricks, including transporting bricks and working in kilns (4,8,12,13)
	Working in factories, including glass, household cleaners, paint, steel, garments and textiles, perfume, electrical materials, and plastic recycling (4,8-10,12,14,15)
Services	Street work, including selling goods, pushing carts, cleaning cars, and begging (4,8,13,15-17)
	Working at gas stations† and auto repair and other shops (8,12,18-20)
	Working in landfills, scavenging and collecting garbage† and scrap metal (12,13,15,16,21,22)
	Domestic work (10)
	Working in hotels, restaurants, and tea houses (4,8,10,20)
	Working at cemeteries, including digging graves and selling items (13,23)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including cross-border smuggling and drug and weapon trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,8,24-26)
	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (27-30)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-5,8)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-5,13,28,31)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3-5,8,32)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Despite ISIS losing control over the last remaining territory in Iraq in 2017, ISIS carried out deadly attacks in Iraq throughout 2019. (33) ISIS continued to abduct and forcibly recruit and use children in combat and support roles, including as human shields, informants, bomb makers, executioners, and suicide bombers; some of these children were as young as eight years old and some were mentally disabled. (3,34)

In 2019, NGOs reported that some Popular Mobilization Forces (PMF)-affiliated militias—including Iranian-backed Harakat Hezbollah al-Nujaba (HHN), Asaib Ahl al-Haq (AAH), and Kataib Hizballah (KH)—recruited boys younger than the age of 18 to fight in Syria and Yemen, most commonly out of schools. (3,4) Some of the forces in HHN, AAH, and KH militias operate under the umbrella of the PMF, which was legally incorporated into the Iraqi defense forces in 2016, but generally operates outside of the command and control of the Iraqi government. (3,4,8,35) During the reporting period, sources reported the Kurdistan Worker’s Party and People’s Protection Units, operating in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region and Sinjar, continued to recruit and use children. (5) Local NGOs reported that Yezidi militias in Sinjar, including the Yezidkhan Protection Force and Sinjar Command Force, recruited Yezidi boys. (4)

Throughout the country, some girls were subjected to commercial sexual exploitation through temporary marriages. (27) Sources reported that AAH and HHN profited from offices facilitating temporary marriage and provided protection to them. (5) Syrian girls from refugee camps in the Kurdistan region were sometimes forced into early or temporary marriages with Iraqi or other refugee men; some Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) authorities allegedly ignored, or accepted bribes to ignore such cases, including those in which girls were sold multiple times. (27) NGOs report that women and girls in IDP camps, whose family members have alleged ties to ISIS, continued to endure a complex system of sexual exploitation, sex trafficking, and abuse by armed actors residing in the camps, security and military officials, and camp personnel controlling access to humanitarian assistance and services. Iranian girls were subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in the Kurdistan Region and Iraqi girls were trafficked to other Arab states in the region and to Europe for commercial sexual exploitation. (3) Child laborers were also exposed to sexual violence and abuse. (13)

In previous years, ISIS sold boys who they considered too young or too weak to engage in armed conflict into forced domestic work. (29,30) ISIS kidnapped and trafficked Yezidi children to Turkey for exploitation. (3) Some children in IDP camps who were suspected of having ties to ISIS were blocked from obtaining civil documentation and returning home or were subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (3,36)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Children in border regions with Iran are sometimes used as porters, known as “kolbar” in Kurdish, to smuggle goods across the border, and are subjected to life-threatening weather conditions, dangerous terrain, unexploded ordinance, and targeting by Iranian border guards. (25,26) In 2019, as many as 21 adolescents were killed by Iranian border guards or died while making the trip. (26)

Children faced numerous barriers to accessing education, including displacement, the lack of local schools, the use of schools as shelters by IDPs, costs of transportation and school supplies, lack of sufficient educational facilities, and IDPs’ and refugees’ lack of identification documents. (8,9,13,37,38) In addition, children with suspected ties to ISIS may not have access to identification documents required for school enrollment. (36) According to UNICEF, over half of the schools in Iraq required repairs and the education of 3 million children had been interrupted. (8) UNICEF also reported that, while 92 percent of children enroll in primary schools, only half of children from economically disadvantaged families complete primary school and only a quarter complete secondary education. (39) In addition, in 2018, it was estimated that some 50,000 Syrian refugee children did not attend formal school; however, this number is over-inclusive as it also counts children who receive permissible non-formal education. (40) For these refugees, the majority of whom live in the Kurdistan Region, access to education was limited because of security concerns; school-related costs such as transportation, textbooks and uniforms; and language issues, due to most classes in the Kurdistan Region being taught in Kurdish rather than Arabic, the language of Syrian children. (41)

As of December 2019, 1.41 million people, including about 658,000 children, remained internally displaced; 4.6 million individuals, including over 2 million children, had returned home to newly accessible areas; and 3.3 million children in Iraq were in need of education support. (42) UNICEF supported 3,354 children with direct cash assistance for the 2018–2019 academic year; however, this program was discontinued for 2019–2020. (42) The KRG agreed to start paying incentives to Syrian refugee volunteer teachers in the Kurdistan region; however, it stopped doing so in January 2020. (4) The lack of this direct cash assistance to children and incentive payments to volunteer teachers makes children vulnerable to child labor and child trafficking.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Iraq has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Iraq’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of child trafficking.

‡ Age calculated based on available information

Article 117 of the Constitution of Iraq recognizes Kurdistan, which comprises the provinces of Dohuk, Erbil, Sulaimaniya, and Halabja, as a federal region. (52-55) Article 121 grants the Kurdistan Region the right to exercise legislative and executive powers. (52) The Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament must endorse any laws the Government of Iraq has passed after 1991 for such laws to enter into force in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. (53-55)

In Iraq, Article 1 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking requires force or coercion to be present as an element of the crime of child trafficking, which is inconsistent with international standards, including Article 3 of the Palermo Protocol. (46) The Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament endorsed the Iraqi Law to Combat Human Trafficking, which means the operative human trafficking standard in the Kurdistan Region is also not in compliance with international standards. (56)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The KRG reported that a draft Child Protection Law was prepared by a joint committee that included the ministries of Labor and Social Affairs, Education, Health, Culture, the Independent Human Rights Commission, UNICEF, and other child protection NGOs, and was submitted to the KRG Parliament for ratification. (57)

In Iraq, the laws do not sufficiently prohibit the use of children in prostitution or the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. (47)

Moreover, under the Iraqi Education Law and under the Law on Compulsory Education, children are required to attend primary school for only 6 years, which is typically up to age 12. (49,50) This standard makes children ages 12 to 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor, because they are not required to be in school, yet they are not legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) and the KRG's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Iraq	Enforces child labor laws and regulations through its Child Labor Unit. (8) Conducts research on child labor through its Childhood Welfare Authority. Receives complaints of child labor cases. (8)
Kurdistan Regional Government's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA)	Kurdistan Region	Enforces child labor laws and regulations in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. Police units of the KRG's Ministry of Interior (KMOI) play a supporting role in the daily activities of the Ministry. (8)
Ministry of Interior	Iraq	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. Collaborates with MOLSA, the Iraqi Industries Federation, and the Confederation of Trade Unions to conduct inspection campaigns. (8) Maintains a hotline for victims of human trafficking, with calls routed directly to the Ministry's Anti-Trafficking Department. (8)
Kurdistan Regional Government's Ministry of Interior (KMOI)	Kurdistan Region	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (8) Includes a Counter Trafficking Directorate within KMOI. (56)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of MOLSA and the KRG's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

In 2017, MOLSA employed 98 inspectors and research was unable to determine that significantly more have been hired. KMOLSA reported 18 inspectors were employed during the reporting period. (4) Although the number of labor inspectors in Iraq during the reporting period is unknown, research indicates that in 2019 the number of labor inspectors was likely insufficient for the size of Iraq and the KRG’s workforce, which combined includes over 8.9 million workers. (4,58) According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Iraq would employ about 593 labor inspectors. (59,60)

In 2019, KMOLSA did not provide training on child labor to inspectors and only conducted inspections for child labor in response to complaints. (57) When inspectors identify child labor violations, they can issue warnings and instructions, or refer cases to court. (61) KMOLSA indicated that funding is insufficient to carry out its duties. (4)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators and prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, Iraqi and KRG authorities continued to inappropriately detain and prosecute without legal representation Iraqi and foreign children allegedly affiliated to ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use—and used abusive interrogation techniques and torture to gain children’s confessions; the government did not screen these children as potential human trafficking victims. (3,32,66)

KRG officials stated that courts can refer cases of the worst forms of child labor to KMOLSA. (14) The government did not investigate or hold anyone criminally accountable for continued allegations of unlawful recruitment and use of child soldiers. The government also failed to investigate and hold criminally accountable military and security personnel for allegations of the sexual exploitation of girls in IDP camps. (3) An NGO reported that police occasionally detained children engaged in street begging and kept them in custody before releasing them; police did not screen these children as possible victims of human trafficking or refer them to appropriate protection services. (3,4)

According to the KRG, between 2014 and 2019, KRG authorities funded the rescue of more than 3,515 kidnapped Yazidis from ISIS, including 1,600 children. Civil society organizations reported that returned victims of sexual exploitation remained vulnerable to exploitation upon their return to the Kurdistan Region. (57)

Some victims of trafficking, including children trafficked for child soldiering, continued to be punished for unlawful acts while being trafficked. (27,55,67) Lack of sufficient coordination among judicial authorities and security forces across governorates led to re-arrests of some children previously cleared of charges related to ISIS. (68,69)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies to effectively process cases of children suspected of having ties with ISIS or children who are victims of human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Related Entity	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Labor	Iraq	Coordinates overall government efforts to combat child labor, research policies regarding child labor, and design and manage projects. Members included representatives from MOLSA and four other ministries. (4) Research was unable to determine whether the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
Central Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Iraq	Oversees the implementation of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking and serves as the national coordinating body on trafficking in persons. Led by the Ministry of Interior, and includes representatives from five ministries, KMOI, and two other state entities. (4,14,18) In the past, a lack of sufficient coordination between judicial authorities and security forces led to some children, who were suspected of affiliation with ISIS, cleared of allegations, and released from custody, sometimes being re-arrested for the same allegations. (62,68) Active in 2019. (57)
KRG High Committee on Human Trafficking	Kurdistan Region	Members include representatives of KMOLSA and KMOI. (4) Research was unable to determine whether the KRG High Committee on Human Trafficking was active during the reporting period.
KRG Council of Ministers	Kurdistan Region	KMOI and KMOLSA coordinate on child labor in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region through the KRG Council of Ministers. (4) The council met regularly during the reporting period. (57)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons*	Kurdistan Region	Makes recommendations on implementing the KRG's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law. Headed by the Director General of the Diwan at the Ministry of Interior, it also includes 17 members from several ministries and services. (5) Established in August 2019. Starting in October 2019, committee members met every 60 days and forwarded their recommendations to the inter-ministerial committee after each meeting. (5)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In December 2019, the government of Iraq presented a proposal to prepare a comprehensive plan to reduce child recruitment operations in armed and terrorist conflicts to an intergovernmental committee headed by MOLSA. This proposal was approved with funding by the council. (57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Related Entity	Description
Child Protection Policy (2017–2022)	Iraq	Provides a holistic approach to addressing children’s needs, including ameliorating the child labor situation in the country through prevention, protection, and rehabilitation programs such as a poverty alleviation initiative, and educational and mental health services. Includes a component to provide rehabilitation and reintegration activities for children previously engaged in armed conflict and children who experienced trauma during the period of ISIS occupation. (8) The policy does not specifically cover other worst forms of child labor present in Iraq, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Based on available information, there were no child labor policies in the Kurdistan Region. (8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including services to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Related Entity	Description
Informal Education†	Iraq	Government-supported informal education systems, including evening school programs and the fast education mode that encourages children ages 12 to 18 who have dropped out of school to continue their education. (8) Research was unable to determine what steps were undertaken in 2019 to implement this program.
Conditional Subsidies Program†	Iraq	Provides assistance to low-income families for children to stay in school and out of the workforce. In 2019, MOLSA continued to provide cash assistance to low-income families to send their children to school. (4,8)
Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Iraq	MOLSA-operated shelter in Baghdad for human trafficking victims, including children involved in the worst forms of child labor; other facilities are in Basrah, Kirkuk, and Ninewa provinces. (8) In 2019, shelters received victims of human trafficking. Officials indicated that poor coordination and policies that dissuade victims from seeking help accounted for a low number of victims receiving services through shelters. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of Iraq.

Neither the Government of Iraq nor the KRG reported efforts to provide protection services to demobilized child soldiers of ISIS or the PMF, thus failing to prevent re-victimization or re-recruitment of these children into armed groups. (3) Likewise, research found no evidence of specific active programs to support children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or other worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering. Existing programs do not sufficiently address the lack of access to education in Iraq and the Kurdistan Region.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Iraq (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the laws comprehensively prohibit child trafficking in all parts of Iraq, including the Kurdistan Region, and do not require force or coercion for their application, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child in prostitution and the use, procuring, and offering of a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019
	Ensure that hazardous work protections apply to all children, including children working in family businesses under the authority of family members, and children ages 15 to 17.	2016 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law in Iraq criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2013 – 2019
	Increase the age of compulsory schooling in Iraq to at least the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that children under age 18 are not recruited or used by armed groups affiliated with the Popular Mobilization Forces or by Iraqi Security Forces. Hold those that recruit and use children criminally accountable, including leaders of non-state armed groups, where possible.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that routine labor inspections are carried out in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq.	2019
	Publish labor law enforcement information, such as the funding of the labor inspectorate, number of inspectors, inspections, and violations.	2011 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training, including refresher courses, on child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO technical advice and ensure adequate funding to enforce legal protections against child labor, including its worst forms.	2011 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement on the worst forms of child labor in Iraq and the Iraqi Kurdistan Region.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that child victims of human trafficking are properly screened and not prosecuted for crimes they were forced to commit; that children are not arrested, detained, or denied services solely on the basis of their family members' perceived ties to ISIS; and that children suspected of ISIS affiliation are not subjected to torture.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that allegations of sexual exploitation of girls in internally displaced persons camps by government officials are investigated and those responsible are held criminally liable.	2019
	Through enhanced coordination among government agencies, ensure that children previously cleared of charges related to armed conflict, human trafficking, and forced labor are not at risk of re-arrest and re-prosecution.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure all coordinating bodies meet and are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2019
	Implement the Child Protection Policy in Iraq, and adopt a child labor policy in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address child labor in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.	2019
	Ensure that children are discouraged from enlisting in armed groups and receiving military training.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that universal access to education is consistent with international standards, including for refugee and internally displaced children.	2013 – 2019
	Implement programs to address child labor in relevant sectors in Iraq, such as commercial sexual exploitation, informal education programs and shelters for human trafficking victims, and demobilize and reintegrate children engaged in armed groups.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Jamaica made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government approved an updated National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking and conducted a 4-day training workshop on human trafficking. It also significantly expanded the budget for the Program for Advancement through Health and Education, from $35 million in 2018 to $70.7 million in 2019. However, children in Jamaica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and illicit activities. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. Although the government has laws prohibiting the use of children in some illicit activities, it does not provide higher penalties for using, procuring, or offering children for the production and distribution of drugs compared to those for using adults. In addition, Jamaica's labor inspectorate lacks the authority to assess penalties for labor law violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jamaica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and illicit activities. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jamaica.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.2 (30,111)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.2

	Forced labor in domestic work (2,5,14)
	Use in illicit activities, including executing financial scams and serving as drugs and guns couriers (1,2,5,6,8,10,13,16-19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Jamaica

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Statistical Institute of Jamaica and the ILO released the results of the Jamaica National Youth Activity Survey, which estimated that 37,965 children are engaged in child labor in Jamaica, with 48.9 percent engaged in hazardous work. Children perform hazardous work primarily in the domestic work sector, in agriculture and fishing, in the wholesale and retail sectors, and in construction. (20) Children in rural areas are more likely to work than children in urban areas, work more hours, and engage in hazardous work. (3,20)

Jamaica is a destination and source country for commercial sexual exploitation of children. Jamaican children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor to countries including the United States, the United Kingdom, and Canada. (14) Sources indicate that children, sometimes at the behest of parents or criminal leaders referred to as “dons,” are forced into commercial sexual exploitation. (1) Young girls, immigrant children, lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender/intersex youth, children from poor families, and children from rural areas are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking and child sexual exploitation. (2,5)

Children also continue to be recruited by criminal organizations to engage in illicit activities, such as gang violence, guns and drug smuggling, and financial fraud, including lottery scamming. (1,2,5,16,19) Child domestic workers may be subjected to domestic servitude, and some children are subjected to forced begging. Many children are reported missing in Jamaica, some of whom may be subjected to forced labor. (2,5,21)

Although the law mandates free public education and school attendance rates are high, the cost for transportation, food, books, and uniforms creates barriers to education for some children. (1,22,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jamaica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jamaica’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children for the production and distribution of drugs.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 34(1) of the Child Care and Protection Act (24)

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 18(2) of the Defense Act (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		v
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 28 of the Child Care and Protection Act (24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 13(k) of the Jamaican Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms (33)

* No conscription (28)

The Occupational Safety and Health Bill was expected to be passed by parliament during the reporting year, but it still has not been passed. Regulations associated with the bill, if passed, will specify light work activities permitted for children ages 13 and 14. (1,5,34)

Jamaican laws do not specifically include higher penalties for perpetrators who use, procure, or offer a child for the production and distribution of drugs. (24,35) In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of schooling.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces and administers child labor laws in the formal sectors of the economy. The Child Labor Unit within MLSS coordinates and shares information with other agencies to address child labor issues. (6)
Child Protection and Family Services Agency (CPFSA)	Monitors and investigates suspected child labor violations and oversees efforts to address child labor. Housed under the Ministry of Education, Youth, and Information. (1,34) Receives complaints of child abuse, child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children through a hotline. Refers suspected cases of child abuse to law enforcement. (1,6)
Office of the Children's Advocate	Independently investigates reports of child abuse; partners with other agencies, including CPFSA and the police, to promote protection of children and address child labor. (6)
Jamaica Constabulary Force	Enforces criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Investigates, through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit, cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (6) Investigates, through the Center for the Investigation of Sexual Offenses and Child Abuse, cases of child and sexual offenses, and educates the public about sexual offenses against children. (1)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Protects and promotes human rights for all citizens. (36)

Organization/Agency	Role
Office of the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons	Monitors government efforts in protecting human trafficking victims, prosecuting cases, and implementing preventative measures. (5)
Ministry of Justice Victim Services Division	Provides emotional support, crisis management, and special intervention projects for children and adults. (5) Assists child victims of crime through the Children in Court Program, which offers victims access to social workers and counselors. (37)
Counter Terrorism & Organized Crime Investigation Branch, Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit	Responsible for special investigations of human trafficking, to include child trafficking and crimes such as forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities in which trafficking is involved. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MLSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	2,700,000 (38)	3,000,000 (38)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Unknown (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (6)

In 2019, the MLSS received funding in line with previous years. (5,6)

The Government of Jamaica is developing a National Referral Mechanism for child trafficking victims as an objective under the Child Protection Compact, in partnership with USDOS. (6,40)

However, inspectors still do not have the authority to assess penalties, and only 149 of the 183 inspectors received training on child labor. Furthermore, ongoing refresher training, though available, is not required unless an administrative order or policy directive is issued. (6) In 2019, 300 MLSS staff members were sensitized on child labor and trafficking through the Program of Advancement Through Health and Education (PATH). (38)

Child labor in Jamaica is mostly found in the informal sector; however, labor inspectors conduct inspections primarily in the formal sector, such as factories, building sites, docks, and ships. In 2019, there were no inspections in the informal sector, such as in rural areas, on family farms, or in homes. (6) Despite the presence of domestic child labor in Jamaica, inspectors are not allowed to enter and inspect private residences. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for prosecutors.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Yes (38)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	N/A (6)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	Yes(38)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	18(38)
Number of Violations Found	5 (5)	4(38)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	4(38)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	5(38)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	Yes(38)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Yes (6)

In 2019, the Government of Jamaica undertook efforts to increase awareness of human trafficking, including conducting several sensitization campaigns. These included an event organized by the Custos of Manchester, which brought together 1,300 youth from across Jamaica with the police, the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons, and local community leaders. (6) The National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons also launched the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Club in Schools Program. (6) However, research indicates that the conviction rates for child labor crimes are very low in relation to the prevalence of these crimes, and cases take a long time to prosecute. Furthermore, bureaucratic processes inhibit the efficacy of the Counter-terrorism and Organized Crime Investigation Branch Anti-Trafficking Unit in investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases. (5) Sources also indicate that prosecutors need additional training on the application of trafficking in persons laws for adequate prosecution of cases. (41) During the reporting period, there was one conviction related to trafficking and the sexual exploitation of a minor, as well as four other convictions related to the sexual exploitation of a minor. (38,40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS Program for the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinates the government's child labor policies and programs and identifies gaps in legislation across ministries. Collaborates with other ministries, such as the Ministry of Education, Youth, and Information, CPFSA, the Ministry of Justice's National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (NATFATIP), and the Ministry of National Security, to address gaps in legislation. (42) Research was unable to determine what actions were taken by this mechanism during the reporting period.
NATFATIP	Facilitates information exchanges between government agencies and external stakeholders and creates momentum for counter-trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of National Security, includes ministries and agencies across the government. (6,38) Oversees implementation of the country's National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking. (8) Meets regularly with the Jamaica Constabulary Force, the Director of Public Prosecutions, and relevant ministries. (6,8) In 2019, NATFATIP, in collaboration with the Tourism Product Development Company's Team Jamaica trainers, conducted a 4-day training workshop on human trafficking. (6)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NASTOCL)	Coordinates the government's design and implementation of activities and regulations to reduce child labor under the National Action Plan. Meets regularly with relevant government agencies and civil society. In 2019, NASTOCL, coordinated efforts towards the completion of the National Action Plan (NAP) to Eliminate Child Labor in Jamaica (2019-2024) along with the finalization of the Light and Hazardous Work List. (38)

Jamaica

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the Child Protection and Family Services Agency has assumed a coordinating function between various agencies charged with protecting children, the organization is not mandated or resourced to play this role. As such, Jamaica lacks an effective agency to coordinate among child labor, human trafficking, and other child-related issues. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the fact that child labor prevention and elimination strategies are still not integrated into the Compulsory Education Policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking (2018-2021)	Identifies objectives, actions, and responsible agencies to combat trafficking in persons, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor, through prevention, protection, and prosecution. (19) The government approved an updated National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking (2018–2021) in Cabinet on March 28, 2019. The National Action Plan is intended to address all forms of trafficking in persons and all potential victims, including victims of sex trafficking and forced labor, foreign-born and domestic victims, and children and adults. (6)

The government indicated that it approved an updated National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking (2018–2021) on March 28, 2019. (6) The government also indicated it completed development of a National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor through the Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR II) Project. (38) However, child labor prevention and elimination strategies are still not integrated into the Compulsory Education Policy. (8,43)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program for Advancement through Health and Education (PATH)†	Government of Jamaica and World Bank-funded, conditional cash transfer program that helps reduce child labor by requiring participants to attend school at least 85 percent of the academic days in a month. (6,44,45) More than 258,000 children participated during the rating period. (38) The MLSS significantly expanded the budget for PATH, from $35 million in 2018 to $70.7 million in 2019, with funds allocated to expand the school feeding program, provide support for provision of the rural transportation program, increase the average cash grant that PATH beneficiaries receive by 14–23 percent, increase the number of subjects available for PATH students, and retain the back-to-school grant. (6,22,23)
Citizen Security and Justice Program†	Cooperative crime and violence prevention initiative between the Government of Jamaica, the Inter-American Development Bank, the Department of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Development of Canada, and the Department for International Development of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Provides services to 50 vulnerable communities in 8 different parishes, and includes the goal of preventing gangs, criminals, and other actors from recruiting children. (5) In 2019, the government increased funding for the program to more than $10 million. (6)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor through technical assistance and research. These projects include: Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP), a research project implemented by ILO in 10 countries to increase the knowledge base on child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building capacity of the government to conduct research in this area; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II), a $7 million project implemented by Winrock International and Lawyers without Borders in six countries aimed at reducing child labor through improved legislation, monitoring and enforcement, and national plan implementation. (46,47) Through the CLEAR II project, the government continued to review and finalize regulations pertaining to child labor, including light work and hazardous works lists, under the Occupational Safety and Health Bill. The project also provided technical assistance to the government for the development of a National Action Plan on Child Labor. (5,48) As part of the MAP project, Jamaica officially launched its National Child Labor Survey. (46) The project ended in July 2019. (49) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
U.S.-Jamaica Child Protection Compact Partnership (2018–2022)	Jointly developed, 4-year plan partially funded by the U.S. Government to enhance the efforts of the Government of Jamaica to combat child trafficking. Finalized in 2018, Jamaica committed to providing staff and resources to fulfill the project's objectives. (2) Formally launched in 2019 with implementing partners Warnath, Winrock, IOM, and Encompass, and began activities and training across the island. (6)
Trafficking in Persons Club in School Program*†	Launched by NATFATIP and implemented by the Ministry of National Security and launched in October 2019, the program is designed to provide information, exposure, and knowledge to students and teachers regarding child trafficking to help protect them from becoming victims. (6)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Jamaica.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (50-53)

Although Jamaica funds education-related social programs, current resources are insufficient, and social programs do not fully address the scope and magnitude of the problem, including the worst forms of child labor. (5) Research found no evidence of programs targeting children working in agriculture, street work, commercial sexual exploitation, and other worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jamaica (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that legislation includes higher penalties for the use of children for the production and distribution of drugs.	2009 – 2019
	Raise the minimum working age of 15 to conform with the compulsory education age of 16.	2018 – 2019
	Pass legislation that will determine the specific light work activities and hours permissible for children ages 13 and 14 to facilitate enforcement.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that yearly refresher training is mandatory for all labor inspectors.	2018 – 2019
	Collect and publish complete data on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted not only in the formal sector, such as factories, building sites, docks, and ships, but also in the informal sector in urban and rural communities, and that ensure that labor inspectors are able to inspect domestic service worksites.	2014 – 2019
	Provide sufficient training for prosecutors to address the worst forms of child labor, such as child trafficking.	2018 – 2019
	Address bureaucratic barriers to effective investigation and prosecution of human trafficking cases and child labor cases, and ensure that these cases are prosecuted in a timely manner.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the Child Protection and Family Services Agency and any other relevant agency or coordinating body has the authority and resources necessary to effectively coordinate between child labor, human trafficking, and other child-related issues.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor and Social Security is implementing its Program for the Elimination of Child Labor.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Compulsory Education Policy.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that school costs, such as uniforms, books, food, and transportation, do not diminish access to free public education.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs adequately address child labor, including the worst forms of child labor and expand programs to assist child laborers who are involved in street work, commercial sexual exploitation, agricultural work, and other worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Jordan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor's Child Labor Unit established and began using an electronic child labor monitoring system to coordinate government and civil society efforts to remove children from child labor and provide them with services. Moreover, the government increased the number of families receiving assistance through the National Aid Fund, a program that provides cash transfers conditioned on families re-enrolling working children in school. In addition, the government continued to provide shelter, educational, and financial services to children engaged in child labor. However, children in Jordan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in street work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Insufficient resources hampered the Ministry of Labor's capacity to ensure compliance with child labor laws in the agricultural sector. Moreover, and despite government efforts, Syrian children still face barriers to accessing education due to socioeconomic pressures, bullying, and costs associated with transportation and supplies, among other issues. In addition, the government did not conduct investigations on cases related to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging or commercial sexual exploitation of children, even though there is evidence of these worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jordan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in street work. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (3,4) Based on the 2016 National Child Labor Survey, approximately 70,000 children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in child labor, most commonly in agriculture and retail trade. Approximately 80 percent of child laborers are Jordanian and about 15 percent are Syrian. (3) Boys constitute nearly 90 percent of those involved in child labor. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jordan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.0 (33,182)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	1.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.7

While Syrian children are granted access to Jordanian public schools, more than 83,000, or nearly one third of all Syrian refugee children, were not enrolled in formal or informal education in academic year 2018–2019. (2) These children face barriers to education, including bullying and harassment, and the costs of transportation, uniforms, and school materials. In addition, they are unprepared for their appropriate grade level because of interruptions in their early years of schooling. (4,25-28) NGOs have indicated that, among Syrian refugees, child labor in agriculture alongside family members has increased. (22)

In previous years, Jordan waived a requirement for documentation in order to expand access to education for Syrian children. However, the government opted not to extend the waiver for the 2019-2020 academic year. (29) The government continued to address the overcrowding of classrooms by providing school attendance in double-shift schools. (2,30,31) At these double-shift schools, Jordanian children attend in the morning and Syrian children attend in the afternoon. (20,32) Out of approximately 3,800 schools in the country, Jordan ran more than 354 schools on double-shift schedules. (2) In 2019, 200 of the latter were for refugee children, mainly Syrian. (2) In addition, the Ministry of Education provides an accelerated educational program for refugees who have been out of school for more than 3 years. (22) However, Jordanian and Syrian children attending double-shift schools are vulnerable to child labor because the school hours are considerably shorter, and fewer school hours leave more time for work. (33,34)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jordan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jordan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 73 of the Labor Code (35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 74 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Ministerial Order of 2011 (35,36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order of 2011 (36)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3(a) of the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking (37)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 298–299, 306, 310–311, 315, and 319 of the Penal Code; Article 3(b) of the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking (37,38)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 8 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act (39)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A*
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 3(a) of the National Service Act (40)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 7(a.2) and 10(b) of the Education Act (41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution (42)

* No volunteers are accepted to join the armed forces. (43,44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL), Directorate of Labor Affairs and Inspection	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor. Maintains a hotline to receive labor-related complaints, including complaints of child labor. (17) Identifies cases of child labor through worksite inspections and refers cases to the relevant services. Registers instances of child labor in a National Child Labor Database, which allows ministries to monitor and track children as they are identified and referred to services. (45) The hotline has operators during office hours, although operators who speak foreign languages were not always available. The hotline has an automated message recording after 3 p.m. (43,46) The phone number is difficult to locate and, based on available information, operators rarely respond to voicemails left after working hours. (43,46)
MOL Child Labor Unit	Coordinates government efforts to campaign against child labor, conducts training, and raises awareness about child labor issues. (20) Manages the Child Labor Monitoring System, a case management tool that helps coordinate efforts by relevant government agencies and civil society organizations to ensure that children are removed from child labor and provided with critical social and educational services. (2)
Public Security Directorate, Criminal Investigation Unit	Investigates and prosecutes violations of the Penal Code, including allegations of the worst forms of child labor. Operates a section to combat human trafficking. (17)
Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit of MOL and the Public Security Directorate	Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor, refers cases for prosecution, and coordinates with foreign embassies to identify victims of human trafficking and to repatriate workers. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient regulations and resources.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

When a labor inspector identifies a child laborer, the inspector issues a warning and may issue a fine, and asks the employer to send the child home while the inspector is still present. (33) A warning requires the employer to sign a pledge declaring that they will cease employing children. Without the pledge, the MOL can close the business. (20) The information about the child is then shared with the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD), which contacts the family to identify the appropriate social services needed. If a child labor violation has been identified, the labor inspector conducts unannounced follow-up inspections at the worksite to ensure compliance. (33) In 2019, the MOL issued 295 warnings for child labor. Following a warning, the case is logged into an electronic database and referred to the MOSD for follow up. (2)

In 2019, the government reported an increase in inspectors from 135 to 171 as inspectors in managerial positions took on increased field inspection responsibilities. (51) The MOL conducted 63,653 inspections, 7,143 of which were conducted in East Amman, Petra, and the al-Zaatari refugee camp, in which child labor likely exists. (2) However, the high number of inspections per inspector raises concerns that inspectors may not have the time to adequately identify and remediate labor law violations.

Insufficient regulations and resources, and the migratory nature of the agricultural sector hampered the MOL's capacity to ensure compliance with child labor laws in the agriculture sector. (15,17,53) In addition to ongoing national budget constraints, the MOL has not issued regulations on labor inspections in agriculture, which further limits its oversight in this sector. (33,53) In 2019, the MOL worked with Better Work Jordan on drafting and issuing manuals for inspectors in agriculture, chemicals, engineering, and plastics, each of which contains a chapter on child labor. (2)

The government did not provide information on the number of child labor penalties that were collected for inclusion in this report.

Jordanian children identified during labor inspections are referred to the Child Labor Unit of the MOSD. (33,54) Until early 2019, Syrian refugee children who were identified during labor inspections were separated from their families and taken to the Azraq refugee camp. (33,55,56) Families faced difficulties in reuniting with children sent to Azraq, including traveling long distances from urban areas where the majority of refugees live and other camps. (47,55,56) Additionally, those families that live in host communities (i.e., about 80 percent of all Syrian refugees) feared that by presenting themselves at Azraq, they would also be forced to stay at the Azraq camp and lose their freedom of movement and livelihoods. (46,55,56) According to UNICEF, the practice of detaining minors engaged in illegal labor continues following the closure of the Azraq facility, although at a reduced level. (46)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Yes
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (71)	No (71)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (20)	Yes (20)

In 2019, the Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit conducted 39 workshops with civil society organizations and 250 lectures throughout the country to raise awareness regarding human trafficking indicators. (1) During the reporting period, the Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit investigated 205 cases, 13 of which were found to be human trafficking cases and an additional 8 were cases of forced labor. (1) However, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jordan conducted no investigations on cases related to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging or commercial sexual exploitation of children, even though there is evidence of these worst forms of child labor. (20,21,23,71)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Formulates new policies, amends legislation as necessary, and oversees the implementation of child labor policies, including the National Framework to Combat Child Labor. Led by MOL, members include three other ministries, plus international and civil society organizations. (57) The National Committee on Child Labor did not meet in 2019. (51)
National Committee for the Prevention of Human Trafficking	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking, and chaired by the Ministry of Justice. Other members include representatives from 10 state agencies, including the Counter Trafficking Unit, which is in charge of human trafficking investigations. (58) The Counter Trafficking Unit is operated jointly by the Public Security Directorate and MOL. (43) The committee met in January 2019 and meets on an ad hoc basis. (1)

Although Jordan has a National Committee for the Prevention of Human Trafficking to coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including street and farm work. (59)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Framework to Combat Child Labor	Outlines the roles and responsibilities of key government agencies, including the ministries of Education, Labor, and Social Development; NGOs; and other stakeholders involved in identifying and responding to cases of child labor. Based on the Framework, MOL inspectors monitor child labor and refer cases to the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) and the Ministry of Education for the provision of services. (60) In 2019, the government continued training programs and the drafting of a new national framework. (2)
Jordan Response Plan for the Syria Crisis (2018–2020)	Integrates a refugee-oriented humanitarian response with a strategic plan for increasing the resilience of local communities. The plan has a particular focus on economic strengthening, education, and social protection. (61) In academic year 2018–2019, 200 double-shift schools served Syrian refugees. (2)
Plan of Action to Eliminate Child Labor in Tourism in Petra	Employs counselors to respond to children at risk of truancy, raise children’s awareness of the hazards of child labor and the significance of education, incorporate child labor prevention strategies into mainstream programs for legally employed children age 16 and older, and inform students about high-quality employment in the tourism sector. (62) The government has yet to implement the plan since passing it in 2015. During the reporting period, the government held meetings with UNICEF on carrying out the plan. (47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of services to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MOSD Child Labor Unit†	Provides support to children engaged in child labor, returns them to school, and provides services to their families; provides vocational training for youth; organizes training on child labor for families; and maintains the website of the National Child Labor Database. (64) Provides services to children engaged in child begging through centers in Madaba and Delail (Zarqa). (46) Active in 2019. (51)
Social Support Center in Marka†	ILO- and MOL-funded center operated in cooperation with the ILO at Marka, the Palestinian refugee camp. Activities include identifying child laborers, providing services such as non-formal education, and assisting families in finding alternate forms of supplemental income. (17) Active in 2019. (51)
National Aid Fund†	Overseen by MOSD, the Fund pays families through a conditional cash transfer program to withdraw their child from the labor market and re-enroll them in school. (17) In 2019, the fund increased the number of families receiving cash transfers from 92,000 to 105,000 in line with the 2019 to 2021 expansion plan. (65-67)
Non-Formal Education Centers	Funded by USAID and UNICEF, and operated by the Ministry of Education and local NGO Questscope, these centers throughout the country seek to bring school dropouts, including those engaged in or at risk of child labor, back into the educational system. Children attend classes 3 hours a day in a flexible learning environment, with class sizes of around 20 students and specially trained teachers. (33,34) Targets children age 13 and older. Upon completion of the curriculum, students receive a certificate indicating the equivalency of grade 10 education. (34) A center in Petra provides services to children at risk of child labor in the tourism industry in Petra. (68) Active in academic year 2018–2019. (69)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAP16)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. (63) In Jordan, the project strengthens the government’s ability to address child labor, especially in communities most affected by the Syrian refugee crisis, including updating relevant policies and programs. The project also carries out limited research on the nature of child labor in agriculture. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (70)

Although Jordan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs does not fully address the extent of the problem, including the worst forms of child labor in agriculture, construction, and street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jordan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminalizes forced labor as its own offense.	2019
Enforcement	Improve the quality of the Ministry of Labor's hotline by ensuring that operators, including those who speak foreign languages, are available outside of business hours, and ensuring that the translated recorded message is of high quality.	2018 – 2019
	Publish information about labor law enforcement, including labor inspectorate funding and the number of penalties collected for child labor violations.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that Ministry of Labor inspectors have the resources needed to carry out inspections in the agricultural sector; and ensure that regulations are issued to mandate labor inspections in agriculture.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that refugee children identified during labor inspections are referred to social services and are not separated from their families and taken to refugee camps.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that investigations are conducted on the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the number of inspections conducted per inspector allows for high quality inspections.	2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor and other forms of child labor, including street and farm work.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Committee on Child Labor meets and carries out its mandate.	2019
Government Policies	Implement the Plan of Action to Eliminate Child Labor in Tourism in Petra.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Continue to expand access to education for all children, including providing after-school programs, extending school hours, and ensuring Syrian refugees may enroll in school.	2013 – 2019
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in agriculture, construction, and street vending.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Kazakhstan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Internal Affairs, in cooperation with other government agencies, carried out targeted joint inspection operations in areas where child labor may occur, and the government adopted a new national action plan on elimination of the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Kazakhstan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in markets. The government lacks current, comprehensive, and detailed research on child labor, including in cotton production. Labor inspectors also have limited authority to conduct routine inspections. In addition, the government did not carry out social programs to assist children engaged in all relevant forms of child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kazakhstan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in markets. (1,2,3,4,5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kazakhstan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.2 (79,690)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		106.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting vegetables, weeding, collecting worms, and harvesting cotton† (4,5,8-15)
Industry	Construction,† activities unknown (2,5)
Services	Working in markets and on the streets, including transporting and selling items (4,5,15-18)
	Domestic work, including child care (2,5,19)
	Working in gas stations (15)
	Car washing (15-18)
	Working in restaurants† as waiters (15,16,18,20)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,15)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is no current and comprehensive research on child labor in Kazakhstan that can provide details about the number of children working in different sectors, including in cotton production, the nature of their work, or the hazards involved.

Migrant children from the Kyrgyz Republic, some of whom may be unaccompanied, might engage in work in Kazakhstan. (5) Migrant children who are above the minimum working age theoretically have a right to a legal

Kazakhstan

work permit, which would entitle them to work protections such as limited work hours. (5,21) However, in practice, migrant children often cannot obtain legal work permits because they do not list “work” as their purpose for visiting the country when entering Kazakhstan. Thus, migrant children are often unable to work legally and have their labor rights protected. (5,21) Migrants from the Kyrgyz Republic, including children, do not obtain work permits due to lack of information, fear, corruption, and discrimination against migrants. For Kyrgyzstani children over age 16, unregulated status means that they may be subject to administrative fines, arrest, and detention with adults. (5)

Migration authorities sometimes register migrant children under age 16 as unnamed family members, rather than under their own name, which prevents them from receiving Kazakhstani identification documents. (22,23) Some of these undocumented migrant children fall victim to forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation in Kazakhstan. (5,14) Although Kazakhstan guarantees free education regardless of migration status, migrant children face barriers to accessing education. Some school officials refuse to enroll students who lack Kazakhstani identification documents, and many parents of undocumented children lack awareness of their right to appeal such decisions to regional education officials. (5,22) Landlords often refuse to register migrant tenants, which prevents migrant children from enrolling in local schools. (23) Reports indicate that at least 50 percent of all migrant children did not attend school due to a lack of identification or registration documents, especially in Nur-Sultan and Almaty. (15)

Children with disabilities in Kazakhstan face challenges accessing education due to inaccessible school buildings, a lack of specialists able to provide inclusive education services, and official disability evaluations that render children eligible only for at-home education or ineligible for education entirely. (23,24) Children with disabilities who live in specialized, closed-care institutions may be compelled to assist caregivers in feeding, changing diapers, bathing, and dressing younger children. (19) Disabled children who are unable to access mainstream or inclusive education are at greater risk of being sent to such state institutions. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kazakhstan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kazakhstan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 31 of the Labor Code (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code; Article 153 of the Criminal Code (21,25)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code; Decree of the Minister of Health and Social Development No. 944 of 2015 (21,26)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 7 of the Labor Code; Article 135 of the Criminal Code (21,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 135 of the Criminal Code (25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 134–135 and 312 of the Criminal Code (25)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 132–133 and 135.2(9) of the Criminal Code; Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code (21,25)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 38.1(2) of the Military Service Act (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 31 of the Military Service Act (27)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 41 of the Law on Children's Rights; Articles 132 and 267 of the Criminal Code (25,28)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 30 of the Constitution (29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 8.2 of the Education Act (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31,32)

In 2019, the government increased the maximum penalty for involvement of a minor in illicit activities by one year. The maximum prison term for involvement of a minor in prostitution increased from five years to six years and when force or coercion is used against the child for the same crime, the term increased from a maximum of seven years to a maximum of eight. (33) For the crime of child trafficking, the maximum prison term was raised from seven to nine years and the penalties of the same crime under aggravated circumstances were raised from a range of seven to ten years of imprisonment to a new range of nine to twelve years. (33)

The Labor Code's protections, including the minimum age for employment and prohibitions on hazardous work, do not meet international standards because they do not cover children without a written work contract. (21)

Article 134 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Kazakhstan criminalizes involving a minor into prostitution and Article 135 of the Criminal Code criminalizes trafficking of minors, including for the purpose of sexual exploitation. However, no law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (25)

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP)	Enforces child labor laws and conducts labor inspections through the Ministry's Committee on Labor, Social Protection and Migration. (15)
Ministry of Education and Science	Receives child labor complaints. An official from the regional-level Department of Education responds to reports of child labor and determines whether law enforcement should investigate the case. (34) If the case is in agriculture, local officials meet with parents and school officials to reinforce that children should be in school during the academic year. The Ministry's Center for the Adaptation of Minors provides assistance to victims of the worst forms of child labor and makes referrals to appropriate government services or NGOs for further assistance. (34)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Identifies and carries out initial investigation of criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. Through the Criminal Police Department's Unit to Combat Crimes Against the Person, identifies and investigates cases of child trafficking. (15)

Kazakhstan

Organization/Agency	Role
Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Provides oversight of police operations related to child labor crimes. (15)
Child Protection Hotlines	Receive reports of illegal child labor. There are three hotlines, one run by the Ministry of Education and Science's Child Protection Committee, one run by the Ombudsman for Children's Rights, and one run by a local NGO. (15)

The Government of Kazakhstan maintains mobile squads in all regions of the country to monitor and respond to child labor violations. These squads consist of internal affairs officers, officials from local administrations, state labor inspectors, health professionals, youth workers, and psychologists. (35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MLSP that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of an appropriate number of inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2.4 million (34)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	261 (34)	254 (36)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (37)	Yes (15)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (34)	Yes (15)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	Yes (15)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (34)	Yes (15)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	6,681 (34)	9,522 (36)
Number Conducted at Worksite	6,402 (34)	228 (36)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	6 (34)	5 (36)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	4 (34)	4 (36)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	4 (34)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (34)	Yes (36)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (34)	Yes (36)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (38)	Yes (35)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (34)	Yes (36)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (34)	Yes (15)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (34)	Yes (15)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Kazakhstan's workforce, which includes more than 8.97 million workers. (39) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitional economies, Kazakhstan would employ about 449 labor inspectors. (40,41)

Presidential Decree No. 757 places restrictions on the conditions under which the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) is authorized to conduct routine labor inspections. (42) Labor inspectors from the MLSP are empowered to conduct inspections only in response to complaints, which cannot be anonymous, and must provide advance notice of the inspection to businesses. (15) Inspectors can also conduct routine worksite visits based on risk assessment reports; in 2019, MLSP conducted 228 such visits. Businesses must be notified in advance of these site visits, unless the worksite is in a very remote location or the inspection is related to certain extreme health and safety hazards. (15,38) The government supplements MLSP's labor inspections with unannounced site visits that occur during annual, inter-Ministerial campaigns to raise awareness about, detect, and combat child labor. These campaigns are widely publicized, limited in duration, and occur at approximately the same time each year. (15) As a result, the site visits conducted during these campaigns may fail to adequately detect child labor in seasonal agriculture or at businesses that conceal violations in anticipation of these high-profile campaigns.

From June 1–12, 2019, the Ministry of Education and Science, in cooperation with the Department of Health, MLSP, police, and other public organizations conducted a total of 4,083 site visits to detect child labor as part of the government’s annual “Twelve Days Against Child Labor” campaign. Locations inspected included markets, gas stations, and construction sites. (15) Information was not available about the number of child labor violations detected as a result of these site visits. (15) From July 26–August 1, 2019, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA), in cooperation with other government organizations and NGOs, conducted site visits to detect child labor as part of the government’s annual “Employment” campaign. (15) These site visits identified 185 child labor violations, of which 45 were in the entertainment sector, 6 in transportation, 10 in the agricultural sector, and 124 in other sectors. Violations were reportedly related to employment conditions, such as working extended hours or working without an employment contract. (15) While MOIA could not issue penalties directly, 104 violations identified during the “Employment” campaign were referred to the Prosecutor General’s Office (PGO) or MLSP to assess penalties against employers. (15) Research was unable to determine how many of these referrals resulted in the imposition of penalties. The government did not provide information for inclusion in this report clarifying the number of announced and unannounced labor inspections, including site visits, MLSP conducted outside of annual inter-Ministerial campaigns.

In 2019, the Department of Education within the Ministry of Education and Science worked with the NGO Sana Sezim to monitor for child labor violations in the cotton harvest in Turkestan and Almaty regions, where the government has identified that children are at risk of child labor in cotton picking. (14,15) No instances of child labor were reported as a result of this monitoring. (15)

In addition, during the reporting period, labor inspectors received specialized training on identifying victims of human trafficking. (43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (34)	Yes (15)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Yes (15)

Number of Violations Found	11 (34)	10 (15)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	11 (34)	5 (36)
Number of Convictions	2 (34)	1 (36)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	2 (34)	1 (36)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (34)	Yes (15)

MOIA employs 42 operational officers who work specifically on trafficking in persons, including cases involving minors. Reports indicated that this number of officers may be insufficient to adequately enforce criminal prohibitions against the worst forms of child labor in Kazakhstan. (15) In 2019, the government provided training to law enforcement agencies on trafficking in persons. Eight training sessions for police were conducted at the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Training Center at the MOIA Legal Academy in Karaganda; three training sessions for prosecutors were conducted at the PGO Law Enforcement Academy; and three training sessions for judges were conducted at the Judicial Training Institute of the Supreme Court in Nur-Sultan. (15)

During the reporting period, MOIA investigated 10 cases related to the worst forms of child labor. Eight cases involved violations related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, with five cases initiated based on prohibitions in Criminal Code Art. 134, coercion of minors into prostitution; two cases based on Criminal Code Art. 312, engagement of minors into pornographic activities; and one case based on Criminal Code Art. 135, trafficking in minors for the purpose of sexual exploitation. (15) MOIA also investigated two cases for violation of prohibitions against hazardous child labor under Criminal Code Art. 135. All 10 of these investigations are ongoing. (15) All of the children identified in these cases were removed from the exploitative situation in question and referred to the IOM and government-funded shelters for services. (15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Council on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Implements the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor 2020–2022. (44) Chaired by MLSP. In 2019, the National Coordination Council was re-established after being dormant during 2018, and met three times. (15,44)
Inter-Agency Trafficking in Persons Working Group	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking and recommends improvements to anti-human trafficking legislation, prevention strategies, protection of victims, and the prosecution of offenders. (15,45) Chaired by MOIA and MLSP on a 2-year rotational basis. Its members include 13 state bodies, 2 international organizations (IOM and OSCE), and 5 NGOs. (15) The working group met three times in 2019 to discuss implementation of the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking in Persons. (15,43)
Special Working Group on Implementation of the Trafficking in Persons Report's Recommendations*	Coordinates government action to respond to recommendations from the international community on improving efforts to combat trafficking in persons and labor exploitation. Led by MOIA and includes the PGO, MLSP, Supreme Court, and Ministry of Foreign Affairs. (46) During the reporting period, met twice and developed an Action Plan to implement international recommendations related to combating trafficking in persons and labor exploitation. (46,43)
Committee for the Protection of Children's Rights	Works to protect children from exploitation. Operates under the Ministry of Education and Science at the regional-level departments of education. (15,47) In 2019, the Committee for the Protection of Children's Rights conducted activities to prevent violence against children and child labor exploitation. (15)
Human Rights Ombudsman	Monitors observance of the rights of children. Receives and responds to complaints about violations of children's rights and drafts annual reports on children's rights. (15) In 2019, the Human Rights Ombudsman published a report assessing the status of children's rights in Kazakhstan in 2018. (15) The only reception office of the Ombudsman for Human Rights is located in Nur-Sultan, making it difficult for the Ombudsman's office to receive and respond to complaints of violations in remote regions. (5)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2020–2022)†	Addresses three priority areas, including (a) the creation of policies and laws to combat the worst forms of child labor; (b) the creation of programs to monitor vulnerable communities and sectors with the highest risk of child labor, and provide services to children who have been exploited in child labor; (c) raise awareness about the worst forms of child labor. (44) In 2019, the government re-established and updated membership on the National Coordination Council on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor, which is responsible for implementing this plan. (44)
National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking in Persons (2018–2020)	Addresses priority areas, including (a) prevention of forced child labor in the cotton and construction sectors; (b) exchange of information among government agencies on human trafficking and child pornography; (c) research on the worst forms of child labor and the provision of recommendations; and (d) raising awareness of human trafficking among children. (34,48) The Inter-Agency Trafficking in Persons Working Group within MOIA continued to implement this plan in 2019. (15)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Juvenile Care Centers†	Ministry of Education and Science-run centers for minors located throughout the 16 regions of Kazakhstan. Provide temporary shelter and assistance to vulnerable children, including child victims of the worst forms of child labor, and street children. (43) These centers were operational in 2019. (43)
Shelters for Trafficking Victims†	Funded by the government and operated by NGOs, provide legal, psychological, medical, and educational services to survivors of human trafficking in nine cities, including Nur-Sultan and Almaty. The shelters provided services in 2019. (15)
Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	Raise public awareness on child labor issues. (2) In 2019, the Ministry of Education and Science, with the cooperation of other agencies, implemented the “Twelve Days Against Child Labor” campaign, which included 945 articles and 400 TV programs raising awareness about child labor and hotlines for reporting violations. (15) MOIA, in cooperation with other government organizations and NGOs, implemented the “Employment” campaign, which included 2,000 prevention events and educational meetings. (15)

† Program is funded by the Government of Kazakhstan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (49)

Although the Government of Kazakhstan implemented programs in 2019 to protect vulnerable children and raise awareness about child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in services or agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kazakhstan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age provisions and hazardous work prohibitions apply to all children, including those working without an employment contract.	2016 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2014 – 2019
	Publish information about the labor inspectorate’s operations, including funding for the labor inspectorate and the number of penalties that were collected for child labor violations.	2019
	Fully empower labor inspectors to proactively conduct on-site inspections, including on an unannounced basis, and ensure that such inspections are conducted regularly throughout the year.	2019
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations detected during the annual “Twelve Days Against Child Labor” campaign, and on the number of penalties issued in response to violations referred to the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection during this campaign.	2019
	Increase the number of human trafficking-focused law enforcement officers to ensure adequate enforcement of criminal prohibitions against the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Coordination	Ensure that individuals in remote areas of the country are able to file complaints about child labor violations with the Ombudsman for Human Rights.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct research to gather comprehensive data on child labor, including the activities carried out by children working in agriculture, in construction, and in services, to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that all children have access to education, including children with irregular migration status and children with disabilities, and raise awareness in vulnerable communities about existing remedies for denial of school enrollment.	2018 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor, particularly in the agriculture and service sectors.	2014 – 2019

In 2019, Kenya made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Kenyan National Police launched a cyber-center to respond to crimes involving online exploitation of children, including child trafficking. The government also expanded an information system for collecting and aggregating data related to child protection, including cases related to the worst forms of child labor, and drafted new procedures and guidelines for law enforcement's handling of cases involving children. However, children in Kenya engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Kenya has yet to ratify the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. In addition, the gap between the compulsory education age and minimum age for work leaves children ages 14–16 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. The government also has not committed sufficient resources to child labor law enforcement.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kenya engage in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kenya.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	35.6 (3,736,030)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	85.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.7

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Kenyan children are victims of human trafficking, both within and outside the country. They are exploited for domestic work, agricultural work, fishing, begging, and street vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (2,19) Both boys and girls are victims of commercial sexual exploitation in tourism-heavy areas on the Kenyan coast, and in Nairobi and Kisumu. (2,20,21,26) Commercial sexual exploitation of children also occurs in drug production sites (miraa), near gold mines, along major highways, and in fishing areas on Lake Victoria. (2,19,22) Children from East Africa and South Sudan are subject to forced labor in domestic service and agriculture, in addition to commercial sexual exploitation. (19,27) A report also found that children are trafficked from Ethiopia to northern Kenya and exploited for work in domestic service, carrying goods, and street work. (15)

Children work at informal gold mining sites in western Kenya, which involves using pickaxes and other dangerous tools, working underground, and carrying heavy loads. (1,12,13,28) Some children working on these sites have been trapped in collapsed mines, suffocated, or exposed to mercury poisoning. (12,13) In addition, children participate in the harvesting and processing of khat (miraa), an addictive stimulant. (2,29-31)

The government, in coordination with UNICEF, has previously published data on child poverty and its potential to increase vulnerability to child labor; however, the last national child labor survey was conducted in 2000. (4,7,32) As a result, data may no longer accurately reflect the current child labor situation in Kenya.

Kenyan law mandates free basic education and prohibits schools from charging tuition fees. (22,33,34) However, the cost of unofficial school fees, books, and uniforms prevents some children from attending school. (35,36) The Births and Deaths Registration Act requires birth registration; however, many children living in the country are not registered at birth. As a result, non-registered children have difficulty accessing services, including education, because they must provide a birth certificate before enrolling in school or sitting for exams, despite the Education Act stipulating that no child be denied admission to school for lack of proof of age. (37-39) An insufficient number of schools and teachers, a lack of hygiene facilities and products for girls, and sexual abuse within schools further contribute to children in Kenya dropping out of school and becoming vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (5,8,40,41) In addition, in isolated cases, school administrators deny pregnant girls admittance to schools. (42-45)

Children seeking asylum or of refugee status are often restricted to living in designated areas, such as the Kakuma and Dadaab refugee camps. (45) These camps have an insufficient number of schools and existing facilities lack adequate educational materials, such as textbooks, electricity, and latrines. (2,46,47) These conditions likely contribute to heightened vulnerabilities of refugee children to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (19,45,48)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kenya has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2000, Kenya signed, but has not yet acceded to, the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. Commercial sexual exploitation of children continues to be a serious problem in Kenya. (8)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kenya's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	17	Section 56 of the Employment Act; Section 12 of the Employment (General) Rules; Section 10.4 of the Children Act (33,49,50)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 2 and 10.1 of the Children Act (33,49)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 12 and the Fourth Schedule of the Employment Act (General) Rules (50)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution; Sections 4.1 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 174 and 254–266 of the Penal Code; Article 3 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Sexual Offences Act; Section 13.1 of the Children Act (33,49,51-54)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Sexual Offences Act; Section 13.1 of the Children Act; Section 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 174 and 254–263 of the Penal Code (33,49,52-54)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 8–9, 11–12, and 14–16 of the Sexual Offences Act; Sections 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Section 15 of the Children Act (33,49,54)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Section 16 of the Children Act (33,49)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 10.2 of the Children Act; Article 243 (1) of the Kenya Defence Forces Act (33,55)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 243 (1) of the Kenya Defence Forces Act (55)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act (53)
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡	Sections 28 and 30 of the Basic Education Act (34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 7.2 of the Children Act; Sections 28–29 and 32 of the Basic Education Act; Article 53(b) of the Constitution (33,34,51)

* No conscription (55)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (85)

Kenya

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Kenya permits light work activities for children ages 13 through 16, including agricultural and horticultural work not exceeding 2 hours, though it does not establish limits on the number of hours for other identified activities. (50) Also, children are required to attend school only until age 14. This standard makes children ages 14–16 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school and yet cannot legally work. (34,58)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP), the National Police Service (NPS), and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (ODPP) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/ Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (1) Comprises both the State Department for Labor and the State Department for Social Protection. Directs activities to promote awareness and withdraw children from child labor through the State Department for Labor's Child Labor Division. (1,59) Provides services to children in need of social protection, including responding to cases of child exploitation, through the Department of Child Services (DCS) under the State Department for Social Protection. (60) Each of Kenya's 47 counties staffs a County Coordinator to provide information and coordinate with the DCS on cases involving child exploitation. (2)
National Police Service (NPS)	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor, in coordination with the MLSP and the ODPP. (1) Includes Child Protection Units, located within police stations, which are focused on the prevention of commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. (8,61) The Tourism Police Unit addresses commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry. (7)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (ODPP)	Enforces laws through the prosecution of criminal offenses, including labor-related offenses. ODPP directs the NPS to investigate cases. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSP that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (8)	Unknown (1)
Number of Labor Inspectors	112 (8)	85 (1)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (1)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (1)

During the reporting period, the size of the labor inspectorate was reduced from 112 to 85 inspectors, partly due to retirements within the inspectorate. (1) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Kenya's workforce, which includes more than 19 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Kenya would employ about 1,321 labor inspectors. (62-64) Moreover, the MLSP's budget is inadequate and hinders the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (1,8,17,65)

The government did not provide information about its labor inspectorate funding, number of child labor violations found, and penalties imposed and collected for inclusion in this report. (8)

The Department of Labor refers cases involving child labor to the Department of Child Services (DCS), within the MLSP, for placement of victims in social services. (1) The DCS developed a Child Protection Information Management System that collects, aggregates, and reports on child protection data, including child labor violations, to assist child protection officials to track and report on child protection activities. (8,45) After piloting the system in 2017, in 2019 the DCS expanded it to all of Kenya's 47 counties. (1) The MLSP reported 578 separate cases of child labor through the Information Management System; however, it remains unclear the number of cases that were identified through labor inspections. (66)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the NPS that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including resource allocation and regional distribution of services.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Unknown (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (8)	Unknown (1)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (8)	18 (2,66,67)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (8)	138 (2,66,67)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (8)	7 (1,66,67)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	Unknown (1)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Yes (66)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (1)

The government did not provide disaggregated information regarding the number of prosecutions, convictions, and sentences imposed related to cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (2) An NGO reported two cases related to forced begging from previous years that were concluded during the reporting period, resulting in the conviction and imposition of sentences of over 3 years and 30 years, respectively, for the offenders. (66) In addition, criminal law enforcement authorities raided a bar in Mombasa that was connected to forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation, resulting in the rescue of two minors; the case is currently undergoing criminal proceedings. (2,68)

In 2019, the NPS, with the support of the Government of the United Kingdom and the UNODC, opened a cyber-center that investigates cases related to online child sexual exploitation. The cyber unit receives tips related to child exploitation and child trafficking, and refers cases for law enforcement action. (2,69) The unit responded to 10 cases of cyber-trafficking and sexual exploitation of children, resulting in 5 prosecutions. (67) The government also partnered with an NGO to provide training on legal aspects of child protection related to human trafficking, including referral mechanisms for child victims, for at least 50 local magistrates, police, probation officers, prosecutors, and other officials who use the court system. (2)

Kenya

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

A report by the National Council on the Administration of Justice found that the number and distribution of Child Protection Units (CPUs) within police stations was insufficient to provide services to all Kenyans; there are only 23 CPUs, distributed across 16 of Kenya's 47 counties. Moreover, magistrates lacked specialized knowledge in children's laws, policies, and rights, including the Sexual Offenses Act and the Children Act. (61)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Oversees efforts to eliminate child labor. (1,14) Comprises government agencies, private employers, workers' organizations, and civil society organizations. Chaired by the Permanent Secretary, with coordination duties performed by the MLSP Child Labor Division. (14) Research could not determine whether the committee met during the reporting period. (1)
National Council for Children's Services	Coordinates government efforts on issues related to child rights and welfare, including child labor. Comprises a chairperson, appointed by the President, and council members drawn from ministries, departments, agencies, and civil society. (70,71) Research could not determine whether the committee met during the reporting period. (1)
National Labor Board	Advises the Cabinet Secretary of Labor, Social Security and Services on all issues related to labor and employment, including legal and policy issues. (14) The National Labor Board met in December 2019. (1)
Counter-Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Coordinates the implementation of policies related to human trafficking and provides prevention and protection services to victims under the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act. Led by the State Department of Social Protection of the MLSP and comprises human trafficking and child protection specialists from multiple government agencies and NGOs. (2) The committee met four times in 2019, working with NGOs on law enforcement interventions related to human trafficking and the referral of victims to social services. (2,66)
Local, Advisory, and District Child Labor Committees	Coordinate activities to eliminate child labor at the local level. (1) Research could not determine whether the committees met during the year. (1)

Although the government has coordination mechanisms, research could not find information about their accomplishments during the reporting period. A lack of funding and resources limited activities of coordinating bodies in 2019. (1)

A Special Task Force on Children under the Administration of Justice published a status report on the justice system's ability to provide for the special needs of children, including victims of exploitation. Among other actions, the task force drafted new protocols for the handling of cases involving children and developed procedural guidelines to improve the ability of CPUs within the NPS to respond to the needs of child victims. (61,72)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor	Proposes strategies to prevent, identify, withdraw, rehabilitate, and reintegrate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms. Establishes child labor free zones, which are geographical areas in which children are systematically removed from work and reintegrated into schools or vocational training programs. (73) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor during the reporting period. (1)
National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya (2015–2022)	Provides an operational framework for coordination, planning, implementing, and monitoring programs for children's welfare. Outlines programs, community awareness, and research with the goal of reducing child labor and other child exploitation cases by 50 percent by 2022. (70) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya during the reporting period. (1)
MLSP Strategic Plan (2018–2022)†	Establishes blueprints for implementation of MLSP activities, programs, and projects, including the elimination of child labor. Proposes an updated child labor survey, development of a database on child labor, and creation of child labor free zones. (74) The government drafted the Strategic Plan in 2018 to cover the period 2018–2022, but launched the policy in 2019. (75)
National Employment Policy (2017)	Mandates reporting on the number of children withdrawn from child labor and the progress of child labor free zones. (8) In 2019, the government took steps to operationalize the policy by establishing a National Employment Authority that will oversee implementation of the policy. (1)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (8,80,81)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the UN Development Assistance Framework. (81)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Projects to Combat Child Labor and Increase Education Access†	Government programs that aim to combat child labor, including its worst forms, such as commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. Child Protection and Rescue Centers temporarily house child victims and provide counseling and reintegration services for children; Kitui County Child Rescue Center withdraws and rehabilitates child laborers and provides counseling and life skills training. (17) The School Meals Program serves hot lunches to 2 million vulnerable children, resulting in improved school attendance. (5,17,82) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement other projects during the reporting period. (1)
National Safety Net Program (2013–2026)†	$411 million, government-funded, 5-year cash transfer and social safety net program, with support from the World Bank. (8) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Safety Net Program during the reporting period. (1)
Child Labor Free Supply Chain Certifications†	Government program supported by the EU and Cesvi, an Italian NGO. Develops child labor free supply chain certifications. (7,8) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Labor Free Supply Chain Certification program during the reporting period. (1)
USDOL-Funded Projects to Combat Child Labor and Support Youth Apprenticeships (2016–2020)	USDOL-funded projects to combat child labor and support youth apprenticeships. Includes $3 million Better Utilization of Skills for Youth (BUSY) through Quality Apprenticeships (2016–2020). Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
UN Humanitarian Assistance Program	UNICEF-implemented program to provide educational and nutritional services to children. (83)

† Program is funded by the Government of Kenya.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,8,84,85)

Although Kenya has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kenya (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that light work provisions limit the number of hours for all light work activities.	2019
	Raise the compulsory education age to 17 to be equivalent to the minimum age for work.	2013 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors receive training on child labor laws, including refresher courses.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection has sufficient financial and human resources to address labor violations.	2017 – 2019
	Authorize labor inspectors to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2010 – 2019
	Publish information about labor inspectorate funding and the number of child labor violations found, including penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information about criminal law enforcement training, including refresher courses and new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and prosecutions and convictions for offenses related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the number and improve regional distribution of Child Protection Units to ensure adequate coverage across all areas of Kenya.	2019
	Ensure that magistrates receive training on laws protecting children from the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Coordination	Ensure coordinating bodies are active and have sufficient resources to carry out their intended mandates.	2016 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure the implementation of child labor policies, including the National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor and the Framework for the National Child Protection System for Kenya.	2017 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the UN Development Assistance Framework.	2013 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish updated data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2019
	Improve access to education by increasing the number of schools and teachers, addressing sexual abuse in schools, increasing birth registrations for children, and eliminating or defraying the cost of school fees, books, and uniforms.	2010 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls and children of refugee status, by ensuring that pregnant girls can remain in school, improving access to hygiene facilities and products within schools, and increasing the number of schools and improving educational facilities in refugee camps.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure the implementation of government-funded social programs.	2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Kiribati made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Employment and Human Resources took steps to draft regulations related to light work for children and on the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Kiribati perform dangerous tasks in construction and street vending. Existing laws do not identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and do not prohibit the domestic trafficking of children. In addition, the government has not adopted a national policy to combat the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Kiribati perform dangerous tasks in construction and street vending. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kiribati. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cutting toddy palm trees for toddy (1)
	Fishing and harvesting clams (1)
Industry	Construction, cargo loading, and seafaring (1,2,4,5)
Services	Street work, including vending and working in kava bars (1,2,4)
	Domestic work (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation aboard fishing vessels (2,5)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182.

The government did not collect or publish data on child labor in 2019. (2) During the reporting period, evidence indicated that a small number of underage girls were allegedly engaged in commercial sexual exploitation with crewmembers from foreign fishing vessels. In exchange, the girls received cash, alcohol, food, and goods. (2,5)

Children face barriers to accessing education, including associated costs and a lack of schools in remote areas. (1,4) In addition, most children with disabilities do not have access to education. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kiribati has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kiribati's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children and the prohibition of child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 115 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 117 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 244 and 249 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(a, c, d) and 122 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7,8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 43 of the Measures to Combat Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Section 118(1)(b) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7,9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 136 and 141–142 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(f), 118(1)(g), and 118(2) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7,8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 142 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(h) and 118(1)(i) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7,8)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 118(1)(e) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (7)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 7 of the Education Act (10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 11 of the Education Act (10)

† No standing military

The government has not identified by national law or regulations the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. Under Article 116 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code, the laws do not specify the activities and hours of work per week that are acceptable for children engaged in light work, or the conditions under which light work can be undertaken. (7) However, during the reporting period, the Ministry of Employment and Human Resources (MEHR) drafted and is reviewing the types of hazardous work prohibited and the regulations relating to light work for children. (2) Also, Kiribati's laws prohibiting child trafficking are insufficient because they do not specifically prohibit the domestic trafficking of children. (7,9) In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (7,10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MEHR that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Human Resources (MEHR)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (11)
Kiribati Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2) Investigates cases of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children through a special Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses Unit. There were no cases reported or investigated in 2019. (12)
Child Protection Officer, Ministry of Women, Youth and Social Affairs (MWYSA)	Removes children from harmful situations, including as a result of sexual exploitation and harsh or exploitative labor. (11,13) Assists with the implementation of the Children, Young People and Family Welfare Act. (14) Coordinates the Safenet referral system. (2,5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MEHR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (5)	$10,000 (2)
Number of Labor Inspectors	3 (15)	3 (2)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (5)	Yes (2)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (15)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	No (15)	No (2)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	133 (15)	133 (2)
Number Conducted at Worksite	133 (15)	Unknown (2)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (15)	Unknown (2)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (15)	Unknown (2)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (15)	Unknown (2)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (15)	Yes (2)
Routine Inspections Targeted	No (15)	No (2)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (5)	Yes (2)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (15)	Yes (2)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (2)

During the reporting period, the government had resource and capacity constraints that restricted all services and activities. Although the number of labor inspectors meets the ILO's technical advice, the government's limited ability to inspect and report on child labor issues was further affected by geographical distances, isolation, sparse population, and Internet connectivity challenges. (2,5)

The government has a standard operating procedure that outlines how to conduct labor inspections and includes a checklist template that requires information on the ages of all workers. (2,5) The government did not provide information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations found, penalties imposed, or penalties collected for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Kiribati Police Force that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including refresher courses for criminal investigators.

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (2)

The government did not provide information on refresher courses provided for inclusion in this report. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Kiribati National Human Rights Taskforce (KNHRT)	Coordinates national UN reports. (5) MEHR and MWYSA are members. (2,15) During the reporting period, KNHRT coordinated information and completed its national report for the Universal Periodic Review in January 2020. (12)
Child Protection Working Group*	Coordinates child protection issues with MWYSA. Oversees the implementation of the Child, Young People and Family Welfare Act. (2,14) This coordinating body was active in 2019. (2,12)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children, Young People, and Families Welfare System Policy, 2013	Focuses on strengthening the welfare system, in part, by implementing services to prevent the abuse, violence, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people, including in hazardous labor. (13) This policy was active during the reporting period. (2)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (16) During the reporting period, UNICEF supported the Kiribati government in finalizing child protection inter-agency guidelines and referral pathways, training service providers on the guidelines and 20 government social welfare officers in child protection social work, and developing police procedures for child victims. (17)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,18)

During the reporting period, the Government of Kiribati continued to support all existing anti-child labor policies; however, research found no evidence of a policy that focuses specifically on combating the worst forms of child labor. (2,5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (19) Prioritizes children's rights, including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (19)
Safenet†	MWYSA-coordinated program that allows government, churches, and NGOs to provide assistance to victims found in exploitative and violent situations. (11,20) This program was active during the reporting period. (2)
Hotlines†	MWYSA- and police-supported 24-hour hotline for children to report violations, request information, or obtain access to services. (20) This program was active during the reporting period. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of Kiribati.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,5)

During the reporting period, through the 2016–2019 Educational Sector Strategic Plan and the Kiribati Education Improvement Program, the government continued to work to improve school infrastructure and standards. (5,21,22) In addition, in 2019, the Government of Kiribati, in collaboration with the Government of Australia and UNICEF, improved learning spaces, access, and sanitation at schools. (2)

Although the government has implemented the Safenet and Hotlines programs to assist children in exploitative and abusive situations, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children who are working in construction and street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kiribati (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that the law specifies the activities and number of hours of work per week that are acceptable for children engaged in light work, and the conditions under which children can engage in light work.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law specifically prohibits the domestic trafficking of children.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by ensuring sufficient resources to support labor law enforcement activities and initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2017 – 2019
	Collect and publish data on the enforcement of labor laws, including on the number of inspections conducted at worksites, violations found, penalties imposed, and penalties collected.	2018 – 2019
	Institutionalize training on child labor laws for labor inspectors and criminal investigators, including providing refresher courses.	2017 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in all sectors to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Implement programs to address the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of young girls with crew members from foreign fishing vessels.	2018 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, and make education accessible for all children by alleviating school fees and increasing access to schools in remote locations.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that children with disabilities are given access to education.	2018 – 2019
	Implement social programs to address all relevant forms of child labor, including in construction and street vending.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Kosovo made a moderate advancement to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed the Law on Child Protection (LCP), which will enter into force in July 2020 and prohibits the recruitment of children into non-state armed groups and provides additional penalties for using or involving children in the production of child pornography. In addition, the government identified significantly more criminal child labor violations in 2019 compared to 2018 and initiated prosecutions in nearly all cases. Furthermore, the Kosovo Police and Kosovo Prosecutorial Council established specialized interview rooms to make child victims of abuse feel more comfortable. However, children in Kosovo engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. The labor inspectorate and Centers for Social Work face financial and human resource constraints that may impede their ability to adequately address child labor. In addition, human trafficking shelters lack sufficient funding to properly accommodate and care for child trafficking victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kosovo engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (1-4) No recent data were available, but a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS) conducted from 2013 to 2014 determined that 5,398 children in Kosovo were engaged in child labor. (5) A parallel MICS of the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian communities in Kosovo found that 2,168 children from these communities were engaged in child labor. (6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kosovo. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.7 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (7)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5, 2013-2014. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Kosovo is a source and destination country for child trafficking, especially of girls. (2,3,12,15) Children are sometimes forced into labor, such as in massage parlors, by organized criminal groups. (2,3,16-18) Kosovo children and children from neighboring countries, especially Albania, are also forced into begging, primarily in Prizren and Pristina. Most of these children come from the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian minority ethnic groups. (1,2,12,16,19-23) Economically vulnerable Kosovo children are also forced to work in construction and agriculture to support their families. (12)

Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma children, especially girls, sometimes experience difficulty accessing education, because a birth certificate is required to attend school in Kosovo. (1,11,24-28) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kosovo holds a unique status vis-à-vis UN recognition that complicates its ratification of international agreements (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	N/A
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	N/A
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	N/A
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	N/A

Article 22 of Kosovo’s Constitution incorporates the UN CRC into its national legal framework. (30) Despite Kosovo’s unique status, the country works with the UN through the Common Development Plan (2016–2020), which is implemented by the UN Kosovo Team and focuses on promoting international standards and human rights. (31)

The government’s laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9 of the Law on Pre-University Education (40)

* No conscription (41)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (40)

The government approved the draft Law on Child Protection at its first reading in October 2018 and passed it in June 2019. (1,20,38,42,43) The law prohibits violence, abuse, exploitation, and neglect of children, including using a child as a beggar, and prohibits the use of children in additional illicit activities. (17,38) The law will enter into force in July 2020. (4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within government entities that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate	Conducts inspections to enforce child labor laws, removes children engaged in hazardous work, and refers all cases to regional Centers for Social Work (CSWs). (4) Through regional CSWs, provides social services to impacted children who are found begging or are victims of human trafficking, and compiles data on cases into a nationwide database. (14)
Kosovo Police (KP)	Enforces criminal laws on forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Through the Anti-Trafficking Unit, enforces laws on child trafficking. (14,44) Operates under the Ministry of Internal Affairs. (42)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces criminal laws on forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children through special anti-human trafficking coordinators and mechanisms. (44,45)
Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology	Conducts education inspections on balance of students' school and work hours. (46)

Duties of the former Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare are now shared by four separate government entities: (1) Ministry of Infrastructure and Environment, (2) Ministry of Economy, (3) Ministry of Health, and (4) Ministry of Finance. The division of specific responsibilities is still unclear. (47) There is limited inter-ministerial communication between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and the aforementioned government entities, which were tasked with the duties of the former Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare near the end of the reporting period. (15,48) Multiple entities expressed the limited capacity of Centers for Social Work (CSWs) to address cases of child labor due to limited human resources, lack of knowledge of child labor issues, and insufficient coordination. (1,10,12,21,23)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the government that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of child labor-specific initial trainings and refresher courses for labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

In 2019, inspections were conducted in the public and private sectors, with a special focus on the construction sector, an industry in which child labor is known to occur. Labor inspectors have the authority to conduct inspections in all formal sectors, but they do not have jurisdiction to investigate informal sectors. (1,4,11) The labor inspectorate does not employ Serbian-speaking staff and did not conduct inspections in areas with ethnic Serb majorities. (1,10,15) Labor inspectors have the authority to inspect private farms; however, due to a lack of human resource capacity to adequately cover all sectors and regions, the CSWs, which also face human resource and budgetary constraints, typically conduct these inspections. (1,10,11,29,48-50)

The labor inspectorate had an overall strategy for conducting child labor inspections and incorporated identification of child victims of human trafficking in its strategy for 2017–2021. (1,4,11,45,51,52) Labor inspectors receive initial training when hired; however, these trainings do not cover child labor as a separate category. (11,15) The labor inspectorate does not have refresher trainings on child labor, including on laws prohibiting hazardous work for children. (4,11,53) Approximately 9,000 labor inspections were conducted at worksites during the reporting period; however, the government did not provide information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed for inclusion in this report. (54)

The labor inspectorate’s mandate allows it to investigate for working children between ages 15 and 18 who have entered into an employment contract for a limited period of time. When child labor is discovered, the labor inspectorate issues the penalty and works with the Kosovo Police (KP) to remove the child from child labor. (1) According to NGO and media reports, the number of cases reported does not fully reflect the actual number of child labor cases. (1,12,15)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for prosecutors and judges.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (1)	Yes (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (1)	Yes (4)

Number of Investigations	12 (2)	15 (54)
Number of Violations Found	12 (2)	15 (54)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (1)	15 (54)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (1)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (15)	2 (54)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (4)

In 2019, the KP and the Kosovo Prosecutorial Council established 10 specialized interview rooms for victims of abuse in police stations and prosecutorial offices. (4) KP officers received training on trafficking, including forced labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities, and the KP reported that resources and training related to child labor were sufficient. (4)

Legal training on human trafficking for prosecutors and judges was insufficient, causing inadequate prosecutions and incorrect legal application. (11,16,17,42,51) In addition, better supervision and standardized data collection of human trafficking cases, as well as specialization of prosecutors and judges, would improve the pace and quality of case processing. (2,22,29,51,52) The government did not provide information on the number of convictions related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report.

The KP systematically tracks the children referred to CSWs as a result of investigations conducted by its domestic violence and trafficking units. (11,55,44) However, CSWs reported the need for a shelter and short-term care services for child labor victims. (1) In addition, CSWs did not adequately identify cases of forced begging, which are instead typically classified as parental neglect or abuse. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Hazardous Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies to combat child labor. Oversees and provides policy guidance for activities to prevent and eliminate child labor. Comprises representatives of government agencies, KP, trade unions, and an NGO. (4) In 2019, the committee held two annual and two coordination meetings, resulting in Memorandums of Understanding on child labor prevention efforts with all but four northern municipalities. (4)
Child Labor Monitoring System	Addresses child labor at the municipal level, identifies and provides existing child services, documents child labor trends, and evaluates local responses to child labor. (14)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Coordinates policy implementation, and monitors and reports on actions to combat child trafficking through a National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (NATC). (16,56) NATC is a deputy Interior Minister. (15,53) Includes representatives from the government, judiciary, municipal offices, NGOs, and the international community. (42,53) During the reporting period, NAATIP held regular meetings that included representatives from eight government ministries, municipal offices, victim advocates, the judiciary, NGOs, and international observers. These meetings include a quarterly review of the National Action Plan and National Strategy. (57) In October and November 2019, NAATIP launched its annual campaign to proactively educate potential victims of trafficking. (57)
Municipal Local Action Committees	Aim to prevent and eliminate child labor; report to the Child Labor Monitoring System. Members include representatives from schools, municipal education departments, and KP. (58) Research was unable to determine whether the committees were active during the reporting period.

Since 2013, the government has been collecting and processing data on labor violations, which are made available to all ministries and law enforcement bodies. (14) However, the Child Labor Monitoring System lacks quality data analysis, and there is unsatisfactory data sharing between municipal authorities and the national government. (10,11,15,42,56)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding to support the implementation of policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children's Rights Action Plan (2019–2021)	Passed in January 2019. (4) Aims to improve social, economic, and legislative rights and the protection of children through developing institutions at the local and national levels. (51,59) Includes an accompanying Children's Rights Strategy (2019–2023). (51,59) The Strategy includes five objectives, one of which is the prevention, protection, and reintegration of child laborers. (51) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.
National Strategy and Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2015–2019)	Aims to prevent and combat human trafficking by raising awareness, identifying victims, and strengthening criminal law enforcement. (60,61) Implemented in 2019 through KP-initiated raids and awareness campaigns, along with law enforcement and judiciary trainings. (4)
Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities (2016–2020)	Focuses on employment, social issues, healthcare, and housing for the Ashkali and Roma communities. Aims to strengthen individual's rights and full integration into society. (62) A special educational component promotes inclusive education for children from these communities. (63) In 2019, 2,750 Roma and Ashkali families benefited from social welfare programs. (4)
Kosovo Education Strategic Plan (2017–2021)	Emphasizes the inclusion of vulnerable minorities in the education system, especially for preschool children of the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian communities. Establishes regulations at the municipality level to facilitate preschool enrollment and raise awareness of school attendance and enrollment. (64) In 2019, the Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology offered students free school meals and textbooks, along with fee and document waivers for returnees and other vulnerable children from minority communities. (4)
Regulation on the Implementation of the Rights of Children Through a Child Friendly Municipal Governance System	Protects and promotes the rights of children. Ensures that municipalities are child friendly and guarantees that all children receive social services, education, and safety. (65) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government provided $353,790 in social welfare assistance to families as part of the Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities. In addition, the government contributed $2,772,656 for programs assisting Roma and Ashkali children with special needs. (4) However, the Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities does not include child labor prevention and elimination strategies. Additionally, research was unable to determine whether the government initiated activities related to the Children's Rights Action Plan during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded global project implemented by ILO to (1) improve the knowledge base on child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking; (2) improve awareness of these issues through the use of data-driven techniques; (3) strengthen policies and improve the capacity of governments and other stakeholders to combat child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking through national, regional, and global initiatives; and (4) strengthen partnerships to accelerate progress in combating child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (66)
Hope and Homes for Children†	Government-funded NGO shelter. Accommodates child victims of abuse and human trafficking. (50) In 2019, the program continued to provide housing for children removed from abusive situations. (57)
UN Common Development Plan (2016–2020)	Funded and implemented by the UN Kosovo Team. Promotes international standards and human rights safeguards of migrants, as well as the social protection and educational inclusion of the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian communities. (31) Research was unable to determine whether the plan was active during the reporting period.
The Helpline‡	Government-operated hotline for victims of domestic violence and human trafficking. (2) In 2019, the Helpline received a total of 813 calls, of which 13 were classified as human trafficking-related. (47)

† Program is funded by the Republic of Kosovo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,4,67)

The government continued to support social assistance to at-risk families and provided free school meals and textbooks. In 2019, the government of Kosovo and World Vision conducted five regional workshops to create a regional agreement on a joint monitoring system for child labor cases. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kosovo (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Clearly delineate the duties of each government entity appointed to absorb the responsibilities of the former Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that Centers for Social Work have sufficient capacity and resources, such as personnel and training, to address the specific needs of child labor victims and properly screen child beggars.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that mechanisms exist to enforce protections for children in the informal sector.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors conduct child labor inspections on private farms and in areas with ethnic Serb majorities.	2017 – 2019
	Improve the collection, publication, and standardization of data related to human trafficking cases to improve the pace and quality of case processing.	2019
	Incorporate topics on child labor, including hazardous child labor, in both new employee training and refresher courses; ensure trainings on new child labor laws for all labor inspectors.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the penalties in the legal framework regulating the crime of human trafficking are correctly applied, including by providing training and supervision to prosecutors and judges on the legal framework for human trafficking cases.	2012 – 2019
Coordination	Increase inter-ministerial communication to adequately combat child labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2012 – 2019
	Improve the capacity of the Child Labor Monitoring System to better analyze data on child labor and improve data sharing between municipal authorities and the national government.	2013 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the Children's Rights Strategy and Action Plan is active.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Make additional efforts to register Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma children at birth.	2011 – 2019
	Fully fund and operate shelters that house child victims of trafficking for interviewing and accommodating child victims.	2016 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, the Kyrgyz Republic made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed a policy package that established a National Referral Mechanism for victims of human trafficking, and drafted a new National Action Plan for 2020–2024 on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Kyrgyz Republic is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it implemented a regression in law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. As of January 1, 2019, the government instituted a moratorium on unannounced labor inspections. Inspections can only be conducted in response to a formal complaint, and must be approved and announced by the Ministry of Economy before a site visit can occur. Children in the Kyrgyz Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Protections to children granted in the Labor Code, such as the minimum age of employment, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment, and research indicates that the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety employed an insufficient number of labor inspectors. In addition, the scope of social programs to combat child labor was insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Kyrgyz Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (5-9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Kyrgyz Republic.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	34.0 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	38.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.5

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (11)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating cotton, tobacco,† rice, potatoes, sugar beets, and wheat (3,5-9,12-18)
	Raising and herding cattle (3,8,17)
Industry	Coal mining† (3,9,12,13,19,20)
	Brick making (3,12,13,17)
	Construction, including lifting and portering construction materials, and cutting metal sheets for roofs (3,13,17,20,21)
Services	Working in bazaars and markets, including loading and unloading goods, portering, collecting plastic bottles and garbage, and selling items, including food and newspapers (2,5,7,9,15,16,19,22,23)
	Washing cars (7,17)
	Working in restaurants and cafes, including serving food and washing dishes (5,12,17,24)
	Street work, including begging and shoe shining (1,12,14,15)
	Domestic work, including child care (1,2,6,9,14)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,17)
Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking drugs, as a result of human trafficking (4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor, including hazardous child labor, is most prevalent in the oblasts (provinces) of Naryn and Osh. (20) Children from the Kyrgyz Republic who travel to Kazakhstan to work, either with their parents or unaccompanied, cannot attend school due to a lack of documentation. These children engage in child labor in Kazakhstan in construction, farming, herding, or selling products in the markets; some fall victim to forced child labor. (25) Within the Kyrgyz Republic, children of labor migrants have been identified in child labor in markets. (26)

The inability to enroll in school makes children from a variety of circumstances vulnerable to child labor. (3,22,27) According to UNICEF, an estimated 650,000–750,000 citizens of the Kyrgyz Republic work abroad, and an additional 1 million are internal migrants. (27) Some children, who are left behind when their parents migrate to work in other countries or other areas of the Kyrgyz Republic, cannot access their birth certificates or guardianship documents, which are required for school enrollment. (5,12,27) Children with disabilities, children living and working on the street, and children living in rural areas also have difficulty accessing education. (3,17) According to Kyrgyz law and the Ministry of Education and Science, residence registration is not required for children to attend school; however, research reports that some schools require residence registration, known as propiska, for school enrollment. (2,3,6,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Kyrgyz Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Kyrgyz Republic’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 18 of the Labor Code (29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 294 of the Labor Code; Article 15 of the Code on Children (29,30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 294 of the Labor Code; Decree 314; Annex I of Decree 548 (29,31,32)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 10 of the Labor Code; Article 15.2 of the Code on Children; Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Article 173 of the Criminal Code (29,30,33,34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Article 171 of the Criminal Code (33,34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 166–168 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (30,33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 180–181 and 267–268 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (30,33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24.1 of the Law on Military Service (35)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 17.1 and 22.1 of the Law on Military Service; Article 392 of the Criminal Code (33,35)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 392 and 395 of the Criminal Code (33)
Compulsory Education Age	No	15‡	Article 16 of the Law on Education (28)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on Education (28)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (28)

In 2019, the Criminal Code was amended to remove the requirement that force, fraud, or coercion be established for the crime of child trafficking. This change has also been included in the Code of Criminal Procedures, which guides implementation of criminal justice laws. (33,36)

According to Article 6 of the Labor Code, protections to children granted in the labor code, such as the minimum age for employment, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment. (29)

Article 166 of the Criminal Code of the Kyrgyz Republic criminalizes involving a minor into prostitution through violence, threats, or coercion; Article 167 of the Criminal Code criminalizes pimping, including of children under age 16; and Article 171 of the Criminal Code criminalizes child trafficking, including for the purpose of sexual exploitation. However, no law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (33)

Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are required to attend school only until grade nine, which is typically when they reach age 14 or 15. (5,6,28) This standard makes children ages 14 and 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school, but they also are not yet legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of unannounced inspections conducted at the national level in the Kyrgyz Republic may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety	Monitors work sites and refers child laborers to social services. Coordinates with the Inspectorate for Minors' Affairs in the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Prosecutor General's Office, and regional State District Administration authorities to enforce child labor laws. (17,19)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor, including its worst forms. Conducts independent inspections and joint raids with the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety to identify violations, which can be referred to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecutorial action. (17)
Prosecutor General's Office	Enforces and applies labor-related laws, including labor inspections and investigations of child labor violations, in coordination with the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety. (19)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections in the Kyrgyz Republic may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

† Data are from January 1, 2018 to September 30, 2018.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2019 to September 30, 2019.

As of January 1, 2019, a 2-year moratorium on unannounced labor inspections came into effect. (41-43) Under this moratorium, inspections are only triggered in response to a formal complaint lodged to the State Inspectorate. Also, before a site visit can be conducted, the Ministry of Economy must approve the inspection and provide notice to the public that an inspection is planned. (17) The Prime Minister described the moratorium as a measure “to improve the business environment.” (44) Between January and September 2019, the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety conducted 504 inspections according to this procedure. (17) The Inspectorate reported no child labor violations found as a result of these inspections. (17) Labor inspectors also participated in 64 MOIA-led investigative raids, through which the Inspectorate identified 229 children working in hazardous child labor, primarily in agriculture. Six of these children were under age 14 and 223 were aged 14-18. (17,45)

In 2019, the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety employed 30 labor inspectors. (17) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the Kyrgyz Republic's workforce, which includes more than 2.8 million workers. (46) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitioning economies, the Kyrgyz Republic would employ about 142 labor inspectors. (22,47,48) The State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety acknowledged that the number of labor inspectors was inadequate to ensure appropriate enforcement of child labor laws. (22) Reports also suggest that limited staffing may hamper the Inspectorate's ability to monitor places with a high incidence of child labor, such as markets and bazaars. (45) The government considers the level of funding for labor inspection activities to be classified information. However, inspectorate representatives noted that funding may be insufficient to adequately enforce child labor laws. (17) The ILO also expressed concern that the inspectorate lacked sufficient funding to carry out inspections. (19) During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on new labor code provisions, and one inspector received training on trafficking in persons. (17)

While the Code on Children formally provides for a child labor complaint mechanism, reports indicate that a lack of institutional capacity among labor inspectors and social workers may hinder adequate implementation of this mechanism. (17,30)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Kyrgyz Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

[†] Data are from January 1 to September 30, 2018.

[‡] Data are from January 1, 2019 to September 30, 2019.

In 2019, and in partnership with UNODC, 12 instructors from the Supreme Court’s Higher School of Justice received training on trafficking in persons. (50) The Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) conducted seven trainings on human trafficking for its staff, including one training for State Customs Service officials. In partnership with UNODC, MOIA also developed a compendium of standard operating procedures on investigating and detecting crimes related to trafficking in persons. (36)

Between January and September 2019, MOIA conducted 64 investigative raids to detect child labor, which were carried out in cooperation with labor inspectors from the State Ecological and Technical Inspectorate. (17) These raids detected 494 working minors, 29 of whom were identified working in the worst forms of child labor. (45) Authorities identified one forced labor case involving two child victims. Although this forced labor case was referred for prosecution, prosecutorial action was suspended following pre-trial proceedings due to the absence of the victims’ statements. (17) An official from MOIA separately reported six cases involving children that the government officially investigated as trafficking in persons crimes in 2019. However, it is unclear if any of these investigations overlap with raids that MOIA conducted to detect child labor. (51) In addition, criminal investigators referred two cases for prosecution involving the use of a child in the production of pornography. (36) Research was unable to determine the status or outcome, if any, of ongoing child labor cases for which prosecution was initiated in 2018 and may have continued during the reporting period.

Reports suggest that Kyrgyz police officers exploit trafficking victims, including some younger than age 18. Concerns persist about police misconduct, including allegations that police threaten and extort sex trafficking victims, including minors, and reports indicate that police accept bribes from alleged traffickers to drop cases. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children's Affairs Commission	Assesses the needs of children in difficult situations, including child laborers; creates individual development plans; and monitors service delivery. Members include social workers from regional Departments of Child Protection of the Ministry of Labor and Social Development and law enforcement authorities. (19) In 2019, the Commission continued to operate according to the Regulations on the Procedure for the Identification of Children and Families in Difficult Situations. (26,40,52)
Coordination Council for Social Protection and Children's Rights	Develops policies to eliminate child labor. (53) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister, members include representatives from the Ministry of Labor and Social Development and three other ministries. (54,55) Met quarterly in 2019. (17)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Parliamentary group that coordinates and oversees work to combat trafficking in persons. In 2019, met to discuss and approve an Action Plan for 2019–2020 to guide its work, and convened offsite meetings in Batken, Osh, and Naryn oblasts to meet with victims of forced labor. (36)
Regional Trafficking in Persons Coordination Councils	Coordinate local implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons in all seven regional or oblast -level governments and the city of Osh. In 2019, all councils participated in institutional development workshops in partnership with UNODC. (57)

Reports indicate that the Children's Affairs Commission lacks adequate procedures to conduct needs assessments for traumatized children, such as those who have been subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or other worst forms of child labor, hindering its ability to effectively accomplish its mandate. (26,52)

In 2019, the government designated the State Migration Service as the lead agency for coordinating efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in persons. (36,58)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Regulations on the Procedure for the Identification of Children and Families in Difficult Situations	Establishes the process for identifying children in difficult living situations, including those engaged in the worst forms of child labor. Receives complaints, conducts outreach activities, devises individual action plans, removes children from the worst forms of child labor, and provides financial and educational services. (40) The Children's Affairs Commission continued to implement this policy in 2019. (26,40,52)
National Referral Mechanism†	Establishes formal policies on (1) identification of victims of human trafficking; (2) referrals for and provision of social services to victims; and (3) protection of victims' personal data. (51,61) In 2019, this policy was integrated into UNODC workshops to develop Regional Trafficking in Persons Coordination Councils. (51,57)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2017–2020)	Improves the legal framework on human trafficking; improves dissemination of information on human trafficking risks for migrants and vulnerable populations; raises awareness about protections for victims and criminal penalties for perpetrators; and improves coordination among government agencies, NGOs, and international partners. (62,63) In 2019, the State Migration Service convened the interagency monitoring group responsible for implementing the National Action Plan every 6 months and discussed establishing a mechanism for local- and national-level government entities to coordinate efforts to combat trafficking in persons. (36)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government drafted a new National Action Plan (NAP) for 2020–2024 on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. This draft NAP is currently awaiting approval by relevant government ministries and departments. (17)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Education Strategy and Roadmap. (64)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Cash Transfer Program†	Government-funded cash transfer program for families living in difficult situations, including families with children engaged in child labor. (53) In 2019, cash assistance from the Ministry of Labor and Social Development continued to be available to such families. However, based on available information, the amount of assistance appears to be low, and some families face barriers to accessing these benefits. (69,70)
Ministry of Education and Science National School Attendance Database†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Science to pilot a national electronic database to track children who do not attend school. Following development and use throughout the country, database information is intended to be shared with the Ministry of Labor and Social Development to assist children engaged in child labor. (6) The database is meant to provide information to the Ministry of Internal Affairs on cases of criminal violations of child labor laws. In addition, school social workers could use the database to work with families, ensuring that children attend school. (6) In July 2019, the Ministry of Education announced a tender for the development of a mobile app for tracking student enrollment and attendance, which has been rolled out in pilot communities. (45,71)
Support of Family and Protection of Children (2018–2028)†	Government-funded program that includes limited activities to address child labor, including revising Decree 314, the hazardous work list for children. Responsible for organizing competitive bids for projects, including one that will result in four new social services centers by 2020 for families and children in difficult living situations. (72) Provides local administrations with income-generating ideas for families in difficult living situations. (72) Research did not find information about the implementation of this program in 2019.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (73,74)

Although the Kyrgyz Republic has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking and in agriculture, including cultivating cotton.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Kyrgyz Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions and hazardous work prohibitions apply to all children, including those working without an employment contract.	2014 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2019
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work.	2014 – 2019
Enforcement	Lift the moratorium on unannounced labor inspections and ensure that the labor inspectorate conducts routine, targeted, and unannounced labor inspections.	2018 – 2019
	Publish complete information about the State Inspectorate's efforts to enforce prohibitions on child labor, including information on the Inspectorate's funding; the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites; and the number of penalties collected.	2011 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspection system by providing child labor training for new labor inspectors and criminal investigators.	2014 – 2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that inspectors have adequate resources to conduct inspections.	2012 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety and relevant social services providers have the capacity to adequately implement the child labor complaint mechanism.	2019
	Publish complete information about criminal enforcement of prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, including the penalties imposed.	2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies investigate and prosecute violations related to the worst forms of child labor, including cases of possible police complicity in abusing victims.	2015 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the procedures for needs assessment of the Children's Affairs Commission are appropriate for traumatized children, including children who were engaged in the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies, such as the National Education Strategy and Roadmap.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to free education, including children with disabilities, those living and working on the street, those lacking residence registration, and those without birth certificates and guardianship documents.	2009 – 2019
	Implement all social programs, including the Support of Family and Protection of Children program.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs, such as the Cash Transfer Program, provide sufficient benefits to reduce vulnerability to child labor and are accessible to families.	2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking and in agriculture, including cultivating cotton.	2014 – 2019

In 2019, Lebanon made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Social Affairs began implementing the National Action Plan to End Street Begging by Children with a public outreach program, and the Ministry of Labor took steps to review the Labor Code with the goal of raising the minimum age for work to 15, which would align with Lebanon's compulsory education age. Moreover, the Internal Security Forces institutionalized entry training for its cadets on child rights and protection. In addition, the government improved access to education with a policy allowing all refugees to enroll in public schools regardless of whether they have the required documentation for school enrollment. However, children in Lebanon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in construction and in forced labor in agriculture. Children also engage in child labor in the production of potatoes and tobacco. Laws related to forced labor do not meet international standards as there is no legislative provision that provides criminal penalties for forced labor, and debt bondage is not criminally prohibited. Furthermore, the Ministry of Labor's budget was unable to cover equipment, personnel, and transport costs to conduct inspections. In addition, labor inspectors do not have the authority to inspect informal workplaces, where child labor in Lebanon is most prominent, and programs targeting child labor remained insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lebanon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in construction and in forced labor in agriculture. (1-5) Children also engage in child labor in the production of potatoes and tobacco. (2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lebanon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (16,23,30-33)
	Forced labor in agriculture, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,12,16)
	Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (4,34)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor has increased, and conditions that affect Lebanese and Syrian refugee children have worsened since the influx of Syrian refugees into Lebanon that began in 2011. A national economic crisis that began the second half of 2019 has further exacerbated these conditions and reduced the government’s capacity to address them. (13,17,35) As of October 2019, more than 914,000 Syrian refugees in Lebanon were registered with UNHCR, and more than half of them were children. (36) Child labor is also prevalent in other refugee communities in Lebanon, including the Palestinian and Iraqi communities. (17,37)

Lebanon experienced protracted economic and political crises since anti-government protests began on October 17, 2019, and the government resigned on October 29, 2019. Sources indicate that other labor reforms have taken precedence over child labor. (3) Near the end of the reporting period, sources described an increase in child begging, which makes children more vulnerable to hazards associated with street work. (3) Some boys are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (19,38) Working on the streets is especially common among refugee children from Syria, including Palestinians from Syria. (24)

The UN reported that several armed groups recruited children to be used as guards or in support roles, such as in carrying weapons or food. (34)

Syrian refugee children are also subjected to forced labor in agriculture. (1,2,16,30) Some Syrian refugee children and their families in the Bekaa Valley are kept in bonded labor in agriculture to pay for makeshift dwellings provided by landowners. (1,13,30,39) A 2019 American University of Beirut survey reported that nearly 75 percent of Syrian refugee children working in the Bekaa Valley do so in agriculture. (40) Adult Syrian refugees face legal restrictions that allow them to only work in agriculture, construction, and sanitation. (16,41) To work legally, they also need to be registered with the UNHCR or have local sponsors. (41) These restrictions on adults make children vulnerable to child labor. (12,42)

In the last few years, the government waived fees for public primary schools and opened second shifts in about 240 schools. (14) In 2019, the government adopted an open policy of admitting all refugee children regardless of whether they have the required documentation for school enrollment. (3) Children in Lebanon, particularly Syrian refugee children, face barriers to accessing education, including the cost of transportation and supplies, occupation of schools by armed groups or use as shelters, fear of passing checkpoints or of violence, lack of private sanitation facilities for girls, discrimination, bullying, corporal punishment, and a different curriculum in Lebanon than in their country of origin. (2,14,15,43,44) However, the public school system in Lebanon lacks the capacity to accommodate the large number of school-age Syrian refugee children. (16) Nonetheless, some refugees have been denied access to schools. (3) Moreover, students without documentation are only eligible to receive a certificate, rather than a diploma, causing some undocumented students to drop out. (3) More than 50 percent of Syrian refugee children and 35 percent of Palestinian refugee children were not enrolled in formal education. (25,45,46) Children with disabilities, particularly refugee children, were unable to attend school due to insufficient accessibility or inadequacy of facilities, lack of specialized facilities, or unavailability of tailored services for children with disabilities. (44,47) Lebanese and refugee children who work in agriculture often do not attend school during harvesting and planting seasons. (48,49) One local organization observed a direct correlation between school dropout rates and an increase in child labor. (25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lebanon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lebanon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of debt bondage.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 22 of the Labor Code (50)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of Decree No. 8987 (51)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 586.1 of the Penal Code; Annex I of Decree No. 8987 (51,53)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 49 of the Education Law (56)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 49 of the Education Law (56)

* No conscription (57)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (37)

The Labor Code only applies to workers who perform work in industrial, trading, or agricultural enterprises and excludes domestic work and non-industrial, non-trade agriculture. (50) This does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work.

Lebanon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In Lebanon, basic education is compulsory. (56) Children generally complete basic education at age 15. (37) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. In 2019, the Minister of Labor formed a drafting committee to review and amend the Labor Code with the goal of raising the minimum age for work to age 15, bringing it in line with the compulsory education age. The committee did not produce a draft by the end of the reporting period. (3)

Laws related to forced labor are insufficient because there is no legislative provision that provides criminal penalties for the exaction of forced labor, and debt bondage is not criminally prohibited. (53,58)

The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, as the use of children in the production of pornography is not criminally prohibited. (51,53)

Government officials have clarified that although Article 610 of the Penal Code criminalizes begging, Article 26 of the Delinquent Juveniles Law, which takes precedence over the Penal Code, stipulates that in cases of begging, the child is considered in danger and entitled to receive protective measures. (53,59,60)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces child labor laws through desk review and workplace inspections. Acts as government focal point for child labor issues and hosts the National Steering Committee on Child Labor. (3) The Ministry's Child Labor Unit raises public awareness about child labor and the right to education. Receives complaints on child labor violations on its Child Labor Unit hotline. (3) In 2019, the Minister of Labor participated in the launch of a report on child labor in the Bekaa Valley. (3)
Internal Security Forces	Enforces laws regarding child labor through the Anti-Human Trafficking and Morals Protection Bureau. (3)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes violations of the Penal Code in coordination with the Internal Security Forces. Maintains general data and statistics on criminal violations involving child labor. (3) Refers at-risk children to shelters and protection services. Coordinates, through signed agreements, with civil society organizations to provide social workers who oversee court proceedings involving juveniles and deliver services to them, including children engaged in begging. (3)
Ministry of Social Affairs	Refers children identified by the Internal Security Forces and the Ministry of Justice to protective institutions, such as health centers. Refers children to shelters through its Higher Council for Childhood. (3)
Directorate of General Security	Focuses on immigration and border protection. Works with farmers union to address child labor in agriculture. (3)

According to local observers, the Ministry of Labor's hotline is not fully functional and works for a limited number of hours on official workdays. It does not have a system to register incoming calls. (25)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

In 2019, the Ministry of Labor and the Directorate of General Security held training sessions on child labor, and additionally coordinated inspection patrols to document and stop child labor. (3) However, based on available information, the Ministry did not cover the costs of equipment and transportation needed by labor inspectors to carry out their duties and the child labor unit only includes one staff member, which is insufficient. (3) Child labor inspections are generally a result of a complaint. (3) Government officials have expressed frustration that they can only conduct inspections in formal places of employment, where child labor is nearly non-existent (3,16,17,62)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Lebanon’s workforce, which includes more than 2.1 million workers. (3,63) According to the ILO’s technical advice of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Lebanon would employ about 144 labor inspectors. (64,65) Despite the need for more inspectors, the deterioration of the economic situation in Lebanon has led to a hiring freeze. (3)

The government does not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (16)	Yes (3)

In 2019, the Internal Security Forces (ISF) provided training to 136 officers on child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. It also institutionalized initial training on child rights and protection at the ISF Academy. (3) The ISF, the Lebanese Armed Forces, and the Directorate of General Security received training on countering human trafficking. (66) In addition, municipal police in the Bekaa Valley received training on child labor in 2019. (3)

The ISF investigated 10 cases of child labor and found 8 child victims being used for begging and selling flowers, and 1 case of a man attempting to sell his son. It referred seven adults to the judiciary and victims were referred to appropriate service providers. (3) The number of convictions is unavailable because there is no centralized record system in the Ministry of Justice. (66)

Lebanon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Despite its efforts, the ISF's anti-trafficking unit was underfunded and understaffed during the reporting period and had no field offices outside of Beirut. (67) The Ministry of Justice has stated that a lack of sufficient human resources hindered the government's ability to address child labor. (17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Raises awareness; coordinates efforts among government agencies; establishes standard practices; develops, enforces, and recommends changes; and ensures that government agencies comply with the law. Led by the Minister of Labor, includes representatives from six other ministries and other institutions and international organizations. (17) Sources indicate that the National Steering Committee on Child Labor did not meet in 2019 after meeting only once in 2018. (3)
National Steering Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts against human trafficking, including child trafficking. Based at the Ministry of Labor and meets on a monthly basis. (17) Active in 2019. (4)
UNICEF and UNHCR	Coordinates efforts to address the needs of children affected by the Syrian refugee crisis in Lebanon. UN representatives identify crucial concerns, including factors that make children vulnerable to child labor. (17) Makes recommendations to the government on the use of resources, including referral services. (17) UN agencies and international and local NGOs coordinate child protection efforts through Child Protection Working Groups. (16) Active in 2019. (68)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2013–2019)	Establishes strategies for addressing child labor, including improving enforcement of child labor laws and expanding access to education. (39,69) In 2019, the Ministry of Labor maintained contact with ILO, NGOs, and international stakeholders. (3)
Work Plan to Prevent and Respond to the Association of Children with Armed Violence in Lebanon	Provides the policy framework for the prevention of children's involvement in armed conflict. (43) Sources indicate there was minimal implementation of this policy during the reporting period. (47)
Policy for the Protection of Students in the School Environment	Protects children's right to education and promotes non-violence in schools by establishing mechanisms to receive complaints of violence, mistreatment, and bullying and addresses those cases while safeguarding children's privacy. Trains school staff and officials on identifying risk factors. (70,71) In 2019, the Ministry of Education and Higher Education, in cooperation with UNICEF, trained 4,700 public school teachers in the implementation of this policy. (36)
National Action Plan to End Street Begging by Children†	Seeks to end child begging by ensuring legal protection for street children, building capacity to protect street children, rehabilitating and reintegrating street children, and conducting outreach regarding the problem. (3) The Ministry of Social Affairs began its outreach campaign under the slogan "you are not helping them, you are aiding in their exploitation." It has produced posters, flyers, and a video; however, implementation of the plan halted following the resignation of the government in October 2019. (3,72)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Program	Joint program by UNICEF and the Ministry of Social Affairs. Addresses child labor through interventions, including providing psychological counseling, raising awareness among employers, and working with employers to decrease working hours for children and improve working conditions. (48) In 2019, UNICEF worked with government agencies and civil society organizations to provide case management and psychosocial support to children, including children working on the streets. (3,36)
Reaching All Children through Education (RACE II) (2017–2021)	Donor-funded 5-year project, implemented by the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and partners to ensure quality education opportunities for children ages 3 to 18, regardless of nationality, through holistic interventions that address the demand and availability of quality public education, including non-formal education. (73) Active in 2019. (3)
National Poverty Alleviation Program†	Funded by the government and foreign donors, this program housed at the Prime Minister's Office and the Ministry of Social Affairs provides WFP food vouchers ($27 per month) for each member of poor families. It also provides school tuition and book costs for secondary school students from 43,000 poor families. (47) In 2019, the World Bank worked with the Government of Lebanon to scale up this program to provide cash transfers for food and education to 150,000 poor Lebanese families in 2020, although this is unlikely to begin until fall 2020. (47)

† Program is funded by the Government of Lebanon.

Some officials are reluctant to remove children trafficked by their families because of a perceived lack of social services should the child be taken from the family. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Lebanon (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict, which the government signed in 2002.	2013 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure the minimum age for work applies to all children, including informal workers, domestic workers, and all agricultural workers.	2019
	Ensure that the use of a child in commercial sexual exploitation is criminally prohibited.	2019
	Ensure that forced labor and debt bondage are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that there is an adequate mechanism to receive and log child labor complaints and refer them for investigation.	2017 – 2019
	Track and publish information on labor law enforcement, including funding and inspections.	2009 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2019
	Provide Ministry of Labor inspectors with proper funding and necessary transportation.	2011 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including convictions.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies have the necessary funding and staff to investigate and prosecute criminal cases of child labor, in accordance with the law.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the National Steering Committee on Child Labor meets and carries out its duties.	2019
Government Policies	Ensure that the Work Plan to Prevent and Respond to the Association of Children with Armed Violence in Lebanon is implemented, and that children previously associated with armed conflict receive social and rehabilitation services.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure access to public education for all children.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Poverty Alleviation Program is implemented.	2017 – 2019
	Expand programs to fully address the extent of child labor.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Lesotho made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Lesotho ratified ILO Protocol 29 to the Forced Labor Convention of 1930 and published data relevant to child labor from the UNICEF-supported Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey and the Violence Against Children Survey. However, children in Lesotho engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks related to animal herding and domestic work. Lesotho's compulsory education age is below the minimum age for work, leaving children in between these ages vulnerable to child labor. The government also lacks sufficient mechanisms to combat child labor, and labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lesotho engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks related to animal herding and domestic work. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lesotho.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	30.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	32.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6, 2018. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding animals, including cattle† (1,2)
	Farming, including planting, applying pesticides, and harvesting (5-8)
Services	Domestic work (1,2)
	Street work, including vending, and trading (5,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and animal herding, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2)
	Use in illicit activities, including burglary and theft (5,6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2019, the government published data from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey. The government has also published the Lesotho Violence against Children 2019 Survey, the Kingdom of Lesotho Decent Work Country Program Report 2019–2023, and the Lesotho Civil Registration and Vital Statistics Comprehensive Assessment Report 2019, which is yet to be distributed. (1,5,9)

Lesotho is a source, transit, and destination country for human trafficking. Children involved in animal herding are exposed to harsh weather conditions, sometimes leading to death. (1,2,6) Children, especially orphans, sometimes voluntarily travel to South Africa for domestic work, and upon arrival they are subsequently detained in prison-like conditions and sexually exploited. (1,6)

Lesotho

The Lesotho Population-based HIV Impact Assessment reported in 2017 that the HIV rate in adults (ages 15–59) was 25.6 percent, the second-highest HIV rate in adults worldwide. (5,10) Due to the high rate of HIV among adults, many children in Lesotho become orphans and are vulnerable to trafficking. (1,2,8,11-13) Children, mostly orphans driven by poverty, migrate from rural to urban areas to engage in commercial sexual exploitation. (8)

Many children face limited access to education due to a shortage of teachers and schools, which causes them to travel long distances. In Lesotho, primary education is free; however, secondary education incurs a fee that is cost prohibitive for many families. (1) Children with disabilities encounter difficulties with ill-equipped educational facilities and untrained teachers. (14) These factors increase a child’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor, such as human trafficking.

UNICEF reported a 45 percent rate in birth registrations. NGOs confirmed that the low number of birth registrations results in children becoming stateless, which makes them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (15,16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lesotho has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

On August 22, 2019, Lesotho ratified ILO Protocol 29 to the Forced Labor Convention of 1930. This Protocol comes into force on August 22, 2020. (9)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lesotho’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 124(1) of the Labour Code; Article 228(1) of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act (17,18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 125(1) of the Labour Code; Article 230(1) of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act (17,18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 230(3) and 231 of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act (17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 9(2) of the Constitution; Article 7(1) of the Labour Code; Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (18-20)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (20)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 77 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Articles 10–14 of the Sexual Offenses Act (17,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 45(b) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (17)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 26 of the Lesotho Defence Force Act (22)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (17)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (17)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13‡	Article 3 of the Education Act (23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Education Act; Article 22(k) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (17,23)

* No conscription (17)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (23)

Education is compulsory in Lesotho through age 13, which makes children age 14 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school and have not reached the minimum age for work. (23) In addition, the prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of these mechanisms that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE)	Enforces minimum age requirements under child labor laws, including for hazardous occupations, and assesses compliance with child labor laws as part of general labor inspections. (9,24) Assigns labor inspectors to operate a child labor unit within the ministry and provides recommendations that support the expansion of inspections into the informal sector. (9)
National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit	Investigates criminal child labor violations and works in conjunction with MOLE to enforce child labor laws, including those related to hazardous and forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and child trafficking. (25)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes child labor law offenders. (9)
Children's Court	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (9)

In 2019, the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) continued to update the Lesotho Labour Code, which is being drafted by the Parliamentary Council. The draft Labour Code maintains the minimum age of 15 for labor and strengthens provisions to combat the worst forms of child labor. (1,9) The Ministry for Social Development submitted drafting instructions to the Parliamentary Council for amendment of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act of 2011. (1) These recommendations supported the authorization of the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections in the informal sector; however, at this time the recommendations have not been implemented. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

† Data are from April 1, 2018 to November 1, 2018.

Reports indicate that funding is inadequate for the labor inspectorate to carry out inspections. In addition, labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including limited funding and personnel. (2,9)

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (1)	No (9)

The National Police’s Child and Gender Protection Unit does not have guaranteed funding; rather, it receives funding from the general operations budget of the National Police. Reports indicate that the Child and Gender Protection Unit has limited personnel and receives insufficient or no funding to carry out child labor investigations. (7, 11) There is also no evidence of any funding for combating child labor being provided to the Public Prosecutor’s Office or the Children’s Court. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exists that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Program Advisory Committee on Child Labor/National Task Team	Led by MOLE's Child Labor Unit, the team includes representatives from government ministries, trade unions, NGOs, and international organizations. Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken for this program during the reporting period.
National Orphans and Vulnerable Children Coordinating Committee	Strengthens coordination on issues related to orphans and vulnerable children at the national level. In 2019, the Committee conducted quarterly meetings. (9)
Multi-Sectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Spearheads anti-trafficking in persons initiatives and approves legislation and policies to prevent human trafficking. Chaired by the Commissioner of Refugees, includes government ministries, local government members, and representatives from NGOs, international organizations, and faith-based organizations. (26) In 2019, despite limited funding which hampered more frequent meetings, the Multi-Sectoral Committee conducted campaigns to raise awareness about trafficking in persons were conducted as a collaboration between the Cross-Border Crime Prevention Forum in South Africa and Skills Share Lesotho. These agencies developed and screened a Sesotho language educational film on trafficking in persons. (9)
District Child Protection Teams	Coordinate child protection matters, including child labor, at the district level. Led by the Ministry of Social Development, include representatives from the government, private sector, NGOs, and community support groups. (26) In 2019, 40 District Child Protection Teams held a 2-day training workshop on case management, during which they also developed work plans. The District Child Protection Teams also met with the National Orphans and Vulnerable Children Coordinating Committee to discuss integrating efforts. (9)
Community Coordination Teams	Monitor, address, and refer instances of at-risk children or those involved in hazardous work. (1) In 2019, Community Council Child Protection Teams were established in four councils (Semonkong, Makhoalipane, Mazenod, and Mahlakeng). One public gathering was held in Semonkong—a rural district in which children are often involved in herding animals—to raise awareness about child labor. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Multi-sectoral Child Protection Strategy 2015–2019 and Action Plan	Enhanced the country's capacity to design and implement violence prevention programs and built successful child protection systems. In 2019, a Violence Against Children Survey was released that measured the prevalence, nature, and consequences of physical, emotional, and sexual violence against children and youth. (9)
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan (2013–2019)	Supported the national and international obligations and commitments regarding human trafficking, in support of the vision to eliminate all forms of trafficking in persons in Lesotho. Provided victim protection and successful arrests, prosecutions of offenders, and preventive measures. (27) In 2019, the government began reviewing the strategy to align it with international standards. (9)
Lesotho UNDP (2013–2019)	Included actions to build the capacity of the government, social partners, and civil society to eliminate child labor. Promoted education for children, supported youth employment, and built the government's capacity to provide social welfare services to vulnerable children. (31) The project came to an end during this reporting period (June 2019). (9)
Kingdom of Lesotho: Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper—National Strategic Development Plan (2018–2023)	Identifies child protection services (Child and Gender Protection Unit, social welfare, health, and the justice system) and their capacity to respond adequately to cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children, including child labor. Outlines prevention measures. (1,32) In 2019, the Ministry of Social Development continued to manage a hotline on child protection issues, held sensitizations on child labor at two councils, and held four radio programs on child labor protection and prevention. (9)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,5,9)

Although the government released a draft labor policy in 2018 that proposed harmonizing existing legislation with international labor standards regarding child labor, the Cabinet has yet to approve the policy. (1,5) In addition, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in existing policies, such as the Education Sector Strategic Plan. (33)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to fully address the scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Orphans and Vulnerable Children Scholarship Program†	Government program that pays for tuition, uniforms, supplies, and boarding fees for orphans and vulnerable children. (1) Research was unable to determine what actions were undertaken during the reporting period.
School Feeding Program	Provides incentives for primary school children from impoverished backgrounds to attend school and improves retention. (1,34) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken for this program during the reporting period.
Child Grant Program	Provides social cash transfers to impoverished households, orphans, and vulnerable children with the aim of increasing access to basic needs such as food, health, and education. The program is implemented by the Ministry of Social Development and funded by the EU with technical support from UNICEF. (1,34) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken for this program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Lesotho.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (27)

The government continued to incorporate human trafficking lessons in the primary school curriculum (Standard 7). (7,35)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Lesotho (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish age 15 as the age up to which education is compulsory to match the minimum age for full-time work.	2010 - 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be considered child trafficking.	2019
Enforcement	Provide adequate funding and training for labor inspectors and criminal investigators to address the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
	Publish enforcement data such as the number of investigations	2019
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in all relevant sectors, including the informal sector.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is authorized to assess penalties including those related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that all of the Community Coordination Teams are active and undertaking activities in support of their missions.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Publish data on the prevalence of child labor, including its worst forms.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that there is a policy for the elimination of child labor to replace the expired National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor.	2018 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies in existing youth policies, such as the Education Sector Strategic Plan.	2012 – 2019
Social Programs	Institute programs that address push factors that promote child labor, including the high HIV rate in adults.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2018 – 2019
	Address educational and logistical gaps resulting in reduced opportunities for secondary education, including shortage of teachers and secondary school fees.	2018 – 2019
	Increase birth registrations of children to reduce their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2015 – 2019
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2019

In 2019, Liberia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Justice successfully prosecuted one case of child trafficking and the government endorsed the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. However, children in Liberia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of rubber and the mining of gold and diamonds. In addition, Liberia has yet to accede to the UN CRC Protocol on Armed Conflict and the Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. The compulsory education age is lower than the minimum age for work, making children age 15 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to attend school nor legally permitted to work. Social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Liberia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of rubber and the mining of gold and diamonds. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Liberia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	16.6 (136,340)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	75.9

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of rubber, including cutting trees with machetes and using acid (1,2,5,6)
	Production of charcoal (2)
	Farming activities, including production of cocoa, coffee, cassava, and sugarcane (7)
Industry	Mining† diamonds and gold activities, including washing gravel and using mercury and cyanide (1,8,9)
	Cutting and crushing stone (2,5,6,10)
	Construction, including carrying heavy loads‡ (2,5,6)
Services	Domestic work (6)
	Street work, including vending, begging, hawking goods, and carrying heavy loads (5,6,11-13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (14)
	Forced labor in domestic work, street vending, mining, begging, and work on small rubber plantations, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Liberia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

While the government has yet to collect comprehensive data on child labor activities to inform policies and social programs, there are reports that children in rural communities engage in rubber tapping and coal burning activities while children in cities and surrounding urban communities crush rocks, engage in domestic work, and sell goods. (10) Children are also generally transported from Liberia to Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Nigeria, and Sierra Leone for work. (1,5,6)

Section 9 of the Children's Law mandates free basic education from grades one to nine, but the cost of uniforms, transportation, books, and school supplies limits access to education for some children. For secondary school students (grades 10–12), reports indicate there is a shortage of teachers, insufficient learning materials, a lack of educational facilities, and inadequate transportation, all of which limit access to education. (6) In addition, some teachers sexually exploit students in exchange for the promise of good grades, resulting in children avoiding or dropping out of school. (6,7) Research also indicates the ongoing practice of temporarily removing boys and girls from formal schooling to participate in initiation rituals that transition a child into adulthood. Many children may not return to school after their participation in these initiation ceremonies, making them more vulnerable to child labor. (6,16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Liberia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Liberia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the 1-year break between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No		Section 74 of the Labor Law, Article 21.2 of the Decent Work Act (17,18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 7, Section 9.1 of the Children's Law (19)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 21.4 of the Decent Work Act (5,18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 12 of the Constitution; Article 2.2 of the Decent Work Act; Article 7, Section 8 of the Children's Law; Article 1, Section 5 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (19-21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 7, Section 8 of the Children's Law; Article 1, Section 5 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (19,21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 3, Section 21 of the Children's Law; Article 2.3 of the Decent Work Act; Article 1, Section 5 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (18,19,21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 2.3 of the Decent Work Act; Chapter 16 of the Penal Law (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (19)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (19)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (19)
Compulsory Education Age	No	14	Article 3, Section 9 of the Children's Law; Chapter 4 of the Education Reform Act (19,22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3, Section 9 of the Children's Law (19)

* No conscription (23)

The minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because it allows children younger than 16 to engage in work as long as it is outside of school hours, the employer keeps records of the child's schooling, and the child is literate and attends school regularly. Because of this, children of any age may be vulnerable to child labor. Although the Decent Work Act prohibits children younger than 15 from working full-time, it does not prevent children below this age from engaging in part-time employment. (19,22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted in the informal sector may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Conducts worksite inspections and addresses child labor violations. (5)
Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection (MOGCSP)	Acts as the lead advisory agency on policy formulation, coordination, and monitoring of child protection through its Children Protection and Development Division. Monitors the government's efforts on compliance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the UN CRC, and the African Union protocols on women and children. (6,24,25)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Promotes and executes the rule of law for public safety, including the prosecution of child labor perpetrators. (26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections reported to have been conducted at the national level in Liberia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

In January and April 2019, labor inspectors participated in two trainings on the development of guidelines for child labor monitoring systems. (25,27) Generally, labor inspections are only conducted in the formal sector and not in the informal sector where children are more likely to be engaged in child labor. (2) In addition, the lack of funding and logistical support results in the underutilization of the labor inspectorate's complaint mechanism. (6,27) Although inspectors cannot assess penalties, they can impose corrective measures such as issuing notices of compliance and filing a complaint with the hearing board. (6,27) The lack of penalty assessment authorization, limited funding, and insufficient fines, combined with poor opportunities for revenue generation in the informal sector, hamper the inspectorate's enforcement of child labor laws. (2,6,19,27)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Liberia National Police (LNP) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In May 2019, the state successfully prosecuted a woman for exploiting two children in street vending. She received a suspended sentence in light of the time she spent in prison awaiting trial and on the conditions that she report to the sheriff's office twice a month for 6 months, that she not have any children other than her own living with her, and that she submit to inspections of her residence by the sheriff. (27)

In addition, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) reported receiving 2,220 calls to the anti-trafficking hotline between April 1, 2019 and February 14, 2020. It identified 14 possible cases of human trafficking and referred them to the LNP, although it is not known how many of these cases involved children. (27)

Despite these efforts, research indicates the LNP's Women and Children Protection Section had limited training and financial and physical resources, which hampered its ability to carry out investigations and other enforcement duties. (5,27,28) In addition, child labor is typically addressed as an issue of child endangerment, thereby causing a lack of reliable data on violations of child labor laws. (2,5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of financial support from the National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL)	Coordinates government and civil society activities concerning child labor. Led by MOL and comprising representatives from 16 organizations, including international and civil society organizations. (28) Assists in coordinating child labor investigations. (29) Seeks to reform national child labor laws and create a national child labor database, which would assist surveys on the extent of child labor issues in Liberia. (28) In 2019, NACOMAL participated in two trainings and chaired two meetings of the National Steering Committee. (25)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Implements child labor policies. Chaired by NACOMAL and comprising government officials and workers' organizations. (5) Includes four subcommittees on resource mobilization, advocacy, training and legal development, and monitoring and evaluation. Met twice in 2019. (25)
Child Protection Network	Coordinates child protection efforts, including child labor and human trafficking, and refers child victims of abuse to social services providers with support from international and national organizations. Chaired by the MOGCS, and comprising MOL, the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, the LNP's Women and Children Protection Section, civil society organizations, and several NGOs. (25) In 2019, stakeholders met regularly throughout 10 months of the year. (25)
Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates anti-trafficking activities. Chaired by MOL, comprising of representatives from the Commissioner of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, the Liberia National Police (LNP); MOJ; Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Ministry of Internal Affairs; as well as civil society organizations. (6) Met regularly during the reporting period and organized public awareness campaigns. (25)

During 2019, NACOMAL reported it had a budget for salaries but no budget allocated for program activities. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor†	Aims to reduce child labor and the worst forms of child labor by 50 percent by 2030 through three strategic objectives, including increasing public awareness on the causes and consequences of the worst forms of child labor, strengthening the legal and institutional frameworks to reduce child labor, and increasing social services and protection for children of vulnerable households. The government endorsed this plan in March of 2019. (30)
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons (2019–2024)†	Outlines the government anti-trafficking efforts, including those for child victims, and creates benchmark goals related to trafficking in person. (9,31) Establishes roles and responsibilities for coordinating government assistance to human trafficking victims and provides shelter and care to children who may have been human trafficking victims. (31)
National Child Welfare and Protection Policy	Focuses on the implementation and enforcement of existing child protection laws. (6) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Welfare and Protection Policy.
National Social Welfare Policy	Prioritizes the development of action plans and policies that target children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (33) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Social Welfare Policy during the reporting year.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in the Revised National Youth Policy, the Education Sector Plan, the Rubber Industry Master Plan, or the National Employment Policy. (34-40)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including insufficient funding.

Liberia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Anti-Trafficking Awareness Campaign†	Aims to raise public awareness on human trafficking through the use of radio and billboard messages. (7) In 2019, conducted an anti-trafficking public awareness campaign during the country's World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, as well as other times throughout the year. (9,25)
Shelters‡	MOGCSP-operated shelters for vulnerable street children in Lofa and Nimba County. (6,25) During the reporting period, the program provided shelter for approximately 20 children who were victims of abuse or sexual exploitation. Managers of these facilities reported that their operations were funded entirely through donations. (25)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II)	USDOL-funded project implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders to build the capacity of the government to address child labor. (2,41,42) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
U.S. Government-Funded Projects on Education for Adolescent Girls	Projects that aim to improve access to education and improve child protection. Includes Accelerated Quality Education for Liberian Children; Increasing Support for Out-of-School Girls and Youth, implemented by USAID; and the McGovern-Dole International Food For Education and Child Nutrition Program, implemented by USDA. These projects were active in 2019. (25,43-45)
Liberia Social Safety Nets Project (2017–2021)	$10 million World Bank-funded 4-year project implemented by MOGCSP that aims to establish key national safety net delivery systems and provide support for low-income households. (25,46) In 2019, collected data in four counties and disbursed the Social Cash Transfer program's first quarterly payment in October 2019, reaching 3,250 participant households in Maryland and Grand Kru Counties. (47)

† Program is funded by the Government of Liberia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (48-54)

Research was unable to determine if data from the 2017 labor force survey, which reportedly includes a child labor component, was analyzed in 2019. (6,9,27) Although the government funds social programs, they are not sufficient to address all sectors in which child labor occurs, including in domestic work, the production of rubber, and the mining of gold and diamonds. (25)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Liberia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2019
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those who are employed less than full-time and those who are working outside of school hours.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that penalties for employing children under the minimum age for work are stringent enough to deter violations.	2014 – 2019
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding and the number of child labor violations found.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure labor inspections are conducted in all sectors in which children work.	2016 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor violations.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate's complaint and referral mechanism is adequately supported and operational.	2017 – 2019
	Conduct an adequate number of worksite inspections to combat child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, violations found, penalties applied, and whether initial and refresher trainings were offered.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure adequate funding for child labor enforcement agencies, such as the Ministry of Labor, the Liberia National Police, and the Women and Children Protection Section, and provide necessary training for such officials to enforce child labor laws.	2010 – 2019
	Disaggregate the child endangerment cases prosecuted through the Ministry of Justice to determine the number of cases related to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure adequate funding for the National Commission on Child Labor's program activities to address child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure coordinating bodies, including the TIP Task Force, are implementing effective case referral mechanisms.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies.	2010 – 2019
	Publish information about the activities taken to implement policies that address child labor.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish comprehensive research data to determine child labor activities and to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2019
	Improve access to education by subsidizing the cost of school related costs and reduce barriers to education by building additional schools, addressing sexual abuse in schools, and providing adequate transportation.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure children do not leave school before the completion of compulsory education.	2017 – 2019
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially in forced domestic work, the production of rubber, and the mining of gold and diamonds.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Madagascar made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published data on child labor and ratified International Labor Organization Convention C. 189 on Domestic Workers and the 2014 Protocol to the 1930 Convention on Forced Labor, both potentially relevant to addressing child labor. The Ministry of Labor also took important steps toward modifying its Labor Code to grant the inspectorate sanction authority. In addition, the government began a process to renew its National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, and the National Bureau to Combat Human Trafficking led efforts to develop a human trafficking database. Although Madagascar made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas, the government failed to impose penalties for child labor violations and failed to investigate public officials suspected of facilitating the worst forms of child labor. Children in Madagascar engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude. Children also perform dangerous tasks while mining mica and in agriculture, including in the production of vanilla. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, and social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Madagascar engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude. Children also perform dangerous tasks while mining mica and in agriculture, including in the production of vanilla. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Madagascar. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	43.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	33.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		65.5

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Madagascar, particularly those from rural and coastal regions and from poor families, are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, forced domestic servitude, forced begging, and forced labor in mining, fishing, and agriculture. (26,28) Girls in particular are lured by peers, family members, and pimps to engage in commercial sexual exploitation in tourist locations, urban cities, vanilla-growing regions, and mining areas. (1,11,18,28) Children from rural villages are often sent to larger cities as child domestic workers, where they are subjected to harsh working conditions such as long hours, poor accommodations, and low salaries. (10) Children are often recruited by agencies into domestic work and subsequently subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (26) Although some government officials are reportedly complicit in facilitating the falsification of national identity documents used in the commercial sexual exploitation of children, there have been no reports of government actions to respond to this official complicity. Reports suggest a recent increase in the commercial sexual exploitation of boys. (26)

In 2019, Madagascar published the results of its Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2018, which showed that around 47 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in child labor, with 32 percent working in hazardous conditions. The report found that the Matsiatra Ambony and Androy regions had the highest rates of working children. (10,29) Estimates from the ILO suggest that children work primarily in the informal sector and in agriculture, and they perform hazardous work in a variety of sectors. (10)

Recent reports indicate that an estimated 10,000 children work in the mica sector in the southern region of Madagascar, including in constructing mines, extracting and sorting mica, and hoisting loads of mica out of mines. Young girls are also vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation around mica mining sites. (19,26) Children as young as age 10 are involved in mining gold and sapphires in the regions of Analamanga, Anosy, Ilakaka, and Vakinankaratra. Children in the mining sector suffer from respiratory problems and diseases such as diarrhea and malaria, and are at risk of injury from collapsing mines. (5,11,14,16,18) In addition, children working in the production of vanilla in Madagascar are exposed to toxic substances and extreme temperatures. They also transport heavy loads and work for long hours. There are reports that children are increasingly recruited by adults to engage in vanilla theft because they are less likely to be searched by security forces or subjected to mob retaliation. (8,9,12,30-32) In fishing, children dive deep underwater with no protection or breathing devices, while children involved in stone quarrying use dangerous tools with no protection and work in the outdoor heat. (10)

Although the Constitution guarantees free compulsory education, access to education is often limited for some children due to a lack of school infrastructure, unqualified teachers, and no transportation services in rural areas with long distances to schools; the cost of school fees and supplies; and reported school violence, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (8,11,28,33-36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Madagascar has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2019, Madagascar ratified two International Labor Organization instruments relevant to combating child labor: C. 189 on Domestic Workers and the 2014 Protocol to the 1930 Convention on Forced Labor. The instruments entered into force in Madagascar in June of 2020. (10,26,44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor, Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Services and Labor Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE)	Enforces child labor laws, trains inspectors, and coordinates and evaluates all activities toward the elimination of child labor. (10,33,34,45)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces laws pertaining to violence against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (10,22,45) Works with Department-level courts to prosecute child labor cases. (10,46)
National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates criminal cases involving minors, including issues pertaining to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, mainly in urban areas. Housed under the Ministry of Public Security. (5,10,22,45)
National Gendarmerie Morality and Child Protective Services (SPEM)	Investigates criminal cases involving children, including those related to the worst forms of child labor, mainly in rural areas. Housed under the Ministry of National Defense. (10,45,47)
Ministry of Population, Social Protection and the Promotion of Women	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (11) In collaboration with UNICEF, manages around 700 child protection networks to protect children from abuse and exploitation in all 22 regions of Madagascar. (11,28,48,49)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of PACTE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

During the reporting period, PACTE collaborated with the ILO to draft a decree that would enable labor inspectors to impose administrative sanctions, suspend the activities of any workplace that engages in the worst forms of child labor, and have authority over employers of domestic labor. The decree would also allow inspectors to be involved in child labor-related investigations. (10)

In 2019, 24 inspectors collaborated with UNICEF and the ILO to carry out targeted child labor inspections in 6 regions across the country, while UNICEF also funded the labor inspectorate in a seventh province. These inspections focused primarily on informal labor such as artisanal mining, stone quarrying, work in the service industry, tourism, and commercial sexual exploitation and identified 446 cases of child labor. (10) However, there were no indications that any children were removed from these labor situations or that any sanctions were imposed as a result of violations discovered during these specific inspections. (10) Still, the Manjary Soa Center in Antananarivo, managed by PACTE, reported that in 2019 it had received 35 children removed from situations of domestic labor, street vending, and other exploitative situations. (10)

In 2018, Madagascar expanded its list of hazardous occupations for children, but reports indicate that the government was slow to disseminate the law and has not made efforts to enforce it. (12)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Madagascar's workforce, which includes more than 13.4 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Madagascar would employ about 335 labor inspectors. (50,51) The Ministry of Labor has also noted that the number of inspectors is insufficient. (10) In addition, the concentration of labor inspectors in the capital hampers the government's capacity to enforce child labor laws in rural areas, especially in the agricultural sector. (5,33) While there is an inspectorate in 18 of Madagascar's 22 regions, inspectorate personnel have noted that a lack of resources has limited their ability to carry out a sufficient number of inspections. (10) Even though the inspectorate has the authority to conduct unannounced, routine inspections, in practice most inspections occur only in response to a complaint received. (10) The government did not provide information on labor law enforcement inspectorate funding or the number or types of inspections conducted for inclusion in this report.

While child labor-related training is provided to new inspectors, PACTE has indicated that the course is only 20 hours and insufficient to cover all relevant issues, particularly because refresher courses are not provided. (10) Madagascar has a complaint mechanism via a national hotline; however, most of the calls received are related to general violence against children. The mechanism does not have a record keeping system to track calls specifically for child labor issues. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (12)	Yes (10)

During the reporting period, the Morals and Minors Brigade received 942 complaints unrelated to child trafficking or labor. Among these, police eventually identified 51 victims of child domestic labor and 16 cases in which children were victimized by human trafficking. It remains unclear whether any of these cases were referred for prosecution on human trafficking- or labor-related charges. (10, 26) Government authorities investigated a deputy mayor in the Moramanga district who was accused of facilitating the marriage of five Malagasy girls to Chinese men. The defendant was released from custody after the investigation. (26)

In 2019, the budgets for the Ministry of Public Security and for the National Gendarmerie Morality and Child Protective Services increased, though it was not clear how much of the funding was dedicated to address child labor issues. Furthermore, officials from both agencies indicated that funds available for criminal enforcement of child labor laws was insufficient given the scope of their missions. (10)

Madagascar

Reports indicate a lack of trained staff, equipment, and transportation to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor. (5,10,12,52,53) The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement prosecutions, convictions, or penalties assessed related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including allocation of financial resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinates programs, advises on child labor legislation and regulations, and implements the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Led by the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor. (11,54-56) In 2019, during the last year of implementation for the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor, the committee carried out assessment site visits in three regions to speak with government officials, NGOs, civil society groups, and international partners. (10)
Regional Child Labor Committees	Coordinates, monitors, and evaluates all regional activities relating to the elimination of child labor. The 10 regional committees identify activities to promote the elimination of child labor and compile, analyze, and report child labor data to PACTE. (45,55,57) In 2019, committees were operational in 25 of 32 communes in the Sava region. During the reporting period, the committees conducted public awareness campaigns and focused on the enrollment of children in school. (10)
National Bureau to Combat Human Trafficking (BNLTEH)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts in Madagascar and responsible for implementing the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. Chaired by the Office of the Prime Minister, includes representatives from the Ministries of Civil Services and Labor, Justice, and Population and Social Affairs. (22,41,54,58) During the reporting period, provided training to law enforcement and civil society groups on anti-trafficking legislation, investigation methods, and victim identification. (10) Led assessment of the expiring national action plan against human trafficking and the drafting of a new plan, and the creation of a human trafficking database. (26)
National Child Protection Committee	Guides and coordinates national child protection policy and programs. Chaired by the Minister of Population and Social Affairs, comprises a steering committee and a technical commission of specialists. (45,59) Under the Alliance 8.7 framework, the committee conducted child labor inspections in seven regions during the reporting period. (26)

The National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor, Regional Child Labor Committees, and the National Bureau to Combat Human Trafficking lacked sufficient funding to effectively operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (8,12,26,27,34,36,46)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2004–2019)	Aimed to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by strengthening child labor laws, conducting awareness-raising campaigns, mobilizing funds for social programs, and updating databases on child labor. Led by CNLTE. (5,55,60) The government initiated a final assessment of the plan for its last year, but no steps were taken to develop a new plan to replace the expiring one. (10)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2015–2019)	Aimed to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, effectively implement human trafficking laws, and provide protection and care for victims. Overseen by BNLTEH. (11,58,61) In 2019, BNLTEH held a 3-day workshop to evaluate the implementation of the anti-trafficking action plan and initiated the process to develop a new national action plan to replace the expired one. (10)

Policy	Description
Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children in the Tourism Industry	Aims to prevent commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry. Implemented by the Ministry of Tourism and supported by ILO and UNICEF. (62-65) In 2019, the Ministry of Tourism and the National Office of Tourism conducted an assessment to determine whether signatories were upholding the code of conduct and to develop recommendations for improvement. (10)
National Social Protection Policy	Aims to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation and promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children. Led by the Ministry of Population, Social Protection and the Promotion of Women and supported by international donors. (54,66-68) In 2019, the government partnered with the World Food Program to provide cash distributions to 70,000 households in the Anosy and Androy regions. (69) During the reporting period, the government also worked on updating the policy to incorporate stronger crisis response mechanisms. (70)
National Development Plan (2015–2019)	Aimed to promote sustainable development and social equality. Overseen by the Ministry of Economy and Planning and supported by the ILO's Decent Work Country Program. (54,71,72) Included a budget of $83,000 to specifically combat commercial sexual exploitation of children and child labor in domestic work, mining, quarrying, and other hazardous sectors. (34,71-73) Research was unable to identify actions taken to implement the plan during the reporting period or any planned efforts to renew the strategy beyond 2019.

† The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,72,74,75)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Support and Reintegration Centers†	Government program that provides social and reintegration services for victims of child labor. Includes the Manjary Soa Center and the Vonjy Centers in Antananarivo, Toamasina, Nosy Be, and Mahajanga. (11,22,76) Remained in operation in 2019, with the government committing $10,400 for the management of the Manjary Soa Center in 2019. (10)
Cash Transfer Program (2015–2019)†	Ministry of Population, Social Protection and the Promotion of Women $35 million program, supported by the World Bank and UNICEF, that provided cash assistance for families with school-age children, conditioned on children's school attendance. (11,12,77-79) The World Bank reported in 2019 that the program had reached 39,000 families. (80)
Project Supporting Sustainable and Child Labor Free Vanilla-Growing Communities in Sava (2016–2020)	USDOL-funded $4 million project implemented by ILO aims to reduce child labor in the vanilla-producing areas of the Sava Region. (54,81,82) In 2019, the project established three vocational training centers targeting children between the ages of 14 and 17. (10) The project also conducted a pilot to assess the feasibility of establishing a supply chain traceability system in the vanilla industry. (83) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
UNICEF Country Program	UNICEF-funded $197,815 program that supported the government's efforts to improve education, health, nutrition, and protection for children in Madagascar. (12,84) In 2019, Madagascar requested and was approved for an extension of the program into 2020. (85,86)

† Program is funded by the Government of Madagascar.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (15,45,60,87-92)

Basic health and social services available to victims of the worst forms of child labor are not adequate to meet current needs. (5,8,11,22,45) Although Madagascar has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, begging, and mining. (5,15,36,60)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Madagascar (Table 11).

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Investigate and prosecute public officials who are allegedly complicit in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2017 – 2019
	Publish enforcement information related to child labor, including labor inspectorate funding and the number and types of labor inspections conducted.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure inspectors and criminal law enforcement officials receive appropriate and regular training on child labor issues.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure the labor inspectorate receives adequate funding to enforce child labor laws and conduct a sufficient number of inspections, including ensuring enough inspectors in rural and agricultural areas.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure inspectors regularly utilize their authority to conduct routine unannounced inspections rather than conduct inspections only in response to complaints.	2019
	Ensure that when encountered, children are removed from child labor situations and that penalties for child labor violations are applied.	2019
	Enhance the effectiveness of existing complaint hotline databases by gathering separate data on child labor-related complaints.	2009 – 2019
	Disseminate and enforce the new decree expanding the list of hazardous occupations for children.	2018 – 2019
	Publish criminal law enforcement data on number of prosecutions initiated, number of convictions achieved, and penalties assessed for criminal law enforcement violations in relation to child labor.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure criminal law enforcement agencies have sufficient staff, equipment, and transportation to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Coordination	Ensure that relevant coordinating mechanisms are adequately funded to carry out their mandates.
Government Policies	Ensure policies related to child labor are implemented and report on yearly actions taken.	2016 – 2019
	Develop and adopt a new National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor and update or renew expiring policies such as the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons.	2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including those in rural communities, by removing fees for supplies and school-related costs, increasing school infrastructure and transportation services, hiring sufficiently qualified teachers, and ensuring children's safety in schools.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that social protection systems have adequate funding and staff to provide appropriate services to victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
	Expand the scope of programs to address child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and mining.	2014 – 2019

In 2019, Malawi made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government elevated the Tobacco Commission to enforce the Tobacco Industry Bill, which requires tobacco growers to report on efforts to eliminate child labor in tobacco farming, and significantly increased funding of its labor inspectorate. In addition, key coordinating bodies contributed to the development of a Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide, which advises government departments and public sector organizations on integrating child labor prevention and elimination into their activities. However, children in Malawi continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor including in the harvesting of tobacco and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, gaps continue to exist in labor law enforcement related to child labor, including financial resource allocation, and minimum age protections do not extend to children working in private homes and non-commercial farms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Malawi engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and the harvesting of tobacco. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	43.2 (1,965,690)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	45.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		80.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2014, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (2)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from National Child Labour Survey (Simpoc), 2015. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea (4-7)
	Planting and harvesting tobacco, clearing land, building tobacco-drying sheds, cutting and bundling, weeding, and plucking raw tobacco† (1,4,5,8-12)
	Herding livestock (7,13,14)
Industry	Brickmaking† (13,14)
	Construction,† activities unknown (7,14)
Services	Domestic work in third-party homes (7,15)
	Ganyu (a form of casual labor) (16)
	Begging† (7,13)
	Vending and wholesaling (7,17)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,4,13,18,19)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Herding goats and cattle; farming (predominantly tobacco); fishing; brickmaking; domestic work; and work in small businesses such as rest houses and bars, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,13,20)
	Forced begging (13)
	Use in illicit activities, including the sale and trafficking of drugs(7,21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Malawi are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco. (7,22,23) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness. (23,24) They are exposed to pesticides, chemicals, and harsh weather conditions; they also utilize sharp tools. (23) Some children work alongside family members who are tenants on tobacco farms. (1,5,23,25) In the tenancy system, tenants’ pay is based on the quantity and quality of tobacco sold to farm owners after the harvest season, and parents have an incentive to use their children to increase their earnings. Tenants often incur loans during the growing season; in many cases, they are unable to repay these debts, resulting in entire families being placed in debt bondage. (1,26) Many children working under these conditions do not attend school. (5,23)

Most child trafficking for labor in Malawi takes place internally. (13,19) Boys from southern Malawi are particularly vulnerable and are forced to work on tobacco farms in Malawi’s northern and central regions; they are also forced to work as cattle herders and in the brickmaking industry. (13,19,27) Child trafficking also takes place from Malawi to other countries, including Mozambique, South Africa, Tanzania, Zambia, and the Middle East. (19,20,27) Child victims of human trafficking may be charged for their clothing, food, housing, and transport. They may also be forced to work in debt bondage because of these charges and be unable to return home or support themselves. (28)

Girls from rural areas sometimes move to larger cities in search of work. In some cases, they are provided clothing and lodging from brothel owners and, if unable to find other work, engage in commercial sexual exploitation to pay off their debts. (1,13,27)

Primary education is tuition-free, and in September 2018, the government abolished secondary school fees to facilitate access to secondary education. However, considerable barriers to education exist, including families’ inability to pay required school-related expenses, such as books and uniforms. (1,20,29-31) Long distances, lack of teachers, poor school infrastructure, and the lack of water, electricity, and sanitation facilities also negatively impact children’s attendance at school. In addition, safety concerns may negatively affect attendance; reports indicate that children are sometimes victims of sexual assault at school. (5,7,15,20,30,32) Additionally, many girls in grades six to eight are pulled from school to perform domestic work at home. (30)

Children with family members with HIV/AIDS may need to assume responsibility as heads of their households, including working to support their families. These children, especially those who become orphaned, are at increased risk of entering into the worst forms of child labor. (33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor (Cont.)

Convention	Ratification
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2019, the government ratified ILO C.029 Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention 1930 and ILO C.184 Safety and Health in Agriculture Convention of 2001. (7,34) The commitments under these conventions would extend to the tobacco sector, in which children in Malawi are subject to both forced labor and hazardous work conditions. (35,36)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Malawi's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and military recruitment by non-state actors.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 21 of the Employment Act (37)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 22 of the Employment Act; Section 23 of the Constitution (37,38)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 1–9, and Paragraph 6, Sections 1–6 of the Employment (Prohibition of Hazardous Work for Children) Order (39)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 4 of the Employment Act; Section 27 of the Constitution; Sections 140–147 and 257–269 of the Penal Code; Sections 79 and 82 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Section 15 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (37,38,40-42)

In 2019, the government passed the Tobacco Industry Bill, which requires tobacco growers to report on their actions on issues of child labor. (7,44,45) The Commissioner may cancel the registration of a tobacco grower if the grower fails to submit a report that is satisfactory. (46)

Malawi currently lacks a specific legal framework for the tenancy system, which is often used in tobacco production, and leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Families working under the tenancy system are particularly vulnerable to debt bondage because loans advanced to farmers operating under this arrangement are often of a higher value than the profits farmers receive from crop yields. (1,47,26,48,49) In 2018, the Cabinet debated an amendment to the Employment Act that would prohibit tenancy farming. However, the government decided to defer consideration of the amendment until the ILO completes a study on the extent of tenancy farming in Malawi. (30)

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at age 14 in agricultural, industrial, or non-industrial work. (37) The minimum age is not extended to workers in third-party homes, such as in domestic work, or non-commercial agriculture in which children are known to work. (37,50) The minimum working age is also lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (29,37) Although non-state armed groups are not known to recruit children for military activities in the country, Malawi law does not meet international standards because it does not explicitly prohibit this practice.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Skills and Innovation (MOLSI) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Skills and Innovation (MOLSI)	Performs inspections and investigates all labor complaints, including those related to child labor. Through its Child Labor Unit, monitors and implements child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits. (8,51)
District Labor Offices	Enforces child labor and trafficking in persons laws at the district level. (7)
Malawi Police Service	Investigates suspected cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Analyzes and operationalizes systems to track human trafficking trends. (52)
Ministry of Homeland Security	Enforces human trafficking laws and prosecutes human trafficking offenses. (7)
Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs	Prosecutes criminal offenders. (7,53)
Tobacco Commission	Oversees the regulation of the tobacco industry and enforcement of the Tobacco Industry Bill, including child labor issues. (7,45)
Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare (MOG) Department of Child Development	Provides child protection and development services. (32)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLSI that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

In 2019, the government increased the funding and size of its labor inspectorate from the previous year; however, research indicated that funding and resources are likely inadequate to enforce laws related to child labor. (1,7,30) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Malawi's workforce, which includes more than 7 million workers. (55) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Malawi would employ about 175 labor inspectors. (56,57) Due to personnel and resource constraints, most labor inspections take place in or near major towns where district labor enforcement offices are located, leaving workplaces in remote and rural locations less protected. (19) In addition, labor inspectors do not have a mandate to directly assess penalties for violations related to child labor, but refer cases to the police for criminal law enforcement action. (7)

The government supports a child protection helpline operated by an NGO that identifies cases of child sexual and labor exploitation. Research did not find information on the number of calls related specifically to child labor. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (30)	No (54)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (30)	Yes (54)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (30)	No (54)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (30)	3 (19)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (30)	4 (19)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (30)	13 (19,54)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (30)	4 (19)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (58)	Yes (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (46)	Yes (7)

Many children in Malawi lack birth certificates. The inability of law enforcement officials to verify the ages of child victims may have impeded efforts to prosecute traffickers under the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act, and the Trafficking in Persons Act. (59) In addition, children who are the victims of commercial sexual exploitation are sometimes arrested by the police and detained alongside adults. In some instances, these children fall victim to abuse, including sexual extortion, by the police. (7,13,30)

The government did not provide information related to its efforts to train new criminal law enforcement investigators, or on refresher courses it provided. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provides policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor. Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, with MOLSI acting as the main technical advisor and secretariat, and includes representatives from government ministries, trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations. (33,60,61) The National Steering Committee on Child Labor met in 2019 to approve the National Action Plan on Child Labor and the Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide. (7,54)
National Technical Working Group on Child Labor and Protection	Oversees child protection issues and development of child labor elimination strategies for approval by the National Steering Committee on Child Labor. Chaired by MOG, and includes representatives from the government, international organizations, development partners, and NGOs. (54,60) The National Technical Working Group on Child Labor and Protection held meetings on preparatory work for the commemoration of the World Day Against Child Labor. The committee also met to review the National Action Plan for the Child and to develop the Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide. (54)
District Child Protection Committees	Coordinates all child protection activities at the district level and improve local coordination on child protection issues. (60) District Child Protection Committees were active at the local level during the reporting period. (54)
National Coordination Committee Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates and oversees investigations and prosecutions, training, victim care, and human trafficking data collection. (62) Mandated by the Trafficking in Persons Act of 2015. (8) The National Coordination Committee Against Trafficking in Persons met quarterly in 2019.

In 2019, MOLSI, with the support of Winrock International, developed the Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide to advise government departments and public sector organizations, at both the national and district levels, on integrating child labor prevention and elimination into their activities. (7,63) The guide was developed in coordination with the National Steering Committee on Child Labor and the National Technical Working Group on Child Labor and Protection. (54)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy (2019–2025)†	Aims to facilitate the coordination of all policies related to the needs of children to ensure child protection, including the prevention of child labor and trafficking. (63)
National Action Plan for the Child (2019–2025)†	Reinforces child labor elimination through awareness raising and vocational training to vulnerable children and children withdrawn from child labor. (7,54)
National Action Plan for Vulnerable Children (2015–2019)	Provided a framework for the development of district implementation plans. (65,66) In 2019, the government conducted a review of the National Action Plan for Vulnerable Children and drafted an updated policy, which is currently awaiting cabinet approval. (54)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2017–2022)	Outlines objectives to counter trafficking in persons: strengthen prevention; provide support and protection for victims; strengthen detection, investigation, and prosecution of offenses; encourage partnership and coordination; and conduct research, monitoring, and evaluation. (67,68) In 2019, the government developed standard operating procedures for handling trafficking referrals, held trainings for law enforcement officers and the public on issues related to trafficking in persons, and established two district-level coordination committees against trafficking in persons. The government also developed a national trafficking data collection and a communication strategy to improve communication and resource mobilization among key stakeholders. (69)
UNDAF (2019–2023)	Recognizes child labor as a common constraint to the creation of decent and productive employment. Signed between the government and the UN in September 2018, proposes strategies to address child labor, including prioritizing investments in child education, ensuring schools are safe from violence, and providing vocational skills for out-of-school children. (12,70,71) In 2019, the government held consultative meetings with civil society, non-government organizations, and other relevant stakeholders to develop action plans for the implementation of interventions related to the UNDAF, including prevention and elimination of child labor. (54,69)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Malawi has adopted a National Youth Policy and a National Education Sector Plan, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been integrated into these policies. (72,73)

In 2018, the government began reviewing a draft National Action Plan on Child Labor. The policy, however, is still waiting cabinet approval after resubmission in 2019. (1,7,8,30,46) The Cabinet is also reviewing a National Action Plan for Vulnerable Children and a Child Protection Strategic Plan to replace policies that expired during and before the reporting period. The government adopted a National Action Plan for the Child, which will reinforce child labor elimination strategies. Although the cabinet has approved the policy, it has not launched or made this policy available to the public. (7,54)

In 2019, Malawi became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (74)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including implementation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Monitoring System†	MOLSI system in pilot districts that identifies working children. Collects various data including school attendance. (60) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Labor Monitoring System during the reporting period. (7)
National Social Cash Transfer Program†	MOG program that supports low-income families in high-risk districts to enable children to stay in school. As of 2017, 430,000 children participated in the program. (55) Research has shown a decrease in child labor rates among participants of this program. (75,76) In 2019, the government made monthly social cash transfers to 293,000 households across the country, an increase from 176,000 in 2018. (69)
Complimentary Basic Education Program†	$1.1 million government-funded project that promotes school enrollment for children who are removed from child labor. In 2019, the government constructed and renovated 140 early child development centers, and supported community reintegration of approximately 888 children without permanent homes and from reformatory centers; in addition, around 2,158,428 primary school learners received assistance with school meals. (69)
Orphans and Vulnerable Children Intervention†	$4.9 million, USAID, and President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief-funded program that, in partnership with MOG, provides education, child protection services, birth registration, and shelter and care to vulnerable children from birth to age 17 through the establishment of Community Based Care Centers. (77) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Intervention program during the reporting period. (7)
Accelerating Child Labor Elimination Supply Chains (ACCEL) (2018–2022)	ILO program, with funding from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, that targets elimination of child labor in the coffee and tea sectors through emphasis on addressing the root causes of child labor, strengthening the sharing of knowledge and collaboration among supply chain actors, and improving policy, legal, and institutional frameworks. (7,79) The program targets five districts in Malawi with substantial tea and coffee farming. (69)

† Program is funded by the Government of Malawi.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (50,54,58,80,81)

The government, with the EU, UNICEF, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, support programs to increase birth registration and data collection in various districts across the country. (58,65,78)

Although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, including agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Malawi (Table 11).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all forms of children's work, including work conducted by children in private homes (domestic service) and on non-commercial farms, receive legal protection, including a minimum age for work that complies with international standards.	2009 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 years to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure legal protection for children working in the tenancy system.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2019
	Publish information on the number of labor inspections conducted, including worksite inspections.	2016 – 2019
	Increase resources to the labor inspectorate to conduct regular child labor inspections, including in remote and rural areas.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2017 – 2019
	Disaggregate data on child labor from child protection hotline calls and publish the information.	2014 – 2019
	Institutionalize training for criminal law enforcement investigators, including by training new investigators and providing refresher courses.	2019
	Ensure that children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation do not fall victim to sexual extortion and are not arrested or detained.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Sector Plan and the National Youth Policy.	2011 – 2019
	Finalize and implement national child labor and child protection policies.	2009 – 2019
	Publish and implement the National Action Plan for the Child.	2019
Social Programs	Ensure that additional educational costs, inadequate school infrastructure and number of teachers, long travel distances to reach schools, exposure to sexual violence, and the impact of HIV/AIDS do not serve as barriers to education.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key programs related to child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Increase the scope of existing social programs to reach more children at risk of the worst forms of child labor, and develop specific programs to target children in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure all children are registered at birth, and increase efforts to register children who are not issued birth certificates at birth.	2018 – 2019

In 2019, Maldives made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government passed a new Child Rights Protection Act, which takes steps to ensure compliance with international child protection laws and standards. In addition, the National Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee met for the first time in more than 2 years. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government has not determined specific hazardous occupations or activities that are prohibited for children, and the law does not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Moreover, the government does not have a policy or program that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Maldives.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.9 (2,364)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2009. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (2,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,5)
	Forced labor in domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (5,6)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Information on children's work is limited because a national survey on child labor has not been conducted. Maldivian children from the outer islands are brought to the capital, Malé, for domestic work. (2) Some children from impoverished families may be more vulnerable to sex trafficking. (7) Some of these children are reported to be victims of forced labor and sexual abuse. In addition, some girls from Bangladesh are victims of human trafficking to Maldives for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (2) There are also some reports of foreign tourists engaging in commercial sexual exploitation of children. (1,2,8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Maldives has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Maldives' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including determining the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* No conscription (16)

In November 2019, Maldives passed a new Child Rights Protection Act, which came into effect in February 2020. The new Act takes steps to ensure compliance with international child protection laws and standards. (5,17)

The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, as the use, procurement, or offering of a child for pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited. (11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Labor Relations Authority (LRA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Relations Authority, Ministry of Economic Development (MED)	Enforces the Employment Act, including child labor provisions. Conducts labor inspections and issues fines for violations. (6,9)
Family and Child Protection Department, Maldives Police Service (MPS)	Investigates complaints of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Refers cases to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution and the Ministry of Gender and Family to provide victim services. (15) Employs eight officers in Malé to investigate child labor cases, including child commercial sexual exploitation and child pornography cases. (15)
Family and Child Protection Services, Ministry of Gender and Family	Receives referrals of children who have been exploited, including in commercial sexual exploitation and drug trafficking, and provides care for such victims. (5,6)
Anti-Human Trafficking Department, MPS	Investigates human trafficking-related offenses and enforces laws prohibiting trafficking in persons, including cases of child trafficking. (5) Employs five officers to investigate human trafficking cases. (15,18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the LRA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training for new inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (6)	No (5)

The number of labor inspectors was reduced from 17 in 2018 to 15 in 2019 due to staff turnover. The LRA received a budget of $572,984 for 2019, of which $9,209 was specifically used for labor inspections. (5) However, the LRA reported that the amount of funding was not adequate to cover inspections in outlying islands, which incurs a large travel cost. The LRA also reported that new employees did not receive initial training from the government. (5,6)

In addition, although the labor inspectorate is authorized to assess penalties, no fines were issued in practice due to a lack of coordination between the LRA and the Maldives Inland Revenue Authority, which has the mandate to receive the payment of the fines. (5,6,9) In 2019, the Maldives Police Service (MPS) reported one case in which children were helping their parents work, but found no child labor violations. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Family and Child Protection Department of the MPS that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of resources for investigators.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (6)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	1 (6)	80 (5)
Number of Violations Found	0 (6)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (6)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	0 (6)	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (5)

Investigators have insufficient funding and resources, such as office facilities and transportation. (19) Police and other officials also have inadequate training on procedures for identifying human trafficking victims and providing referrals to protective services, including for children. (18) MPS reported that several trainings for investigators during the reporting period touched on the issue of child labor. However, MPS acknowledged that these trainings were not sufficient, as trainings were not designed to specifically address child labor. (5)

The LRA established a reciprocal referral mechanism for victims of human trafficking, in which the LRA informs the MPS via their online portal. MPS investigated 80 incidents of child pornography and commercial sexual exploitation in 2019, including 4 cases of child prostitution. (8) However, the investigations are not disaggregated by types of exploitation related to the worst forms of child labor. It is reported that MPS and social services providers did not have a clear understanding of the differences between sex trafficking and sexual abuse, especially in cases of children; this made the true number of sex trafficking victims unknown. (7) In addition, the outcome of these cases is unknown and the government did not provide information on the total number of prosecutions, convictions, or penalties assessed related to the worst forms of child labor. (5)

Also in 2019, the Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services identified six child sex trafficking cases and 15 potential child labor trafficking cases, but did not refer them to the Maldives Police Services' Human Trafficking Unit; it was unclear whether the MPS Family and Child Protection Department investigated the cases on other charges. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee (NAHTSC)	Manages all anti-human trafficking activities and implements the country's Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan. Chaired by Ministry of Defense leadership and consists of 10 participating government agencies. (1,7,10,20) During the reporting period, the NAHTSC held its first meeting in more than 2 years in December 2019. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan (2015–2019)	Established the government's goals to combat human trafficking, including establishing institutions, coordinating activities, raising awareness, and building capacity. (21) The National Action Plan has been updated for 2020-2022. (5)

In February 2020, the government approved the new National Anti-Human Trafficking Action Plan for 2020-2022, which aims to achieve significant progress on raising human trafficking awareness and increasing support for victims, including child victims of trafficking. (5,22) However, research found no evidence of a policy designed to address other relevant forms of child labor, such as forced labor in domestic work or trafficking drugs.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Family and Child Service Centers†	Nineteen Ministry of Gender and Family-operated centers that provide psychosocial support for child victims of abuse and exploitation, four of which provide temporary shelter for victims. (19)
National Victim Support Hotline (Number 1696)†	MED-operated hotline dedicated to receiving reports of human trafficking and child labor. Supported by MPS and Maldives Immigration. (23)
Child Helpline (Number 1412)†	Ministry of Gender and Family-operated helpline established with the support of MPS and UNICEF to receive reports of child abuse cases. (19)

† Program is funded by the Government of Maldives.

Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement existing social programs. (5) Family and Child Services centers and shelters lack adequate financial and human resources, and staff are inadequately trained to deal with cases involving abused and exploited children. (19) Existing social programs do not specifically address the commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children for drug trafficking, or forced labor in domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Maldives (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, including procuring, offering, and using children for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors receive training that specifically focuses on child labor issues, including training for new employees and refresher courses.	2009 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws, including to cover inspections in outlying islands, which incurs a large travel cost.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure sufficient coordination between the labor inspectorate and the Maldives Inland Revenue Authority to ensure fines authorized by the labor inspectorate are collected.	2019
	Provide sufficient funding and training to the police and prosecutors, and ensure that investigators have the resources necessary to enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019
Government Policies	Collect and publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of violations, prosecutions, and convictions for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019
	Adopt a policy to address all relevant forms of child labor.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct and publish a national child labor survey and research on the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information about activities that were undertaken to implement social programs.	2017 – 2019

In 2019, Mali made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government allocated $350,000 to anti-trafficking efforts, including training judges, prosecutors, police, and civil society members on Mali's anti-trafficking law. The government also published data on enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspections conducted and violations identified, in addition to drafting two new laws that increase penalties for trafficking crimes and exploitation of migrant children. In addition, the government published a new mining code that prohibits the use of child labor in artisanal mining. However, children in Mali engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in the production of cotton and rice. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas, the Malian Armed Forces also recruited and used 24 children ages 9 to 16 in support roles for at least 2 years, in violation of its national law. Although the children were released in November 2019 following high-level engagement, there is no evidence that government officials were sanctioned for the recruitment and use of the children. Further, Mali's law only prohibits hereditary slavery as a result of human trafficking, does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, and allows children under age 18 to be penalized as a direct result of forced recruitment by armed groups. In addition, resource constraints severely limited the government's ability to fully implement the National Plan to Combat Child Labor, and social and rehabilitation services for victims of the worst forms of child labor are inadequate.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, especially of the Bellah community (also known as black Tuaregs), are subject to hereditary slavery in northern and southwestern Mali. (1,4,18,30,31) Some children are born into slavery, while others are born free, but remain in dependent status through which they, along with their parents, are forced to work for their parents’ former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. Child slaves perform agricultural or domestic labor and are often sexually abused. (31,32) In addition, children, particularly those of Songhai ethnicity, work in debt bondage in the northern salt mines of Taoudenni. (31,33) In 2019, the Malian National Commission on Human Rights identified 125 displaced child slaves from the southwestern region of Mali. (4)

Children involved in artisanal gold mining in western and southern Mali are exposed to toxic substances and extreme temperatures, transport heavy loads, and work long hours. (4,13-16) Some boys placed in the care of Koranic teachers for education are forced by their teachers to beg on the street or to work in fields, after which they must surrender the money they have earned to their teachers. (4,13, 31,33)

Intermittent fighting and violence in central and northern Mali continued in 2019, resulting in the killing and displacement of children. (34,35) Children continued to be forcibly recruited and trained by non-state armed groups, including the Coordination of Movements for Azawad, the National Movement for the Liberation of Azawad, the High Council for the Unity of Azawad, the Arab Movement of Azawad, and Tuareg Imghad and Allies Self-Defense Group (GATIA), all signatories of the 2015 Peace Accord. (5, 28,34,36)

During the reporting period, the Directorate for the Promotion of Children and Family within the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and Family reported identifying 62 cases of children used by armed groups. The Directorate for the Promotion of Children and Family reported that 32 of the 62 children removed from armed groups were reunited with their families. (4) UNICEF also reported identifying at least 39 cases of child soldiers, and other cases of forced recruitment of child soldiers during the reporting period are being confirmed. (4,34,36)

Although the Constitution guarantees free and compulsory education, many children, especially girls, do not attend school because parents are expected to pay fees for registration, uniforms, books, and materials, which are prohibitive for many impoverished families. (2,4,18,33,37,38,57) Many children in Mali are not registered at birth, which may prevent them from accessing services such as education. (2,4,33,39,40) In addition, evidence suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment, prevent some children from remaining in school. (18,33,41)

In 2019, numerous attacks on schools in northern Mali resulted in lootings, destruction of learning materials and infrastructure, and occupancy of school facilities by armed groups. (4,27,42) A total of 1,217 schools in conflict-affected zones remained closed throughout the reporting period, as many teachers and students remained displaced. (4,42-44) In addition, between December 2018 and May 2019, the majority of primary and secondary school teachers throughout the country went on a series of non-continuous strikes causing many more schools to close. The Ministry of Education extended classes until July 2019 to salvage the school year. (45,46) The lack of access to education and lack of teacher availability may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (4,47)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mali has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mali's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment by non-state armed groups and use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code; Article 5 of the Military General Statute (53-55)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code; Article 5 of the Military General Statute (53-55)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Articles 31.23, 31.31, and 32 of the Penal Code (53)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 26 and 34 of the Law of Education (56)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 18 of the Constitution (57)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (53)

Articles 189.35 and 189.36 of the Labor Code allow children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform domestic or light seasonal work, as long as it does not impede school attendance or exceed 4.5 hours of work per day. (49) The light work framework does not meet international standards as it applies to children under the age of 13. Additionally, the law does not specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken. (48,58,109)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although Mali's Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for the purpose of slavery, it does not more broadly criminalize the act of slavery and Mali's labor code, while prohibiting forced labor generally, does not specifically prohibit hereditary slavery. In addition, Malian law does not prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs as established by international standards. (1,2,24,52,54)

The Child Protection Code provides protection for children under age 18, and the Penal Code establishes criminal penalties for several of the worst forms of child labor. (13,53,54) However, some offenses included in the Child Protection Code do not have criminal penalties, such as the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups. (53,54) Although the Child Protection Code prohibits children under age 18 from participating in armed conflicts or joining the armed forces, it only provides for imprisonment of perpetrators in the case of repeat offenses. Meanwhile, the Penal Code only provides criminal penalties if the children are under age 15. (53,54,59)

Article 28 of the Penal Code states that crimes committed out of self-defense or under a force that could not be resisted should not be penalized as prescribed by the Penal Code. Although an Inter-Ministerial Circular on the Prevention, Protection, and Rehabilitation of Child Soldiers states that Article 28 of the Penal Code is applicable to children involved in armed conflict, the Circular does not define the age range of the children it covers. (53,60) This means that some children under age 18 who are affiliated with non-state armed groups may be penalized as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor. (53,60)

In 2019, the government began working on several new laws and amendments that would strengthen protections for children. The government published a new mining code which prohibits child labor in traditional mines and drafted a new law on migrant smuggling which will carry increased penalties for the exploitation of migrant children. (4,34,61-63) The Ministry of Justice, in collaboration with UNODC, revised the 2012 Anti-Trafficking Law to provide aggravated penalties if trafficking is committed against a child under the age of 18 when previously aggravated penalties were only applied if the child was under 15 years of age. However, and the drafts of the migrant smuggling law and anti-trafficking law are pending government approval. (4,34,61)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's National Directorate of Labor	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those regarding child labor. (33,64,65)
National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinates Mali's efforts to eliminate child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by the Ministry of Labor and includes representatives from other government ministries, civil society, and worker and employer organizations. (2,24,66,67) One labor inspector in each region is designated as the point of contact for CNLTE to facilitate regional coordination, and CNLTE also had 14 dedicated child labor inspectors as well as a budget of $84,600 for the reporting period. (2,4,68) In 2019, CNLTE carried out awareness-raising activities and organized capacity building for community leaders and government officials, including a capacity-building activity that targeted sugar cane producers due to evidence of child labor in that sector collected by CNLTE. (4)
Ministry of Justice	Initiates and coordinates with courts the implementation of laws related to the worst forms of child labor with the support of several other ministries, including the Ministries of Security, Territorial Administration, Child Promotion, Defense, and Labor. (4, 31,64)
Ministry of Internal Security's Police Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children (BPMC)	Investigates crimes against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (2,4,23) In 2019, BPMC reported that a new Brigade to Fight Clandestine Immigration and Human trafficking was created to focus exclusively on transnational trafficking. (4,34)
Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family (MPFEF)	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,37,64,65)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mali's workforce, which includes approximately 6.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Mali would employ about 161 inspectors. (68-71) Although all regions have labor inspectors, government services are limited or non-existent in some areas due to the insecurity caused by the presence of non-state armed groups. (2,4,68) In addition, reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding hampered both the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE) and the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings, especially in remote areas of northern Mali. (4,33,58,68,72)

During the reporting period, the government increased the National Directorate of Labor's budget by approximately $100,000 compared to 2018, which led to an increase of $15,000 for the labor inspectorate. The labor inspectorate conducted 671 inspections in 2019 and identified 13,772 labor law violations. (4) The CNLTE also reported that it conducted labor inspections on private farms, where children are more likely to be involved in child labor. In addition, the Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children (BPMC) reported identifying five victims of child labor and investigated an additional four cases of child domestic workers, but the reported number of child labor victims is likely lower than the actual number of victims given the widespread nature of child labor and inadequate enforcement of child labor laws in Mali. (4) However, the government did not provide the number of child labor violations found, the number of penalties imposed, or the number of penalties imposed that were collected during the year for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

In 2019, the BPMC employed 25 staff, 3 fewer than in 2018. In addition, the BPMC noted that many of its expert staff members were transferred to the newly created Brigade to Fight Clandestine Immigration and Human Trafficking, and the BPMC received newer police officers. (4,68) According to the BPMC, the number of law enforcement agents is inadequate given the prevalence of the worst forms of child labor in the country. However, the BPMC reported that the government plans to increase its personnel in 2020. (4)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice conducted anti-trafficking trainings for government officials and community leaders in Gao, Timbuktu, and artisanal gold mining areas. In addition, the Government of Mali provided $100,000 in funding to NGOs to conduct anti-trafficking trainings in artisanal gold mining areas. (34) The trainings educated 400 stakeholders on the national anti-trafficking law and on victim identification and referral in local languages. (34)

Despite these efforts to increase training and resources, research found that the Government of Mali lacks trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, particularly in remote areas. (4,31,68,73) Reports indicate that because of political instability, which may hinder labor and criminal law enforcement efforts in northern Mali, the prevalence of hereditary slavery, forced labor, and trafficking in persons has worsened since the conflict began in 2012. (4,31,33,68,74)

In 2019, the BPMC arrested two Koranic teachers who were perpetrators of forced child begging and who exploited five children between the ages of 5 and 10. (4,34) The Ministry of Justice also reported that there were at least 33 new trafficking in persons cases under investigation and pending trials, and at least 30 additional cases relating to hereditary slavery were either investigated or prosecuted during the reporting period. However, in both cases, it is unknown whether any victims were children. (34) In addition, many justice sector actors noted government officials' interference in cases involving slavery-related practices in an effort to have the charges dismissed. (34)

During the reporting period, a Malian NGO reported that a total of 106 trafficking victims were assisted in collaboration with the government. This included a Malian female child victim of sex trafficking identified in Senegal who was repatriated to Mali, 28 foreign national children identified in Mali and repatriated to their countries of origin, and 13 Malian children who were identified as internal victims of migrant smuggling and trafficking. (34)

Research identified that a general in the Malian Armed Forces is also leading GATIA, a pro-government armed group. Research found evidence that the government provided in-kind support to GATIA, which forcibly recruited and used children in armed conflict during the reporting period. (2, 20,31,34,36,75-77) In 2019, it was discovered that Malian army officials recruited and used 24 children between the ages of 9 and 16 to work in domestic support roles for at least 2 years in exchange for food. The children were eventually released in November 2019 after repeated high-level engagement by the UN and international governments. (4,20,34,36,75-79) However, in both cases, it is unknown whether the government prosecuted perpetrators or sanctioned government officials for forced recruitment and use in support roles of children in armed conflict.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of clarity about the roles of coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice and includes various government agencies and civil society groups. (2,23,80,81) In 2019, the committee trained judges, prosecutors, police, and civil society leaders on Mali's anti-trafficking law. (4,34,82)
Inter-Ministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children	Led by MPFEF, conducts awareness-raising campaigns to prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict and implements reintegration programs for former child soldiers. (2) Conducts joint missions with international partners to determine the presence of children in armed conflict. (64) Committee was active in 2019 and assisted in identifying children forcibly recruited by non-state armed groups. (4,34,78)
Artisanal Gold Mining Summit Committee	Comprising gold mining associations and local government officials that monitor the recommendations from a 2014 summit on artisanal mining, including the ban on child labor in artisanal gold mines. (83,84) Committee was active in 2019. (4)

Reports indicate that there is confusion with regard to roles and a lack of coordination between the CNLTE and the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (28,31,74)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding and ineffective implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat Child Labor (PANETEM) (2011–2020)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by strengthening child labor laws, training relevant government officials, and mobilizing funds for social programs to withdraw children from child labor. Implemented by CNLTE. (9,58,84) In 2019, the government continued to work on PANETEM; however, CNLTE reported that there is a lack of funding to implement PANETEM and no resources to evaluate its progress. (4,68)
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2018–2022)	Aims to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, improve implementation of the laws, and provide effective protection and care for victims. Led by the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (4,31,85) Calls for the establishment of a formal body to coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons and allocates a budget of $10 million for the 5 year period or $2 million per year. The government has pledged to contribute $350,000 annually and intends to mobilize development partners and the private sector to provide the remaining financial support needed to implement the plan. (28) In 2019, the government established the Brigade to Fight Clandestine Immigration and Human Trafficking. (34,82)
National Policy for Promotion and Protection of Children (2015–2019)	Aimed to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation and promoted improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children, especially those affected by armed conflict. Overseen by MPFEF. (2,86) The Government of Mali and NGO partners reported identifying and assisting 215 child soldiers during the reporting period. (4,34)
Inter-Ministerial Circular and the Protocol on the Release and Transfer of Children Associated with Armed Groups and Armed Forces	Provides a framework that highlights the responsibility of the government to prevent children's involvement in armed conflict, and protect and reintegrate those children who become involved. (2,5,36,87) In 2019, after high-level engagement, the government interceded on behalf of 24 children identified by the UN as operating in domestic roles with the Malian Armed Forces in Gao. UNICEF is providing the children with psychosocial and reintegration support. (82)
National Strategic Education Sector Plan (2017–2026)	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of and access to basic and secondary education, especially in conflict-affected areas of northern Mali. Led by the Ministry of Education and supported by international donors. (58,64,88) In 2019, the government of Mali allocated $608,162 to fund education. (82)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,4,89-93)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
ILO-Implemented Projects to Combat Child Labor	ILO-implemented projects to combat child labor and forced labor in supply chains. These projects include the Clear Cotton Project on Child and Forced Labor (2019–2022), an $8.5 million EU and Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations-funded global project to combat child labor and forced labor in cotton and textile supply chains, and ACCEL Africa, a $26.5 million Government of Netherlands-funded regional project to combat child labor in gold mining and cotton supply chains. (68,94-96) Projects were active during the reporting year. (4)
USDOS-Funded Projects to Combat Descent-Based Slavery*	USDOS-funded programs implemented by the American Bar Association and ILO to combat hereditary slavery and forced child labor in Mali. (3,34,82,97) In 2019, the American Bar Association program trained 27 representatives of the Malian justice sector in victim-centric approaches to investigating and prosecuting cases involving slavery. (34)
National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Program	$25 million UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali-implemented program that aims to provide reintegration services to former combatants in Mali, including children. (2,87,98) In 2019, provided reintegration services to 39 child soldiers. (4) In addition, provided $246,000 to improve BPMC's headquarters, to provide adequate facilities for BPMC to receive child victims, and to hold a workshop for officers on techniques to assist and rehabilitate former child soldiers. (99)
Global Action Against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants (GLO.ACT)	$13 million EU-funded, global project implemented by UNODC, UNICEF, and IOM to combat human trafficking and migrant smuggling. (100,101) In 2019, Malian officials attended a regional GLO.ACT training to enhance cooperation to combat transnational trafficking in Mali, Niger, and Morocco. (102)
USAID Country Program (2016–2020)	$600 million USAID-funded program that supports the government's efforts to improve education, food security, and health; and to provide humanitarian assistance in crisis areas. In 2019, provided quality basic and secondary education to vulnerable communities in northern Mali, including by re-opening schools, training teachers, and providing school kits for students. (4,68,103)

* Program was launched during the reporting period. (4)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,4,104-107)

Mali does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in domestic work, forced begging, or commercial sexual exploitation. (108)

An informal referral mechanism exists among NGOs, UN bodies, police, and other government agencies to allow withdrawal of children from armed conflict and provide social services to victims of the worst forms of child labor. (4,28,68) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that resources and facilities available to social services agencies are inadequate. (4,31,33,68)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mali (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits hereditary slavery in addition to other forms of forced labor.	2017 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2009 – 2019
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups and in any armed conflict.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the Labor Code establishes a minimum age no younger than age 13 for light work and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the specific ages of children protected by the Inter-Ministerial Circular on the Prevention, Protection, and Reintegration of Children in Armed Conflict comply with international standards, and ensure that children under age 18 are not penalized as a result of being subjected to forced recruitment.	2009 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations found, child labor penalties imposed and collected, training on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and number of penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2012 – 2019
	Increase labor inspectorate funding and resources, including equipment and transportation to carry out inspections, especially in remote areas of northern Mali.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that enforcement officials throughout the country receive additional training, transportation, and equipment necessary to adequately enforce laws related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2019
	Ensure that perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, including government officials, are prosecuted in accordance with the law.	2013 – 2019
	Implement the provisions of the Inter-Ministerial Circular and the UN-signed Protocol, which require that children in detention for their association with armed groups be transferred to social services or to UN child protection actors for appropriate reintegration and social protection services.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that government officials are sanctioned and held accountable for interference in legal cases related to crimes of the worst forms of child labor, including in cases of slavery and the recruitment and use of child soldiers.	2019
Coordination	Clarify roles for coordinating mechanisms combating child labor and improve coordination among relevant agencies.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms receive sufficient resources to coordinate efforts to address child labor.	2012 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Plan to Combat Child Labor is implemented, including by allocating sufficient financial and human resources.	2012 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls and those living in conflict-affected areas, by removing school-related fees, increasing school infrastructure, increasing teacher availability, providing school supplies, and taking measures to ensure the safety of children and teachers in schools.	2010 – 2019
	Increase birth registration rates to ensure that children have access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that the military and non-state armed groups do not occupy schools.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that government social services have sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for victims of the worst forms of child labor, including for children used in armed conflict.	2016 – 2019
	Institute new programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors, including domestic work, forced begging, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Mauritania made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Unlike previous years when the government did not adequately prosecute or secure convictions in slavery cases, the government investigated, prosecuted, and convicted 12 perpetrators in 3 cases of slavery during the reporting period. In addition, it created and funded a new agency, Taazour, to assist vulnerable populations, including communities of slave descent. The government also revised laws on trafficking in persons and eased requirements for registering non-governmental organizations. However, despite making meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, Mauritania is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a policy and a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Although there were indications of progress, criminal law enforcement authorities did not make adequate efforts to combat slavery and its vestiges during the reporting period. Specifically, prosecution and convictions in slavery cases are isolated, and reports continue to indicate that some government actors, including police and judicial authorities, are unwilling to pursue such cases. In addition, since 2011, the government has required proof of marriage and biological parents' citizenship for children to obtain a birth certificate. As a result, children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including those of slave descent, have been prevented from being registered at birth. Because birth certificates are required for enrollment in secondary school in Mauritania, children as young as age 12 cannot access education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Mauritania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary slavery. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in herding cattle and goats. The government did not make sufficient efforts to enforce some laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including laws on hereditary slavery. In addition, lack of financial resources severely limited the government's ability to fully implement policies, and social programs to combat the worst forms of child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary slavery. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in herding cattle and goats. (1,5-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritania.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	19.7 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.3

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding and caring for cattle, camels, goats, and sheep (1,5-7,10-13)
	Fishing for shrimp and fish (1,6,7,11-13)
Industry	Crushing gravel (11,14)
Services	Domestic work (1,5-7,15-17)
	Working as car mechanics, painters, and carpenters (1,6,7,13)
	Garbage scavenging (1,7,13)
	Street work, including vending, shoe shining, begging, [†] and in the transportation sector (1,6,7,11,13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor [‡]	Forced begging as a result of criminal gang recruitment and coercion by Koranic teachers (1,6,12,16-18)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,7)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (4,7,13,19)
	Indentured and hereditary slavery (1-3,10,15,18-23)
	Forced labor in domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,13,19)

[†] Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

[‡] Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritania, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slave-like practices, particularly in rural and remote areas of the country. Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (3,4,6,7,21-25) Child slaves herd animals such as cattle and goats, perform domestic labor, and are often sexually exploited. (3,4,14,15,26)

In Mauritania, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. However, some Koranic teachers (marabouts) force their students (talibés) to beg on the streets for long hours and to surrender the money they have earned. (4-7,12,17-19)

Since 2011, the Government of Mauritania has required proof of marriage and a copy of the national identity cards of the parents or caregivers to obtain a birth certificate. This may have prevented children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including from families of slave descent, from being registered at birth. (27,28) In addition, Ministry of Education officials report that an April 2016 decree requiring all children to have a national identity card to take part in national examinations to obtain the Certificate of Primary Education Studies (CEP) has not been applied systematically; however, the decree has not been withdrawn, and this continues to leave room for different interpretations. Because both birth certificates and the CEP are required to enroll in secondary school in Mauritania, many children as young as age 12 cannot access secondary education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (7,10,13,18,24,25,28-31) In addition, the lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers, especially in rural areas, impede access to education, which may increase children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (21,32-34) Children from families of slave descent, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, also face barriers to accessing education due to ethnic discrimination. (5,10,22,24,35)

Although all families are required to register children for birth certificates, there are reports that the civil registration process, including obtaining birth certificates, is confusing and time consuming. Moreover, applicants have faced additional hardship due to the closure of registration centers outside the capital and lack of training for registration center staff. (27,28,36,37) In 2019, the government began providing birth registration to children from a preliminary list of 30,000 unregistered children, including refugees and children of slave descent. The government has not published the total number of registrations issued during the reporting period. (38-40) The Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF) and the National Child Protection Council have representation in all regions in Mauritania, and are mandated to identify cases of citizens, including children, who are unable to register and provide them the support needed to complete the registration process. (40) In addition, the government appointed a special committee, headed by a presidential adviser, to review cases of unregistered applicants and facilitate documentation processes for marginalized and vulnerable communities. As part of the committee’s efforts to facilitate documentation processes, they have conducted site visits to civil registration centers during which they have provided support to individuals who have encountered difficulty in the civil registration process. (39,40)

In 2019, Mauritania hosted approximately 57,000 Malian refugees. During the reporting period, the Government of Mauritania, in collaboration with the UNHCR, continued to issue birth certificates to approximately 2,000 Malian refugee children. (12,17,41,42) Refugee children may have difficulty accessing education, which makes them particularly vulnerable to engaging in the worst forms of child labor, including being recruited by non-state armed groups. (4,12,30,43,44)

In 2019, Mohamed Ghazouani was sworn in as President of Mauritania, and his new administration has prioritized combating poverty, exclusion, and marginalization. Under the current administration, experts have highlighted that Mauritania has made some progress in addressing human rights issues, including investigating and prosecuting cases of slavery and trafficking in persons; however, some government officials have expressed a continued unwillingness to address allegations of human trafficking and slavery. (17,19,45,46)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritania has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

During the reporting period, the government drafted a new law regulating NGOs that eases registration requirements and moves oversight of NGOs from the Ministry of the Interior to the Commissariat for Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Relations with Civil Society. (58,59) The government also began rewriting laws related to trafficking in persons to provide increased legal protections against forced labor. (17,56-60) As part of this process, the Ministry of Justice collaborated with IOM on several workshops to solicit input from governmental and civil society organizations to revise the legislative framework concerning human trafficking. The draft law significantly reinforces victims’ rights, including a right to reparations. (17,40,61)

The General Child Protection Code, enacted in 2018, allows children ages 16 and 17 to work as long as work is not performed at night, does not exceed 8 hours per day, and does not impede school attendance. In addition, the Code prohibits the employment of children in work that exposes them to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse; work with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools; and work in unhealthy environments, which may expose children to hazardous substances or temperatures. (37) The Code also criminalizes the commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced begging, and provides penalties for violations of child labor laws up to $41,000 and 20 years’ imprisonment for the commission of child trafficking crimes. (13,37,62,63) However, the Code does not determine the types of work that are hazardous, including domestic work, an area in which there is evidence of children carrying heavy loads and working long hours. (6,37) In 2019, the government began to develop a new hazardous work list. The new list, which is expected to include domestic work, is slated to be finalized in 2020. (12,39)

The Labor Code allows children ages 12 and older to perform light work, as long as it does not impede their school attendance, does not exceed 2 hours per day, and is authorized by the Ministry of Labor. (47) However, the Labor Code does not specify the activities in which light work may be permitted. (64) In addition, children in Mauritania are required to attend school only up to age 14. This standard makes children ages 14 through 16 vulnerable to child labor, because they are not required to attend school but are not legally allowed to work. (37,54)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's Directorate of Labor and Inspection	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including violations related to minimum wage and hazardous work. (16,65,66)
Ministry of the Interior's Special Brigade for Minors	Investigates crimes against children, including human trafficking, and monitors religious schools (mahadras) to ensure that children are not forced to beg on behalf of their teachers. Mainly operates in Nouakchott. (7,16,35,67,68)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF) Office of Childhood	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Manages the Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children. (7,16,65)
Ministry of Justice's Directorate of the Judiciary for the Protection of Children	Coordinates child protection issues and oversees tribunals responsible for sentencing child offenders. (14,16)
Anti-Slavery Courts	Prosecute crimes related to slavery and provide free legal assistance to victims, including children. The three regional courts located in Nema, Nouakchott, and Nouadhibou were created under the Roadmap and Action Plan for the Eradication of the Vestiges of Slavery. (4,69-71)
Commissariat on Human Rights and Humanitarian Action	Coordinates the development and implementation of government policies related to human rights, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,65,72,73) Carries out awareness-raising campaigns to combat slavery and human trafficking and acts as a civil party to victims of slavery in filing cases. Semi-autonomous body, under the supervision of the Office of the Prime Minister. (4,65,72,73) As part of the new government's restructuring, the National Agency to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and Fight Against Poverty's (Tadamoun) mandate to act as civil party on behalf of victims of slavery has been transferred to the Commissariat on Human Rights and Humanitarian Action. (12,39,74) In 2019, the Commissariat, working with an IOM-funded consultant, drafted a new National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons that addresses USG recommendations. Government approval of the plan is expected in early 2020. (17)
National Commission for Human Rights (CNDH)	Independent ombudsman body. Advocates for the eradication of slavery, receives human rights complaints, and conducts investigations on human rights violations, including the worst forms of child labor. (7,16,19,35) In 2019, the government funded the CNDH's nationwide outreach caravan to raise awareness in rural and marginalized communities on their rights and legal protections, and how to identify cases of slavery-like practices. (12,19,56)

In 2019, the Ministry of Justice, in coordination with the MASEF, set up a rehabilitation center for victims of slavery to reinstate their full civil rights and liberties. (12)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, labor inspectors did not receive training on the General Child Protection Code. (12,37,75,76) In addition, reports indicate that the Ministry of Labor lacked equipment, training, transportation, and funding to conduct child labor inspections, especially in remote locations and in the informal sector, which employs more than 40 percent of the workforce. (12,13,16,34,65,68,79,80) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor hired and trained 60 more labor inspectors to expand coverage across the country and across sectors. (12,39)

Labor inspectors prepare reports when they find a labor violation and may include a recommendation for a penalty; however, they must file the reports with the Ministry of Justice. The Ministry of Justice will then assess the penalty for the labor violation. (12,78) However, the penalties established for violating child labor laws are insufficient and do not generally deter violations. (14,81)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the investigation and prosecution of criminal cases related to hereditary slavery.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

During the reporting period, the Special Brigade for Minors continued to employ 3 officers. (12) According to international organizations and NGOs, there is little to no coordination among enforcement agencies. (76,78) Efforts made by criminal law enforcement authorities to combat the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery, remained inadequate given the magnitude of the problem. (4) In addition, Mauritanian judicial officials often dismiss or fail to refer cases to the Anti-Slavery Courts due to a lack of training. (38,79)

In November 2019, the Anti-Slavery Court of Nema judged 3 separate cases that included a total of 12 perpetrators and approximately 15 victims. The court sentenced the 12 perpetrators to serve 5 to 15 years in prison and awarded the victims in each case $135,000 as a group. (12,82) Although the 12 convicted had fled to Mali prior to their prosecution, the Ministry of Justice issued international warrants for their arrest and is working with The International Criminal Police Organization to seek their extradition to Mauritania. (12,82) An additional case involving a young female victim of slavery is currently under prosecution at the Anti-Slavery Court of Nouakchott and has drawn widespread attention due to a perceived lack of action by some judicial officials. However, both the Commissariat on Human Rights and the Nouakchott Public Prosecutor have taken a proactive role in managing the case. (17,83,84) During the reporting period, there were two additional cases of slavery investigated or prosecuted by the Nema Anti-Slavery Court. In addition, the Federal Public Prosecutor issued a circular requiring prosecutors to actively investigate cases of slavery and provide free legal assistance for victims of slavery. (80,82)

According to Article 23 of the 2015 Anti-Slavery Law (Law 2015-052), the only entities other than Commissariat on Human Rights and Humanitarian Action that can file criminal cases on behalf of former slaves are legally registered human rights associations that have been operating for 5 years in Mauritania. (50, 39,74,79,81,85) The draft NGO law currently before parliament will ease registration restrictions on civil society organizations to operate in Mauritania, but it has not yet been clarified that these organizations, once registered, will be able to immediately bring criminal cases on behalf of former slaves. (39,57,58,59)

Evidence suggests that some police, prosecutors, and judges do not investigate cases of slavery after complaints are received, and that the government has prosecuted cases for lesser offenses to avoid bringing a slavery case to trial. In some cases, this is due to allegations of corruption or lack of political will to prosecute suspected slaveholders, or it may be due to misunderstanding of the 2015 Anti-Slavery Law. (4,12,56,87) There are also reports that investigative judges who receive anti-slavery cases may try to pressure slavery victims to drop their cases or accept mediation in lieu of prosecution. (38,76,79,80) The obstacles that victims of slavery encounter in filing complaints and the government's failure to adequately investigate these cases may be due to the insufficient allocation of resources by the government and a lack of political will to prosecute these cases to their maximum legal liability. (38,76,79,80)

In addition, two laws adopted in 2018 by the Government of Mauritania have drawn widespread concern in the international community. The anti-discrimination law, enacted in January, and the law on apostasy-related crimes, adopted in April, may be used to retaliate against anti-slavery organizations and restrict their ability to function, including their ability to file criminal cases or advocate for the end of slavery. (79,81,88-92) Although, as of the end of 2019 there were no reports that the laws had been used against anti-slavery organizations, there are still concerns that the laws could impede anti-slavery organizations from providing services to victims of slavery, including children. (79,81,91,93,94) In addition, the government has not specified its position on revising these laws. (39)

During the reporting period, the government sentenced seven anti-slavery activists to 6 months in prison for taking part in an unauthorized demonstration and inciting hatred and racism. A majority of these activists have since been released. (82,95) In addition, there are reports that some cases of slavery are resolved through social mediation rather than through the criminal justice system. (12,19,67)

Enforcement authorities, including the Anti-Slavery Courts, lack personnel, funding, and training to adequately coordinate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,10,12,13,20,69,71,96,97)

The Government of Mauritania did not publish complete data on the number of investigations related to violations of the worst forms of child labor, but international organizations and local NGOs reported that the government investigated cases involving child victims. This included repatriating 90 Senegalese children smuggled into Mauritania to be exploited in fishing, domestic work, and drug production, and for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. (17,19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor. (Table 8) However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts, including the incorporation of all relevant agencies to address all forms of child labor.

Mauritania

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Protection Council	Aims to develop and implement policies and programs to eradicate all forms of violence against children, including child labor. Chaired by the Prime Minister’s adviser on social affairs and includes government and civil society stakeholders that address children’s rights. (36,38,98-101) The Ministry of Labor did not participate in the activities of the National Child Protection Council. (39)
General Delegation for National Solidarity and the Fight Against Exclusion (Taazour)*	Coordinates and implements government programs to provide education, economic opportunity, and health services to vulnerable populations, including communities of slave descent; replaces Tadamoun . (12,57,102,103) In 2019, the government allocated nearly $550 million over 5 years to Taazour for implementation of government programs to address vulnerable populations, including communities of slave descent. (12)
Inter-Ministerial Technical Committee on Human Rights	Coordinates and monitors government efforts to promote human rights in Mauritania, including those related to the UN CRC. Led by the Commissioner for Human Rights, Humanitarian Action and Relations with Civil Society and includes representatives from Taazour , the CNDH, and other ministries. (65,104) The Committee was active during the reporting period. (12)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation of key policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor (2015–2020)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by strengthening child labor laws, training relevant government officials, implementing awareness-raising campaigns, and mobilizing funds for social programs to withdraw children from child labor. Overseen by the Ministry of Labor. (1,6,13,65)
National Child Protection Strategy†	Aims to protect children against violence, exploitation, abuse, and neglect. The strategy specifically includes children exploited at work or victims of human trafficking, children living on the streets, and children who are victims of violence or sexual exploitation. (12,105)
Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development (2016–2030)	Aims to reduce poverty, promote sustainable development, and increase access to fundamental social services. Overseen by the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Development. (106,107) Integrates strategies to increase birth registration and access to compulsory education, strengthen social protection systems for children, and support efforts to combat slavery, including its vestiges. (106)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government, in consultation with the IOM, finalized a new draft National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons, which replaces the previous draft that had been under review since 2015. The government expects to adopt the plan in 2020. (12,56,108) Reports indicate that efforts to implement most of the key policies related to child labor, particularly the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor, have been delayed due to insufficient allocation of resources. (38,76,109,110)

In 2019, Mauritania became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves a commitment to increase action-accelerating commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, human trafficking and child labor by 2025. (111) The Government of Mauritania created an action plan, which includes the goal of ending child labor in dairy farming and artisanal fishing. (112)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery†	Government program that supports the reintegration and rehabilitation of former slaves. (4,113) In 2019, the program opened 82 schools and continued to implement income-generating activities in communities of slave descendants and other vulnerable populations. (12,20,38,76)
Cash Transfer Tekavoul (2015–2020)	A $45 million Taazour program, supported by the World Bank, that provides cash assistance to families with school-age children, conditioned on children's school attendance. (114) In 2019, expanded coverage from 30,000 vulnerable households to 45,000 households, and included efforts to increase civil registry enrollment. (102,103)
Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children†	MASEF-operated program that provides food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, many of whom are talibés . Operates in Aleg, Kaedi, Kiffa, Nouadhibou, Rosso, and Nouakchott. (7,16,34) In 2019, MASEF managed seven Centers and plans to open an eighth Center in 2020 to provide victim care services to children in need, including victims of human trafficking. MASEF assisted approximately 350 children and monitored 700 children through these centers. (12,17)
Model Mahadras Program†	Ministry of Islamic Affairs-funded program that provides monthly cash transfers of approximately $27 to parents whose children are enrolled in model mahadras . In conjunction with this program, also operates adult literacy classes for 8,000 imams across Mauritania to raise awareness of child rights, including information on child labor and child trafficking. (19) In 2019, 60 mahadras across Mauritania were participating in the program, reaching approximately 1,800 children. (19)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded global projects implemented by the ILO to support global and national efforts aimed at countering child labor and the forced labor of adults and children. These projects include From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project) and Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor*. (12,115-117) In 2019, the Bridge Project held 12 regional consultations with government stakeholders and civil society organizations to finalize research methodology on a qualitative study on forced labor indicators, and carried out a Ministry of Justice-supported evaluation of the Anti-Slavery Courts operations to provide recommendations for improving enforcement. (12,80,118) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2022)	A $13.8 million UNICEF-funded program that supports the government's efforts to improve education, birth registration rates, social inclusion, and protection for children, including refugees. (119) In 2019, provided access to education for 8,900 refugee children in the M'Bera camp and 10,900 children in host communities. (120)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mauritania.

Although Mauritania has social programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, and domestic work, and for children in hereditary and indentured slavery. (12,65,76,121) Moreover, some government officials do not acknowledge that slavery continues to exist. (2,3,19,25,56,65,96) In addition, the lack of recent data on slavery limits the government's ability to develop effective social programs to comprehensively address this issue. Existing social programs for former slaves and awareness of the national laws on slavery are insufficient. (2,5,25)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mauritania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2019
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including domestic work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory extends to the minimum age for work.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of labor inspections, child labor law violations found, and penalties assessed and collected.	2019
	Strengthen the labor inspection system by authorizing the labor inspectorate to assess penalties and initiate routine and targeted inspections, rather than performing inspections based solely on complaints received.	2014 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors are trained on the General Child Protection Code.	2018 – 2019
	Increase personnel, training, and resources for labor and criminal law enforcement agencies, including the Anti-Slavery Courts, to adequately enforce labor laws, especially in remote areas and in the informal sector.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that penalties are high enough to deter violators of child labor laws.	2015 – 2019
	Increase efforts to ensure that cases of the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery and forced begging, are investigated and prosecuted in accordance with the law.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that cases of slavery are prosecuted according to the law.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure the safety of anti-slavery activists and allow peaceful public discourse and assembly on slavery, slavery-like practices, and the vestiges of slavery, free from government interference.	2011 – 2019
	Legally recognize civil society organizations that work to protect the human rights of the Haratine ethnic minority and former slave groups, in particular those that assist victims of slavery in filing cases, register births, and ensure access to education, and ensure that legislation is not used to impair their ability to function.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure the Ministry of Labor's participation in the National Child Protection Council.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that key policies related to child labor, particularly the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor, receive sufficient funds for effective implementation.	2016 – 2019
	Approve and implement the National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that all children are able to obtain birth certificates to increase their access to secondary education and reduce their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including those from families of slave descent and refugees, by increasing school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas.	2011 – 2019
	Expand the scope of programs to address child labor, including in agriculture, herding, and domestic work, and the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary and indentured slavery.	2009 – 2019
	Implement a continuous awareness-raising program for government officials on the laws related to slavery and the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2019
	Conduct research and collect data on slavery to inform the development of effective policies and programs to identify and protect children who are at risk.	2010 – 2019
	Increase funding for social programs that provide services to former slaves.	2015 – 2019

In 2019, Mauritius made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the Workers' Rights Act, which strengthened protections for working children, and continued to implement social programs to support public education around the country. However, children in Mauritius engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities. Children also engage in child labor in construction and street work. The government did not collect nor publish data on criminal law enforcement, and gaps remain in the implementation of key policies and social programs related to child labor.

Agalega Islands, Cargados Carajos Shoals, and Rodrigues are not shown.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritius engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in construction and street work. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritius. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (4) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating and harvesting vegetables (1,2)
	Fishing, including diving, and casting nets and traps (2,7)
Industry	Construction (8)
Services	Domestic work (1,2)
	Working in apparel shops and restaurants (2)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and carrying goods in public markets (1,2,9,10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (2)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Research indicates that Mauritius typically experiences an uptick in child labor activities during the holiday season, November to December. Drug trafficking by children intensified during the reporting period, including both marijuana and synthetic drugs. (2) Some children in Mauritius are brought into commercial sexual exploitation by their peers or family members, or through fraudulent offers of other employment. (1,2,11) Mauritius has never conducted a national child labor survey and, therefore, information on the prevalence of child labor in the country is limited. (12,13) Child labor is known to primarily occur in the informal sector, in which monitoring and enforcement are more challenging. (2)

Mauritius

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Research indicates that children in Mauritius are more vulnerable to child labor during breaks in the school year. They are likely to help with family businesses when not in school. (2) Evidence suggests that incidents of physical and psychological abuse, including corporal punishment of students by teachers, prevent some children from attending school, which increases their risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor. Due to discrimination, children with disabilities face significant barriers in accessing education. (1, 14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritius has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritius's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the military recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 2 and 8 of the Workers' Rights Act, (15)

In October 2019, the Workers' Rights Act came into operation, repealing the Employment Rights Act. (2) The Workers' Rights Act specifies that a child under age 16 may not be employed to work in any occupation, but allows for children to do light jobs in family businesses that are not harmful to their health, development, or education. In addition, children are allowed to work alongside their parents in places such as a family farm or business when not in school. (2,15)

For several years, the government has been considering adopting the Children's Bill, which aims to strengthen the existing legal framework to combat the worst forms of child labor. (2,23) In September 2019, the Children's Bill was introduced to Parliament, but it has not yet received a vote. (2,13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, Employment, and Training (MOLIRE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training (MOLHRDT)	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (24) Throughout the reporting period, MOLHRDT performed dozens of trainings and sensitization programs for hundreds of children about teenage pregnancy and CSEC. In December, Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, Employment, and Training (MOLIRE) became Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training (MOLHRDT). (25)
Office of the Ombudsperson for Children	Investigates any suspected or reported cases of child labor or violation of a child's rights, proposes laws and policies to advance children's rights, and implements trainings on child protection laws and prevention. (26,27)
Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Minors' Brigade)	Investigates crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (23) Maintains a database of all human trafficking incidents involving children, and refers all cases of commercial sexual exploitation to the Child Development Unit. (28)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Undertakes criminal proceedings on laws related to the worst forms of child labor in coordination with the Minors' Brigade and the judicial courts. (29,30)
Ministry of Gender Equality, Child Development and Family Welfare's (MOGE) Child Development Unit	Enforces legislation related to children and implements policies and social programs related to child development. (3,12,31) Provides social services to victims of the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Provides trainings and awareness campaigns against human trafficking, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (3,12,31) In 2019, MOGE continued to provide counseling and psychological support as well as operate three state-run shelters. (13)

The Child Protection Act, Section 11, requires medical and paramedical professionals, as well as school staff, to report any cases of child labor or abuse. (1,19) MOLIRE reported that labor inspections are not carried out in homes or private farms because labor inspectors are asked to receive advance consent from the owner in order to conduct an inspection.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, Employment, and Training (MOLIRE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of its child labor laws.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation and lack of data availability.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (8)	Yes (2)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (33)	Unknown (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (2)

Research revealed that criminal law enforcement agencies lacked staff, transportation, and other resources to properly enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2) The government does not publicize information on its criminal enforcement efforts and did not provide complete information for inclusion in this report. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including implementation of activities.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Trafficking	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts in Mauritius. Chaired by the Attorney General's Office, comprises representatives from the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, Employment, and Training, MOGE, and other ministries. (35,36) The committee met regularly during the reporting period. (8)
High Powered and Working Together Committee	Coordinates and implements activities on children's rights, including efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by MOGE. (2,31) The High Powered and Working Together Committee did not meet in 2019. (2)

The government's efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor were hindered by a lack of coordination and information-sharing between key coordinating mechanisms, as well as by a lack of consultation with NGOs working on child protection issues. There is no coordinating body whose primary focus is child labor. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all the worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Safety Online Action Plan (2009–2019)	Aimed to prevent the online sexual exploitation of children by strengthening the legal framework and developing awareness-raising programs. Implemented by the Ministry of Information and Communication Technology, in conjunction with MOGE, the Minors' Brigade, and the Office of the Ombudsperson for Children. (37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period.
Education and Human Resources Strategy Plan (2008–2020)	Aims to improve equity of access to primary, secondary, and technical and vocational education, and to provide social services for youth. Overseen by the Ministry of Education. (38,39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period.
Government Development Program—Achieving Meaningful Change (2015–2019)	Aimed to increase access to social protection services for vulnerable populations, including children, and emphasizes a zero-tolerance policy for the use of children in drug trafficking. (40–42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period.
National Sports and Physical Activity Policy (2018–2028)	Provides a structured sports program available to all ages. The policy focuses on children and young adults and is available after school hours, to help reduce children's vulnerability to child labor and illicit activities. (8,43) During the reporting period, the Sports Act (2016) was reviewed. New programs for maintenance of sports facilities and programs encouraging Mauritians to engage in sports were being created. (32)

Research found no evidence of policies aiming to combat other worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, drafted in 2016, has yet to be adopted by the government. (2,35,44,45)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including implementation of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Awareness-Raising Programs on Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking†	MOGE program created to educate the public on preventing commercial sexual exploitation of children and human trafficking. Active during the reporting period. (2)
IOM Country Program	IOM program to build capacity of relevant government agencies to protect children from exploitation and human trafficking. (44,46) Research was unable to determine whether this program was active during the reporting period.
Education Assistance Programs†	Government programs that increase access to quality primary education for vulnerable children, designed to provide equal opportunities to primary school children throughout the country. Includes the Eradication of Absolute Poverty Program, which provides educational support to 7,500 households in 229 geographic pockets of poverty and in the Education Priority Zones and is designed to provide equal opportunities to primary school children throughout the country. (39) Research was unable to determine whether these programs were active during the reporting period.
National Children's Council†	Under MOGE, offers a wide range of services, including day care, shelters, creativity centers, children's clubs, and school child protection clubs around the island. In addition, has a program called "Atelier Partage Parents" for parental education, which has been functioning since 2012 and covers good parenting practices as well as focuses on violence and child abuse issues. (2) The National Children's Council met approximately once per month during the reporting period. (32)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mauritius.

Although the government has established an oversight body to improve the effectiveness of institutional care facilities and shelters, evidence suggests that there continues to be a lack of appropriate standards of care, inadequate provision of services, and overcrowding in some centers that house orphans, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, and child victims of other types of abuses. (3,29,43,47,48)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mauritius (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase the amount of training, human resources, and funding for agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure labor inspectors conduct targeted inspections.	2019
	Publish information regarding the number of criminal investigations conducted, number of violations found, number of prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, and number of imposed penalties on the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials are fully funded, equipped, and trained to address the problems of the worst forms of child labor in Mauritius.	2019
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies, including the High Powered and Working Together Committee, are active and are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that coordination mechanisms share information and policy-making decisions to combat the worst forms of child labor. Government should consult with all parties involved with anti-child labor activities, such as NGOs, industry, and other organizations, to ensure no overlap or gaps.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure a coordinating body exists that addresses child labor broadly.	2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2019
	Adopt the draft National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that policies addressing child labor are active.	2019
	Collect and publish data on the prevalence of child labor in Mauritius to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that all children, including those with disabilities, can attend school without fear of physical or psychological abuse.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that child victims of commercial sexual exploitation have access to comprehensive and quality social services.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that programs addressing child labor are active.	2019

For the 2019 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Mexico's efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because this is the first year that efforts have been assessed and suggested actions are included for Mexico. During the reporting period, the Government of Mexico made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas to combat the worst forms of child labor, including the ratification of the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, and the revision of the General Education Law to strengthen educational access for children from marginalized groups. The government also obtained convictions in 12 cases of child trafficking, established a new commission for the protection of migrant children, and drafted the Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor 2019–2024. Furthermore, the government carried out its 2019 National Child Labor Survey, and continued to fund and support a program that improved educational access for over 73,000 indigenous and Afro-descendant children. However, children in Mexico engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. Although nearly 60 percent of employment occurs in the informal sector, federal and some state-level labor inspectors are only permitted to carry out inspections in the informal sector in response to complaints. In addition, a lack of human and financial resources limited the government's ability to adequately enforce labor and criminal law, and the government did not publish complete information on its labor and criminal law enforcement efforts. Furthermore, social programs to combat child labor do not address all relevant sectors of child labor in Mexico.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mexico engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. (1-7) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. (8-11) The Child Labor Module (MTI) estimates that the population of children ages 5 to 17 years engaged in child labor fell from 3.5 million in 2007 to 2.1 million in 2017. This represents a decrease of 41 percent over 10 years, in part due to government policies and programs designed to combat child labor. (8,12) Current data show that 61 percent of child laborers engage in hazardous work and 40 percent of children who engage in unpaid work do not attend school. Child labor primarily occurs in the central and southern states of Nayarit, Zacatecas, Campeche, Tabasco, and Colima, and 73 percent of child laborers are boys. (8)

During the reporting period, the ILO assisted the National Institute of Geography and Statistics in carrying out the National Child Labor Survey (ENTI 2019), which will be used to develop policies and action plans to combat child labor based on the survey results. (13,14) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mexico.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mexico are trafficked internally for commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, including by organized criminal groups. The state of Tlaxcala is known as the predominant source and transit center for child commercial sexual exploitation in Mexico, but it also occurs in tourist areas such as Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, and Cancun, and in northern border cities such as Tijuana and Ciudad Juárez. (1-7) A report by the Regional Coalition Against Trafficking in Women and Girls in Latin America and the Caribbean (CATWLAC) found that 26 percent of female trafficking victims in Mexico are minors and 70 percent are of indigenous descent. (1-6,34,35)

Since 2006, the Government of Mexico has taken increased military action against drug cartels and organized criminal groups. Due to reports of violence and corruption, some state and municipal governments are unable to fully ensure the security of their population. (36-38) In response to the insecurity, some communities have formed self-defense militia groups. Reports indicate that one of these militias recruited and trained children as young as 6 years old to protect their community against organized criminal groups. (31-33) The group later agreed to disarm children after reaching an agreement with the Guerrero state government to increase police presence in the area. (39,40)

Child labor in agriculture is more prevalent among boys than girls. Although children engage in agricultural activities throughout the country, the majority of child labor in this sector occurs in the central and southern states of Nayarit, Campeche, Tabasco, and Colima. (8) Children’s work in agriculture often includes long working hours, use of sharp tools, handling pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (41,42) A 2016 study by UNICEF found that 44 percent of migrant agricultural worker households had at least one child engaged in child labor. (17,43,44)

Children from indigenous populations are more likely to work than non-indigenous children. (17,45-47) According to the National Committee on Human Rights, indigenous populations are especially vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking due to low educational levels, linguistic barriers, and discrimination, especially in the agricultural sector. (26,48-50) Indigenous children are also less likely to attend school due to the lack of schools near their homes, and the lack of educational materials and instruction in native languages. (45,47,51) In addition, some children ages 15 to 17 living in agricultural export-producing communities may be vulnerable to involvement in organized crime as they may not be able to find legal work. (52-55)

In 2019, Mexico hosted over 115,000 migrant children, mostly from the Northern Triangle countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras, who are fleeing violence and poverty. Approximately 40,500 of these children were unaccompanied minors. (56-59) Migrant children, especially those travelling by themselves, are more vulnerable to trafficking in persons, forced recruitment by organized criminal groups, and other worst forms of child labor. (2,60-62) The National Institute of Migration (INM) is responsible for enforcing the rights of migrant children and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance (COMAR) is tasked with refugee assistance. However, due to an increase in the number of migrants, including unaccompanied children, both INM and COMAR may have decreased funding to carry out their mandates. (59,63-77) In addition, many migrant children do not have access to education. Although Mexican law states that unaccompanied migrant children must be placed in child protection centers while waiting to be repatriated, many times they remain in detention centers without access to education. (58,60,63-65,77-79)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Mexican Senate ratified the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) on June 19, 2019, and the subsequent Protocol of Amendment on December 12. The USMCA includes a labor chapter that brings labor obligations into the core of the agreement and makes them fully enforceable. (87-90) Under this chapter, Mexico commits to adopt and maintain in its statutes, regulations, and practices to effectively abolish child labor and prohibit the worst forms of child labor. The USMCA labor chapter also requires each country to prohibit the importation of goods into its territory from other sources produced in whole or in part by forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory child labor. (87,90)

Complimentary to the USMCA, in May 2019, Mexico also enacted historic labor reforms to strengthen worker rights, including regulating domestic work and requiring employers to develop and implement protocols to combat child labor and forced labor. (91-93) The government also revised the National Forfeiture Law, which enables the government to seize individual and company assets acquired illicitly, including through trafficking in persons. (93-95)

In 2019, the government revised the General Law on Education to strengthen educational access for indigenous, Afro-descendant, and migrant children, as well as children of migrant agricultural workers. The revised law requires educational authorities to provide learning materials in indigenous languages, develop programs to support indigenous and Afro-descendant children, and to improve education infrastructure in marginalized communities. (82) In addition, the revised law extended the period of time that children are required to attend school from pre-kindergarten through high school, which is usually completed by age 18. (82) As the minimum age for work at 15 years is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS)	Leads efforts to enforce child labor laws, conduct labor inspections, and refer cases for investigation. The Federal Prosecutor for the Defense of Work (PROFEDET), an independent entity under STPS, prosecutes cases in which workers' rights are violated, including cases with workers under age 18. (52,96-101) The federal-level STPS inspectorate is responsible for labor law enforcement in 22 industrial sectors, three types of enterprises, and labor matters affecting two or more states. The state-level STPS inspectorates are responsible for labor law enforcement in all other situations. (52,80,102) During the reporting period, the STPS underwent a restructuring to streamline operations, resulting in the establishment of the Unit on Dignified Work (UTD) to conduct labor inspections, including child labor inspections. In 2020, STPS will collaborate with USDOL on two projects to strengthen their capacity to enforce labor laws and train Mexican workers and unions on labor standards and identifying labor violations. (103-107)
Attorney General of the Republic (FGR)	Prosecutes crimes involving human trafficking, including criminal violations related to child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The Attorney General of the Republic's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO) are responsible for investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases at the federal level. (2,101,108-111) In addition, 30 of the 31 states and the Federal District have specialized Trafficking in Persons (TIP) prosecutors or units which are responsible for investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking at the state level. Some state TIP units or prosecutors also prosecute cases of gender-based violence. (35,55,112,113) Federal and state TIP units receive some cases of child trafficking from the National Institute of Migration (INM) and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance. (63-68,77)
Conciliation and Arbitration Boards	Tripartite boards, which mediate and adjudicate labor disputes according to federal and state labor laws, including processing cases in which children between the ages of 15 and 18 request permission to work. Beginning in 2020, these boards will slowly be phased out and replaced by federal and state-level Labor Tribunals and Conciliation Centers. (52,80,91,114-116)
Secretariat of Health's National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF)	Provides social assistance to child victims, including shelter and legal services. Employs representatives at the national, state, and municipal levels. (81,101,117) At the federal and state levels, also employs special prosecutors to carry out legal action against crimes related to children and adolescent rights, including violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (81,101,117) During school holidays, some state-level SNDIF ministries also conduct operations to monitor for child labor in the informal sector. (118-130)
National Commission for Human Rights (CNDH)	Independent ombudsman body. Receives complaints and conducts investigations on human rights violations, including cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (131)

Beginning in 2019, the Government of Mexico carried out a structural change known as the “Fourth Transformation,” which is designed to combat corruption and alleviate poverty. (132,133) Under this structural change, approximately 21,000 technical experts departed their positions due to significant budget cuts across many government agencies and programs. This situation left many secretariats and agencies without the appropriate personnel, expertise, and leadership to carry out core government functions, including establishing and implementing policies and programs related to the worst forms of child labor and enforcing related laws. (134-136)

Although the STPS inspectorates at the federal and state levels are responsible for carrying out child labor and occupational safety and health inspections in formally registered businesses, only state-level labor inspectorates have authority to conduct general labor conditions inspections in all commercial entities. (96,97,103) However, some Mexican states lack state-level labor inspectors. (55) In addition, while some state-level inspectorates can conduct unrestricted labor inspections in the informal sector, the federal-level and some state-level labor inspectorates can only conduct inspections in the informal sector in response to a complaint. As informal sector employment accounts for 57 percent of employment in Mexico, restrictions on conducting inspections in this sector leaves working children more vulnerable to labor law violations and crimes related to the worst forms of child labor. (10,93,96,98,103,137,138)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the STPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human and financial resource allocation.

† Data are from January 1, 2018 to October 31, 2018.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mexico’s workforce, which includes approximately 54 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Mexico would employ roughly 3,634 labor inspectors. (101,145-147) Although the government planned to hire and train 500 additional labor inspectors in 2019, restructuring of the STPS and austerity measures resulted in a reduction in the number of federal labor inspectors by almost 50 percent. (96,98,148)

The STPS initiates routine and targeted inspections based on analysis of compliance data and patterns of complaints. Unannounced inspections for child labor violations are only conducted in response to complaints and must be coordinated with representatives from the National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF) and the local Office of the Attorney General (FGR). (97,103,144) The STPS reported carrying out inspections due to complaints of child labor in 2019, but the total number of complaints received or complaint-based inspections carried out is not known, as the STPS does not have an internal system to track cases of child labor violations. (101,103,144) Moreover, concerns remain with Mexico’s lack of enforcement of laws governing the minimum age for employment in rural areas or at small and medium enterprises, particularly in the agricultural sector. (92,149,150) Although inspections were carried out by STPS at the federal level, research could not verify that all state-level STPS also conducted child labor inspections or sanctioned establishments in violation of the Labor Code. (118-122,124-126,151) It is also unclear whether the STPS at the federal and state levels apply the guidelines on identifying and sanctioning child labor violations as outlined in the “Labor Inspection Protocol to Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers”. (97,101) The STPS and state-level labor ministries share enforcement authority of child labor laws, and are authorized to establish agreements for coordination of inspection duties. However, due to limited information sharing between federal and state-level inspectorates, some establishments may not be inspected for labor law violations. (96,144,152)

Even though federal labor inspectors have the authority to assess penalties for most labor infractions, child labor and forced labor infractions are considered criminal offenses. In such cases, inspectors are required to file a citation with the STPS’s Directorate of Judicial Affairs to initiate sanctioning procedures with the state-level finance ministries or the FGR, who are then responsible for collecting fines or initiating criminal sanctions. (96,103,144)

Although children between the ages of 15 and 17 are required to obtain work permits, only the state of Jalisco reported issuing 1,917 permits in 2019. (118) Information on the issuance of work permits in other states was not provided for inclusion in this report.

In 2019, the STPS established a new reporting system, “CumpliLab,” to build a database of formally registered businesses and identify those in compliance with the Labor Code, including provisions related to child labor. (144,153) Registered businesses deemed to be in compliance will be exempt from labor inspections for one year and granted export certificates for their goods. (103,144,154)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (35)	Yes (93,155)

The total number of investigations launched, prosecutions initiated, and convictions made related to the worst forms of child labor at the federal level is not known due to weak coordination and data sharing among government ministries. Research identified that inconsistent data collection and the lack of coordination amongst government ministries may hinder adequate criminal prosecution of employers and impact government efforts to provide victim services. (55,93) During the reporting period, Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) collaborated with the governments of Colombia, Peru, the United States, and Venezuela in human trafficking investigations that resulted in at least four convictions. Federal authorities also launched 133 investigations, and FEVIMTRA reported assisting 21 minors during the year. (55,93,141) In addition, specialized Trafficking in Persons (TIP) units at the state level launched at least 545 trafficking in persons investigations and identified 658 victims during the reporting period. However, in both instances, it is unknown whether any of the victims were children. (55,93,113,141) The Federal District and the states of Chihuahua and Mexico were responsible for over half of the investigations conducted in 2019. Nevertheless, 14 other states opened fewer than five trafficking cases each. (113) Successful investigation and prosecution of human trafficking crimes varies by state, with the State of Mexico securing convictions in the highest percentage of cases. In 2019, the specialized prosecutor in the State of Mexico investigated and successfully prosecuted at least 12 cases of child trafficking for purposes of forced begging, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced domestic work. (35,93,113)

In 2019, FEVIMTRA provided refresher courses for 1,019 government officials, mainly law enforcement officials, on trafficking in persons investigations. Additionally, UNODC conducted workshops on trafficking in persons issues at the request of several state governments for government officials and NGOs. (93) Despite this, reports indicate that the lack of training for criminal law enforcement officers on how to perform judicial and police investigative functions, as well as confusion over territorial jurisdictions, has hampered the ability of criminal law enforcement officers to adequately investigate and prosecute cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (2,93) In addition, the insufficient capacity of judges and prosecutors to identify and investigate criminal cases related to human trafficking meant that many traffickers were prosecuted for more minor offenses or were acquitted. (2)

The National Trafficking in Persons Hotline, managed by the Citizens' Council for Safety and Justice of Mexico City, received 3,526 calls and referred 575 cases of human trafficking to FEVIMTRA, Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO), and state-level TIP prosecutors during the reporting period. (55,155) In 2019, FEVIMTRA and UEITMPO also assisted at least 617 victims of trafficking, of which 21 percent were children between the ages of 13 and 17. However, the total number of children referred and assisted in both cases is unknown. (93,141) As approximately 49 percent of FEVIMTRA's $14,000 operating budget was used to provide shelter and other resources to trafficking victims as part of the investigation process, limited financial resources were available for investigations, training, and outreach. (141)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-ministerial Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescents Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico (CITI)	Coordinates Mexico's activities to develop policies, approve programs, and coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts to combat child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by STPS and includes representatives from the Secretariats of the Interior, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Wellbeing, Agriculture, Transportation, Education, Health, Tourism, Social Security, SNDIF, and FGR. (46,98) Meets on a quarterly basis and includes NGO networks, international technical and financial partners, such as UNODC and IOM, and bilateral partners, including the United States. In 2019, met on a regular basis to draft the new Plan of Action on Child Labor 2019–2024. (98,144,156)
Inter-ministerial Commission for the Prevention and Punishment of Human Trafficking Crimes	Coordinates efforts to address human trafficking in Mexico. Chaired by the Secretariat of the Interior and includes representatives from STPS, secretariats of numerous other government ministries, NGOs, and international technical and bilateral partners. (157,158) In 2019, developed and delivered trainings to government officials to prevent and combat trafficking in persons, with a focus on victim-centric approaches. (93)
National System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (SIPINNA)	Guides national child protection policy and programs and coordinates child protection activities. Chaired by the Secretariat of the Interior and made up of a steering committee from multiple other ministries and representatives of civil society groups. (159) In 2019, carried out awareness-raising activities on children's rights, including prohibitions related to child labor; drafted a program to remove children from illicit activities, and established a Commission for the Protection of Refugee and Migrant Children and Adolescents. (156,160-162) Research also identified many state-level SIPINNAs that carried out awareness-raising activities against child labor. (119,120,122-124,127,128,130)
State Committees for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and for the Protection of Young Persons (CITI Estatales)	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate activities related to the elimination of child labor through the 32 state and Federal District committees. These committees also compile, analyze, and report their activities to the federal CITI. (46,98) Although some state committees met on a regular basis during the reporting period, sources reported that the majority of state committees are either inactive or do not meet regularly. (55,101,120,122,123,144,156,163,164)
Commission for the Protection of Refugee and Migrant Children and Adolescents*	Coordinates, develops, monitors, and evaluates strategies and programs to protect the rights of migrant and refugee children. Chaired by SIPINNA. (165-167) In 2019, developed a roadmap to protect migrant and refugee children and in collaboration with UNICEF, developed a protocol to address the needs of unaccompanied migrant children, including the provision of education, social services, and legal assistance. (63,64,168-170)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Both government officials and civil society sources have stated that Mexico's federal budget allocates only 1 cent per child or $267,000 to the CITI to implement programs and activities to prevent and combat child labor. Sources have reported this amount is insufficient to address the extent of the problem. (55,171-173)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (PRONAPINNA) (2020–2024)†	Promotes the rights of children and adolescents by increasing access to basic health and education and combating poverty and violence. (174)
National Development Plan (PND) (2019–2024)†	Aims to combat corruption, increase economic development, and promote social equality through environmental sustainability and access to quality education and health care services. During the reporting period, established Jovenes Constuyendo el Futuro and Sembrando Vida social programs. (175)
National Strategy for Inclusive Education (ENEI) (2019–2024)†	Supports inclusive education for vulnerable children, including migrant and indigenous children. (176,177)
Migrant Repatriation and Counter-Trafficking in Persons Accord Between Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua	Reinforces border security measures and repatriates victims of human trafficking, including unaccompanied children and young persons. (69,178,179) In 2019, 122 Infant Protection Agents from the National Migration Institute (INM) received training to assist unaccompanied migrant children. INM authorities also rescued and referred 423 child victims of trafficking to criminal law enforcement and social services agencies. (65,180)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government drafted the Plan of Action on Child Labor 2019–2024, National Plan on Human Rights 2019–2024, and the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons 2020–2024. However, these plans were not approved by the end of the reporting period. (101,141,181,182) In addition, although the government has established a National Development Plan, many government ministries have not developed, published, or implemented ministry-specific plans as required by the National Planning Law, including plans with components to prevent and eliminate child labor. (183-185)

In 2019, Mexico became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030, and the eradication of child labor by 2025. (186,187) The Government of Mexico created an action plan, which includes the goals of improving information generation on child and forced labor, strengthening coordination between the CITI and the Inter-ministerial Commission for the Prevention and Punishment of Human Trafficking Crimes, and establishing preventative actions to combat child and forced labor in supply chains. (188)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors and in all states.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program for Inclusive and Equitable Education (PIEE)†	Nationwide Secretariat of Public Education program that offers primary, secondary, and high school-level education adapted for the unique needs of children of migrant farm workers. Formerly known as PRONIM, PIEE's national database tracks the educational progress of migrants to ensure they conclude their studies. (189) In 2019, PIEE had a budget of $11 million, which included funds to provide basic primary education to children of migrant agricultural workers and strengthen educational services in indigenous communities and for vulnerable populations. (190,191)
Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program†	Secretariat of Public Education cash transfer program that offers two types of scholarships for families living in poverty and students at risk of school desertion. The Wellbeing Basic Education Family Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 per household for all children under age 15 enrolled in school, while the Benito Juárez Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 to each child enrolled in high school. (192-194) In 2019, assisted 10 million students, including 300,000 students of indigenous descent, Afro-descendant, or living in a marginalized community. (195,196) Although the program reaches a high number of students, it has been criticized for providing an insufficient cash transfer, lacking monitoring and evaluation, and having implementation issues. (197-202)
Support for Indigenous Education Program (PAEI)†	Implemented by the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples (INPI) to support educational access of children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities through scholarships, boarding houses, and nutritional support. In 2019, assisted 73,886 children through the program's Casas y Comedores de la Niñez Indígena and Casas y Comedores Comunitarios del Estudiante Indígena . (203)

Program	Description
Assistance for At-Risk Minors and Adolescents Program (PAMAR)†	Implemented by SNDIF at the state and municipal levels to assist youth at risk for child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, by providing shelters, psychosocial assistance, and training. Research found the program was active during the reporting period in a few states and municipalities, but it is not implemented across all states and municipalities where the program is needed. (204-207)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects that aim to eliminate child labor through research, increased labor inspection capacity, and expanded participation in education, training, and social protection programs. These projects include Campos de Esperanza , a $10.5 million project implemented by World Vision in targeted agricultural communities in Oaxaca and Veracruz; and MAPI6, an ILO-implemented global project, with $2.4 million dedicated to support the Mexican National Child Labor Survey (ENTI), which was carried out in 2019 with results to be released in 2020. (13,208,209) Additional projects include Senderos* , an $8 million project implemented by Verité to combat child and forced labor in agricultural communities in Jalisco and Nayarit; EQUAL*, a $5 million project implemented by World Vision to increase women's and adolescent girls' economic empowerment in the agricultural sector; and COFFEE*, a $2 million project implemented by Verité in Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico to develop tools for businesses to establish systems to prevent, detect, and combat child and forced labor in coffee supply chains. (210-212) For additional information, please visit our website.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mexico.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (213-217)

During the reporting period, 47 anti-poverty programs were canceled, including the Prospera conditional cash transfer program, which required regular school attendance for families to receive the cash transfer, and the Program to Assist Migrant Agricultural Workers (PAJA), which had components to improve educational access for families of migrant workers. Both of these programs assisted vulnerable populations with children at risk of engaging in child labor. (55,218-221) However, new social programs were launched using a direct cash transfer model, including the Benito Juarez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program, which requires only that children enroll in school for families to receive the benefit. Sources have criticized the elimination of Prospera, though agree that more time is needed to evaluate the impact of the new scholarship program. (10,55,93,197,201,202,218)

In 2019, the government opened two migrant shelters operated by STPS and funded by the Ministry of Wellbeing—one in Baja California and one in Chihuahua. These shelters are intended to operate as “integration centers,” assisting foreign migrants in obtaining employment and providing social services, including educational access, for migrants and their children. (222)

In addition, many programs to prevent child labor, particularly in the agricultural sector, have been implemented as a result of improved private sector diligence rather than due to government efforts. (55)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mexico (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2019
Enforcement	Ensure the STPS at the federal and state levels conduct targeted and unannounced labor inspections in all sectors, including in the informal sector and in rural areas.	2019
	Publish information at the federal and state level on the number of child labor penalties imposed and collected, the number of inspections at worksites and unannounced inspections conducted, the number of criminal labor violations found, and disaggregate the number of prosecutions initiated and number of convictions secured by the number of cases involving children.	2019
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Establish a case tracking system to ensure that violations of child labor laws are recorded and victims of child labor are referred to the appropriate services.	2019
	Train federal and state-level labor inspectors on the Labor Inspection Protocol to Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers and ensure its guidelines related to identifying and sanctioning child labor violations are followed.	2019
	Improve coordination and information sharing between federal and state-level labor inspectorates.	2019
	Increase coordination among government ministries to ensure adequate criminal prosecutions of perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Increase training for enforcement officials, prosecutors, and judges to ensure adequate criminal law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies investigate and prosecute violations related to the worst forms of child labor, including cases of trafficking in persons.	2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies receive sufficient funding to conduct investigations and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Coordination	Ensure coordination mechanisms to combat child labor are adequately funded.	2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all the worst forms of child labor.	2019
	Ensure relevant government ministries develop, publish, and implement ministry-specific plans with components to prevent and eliminate child labor.	2019
Social Programs	Remove children from organized criminal groups and ensure they are provided with adequate social services.	2019
	Expand access to education by increasing school infrastructure, providing education materials and instruction in native languages, and ensure all children are able to attend school, including those in migrant or indigenous communities.	2019
	Ensure unaccompanied migrant children are placed in child protection centers instead of detention centers and receive access to education.	2019
	Ensure that the Benito Juárez Wellbeing Scholarship Program provides sufficient assistance to vulnerable students and receives regular monitoring and evaluation to ensure effective implementation.	2019
	Implement or expand social protection programs throughout the country for victims of child labor in all relevant sectors, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities.	2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Moldova made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established the National Council on Human Rights to monitor and assess efforts to comply with national and international obligations to combat child labor, and established an annex specifically for child victims of trafficking within state-run shelters. In addition, the Anti-Trafficking Bureau's mandate was expanded to include investigations of all forms of online child sexual exploitation. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Moldova is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a regression in law and practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In August 2018, the government amended Law No. 131 through Law No. 179, such that unannounced inspections, even those based on a complaint or at the request of law enforcement or other state bodies, are permitted only on the basis of a risk assessment that indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. This stringent measure severely limited the State Labor Inspectorate's ability to conduct unannounced inspections. In addition, announced inspections are only permitted after the State Labor Inspectorate first requests and receives insufficient documentation from the business being inspected or after conducting a risk assessment that finds reasonable indicators of a possible violation. Moreover, when an inspection is conducted in response to a complaint, the labor inspector must only focus on the alleged violation outlined in the complaint; if other violations, such as child labor, are uncovered, they cannot be addressed. Children in Moldova engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Moldova lacks a sufficient number of labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce. Furthermore, training is needed for new criminal investigators. In addition, entities responsible for conducting occupational, safety, and health inspections, including of hazardous child labor, lacked adequate capacity to do so during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Moldova engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (I-3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Moldova.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Agriculture,† including growing and harvesting crops, picking fruits, and raising farm animals (2,6-11)
	Forestry, including transporting heavy loads (2)
	Fishing, including feeding fish (2,6)
Industry	Construction,† including carrying heavy loads and welding† (2,6,7,12)
	Working in the garment sector (2,6)
	Baking,† including confectionary and food preservation (2,6)
Services	Street work, including begging (1,2,13-15)
	Domestic work (6,15)
	Working in wholesale, retail, restaurants, and transportation (2,6,8,11,15,17)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,6,15,18-20)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work that children perform and the sectors in which they work, including for the secessionist region of Transnistria, which is not under the control of Moldovan authorities. (2,6,15)

Both boys and girls, as young as age 10, are recruited by traffickers for prostitution and other forms of commercial sexual exploitation. (1,3,6,13,20) Child online sexual exploitation, including the production and distribution of child pornography, has increased in recent years. (2) Moldova is also a destination for child sex tourism. (1,3,8)

Child trafficking, particularly of children suffering from familial neglect, continues to be a concern in Moldova and Transnistria. (1,9,15,18,21,22) The number of children left behind by migrant parents is increasing in both areas. These children are particularly vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking, especially those in orphanages or boarding schools. (2,15,20,21) Vulnerable children from Transnistria are at an increased risk of being trafficked through Ukraine’s Odessa region. (20,23,24) Victims from the Turkic-speaking autonomous territorial region of Gagauzia in Moldova were also likely to be trafficked to Turkey for commercial sexual exploitation. (20)

Although the Education Code provides for free and compulsory education until age 18, sometimes parents are asked to pay informal fees for supplies and gifts to teachers. (7,14,25) Occasional discrimination against Roma students by some school officials and other non-Roma students may create barriers to accessing education. Roma children are particularly vulnerable to school dropout. (2,15,26,27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Moldova has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Moldova's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 44 of the Constitution; Article 168(b) of the Criminal Code; Article 7 of the Labour Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour (28,29,31,32)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2 and 25–29 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour (29,33)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 175, 206, and 208 of the Criminal Code; Article 6 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour; Law No. 207 (29,32,34,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 208 of the Criminal Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour (29,32)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of Law No. 162-XVI on the Status of Military Servicemembers (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 28 of Law No. 1245-XV on the Preparation of Citizens for Homeland Defense (37)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 26 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 206(d) of the Criminal Code (32,34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Articles 13 and 152 of the Education Code of 2014 (38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 9 of the Education Code of 2014 (31,38)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (28,38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection's State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Enforces child labor laws through inspections of labor relations of enterprises, institutions, and organizations, regardless of their type or legal form. (2,39) Manages the National Referral System to Protect and Assist Victims and Potential Victims of Trafficking in Human Beings (NRS), which has been implemented in all of Moldova's regions; each regional coordinator works directly with law enforcement, NGOs, and schools, and leads victim rehabilitation efforts. (15,18) Through the NRS, builds the capacity of multidisciplinary teams at the local level, which includes community social assistants, police officers, and NGO workers to improve victim identification and referral for crisis intervention and rehabilitation. (40) Through the National Coordination Unit and Child Labor Monitoring Unit (CLMU), coordinates activities related to the protection of victims and those vulnerable to human trafficking. (24)
Sectoral Regulating Agencies	Enforce occupational health and safety (OSH) laws, including those related to hazardous child labor, in specific sectors designated by law. Conduct OSH inspections of enterprises operating in respective sectors of responsibility. (2) Ten entities have sectoral OSH enforcement mandates: the National Food Safety Agency; the Consumer Protection and Market Surveillance Agency; the National Public Health Agency; the Environmental Protection Inspectorate; the National Road Transport Agency; the Civil Aeronautics Authority; the Naval agency; the National Energy Regulation Agency; the National Electronic Communication and Informational Technology Regulation Agency; and the Technical Supervision Agency. (2)
Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons within the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Leads criminal investigations and arrests perpetrators, including for the trafficking of children for both labor and sexual exploitation. (2) Subdivision of MOIA with criminal investigators. (6,7) Cooperates with the Border Police Inspectorate, National Anti-Corruption Center, and Customs Service. (2) Operates a 24/7 trafficking in persons hotline. (20)
Specialized Prosecution Office for Organized Crime and Special Cases (PCCOCS) and Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Monitors and analyzes human trafficking cases in the Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the PGO. (1) Includes an investigative and prosecution unit within the national-level PCCOCS. (13) In 2019, nine special judges were nominated to work on human trafficking cases. (1) A specialized unit within the Anti-Trafficking Bureau focuses on child pornography, and expanded its mandate in 2019 to include investigations of all forms of online child sexual exploitation. (2)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation. (6,15)

During the reporting period, laws and practices introduced as part of government restructuring in 2017 and 2018 continued to limit the power of the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection's State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) to enforce child labor laws. The SLI lacks authority to investigate workplace accidents and enforce penalties for occupational, safety, and health (OSH) violations, including of hazardous working conditions for children. (41,42) Ten sectoral regulating agencies have mandates to enforce OSH laws, including through discretionary inspections in specific areas outlined in amendments to Law No. 131. However, sources indicate that lack of training and capacity may limit these agencies' ability to adequately enforce OSH laws, including those related to hazardous child labor. (2,41,42) Laws No. 179 and No. 131 mandate that SLI inspections begin with a desk review, and permit site visits only if the subject of an inspection provides insufficient documentation or if a risk-assessment procedure finds reasonable indicators of a possible violation. (2,41-45) In 2019, these strict measures continued to limit the number of on-site inspections, especially unannounced inspections, that the SLI was empowered to conduct. (2,41,43,44) Site visits, including those conducted in response to complaints, must be announced 5 days in advance unless a risk assessment indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. This restriction also applies to OSH inspections conducted by sectoral regulating agencies. (41,45,46) While the SLI is able to receive complaints, procedures to submit a complaint can be cumbersome, and complaints cannot be anonymous. (2,47) Furthermore, if an inspection is conducted in response to a complaint, the labor inspector can focus only on the alleged violation outlined in the complaint, even if other violations, such as child labor, are observed. (42)

In addition, the responsibilities of the Child Labor Monitoring Unit (CLMU) within the SLI structure have not been clearly defined, and CLMU's role under Law No. 131 is limited to requesting a report of child labor from other agencies when child labor is found. (24) Sources report that this has affected the SLI's capability to detect child labor. (48)

The Transnistrian region is not under the control of Moldovan authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (27,49)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of unannounced inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

† Data are from January 1, 2018 to November 30, 2018.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2019 to October 30, 2019.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Moldova's workforce, which includes over 1.295 million workers. (51) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Moldova would employ about 65 labor inspectors. (51,52) The SLI has reported that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to adequately conduct child labor inspections. (2) In addition, amendments made to Decree 788 in 2018 limit the total number of personnel the SLI can hire to 28 staff members serving on the main office staff, and 45 labor inspectors serving in 10 regionally-focused subdivisions. (2, 39, 49, 54)

In 2019, the SLI identified child labor violations in the construction, entertainment, transportation, and agriculture sectors involving a total of 21 children. (46) Inspectors identified a total of three children who were working under hazardous conditions, two of whom worked in construction and one of whom worked in agriculture. (46) The SLI prescribed penalties for six child labor violations, which under Moldovan law must be reviewed by the courts before fines are issued and collected. Courts issued fines in three of these cases, and the other three cases remain pending. (2,46,55) Both government and NGO sources reported that the child labor violations identified by the government during the reporting period did not reflect the magnitude of the child labor problem in Moldova due to an insufficient number of labor inspectors, budget limitations, cultural acceptance of child labor on family farms, and legal limitations on the government's ability to conduct inspections. (2,24,48,53,54)

The ten sectoral agencies with labor enforcement mandates conducted a total of 1,116 OSH inspections in 2019, the majority of which were conducted by the National Food Safety Agency, which oversees the agriculture and food processing industries; the National Agency for Road Transportation, which oversees the transportation industry; and the Technical Supervision Agency, which oversees the construction industry. A total of 9,925 labor law violations were identified in the course of these OSH inspections. (46) However, information on the number of these violations related to child labor, if any, was unavailable for inclusion in this report.

During the reporting period, SLI inspectors received training on forced child labor as part of a workshop organized by the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection in partnership with the OSCE. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for new criminal investigators.

† Data are from January 2018 to November 2018.

‡ Data are from January 2019 to October 2019.

In 2019, the Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP) identified 109 children as victims of human trafficking, 59 of whom were exploited for labor in artistic performances and two of whom were exploited for labor in agriculture. Within the first 10 months of 2019, 12 child victims of trafficking were referred for assistance through the National Referral System for the Protection and Assistance of Victims and Potential Victims of Human Trafficking. (2)

Of the 30 cases in which prosecution was initiated for child trafficking during the reporting period, 22 involved sexual exploitation; two involved labor exploitation; two involved forced begging; two involved multiple forms of exploitation; and in two cases the form of exploitation was unknown. (2,20) Seven cases involving commercial sexual exploitation of children that were pending before the courts resulted in a conviction; two cases resulted in acquittal; and five cases are still pending. (2,20) Two of the seven cases that resulted in conviction were related to commercial sexual exploitation of children perpetrated in late 2017 and early 2018. During the first 10 months of 2019, 16 convicted individuals received criminal penalties for violations related to child labor, while three were acquitted. (2)

During the reporting period, law enforcement officials and prosecutors in CCTIP received more than 10 trainings related to detecting and combating human trafficking, and providing rehabilitation services to victims. (2)

Authorities may lack adequate training to identify potential child trafficking victims. Legislation providing special interview services for child victims of human trafficking is also not uniformly applied, which can result in re-traumatization of victims. (1)

Online recruitment, solicitation of sexually explicit content, and online threats are inconsistently handled. Investigators sometimes treat these crimes as child trafficking offenses, and sometimes as sexual harassment, which is considered a less serious crime. (15) In addition, law enforcement failed to use special investigation measures to investigate child pornography, which investigators fail to treat as a serious crime. (15)

Sources have reported that CCTIP's newly hired staff lack knowledge on human trafficking and how information and communications technology is used to facilitate human trafficking crimes. There are also reports that CCTIP "disjoins" cases to artificially inflate its enforcement stats. (1,20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination efforts of the National Council for the Protection of Child Rights.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Human Rights*	Monitors and assesses the implementation of the Human Rights National Action Plan (2018–2022), which includes activities dedicated to protecting child rights and combating exploitation of children, including in child labor. (2,56,57) Monitors, evaluates, and coordinates efforts to comply with other national policies related to human rights and human rights treaties to which Moldova is a State Party, including those related to child labor. (56)
National Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons (NCCTIP)	Coordinates efforts to prevent and combat child trafficking and child sexual exploitation. Members include the SLI, Security and Intelligence Service, Agency for Public Services, and other government departments. (6,7,15,23) Drafts legislation related to human trafficking, participates in anti-trafficking campaigns, and develops national action plans. (18) Met once in 2019 to discuss progress and challenges in combating human trafficking, including in the areas of investigation, prosecution, and protection of victims of trafficking. (2)
National Council for the Protection of Child Rights	Coordinates national efforts to combat child exploitation and improve access to education. (7) Includes the Deputy Minister of Health, Labor, and Social Protection, and representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Education, Interior, Foreign Affairs and European Integration, and others. (58) Has a working group to discuss existing gaps in the current birth registration process and develop recommendations. (58,59) This body did not meet in 2019. (2)
Human Rights Ombudsman	Monitors and publishes annual reports on observance of human rights, including the rights of children. Through the Office of the Ombudsman for Children's Rights, receives and responds to complaints about children's rights violations, including child labor. (60) In 2019, responded to 194 complaints, including three related to child labor. (61)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2019, the government abolished the National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Protection Strategy (2014–2020)	Includes the goals of preventing and combating violence, neglect, and the exploitation of children. (62,63) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Protection Strategy during the reporting period.
Action Plan for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (2018–2020)	Outlines how law enforcement agencies should work to combat human trafficking, provides support to victims of human trafficking, and aims to create standards for the operation of victim witness rooms for children, among other tasks. (1,64) Carried out by the Permanent Secretariat Directorate of NCCTIP. (1) Includes an accompanying National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings 2018–2023. (1,64) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Action Plan for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings during the reporting period.
Moldova Strategy Country Note Program Priorities (2018–2022)	Focuses on the realization of all children's rights, including education and health, especially for children from ethnic minorities, children from low-income families, children with disabilities, and children left behind because of migration. (65) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Moldova-EU Association Agenda (2017–2019)	Protected and promoted children's rights. (66,67) In 2019, as part of this policy, the government drafted changes to a number of laws on child rights concerning child adoption, return of child to place of residence, and custody of children whose parents have gone abroad. (2) The Government of Moldova and the Council of the EU also began talks to establish an updated Association Agenda to guide government action in coming years. (68)
Action Plan to Support the Roma People (2016–2020)	Aims to promote social inclusion of Roma people. Includes the goals of education, social protection, and combating discrimination. (69,70) Funded by the government, private partnerships, and the EU. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Action Plan to Support the Roma People during the reporting period.

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,57)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2016–2020)	ILO program that aims to gather statistics on the prevalence of child labor; build the capacity of the labor inspectorate, and combat labor exploitation in the construction and agriculture sectors. (71)
Shelters for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Government-funded shelters for victims of trafficking from Moldova that offer accommodations, rehabilitation, and reintegration services. (2) In 2019, a new annex specifically for child victims was established, and 18 children received services at these shelters. (20)
Child Helpline	Provides psychological counseling and information to parents and children experiencing violence, neglect, or exploitation. (2) In 2019, the helpline received over 5,000 calls. In addition, during the reporting period operation of this helpline was transferred from the NGO La Strada to another NGO, the National Center for Training, Assistance, Counselling and Education in Moldova. (2,20)
Hotlines‡	One human trafficking hotline is managed by the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection and refers cases within the NRS. (1,2) The PGO manages the Anti-Trafficking Green Line Telephone for specialist prosecutors. (2) In addition, the NGO La Strada manages the national hotline for women and children, which received 2,139 calls in 2019. (2)
Social Aid Program and Social Support for Families with Children†	Provides cash assistance to families. The Social Aid Program, implemented by the district departments of social assistance and family protection, has provided aid for low-income families since 2008; this program continued to operate in 2019. (2,15,72) The Social Support Service for Families with Children program has operated since 2013. The government allocated $2.14 million for families in 2019. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of Moldova.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,2,20)

Existing social programs do not meet the current level of need, particularly for children working in agriculture and child victims of human trafficking who require long-term care. (1,2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Moldova (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that entities responsible for conducting occupational, safety, and health inspections have the training and capacity to carry out these inspections in all sectors in which child labor is known to occur so that child labor violations are accurately detected.	2018 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspection system by eliminating barriers for on-site inspections and conducting unannounced inspections.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors are empowered to identify and assess penalties for child labor violations detected during inspections, even if the inspection was not conducted in response to a child labor complaint.	2019
	Clearly define the responsibilities of the Child Labor Monitoring Unit and ensure that it is fully empowered to coordinate the State Labor Inspectorate's efforts to detect and respond to child labor violations.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors and funding for the State Labor Inspectorate to ensure that it provides inspectors with the financial resources necessary to inspect for child labor.	2012 – 2019
	Reduce procedural requirements for filing child labor complaints and permit such complaints to be made anonymously.	2019
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations detected during occupational safety and health inspections conducted by sectoral regulating agencies.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that investigators, including police officers and Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons investigators, receive training on laws and investigative techniques related to the worst forms of child labor, especially for online child pornography and children left behind without parental care.	2016 – 2019
	Improve the collection of data on criminal law enforcement efforts by curtailing the practice of disjoining child trafficking cases.	2019
Coordination	Ensure that the National Council for the Protection of Child Rights meets and carries out their mandate.	2019
Government Policies	Publish information about activities undertaken to implement policies related to child labor, including the Child Protection Strategy, the Action Plan for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings, the Moldova Strategy Country Note Program Priorities, and the Action Plan to Support the Roma People.	2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including for the separatist region of Transnistria.	2013 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education by removing informal fees for school supplies.	2018 – 2019
	Institute targeted support programs that eliminate discrimination and violence against Roma children and promote equal access to education.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure sufficient support for child trafficking victims and children working in agriculture.	2015 – 2019

In 2019, Mongolia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed a resolution partially addressing the use of children as horse jockeys by banning horse racing and training during the months of November to May. Furthermore, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, in coordination with the International Labor Organization, drafted a revised Labor Law in that would allow unannounced labor inspections. The government also expanded the Children’s Money Program to cover all children in Mongolia, whereas it had previously only covered approximately 60 percent of Mongolian children. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Mongolia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued a regression in law that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. During the reporting period, the government did not permit the labor inspectorate to conduct unannounced inspections, which may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. Children in Mongolia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining and horse jockeying. Mongolia continues to have a number of legal statutes that do not meet international standards, including that the minimum age for work does not apply to children in the informal sector or to those who are self-employed. In addition, laws do not establish criminal penalties for forced labor or slavery, the use of children in prostitution, or the use, procurement, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mongolia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining and horse jockeying. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Mongolia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

According to Mongolia’s National Child Labor Survey, children’s employment is more prevalent in rural areas than in urban areas. (2,15,21) Furthermore, 9 out of 10 children exploited in situations of hazardous work are boys. (2,3,15)

Mongolian children are generally trafficked internally for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in saunas, bars, hotels, karaoke clubs, and massage parlors. (3,4,10,18,22) Children also work as horse jockeys and face a number of health and safety hazards, including exposure to extremely cold temperatures, risk of brain and bone injuries, and fatal falls. (1,4-7,10,16,23-25) Although Mongolian law prohibits participation in pre-training and horse racing during November 1–May 1, children continue to participate in these activities throughout the year. (15,25,26) In 2019, the General Authority for Specialized Inspections (GASI) indicated that 10,325 children were registered to compete in horse races during the year, but noted that horse races organized in three provinces failed to meet legal safety requirements. (5) In addition to safety concerns, participation in horse racing may impact school attendance, particularly since Mongolian law does not set an age limit for jockeys except during the Naadam festival in July, where children as young as seven years old are allowed to participate. (15,16,24-26)

As the mining industry continues to grow in the southern part of Mongolia, children, particularly girls, are at increased risk of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in artisanal mining. Girls are vulnerable to exploitation in nightclubs near mining towns, solicitation by drivers waiting to cross the border into China, or becoming victims of sex trafficking while their parents are on extended shift rotations. (4,15)

During the reporting period, GASI conducted three major child labor surveys in conjunction with other governmental agencies. These surveys examined the prevalence of child labor in PC gaming centers, restaurants, bars, hotels, massage parlors, sauna services, and horse racing events. (4,5,22,27)

Children in Ulaanbaatar and in rural areas may face challenges in accessing education due to an insufficient number of schools, overcrowding, a lack of trained teachers, and accessibility for children with disabilities. (5,15,25,28) Families must register their residence as well as provide an original copy of a child’s birth certificate for their children to have access to a free public education. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mongolia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mongolia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 109 of the Law on Labor (29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 141 of the Law on Labor; List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors (29,30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2–3 of the List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors; Article 8 of the Law on the National Naadam Holiday (30,26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 16.4 and 16.10 of the Criminal Code; Article 7 of the Law on Labor; Article 7 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (29,31-33)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 13.1 of the Criminal Code (31,33,34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 12.3, 13.1, and 16.8–16.9 of the Criminal Code; Articles 8.1.3 and 10.2 of the Combating Pornography and Prostitution Act (31,33,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Articles 16.1–16.4 and 16.8–16.10 of the Criminal Code (31,33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of the Law on Military (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 12 of the Law on Military (36)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 46 of the Law on Education (37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Constitution of Mongolia; Articles 6.1–6.3 of the Law on Education (38,39)

The Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, in coordination with the ILO, drafted a revised Labor Law in 2019 that would allow GASL to execute unannounced inspections. Deliberation on this draft amendment will likely occur in spring 2020. (5,15,22)

Furthermore, in 2019, several ministries updated their regulations to prohibit child labor in their respective industries. (5) The Ministry of Food, Agriculture, and Light Industry now requires contracts between a local governor's office and companies working in the food, agriculture, and light industry sectors to include a provision to exclude the use of child labor. The Ministry of Mining and Heavy Industry specifically prohibited children under age 18 from entering mining sites as stated in the government resolution on "Regulation of Artisanal Mining." (40,41) Lastly, the Ministry of Construction and Urban Development will only issue licenses to construction companies that have signed a contract affirming that they will not use child labor. (40)

Mongolia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Mongolia’s legal framework does not meet several international standards to protect children. (31,33,34) The laws do not specifically criminalize forced labor other than forced begging and forced hazardous work. (29,31-33,35) Also, the Labor Code, which sets a minimum age of 16 to “enter into an employment agreement” does not apply to children in the informal sector or to those who are self-employed, including children who work as horse-racing jockeys in May through October. (27,40) On January 31, 2019, the government passed Government Resolution No. 57 (“Actions to be taken regarding Horse Racings”), banning all horse racing and related training between November 1 to May 1, regardless of the age of the participants. (5,7,15,42,43) Nevertheless, at other times of the year, young children are permitted to compete in horse races as jockeys. (5,6,42) Due to efforts made by the Government of Mongolia, the number of officially registered races dropped from 491 in 2018 to 172 in 2019, but the legal framework for the minimal age of work is not sufficient. (5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of unannounced inspections conducted at the national level in Mongolia may impede the enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
General Agency for Specialized Inspection	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. Conducts inspections at registered businesses. (42) As an independent agency, reports to the Deputy Prime Minister. (19) This agency was active during the reporting period. (5)
Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency (FCYDA)	Implements and promotes government policies, legislation, and projects for children; supports child development and social participation; prevents children from becoming victims of violence; and provides social services. (44) Maintains a nationwide database for tracking case status and social services needs of vulnerable children; accessible from local and central offices. (10,5) Maintains a nationwide, toll-free Child Helpline, “108,” that captures child labor and child rights violations, and is staffed by 22 employees, a social worker, and a response team available 24 hours a day. (3,10,5,45,46) Runs a temporary (24 to 168 hours) shelter for children and can provide a maximum of 6 months of shelter service, depending on the severity of the case. (3,5,10,22) Reports to the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection. During the reporting period, the Child Helpline “108” received a total of 141,193 calls, with 73,366 calls involving children’s rights and protection issues, of which 5,890 were referred to provincial and district FCYDA offices, associated multidisciplinary teams, and social workers for risk assessment. (5,15)
National Police Agency	Maintains primary responsibility for investigating criminal cases. (44,22) Provides protection to victims and witnesses throughout the judicial process. Reports to the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs. (44) There are several divisions and departments under its authority that work to enforce laws on child labor. The Metropolitan Police Department oversees police operations in Ulaanbaatar’s nine district police offices, enforces labor laws, and identifies children in hazardous labor. (19) The Crime Prevention Division works to protect unattended children on the streets, identifying and returning children to their parents or referring them to Child Care and Protection Centers. (44) The Juvenile Crime Prevention Unit protects children from being victims of crime and prevents them from committing crimes. (10,47) The Organized Crime Division, located under the Criminal Police Department, receives referrals, and opens formal criminal investigations into human trafficking and sexual exploitation cases, while working with the Prosecutor’s Office to decide whether to take a case to court. Oversees the Anti-Trafficking Unit. (19,22,48) Uses an 11-question risk assessment checklist to help accurately identify human trafficking victims and refers them to short- or long-term care facilities. (3-5,10,22) During the reporting period, conducted 66 anti-trafficking in persons trainings in which 16,343 schoolchildren, students, teachers, and parents participated. (5,15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections at the national level in Mongolia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

In 2019, the Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency continued to employ 32 child rights officers who oversaw child protection issues, including child labor. (5,10) During the reporting period, 38 additional child rights officers were trained, but they have not yet been accredited. (5) NGO and government officials reported that the enforcement of child labor laws remained challenging due to the legal requirement that GASI must give employers 48 hours advance notification before conducting an inspection, which provides employers with enough time to conceal violations. (3,4,10,22,25) In addition, GASI's overall strategy is to conduct pre-announced inspections in the formal sector only, leaving children working in the informal sector more susceptible to child labor. (4,5,25)

Two to three times each year, the government conducts internal trainings for labor inspectors, but the government and NGOs noted that training opportunities remained insufficient. (5,10)

The government only conducts child labor inspections at horse racing events between June and October, during the months that children are legally allowed to participate in races. During these inspections, the government verifies that riders meet minimum age requirements, use safety equipment, and obtain required insurance. (5,10,25) GASI does not have the authority to impose penalties for child labor violations found in connection with horse racing. (5)

While child rights officers have the ability to impose sanctions for certain labor law violations under the Child Protection Law, including child labor violations related to horse racing, the law suggests that they may only be allowed to do so if the child actually suffers harm. (49,50) In addition, liability for violations relating to horse racing appears to extend only to stakeholders and organizers of races, and may not cover parents or other family members who utilize children as jockeys. Given the lack of clarity in the language of the Child Protection Law, many violators are able to evade punishment. (49,50)

During the reporting period, the government and NGOs noted that funding and resources for inspectors were insufficient, as was the total number of inspectors. (4,5,10,51) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mongolia's workforce, which includes about 1.2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Mongolia would employ about 80 labor inspectors, which would require the hiring of 14 additional inspectors to meet this threshold. (52,53)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecuting criminals under articles of the criminal code that carry lighter penalties.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (5)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (10)	16 (54)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (5,15)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (42)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (44)	Yes (54)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (5)

Despite receiving ongoing training, research indicated that there were insufficient training opportunities for criminal law enforcement officers, and law enforcement agencies received insufficient funding. (5,22)

Reports indicate that among some police officers and government officials, there is a lack of understanding of the use of male children in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (4,15) As a result, many cases involving boys are not prosecuted under the human trafficking article of the Criminal Code, which carries harsher penalties, but are instead prosecuted under other offenses that carry lighter penalties. (4,15,55)

During the reporting period, research found no evidence that the government continued to fine, arrest, detain, or charge child trafficking victims as a result of having been subjected to human trafficking. (5)

During the reporting period, the government distributed 50,000 informational passport inserts at its border with Russia and China to raise awareness on human trafficking issues and provide information regarding resources for potential victims. Recipients included 992 children who were travelling abroad. (22,42)

In 2019, the NGO Gender Equality Center operated a hotline in Mongolian for human trafficking victims with funding from the government. During the reporting period, one potential human trafficking victim was identified. (22)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Children	Serves as overall coordinating body for nationwide child protection efforts. Implements the National Program on Child Development and Protection (2017–2021). (5,10) Headed by the Prime Minister with the Minister of Labor and Social Protection as Deputy Head. (5) During the reporting period, met to discuss the activities report and plans for member agencies. (5,42)
Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking and monitors implementation of anti-trafficking legislation. Functions as part of the Council on Crime Prevention under the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs. (51) Has 23 members representing 20 different organizations, including 3 NGOs and 1 international organization. (42) Body was active during the reporting period. (5,15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program on Child Development and Protection (2017–2021)	Incorporates the National Program for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and National Action Plan. (3) Coordinates child labor and child protection issues through the ministries of Labor and Social Protection; Education, Culture, Science and Sports; and Health. (3) In an effort to advance the National Program on Child Development and Protection, FCYDA accredited 41 NGOs to assist in providing child protection services. (10) In 2019, received a budget allocation of $2.9 million. (5)
National Program on Combating Trafficking in Persons (2017–2021)	Designated lead for anti-trafficking efforts. Provides technical and professional guidance on the prevention of trafficking. (22) Implemented by the TIP-Sub Council. (22) Aims to strengthen efforts to prevent and combat different types of human trafficking, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and to improve protective services for victims. (3,4,18) During the reporting period, the government allocated $195,769 to implement this policy. (15,22) Met three times in 2019. (22)
State Policy on Herders (2016–2020)	Describes the acceptable minimum conditions and criteria for employing children in herding. (56) Activities include projects to improve housing and access to information for herders, and ensure that children engaged in herding receive an education. Each year, the government allocates 1 percent of its budget to implement the policy. (57) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (15)
Three-Pillar Development Policy (2018–2020)	Calls for improvements in education, health, social welfare, and labor policies through 2020. Priorities include the education, safety, and health of vulnerable children. (58) Policy was implemented during the reporting period. (15)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Children's Money Program†	Program operated by the General Agency for Social Welfare and Service, General Agency for State Registration, and Human Development Fund program that distributes a monthly stipend of approximately $8 per month to vulnerable children under age 18 that aims to prevent child labor by offsetting costs related to food, school, and clothing. (3,59) In 2019, the program expanded to cover all children in Mongolia, whereas it had previously only covered approximately 60 percent of Mongolian children. (5,15)
School Lunch Program†	Government-mandated program that subsidizes meals to encourage low-income children to attend school, particularly at the primary level. (42) Program was active during the reporting period. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mongolia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (19)

During the reporting period, the Government of Mongolia, led by the National Police Agency, and UNICEF created, co-funded, and implemented the “Unfriend Campaign,” a 1-year program designed to monitor, raise awareness of, investigate, intervene, and prevent instances of possible online recruitment of youth into commercial exploitation, including sex trafficking and forced labor. (60) Through these efforts, the government shutdown dozens of social media pages attempting to lure children into false employment opportunities abroad, and referred several cases for criminal investigation. (60)

NGOs continued to report that the $8 monthly funding for children participating in the Children's Money Program is insufficient. (5,10,15,44) In addition, NGOs have been critical of the screening process which had originally prohibited approximately 40 percent of children from participating based on a government-initiated family census on daily necessities. (5,15) Likewise, the IMF has periodically scrutinized the program. (5)

Research found that there is a shortage of long-term stay shelters, and most temporary shelters are not accessible to victims with disabilities. (3,5,10,22) During the reporting period, anecdotal reports from a NGO stated that there were isolated incidences of sexual abuse against commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) victims staying at two government-run, government-funded shelters. (22) One shelter failed to separate CSEC victims from the general shelter population, and another provided inadequate surveillance of the premises, reportedly resulting in an incident of sexual violence perpetrated against two child victims. (22,42)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mongolia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to children in the informal sector and those that are self-employed.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure that all forms of forced labor are criminally prohibited.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws clearly and comprehensively criminalize using children under age 18 for prostitution, and criminalize using, procuring, or offering all children under age 18 for the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the using, procuring, or offering of children under age 18 in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws adequately prohibit children under age 18 from horse racing at all times of the year.	2017 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish disaggregated information on the labor inspectorate funding, the number of child labor violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2015 – 2019
	Strengthen the inspection system by permitting the General Agency for Specialized Inspections to conduct unannounced inspections, including in the informal sector.	2013 – 2019
	Provide sufficient training opportunities for labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement officials, including new laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2019
	Conduct regular labor inspections and ensure that inspectors or other appropriate authorities are able to assess penalties for legal violations related to horse racing, including the participation of children in racing and race training during the prohibited months.	2018 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2014 – 2019
	Publish disaggregated criminal law enforcement data, including the number of investigations and the number of prosecutions initiated.	2017 – 2019
	Provide adequate funding for law enforcement agencies.	2019
	Provide trainings for police officers and government officials to ensure that cases of commercial sexual exploitation involving boy victims are prosecuted under the appropriate law articles.	2011 – 2019
	Social Programs	Increase the number of schools to help eliminate overcrowding, increase the number of trained teachers, and improve accessibility options for children with disabilities.	2019
		Ensure that the Children's Money Program is sufficiently funded to support its participants.	2018 – 2019
Increase the availability of long-term stay shelter homes.		2019
Ensure that all government-run, government-funded shelter homes are accessible to children with disabilities.		2019
Ensure that survivors of commercial sexual exploitation staying in government-run, government-funded shelters are kept separate from the rest of the shelter population and are protected from abuse.		2019

In 2019, Montenegro made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted the new Strategy for Exercising the Rights of the Child in Montenegro, which aims to improve safeguards for children, including protection from violence and commercial sexual exploitation. The government also increased the labor inspectorate’s budget, and convicted and sentenced two individuals for child sex trafficking, while indicting another for the trafficking of four children for labor exploitation. However, children in Montenegro engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government did not publish or make available information on criminal prosecutions initiated during the reporting period. In addition, research found that the scope of programs to address child labor in street work and forced begging is insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Montenegro engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Montenegro.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	19.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2013. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending small goods and begging (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (7-3,6,8)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3)
	Domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9-12)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and harvesting (13,14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Montenegro is a source, destination, and transit country for trafficking of children for forced labor, including forced begging, especially among Roma children. (2,7,13) Some Romani girls from Montenegro are sold and forced into domestic servitude in both Montenegro and Kosovo. (2,10,11) Children, especially girls, are victims of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation internally and transnationally within the region. (2,7,15)

Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children experience challenges in obtaining birth registration, which sometimes makes school enrollment difficult, increasing their vulnerability to engage in child labor. (3,7,12,14) The higher rate of unregistered children is mostly due to registration costs, parents’ lack of awareness of the importance of registration, and parents' lack of identification documents. (16,17) In addition, some children with disabilities experience difficulty physically accessing educational facilities and have limited government social services available to them. (12,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Montenegro has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 16 of the Labor Law (18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Labor Law (18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 104 and 106 of the Labor Law; Articles 7–8 of the Regulations on Measures of Protection in the Workplace (18,19)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 444 of the Criminal Code; Articles 28 and 63 of the Constitution (20,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 444–446 of the Criminal Code (21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 209–211 of the Criminal Code (21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 300–301 of the Criminal Code (21)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 47, 188, and 195 of the Declaration of the Law on the Army of Montenegro; Articles 162–163 of the Law on the Armed Forces (22,23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Articles 47, 188, and 195 of the Declaration of the Law on the Army of Montenegro; Articles 162–163 of the Law on the Armed Forces (22,23)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 444 of the Criminal Code (21)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 4 of the Law on Primary Education (24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 75 of the Constitution (20)

* No conscription (22)

The Regulations on Measures of Protection in the Workplace prescribes workplace protections and prohibits specific hazardous activities for children, including workplaces that would expose them to physical, biological, or chemical hazards. (19,25) In 2019, the government, in cooperation with the ILO, formed a working group to create a list of hazardous jobs for children. (3)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate	Leads and monitors the enforcement of labor laws, including those that protect working children and affect working conditions throughout the country. (13,16,25,26) Part of the Inspectorate General. (27)
Ministry of Interior	Houses the Police Directorate and the Office for the Fight Against Trafficking in Humans (OFTIP). The Police Directorate investigates and enforces criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (26) Coordinates law enforcement actions, including identification of victims of human trafficking. (13,26) Prevents and investigates child begging by removing child beggars from the streets through the Beggar Task Force. (7,8) OFTIP coordinates efforts against human trafficking among relevant institutions and international organizations, harmonizes legislation, maintains data on human trafficking, and funds hotlines for victims of human trafficking. (26)
Supreme State Prosecutor	Investigates and enforces criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (3) Collects data on the number of police investigations, convictions, and court rulings, and submits them to OFTIP. (13,26,29)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces the Criminal Code by prosecuting crimes against children, including human trafficking, child begging, and child abuse. (13)
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW)	Protects children and families by providing social, child, and family protection in its Social Welfare Centers. Identifies potential victims of human trafficking and funds programs for victim protection, as well as the shelter for victims of human trafficking. (13,26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSW that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inspection planning.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Labor Inspectorate has 15 offices that proactively plan labor inspections. (3) Below the chief inspector, there are 31 labor inspectors who cover employment relations and 10 inspectors who cover health safety issues at work. (3) All inspectors monitor the enforcement of child labor. (13,26,30) The government maintains a database on children involved in begging, but does not collect or publish data on the worst forms of child labor. (14)

Montenegro

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor inspectors can inspect registered farms and Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) can inspect unregistered farms to detect child labor. (13) If child labor is found by SWCs, social workers cooperate with labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement to ensure that children receive proper support and protection from further exploitation. Labor inspections increase during the summer months (May 15 to September 3), particularly in the tourism sector throughout the coastal region. (3)

Children found during labor inspections can be sent to SWCs and accommodated in a government-financed, NGO-run shelter for human trafficking victims. (13,26,30) During the reporting period, there were no cases of children being removed during inspections. (3)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors received trainings, which included discussion of forced child labor, from the Ministry of Interior's Office for the Fight Against Trafficking in Humans (OFTIP) and MLSW. (3) The Labor Inspectorate reported that funding was sufficient in 2019. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019

An eight-member police unit within the Police Directorate investigates human trafficking and illegal migration throughout the country. (14) Two individuals were convicted in 2019 under Article 444 of the Criminal Code for human trafficking of an underage victim. They received 15-year and 17-year prison sentences. (3) In addition, the Supreme State Prosecutor indicted one individual for trafficking four children for the purpose of labor exploitation. The government did not provide information on the number of prosecutions initiated for inclusion in this report. (3) Police investigate children working on the street, and those who are found begging or requiring social assistance can be accommodated in a public institution, called a Ljubović, for up to 30 days while parents are located. During the reporting period, 20 boys and 9 girls were accommodated in the Ljubović system. (3,13,25,31) The institution provides accommodation, protection, education, and therapy for children found living on the streets. When parents are not available, children are referred to local SWCs for longer-term shelter and resources. (3,13)

During the reporting period, the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Office) organized law enforcement training sessions entitled "Strengthening multilateral cooperation in early identification of TIP victims," which was attended by 35 representatives from the police and labor inspectorates, communal police teams, the employment office, and the Center for Foreigners' Affairs. (3) In addition, the Ministry of Interior and the TIP Office organized another training entitled "Victims' protection in criminal cases of human trafficking and human smuggling," which was attended by 23 representatives of police forces and prosecutors. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Office)	Coordinates efforts, projects, and legislation against trafficking in persons and the worst forms of child labor among relevant government institutions and international organizations. (13,26) Collects and maintains data on investigations and court rulings. (3) Operates Trafficking in Persons working group to monitor and promote activities related to combating human trafficking, and assesses the progress of objectives established in action plans. Includes representatives of seven government ministries (in addition to the Police Directorate, Supreme Court, Supreme State Prosecutors, and Inspectorate Authority), two NGOs, and multiple international organizations. (3,26) During the reporting period, the TIP Office conducted multiple trainings on early identification of potential victims of trafficking and the role of local governments in strengthening public awareness of trafficking in persons. (32)
Council for the Rights of the Child	Implements and monitors the government's commitments pursuant to the UN CRC, and initiates adoption of legislation to promote and protect the rights of children. Chaired by MLSW and has 12 other members, including 4 NGO members. (3) Met once in 2019. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Combating Human Trafficking (2019–2024)	Outlines objectives for combating human trafficking by raising public awareness, strengthening the capacity for victim identification and service provision, improving inter-agency coordination, and raising the efficiency of prosecutions. (33-36) The strategy and yearly action plan are evaluated and adopted through reports prepared with government and civil society collaboration. (33) In 2019, the government continued to implement the annual action plan with the aim of increasing prosecutions and improving victim identification. (32)
Strategy for Exercising the Rights of the Child in Montenegro (2019–2023)†	Seeks to enhance the ability of children to exercise their rights by improving the application of laws related to children; supporting vulnerable children, including those with disabilities; and improving protections for violence against children, including from child trafficking, child prostitution, child pornography, and involvement in armed conflicts. A working group will produce an annual report detailing the steps it has taken toward achieving the plan's goals. (37)
Strategy for the Development of the Social and Child Protection System (2018–2022)	Builds an integrated social and child protection system, including monthly social assistance, health care, and a child allowance that is contingent upon school attendance. (1,38) During the reporting period, the government continued to implement the Strategy under the Action Plan for 2019. (3,32)
Strategy for the Social Inclusion of Roma and Egyptians (2016–2020)	Aims to create social inclusion of Roma and Egyptians by increasing school attendance and birth registration while preventing child begging and human trafficking. Implemented by the Ministry for Minority and Human Rights. (39,40) During the reporting period, the strategy was implemented throughout the country via continued public awareness campaigns for the Roma community about trafficking in persons. (32)
Strategy for Prevention and Protection of Children from Violence (2017–2021)	Strengthens the national framework in preventing violence against children, including improving legislation and the judicial system. (13,41) Includes providing care and services for child victims or those at risk of violence. Aims to improve protections for children in the country by 2021. (41) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Strategy for Prevention and Protection of Children from Violence. (38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Montenegro

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2016–2021)	Addresses access to social services for children, synchronizes the legal framework with EU and UN standards, implements and monitors policies relevant to children, and applies the principles of the UN CRC. (10,14,29) In 2019, UNICEF and MLSW released the Strategy for Exercising the Rights of the Child in Montenegro 2019–2023. (37)
Development of Standard Operating Procedures for the Treatment of Children Deprived of Parents or Unaccompanied	Implemented by the Ministry of Interior's OFTIP and UNICEF. (8) Goals include standardizing procedures among all relevant institutions for dealing with unaccompanied children and children separated from parents, and ensuring compliance with both international and national laws for children. (48) Includes procedures on identifying, accommodating, and integrating these children. (48) During the reporting period, OFTIP began to develop SOPs for trafficking in persons cases, including cases involving minors. (49)
Hotline for Victims of Human Trafficking†	SOS Hotline funded by OFTIP and run by the NGO Montenegrin Women's Lobby. Provides advice, connects victims with service providers, and raises public awareness. (33) In 2019, the government reported that there was one investigation initiated because of calls received by the hotline. (32)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	Multi-year project with support from USDOL, implemented by the ILO. Aims to create an improved knowledge base on child labor. Specific goals of the program include: improving application of knowledge in support of efforts to eliminate child labor; strengthening the policy-making process; improving the capacity of the government, national authorities, employers, workers' organizations, and other relevant entities to combat child labor; and strengthening partnerships to accelerate progress in combating child labor. Additional information may be found on the USDOL's website. (47)

† Program is funded by the Government of Montenegro.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,50,51)

The Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking was non-operational during the reporting period due to lack of licensure; however, in December 2019, MLSW selected a new NGO partner to operate the shelter beginning in 2020. (3,32) The provision of shelter services to individuals with disabilities who are victims of human trafficking is limited. (7)

Although the Government of Montenegro has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially for street work and forced begging.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Montenegro (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Consistently track and publish information about children involved in the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2019
	Publish information regarding the number of prosecutions initiated related to child labor.	2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into national policies for all children, including in the Strategy for Prevention and Protection of Children from Violence.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Build the capacity of schools and other services and programs to accommodate and provide services to children with disabilities.	2015 – 2019
	Increase funding for human trafficking shelters, including for individuals with disabilities who are victims of human trafficking.	2018 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially in street work and forced begging.	2018 – 2019
	Make additional efforts to register children from the Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma communities.	2019

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Montserrat and in 2019 the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. In addition, the law does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Montserrat. (1,2) Table I provides one key indicator on children's education in Montserrat. Data on other key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are constitutionally not part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (5) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended in Montserrat. (5) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (5) No key international conventions concerning child labor have been accepted by Montserrat (Table 2).

The Government of Montserrat has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Montserrat's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

* No conscription (10)

Children under age 18 may not be employed at night or in occupations designated as hazardous. (6) The Minister of Labor for Montserrat is responsible for deciding what constitutes hazardous work, but Montserrat has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (1,6) In addition, the law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (1,10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor. However, in Montserrat, the UK government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of labor laws (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Prohibits employment of children, pursuant to the Labor Code of 2012, under the Labor Commissioner. (11,12)
Royal Montserrat Police Service	Enforces laws involving child labor laws. (11)
Department of Social Services	Employs social workers to work on child protection issues. (11)

When a report is made involving a child victim of any form of abuse, the Department of Social Services conducts an initial social inquiry to attempt to verify the allegation and then works with police to coordinate a response. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

A total of 23 labor inspections were conducted in Montserrat during the reporting period, although none were specific to child labor. (1) Within the Montserrat Department of Labor, the Labor Officer and Labor Inspector are government employees responsible for conducting labor inspections in accordance with the Labor Code. Labor inspectors have no authority to assess penalties for child labor violations and unannounced inspections are not permitted. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Montserrat (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate can assess penalties for child labor and that unannounced inspections are permitted.	2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2019

In 2019, Morocco made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted Law 51.17, which requires the government to enact compulsory education for children between the ages of 4 and 16 by 2025, and significantly increased the number of prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor, from 5 cases in 2018 to 170 cases in 2019. However, children in Morocco engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work. Children also engage in child labor in producing artisanal handicrafts. Laws related to the minimum age for work and the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards, and labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties. In addition, research could not determine whether penalties were imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, the scope of government programs that target child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Morocco engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and producing artisanal handicrafts. (1-6) Government statistics from 2017 showed 30,545 children ages 7 to 15 working; however, the government has not yet made the full data set available, including microdata, leaving the nature and causes of children's involvement in specific forms of child labor unknown. (7,8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Morocco.

Morocco

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Morocco is a source, destination, and transit country for children subjected to forced labor and sex trafficking. (19,16)

According to local union observations, rural Moroccan girls, some as young as age 6, are recruited for domestic work in private urban homes. Girls from Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Nigeria, and Senegal are brought to Morocco for this same purpose. (15) Some of these girls are subjected to physical and verbal abuse, excessive working hours without regular periods of rest or days off, and no access to educational opportunities. (15)

Children face barriers to accessing education, including distance to schools, inadequate transportation, prohibitive costs associated with attending school, and the lack of safety and inclusiveness to accommodate students of diverse backgrounds and abilities. These barriers to education increase their vulnerability to child labor, especially in rural areas. (1,2,18,22,23) Children with disabilities face additional barriers to education, such as inadequate facilities and support. (24,25) Some migrant children, particularly unaccompanied children from sub-Saharan Africa and children from rural areas, face additional barriers to accessing education, such as lack of knowledge of the language of instruction. Furthermore, because birth certificates are required to attend school past the fifth grade, many unregistered children remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (22,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Morocco's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities.

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (32)

The government adopted Law 51.17, which requires the government to enact compulsory education for children between the ages of 4 and 16 by 2025. (23,33)

Despite regulations to inform agencies on implementing the Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers in 2016, there remain enforcement issues, such as the inability of labor inspectors to inspect closed private residences, in which many domestic workers are employed. (22,34) In addition, the law does not provide explicit protections for self-employed children, those who work in the traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with fewer than five employees, or those who work on private farms or in residences. Despite assurances from the Government of Morocco that inspectors could inspect in the case of any established labor relationship, often verified through witnesses in the absence of contracts, there is an absence of explicit legal protections that conform to international standards, which require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (4,14,26,35)

In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not fully cover sectors in which child labor is known to occur, specifically in domestic work or sectors in which work conditions may harm children's health, safety, and morals. (27) Moroccan law does not define using, procuring, or offering children for the production or trafficking of drugs as a separate crime. (34,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Integration (MOLVI) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Vocational Integration	Enforces child labor laws and oversees programs on child labor as the lead agency through its Child Labor Task Force. (2,4,6,22,36) Provides occupational health and safety services, administers social security, and organizes labor inspections and employment services through nationwide satellite offices. (2)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces prohibitions on trafficking in persons, prostitution, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code, through the General Directorate of National Security. (4,6,22)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children and processes cases involving women and children in the court system. (6,22,37)
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family, and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Ensures the continuity of child protection and child labor elimination efforts and expands children's access to education. Implements the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children. (3,4) Supports 142 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence. (36)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation	Coordinates efforts to reduce migrant vulnerability to child labor through its Delegate Ministry in Charge of Moroccans Living Abroad and Migration Affairs. Promotes migrant children's access to public education facilities and other social services and assistance. (2,23,37)
Ministry of National Education, Vocational Training, Higher Education, and Scientific Research	Provides education and job training to children, including former child domestic workers and migrant youth through Office of Vocational Training and Work Promotion centers. (32-35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MOLVI that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

† Data are from January 1, 2019 to September 30, 2019. (23)

The activities most frequently inspected included trade, agriculture, metal, and carpentry. The government has 22 inspectors dedicated to agriculture, 23 engineers and 18 physicians in charge of health and safety labor inspections and 54 dedicated child labor inspectors distributed across the country in various governmental departments. (22,23,36,37) During the first 9 months of 2019, the government conducted 24,383 labor inspections, including 317 focused on child labor. (23) However, the government did not provide all of the information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Research indicates that insufficient resources hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (4,34,38) Although Morocco employs 317 labor inspectors, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Morocco's workforce, which includes more than 12 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Morocco would employ about 800 inspectors. (39,40)

The official procedures involved in processing child labor violations require the participation of several agencies for each case, which places considerable administrative burdens on labor inspectors. Research also indicates that the penalties against companies that employ children in hazardous work, set forth in the Labor Code, are insufficient deterrents because the labor inspectorate cannot assess penalties. (23,38,41)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the publication of criminal law enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Criminal authorities refer victims to appropriate social services through coordination with NGOs and with the government's 54 dedicated child labor points of contact in other government entities. (22,23) The government did not provide information on the number of criminal violations found or penalties.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for Children for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood	Ensures inter-sectoral coordination and monitoring for implementing international conventions on children's issues through a committee of 25 government bodies, chaired by the Head of the Government of Morocco. Establishes strategies and mechanisms to implement national policies and plans for child protection and coordinates the management of efforts at the local and regional levels. (36) Met regularly in 2019. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco (PPIPEM)	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to the exploitation of children and other issues. (2-4,42,43) Stakeholders in PPIPEM confirmed that formal meetings for review and discussion of progress related to the policy were held during the reporting period. (35) On December 18, 2019, MSWFSD launched an integrated territorial child protection systems pilot-program in 8 provinces. These programs - part of the Integrated Public Child Protection Policy - established provincial child protection committees and child protection support centers at the provincial level. (23)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Cohesion Support Fund†	Programs that aim to improve access to education. Includes the MSWFSD-funded Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program that provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria; and support programs to provide education to children with disabilities. In 2019, the Social Cohesion Fund provided assistance to 2,087,000 students from low-income families with 11,344 disabled children receiving additional support from the government. (23)

Program	Description
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAPI6)	USDOL-funded project implemented by ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. In Morocco, $362,500 was allocated for activities to support the enforcement of the 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers, which protects children from hazardous domestic work. (44) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Government-funded Shelters and Centers†	MSWFSD's Entraide Nationale agency manages three key shelter and support centers—Child Protection Units, Social Assistance Centers, and Orientation and Accompaniment Centers for People with Disabilities—to provide services to child victims of all types of violence, street children, migrant children and refugees, and those with disabilities. (23,34,35,37,45,46) Other shelters and service centers include student dormitories and training and integration programs for vulnerable children. (34,35,37,45) Research was unable to determine any additional action taken during the reporting period.
Government-funded Projects‡	Projects that aim to assist vulnerable children. Includes: After-School Program for a Second Chance (E2C), which provides students with after-school educational assistance as part of non-formal education program; Mouwakaba, a MSWFSD-funded project that assists 2,700 at-risk youth in 6 cities with vocational training; and “Cities without Street Children,” which provides assistance to homeless children in Casablanca and Méknès. These projects were active during the reporting period. (23)
Favorable Opportunities to Reinforce Self-Advancement for Today's Youth	$12.77 million USAID-funded project implemented by Search for Common Ground that aimed to increase the social and economic inclusion of at-risk youth ages 10–24 living in the marginalized neighborhoods of Tangier and Tetouan. Additional information is available on the USAID website. (38)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2-4,6,37,38,45)

In 2019, the government continued a regularization campaign to provide legal status and documentation to foreign migrants who are vulnerable to exploitation for child labor. (6) Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including for children engaged in forced domestic work. (2,23,34,37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Morocco (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children age 15 and under are protected by law, including children who are self-employed, work for artisan and handicraft businesses with fewer than five employees, or work on private farms or in residences.	2009 – 2019
	Implement regulations related to the Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers, and ensure that inspectors are allowed to inspect all sectors in which children work.	2017 – 2019
	Prohibit by law all types of hazardous work that may harm children's health, safety, and morals, including domestic work.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws prohibit all children age 15 and under from being used, procured, or offered for the production and trafficking of illicit drugs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure the law provides criminal penalties for forced labor.	2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution.	2019
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the amount of labor inspectorate funding.	2015 – 2019
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2017 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice, and ensure that they have sufficient resources.	2012 – 2019
	Reduce administrative burdens and streamline child labor enforcement procedures among government agencies.	2013 – 2019
	Increase penalties for employers who use children in hazardous work to be an effective deterrent.	2012 – 2019
	Publish information on criminal enforcement efforts, including the number of violations found, and whether penalties were imposed related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Collect and publish information including microdata from the 2017 survey, on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including in agriculture, industry, and services.	2016 – 2019
	Take measures to ensure children's safety in schools; remove barriers to education, especially for children with disabilities or those who do not speak the language of instruction, children from rural areas, and migrant children; and increase birth registration rates.	2013 – 2019
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including in forced domestic work.	2013 – 2019

In 2019, Mozambique made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved an update to new Penal Code, which includes prohibitions on human trafficking, child prostitution, and the use of children in pornography. Numerous trafficking in persons trainings were conducted throughout the country for border police officers, social service providers, judges, and investigators. In addition, Provincial and District National Reference Groups were trained on available referral mechanisms and social protection services for children and victims of human trafficking, and the drafting of the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons was finalized. Nearly 5,000 awareness-raising events were also organized throughout all of Mozambique's 11 provinces on human trafficking, the worst forms of child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. However, children in Mozambique engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco. Although Mozambique made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the established minimum age for work is not in compliance with international labor standards because it does not extend to informal employment. In addition, a coordination mechanism to address child labor is lacking and existing programs are insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in Mozambique.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mozambique engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco. (5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mozambique.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,18)
	Forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, mining, and vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1–4)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, stealing, and assisting poachers in the illegal poaching industry (5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Mozambican children, lured from rural areas with promises of work and educational opportunities, are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in urban areas in Mozambique and South Africa. Research indicates that Mozambican children are also trafficked to South Africa for forced labor in agriculture, street vending, and commercial sexual exploitation. (2,4)

Although primary education is free through grade nine, families must provide school supplies and uniforms. (19) Barriers to education for children include lack of schools, classroom space, and trained teachers. Many students, particularly in rural areas, also face difficulties traveling long distances to get to school. (4,20,21) In addition, physical and sexual abuse is common in schools. Research found that some male teachers coerce female students into sex. (22)

During the reporting period, due to increased insurgent-related violence in the Cabo Delgado Province, and natural disasters impacting Central and Northern parts of the country, thousands of people were displaced and schools destroyed, thus further increasing education access barriers for some children. (19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mozambique has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mozambique’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (30,31)

During the reporting period, the government approved an update to the Penal Code, which includes prohibitions on human trafficking, child prostitution, and the use of children in pornography. The new penal code is scheduled to enter into force in June 2020. (32) In addition, the Attorney General's Office, in collaboration with the Ministry of Justice, Religious, and Constitutional Affairs, began updating the 2008 Trafficking in Persons Law with the aim of bringing it in line with international labor standards through the expansion of the definition of human trafficking, the provision of greater protection of victims, and the creation of a compensation fund for victims, including children. (33)

The Regulations on Domestic Work allow children ages 12 to 15 to conduct domestic work with the permission of their legal guardian. (23) The Labor Law also states that children ages 12 to 15 may work under certain conditions defined by the Council of Ministers. (24) The minimum age of 12 for light work is not in compliance with international standards. (34,35) However, in 2018, the government drafted a revision to the Labor Law, establishing age 15 as the minimum age for work, which would eliminate the current exception that allows children as young as age 12 to work. In 2019, Parliament did not vote on the draft law. (36,37)

The Labor Law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside of formal employment relationships. The Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security, in collaboration with civil society, has reportedly developed new regulations to protect children working in the informal sector; however, the government has not reported on the implementation of these regulations. (24,31,35,38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

(19)
Attorney General's Office	Coordinates the government's efforts against human trafficking and receives cases for prosecution from the National Criminal Investigation Service. (19) In 2019, collaborated with relevant government agencies to assess and coordinate efforts in addressing victims' needs. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including training for labor inspectors.

Although the government did not provide information on its law enforcement efforts, research found that 900 cases of child exploitation, including child labor, were registered during the first 9 months of the reporting period. (40) The government does not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts. (19)

Reports indicate that the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mozambique's workforce, which includes approximately 13 million workers. (19,41) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Mozambique would employ about 325 labor inspectors. (41-43) Insufficient training and limited financial resources may also hamper the labor inspectorate's ability to enforce child labor laws. (19)

Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security officials can refer victims of child labor to either the police or social workers from the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS) for family assessments and potential placement of these children in foster homes. (44)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of published criminal data related to child labor.

Number of Investigations	10 (34)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	7 (34)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (36)	Yes (19)

In 2019, numerous trainings were conducted throughout the country, including the training of border police officers, and other stakeholders involved in assisting human trafficking victims, on the South African border. Judges and investigators in southern Mozambique also received training on trafficking in persons matters, including on human trafficking legal elements, and related crimes. (33)

Reports indicate that in 2019, the government investigated 13 potential trafficking in persons cases, and determined that 8 of these cases involved 22 human trafficking victims. Of the 22 victims, 10 were 18 years or younger. (38) The government prosecuted 2 suspects, and achieved 2 convictions with sentences ranging from 3 to 13 years imprisonment. (38) Research also indicates that, in 2019, police apprehended a suspect for trafficking 22 children between the ages of 8 and 14 in Niassa Province, in the northern region of the country. (45) In addition, police intercepted the trafficking of 20 children into South Africa for labor purposes. (46) Both cases are under investigation. (45,46)

Criminal law enforcement officials work with MGCAS and the National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons to coordinate referrals of children to social service providers. (19) Furthermore, MGCAS has a standard operating procedure for handling victims of domestic abuse, including human trafficking victims. This procedure incorporates an intake form used nationwide by law enforcement officials, including border officials, to collect the necessary data from victims and ensure that they receive professional care and referrals to appropriate services. (34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to combat all forms of human trafficking. Led by the Attorney General's Office. (47) Provincial-level groups coordinate regional efforts to combat human trafficking. (4) In 2019, provincial and district Reference groups received training aimed at improving referral mechanisms and protection services for child victims of human trafficking. Provincial and district Reference groups also conducted nationwide trainings and seminars, including training of national police officers on investigative techniques, and proper identification and referral of trafficking victims. (4,33)
National Commission on Children's Rights	Oversees and reports on children's rights in Mozambique to the African Charter and other international bodies, and performs consultations and deliberations on national action plans and legislation. Led by the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action. (44) Active in 2019. (37)
Ministry of the Interior's Women and Children's Victim Assistance Units	Provides services to children who have been victims of crimes, including human trafficking. Implements a government-funded program that includes 22 victim assistance units, which provide temporary shelter, food, limited counseling, and monitoring of crime following reintegration, and operate countrywide through facilities in more than 215 police stations. (4) Active in 2019. (4)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action	Operates three shelters that provide support and reintegration services for human trafficking victims, including to victims of child trafficking. Active in 2019. (38)

Mozambique

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Research did not find a coordination mechanism dedicated to addressing child labor beyond the scope of human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of implementation of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2017–2022)	Aims to map 70 percent of occurrences of the worst forms of child labor by province and activity by 2019, and to withdraw 20,000 children from the worst forms of child labor and enroll them in the Basic Social Subsidy program. (39) Mandates the coordination of several key government agencies, including the Attorney General's Office and the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action. A multi-sector group comprising representatives from government, civil society, employers, and unions, including the informal sector, was also created through the plan to address child labor issues. (36) In 2019, the government provided training on child labor issues and protection of children's rights to public prosecutors, police, and criminal investigators. (19)
National Action Plan for Children II (2013–2019)	Established four priority areas for government action against child labor: child survival, child development, child participation, and child protection. (48) In 2019, the government continued their focus on the four established priority areas, especially pertaining to recovery efforts related to post-disaster situations. The government also facilitated anti-trafficking training with IOM in IDP camps, and raised awareness among students regarding the dangers of online recruitment. (38)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (49)

Reports indicate that the drafting of National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons was finalized during the reporting period, although the plan has not been officially approved. (33,38) The associated referral mechanism contains a victim intake form, which, despite the plan's lengthy drafting process, has already been in use nationwide for more than 3 years by law enforcement officials to collect data on victims and ensure that they receive appropriate care and referrals to social service providers. (33,34)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Basic Social Subsidy Program†	Government- and donor-funded program that provides financial subsidies to orphaned children living in poor and vulnerable households, as well as child heads of households. Aims to improve secondary school attendance and reach more than 3.3 million direct program participants by 2024. (50,51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Programs for Street Children‡	Government and civil society organizations operate 176 shelters that provide education, occupational training activities, and health and psycho-social care for street children. (52) Active in 2019. (19)
Speak Child-116	NGO-funded program that works with the government to run a hotline to receive complaints of child abuse, including those related to child labor and sexual exploitation. (53) In 2019, 2.7 percent of cases received by the hotline were related to child labor. (38)
Memorandum of Understanding to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (2018–2021)	$1.2 million, 3 year project funded by the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation focusing on education, awareness raising, institutional capacity building, and revision of the government's legal framework. Incorporates training for law enforcement officials. (54–56)
Internet Watch Foundation Website	Internet portal, established by the government, in collaboration with Internet Watch Foundation, that receives anonymous reports on suspected cases of online commercial sexual exploitation of children, including in the production of pornography. (57–59)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mozambique.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (60)

In 2019, the government organized nearly 5,000 awareness-raising events, throughout all 18 provinces, on human trafficking, the worst forms of child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (33)

Although a draft report on the analysis of national child labor data from the Integrated Household Survey was completed in 2017, the government has yet to publish the study's findings. (61) In addition, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children engaged in domestic work, and the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mozambique (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected under the law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the minimum age for light work is in compliance with international labor standards.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish data on labor law enforcement information, including the labor inspectorate's funding, number of labor inspectors, number and type of labor inspections conducted, child labor violations found, and number of child labor penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2019
	Allocate sufficient resources for law enforcement agencies, including by increasing the number of labor inspectors to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2019
	Provide labor inspectors with adequate training and financial resources to ensure their capacity to enforce child labor laws.	2009 – 2019
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, such as the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions secured, and whether penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor were imposed.	2009 – 2019
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2019
Social Programs	Take measures to ensure that all children have access to education by providing supplies, and establishing an adequate number of schools, classroom space, and trained teachers. Take preventative steps to protect children from physical and sexual abuse in schools.	2010 – 2019
	Publish the results of the child labor study and use the findings to inform policies and programs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the Basic Social Subsidy Program is active and fulfills its mandate.	2018 – 2019
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work, and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2019

In 2019, Namibia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government brought into force the Child Care and Protection Act, increasing protections for children from the worst forms of child labor, and began implementing an updated National Agenda for Children, which aims to strengthen enforcement of laws related to child labor. The government also began implementing the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act, which significantly strengthens penalties for trafficking crimes and provides mechanisms to increase the protection of child trafficking victims. In addition, the government increased the number of criminal prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor, developed a national referral mechanism for responding to trafficking cases, and worked with NGOs to provide social and psychological support to child trafficking victims, including rehabilitation into schools. However, children in Namibia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in domestic work and street work. Hazardous work prohibitions for children in the agricultural sector are not comprehensive. In addition, social programs do not address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Namibia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in domestic work and street work. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Namibia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization’s analysis, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on farms, including harvesting millet (5-7)
Services	Domestic work (2,7-12)
	Street work, including begging and selling candies, fruits, handicrafts, and cell phone air time vouchers (1,11,14-16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,5,11,12)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling of drugs (2,11,17)
	Forced labor in agriculture, fishing, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,8,18)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Namibia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

An extended regional drought and economic downturn in Namibia have likely affected children's vulnerability to child labor, including its worst forms. Children from rural areas move to urban centers, such as Windhoek, in pursuit of supplemental income for their families. (2) Sources of income include work in domestic service, organized begging, and vending. (2) Some of these children engage in selling drugs and commercial sexual exploitation. Commercial sexual exploitation most commonly involves girls, and occurs in cities and transit corridors. (2,5,11) Children are also trafficked from within Namibia and from neighboring countries, such as Angola, Zambia, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, for forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,12,19) Children of the San ethnic group are particularly vulnerable to forced labor on farms or in homes. (1,19) The government has not collected and published data on child labor, including its worst forms, to inform policies and social programs. (20)

Both primary and secondary education are free by law; however, long travel distances to schools, particularly in rural and remote locations, may deter some children from attending school and increase their vulnerability to child labor. (20-22) Children orphaned from the HIV/AIDS epidemic and other causes sometimes become heads of households, which requires them to leave school to find work. (20,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Namibia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Namibia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a comprehensive hazardous work list that includes children's work in the agricultural sector.

Free Public Education	Yes		Section 38 of the Promulgation of Education Act (21,22)

* No conscription (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information

Under Namibian Law, children typically are only required to attend school until age 14 as the requirement is to attend school until the completion of 7th grade, which tends to be when children are 14 years old, or latest until children are 16 years old. (21) In 2019, the government put into effect the Child Care and Protection Act, passed in 2015, and published implementation guidelines in the Government Gazette. (20,33) The act establishes a legal framework for the care of children, including protections against the worst forms of child labor. The act also provides guidelines for the mandatory reporting of cases related to child exploitation and placement of children removed from exploitation into protective services and stipulates penalties of up to 10 years of imprisonment for offenses related to the worst forms of child labor. (27) In addition, the government began implementing the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act, passed in 2018. The law aligns with the Palermo Protocol and establishes special provisions for the removal and care of child trafficking victims. (12,19,29,34)

Although there are hazardous work prohibitions for children, they do not extend to hazardous work in the agricultural sector, which may involve using dangerous equipment and tools, working long hours, handling heavy loads, and being exposed to hazardous agents or substances. Also, the Minister of Labor may make regulations to permit children ages 14-17 to engage in activities on the current hazardous work list. (24,35-37) Since 2011, the government has been developing an updated list of hazardous work activities, but has not yet adopted it. (36,38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates allegations of violations, including forced labor, and cases involving human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Works with the Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS), the Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare (MGECW), the Namibia Central Intelligence Service, and the Ministry of Education (MOE) on child labor matters. (39) Refers children removed from child labor during inspections to MGECW for placement in social services. (40)
Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS)	Enforces criminal laws through the Namibian Police. Coordinates with the labor inspectorate of MLIREC to investigate criminal labor violations, including child labor. (39-42) Through the Namibian Police Force's Gender-Based Violence Protection Units (GBVPU), collaborates with MGECW on cases involving human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (39)
Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare (MGECW)	Collaborates with GBVPU on cases involving human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (39) Removes children from child labor situations during inspections, and transfers them to a regional GBVPU to receive assistance from MGECW social workers. (40)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLIREC that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

MLIREC conducted planned annual inspections in all regions of Namibia, including in the agricultural, domestic service, fishing, retail, and services sectors. (20,44) An inadequate number of labor inspectors, however, likely hinders the inspectorate's ability to enforce laws, particularly in remote and rural areas of the country. (2) In 2019, the number of labor inspectors was reduced from 61 to 51, probably resulting from a government-imposed hiring freeze. (20,45) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Namibia's workforce, which includes approximately 956,800 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Namibia would employ about 64 inspectors. (46,47) MLIREC reported that insufficient financial resources also limited other areas of labor law enforcement, including staff trainings. (20)

The MLIREC operates a 24-hour SMS line for labor complaints, including child labor. The SMS line received four text messages during the reporting period, although none of the complaints related to child labor. (12,48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Safety and Security and the Namibian Police Force that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training of criminal law enforcement investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (39)	Yes (20)

The government does not maintain centralized statistics for regional magistrate court cases, which limits information on criminal law enforcement efforts in response to the worst forms of child labor. (20)

The Namibian Police Force operates a toll-free hotline for reporting crimes, including child trafficking. An NGO operates another hotline for victims of gender-based violence and child exploitation to access information about available resources and refer cases to relevant government social services providers. (49) Research indicates the Namibian Police Force’s toll-free hotline did not receive any complaints related to the worst forms of child labor. (19)

During the reporting period, the Namibian Police Force developed a new trafficking in persons training manual for police officers. The new manual provides guidance to improve police responses to trafficking in persons cases and treatment of victims, including child witnesses. (50,51)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts to combat child labor. Comprises officials from MLIREC, MOE, MGECW, MSS, and the Office of the Ombudsman. (39,52) Met quarterly in 2019. (20)
Permanent Task Force for Children	Implements and coordinates services for children at the national level. Includes key ministries, NGOs, development partners, and bilateral agencies. (39) Met on a quarterly basis in 2019 to implement the National Agenda for Children. (20)
Child Care and Protection Forums	Addresses child protection issues and coordinates services in the country at the regional and district levels. Raises community awareness of the signs of child mistreatment and available services. (53) Participants include 14 regional councils, MGECW social workers, police, teachers, government agencies, NGOs, community leaders, churches, and other local-level stakeholders. Met several times during the reporting period. (20)
Trafficking in Persons National Coordinating Body	Coordinates and monitors government and non-government responses to trafficking in persons in Namibia. (19) Led by MGECW, with participation from MLIREC, MSS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Home Affairs and Immigration, and the Prosecutor General and Attorney General. (12) The committee met three times in 2019, resulting in the creation of a new National Referral Mechanism and standard operating procedures. (12) In April 2019, MGECW and the Trafficking in Persons National Coordinating Body, with support from IOM, launched the National Referral Mechanism to direct first-line response teams on the identification, protection, referral, and safe return of victims of trafficking. The National Referral mechanism is part of an initiative to strengthen stakeholder coordination in response to trafficking in persons. (12,50) Also, led a national awareness campaign focusing on trafficking of youth and children, which included billboards, posters, television ads, and a campaign song by a local artist. (12)
Gender-Based Violence Protection Units (GBVPU)	Provide victim protection services to children rescued from the worst forms of child labor through 15 units that arrange lodging and medical and psychosocial care for victims. (20) Consist of personnel from MLIREC, the Ministry of Home Affairs and Immigration, the Namibian Police Force, MGECW, and MOE. (39) In 2019, GBVPU were active on an ongoing basis. (20)

MLIREC-led joint child labor inspection teams, which coordinate child labor inspections and referrals between ministries involved in child welfare, have not been in effect since the end of 2017. (43) Although there are 15 Gender-Based Violence Protection Units in Namibia, research finds considerable variation in the operational performance of these units; only the Windhoek-based unit is operating at full capacity, and several other units are not able to function according to their intended mandates. (2,20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Agenda for Children (2018–2022)†	The primary strategy for child welfare issues. Focuses on strengthening the protection of children in need of care, including enforcement of laws protecting children from child labor. (54) Outlines procedural instructions for each ministry and stakeholder for cases of child mistreatment. (39,41,55) The National Agenda for Children was drafted in 2018, with significant input from UNICEF; the government and the Permanent Task Force for Children approved and began working to implement the policy in 2019. (20,55)
Decent Work Country Program (2018–2022)	Outlines strategies to promote decent work in Namibia, including the elimination of child labor, through employment promotion, enhanced social protection, and social dialogue and collaboration. (19,56) The program was renewed in August 2018 with a memorandum of understanding among employers, ILO, the Government of Namibia, and employees (through two unions—the National Union of Namibian Workers and the Trade Union Congress of Namibia). (19,57) The memorandum of understanding includes specific actions targeting child labor, including a child labor survey. (39,41,57) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period. (20)
National Development Plan V (2017/2018–2021/2022)	Includes goals for addressing child trafficking and protection concerns. (39,58) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement National Development Plan V during the reporting period. (20)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19,43,59-61)

The 2017–2022 Strategic Plan of the Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare does not integrate child labor elimination strategies. (62) The Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare developed a National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence, covering the period 2019–2023, to coordinate national efforts against gender-based violence, including rape and sexual abuse, physical domestic abuse, and trafficking. The plan includes strategies to address child trafficking; however, it does not incorporate other worst forms of child labor, such as physical abuse occurring in the course of domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation. (61) Evidence indicates that some children working in domestic service are subjected to physical abuse by their employers. (9,59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Protection Grants†	MGEWCW-funded grants to support vulnerable children and households. (64) Include child maintenance grants, place of safety allowances, and foster care grants. Child maintenance grants provide monthly stipends to single-parent families and are contingent upon school enrollment of all school-aged children; place of safety and foster care grants provide support for people and places that provide temporary care for children. (65-67) MGEWCW provided grants to families during the reporting period. (64)
Combating Human Trafficking Initiative (2016–2019)	USDOS-funded, 3 year project implemented by IOM, in collaboration with the Government of Namibia, to combat trafficking in persons. (19,68,69) In 2019, the government and the IOM launched a National Referral Mechanism for Trafficking in Persons. (12,50)
Namibian School Feeding Program†	Government program that provides mid-morning meals to school children in all 14 regions. (39,57) In 2019, the program served 377,521 learners, an increase from 333,000 in 2018. (20)

Program	Description
National Youth Service†	Government program that offers training in civic education, national voluntary service, and job skills to unemployed youth, some of whom have never attended school. (53) In 2019, the government allocated $2.4 million for the program, a slight decrease from the $2.5 million allotted in 2018. (20)
Shelters and Victim Services†	Government and NGO shelters provide safe accommodation, meals, clothing, toiletries, psychosocial support, legal assistance, medical services, and access to education. (19) Registered residential child care facilities provide services for children experiencing mistreatment and neglect. The government provides subsidies, either per child or as a percentage of operating expenses, for private shelter facilities. (12,55) Shelters and victims services received government support and provided services during the reporting period. (20,55)

† Program is funded by the Government of Namibia.

During the reporting period, the government partnered with a local NGO to provide protective services to Namibian and foreign victims of trafficking, which included psychological and social support, legal assistance, medical care, proper documentation for foreign victims, and educational access to child victims. (1)

Although the government has 15 designated residential care facilities for children, few of these shelters are able to provide services. The only fully operational government shelter is located in Windhoek, so children who live in rural areas must go to the capital to receive services. (2) Although the government provided assistance and services to vulnerable children and some victims of child labor, research found no evidence of programs specifically addressing the children working in agriculture or domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Namibia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure the hazardous work list is comprehensive and gives special consideration to the activities included in ILO R. 190.	2014 – 2019
Enforcement	Increase personnel and resources for the labor inspectorate to ensure adequate enforcement of labor laws, including in remote areas.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2019
	Ensure that training is provided to criminal law enforcement investigators on new laws related to child labor, including training for new investigators and refresher trainings.	2018 – 2019
	Establish a mechanism to compile and publish comprehensive statistics related to labor/criminal law enforcement, including convictions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019
Coordination	Reactivate joint child labor inspection teams to strengthen coordination between ministries that respond to cases of child labor.	2019
	Ensure that all Gender-Based Violence Protection Units are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure implementation of all key policies, such as the Decent Work Country Program.	2016 – 2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into key national policies, including the Strategic Plan of the Ministry of Gender Equality and Child Welfare and the National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence.	2019
Social Programs	Conduct research on the prevalence of child labor to inform the development of policies and social programs.	2013 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by expanding social support to orphaned children and taking measures to reduce long travel distances to schools.	2019
	Ensure that there are adequate shelters, including in areas outside of Windhoek, to meet the needs of vulnerable children.	2019
	Institute programs or expand existing programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2019

In 2019, Nepal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published the Nepal Labor Force Survey Report, with data on child labor and forced labor. In addition, the government introduced a new education policy during the reporting year, providing free and compulsory education to all children. The police also created a new anti-trafficking bureau to assist in child victims' rescue and rehabilitation, as well as coordination with the Department of Labor on cases of hazardous child labor. However, children in Nepal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of bricks. The Department of Labor's budget, the number of labor inspectors, and available resources and training are all insufficient for enforcing labor laws, including those related to child labor. Furthermore, children age 17 are excluded from the protections of the country's hazardous work list, leaving them vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nepal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of bricks. (1,2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nepal.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	37.2 (6,755,852)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.7

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation both within and outside Nepal, including to India, the Middle East, Asia, and Sub-Saharan Africa. (6,20,26,27,30,31) Many children in Nepal are engaged in the production of bricks, which exposes them to hazardous working conditions, including carrying heaving loads, using dangerous machinery, and working in extreme heat. (1,3,32)

In addition, traffickers promise families work and education opportunities for the children, but instead bring them to often under-resourced and unregistered orphanages in urban centers, and there the children are exploited commercially to attract charitable donations from foreigners. There are reports that some orphanages keep children in destitute and unsanitary conditions and force them to beg on the streets. (26,27)

According to the Nepal Labor Force Survey published by the government, there are an estimated 31,338 victims of forced labor in Nepal, of which 17 percent are under age 15. Approximately 286,000 children were involved in work for pay, although the report noted that not all working children are in child labor. (33) The government and the ILO are still analyzing the Nepal Labor Force Survey-III dataset to estimate child labor victim numbers. Preliminary findings show that about 945,000 children ages 5 to 17 are involved in child labor. (18) Although the government collected and published data on child work, the survey does not report on all forms of child labor, including hazardous jobs. (33)

During the reporting period, NGOs continued to report that children were working in brick kilns carrying loads, preparing bricks, and performing other tasks for extended periods of time; however, the number of children working in this sector continues to gradually decrease. (18) Carpet factories are considered to be in the formal sector, but many of the subcontractors working in the informal sector use child labor further down the supply chain. Although NGOs believe that the number of children involved in producing carpets continued to decrease, there were no data available to verify this claim. (17,18)

As the government increased the number of raids in the entertainment sector, the number of children working in this sector has decreased; and with an increased awareness regarding child labor, NGOs are seeing a decrease in child labor across all sectors. (18)

In support of the Free and Compulsory Education Act of 2018, the government introduced a new education policy in December 2019, providing free and compulsory education to all children, thereby contributing to reducing child labor. However, some children, particularly girls, face barriers to accessing education due to lack of sanitation facilities, geographic distance, costs associated with schooling, household chores, and lack of parental support. (2,18,34) In Nepal, 32.4 percent of schools lack separate toilet facilities for girls, which can deter them from attending school, especially when they are menstruating. (2,35) During the reporting period, the government introduced free sanitary napkins in all schools across the country to encourage girls to attend their classes. (18) Barriers for attending school for school-age boys include pressure to find employment, migration to work outside of Nepal, and issues with drugs and alcohol. Children with disabilities face additional barriers to accessing education, including denial of school admission. (2,17,18)

The government allows Bhutanese refugee students in grades 9–12 to attend local public schools at no cost, but enrollment remains restricted for younger children. UNHCR provides parallel free education at lower grades to refugees in the two remaining refugee camps in the country. (18) During the reporting period, the government allowed NGOs to provide primary- and secondary-level schooling to Tibetans living in the country. (17,18) More than 700 refugees and asylum seekers from Pakistan, Burma, Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo are not recognized as having the status of refugees, but the government allows UNHCR to provide some education, health, and livelihood services to them. These refugees lack legal access to public education, as well as the right to work. (17,18) Child refugees who cannot legally access public education, as well as those of legal age to work but are not authorized to do so, are more susceptible to being exploited in the worst forms of child labor.

The Central Level Project Implementation Unit is currently committed to reconstructing 6,456 of the 7,509 schools that were affected by the 2015 earthquakes. During the reporting period, 5,384 of the 6,456 schools have been fully reconstructed, 1,577 are under construction, and 210 have been selected for reconstruction. (18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nepal has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nepal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a minimum age for hazardous work that is consistent with international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 3 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act (36)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	17	Section 3 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act (36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Schedule I of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act (36)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 4 of the Bonded Labor (Prohibition) Act; Section 4 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act; Sections 2–4 and 15 of the Human Trafficking and Transportation Control Act; Section 4 of the Labor Act (36,37-39)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 3–4 and 15 of the Human Trafficking and Transportation Control Act (39)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 66(3)(d) of the Act Relating to Children (2018); Sections 3–4 and 15 of the Human Trafficking and Transportation Control Act; Sections 16(2) and 16(3) of the Children's Act (39,40)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 39 of the Constitution (6,42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Article 31 of the Constitution; Section 6 of the Free and Compulsory Education Act (34,42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 16D of the Education Act; Section 20 of the Free and Compulsory Education Act (34,42,43)

* No conscription (42,44)

The minimum age for hazardous work is not consistent with international standards because it does not prohibit children age 17 from engaging in hazardous work. (36,45) The types of hazardous work prohibited for children also do not include brickmaking, a sector in which there is evidence that work involves carrying heavy loads and being exposed to hazardous substances. (36,46)

Laws related to child trafficking are insufficient because they do not clearly criminalize recruitment, harboring, receipt, or transportation in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (47) The legal framework prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities is also insufficient because it does not prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. (45)

Although the Constitution prohibits the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups, there is no specific legislation penalizing this practice. (34,42,44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Nepal may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor, Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MoLESS)	Enforces labor laws, including those involving child labor. Investigates and holds hearings in 10 District Labor Offices. (48)
Nepal Police, Women and Children Service Directorate	Investigates crimes involving women and children, including human trafficking. Conducts work through the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers in all 77 districts. (49) The Nepal Police handles complaints received about child labor in districts without a District Labor Office. (48)
Ministry of Land Reform and Management	Enforces laws that prohibit bonded labor in agriculture. (2)
Monitoring Action Committees, Ministry of Women, Children, and Senior Citizens (MWCS)	Investigate reports of commercial sexual exploitation at the district level, including the exploitation of children in the adult entertainment sector. (26,50)

NGOs have noted that the Department of Labor does not take meaningful action against perpetrators, despite having the authority to do so, and encourages mediation over prosecution, resulting in mild punishments for perpetrators. (17,47) High turnover rates in government staff lead to gaps in personnel capacity. (18,47)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Nepal may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

† Data are from July 2017 to July 2018.

‡ Data are from July 2018 to July 2019.

Under a new Constitutional provision and federalism, the provincial governments have been given more authority, including the task of overseeing child labor monitoring and inspection, as well as maintaining data and documentation on the inspections. (18,38) During the reporting period, the government increased the number of inspections conducted, with 746 inspections focused on child labor. (51) However, the government and NGOs agreed that the fines and employer-paid compensation outlined in the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act were not adequate as deterrents to child labor violations. (2,52) The government has also confirmed that it calls on NGOs to assist with official inspections, because it lacks funding and resources, and to increase transparency. The government and NGOs state that most child labor occurs in the informal sector, including in companies with fewer than 10 employees and those that are not registered with the government. (17) However, the government conducted most of its labor inspections in the formal sector. (53) Although the government claims to monitor companies regularly, NGOs report that due to resource limitations, enforcement agencies respond only to child labor complaints. (17,18)

In addition, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Nepal's workforce, which includes more than 16.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Nepal would employ about 1,120 inspectors. (54,55) Although labor inspectors periodically receive training on child labor laws and inspection, this training does not necessarily adhere to any formal schedule. (48,53) The Nepali Department of Labor noted that the number of inspectors was still inadequate and limited the government's abilities to deal with child labor issues, particularly at the local levels. (17,18,56)

Although formal data are not available, the local government of Rolpa district of west Nepal reported that 84 child laborers were rescued from different locations in Nepal and reintegrated with their families in Rolpa. (18) The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of imposed penalties for child labor violations, and the number of imposed penalties that were collected for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Once fully operational, the newly formed Anti-Trafficking in Persons Bureau within the Nepal Police, headed by a Senior Superintendent of Police, will assist in children’s rescue, rehabilitation, and coordination for arrest of perpetrators. (17,18,26) The establishment of this bureau will allow the Government of Nepal to meet some of the obligations arising out the process of acceding to the Palermo Protocol. (26) In addition, the Nepal Police’s Crime Investigation School conducts trainings for all levels of police personnel in juvenile justice, child rights, and laws relating to child labor issues. (17,18)

According to the data received from the Office of the Attorney General, between July 2018 to November 2019, cases with 90 victims of child trafficking from different parts of the country were filed in courts. The government did not provide data on the purpose of human trafficking, the community of origin, or the destination. (18) In addition, news reports indicate that police rescued more than 300 child laborers from Telengana and different states in Nepal in January 2019. (57) However, the government lacks both the human resource and financial capacity to enforce laws prohibiting crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, and it lacks the resources to maintain a centralized database of cases involving the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (8,17,58)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts, including information on whether there were initial trainings for new criminal investigators or refresher courses offered. The government also did not provide disaggregated data on child labor, including the number of violations found, the number of initiated prosecutions, the number of convictions, as well as the number of penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. (18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Labor Relations, Child Labor Prevention, and Information Section	Coordinates policymaking on child labor inspection guidelines and monitors implementation of guidelines. (59,60) Consists of a senior factory inspector, two labor officers, and a senior assistant in MoLESS. Confers with MWCSC, the Central Child Welfare Board, the Department of Labor, and District Labor Offices. (59) During the reporting period, organized a program in coordination with the Department of Labor and NGOs to commemorate Anti-Child Labor Day. (61)
National Child Labor Elimination Committee	Provisioned by the Nepal Master Plan and chaired by the Secretary of MoLESS. (17) Under the Child Labor Act, provides recommendations to the government on necessary reforms in the existing child labor laws and policies; provides consultations to the government to make necessary arrangements for health, safety, education, and occupational training of the children working in institutions; and monitors effective implementation of the policies and laws aimed at eliminating child labor. (36,62) During the reporting period, the committee organized two meetings with the Child Labor Inter-Agency Working Group and also contributed to implementation of Winrock International's Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II project: the Nepal-Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor Project. (61)
National Network Against Child Labor	Coordinates the referral of children who are found in child labor to social services. Consists of District Labor Officers, District Women and Children Officers, officers from the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers, Chief District Officers, NGOs, and thousands of youth clubs. (61) This coordinating body was active during the reporting period. (61)
National Coordination Committee on Human Trafficking	Coordinates the implementation of anti-human trafficking laws, policies, and programs at the central, district, and local levels of government. Led by MWCSC and consists of government officials and NGO representatives. (50) The committee met at least four times between July to December 2019 to amend trafficking in persons regulations to align with the new federal structure. (61)
National Human Rights Commission	Monitors and receives complaints on child rights violations. (63) Reports on the status of human trafficking victims and coordinates with civil society organizations through the Office of the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking. (63) This coordinating body was active during the reporting period. (61) Published its human trafficking report in August 2019 with information about prevention, protection, and prosecution, as well as coordination and capacity-building regarding trafficking in persons and covering the period July 2018 to July 2019. (27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including updating the National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children to better align with the constitutional transition to federalism.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Master Plan (NMP-II) to End Child Labor (July 2018–July 2028)	Prioritizes ending the worst forms of child labor by 2022, and all forms of child labor by 2025. Uses five strategies to achieve goals. Established an annual monitoring evaluation and reporting system through which information will be made publicly available. (17,18,64) During the reporting period, MoLESS formed a subcommittee Interagency Working Group comprising nine NGOs and UN agencies to help advance the implementation of NMP-II. This policy was active during the reporting period. (18)
School Sector Development Plan (2016/17–2022/23)	Aims to expand access to education and provide alternative schooling and non-formal education to vulnerable populations, including children who are out of school and at risk of entering the worst forms of child labor. Overseen by the Ministry of Education, Science and Technology. (2,17) Since July 2019, the government has implemented the School Sector Development Plan through local and provincial governments. (61)
National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (2011–2022)	Promotes and protects the rights of human trafficking victims and survivors, and outlines policies for providing justice and punishing perpetrators. This policy was active, and a mid-term review was carried out during the reporting period. (62)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2)

There is a need to update the National Plan of Action so that it better aligns Nepal's anti-trafficking programming with the constitutional transition to federalism, as well as to better address forced labor. (26,27,65)

Nepal is a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. In 2019, the Government of Nepal held its second

Nepal

Pathfinder Country Strategic Workshop of the Alliance 8.7, which identified national priorities, operational structure, and roadmap for Nepal to reach its Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7. (66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Security Fund Program†	MoLESS program aimed to help support workers and their families through a tripartite contribution policy, an important initiative to help combat and prevent child labor. (17,67) This program was active during the reporting period. (61)
Helpline and Hotline Programs†	Child Helpline—1098 is a MWCSC- and Child Workers in Nepal-funded helpline operated by the Nepal Telecommunications Authority. (17,52) Responds to calls about missing children, child abuse, child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual abuse in 13 districts and municipalities in Nepal, as well as in Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka. (48,52,68) Provides rescue services, medical treatment, counseling, legal support, skills training, and shelter services. (26) This program was active during the reporting period. (47) National Center for Children at Risk—Hotline No. 104 is a hotline operated from Vrikutimandap, Kathmandu, which is jointly run by the Central Child Welfare Board and Nepal Police. (17,26) Per the Nepal Police, about four to five children on average are rescued from child labor every month from informal sectors, such as transportation, domestic help, tea shops, and restaurants, through the complaints received through the hotline. (47) “Hello Sarkar” is an initiative established by the Office of the Prime Minister. Receives child labor complaints from the public through a hotline, Facebook, and Twitter. (17) MWCSCW officials noted that, during the reporting period, the government’s attention to child labor issues has increased because of civil society awareness campaigns and widespread media coverage of the hotlines. (18)
Support for Schools†	MoLESS program that supports schools for children ages 5–16 who are at risk of working in the worst forms of child labor. Provides scholarships to cover associated schooling costs for children outside the Kathmandu Valley to attend a local public school, and works with local NGOs to verify that children are attending class. (8) The program was active during the reporting period. (61)
Hamro Samman (“Our Respect”) (2017–2022)	USAID-funded project, implemented by Winrock International, to strengthen national and local efforts to counter trafficking in persons, improve civil society advocacy and engagement, and increase private sector partnerships to empower survivors and prevent trafficking of at-risk populations. (2,17,69) This program was active during the reporting period. (47)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in Nepal focus on both forced labor and child labor, including eliminating child labor in its worst forms. These projects include Sakriya, implemented by World Education, Inc.; From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project), implemented by the ILO; Closing the Child Labor and Forced Labor Evidence Gap: Impact Evaluations, implemented by Vanderbilt University; Closing the Child Labor and Forced Labor Evidence Gap: Impact Evaluations, implemented by the University of Notre Dame; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II), implemented by Winrock International. (70,71) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Nepal.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nepal (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that laws are in line with ILO C. 182 by raising the minimum age to age 18 for entry into hazardous work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which there is evidence of child labor, including brickmaking.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the legal framework comprehensively and criminally prohibits the trafficking of children in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children up to age 18 in the production of drugs.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish data on labor law enforcement actions, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations found, the number of imposed penalties for child labor violations, and the number of imposed penalties that were collected, and criminal law enforcement actions, including whether new criminal investigators received initial training, refresher courses for investigators, and the number of violations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2019
	Provide sufficient resources to create a centralized database to track and monitor cases of the worst forms of child labor, disaggregated by type of activity.	2009 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that legal provisions against child labor are implemented and enforced against perpetrators.	2018 – 2019
	Ensure the Department of Labor's budget is sufficient to adequately enforce child labor laws.	2016 – 2019
	Increase penalties to ensure sufficient deterrence of child labor law violations.	2015 – 2019
	Provide additional resources to criminal law enforcement agencies so they are able to enforce laws prohibiting crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2019
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate, particularly at the local levels, by initiating routine targeted inspections rather than performing inspections solely based on complaints received.	2017 – 2019
	Improve human resource capacity, including increasing the number of child labor inspections, especially in the informal sector.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Institutionalize refresher training for labor inspectors on laws related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2019
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as forced labor of children, and use of children in illicit activities.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Update the National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children to better address forced labor and align it with anti-trafficking programming.	2018 – 2019
	Conduct research to determine the types of activities carried out by children, including in construction sector, to inform social policies and programs.	2019
	Collect and publish data on child labor and its worst forms, particularly regarding hazardous work.	2018 – 2019
	Eliminate barriers to education, including the lack of sanitation facilities at schools, long distances to schools, fees associated with schooling, pressure to find employment, migration to work outside of Nepal, and issues with drugs and alcohol.	2013 – 2019
	Create social programs that support child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, as well as children working in the brick industry.	2018 – 2019
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children with disabilities and refugee children.	2019

In 2019, Nicaragua made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed 6,129 cooperative agreements with employers to prevent the hiring of minors and released some information related to its labor law enforcement efforts. However, children in Nicaragua engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Laws do not establish a clear compulsory education age, and national policies to eliminate child labor and protect children have not been fully implemented. The government also lacks a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor, and it reallocated resources away from activities geared towards preventing child labor and enforcing related laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nicaragua engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nicaragua.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	47.7 (342,076)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	88.3
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	40.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		84.9

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in the production of pornography (8,9,11,17-20)
	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (19-21)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11,21)
	Use in illicit activities, including in drug production and drug trafficking (8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Information about the prevalence of child labor in Nicaragua is limited because the last known national survey on child labor was published in 2012. (8,22) However, available research indicates that children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Granada, Managua, the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and San Juan del Sur. (11,18,23) Children from poor, rural areas, those in the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and migrants from the Northern Triangle countries, are particularly vulnerable. (11) Limited research suggests that the 2018 political upheaval in Nicaragua resulted in the Nicaraguan National Police focusing resources on responding to anti-government protests, possibly impacting public security and leaving children more vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. During the reporting year, the government also reallocated resources away from activities such as preventing child labor and enforcing related laws. (8,11,20)

Children in Nicaragua who lack identification documents, sometimes due to a lack of birth registration, may not have access to social services and are at an increased risk of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (24) An estimated 15 percent of children born in Nicaragua lack birth certificates. (25-27)

Education is free and compulsory in Nicaragua; however, the costs associated with school supplies and transportation make it difficult for some children, particularly those from poor backgrounds and rural areas, to attend school. (8,28) Limited research indicates that investment in secondary schools has lagged behind investment in primary schools and that secondary school attendance remains low, increasing the risk that older children engage in exploitative work. (29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nicaragua has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nicaragua’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including establishing a compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 131 of the Labor Code; Article 73 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 84 of the Constitution (30-33)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 130 and 133 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of Ministerial Agreement No. JCHG-08-06-10; Articles 2 and 74 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (10,30-32)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1–7 of Ministerial Agreement No. JCHG-08-06-10; Article 133 of the Labor Code (10,30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 40 of the Constitution; Articles 61–63 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 182–183 and 315 of the Penal Code (33-35)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 61–63 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 182–183 and 315 of the Penal Code (34,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 175–183 of the Penal Code; Articles 5 and 26 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,34,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 358–359 and 362 of the Penal Code; Article 71 of Law 285 (Reform to the Narcotics Law); Article 79 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,34-36)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Annex I of the Code on the Organization, Jurisdiction, and Social Welfare of the Military (37)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 509 of the Penal Code; Article 95 of the Constitution (33,34)
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Article 121 of the Constitution; Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law; Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,33,38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 121 of the Constitution; Articles 8, 19, and 23 of the Education Law; Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (32,33,38)

* No conscription (33)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (32,33,38)

Nicaraguan law is not clear regarding the age up to which education is compulsory. Article 121 of the Constitution states that primary school education is compulsory; however, it does not specify an age. (33) Under Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law, education is compulsory only through the sixth grade, which it specifies is up to age 12 and the end of primary school. (38) Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code states that both primary and secondary school education are compulsory, suggesting up to age 17; however, it does not specifically state an age. (32) The lack of clarity regarding the age up to which education is compulsory and the potential gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work may leave children vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Nicaragua

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforces labor laws and sets child labor policy priorities. Conducts labor inspections through its General Labor Inspectorate, and conducts child labor inspections through its Child Labor Inspections Unit. (20) Conducts training on child labor issues and inspections. Maintains a mailbox in each of Nicaragua's 17 departments to receive complaints of child labor violations. (20)
Nicaraguan National Police	Addresses cases of child labor and human trafficking through the Police Intelligence Unit, which detects crimes, and the Special Crimes Unit, which investigates crimes. Maintains a hotline for reporting violations of children's rights. (20,40)
Ministry of Governance	Coordinates participation between MITRAB and the Nicaraguan National Police in labor inspections in which employers resist inspection. (20)
Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Contains 2 national-level and 35 department-level prosecutors who prosecute these and other crimes. (20)
Human Rights Attorney for Children	Assists in the enforcement of laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor. (20)
Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN)	Maintains a hotline for receiving reports on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. Assists in providing officials with training on child labor violations. (41) Maintains a guide for the provision of assistance to victims of commercial sexual exploitation and coordinates among agencies responsible for their care, as a part of the National Social Welfare System. (40) In 2019, coordinated services for child trafficking victims, including medical and legal services and access to education, and led a workshop for 30 employees of NGOs working in the prevention and protection of children and adolescent victims of sexual violence and trafficking in persons. (2,19)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MITRAB that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

A lack of resources may hinder MITRAB's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (8,9,43) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Nicaragua's workforce, which includes approximately 3 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Nicaragua would employ about 203 inspectors. (44-46) Government officials and NGOs have reported that child labor inspections throughout the country, particularly in agricultural areas, are limited due to personnel constraints and insufficient transportation and other resources. (40) Furthermore,

Nicaragua has a large informal and rural workforce, and the General Labor Inspectorate may be unable to adequately cover the country’s vulnerabilities to, and the magnitude of, labor violations. (9) In 2019, MITRAB signed 6,129 cooperative agreements with businesses that pledged not to use child labor. (20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of publicly available enforcement data to inform monitoring and investigations of the worst forms of child labor.

Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	Unknown (20)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (20)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (20)

Research did not find the number of criminal investigators employed by the Nicaraguan National Police or Prosecutor General’s Office during the reporting period. Other key enforcement information was similarly not available. (9)

The government investigated two cases of commercial child sexual exploitation; however, this number is low compared to the severity of the problem in the country. (20) Research indicates that criminal law enforcement agencies lack sufficient financial resources to adequately carry out criminal investigations, and efforts related to the worst forms of child labor do not adequately address the scope of the problem. (47,48)

Although the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood maintains a guide for assisting child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, reports indicate that the government had no formal procedures for the identification of human trafficking victims among high-risk populations, including children who are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. (21,49)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including financial resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Social Welfare System	Coordinates efforts on child labor and ensures that government institutions protect the rights of children and provide social services to them as part of its mandate to assist the Nicaraguan population. Comprises various government ministries, including MITRAB, MIFAN, the Ministry of Education (MINED), the Ministry of Health (MINSAL), and the Ministry of Governance. (42,43,50)
National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to address human trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Governance and comprises law enforcement agencies, the Supreme Court of Justice, and NGOs. (23) During the reporting year led 15 departmental and 43 municipal working groups in capacity building and awareness-raising engagements on trafficking in persons. (2)

Nicaragua

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP) led several working groups in 2019, for the third year in a row, NCATIP did not engage local civil society, despite being required to do so by law. Local civil society organizations were also unable to corroborate increased NCATIP activity in the local working groups. (2,11,19,23) The NCATIP also did not appoint its Executive Secretariat, which is mandated by the Law Against Trafficking in Persons. (11)

Reporting indicates that the National Social Welfare System does not have a specific and consistent coordinating mechanism due to limited coordination among constituent ministries and a lack of financial resources dedicated to combating child labor. (13,40) In addition, coordination between the National Social Welfare System and NGOs that address child labor is limited. (41)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation of the Roadmap to Make Central America, Panama, and the Dominican Republic a Child Labor Free Zone and the Good Government Plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap to Make Central America, Panama, and the Dominican Republic a Child Labor Free Zone	Sets the goal of eliminating the worst forms of child labor by 2015 and all forms of child labor by 2020. (51) There was no indication during the reporting period that the government took actions to implement the Roadmap. (8)
Good Government Plan	Sets development goals for government ministries, including MITRAB, MINED, and MINSAs. Prioritizes human trafficking investigations; aims to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation; and commits to training teachers by creating 1,000 primary school teaching positions, and increasing access to education, including for indigenous and Afro-descendant children. (52) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Good Government Plan.
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking 2018–2022	A four-pronged approach to improve awareness, capacity building, trainings, victim protection, and monitoring. The Supreme Court of Justice oversaw the design and implementation of the plan. IOM collaborated by editing the document and provided training for government officials. (11) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking.
National Strategy for the Comprehensive Care and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking	Describes the process for identifying and assisting victims. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the scope of their operations.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Love Program (Programa Amor)†	MIFAN program that supports vulnerable or impoverished children, including children involved in child labor, such as street work. Provides educational assistance for children and vocational training for parents. (53) Overseen by Nicaragua's Vice President in coordination with MINED, MINSAs, MITRAB, and the Ministry of Governance. Includes children from birth to age 6 through the Love Program for the Smallest Ones. (53) There is little to no information available from the government regarding the impacts of the program during the 13 years since its creation. (54,55)
Educational Bridges (Puentes Educativos)†	MITRAB and MINED public-private partnership implemented by World Vision that provides education to children of coffee workers to prevent child labor during coffee harvests. (56,57) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement Educational Bridges.
Integral School Meal Program (Merienda Escolar)†	MIFAN and WFP initiative that provides children and adolescents with meals at school to address poverty and improve attendance. (40,41) In 2019, the government provided food 5 days a week to a total of 1,200,000 Nicaraguan preschool and elementary school children in more than 5,000 schools. (58,59)

Program	Description
National School Supply Program (Paquete Escolar)†	MINED program that distributes packages of school supplies to preschool, primary, and secondary school children in the poorest districts to increase attendance and completion rates. (41) During the reporting period, planned to deliver 1 million school packages to children throughout Nicaragua, and reports indicate that the program was implemented throughout the year. (60,61)
Birth Registration Campaign†	Government initiative, in coordination with Save the Children and UNICEF, to advance birth registration campaigns. (9) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this initiative.

† Program is funded by the Government of Nicaragua.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (62-64)

In addition to the programs above, the government coordinates with NGOs to provide human trafficking victims with medical, educational, legal, and psychological assistance in NGO-run shelters. (23) The government diverted resources away from social programs to respond to the political upheaval in 2018 and has not created or expanded any programs to address child labor since that time. (8) The scope of current social programs is not sufficient to assist children who are subjected to human trafficking or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (20) NGOs indicate that the regions most affected by human trafficking, such as the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, lack adequate care facilities, and children who are victims of human trafficking in these areas are referred to NGO shelters in Managua. (49)

The government does not report funding levels for, or specific activities undertaken by, the Love Program; however, research indicates that the program is underfunded. (40,43)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nicaragua (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law is consistent and provides a compulsory education age that is not less than the minimum age for work.	2014 – 2019
Enforcement	Ensure adequate training and refresher courses are provided for labor law inspectors and criminal investigators.	2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2019
	Publish complete labor law enforcement data, including information about worksite inspections, unannounced inspections, number of child labor violations, and penalties imposed for violations.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor has sufficient funding to fully enforce child labor laws and ensure that personnel and resource needs are met.	2018 – 2019
	Publish complete criminal law enforcement data related to the worst forms of child labor, including number of penalties and convictions.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement efforts are sufficient to address the scope of the problem and that agencies have the funding and resources necessary to carry out duties.	2014 – 2019
	Establish an adequate mechanism for identifying human trafficking victims among high-risk populations.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Increase collaboration and resources of the National Social Welfare System ministries to ensure that the government has a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including with NGOs, and publicly report on their efforts.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that the National Coalition Against Trafficking of Persons works with relevant local stakeholders to address human trafficking issues, and ensure that it establishes its Executive Secretariat, as mandated by the Law Against Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2019
Government Policies	Take steps to implement the Roadmap to make Central America, Panama, and the Dominican Republic a Child Labor Free Zone, the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Response to Trafficking in Persons, and the Good Government Plan, and publish information about these efforts.	2009 – 2019

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Collect and publish updated data on the prevalence of child labor in the country.	2018 – 2019
	Expand birth registration programs to ensure that children have access to basic services.	2009 – 2019
	Remove barriers to education for all children and develop strategies and devote resources to improve attendance of children in secondary school.	2009 – 2019
	Implement social programs that address the full scope of the worst forms of child labor in the country, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that social services for human trafficking victims, such as care facilities, are available throughout the country, especially in areas where children are most vulnerable.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs are adequately funded and implemented and report on their yearly efforts.	2019

In 2019, Niger made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President signed legislation establishing Child Protection Committees in each commune to educate the public on the rights of children and child labor issues. The government also opened the first shelter for victims of human trafficking, which can accommodate children. In addition, the national police detained 242 individuals suspected of human trafficking, dismantling 27 national and 29 international routes for human trafficking and illicit migration. However, children in Niger engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and mining. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cattle herding. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the minimum age for work does not meet international standards as it does not apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work. Gaps in labor law enforcement also remain, including insufficient funding for labor inspectors to conduct inspections. In addition, social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Niger engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and mining. (1-5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in cattle herding. (5-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Niger.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	42.9 (2,516,191)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	48.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		71.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (9)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of rice, fruits, nuts, and vegetables (3,6,7)
	Herding and caring for livestock, including cattle (3,7,8)
	Fishing (7)
Industry	Quarrying† and mining† for trona, salt, gypsum, natron, and gold (1,2,4,11-14)
	Mechanical repair,† welding,† and metal work† (15)
	Working in construction,† tanneries,† and slaughterhouses† (7,8,16)
Services	Street work, including as market vendors, begging,† and scavenging garbage (2,8,16)
	Domestic work (2,3,8,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,17-19)
	Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (4,8,19,20)
	Hereditary and caste-based slavery, including for cattle herding, agricultural work, domestic work, and sexual exploitation (3,4,14,17,19,21,22)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4,17,22-25)
	Forced labor in domestic work and mining, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,11,14,27)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Niger

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Niger, especially boys and girls from the Arab, Djerma, Peulh, Tuareg, and Toubou ethnic minorities, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slave-like practices, particularly in distant western and northern regions and along the border with Nigeria. Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (3,4,28,29) A particular form of slavery in Niger is the wahaya practice, in which men buy girls born into slavery, typically between ages 9 and 11, as “fifth wives.” Child slaves, including those involved in the practice of wahaya, are forced to work long hours as cattle herders, agricultural workers, or domestic workers, and are often sexually exploited. (11,17,21,22,28-31) As with those involved in hereditary slavery, the children of wahaya wives are considered slaves and are passed from one owner to another as gifts or as part of dowries. (8,17,28,29,31,32)

In Niger, some Koranic teachers known as marabouts may subject boys known as talibés to manual labor or forced begging rather than providing them with a religious education. (2-4,14,17,19,29) Children in Niger participating in seasonal migration or migrant children from West Africa travelling to Algeria and Libya may also be subject to forced begging or commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (23-25) According to the IOM, between January and October 2019, more than 3,500 migrant children were deported to Niger. These children may be at increased risk to trafficking due to their precarious migratory status. (38) During the reporting period, international organizations and the Government of Niger’s Directorate of Child Protection provided social services, shelter, and access to education to unaccompanied migrant children, and are working to resettle or repatriate foreign unaccompanied children. (25,36,37)

In early 2019, there were reports that government forces were collaborating with a Malian non-state armed group, GATIA, which has forcibly recruited children. In May, international partners informed the Government of Niger of these allegations, and the Nigerien armed forces subsequently ceased collaboration with GATIA. (14,29,39)

Although the Constitution of Niger provides for free education, in practice, many children, especially girls, do not attend school. (14,29,32,40) The lack of school infrastructure and school materials, and limited availability of teachers, especially in rural areas, impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (3,18,32,41,42) In addition, refugee and internally displaced children may have difficulty accessing education, which makes them particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment by non-state armed groups. (14,23-43)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Niger has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Niger’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 106 of the Labor Code (44)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 159 of Decree No. 2017-682 (45)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 159–161 and 164–171 of Decree No. 2017–682; Article 181 of the Penal Code (45,46)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 2 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 270 of the Penal Code (40,44-46)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 16 of the Law 2015-36 on Illicit Traffic of Migrants (44,45,47,48)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 291-292 of the Penal Code; Article 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (44-47)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 10 and 16 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 181 of the Penal Code (44-47)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 107 of the Labor Code (44)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code (44)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935/PRN/MEPAPLN/EC/MES; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (49, 52)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 23 of the Constitution; Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935/PRN/MEPAPLN/EC/MES; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (40,49,52)

* No conscription (50)

Although the Labor Code establishes age 14 as the minimum age for work, it does not apply to workers in the informal economy, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (51)

In addition, Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System in Niger guarantees education for all children ages 4 to 18 and Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935 states that the government is required to promote access to compulsory education. However, Niger's law does not clearly articulate what age groups the provision applies to, thereby leaving the risk that some children are not covered and increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (49,52)

In 2019, Niger's Supreme Court set legal precedent by ruling wahaya to be illegal. However, the government made limited efforts to inform the public of the court's ruling; anti-slavery organizations have indicated that they will conduct awareness-raising campaigns so that more affected women will bring cases to court. (14,29,30,53-55)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Niger

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS)	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those on child labor. Conducts awareness-raising programs to combat child labor. (3,15,56,57)
National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates criminal cases involving minors, including issues pertaining to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and hereditary slavery. Housed under the Ministry of Interior and Public Security. (12,17,58)
Ministry of Justice's District and Magistrate Courts	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor through 10 district courts and 30 magistrate courts. (12,15,56)
Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection	Works with law enforcement officials to provide vulnerable children with social and reintegration services, including education and counseling, in 54 Centers for Prevention, Promotion, and Protection (CEPPP) across the country. (3,12,59)
National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (ANLTP/TIM)	Implements policies and programs developed by the National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (CNCLTP/TIM), conducts awareness campaigns about human trafficking, provides training and education to reduce the risk of human trafficking, and maintains a hotline to receive complaints on human trafficking. (4,5,60,61) In 2019, the government allocated $202,400 to the ANLTP/TIM and the CNCLTP/TIM, although the government did not publish the exact amount allocated to the ANLTP/TIM. ANLTP/TIM also signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Nigeria's National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons to enhance cooperation between the two countries in combating trafficking in persons. (14,62)
National Human Rights Commission (CNDH)	Receives complaints and conducts investigations of human rights violations, including hereditary slavery. (3,56)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MELSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of financial and human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (19)	Yes (5)

Despite a slight increase in the number of labor inspectors, the total number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Niger's workforce, which includes approximately 6.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Niger would employ about 163 labor inspectors. (5,63-65) Complaints related to child labor, including the worst forms, can be submitted through the National Commission on Human Rights (CNDH). Although the referral process is not clear, the MELSS reported receiving complaints from the CNDH in 2019. (3,5,29) In addition, reports indicate that the government lacks adequate funding and personnel to conduct labor inspections, especially in the informal sector and in remote locations. (5,8,22)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning and allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (19)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (19)	N/A (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (66)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (19,66)	Unknown (5)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (19,66)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (19,66)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (19,66)	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (19,66)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (66)	Yes (5)

In 2019, the government investigated and prosecuted 54 cases of trafficking in persons with 50 suspects, and convicted 4 traffickers. However, the number of child victims involved in these cases is unknown. (38) In addition, the Nigerien National Police detained 242 suspected traffickers and dismantled 27 national and 29 international routes for human trafficking and illicit migration. (67)

During the reporting period, prosecutors, judges, police, gendarmerie, and social workers attended a multidisciplinary 3-day workshop to strengthen cooperation among key national stakeholders in identifying, investigating, and prosecuting trafficking in persons cases. In addition, the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (ANLTP/TIM) also conducted trainings with government officials, community leaders, and women's and youth advocacy groups on risk factors for trafficking in persons and combating traditional slavery practices. (38,68) However, reports indicate that inadequate resources, including insufficient personnel, funding, and training, hamper the capacity of criminal law enforcement authorities to coordinate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (5,8,21,22,69)

The ANLTP/TIM maintains and publicizes a hotline to report trafficking in persons crimes, but the number of calls received by the hotline that involve child trafficking is unknown. In addition, although the exact number of children removed from the worst forms of child labor is unavailable, according to the MELSS removal of children from child labor occurs only in extreme cases of exploitation, such as child trafficking or forced labor. (22,66,70)

Although Niger has an informal referral system, the ANLTP/TIM submitted a draft national referral mechanism to the Ministry of Justice in 2019. The proposed national referral mechanism would institutionalize a formal process for referrals and improve its use within Niger's law enforcement and judicial systems. (71)

During the reporting period, an anti-slavery organization helped victims of slavery file two cases in the ECOWAS Court of Justice against the Republic of Niger for failing to uphold the rights of the victims against their former masters. (72,73) The Nigerien Supreme Court ruled that the practice of wahaya is illegal, reinforcing the 2003 Penal Code that prohibits this practice. However, research found no evidence of efforts to enforce this ban or to raise awareness of this ruling. (14,30,46) In addition, a civil society organization specializing in assisting victims of traditional slavery reported that most victims do not self-identify or file complaints against their former masters due to lack of reintegration services and dependency on their former masters. (14,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates programs, advises on child labor legislation and regulations, and reviews proposals for action plans for the ILO-IPEC country program. Chaired by MELSS. (12,18,57)
National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (CNCLTP/TIM)	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking, and develops and implements policies and programs related to human trafficking. (18,26,47,61) Includes representatives from MELSS and civil society organizations. (60,74) In 2019, the government increased funding to CNCLTP/TIM and ANLTP/TIM from $129,400 in 2018 to $202,400 in 2019. However, the government did not publish the exact amount allocated to CNCLTP/TIM. (12)
National Committee to Combat Child Labor in Agriculture	Coordinates policies and programs to combat child labor in agriculture. (75) Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, includes representatives from MELSS, the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection, and non-governmental stakeholders. (76)
Child Protection Committees*	Educate the public on the rights of children and limit abuses, including child labor. Child Protection Committees were established in each commune in 2019. (14,77)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

Research was unable to determine whether most of the coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2019–2023)†	Aims to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, adequately implement the laws, and provide effective protection and care for victims, including children. Led by the ANLTP/TIM. (14,78) In 2019, the government also drafted the new National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2019–2023) and a separate National Action Plan on Combating Illicit Migration, and dedicated $15,100 in 2020 for the implementation of both plans. (14,78)
Plan for Social and Economic Development (2017–2021)	Aims to promote sustainable development and social equality. Overseen by the Ministry of Planning. (18,79) Includes activities to improve access to education for vulnerable populations, especially migrant children, and to combat street work and forced begging by children. (79)
National Social Protection Strategy	Aims to improve the quality of, and access to, basic education and health services; includes strategies to combat child labor. Overseen by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection. (17,80)
UN Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) (2019–2021)†	Promotes improved access to education for vulnerable children and aims to build government capacity to address child labor. Under the direction of the Ministry of Planning and receives support from international donors. (5,81)
Education and Training Sectorial Program (2014–2024)	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of, and access to, basic and higher education. Led by the Ministry of Education. (18,82,83)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (18)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement most policies during the reporting period.

The Government of Niger has not adopted the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, which was drafted in 2015 and aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Niger by 2025. (18,19,84) During the reporting period, the government participated in a ministerial meeting of the technical special committee on social development and labor that enacted an African Union (AU) 10-Year Plan to Combat Child Labor. The AU plan is intended to guide a new National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (5,85)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers for the Prevention, Protection, and Promotion of Persons (CEPPP)†	Government program replacing the Judicial and Preventive Education Services, in collaboration with UNICEF, to provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to street children, many of whom are victims of child labor. (2,3,86) In 2019, operated 54 centers nationwide. (5,14,59)
Global Action Against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants	$12.2 million EU-funded global project implemented by UNODC, UNICEF, and IOM to combat human trafficking and migrant smuggling. (87,88) In 2019, Nigerien prosecutors participated in a 5-day training-of-trainers seminar on international judicial cooperation to combat trafficking in persons in West Africa. (89)
From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (2015–2019)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by ILO to support global and national efforts aimed at combating forced labor of adults and children under the 2014 ILO Protocol and supporting Recommendation to C.29 on Forced Labor. (84,90) In 2019, provided financial support to implement National Day Against Slavery activities and supported development of a questionnaire to identify former women victims of slavery, including wahaya , for a livelihoods pilot program. (91) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
UNICEF Country Program (2019–2021)*	UNICEF-funded program to support the government's efforts to improve children's education, birth registration rates, and social inclusion, and to strengthen child protection programs, including for children of refugees in the Diffa region. (92-94)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Niger.

During the reporting period, the ANLTP/TIM and IOM opened the first shelter in Zinder for human trafficking victims, including children. The shelter received at least six girls between the ages of 14 and 22; shelter staff provided care to these victims and IOM implemented a reintegration project to help return victims to their families. (5,38,66,95-97)

Although Niger has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude. Niger also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors. (5,15,22,26,69,91) In addition, the resources and facilities available to social services agencies remain inadequate. (4,5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Niger (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions and protections apply to self-employed children and those in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2019
	Establish a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age of employment.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Publish complete information on the number of worksite inspections conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected, investigations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2019
	Increase the resources and number of labor inspectors and criminal investigators responsible for enforcing labor laws to provide adequate coverage of the workforce and meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that inspections and enforcement efforts take place in the remote locations, in which most child labor occurs.	2014 – 2019
Enforcement	Disaggregate complaints made to the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport's hotline by number of complaints involving children.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure victims of the worst forms of child labor are removed from exploitative situations as appropriate.	2010 – 2019
	Ensure that the Nigerien Supreme Court's ruling banning the practice of wahaya is enforced.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that key coordinating mechanisms, such as the National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport and the National Steering Committee on Child Labor, are active and receive adequate funding to fulfill their missions.	2011 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt and implement a national action plan to combat child labor, including in hereditary slavery, mining, and agriculture.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the policies to combat the worst forms of child labor are implemented.	2016 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls, refugees, internally displaced children, and children in rural communities, by increasing school infrastructure, teacher availability, and school supplies.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that government social services providers have sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care to all children withdrawn from hazardous labor.	2015 – 2019
	Expand the scope of programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude.	2009 – 2019
	Implement a program to target and assist children exploited by religious instructors.	2011 – 2019

In 2019, Nigeria made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched two new state-level task forces to combat human trafficking in Delta and Ondo states. Children engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in quarrying granite, artisan mining, commercial sexual exploitation, and armed conflict, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The Child's Right Act has only been adopted by 25 out of Nigeria's 36 states, leaving the remaining 11 states in northern Nigeria with legal statutes that do not meet international standards for the prohibition of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities. In addition, the minimum age for work in the Labour Act does not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work. Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors does not meet the ILO's technical advice for the size of Nigeria's workforce, and social programs do not address all relevant sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nigeria engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in quarrying granite, artisanal mining, commercial sexual exploitation, and armed conflict, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (I-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nigeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	47.5 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	76.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	39.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		73.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2010, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020.(5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5, 2020.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of manioc/cassava, cocoa, rice, and tobacco (2,7)
	Fishing, activities unknown (8)
	Herding livestock (7)
Industry	Mining and quarrying of granite and gravel (2)
	Artisanal gold mining and processing (1,7,9)
	Harvesting sand (9)
	Construction, including making bricks and carrying construction materials (2,7)
Services	Domestic work (2,7,10-12)
	Collecting money on public buses, washing cars, and automotive repair (7,10,11,13)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and scavenging (2,7,10,11,13,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,7,10,12,16,17)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in begging; domestic work; street vending; textile manufacturing; mining and quarrying gravel, granite, and gold; and labor in agriculture, including in cocoa, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,7,12,18,19)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and in non-conflict support roles (4,20,21)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In northern Nigeria, many families send children from rural to urban areas to live with Islamic teachers and receive a Koranic education. These children may receive lessons, but teachers often force them to beg on the streets and surrender the money they collect. (12,22) Furthermore, these children are highly vulnerable to recruitment by Boko Haram, which continued to forcibly recruit and use child soldiers in combat and support roles, as well as for suicide bombers and concubines. (23)

Benin City, the capital of Edo state, is a major human trafficking hub in Africa, but increased enforcement efforts may have caused some human trafficking rings to shift their focus to other areas of southern Nigeria. (24-26) Girls from Nigeria are sent to North Africa and Europe for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (26-31) Children from West African countries experience forced labor in Nigeria, including in granite and gold mines. (4,18)

In 2019, despite notable military advances and proclamations of Boko Haram’s defeat by government forces, the group remained a security threat, with escalating attacks forcing over 30,000 people out of Nigeria’s Northeastern regions. (34,35) These attacks have contributed to the displacement of over 2 million people, of which 56 percent were children. (24,29,36) Some girls, particularly unaccompanied minors, were subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in internally displaced persons (IDP) camps and military barracks, often by members of the Nigerian military, the CJTF, and other camp security personnel in exchange for food. (4,24,26,29,32,37-41)

Although free and compulsory education is federally mandated by the Education Act, little enforcement of compulsory education laws occurs at the state level. School fees are often charged in practice, and the cost of materials can be prohibitive for families. (7) When families experienced economic hardship, the enrollment of boys was typically prioritized over the enrollment of girls. Other barriers to education include a lack of teachers, sexual harassment, inadequate sanitation facilities, and fear of abduction or attack by Boko Haram while at school, particularly for girls in the northeastern part of the country. (7,11,24,29,42) Furthermore, schools may be used to house IDPs or occupied by government armed forces in their campaign against Boko Haram and the Islamic State-West Africa. (25,37,43) Almost 1,400 schools have been destroyed since 2009, and more than 57 percent of schools in Borno State were closed in the 2017/2018 school year due to violence in the area, leaving about 3 million children without access to education. (25,37)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nigeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nigeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Section 59(1) of the Labour Act; Sections 28 and 29 of the Child's Right Act (44,45)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 59 (5) and (6) of the Labour Act; Sections 28, 29, and 277 of the Child's Right Act (44,45)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Sections 59-61 of the Labour Act; Sections 28 of the Child's Right Act; Section 23 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act (44-46)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 13, 22, and 24-25 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act; Sections 28 and 30 of the Child's Right Act (45,46)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 13 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act; Sections 30 of the Child's Right Act (45,46)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 13-17 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act; Section 23 of the Cybercrimes Act; Sections 30 and 32 of the Child's Right Act (45-47)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 19 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act; Sections 25-26 and 30 of the Child's Right Act (45-47)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 28 of the Armed Forces Act; Section 34 of the Child's Right Act (45,48)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Section 19 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act (46)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Sections 2 and 15 of the Education Act; Section 15 of the Child's Right Act (45,49)
Free Public Education	Yes		Sections 2-3 of the Education Act; Section 15 of the Child's Right Act (45,49)

* No conscription (48)

The Child's Right Act (CRA) codifies the rights of children in Nigeria and must be adopted and implemented by each state to become law in its territory. However, only 25 of the 36 states have adopted and implemented the CRA, leaving the 11 remaining states in northern Nigeria with legal statutes that do not meet international standards for the prohibition of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. In these 11 states, laws prohibiting child trafficking do not criminalize both domestic and international trafficking or trafficking for the purpose of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation; the offering of a child for prostitution is not criminally prohibited; and there is no prohibition against the use of children in illicit activities. (45-47)

Furthermore, the CRA upholds certain portions of the Labour Act which are not in compliance with international child labor standards. This includes Section 59, which sets the minimum employment age at 12, in contradiction to the CRA, which only permits children under age 18 to engage in light work for family members. (44,45) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (44,45,49)

Nigeria

Although the Labour Act forbids the employment of youth under age 18 in work that is dangerous to their health, safety, or morals, it does not establish the types of hazardous activity that are prohibited to children under age 18. (44,50) The National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor developed a report in 2013 that identified hazardous child labor in Nigeria; however, the government has yet to determine by law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (2,50) The Labour Act also permits children of any age to do light work in agriculture and domestic work if they are working with a family member. Furthermore, the minimum age protections in the Labour Act do not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy. (44,50) Lastly, children are not excluded from the Terrorism Prevention Act's penalty of life imprisonment for assisting in acts of terrorism. (51)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate, Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE)	Deploys labor inspectors across 36 state labor offices and the federal capital territory to enforce federal child labor laws. (7,29,52)
National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP)	Enforces laws against human trafficking and exploitative labor. Coordinates with the Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development and state governments to provide child victims with social services and reunite trafficked children with their families. (7,12,29) Operates hotlines for victims in Abuja and each zonal command center. (26)
Nigeria Police	Enforce all laws prohibiting forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Collaborate with NAPTIP on human trafficking enforcement. (7)
Nigeria Immigration Service	Collaborates with NAPTIP to enforce laws against child trafficking. (7)
State Taskforce Against Human Trafficking	Enforces the Edo State Trafficking in Persons Prohibition Law as well as other laws prohibiting trafficking in persons, and investigates all cases of child trafficking and forced child labor. Includes an Investigation and Security Unit tasked with the prevention and detection of human trafficking cases. (53,54) As of March 2019, investigated 56 cases and filed charges in 20 cases. Also during this reporting period, the Delta and Ondo states established anti-trafficking forces as well. (26,53-55)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took action to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (56)	Yes (57)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown	Yes (57)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (56)	Yes (57)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (56)	Yes (57)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (56)	Yes (57)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (56)	Yes (57)

Of the 15,643 inspections conducted in 2019, 2,415 were dedicated child labor inspections. A total of 1,263 children were removed from child labor situations. (57,58) However, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to the lack of resources for inspections, and research did not find mechanisms to enforce existing protections for children in the informal sector. (57,59)

Although the Government of Nigeria increased the number of labor inspectors, the total number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Nigeria's workforce, which includes approximately 60 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Nigeria would employ about 4,005 labor inspectors. (60,61)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	(26) Yes	Yes (57)

† Data are from April 2018 to February 2019.

Criminal law enforcement authorities continued to detain children for their alleged association with Boko Haram, including girls who were victims. (4,25,29,37,38,59,63) Although the government released some of the children and referred them to social services providers, many remained in detention facilities for prolonged periods. (4,25,29,59,63)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Led by MOLE, and comprises representatives from seven governmental agencies, faith-based organizations, NGOs, ILO, and UNICEF. (7) Research was unable to determine whether this body was active during the reporting period.
Inter-Ministerial Taskforce on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates child labor issues related to human trafficking. Chaired by NAPTIP. (7) Research was unable to determine whether this body was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
NAPTIP 2019 Plan of Action	Provides a framework for mobilizing NAPTIP and all stakeholders involved in combating human trafficking, with an emphasis on enforcement, prosecution, and provision of victim services. (64) Research was unable to determine whether this body was active during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism	Designed to end the recruitment and use of children by the Civilian Joint Task Force (CJTF). Aims to promote the protection of children's rights, ensure that suspects under age 18 are treated in accordance with international law, and provide for disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration for children previously associated with CJTF. (65-67) In 2019, CJTF conducted awareness-raising activities to prevent child recruitment and cooperated with Borno state officials and the UN Country Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting during verification and screening procedures. (68)

Although the Government of Nigeria has adopted policies on human trafficking and the use of children in armed conflict, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor since the conclusion of the National Policy on Child Labor in 2017.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains in Africa (ACCEL Africa) (2018-2022)	ILO-sponsored regional project aimed at eliminating child labor in supply chains, with particular focus on those involved with the production of cacao, coffee, cotton, gold, and tea. Collaborates with global supply chain actors working in Africa on public policy, good governance, empowerment, representation, partnership, and knowledge sharing. (69)
NAPTIP Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Government-funded program that operates 10 shelters in Nigeria, with a total capacity of 315 victims. Shelters provide legal, medical, and psychological services, as well as vocational training and business management skills. (4,12) Continued to provide services to victims in 2019. (26)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded project implemented by ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (70)
World Bank-funded Programs	Projects aim to improve access to education. Includes: National Social Safety Nets Project (2016–2022), a $50 million project that aims to provide primary school lunches and offers conditional cash transfers based on children's enrollment; Nigeria Partnership for Education Project (2015–2019), a $100 million project that aimed to improve access and quality of education in selected states, particularly for girls; and the Better Education Service Delivery for All (BESDA) (2017–2022), a $611 million project which aims to increase access to education for out-of-school youth and improve literacy. (71-73) In 2019, The National Social Safety Net Project continued working with their government partners to ensure that they would be able to start their activities in the upcoming year while the Nigeria Partnership for Education Project was able to work towards their project development objectives which included promoting school effectiveness and improved learning outcomes, increasing access to basic education for out-of-school children, and strengthening planning and management systems including learning assessment and capacity development. Highlights of the Nigeria Partnership for Education Project included awarding 13,705 school grants to pre-primary schools. (71,72) Finally, the Better Education Service Delivery for All (BESDA) project selected approximately 20,000 schools for its intensive literacy program which would reach more than 1.2 million grade 1 students. (73)
Safe Schools Initiative	Donor-funded program implemented by the government and international organizations that aims to improve access to education in northeastern Nigeria. (22,74,75) Research was unable to determine if this project was active during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Nigeria.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (76)

There are increasing concerns regarding the shelter conditions which are housing trafficking victims. These conditions include poor housing facilities, a lack of food, and insufficient stipends along with reports of victims being held against their will at the NAPTIP-run shelters for extended periods of time. (59, 63)

In addition, research found no evidence of programs to address all relevant worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nigeria (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory; ensure that national legislation on the minimum age for work is consistent; and that all children are protected.	2012 – 2019
	Ensure that the types of work determined to be hazardous for children are prohibited by law or regulation for all children under age 18.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure laws criminalize both domestic and international trafficking or trafficking for the purpose of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation in all states.	2019
	Criminalize the offering of a child for prostitution in all states.	2019
	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs are criminally prohibited in all states.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that provisions related to light work conform to international standards.	2009 – 2019
	Amend the Terrorism Prevention Act to prohibit the punishment of children for their association with armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Enforcement	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that labor inspectors receive sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that a mechanism exists for enforcing existing protections for children working in the informal sector.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information on the training provided for new criminal investigators and whether any refresher courses were provided.	2015 – 2019
	Cease the practice of detaining children associated with armed groups for prolonged periods of time and refer these children to social services providers	2016 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and able to carry out their mandates as intended.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor in granite, gravel, and cocoa production.	2018 – 2019
Social Programs	Ensure that all states adopt programs to offer free education and expand existing programs that provide funds to vulnerable children, especially girls, to cover school fees and the cost of materials.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure an adequate number of trained teachers and provide sufficient educational infrastructure for children, particularly girls, to access schools. Remove all armed groups and forces from schools and compounds.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that NAPTIP shelters provide appropriate facilities, resources, and freedoms to victims.	2019
	Establish programs that prevent and remove children from all relevant worst forms of child labor, including armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities.	2009 – 2019

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Niue, and in 2019, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, Niue has not established a minimum age for work and lacks a law that prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children.

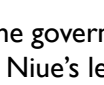

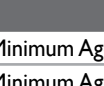

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Niue.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Niue is self-governing in free association with New Zealand and is fully responsible for its internal affairs. (1,2) Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to Niue, unless it was done expressly on behalf of Niue. (2) Niue has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Niue's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Although Niue's Public Service Regulations prohibit the permanent employment of any person under age 18 in public service, a minimum age for work in the private sector has not been established. (8,9) Niue has not determined the types of work that are hazardous for children. The government also does not prohibit slavery or slavery-like practices such as forced labor. (8) Niue's human trafficking provision does not clearly criminalize domestic trafficking or the trafficking of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (3) In addition, the government does not criminalize the use, procuring, or offering of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. Niue has also not criminalized the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (8) New Zealand is responsible for Niue's defense at the territory's request and consultation. (4,7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Niue Police Department	Enforces all laws, including those related to child labor, on behalf of the Government of Niue. (2)
Department of Justice	Investigates crimes, including cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (10)
Department for Community Affairs	Intakes and refers children's matters to the Niue Police Department, including child labor allegations. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Niue has established mechanisms to coordinate efforts related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordinating Committee	Coordinates the implementation of the UN CRC, monitoring and implementing child protection policies at the national level. (2) Research was unable to determine whether the National Coordinating Committee was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Niue has established a policy related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (11) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Niue (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a minimum age for work of at least age 15 that equals the compulsory age of education.	2013 – 2019
	Ratify ILO C.182.	2019
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage, the sale and trafficking of children, and slavery.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the trafficking of children domestically and internationally for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and do not require the use of force, fraud, or coercion to be established for the crime of trafficking.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2016 – 2019
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2019
Coordination	Publish information on activities undertaken by the National Coordinating Committee.	2019
Government Policies	Publish information on activities undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy.	2019

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists on Norfolk Island, in 2019 the government made a moderate advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Australia enacted the Modern Slavery Act, which applies to Norfolk Island, and took steps to begin consultations on a revised National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery. Although Norfolk Island made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, its legal framework does not have a minimum age for work for children. In addition, laws related to child trafficking do not meet international standards because the recruitment, harboring, transfer, and receipt of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation are not prohibited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Norfolk Island. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Norfolk Island is included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth, which provides for its defense. (1-4) All legislation of the Federal Parliament applies, unless specifically excluded. (3) Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to Norfolk Island (Table 1).

The Norfolk Island Employment Act 1988 and the Norfolk Island Criminal Code 2007 remain in force. (4-13) Norfolk Island does not have a minimum age for work. Under the Norfolk Island Employment Act 1988, and with certain limitations, children younger than age 15 may begin working. (5,14) This is not in compliance with international standards because it allows for the employment of children under the age of 15. Further, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (15) In addition, laws related to child trafficking are not sufficient because the recruitment, harboring, transfer, and receipt (domestically) of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation—including prostitution—are not clearly prohibited. (6,16) Also, laws related to illicit activities do not criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production of drugs. (6,7)

In 2019, the Government of Australia passed the Modern Slavery Act of 2018, which requires that (a) any entity with revenue in excess of $685,000 ($100m AUD), and (b) is an Australian entity or an entity engaging in business in Australia at any time during a yearly reporting period; or (c) is an entity that has volunteered to comply with the Modern Slavery Act of 2018, must report via a modern slavery statement the entity’s modern slavery risks, including the worst forms of child labor, within the entity’s operations and supply chains; and actions taken by the entity to address aforementioned risks. (1,17,18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, which apply to Norfolk Island. Norfolk Island also has its own institutional mechanisms to enforce labor laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role

Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (20) Oversee the Child Protection Operations Team, which coordinates and investigates online and multi-jurisdictional online child sexual exploitation issues, including child pornography; and the Human Trafficking Teams, which investigate human trafficking for the purposes of transnational sexual and labor exploitation. (21,22)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established mechanisms to coordinate government efforts on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking	Deals with child labor issues, including its worst forms, from a human trafficking perspective. Comprises 11 government agencies, including the Australian Federal Police, Department of Employment, and Department of Foreign Affairs, and chaired by the Department of Home Affairs. (1,22) This Committee was active in 2019 and met to discuss issues as they arose. The Committee was also actively implementing the Modern Slavery Act of 2018. (1,23,24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for government policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established policies related to child labor (Table 5).

In 2019, the Government of Australia took steps to begin consultations on a revised National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery. (24,26,27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Norfolk Island (Table 6).

In 2019, North Macedonia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The parliament implemented changes to the existing Labor Law, which provided additional protections for children under the age of 15, and those who have not completed compulsory education. In addition, the Ministry of Education and Science implemented a new law that requires the hiring of educational mediators with the goal of removing barriers to education for Roma children. The government also increased the enrollment of children from vulnerable groups in primary school by accommodating first time and returnee students, and providing scholarships to vulnerable children.

However, children in North Macedonia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The law's minimum age protections do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside formal employment relationships. Local police entities have also demonstrated a lack of knowledge on handling cases pertaining to trafficking in persons. Moreover, the government has not adopted a policy to address all worst forms of child labor, with the exception of child trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in North Macedonia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in North Macedonia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.3 (44,161)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	86.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	19.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (1,3,8)
Services	Street work, including vending small items, cleaning vehicle windshields, scavenging, and begging (4,5,8,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,7,8,12)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,7,8,12)
	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (2,6,13,14)
	Forced labor as waitstaff and dancers in restaurants, bars, and nightclubs (2,14,15)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Most children involved in child labor in North Macedonia engage in street work, including vending small items, cleaning vehicle windshields, and begging. The majority of children involved in street work are of the Roma, Balkan Egyptian, and Ashkali ethnicities. (1,3-8)

North Macedonia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The majority of victims of child trafficking in North Macedonia are girls, between the ages of 12 and 18, who have been subjected to domestic trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in restaurants, bars, and nightclubs. (1,2,7,16) Roma girls, especially, are victims of trafficking for forced marriages in which they are subject to sexual and labor exploitation. (1,2,7,13,17)

Unaccompanied children from Afghanistan, Iraq, Iran, Syria, and other states continued to transit through the country, and were vulnerable to trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (7,12,18,19)

In August 2019, the updated Law on Primary Education came into effect permitting the Ministry of Education and Science (MOES) to hire educational mediators to assist Roma students in overcoming barriers to education. MOES hired 22 mediators, all of whom are Roma, with plans to hire 23 more. (8) In addition, the government has continued to grant scholarships for Roma students. (8) Despite these efforts, the government was unable to fully meet the educational needs of Roma children due to a shortage of qualified teachers who can provide instruction in Romani. (16,20,21) Birth certification is required for attending school in North Macedonia, and some Roma children had difficulty accessing education due to a lack of birth registration and identity cards. (3,8,21) Also, there continues to be a lack of comprehensive data on child labor, including research on the activities of children in street work and those subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

North Macedonia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in North Macedonia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

In 2019, the government of North Macedonia implemented changes to the existing Labour Relations Act, providing additional protections for working children. (8) In accordance with the Council of Europe's Committee of Social Rights, Article 18 of the law now indicates that children under the age of 15 or who have not completed compulsory education may participate in legally sanctioned work activities for no longer than 2 hours per day and no more than 12 hours per week. In addition, during a school holiday, children may not work longer than 6 hours per day or 30 hours per week. (8) However, the minimum age for work does not comply with international standards because the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside formal employment relationships. (4,21,24) In addition, because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/ Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP)	Collaborates with the police and the Ombudsman's Office to conduct investigations and identify children living and working on the streets and monitors cases of forced child labor through the Department of Social Inclusion. (3,5,8) Refers children to 30 Centers for Social Work (CSWs) throughout the country, which serve to counsel, educate, shelter, and assist children in need and victims of trafficking in persons. (3,11)
State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Enforces labor law, including child labor laws, by conducting at least 60 targeted and complaint-based cases per month. Receives complaints of child labor from MLSP and refers cases of the worst forms of child labor to the Public Prosecutor. (31,32)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforces laws related to hazardous child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities through its special police unit for organized crime, corruption, and human trafficking. (32) In 2019, mobile teams continued their operations in Skopje, Kumanovo, Tetovo, Bitola, and Gevgelija to identify street children and remove them from hazardous situations. (1,8,16,18,33)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes criminal law violations, including those involving the worst forms of child labor. (34) Has an Organized Crime and Corruption Unit with four prosecutors dedicated to cases of child abuse and the worst forms of child labor. The Skopje Basic Prosecutor's Office has eight prosecutors for child abuse cases. (14)
Office of the National Referral Mechanism	Refers potential cases of child victims of human trafficking to law enforcement authorities for investigation, and refers potential victims to social services. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in North Macedonia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSP that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

North Macedonia's State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) is responsible for enforcing all labor laws, including laws on child labor, in all sectors of the formal economy and can assess fines at any point of the inspection. (3) Although the SLI does not have a specific strategy for conducting inspections, unannounced inspections in all sectors are permitted, including on legally-registered private farms. (5,8,35) Inspectors can also inspect private homes and farms with a valid warrant. (3) In 2019, SLI found one child labor violation at a primary school, which was reported by a concerned parent and an NGO, in which a principal had agreed with a local business to have children harvest grapes for two days over a weekend. SLI did not assess a penalty for the violation and the NGO reported that the child labor ended because the work was completed. (8)

In 2019, all labor inspectors received training on labor laws. The number of labor inspectors increased from 54 to 78 and the number of inspections increased slightly due to new hires and a change in the law requiring heads of inspection departments to conduct regular inspections. (8) However, some government officials have indicated that funding is now insufficient due to the increase in inspectors. In addition, a senior government official expressed concern that 60 percent of current inspectors will reach retirement age in the next 2 to 3 years. (8) Sources also reported that labor inspectors did not consistently identify victims of human trafficking properly. (36)

The MLSP lacks a central database to track labor investigations; however, inspection results are disseminated throughout relevant departments within the MLSP. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in North Macedonia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In North Macedonia, legal requirements mandate that public prosecutors receive a 24-month training, which includes the application of international legal standards. (16) Police investigators receive initial training, yearly refresher courses, and training when legislation changes. (1) During the reporting period, investigators and Public Prosecutor’s Office representatives received specialized training from the National Unit for the Suppression of Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking (NUSMSHT), which also provided training on migrant smuggling and human trafficking to social workers, labor inspectors, NGOs, and civil society members. (8) However, research indicates that some local police were not aware of the specialized task force, nor did they possess knowledge on handling trafficking in persons (TIP) cases. (36)

In 2019, NUSMSHT identified four child victims of human trafficking, including victims of sexual exploitation and labor exploitation. NUSMSHT used Section 418-d of the criminal code to file two criminal charges against four individuals suspected of committing crimes. (8) The “Red Button” Hotline is an MOI-operated website application to report child abuse, human trafficking, hate crimes, and violence. The hotline was created to improve identification and timely referral of human trafficking cases, especially among migrants. (2) In 2019, three reports related to trafficking in persons were received and referred to the Anti-TIP Task Force for investigation. (8)

In 2019, criminal investigators operating in their home agencies had sufficient resources to carry out their duties. However, NUSMSHT does not have separate funding or assets and lacks adequate equipment, vehicles, and office space, which hinders its efforts to perform investigations and meet the needs of identified victims. (8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Body for Protection of Children from Abuse and Neglect	Led by MLSP. (1) Comprises representatives from other ministries, civil society, WHO, and UNICEF country offices. (1,3) In 2019, the National Coordination Body began drafting a new National Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children. (8)
National Commission for Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration (National Trafficking in Persons Commission)	Coordinates the work of all institutions involved in combating human trafficking. Led by MOI and under the direction of the National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Coordinator, with 14 representatives from 9 government institutions. (2,3,32) Includes five local committees, which implement local action plans, and the Sub-Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Children, which serves as an advisory body to the National Trafficking in Persons Commission on all forms of child trafficking. (2,6,8,32,37) During the reporting period, the Commission’s local committees met frequently and communicated daily. (8) In 2019, the National Commission also began drafting a new law to compensate victims of human trafficking, including children. (8) In addition, officials from the Commission’s Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force attended specialized OSCE trainings for its 32 permanent police members and 5 organized crime public prosecutors. (36)

Sources reported that the local committees overseen by the National TIP Commission needed to build their capacity to adequately combat human trafficking, including via better human resource allocation. (2,8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy that covers all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Fight Against Poverty and Social Exclusion (2010–2020)	Addresses social protection, social inclusion, health, education, and employment of children. (8,32) Aims to increase birth registration for Roma and other minorities, expand patrol services to identify and support street children, and improve the provision of social services for children involved in street work and begging. Implemented by MLSP. (8,32,38) In 2019, the policy continued to be implemented via birth registration promotion and the continuation of street mobile patrols and government payments for vulnerable populations. (39)
National Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration (2017–2020)	Focuses on preventing human trafficking by reducing the vulnerability of at-risk populations, improving the identification of victims, and increasing efforts to combat human trafficking and forced child begging. (3,12,40) In 2019, the government continued implementing the policy by assisting the Municipality of Kumanovo with establishing a new anti-TIP committee and 2020 Local Action Plan, bringing the total number of municipal-level anti-TIP committees in North Macedonia to seven. (36)
National Action Plan for Education (2018–2020)	Aims to expand inclusive education and improve education for the Roma community. Seeks to increase the number of Roma students in preschools and elementary schools and decrease the number of Roma students who, based on ethnicity, are enrolled in primary schools for children with special needs. (41) Includes a Strategy for 2018–2025. (16,42) In 2019, increased inclusion of children from vulnerable groups in primary school by accommodating first time and returnee students; also provided scholarships to vulnerable populations with a focus on Roma children who indicate interest in continuing their education in an underrepresented field. (8)

Although the Government of North Macedonia has adopted policies aimed at combating child trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MLSP-Operated and Funded Centers and Shelters†	MLSP operates and funds several programs, sometimes in coordination with NGOs, which provide support and services to victims of human trafficking and vulnerable populations such as street children. MLSP runs one day center for street children and funds another operated by an NGO to provide services, healthcare, and counseling to children working in the streets. (3,8) MLSP also funds the Center for Victims of Human Trafficking, a transit center for asylum seekers, and the MOI-operated Transit Center for Illegal Migrants. (8) In 2019, MLSP funded 2 temporary centers for illegal migrants and children at the southern border and continued to operate 30 CSWs that provided services to street children and child victims of human trafficking. (8,13,32)
UNICEF Projects	UNICEF partners with the government and NGOs to provide projects for child protection, detection and referral of child victims of violence, and educational integration of vulnerable children, including Roma and migrant children. (16) In 2019, MLSP and the Inter-municipal Center for Social Work of the City of Skopje, in cooperation with UNICEF, established mobile teams to track street children and work with their families to secure benefits from the government. (8) Other projects include the Program for the Protection of Children Against Violence (2016–2020), the UNICEF Country Program (2016–2020), and the Home for Every Child Program. (11,16,44,45)
Inclusion of Roma Children in Preschool Education†	MLSP project implemented in cooperation with the Roma Education Fund and 19 government units. Part of the 2014–2020 Roma Strategy. (33,46) Aims to support the integration of Roma children by increasing the number of Roma children in preschool. (3,11) MLSP, MOI, and the Ministry of Justice are all part of the project work plan. (47) In 2019, the program continued to support Roma children by assisting their families with the school selection process, including ensuring access to schools with both Roma and Macedonian educators. (39)

† Program is funded by the Government of North Macedonia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,2,48-50)

Day centers and other programs have not reduced child begging or the number of children on the streets, especially among Roma children, suggesting that existing programs were insufficient for combating child labor. (3,11,18,20,47,51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in North Macedonia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that labor law protections apply to all children, including self-employed children and children working outside formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2019
	Ensure that the law provides criminal penalties for the use, procuring, and offering of children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2019
Enforcement	Conduct training on new child labor laws for labor inspectors.	2019
	Provide labor inspectors with an electronic system to record and share data on inspections with the entity receiving the citation, and publish the information.	2009 – 2019
	Provide sufficient funding for the National Unit for the Suppression of Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking to carry out its duties to combat human trafficking.	2019
	Ensure that the State Labor Inspectorate assesses adequate penalties for discovered child labor violations.	2019
	Ensure that local police receive proper training on handling cases related to trafficking in persons.	2018 – 2019
	Build the capacity of local commissions to adequately combat human trafficking.	2018 – 2019
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Strategy for the Fight Against Poverty and Social Exclusion is implemented.	2018 – 2019
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a national action plan on child labor.	2017 – 2019
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children engaged in child labor, including those in street work and those subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2019
	Reduce barriers to education by increasing the number of teachers who can provide education in the Romani language, and make additional efforts to register Roma children at birth.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that child beggars receive the support needed to be removed from the streets permanently.	2015 – 2019

In 2019, Oman made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Social Development issued regulations for determining whether a child is employed in a family business and for the medical examinations that a business must complete before employing a child. In addition, the National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking conducted two multi-day training programs on human trafficking for government officials and the Ministry of Manpower released a video in Arabic and English that clarified the rights and responsibilities of migrant workers. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Oman engage in child labor, including in fishing and selling items in kiosks. Government policies do not address all forms of child labor and the Ministry of Manpower is not represented on the National Committee on Implementing the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. In addition, the government did not provide information on the amount of the labor inspectorate's funding, the number of inspectors, or training for inclusion in this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Oman engage in child labor, including in fishing and selling items in kiosks. (1-3) The law limits children's work to a family business. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Oman. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (5)

Source for all other data: Data were unavailable from ILO's analysis, 2020. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (1,3)
	Fishing, activities unknown (1-3)
Services	Selling food items in kiosks, including fish† and grilled meat† (1)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Limited evidence suggests that children with disabilities may face barriers to accessing education because some school buses are not wheelchair accessible. In addition, the government has not allocated resources to enable relevant ministries and schools to provide equal educational services to intellectually disabled students.(9,10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower	Monitors and enforces child labor laws, conducts labor inspections, and shares information with the Royal Oman Police on labor and criminal law violations when penalties are pursued. (8)
Ministry of Social Development (MOSD)	Enforces the Child Law, including by receiving complaints and referring cases to the Royal Oman Police and the Office of the Public Prosecutor. (8)
Royal Oman Police	Monitors and enforces the Child Law, including its provisions related to child labor, and refers cases to the Office of the Public Prosecutor. (8)
Office of the Public Prosecutor	Prosecutes human trafficking and sexual exploitation cases in court with assistance from the Royal Oman Police. (8,19)
Child Protection Committee	Protects children from exploitation, receives complaints and reports of child labor, and investigates reported cases to determine whether children are engaged in prohibited activities or whether working has negative effects on their health or education. (8,20)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Oman took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Ministry of Manpower conducts yearly inspections of all private institutions and re-inspections of workplaces found to be in violation of labor laws. The Ministry of Manpower also conducts labor inspections following a complaint. (23) The Ministry of Manpower did not report an exact number of labor inspectors in 2019, but officials indicated it exceeds the ILO's recommended number of inspectors for the size of Oman's workforce. (3)

In 2019, the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) issued implementing regulations for the Child's Law defining which family members count in determining whether a child's employment is in a family business. The regulations also stipulate intervals and certification requirements for medical examinations of employed children. (3)

The Ministry of Manpower and the MOSD can coordinate with the Royal Oman Police to shelter child victims and refer violators for criminal investigation. An official stated that the Ministry of Manpower can refer a case of child labor to the MOSD if the child is under the minimum age for work. (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide information for this report regarding the amount of the labor inspectorate's funding, the number of inspectors, or trainings provided. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, the government held a 2-day seminar and a separate 2-day workshop on combating human trafficking for government officials. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the omission of the Ministry of Manpower from the National Committee on Implementing the UN CRC.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Implementing the UN CRC	Led by the MOSD, oversees the implementation of the UN CRC, including its provisions related to child labor and its worst forms. There are subcommittees in all 11 governorates. (8) Other members include three other state agencies. The Ministry of Manpower is not represented. (8) In 2019, the Minister of Social Development met with the UNICEF Regional Director and delegation to discuss cooperation with UNICEF on implementation of the UN CRC. (25)
National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking	Oversees the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. Includes the Royal Oman Police and 10 other state agencies. (8) In 2019, held a seminar and a separate workshop on combating human trafficking. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking (2018–2020)†	Aims to raise awareness among migrant workers on their rights and responsibilities and to raise awareness on countering human trafficking through leaflets, posters, websites, and social media. Establishes a human trafficking task force, including representatives from the Ministry of Manpower, the Royal Oman Police, the MOSD, and other agencies, to follow up on cases of human trafficking. (26) Establishes specialized human trafficking units in the Court of Appeals in Muscat and in the above-mentioned ministries. Regulates domestic work and allows for inspection of homes upon receipt of complaints from domestic workers. Provides annual training to government agencies and private companies on countering human trafficking. (26) In March 2019, the Ministry of Manpower released a video in Arabic and English that clarified the rights and responsibilities of migrant workers. (24)

Although the Government of Oman has adopted the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking, it does not have a comprehensive policy to address all forms of child labor, including in farming and fishing.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Security Cash Transfer Program†	Provides assistance to children in low-income families, including educational services. (20) Active in 2019. (25)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Oman (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2019
Enforcement	Collect and publish data on labor inspectorate funding, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and whether targeted inspections were conducted.	2013 – 2019
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive training on new regulations pertaining to child labor laws.	2019
	Ensure that refresher courses are provided for criminal investigators.	2019
	Authorize the inspectorate to assess penalties.	2017 – 2019
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee on Implementing the UN CRC is able to carry out its intended mandate, and that the Ministry of Manpower participates in the Committee.	2016 – 2019
Government Policies	Develop a national policy to address all forms of child labor.	2013 – 2019
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2019
	Ensure that all children have equal access to education, including children with disabilities.	2011 – 2019

In 2019, Pakistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Punjab Province adopted the Punjab Domestic Workers Act of 2019, which prohibits children under age 15 from working in any domestic service capacity. The Pakistan National Assembly also passed the Islamabad Capital Territory Prohibition of Employment of Children Act. In addition, the Islamabad Capital Territory established its Child Protection Advisory Board, and the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Balochistan provincial labor departments earmarked specific funds from their budgets to conduct child labor surveys. Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province also established a dedicated child labor unit. Children in Pakistan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in forced labor in brick kilns and agriculture. The federal government and Balochistan Province have not established a minimum age for work or hazardous work in compliance with international standards. In addition, provincial labor inspectorates do not receive sufficient resources to adequately enforce laws prohibiting child labor, and the federal and provincial governments failed to publish data on their efforts to enforce criminal or labor laws related to child labor. Further, police corruption, particularly the taking of bribes from suspected perpetrators to ignore child labor crimes and lack of willingness to conduct investigations, hindered Pakistan's ability to address the problem throughout the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Pakistan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in forced labor in brick kilns and agriculture. (1-4) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Pakistan. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking and producing drugs (3,38)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Pakistan consists of the Islamabad Capital Territory (ICT), which is governed by federal law, as well as four provinces—Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh—each of which is responsible for all social services, including those related to labor, within their areas. Law enforcement responsibilities are shared between the federal and provincial governments. (46) When available, data and information are included for the federal and provincial governments in this report. In 2019, Pakistan’s federal and provincial governments, with technical assistance provided by UNICEF, continued conducting nationwide child labor surveys. These surveys—the first conducted since 1996—are expected to address the lack of available child labor data that has hampered the federal and provincial governments’ ability to accurately assess the scope and prevalence of child labor. (3,29)

Many child domestic workers work under conditions of forced labor, including debt bondage, sexual assault, and extreme physical abuse. (2,3,29,31) Indeed, reports estimate that 70 percent of bonded laborers in Pakistan are children. (46,47) Poor rural families sometimes sold their children into domestic servitude or other types of work, or paid agents to arrange for such work, often believing their child would work under decent conditions. Children were also kidnapped or sold into organized begging rings, domestic servitude, gangs, and child sex trafficking. (46,48) Some children work with their families as bonded laborers in the production of bricks. (3,4,8,26,41,49)

Begging ringmasters sometimes maim children to earn more money and sometimes force children to steal, and organized criminal groups force children into drug trafficking in Sindh and Balochistan. Research found that due to the consistent lack of law enforcement efforts against those who exploited street children, including in forced labor and sex trafficking, traffickers operated openly and with impunity. (3,46,50)

Child laborers in Pakistan, particularly boys, are frequently subjected to sexual exploitation at their places of employment, including in factories, workshops, mines, or while scavenging on the streets. (51) They are also sometimes subjected to sexual exploitation in order to obtain or keep a job or for accommodations. Research indicates that in Kasur, a city in the Punjab Province where sexual exploitation of children is considered to be among the highest in the country, 90 percent of working children under age 14 have been sexually harassed or exploited. (3,41,52,51) The practice of bacha bazi, or boy play, in which boys are forced to provide social and sexual entertainment for older men, is common within Pakistan. Traffickers in Pakistan also promise Pakistani boys admission to Afghani religious schools only to instead sell them to Afghan security forces for the purpose of sexual exploitation. (41,53)

Children in Pakistan face several barriers to education. Of significant concern is the sexual abuse of children in Pakistan's madrassas—Islamic religious schools that provide free education and meals to Pakistan's poorest children. (52,54,55) There are more than 22,000 registered madrassas in the country, in addition to an estimated 2,000-3,000 unregistered madrassas; sexual abuse in madrassas significantly hinders the ability of a large number of Pakistani children to attend school and receive an education. (52,54) In addition, non-state armed militant groups—Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan, its splinter groups, and ISIL-KP—forcibly recruited and used children in terrorist activities, including suicide attacks. Further, while research found that the total number of terrorist attacks against schools have continued to decrease since 2009, schools in Pakistan may still be vulnerable to attacks by unknown armed groups, disrupting children's access to education. (3,10,19,46,56-61) Many other children face barriers to accessing education including high rates of teacher absenteeism, inadequate facilities, lack of transportation, school fees, and corporal punishment, which may deter children from attending school. (3,10,57,60,62-64) Lastly, while children are not legally required to have a birth certificate to enroll in public or private school, research indicates that some private schools may still require children's birth certificate in order to enroll. (3,46) Research also found only 31 percent of births are officially registered. Children without a birth certificate who cannot enroll in school are at much higher risk of becoming victims of exploitative labor conditions. (65)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Pakistan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Pakistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and for hazardous work.

† The minimum age for work in shops and establishments is 14 years old. The minimum age for work in factories and mines is 15 years old (66-68)

‡ The minimum age for work in brick kilns is 14 years old. The minimum age for work in domestic work is 15 years old (73,75)

The Eighteenth Amendment to the Pakistani Constitution permits provinces to pass laws that govern labor law and children's welfare. (94,153) Federal law applies only until the province passes a law on the same subject. (26,96)

In 2019, the Pakistan National Assembly passed the Islamabad Capital Territory Prohibition of Employment of Children Act, which would prohibit the employment of children age 14 and younger in any establishment, including agricultural and household establishments; would prohibit the employment of children ages 15 to 18 in hazardous work; and would establish a hazardous work list prohibited for children. However, the Senate had not approved the bill at the close of the reporting period. (3,96) The Balochistan Employment of Children (Prohibition and Regulation) Bill, which would include an updated list of hazardous work prohibited for children; prohibit hazardous work for children under 18 years of age; and establish a minimum age of 14 years of age was sent to the cabinet for consideration. (21)

Pakistan's federal and provincial laws are not completely in compliance with international standards on child labor. The federal minimum age for work provisions, as well as the minimum age for work laws in Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and Sindh Provinces are not in compliance with international standards because they do not extend to informal employment, such as household work. (66-77,154)

The federal government's minimum age for hazardous work is currently 14 years old, which does not comply with international standards. (78) The federal minimum age for hazardous work still applies in Balochistan Province, as Balochistan has not established a minimum age for hazardous work. (29,78,98)

Hazardous work prohibitions for the federal government and the four provinces do not cover brickmaking, for which there is evidence that children are exposed to environmental health hazards. Hazardous work prohibitions for the federal government and every province except Punjab do not cover domestic work, for which there is evidence that children are exposed to physical abuse. (8,23,78) In 2019, Punjab Province adopted the Punjab Domestic Workers Act of 2019, which bans children under age 15 from working in any domestic service capacity, and permits only children under age 18 to perform light work that does not harm the child's health and safety or affect their education. (3,4,97,154) Although laws in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh Provinces prohibit children under age 18 from working in underground mines or above-ground quarries, federal law—which also still applies in Balochistan—does not prohibit children ages 15 to 18 from working in mines. There is evidence that children in Balochistan are engaged in coal mining, which involves exposure to hazardous substances, work underground, and lethal accidents. (27,28,68,70,74,77,78,98)

Federal law, which also applies in all the provinces except Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, does not comply with international standards on child trafficking, as it does not omit the requirement of force, fraud, or coercion as elements of the crime. (80,81,85) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province's human trafficking law also requires the additional element of kidnapping, coercion, or receipt or giving of a benefit. (86)

Federal law, which also applies in Balochistan, does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution or the procuring and offering of children in commercial sexual exploitation, nor does Khyber Pakhtunkhwa's law. (80,81,86,87)

Federal and provincial laws, with the exception of Punjab and Sindh provinces, do not prohibit the use of children in drug production and drug trafficking. (74,77,86)

The federal and provincial governments, with the exception of Punjab and Sindh Provinces, have not enacted laws that prohibit the recruitment and use of children by non-state groups for armed conflict. (13,70,73)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (70,90-93)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of provincial labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Provincial and Regional Police	Enforce violations of federal and provincial laws concerning the worst forms of child labor, including the Pakistan Penal Code, Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act, and the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. Refer children taken into custody to Child Protection Officers. (13,97)
Provincial Labor Inspectors	Inspect industrial areas and markets to identify child labor violations, enforce provincial labor laws, and pursue legal action against employers. (13)
Federal Investigation Agency (FIA), Anti-Trafficking Unit	Enforces transnational human trafficking-related laws, particularly the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act. Cooperates with other governments on human trafficking cases, operates a hotline for victims, and publishes information on anti-trafficking efforts on its website. (3,4,10,41) Operates under the Ministry of the Interior. (4) In 2019, the FIA—in collaboration with UNODC—conducted a Regional Conference on Trafficking in Persons that enhanced regional cooperation and information sharing related to combating trafficking in persons. (102)
Labor Courts	Assesses penalties for labor violations. Located in each province and the Islamabad Capital Territory. (3,46,103-105)
District Vigilance Committees	Implement the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act and assist in rehabilitating bonded laborers via monitoring bodies. Consists of members of the public, civil society groups, lawyers, members of the media, and local government officials. Report to the District Magistrate. (13,41,46,79) Exists in all provinces except Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. (46)
Child Protection Units (CPU)	Take into custody at-risk children, including those rescued from exploitative labor situations. Present cases of children taken into custody to the Child Protection Court or the appropriate authority. Established in Punjab, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and Sindh Provinces. (86,88,102,106-108)

In 2019, the Punjab Provincial court ordered the provincial government to pay school fees for children working at brick kilns. (109) In addition, District Vigilance Committees (DVCs) are functioning in all of Punjab Province's 36 districts, as well in 29 districts in Sindh Province. (41,46,102) The ICT DVCs have begun taking legal efforts against brick kilns using child labor by imposing heavy fines issued under the supervision of the District Magistrate. (19)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of provincial labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including limited financial and human resource allocation.

† Data are from January–September 5, 2018 (111)

Pakistan's provinces are responsible for enforcing labor laws, including those relevant to child labor law. (13) Provincial labor departments collect comprehensive data on labor law enforcement at the district level. However, there is neither a centralized federal repository for the data nor any regular mechanism for reporting it to the federal government; therefore, limited labor inspection data were available for inclusion in this report. (10)

Based on 2017 data, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Pakistan's workforce, which includes approximately 64 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Pakistan should employ about 4,259 labor inspectors. (118,119) Provincial labor inspectorates do not receive sufficient resources, which may hamper labor inspectors' ability to inspect workplaces. For example, labor departments in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh Provinces did not provide funds to cover the cost of transportation to conduct inspections. (3,10) Furthermore, while labor inspectors do receive some initial training depending on their assigned province, this training is insufficient, as there is very little information provided that is specific to child labor issues and laws. (3,21,97,120,121)

The Punjab labor inspectorate conducted 10 training sessions for 185 labor inspectors at the Industrial Relations Institute. Further, the Punjab Labor Welfare Department registered 1,441 first investigative reports (FIRs), which are prepared by the police upon receiving information on violations of Punjab's child employment restrictions, and 616 FIRs for violations prohibiting child labor in brick kilns. (3,102) In Sindh Province, research found that inspectors stopped conducting unannounced inspections due to complaints of harassment filed against inspectors by employers. (124) Only labor courts can assess penalties for labor law violations; labor inspectors can only note the labor violation. (3,21)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including reports of corruption and indifference on the part of investigative officials.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2019, Pakistan’s Prime Minister directed the government to launch a new mobile application, “Mera Bacha Alert,” to improve reporting and reduce the number of abductions and sexual exploitation cases perpetrated against children. (125) The federal and provincial governments do not publish data on efforts to enforce criminal laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor; it is unknown whether investigations, prosecutions, or convictions were undertaken or achieved for child labor crimes in 2019. (3) While training is provided to new criminal investigators, the training is inconsistent across Pakistan, and the training might not include information on child labor, child trafficking, or sexual exploitation of children. (3)

Research indicates that police corruption, particularly the taking of bribes from suspected perpetrators to ignore alleged crimes, continues to hamper Pakistan’s ability to eliminate child labor, especially in the brick kiln industry, factories, street scavenging, and the sexual abuse of children in madrassas. In addition, children, parents, or family members who report child labor incidents often lack faith that police will act in pursuit of justice. (26,54,52-51) Research also found that police sometimes act indifferently to reports of child labor or sexual exploitation, pointing to cultural differences as a rationale for abuse. Further, some police are reportedly afraid of being accused of blasphemy by religious clerics if they take action against the sexual abuse of children in madrassas. (26,54,126)

Of particular concern, in July 2019, a 14-year-old domestic worker reported substantial indicators of trafficking by her employer; a parliamentarian in Punjab, including sexual abuse and torture. While police registered the charges, they did not arrest the parliamentarian, allegedly because the provincial government did not allow them to do so. (46,127) The parliamentarian continued to pressure the victim to drop the charges. In January 2020, the Supreme Court set aside the extended three-year sentence imposed on a judge and his wife for cruelty to a child for subjecting a 10-year-old girl to torture and domestic servitude—the government’s first reported conviction of an official complicit in trafficking-related offenses in 10 years—and reinstated the initial sentence of one year’s imprisonment. (46,127)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including fulfilling mandates to establish coordinating mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Provincial and Federal Tripartite Consultative Committees	Advise on the enforcement of labor laws, including child labor laws, and monitor the functioning of labor departments at the provincial level. Monitor the implementation of provinces’ proposed interventions on child and forced labor at the federal level. (128) Research was unable to determine whether these coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period.
Inter-Agency Task Force	Coordinates the anti-human trafficking efforts of the Ministry of the Interior, intelligence and law enforcement agencies, the Ministry of Law and Justice, and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Supports 27 FIA anti-trafficking units that work with provincial and district police officers to monitor and combat domestic and transnational human trafficking. (129,130) Maintains an Integrated Border Management System. In 2019, the Inter-agency Task Force logged a total of 1,539 human trafficking border interceptions. (3,102)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Bodies	Balochistan Child Protection Commission: Coordinates efforts related to child protection at the provincial and district levels, advises on relevant policies and legislation, and supports the implementation of child protection referral mechanisms. Led by the Balochistan Social Welfare Department, various government departments, including the Education, Health and Labor departments, and law enforcement agencies. (108) In 2019, the Balochistan Provincial Government launched the first CPU in Quetta in partnership with UNICEF (3) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Child Protection and Welfare Commission: Coordinates efforts to enhance the safety, welfare, and well-being of children at the provincial and local levels. Reviews and monitors implementation of provincial laws and regulations related to child labor and those that affect the rights of children. (86) Led by the Province's Social Welfare, Special Education and Women Empowerment Department. (131) In 2019, the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Government operated 10 welfare homes for exploited children. (46) Punjab Child Protection and Welfare Bureau: Coordinates the protection of destitute and neglected children by appointing child protection officers, supervising CPUs, and establishing child protection institutions and child protection courts. Chaired by an elected member of the board, which consists of three department secretaries, three members of the provincial assembly, and representatives from NGOs and academia. (88) In 2019, the Punjab Provincial Government collaborated with a mobile application developer to publish a mobile application that allows information sharing when children run away from home. It also established eight CPUs. (3,102) In 2019, the Punjab CPWB operated open reception centers to identify and register children living on the street and identified and assisted 8,114 children, a decrease from 10,203 in the previous reporting period. It also filed 616 First Information Reports (FIRs) under the Punjab Prohibition of Child Labour from Brick Kilns Act. (127) Sindh Child Protection Authority: Coordinates efforts to ensure the rights of children in need of special protection, including child laborers, by establishing CPUs and appointing child protection officers. Reviews and proposes amendments to existing laws and monitors the implementation of laws relevant to the protection of children. Headed by the provincial minister; members include two parliamentarians, lawyers, social activists, and representatives from departments that deal with children's issues. (107) In 2019, was in the process of launching a database that tracks child abuse cases, including the worst forms of child labor, in all 29 districts. It also established 12 CPUs and operated a 24-hour child protection hotline. (3,102) Provincial CPUs: Take into custody at-risk children, including those rescued from exploitative labor situations. Present cases of children taken into custody to the Child Protection Court or the appropriate authority. Established in Punjab, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and Sindh Provinces. (86,88,102,106-108) Coordinate and initiate interventions against child labor at the provincial level. (128) Each CPU is led by a Child Protection Officer and supported by social workers and psychologists. Operates under the District Administrator. (46) Established in Punjab, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and Sindh Provinces. (46) In 2019, the Government of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa established a specialized Child and Bonded Labor Unit; the rules and regulations by which this unit will operate have not yet been established. (102) Balochistan and Sindh Provinces and the Islamabad Capital Territory (ICT) made efforts to establish specialized Child and Bonded Labor Units. (132) Research was unable to determine whether the Punjab Provincial Child Labor Unit was active during the reporting period.
Child Protection Advisory Board*	Coordinates ICT's implementation of the Child Protection System Act of 2018, including advising the government on implementing laws and policies, maintaining a case management system, and ensuring that a child protection mechanism is functioning. Chaired by the Secretary of the Division of Child Protection and comprises high-level government officials, plus an NGO representative, a social science expert, an Islamabad High Court Bar Association representative, and one person representing minorities. (3,133) In 2019, 12 Child Protection Committees were established at the ICT level and began receiving orientation training on child trafficking laws. Further, the board met for the first time, chaired by the Minister for Human Rights, and agreed to form a subcommittee to plan long- and short-term policies to improve child protection issues in the ICT. (3,102,134)

* Coordinating body responsible for coordinating government efforts on child labor was created during the reporting period.

The federal government had not established the National Commission on the Rights of the Child as mandated by law at the end of the reporting period. (3,46) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa has 12 CPUs, however, none were active during the reporting period due to a lack of finances. Balochistan established one CPU in Quetta, however, they have not yet instituted the remaining 33 CPUs despite passing legislation in 2016 to establish units in each district. (41,46)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Pakistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Labor Policy	Seeks to gradually eradicate child labor; collect child labor statistics, enforce the compulsory education law, assist children through referral mechanisms, educate families and key stakeholders about the negative effects of child labor, and collaborate with organizations to research and develop solutions to eliminate child labor. (136) In 2019, an exclusive child labor unit was established under the Directorate of Labor. (21)
Punjab Labor Policy	Seeks to improve working conditions, eradicate child and bonded labor, and establish social safety for workers and their families. Includes the goal of ending all child labor in brick kilns, in addition to the construction of schools, hospitals, and residences for workers. (137) This policy led to the implementation of the Punjab Domestic Workers Act 2019 during the reporting period. (46)
Sindh Labor Policy	Seeks to protect vulnerable workers, including children. Includes goals to enforce laws dealing with hazardous child labor, extend the minimum age for employment in domestic and home-based work, ensure minimum wages for working children, and increase access to education and training. (138) While this policy was being instituted through labor inspector trainings during the reporting period, research found that labor inspectors were not provided funding to travel outside of major cities to conduct inspections and were repeatedly denied access to inspect factories by owners. (3)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (140-144)

Research was unable to determine whether the provincial or federal governments have educational policies and, if so, whether such policies include child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (140-143)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Bait-ul-Mal Programs‡	Government-funded programs that aim to remove children from child labor, including its worst forms, and to increase vulnerable children's access to education. Programs include the National Centers for Rehabilitation of Child Labor and the Child Support Program. (145, 146) These programs were active in 2019. (3)
Hotlines	FIA operates a 24/7 hotline to combat human trafficking, including child trafficking, in Pakistan at the headquarters, ICT, and district levels. (4, 102) The Ministry of Human Rights (MOHR) also operates a hotline for reporting human rights violations, including child labor violations. In 2019, the MOHR hotline received between 4,000–15,500 calls per month. (4) The Punjab Child Protection and Welfare Bureau and Sindh Social Welfare Department also operate hotlines in their respective provinces to combat child exploitation. Both hotlines were operational in 2019. (4) Other provinces maintain functioning hotlines to report human trafficking incidents, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (102)
Elimination of Child Labor and Bonded Labor Project (Integrated Project for Promotion of “Decent Work for Vulnerable Workers” in Punjab Province)‡	Punjab Province-funded programs that aim to provide education to vulnerable children, rehabilitate bonded laborers working in brick kilns, promote integration and coordination of government responses, strengthen legislation, increase the capacity of law enforcement and service providers, and increase the knowledge base on these issues. (49, 147, 148) In 2019, this project provided children working in brick kilns with free education. (46)
ILO-Funded Projects	ILO projects in Pakistan that aim to eliminate child labor by improving the capacity of the national government to develop strong monitoring mechanisms and strengthen data collection strategies. The Sustaining Strengthened National Capacities to Improve ILS Compliance and Reporting in Relevant EU Trading Partners (2018–2020) works with provincial labor departments, with a focus on Balochistan, to use analytical and evidence-based initiatives to guide child labor elimination programs. (149) The Clear Cotton Project (2018–2022) works with local governments to eliminate child labor in cotton-growing districts and in the textile and garment sectors. (150) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these projects during the reporting period.
Khdmat ATM Cards‡	Government-funded program to increase enrollment in schools that focuses on low income families. Provides approximately $12.50 to a family whose child enrolls in school and then approximately $6.25 per month to each child enrolled after verifying school attendance records. (132) This program was active in 2019.

Program	Description
Sabaoon Rehabilitation Center†	NGO-run, federal government-funded center that rehabilitates children who were recruited and ideologically influenced by terrorist organizations and militant groups. Reintegrates youth into society by providing psychological treatment, education, and vocational training. (10,130,151) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Pakistan.

In 2019, the Provincial labor departments of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Balochistan dedicated approximately $1.53 million and $1.37 million of their budgets, respectively, to conduct surveys on child labor. The Khyber Pakhtunkhwa labor department began conducting its child labor survey during the reporting period. (46,102) Child labor surveys are also being carried out in Sindh and the ICT, while the child labor survey project in Balochistan is still being planned. (21) In addition, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh Provinces established rehabilitation service centers for street children in 2019. These centers provided street children with education, health, career, and psychological counseling services. (46,132)

The social programs of the federal and provincial governments are insufficient to address the prevalence and scope of Pakistan's child labor problem. Existing programs also do not provide enough protection and rehabilitation services for bonded child laborers and victims of human trafficking. (110,129) Government initiatives are needed to specifically target child labor in the informal sector, including child labor and forced child labor in domestic work. (121) Furthermore, additional social programs are necessary to raise awareness and provide assistance to children used by non-state militant groups to engage in armed conflict. (152) In addition, there is no significant social program to address sexual abuse of child workers or children learning in madrassas in Pakistan.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Pakistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2019
	Establish a minimum age for work of at least 14 in all sectors and informal employment, regardless of the number of employees, including in federal law and the provinces.	2011-2019
	Ensure that the law prohibits the employment of children under age 18 in hazardous work, including in federal law and Balochistan Province.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the federal and provincial lists of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, including brickmaking, domestic work, and mining.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that federal and provincial law criminally prohibits child trafficking without requiring an element of force, fraud, or coercion.	2019
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, including in federal law and Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Provinces.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminalizes the use, procurement, and offering of children in prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances, including in federal law and Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Provinces.	2011 – 2019
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment and use of children under age 18 by non-state groups for armed conflict, including in federal law and Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Provinces.	2015 – 2019
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2019

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure there are a sufficient number of inspectors trained and responsible for providing enforcement of child labor laws to meet international standards in Punjab Province.	2019
	Provide the funding necessary to adequately hire, train, equip, and cover the cost of transportation for inspectors to enforce child labor laws, especially in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab and Sindh provinces.	2010-2019
	Ensure labor inspectors are permitted to conduct unannounced inspections in Sindh Province without harassment, as mandated by Sindh's labor code.	2019
	Ensure that District Vigilance Committees that seek to ensure enforcement and implementation of bonded labor prohibitions are established in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Balochistan Provinces.	2013-2019
	Ensure all allegations of sexual abuse, including allegations of bacha bazi and trafficking of boys into Afghanistan, are thoroughly investigated and, where appropriate, prosecuted.	2019
	Allow labor inspectors to assess penalties.	2011 – 2019
	Create a centralized repository of labor law enforcement data and a regular mechanism for reporting it to the federal government, and make the data publicly available.	2018 – 2019
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2019
	Publish enforcement data for child labor law violations, penalties imposed, and penalties collected for all provinces. In addition, publish information about labor inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted at the worksite, whether routine inspections were targeted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted for all provinces.	2010 – 2019
	Establish sufficient laws to end police corruption, particularly the taking of bribes from suspected perpetrators to ignore alleged crimes.	2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between criminal law enforcement agencies and social services in all provinces.	2018 – 2019
	Publish information about criminal law investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions, as well as initial training, training on the worst forms of child labor, refresher courses, and penalties imposed and collected in all provinces.	2016 – 2019
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services in all provinces.	2017 – 2019
	Coordination	Establish a National Commission on the Rights of the Child Act, as mandated by federal law.
Publish information on the activities undertaken by the Provincial and Federal Tripartite Consultative Committees.		2017 – 2019
Establish the remaining 32 CPUs in Balochistan as required by law.		2019
Government Policies	Ensure inspectors are provided with sufficient resources and are not stymied from executing Sindh Province's Labor Policy by factory owners.	2019
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the education policies of the provincial governments.	2014 – 2019
Social Programs	Complete and publish child labor surveys at the federal and provincial levels.	2009 – 2019
	Publish information on activities undertaken during the reporting period to implement the ILO-funded programs Sustaining Strengthened National Capacities to Improve ILS Compliance and Reporting in Relevant EU Trading Partners (2018–2020) and The Clear Cotton Project (2018-2022).	2019
Social Programs	Publish information on activities undertaken by Sabaoon Rehabilitation Center during the reporting period.	2019
	Implement programs to address and eliminate the sexual abuse of children, especially in madrassas , workplaces, and on the street.	2019
	Improve existing programs and increase the size and scope of government programs to reach children working in the informal sector and in the worst forms of child labor, including domestic workers, bonded child laborers, and other victims of human trafficking.	2009 – 2019
	Implement programs to address high rates of teacher absenteeism, inadequate facilities, lack of transportation, and use of corporal punishment to ensure that all children have access to free and compulsory education, as required by law. Increase security for schools to protect children and teachers from attacks by non-state armed and extremist groups.	2011 – 2019
	Implement programs to raise awareness of and provide assistance to children used by non-state militant groups to engage in armed conflict.	2011 – 2019

In 2019, Panama made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government implemented the Districts Free of Child Labor initiative through anti-child labor agreements with six municipalities. The government also made improvements to the Child Labor Monitoring System to streamline responses to cases of child labor from different agencies, and continued to expand labor inspector trainings and unannounced inspections. In addition, the Ministry of Labor implemented the Direct Government Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, which includes a new national survey on child labor. However, children in Panama engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Panamanian law allows minors under age 16 to engage in hazardous work within training facilities in violation of international standards. Moreover, the Ministry of Labor lacks the authority to collect fines for labor violations, limiting its capacity to enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Panama engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-10) The Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL) collected data on child work, child labor, and the worst forms of child labor in 2018, but the study has yet to be published. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Panama.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.7 (32,858)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (11)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Encuesta de Trabajo Infantil (ETI), 2014. (12)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of beans, cereal grains, coffee, corn, melons, oilseeds, onions, pineapples, rice, and tomatoes (6,7,9,13-19)
	Raising livestock, including cattle (2-4,6,9,20)
	Fishing,† including harvesting shellfish (2-5,9,20,21)
Industry	Construction,† including mixing cement, painting, carpentry, and welding (1,2,4,5,22)
Services	Domestic work† (2,4,5,9,19,20,23-25)
	Bagging in supermarkets (6,26)
	Street work,† including vending,† washing cars, shining shoes,† and collecting recyclables (1,5-7,9,18,20,21,27-30)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (24,25,31)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Use in the production of pornography (5,9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,8,25,31)
	Scavenging the ocean for metal and other items (6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Panama are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, mainly in tourist areas in Panama City and in beach communities. (6,7)

According to the results of Panama’s 2016 survey on child labor, the highest prevalence of child labor is in the agricultural sector in rural areas and autonomous indigenous areas, or comarcas. The comarca Ngäbe Buglé and the provinces of Panama and Bocas del Toro had the highest number of children engaged in child labor. (2)

Although the Panamanian Constitution recognizes the right to education without discrimination, indigenous children and those in rural and Afro-Panamanian communities face barriers to accessing education due to a lack of transportation, infrastructure, technology, and teachers, particularly in the comarcas. (1,5,9,32,33) Children of indigenous descent often travel significant distances to reach school and experience frequent interruptions in their education due to family migration to work in agriculture. (6,32,33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Panama has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Panama’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including hazardous work and light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 70 of the Constitution; Articles 508–509 and 716 of the Family Code; Articles 117, 119, and 123 of the Labor Code (34-36)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Article 510 of the Family Code; Article 203 of the Penal Code; Article 4 of Executive Decree No. 19 of 2006; Article 118 of the Labor Code (24,34-37)

Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 34 and 41 of the Law on Education; Article 95 of the Constitution (34,40,41)

† No standing military (34)

In 2018 and early 2019, MITRADEL drafted amendments to Decree No. 1 of 2016 to raise the current minimum age for hazardous work, occupations, and activities from age 14 to age 16 if the work is performed in a training facility, and to eliminate certain work exceptions for children ages 14 to 16. (1,42) Currently, Panama has a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children under age 18, but it permits children to perform such work in training programs starting at age 14, in violation of international standards. (24)

Although the Constitution, Family Code, and Labor Code set the minimum age for employment at age 14, the Family Code and Labor Code specify exceptions for agricultural work. (34-36) Article 119 of the Labor Code allows children ages 12 to 15 to perform light work in agriculture if the work is outside of regular school hours. The Labor Code, however, does not define the kinds of activities children may perform as light work. (36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MITRADEL that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL)	Enforces child labor laws through two directorates with direct authority over child labor matters: the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT), and the Labor Inspection Directorate. DIRETIPPAT is responsible for overseeing the enforcement of laws related to working children in the formal and informal sectors, planning and executing public policies, and carrying out education programs on child labor for employers, parents, and children. (25,43-45) DIRETIPPAT also manages the newly established Direct Government Action Program that seeks to prevent and eradicate child labor. Refers cases of children found in exploitative work to the Child and Adolescent Courts, or to the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF). (25) The Labor Inspection Directorate enforces the Labor Code in areas in which children may be working, particularly in the formal sector. (25)
Attorney General’s Office	Investigates and prosecutes crimes of sexual exploitation. Investigations are initiated by the Judicial Investigative Directorate; cases are passed to the prosecutors. (25)

Organization/Agency	Role
National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF)	Conducts inspections to identify children and adolescents engaged in child labor, particularly in the informal sector. (4,25) Monitors and coordinates a network of government services to address the needs of vulnerable populations. (26) Runs shelters for victims of human trafficking, including minors. (46) In 2019, SENNIAF implemented a digital tool for the Child Labor Monitoring System that streamlines Panamanian institutions' collective response to child labor, and facilitates collaboration, the development of individualized care plans for victims of child labor, and monitoring of each entity's progress in completing its respective responsibilities associated with each individual case. (25,47)
Childhood and Adolescence Police	Special body of the National Police. Assists, collaborates with, and coordinates with authorities and organizations to address the education, prevention, protection, and rehabilitation of children, including those in child labor. (48,49) Supports SENNIAF inspections in areas with high rates of child labor. (26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2019, labor law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MITRADEL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2019, Panama had 100 labor inspectors, which is in line with the ILO's technical advice. However, only six inspectors received specialized training in child labor investigations, even though all inspectors must investigate and enforce child labor laws. (25) In addition to the labor inspections, with the help of Casa Esperanza (a local NGO), MITRADEL identified 1,497 cases of child labor. Of these cases, 1,444 children received care and services, scholarships, and academic follow-up for 3 consecutive years from the Direct Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Casa Esperanza. (25) The Labor Inspectorate conducted 945 inspections, and encountered 10 child labor violations. (25)

As part of the Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor, in 2019, the Government of Panama continued to expand labor inspector trainings, unannounced inspections, and monitoring information systems. (25) MITRADEL and the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF) operate a secure 311 Complaint Line, a website, and social media platforms to receive complaints. In 2019, SENNIAF responded to 25 complaints filed through the 311 line and identified two child labor cases. (25) In addition, SENNIAF staff members received training on child labor laws in 2019. (25) SENNIAF indicated that although its agency does not have labor inspectors, four social workers from the child labor department were trained on the application of child labor laws. (25)

MITRADEL noted that the budget for the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers is insufficient to meet its staffing needs. Its budget has remained the same from 2018 to 2019. (1,25,32,51,52)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2019, criminal law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, the government did not provide sufficient data on its criminal enforcement efforts, which limits the ability to assess their adequacy.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2018	2019
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (50)	Unknown (25)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (25)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (50)	Yes (47)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

In 2019, the Government of Panama conducted five investigations on forced labor or trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (53)

Child labor training was provided to 47 National Commissions for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES) staff, as well as to 105 law enforcement officials, 55 prosecutors, and 21 members of the Maritime and Tourism Authorities. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers (CETIPPAT)	A public-private institution that includes government, employers, workers, and NGOs that collaborate to combat child labor. (25) Coordinates various efforts to combat child labor. Led by the First Lady of Panama and includes MITRADEL, the ministries of Education, Health, and Agriculture, and representatives from civil society and organizations of workers and employers. (52) Conducts a National Child Labor Survey every 2 years. (6)
Subcommittee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinates the Panamanian Institute for Sports and the Ministry of Education in their efforts to address child labor and its causes. Subcommittee of CETIPPAT. (7,32,45) In 2019, the subcommittees were located in Chiriquí, Veraguas, Herrera, Los Santos, Coclé, and Panama Oeste. (25)
Provincial Coordination Mechanisms	Identify and report cases of child labor at the local level to SENNIAF and coordinate with CETIPPAT at the national level. Established in Bocas del Toro, Colón, and Darién. In 2019, additional commissions were established in Chiriquí, Veraguas, Herrera, Los Santos, Coclé, and Panama Oeste. (1,9)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES)	Coordinates, advises, studies, and implements public policies for the prevention and eradication of sexual exploitation. (52) Members include the Attorney General and the ministries of Labor, Education, Social Development, and Health. Refers cases of sexual exploitation to the Attorney General's Office. (52) In 2019, CONAPREDES hosted training sessions for the Ministry of Government, Public Ministry, Judicial Branch, and government security forces and police officials in key areas including Chiriquí, Panama, Veraguas, Herrera, Los Santos and Coclé, which benefited a total of 2,506 people. (25) According to CONAPREDES, in 2019 there were 331 victims of child sexual exploitation registered with the Public Ministry. Some of these cases involved child pornography and child sex tourism. (25) During the reporting year, CONAPREDES also carried out 49 sexual exploitation awareness workshops in communities with high social risk and for tourism operators, schools, universities and government institutions, which reached 4,213 people. (53,54)

MITRADEL noted the need for increased coordination on efforts to address child labor, including within the Ministry of Labor, and with social service agencies and referral mechanisms. (32)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor (2016–2019)	Aimed to eliminate all forms of child labor in Panama by 2020 by strengthening anti-poverty, health, and educational programs and policies. (55-57) In 2019, continued to expand labor inspector trainings, unannounced inspections, and monitoring information systems. Came to a close in 2019. (25)
National Multisectoral Strategy for the Prevention of Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2018–2022)	Aims to eliminate child labor and end the mistreatment, exploitation, trafficking, violence, and torture of children. Developed by the national government through the National Intersectoral Committee for the Prevention of Violence Against Children and Adolescents and SENNIAF, with technical support from UNICEF. (58,59)
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Aims to prevent and eliminate the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents, including by providing services to victims, strengthening CONAPREDES, and raising awareness. Implemented by CONAPREDES, with support from the Public Ministry. (52,60) In 2019, with other institutions and NGOs including the Ministry of Education, Public Ministry, SENNIAF, Ministry of Social Development, Aldeas SOS, and Casa Esperanza, among others, CONAPREDES carried out 49 sexual exploitation awareness workshops as part of the National Action Plan. (53)
National Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2012–2022)	Aims to combat human trafficking through prevention, victim assistance, and international cooperation. Includes provisions to protect child victims of human trafficking. (51,61) As part of the plan in 2018, the Government of Panama approved the Protocol for the Victim's Identification and Protection Unit to provide standard procedures to the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Commission Victim's Unit and to guarantee adequate standard of care for human trafficking victims. During the reporting period the TIP Commission included a victim identification form from the Protocol for the Victim's Identification and Protection Unit in all its trainings, particularly those targeted at law enforcement agencies such as the National Border Service, the National Police, the National Migration Service, and health workers. (10,53)
Districts Free of Child Labor	Aims to establish cooperation agreements between MITRADEL and municipal councils to design and implement child labor eradication strategies. (9) Includes policies related to development and education projects that support poverty reduction. In 2019, implemented in six municipalities (Capira, San Miguelito, Panama, Tonosi, Agudulce, and Santiago). (25)

The Coordination Agreement on Labor Migration between the ministries of Labor of Costa Rica and Panama aims to strengthen dialogue on labor migration between the two countries, with an emphasis on indigenous Panamanian migrant workers, to ensure social protection of migrant workers and their families. The policy includes a bilateral technical committee to promote joint action to combat human trafficking, exchange information, and develop cooperative strategies and projects. (62) Although potentially a useful policy tool to combat child labor, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2019, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including their ability to reach the most vulnerable populations.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, through research, improved monitoring and enforcement, policy development, and awareness raising. These projects include Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR II), implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in seven countries; and Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16), a $22.4 million, 6 year project implemented by ILO in several countries. (63-66) In 2019, CLEAR II's Labor Inspectorate curriculum was endorsed by the Ministry of Labor. (67) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Direct Government Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor†	MITRADEL program implemented through the Institute for Training and Utilization of Human Resources that provides a network of social and economic services to child workers and children at risk of child labor. Services include the provision of food and scholarships, support for sports activities, and social monitoring. Includes a new national survey in 2019 of child labor to monitor socio-cultural labor norms as well as child labor rates. (7,25,68) In 2019, the government continued to support the plan, coordinated unannounced visits in the informal and agricultural sectors, and served 1,444 children. (25)
SENNIAF programs† to identify, remove, and provide services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation	Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor identifies children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, removes them from exploitative situations, and connects them to a network of social and economic services offered by the government. (26) SENNIAC also developed a new case processing system to efficiently manage reports, which reduced report processing times. (1) Prevention and Care for Child and Adolescent Victims of Sexual Violence† identifies children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, removes them from exploitative situations, and provides them with social services. Conducts training workshops nationwide for professionals providing direct care to child and adolescent victims of sexual violence. (69) Research was unable to identify specific actions undertaken during the reporting period under this program.
Network of Opportunities†	Ministry of Social Development program that provides conditional cash transfers to families in extreme poverty, conditioned on their children's participation in health and education services and the acquisition of a birth certificate. Offers training to project participants to improve income-generating opportunities. (71)
El Plan Colmena*	Launched in 2019, a new social program in districts located in Capira, Ciri de Los Sotos, Ciri Grande, Angela Chirú, El Cacao, La Trinidad, Ollas Arriba, and Santa Rosa. Seeks to identify the root causes of poverty and implement long-term local capacity building programs that achieve a poverty-free Panama. (25)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Panama.

Although Panama has expanded programs that reach children in rural areas and from indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities, reports indicate that the scope of these programs is insufficient, and these children remain vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (53,72)

Despite policy efforts, the National Anti-Trafficking Commission acknowledges that funding for and availability of services for human trafficking victims remains insufficient to address the full scope of the problem. Furthermore, although child victims of trafficking are able to receive services from local NGOs, Panama lacks programs to specifically address the needs of this population. (10) Government officials have also noted that despite funds dedicated to the prevention of crimes against children, Panama lacks a specific mechanism to direct funds toward child sexual abuse victims. (73,74)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Panama (Table 11).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish regulations that define the types of activities that children between ages 12 and 14 can undertake as light work.	2009 – 2019
	Ensure that the law protects children from hazardous work by establishing a minimum age of 18 for all children or by ensuring that children receive adequate training in the type of work being done and that the health, safety, and morals of children are protected in accordance with international standards if children age 16 or 17 are allowed to perform hazardous work.	2013 – 2019
	Raise the working age from 14 to 15, the compulsory education age, to comply with international standards.	2019
Enforcement	Collect and make available complete data on labor law enforcement efforts and criminal enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, such as the number of violations found, number of prosecutions initiated, penalties collected, whether reciprocal mechanisms exist, and number of convictions.	2018 – 2019
	Allocate sufficient funding for the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers to meet its commitments for coordination, implementation, and monitoring related to child labor.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that all inspectors receive regular, specialized training on child labor issues.	2018 – 2019
Coordination	Increase coordination on efforts to address child labor, including within the Ministry of Labor, and with social services agencies and referral mechanisms.	2016 – 2019
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Coordination Agreement on Labor Migration between the ministries of Labor of Costa Rica and Panama.	2015 – 2019
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children from rural areas and indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities, by expanding existing programs, including school transportation.	2014 – 2019
	Ensure that social programs to prevent and eradicate child labor are being implemented.	2018 – 2019
	Establish programs and ensure sufficient funding to address the needs of human trafficking victims, including programs that provide services to child victims of human trafficking and sexual abuse.	2018 – 2019

In 2019, Papua New Guinea made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Office of Child and Family Services conducted trainings for Child Protection Officers. However, children in Papua New Guinea are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Papua New Guinea's hazardous work prohibitions do not comply with international standards that require all children under 18 to be protected from work that could jeopardize their health and safety, nor do its laws prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Schools started charging fees as a result of not receiving promised government subsidies needed for education to remain free and accessible for all children. Lastly, insufficient resources hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Papua New Guinea are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Papua New Guinea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		77.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (3) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on tea, coffee, and palm oil plantations (2,5)
	Deep sea fishing, including harvesting sea cucumbers and pearls (6)
Industry	Mining, including gold mining (2)
Services	Domestic work (2)
	Street work, including scavenging for recyclables, begging, directing traffic, and sometimes directing traffic while begging (2,7)
	Working in markets, including unloading and carrying heavy bags of food (2,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including working in bars, nightclubs, and brothels, and use in the production of pornography, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2)
	Forced domestic work (1,2,9)
	Illicit activities, including selling drugs (2,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Some children from rural areas are sent to live with relatives or “host” families in cities, where they may be forced to perform domestic work to pay off family debts. (1,2) Children are commonly seen directing vehicle movements in and out of public parking spaces and directing traffic in busy urban business centers, especially during business hours. (6, 11) Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining, such as handling dangerous chemicals, including mercury used in gold mining, for which they lack appropriate training and equipment. (6)

Papua New Guinea

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although the government has established a free education policy, in practice many schools charge fees for books, uniforms, and supplies. (2,5,12-14) The Tuition Fee-Free policy provides government subsidies to primary and secondary schools to cover the costs associated with accommodating additional children in school. However, in 2019, some schools had to close due to aging infrastructure and reportedly were not receiving the subsidy. (2,15,16) Further, in 2019, schools in Morobe Province were allowed to start charging fees for students due to the Tuition Fee-Free policy not providing payment subsidies to schools. (2,16) Lack of access to schools increases children's vulnerability to child labor. In addition, research found that the threat of gender-based violence prevents many girls from attending school. (17,18) Papua New Guinea lacks comprehensive research and data on child labor, which affects the government's ability to address child labor in the country. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Papua New Guinea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children and the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 103 of the Employment Act (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Article 104 of the Employment Act (19)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 23 and 43 of the Constitution of the Independent State of Papua New Guinea; Section 208 of the Criminal Code (20,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 208 of the Criminal Code (21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 229J–229O and 229R–229S of the Criminal Code (22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Section 30 of the Defence Act (23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

* No conscription (24)

According to the Employment Act, children ages 11 through 16 may be allowed to work under certain conditions. The minimum age of 11 for light work is not in compliance with international standards, and the law does not specify the types of activities in which light work is permitted nor the number of hours per week that this work may be undertaken. (19,25) The minimum age of 16 for hazardous work is not in compliance with international standard because Papua New Guinea's Employment Act does not protect children ages 17 and 18. (19) Papua New Guinea also does not have laws that prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. (26) The law does not sufficiently protect children from commercial sexual exploitation, because using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (22) Lastly, the prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Industrial Relations	Implements and enforces child labor laws. (2)
Department of Community Development, Youth, and Religion	Through the Office of Child and Family Services, implements, oversees, and enforces the Child Protection (Lukautim Pikinini) Act, including provisions on child labor and its worst forms, and employs Papua New Guinea's Child Protection Officers. (2,6,11,27,28) In 2019, the Office of Child and Family Services conducted trainings for Child Protection Officers. (2)
Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary	Enforces laws against commercial sexual exploitation of children (6) Includes the specialized Family and Sexual Violence unit, which includes protecting children's rights and safety. (2,6)
